THE JOURNAL OF THE 216TH GENERAL ASSEMBLY (2004)

Saturday, June 26, 2004, 1:00 P.M.

The 216th General Assembly (2004) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) was convened by Moderator Susan Andrews, in the Greater Richmond Convention Center, Richmond, Virginia. Moderator Andrews led the assembly in the convening prayer.

Dedication of the Building and the Furnishings

The Dedication of the Building and the Furnishings was begun with an opening prayer, led by Vice-Moderator Charles Easley. Dedication of the Baptismal Font was led by Elder Conrad Rocha (in English); the Pulpit by Fernando Rodriguez Barrios (in Spanish); the Bible by YAD Porsha Peterson (in English); and Communion Vessels by the Reverend Yohan Kim (in Korean).

Katherine Cunningham, moderator of the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly, read John 10:1–11 from Scripture.

Commissioning of Commissioners and Advisory Delegates

Stated Clerk Clifton Kirkpatrick led the assembly in a Service of Recognition of Commissioners and Advisory Delegates, which included a litany of Christ's Call. Moderator Andrews charged commissioners and advisory delegates to do everything, in word or deed, in the name of Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God.

Enrollment and Quorum

Stated Clerk Clifton Kirkpatrick advised the Moderator that the Book of Order, G-13.0105, establishes that the quorum of the General Assembly shall be "one hundred commissioners, fifty of whom shall be elders and fifty of whom shall be ministers, representing presbyteries of at least one fourth of its synods." Standing Rule B.2. permits that the roll be established by registration. Stated Clerk Kirkpatrick recommended that the roll of the 216th General Assembly (2004) be established by the list of those who had registered or would register. Based on pre-registration with the General Assembly Meeting Service, there will be present at this assembly

- 544 commissioners from presbyteries
- 167 youth advisory delegates
- 25 theological student advisory delegates
- 8 missionary advisory delegates
- 15 ecumenical advisory delegates

The assembly approved that the roll of the 216th General Assembly (2004) be established by the list of those who had or would register.

The Roll of the General Assembly

The roll of the General Assembly can be found on page 1061.

Seating of Corresponding Members

Stated Clerk Kirkpatrick announced that, in accordance with Standing Rule A.3., corresponding members were designated and present at the General Assembly. The list of corresponding members can be found on page 1068.

Moderator Andrews welcomed the corresponding members.

Report of the Committee on Local Arrangements

The report of the Committee on Local Arrangements of the Presbytery of the James was presented by its moderator, R. Jackson Sadler, and its vice-moderator, Patricia B. Valentine. The report included a video presentation of the history of Presbyterianism in the Presbytery of the James. A second video presentation was shown regarding Hands Against Hunger, a fair trade workshop in Peru, that made the manta tote bags distributed at the 216th General Assembly (2004).

Orientation for Commissioners and Advisory Delegates

Commissioners and advisory delegates were divided into three groups, using names of persons important to the early history of Presbyterianism: the Calvin group, the Witherspoon group, and the Knox group. The three groups were oriented to their service in three segments as follows:

1. Common Mission in the Life of the Church—Led by General Assembly Council (GAC) Executive Director John Detterick and Stated Clerk Kirkpatrick. This segment included a brief summary of the middle governing body consultations that have taken place during the last three years.

2. Common Work of the Denomination—Presented by elected leaders of the six agencies of the church, including Katherine Cunningham of the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly; Vernon Carroll of the General Assembly Council; Elinor Hite of the Presbyterian Foundation; Molly Baskin of the Presbyterian Investment & Loan Program, Inc.; Earledean Robbins of the Board of Pensions; and Robert Bohl of the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation. This segment introduced the joint annual agency report with suggestions as to how it could be used as a teaching tool in presbyteries and congregations.

3. Common Life—Led by Moderator Andrews, Conrad Rocha, Co-Platform Manager and Associate Stated Clerk Gradye Parsons. This segment included information to help those who make up the General Assembly learn about the various kinds of assistance available to them, and to become familiar with a few of the procedures by which the assembly would deal with the business coming before it; information regarding logistics, including health needs, safety precautions and instructions, the service provided by the General Assembly of simultaneous interpretation of the proceedings into Spanish and Korean, as well as for the hearing impaired; and reimbursement procedures. Information regarding the worship life of the assembly, which provides spiritual enrichment for the time shared at this assembly, was also highlighted. This segment included an introduction on how to work together to accomplish the work of the assembly and instruction on use of the electronic voting pads, the significance of different paddle colors, and other logistical information unique to plenary.

The first report from the General Assembly Nominating Committee was presented by Susan Davis Krummel, moderator of the General Assembly Nominating Committee, who described the process by which names to various entities of the General Assembly are placed in nomination and procedures for making nominations from the floor.

Report of the Moderator

Following the three-segment orientation, the 216th General Assembly (2004) was reconvened by Moderator Andrews who called upon General Assembly Vice-Moderator Charles Easley to assume the chair. The Vice-Moderator recognized the Moderator of the 215th General Assembly (2003), Susan Andrews, who presented the report of the Moderator. Following her report, Moderator Andrews again assumed the chair.

Actions to Convene Assembly

Stated Clerk Kirkpatrick instructed the advisory delegates in the use of their keypads and directed them to use the keypads to establish the number of advisory delegates present:

According to the count, there were present:

- 146 youth advisory delegates
- 22 theological student advisory delegates
- 5 overseas advisory delegates
- 5 ecumenical advisory delegates

Stated Clerk Kirkpatrick then instructed commissioners to use their keypads to establish that there was a quorum of commissioners present. There were 462 commissioners present and the Stated Clerk announced that the quorum requirements of G-13.0105 had been met.

Moderator Andrews declared a quorum was present and the 216th General Assembly (2004) was ready for business.

Stated Clerk Kirkpatrick recommended, and the assembly approved (in accordance with Standing Rules C.3.c.), that the committee assistants be appointed, as follows: Diana Barber, Margie M. Boyd, A. Vanessa Hawkins, Lydia Hernandez, Sally J. Hinchman, Dee Hoge, Jill Hudson, Howard Jackson, Don Lincoln, Mary Paik, Kevin Porter, Carl Schlich, and Pat Schumann.

Assembly Committee Structure

On recommendation of the Stated Clerk, the assembly approved Item 00-01, the assembly committee structure. The committees are as follows:

1. Business Referrals
2. Bills and Overtures
3. General Assembly Procedures
4. Church Polity
5. Church Orders and Ministry
6. Ecumenical and Interfaith Relations
7. Mission Coordination and Budgets
8. Theological Issues and Institutions
9. Evangelism and Higher Education
10. National Issues
11. Health Issues
12. Peacemaking
13. International Issues
14. Pensions, Foundation, and PILP

Announcements

Stated Clerk Kirkpatrick made several announcements, including a reminder that the deadline for business to be submitted to the assembly was 1:00 p.m., Sunday, June 27.

Closing Prayer

The Moderator called upon Dana Mayfield, theological student advisory delegate, Austin Theological Seminary, and Jane Busey, theological student advisory delegate, Dubuque Theological Seminary, who offered the closing prayer for this meeting of the General Assembly.

Recess

The assembly recessed at 5:45 p.m., to reconvene at 7:30 p.m. The official group photograph was taken following recess.

The 216th General Assembly (2004) reconvened at 7:30 p.m. with Moderator Andrews presiding. The Reverend Robert Douglas Cranston, ecumenical representative from the Church of Scotland, led the assembly in prayer.

REPORT OF THE ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON BUSINESS REFERRALS

Moderator Andrews recognized the moderator of the Assembly Committee on Business Referrals, Nancy Thornton McKenzie, who presented the committee's report. The assembly approved Item 01-01 (proposed docket). The assembly approved Item 01-02, after removing the following items from the consent agenda: C.1., F.12., and F. 13. The assembly approved Item 01-03 (referrals of business to committees). This concluded the report of the Assembly Committee on Business Referrals and is as follows:

The 216th General Assembly (2004) approved the following recommendations:

Item 01-01, Docket of the Assembly.

That the recommendation is approved.

Item 01-02, Plenary Consent Agenda.

That the recommendation is approved with amendment.

Remove Items C.1., F.12., and F.13. from the consent agenda.

Item 01-03, List of Referrals of Business to Assembly Committees.

That the recommendation is approved with the following amendments:

1. Item 05-13 is referred to the Assembly Committee on Pensions, Foundation, and PILP (14) rather than the Assembly Committee on Church Orders and Ministry (05). [Note: Because this change in referral occurred before the printing of the reports, this item was mailed to commissioners with the correct item number (Item 14-14).]

2. That the following items from the General Assembly Council are referred as indicated:

- Item 05-13. On Church Leadership Connection. Referred to Assembly Committee on Church Orders and Ministry.
- Item 07-09. Recognition of Leaders in Basic Mission Support. Referred to Assembly Committee on Mission Coordination and Budgets.
- Item 08-13. President of Princeton Theological Seminary. Referred to Assembly Committee on Theological Issues and Institutions.
- Item 08-14. President of Louisville Theological Seminary. Referred to Assembly Committee on Theological Issues and Institutions.
- Item 08-15. Louisville Seminary Articles of Incorporation. Referred to Assembly Committee on Theological Issues and Institutions.
- Item 12-08. Call to Confession of Prison Abuse in Iraq. Referred to Assembly Committee on Peacemaking.

3. That the following item from the General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations is referred as indicated:

- Item 06-11. Delegate and Alternate to WARC. Referred to: Assembly Committee on Ecumenical and Interfaith Relations.

4. That the following item from the Moderator is referred as follows:

- Item 00-05. Nominations for the General Assembly Nominating Committee. Referred to: Plenary. [Note: Since this item was received before the mailing of Reports to General Assembly (RGA) II, it was included in that mailing.]

Election of the Moderator

Moderator Andrews announced the Order of the Day, the election of the Moderator of the 216th General Assembly (2004) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), as required by Book of Order, G-9.0200, and Standing Rule F.1. The Stated Clerk described the procedure for this election.

Three candidates were placed in nomination: K. C. Ptomey, Presbytery of Middle Tennessee, who was nominated by Annika Lister Stroope, Presbytery of Twin Cities Area; Rick Ufford-Chase, Presbytery of De Cristo, who was nominated by Patricia Mason, Presbytery of Pittsburgh; and David McKechnie, Presbytery of New Covenant, who was nominated by Florida Ellis, Presbytery of Greater Atlanta.

With no additional nominations from the floor, the nominations were then closed and each candidate was afforded an opportunity to address the General Assembly for a time not to exceed five minutes. The order of the nominating speakers and candidates to address the assembly was determined by lot. The most recent past Moderator present, Fahed Abu-Akel, Moderator of the 214th General Assembly (2002), assisted with the drawing after leading the moderatorial candidates in prayer.

At the conclusion of their presentations, the candidates responded to questions from the floor. At the expiration of the time allotted for this process, the candidates were escorted from the hall by former Moderator Abu-Akel. Stated Clerk Kirkpatrick explained the electronic voting procedures.

Rick Ufford-Chase was elected Moderator of the 216th General Assembly (2004) on the second ballot, receiving a total of 275 votes. Of the total votes cast, David McKechnie received 186 and K.C. Ptomey received 40.

Moderator Andrews declared that Rick Ufford-Chase was duly elected to the office of Moderator of the 216th General Assembly (2004).

After being escorted back into the hall by former Moderator Abu-Akel, elected Moderator Rick Ufford-Chase was accompanied on the platform by family members: Kitty Ufford-Chase (spouse), Teo Ufford-Chase (son), and Lerold W. and Ethel Chase (parents); and friends: Patricia Mason, Pat Brandenburg, Kelly Weselink, Laura Crim, Jennifer Hill, Dan Murphy-Cairns, and Jan DeVries.

Dissent

The following commissioner filed a dissent from the action taken to elect Rick Ufford-Chase as Moderator of the 216th General Assembly (2004): George J. McIlrath, Presbytery of Tropical Florida.

Induction Service and Presentation to Newly Elected Moderator

Retiring Moderator Susan Andrews inducted Rick Ufford-Chase into the office of Moderator. Jennifer Hill led the assembly in prayer for its newly elected Moderator.

Retiring Moderator Andrews then presented Moderator Ufford-Chase with the moderatorial stole and Celtic crosses that have been worn by all Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Moderators since 1983.

Moderator Ufford-Chase then addressed the assembly briefly and expressed appreciation to family members and friends for their prayers and support.

Presentations to Retiring Moderator

Stated Clerk Clifton Kirkpatrick presented to retiring Moderator Susan Andrews a crystal clock inscribed with the seal of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and a replica of the Celtic crosses that have been worn by all Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Moderators since 1983.

Announcements

Following announcements by Stated Clerk Kirkpatrick and prayer by Youth Advisory Delegate Megan Grieshaber from the Presbytery of Santa Barbara, the assembly recessed at 10:00 p.m., to be reconvened at 5:00 p.m. on Sunday, June 27, 2004.

Sunday, June 27, 2004, 10:00 A.M.

Opening Worship and Service of Holy Communion

Commissioners of the 216th General Assembly (2004) and other participants assembled for worship on Sunday, June 27, 2004, in the Richmond Coliseum, Richmond, Virginia. Susan Andrews, Moderator of the 215th General Assembly (2003) preached a sermon, entitled "Abundant Abundance." Scripture readings were from Exodus 16:1-3, 9-21, Psalm 23, and John 10:1-15. Ministers and elders from the Presbytery of the James assisted in the distribution of communion elements.

Moderator Ufford-Chase designated the offering from this service for the following mission programs: Education in Ethiopia, including the Bethel Evangelical Secondary School (BESS) and the Gidado Bible College (GBC); and the Coalition of Immokalee Workers, Immokalee, Florida.

Commissioning of Mission Personnel

The worship service included the recognition of mission personnel retiring, Global Partners in Mission in the U.S.A., and members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) appointed to serve in mission in North America and worldwide.

Sunday, June 27, 2004, 12:00 P.M.

Following the opening worship service, commissioners and others participated in various afternoon events, including a lunch sponsored by the Committee on Local Arrangements, and the Moderator's Reception.

Sunday, June 27, 2004, 5:00 P.M.

The 216th General Assembly (2004) was reconvened at 5:00 p.m. by Moderator Rick Ufford-Chase, with prayer by Marie Cross, co-executive of the Synod of the Covenant.

Moderator Ufford-Chase introduced the Reverend Jean Marie Peacock, associate pastor of the Lakeview Presbyterian Church, Presbytery of South Louisiana, whom he appointed to serve as Vice-Moderator of the 216th General Assembly (2004). Vice-Moderator Peacock briefly addressed the assembly.

Moderator Ufford-Chase announced the offering at the Opening Worship Service totaled $42,245.21 and that the offering supports were listed in the opening worship program.

Report of the Stated Clerk Review/Nomination Committee

Moderator Ufford-Chase, according to Standing Rule G.1.c., appointed Gradye Parsons, Associate Stated Clerk, to serve as temporary Stated Clerk during the report of the Stated Clerk Review/Nomination Committee.

Sandy Peirce, moderator of the Stated Clerk Review/Nomination Committee, gave the report of the committee. Kathy Walker, Thomas Are Jr., and Charles Heyward, members of the Stated Clerk Review/Nomination Committee, gave an overview of the work of the committee's work.

Moderator Ufford-Chase announced the intent of three additional candidates for Stated Clerk of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.): Robert Davis, Linn W. Rus Howard, and Alex Metherell. All candidates were invited to the platform.

Matthew Johnson, elder commissioner from the Presbytery of the James, nominated Dr. Alex F. Metherell; Christopher Scruggs, minister commissioner from the Presbytery of Memphis, nominated the Reverend Robert B. Davis; Sandy Peirce, on behalf of the Stated Clerk Review/ Nomination Committee, nominated the Reverend Clifton Kirkpatrick; and Rodney Bakker, minister commissioner from the Presbytery of Great Rivers nominated the Reverend Linn W. Rus Howard.

Moderator Ufford-Chase, as directed by the Standing Rules, asked the nominees if they reaffirmed a willingness to serve as Stated Clerk, if elected. The nominees answered in the affirmative.

Report of the General Assembly Nominating Committee

Moderator Ufford-Chase recognized Susan Davis Krummel, chairperson of the General Assembly Nominating Committee, who described the process for reassignment of classes and extension of terms for some members of permanent committees to accommodate moving to biennial assemblies. The assembly approved these reassignments as Item 00-04.

Orientation to Committee Work

Moderator Ufford-Chase recognized Associate Stated Clerk Parsons and Kathy Lueckert, deputy executive director of the General Assembly Council, for a period of orientation to committee work.

Announcements

Associate Stated Clerk Parsons made several announcements, including a reminder that the deadline to sign up for the open hearings of committees was 7:00 p.m., Sunday, June 27, 2004.

Closing Prayer

Minutes

The Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures examined the minutes of the General Assembly from the time of its convening on Saturday afternoon, June 26, through the end of business Sunday afternoon, and found them in order. All had been done in compliance with the Standing Rules.

Stated Clerk's Orientation II

Moderator Ufford-Chase recognized Stated Clerk Kirkpatrick, who presented a brief orientation of commissioners. This session of the orientation included procedures for conducting business in plenary, for use of microphones and the speaker recognition system, for making a motion, for participation in dialogue, for use of parliamentary procedures (using the most recent version of Robert's Rules of Order), for use of protests and dissents, for use of consent motion, for handling of minority reports, for distribution of reports, and for the electronic voting procedures.

FINANCIAL IMPLICATIONS UPDATE
 REPORT OF THE ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON GENERAL ASSEMBLY PROCEDURES

Moderator Ufford-Chase recognized Judith Hartley, moderator of the Assembly Committee on General Assembly Procedures, for a report on financial implications to the per capita budget of actions taken at this assembly. Hartley announced that the total financial implications of actions recommended by assembly committees would increase the per capita rate by half of a cent. Per capita for the year 2004 is $5.51/member, which cannot be changed. For the year 2005, per capita would increase by 6.48 cents; and for the year 2006, per capita would increase by 6.86 cents, if all actions recommended are approved. Hartley reported that two alternative proposals for the per capita rate were being considered by the committee, as follows:

1. Approve per capita at a rate of $5.46 for 2005 (which is a reduction of .05 cents), and $5.56 for 2006 (which is an increase of 10 cents, or an increase of five cents from the 2004 level);
2. Approve per capita $5.51 for 2005 and 2006 (which would be the same as in 2004 without change for the next two years).

The committee will make a recommendation on the last day of the assembly. A brief summary will be presented each day.

FINANCIAL IMPLICATIONS UPDATE:
REPORT OF THE ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON
MISSION COORDINATION AND BUDGETS

The report of the Assembly Committee on Mission Coordination and Budgets was presented by its moderator, Catesby Woodford. Woodford reported the total financial implications of actions under consideration by the assembly for the mission budgets was: $0 for 2004; $155,791 for 2005; and $101,566 for 2006.

Committee on Theological Education (COTE)
Henry Luce Presentation

Moderator Ufford-Chase recognized Dottie Hedgepeth, associate director for Theological Education, Congregational Ministries Division, who introduced Liza Hendricks, moderator of the Committee on Theological Education (COTE). Hendricks introduced members of COTE who were present. Hendricks then introduced C. Samuel Calian, president of Pittsburgh Theological Seminary, who presented the Henry Luce Award for Excellence to Henry Luce III. Luce briefly addressed the General Assembly and expressed his thanks for the award.

REPORT OF THE ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON THEOLOGICAL ISSUES AND INSTITUTIONS

The report of the Assembly Committee on Theological Issues and Institutions was presented by its moderator, Michelle Moe.

The assembly approved the consent agenda: Items 08-02 (approved), 08-03 (approved), 08-04 (approved), 08-07 (approved), 08-08 (approved), and 08-15 (approved). The assembly approved Item 08-01 with amendment. In response to Item 08-05, a statement was approved. Item 08-06 was referred to the General Assembly Council, Office of Theology and Worship. Item 08-09 was approved. Moe recognized Jenny Stoner, co-moderator of the Task Force on the Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church, who offered a preliminary report for the task force. Mark Achtemeier and Stacy Johnson, members of the task force, continued the preliminary report. Moe continued the report of the assembly committee. Items 08-10 and 08-11 were approved. Item 08-12 was answered by action taken on Item 08-05 with an additional statement, which was amended from the floor, as follows: "The 216th General Assembly (2004) affirms the ~~primary~~ significant and instructive role of The Book of Confessions. . . ." Moe introduced Jorge Cartagena-Cruz, vice-moderator of the Assembly Committee on Theological Issues and Institutions, to continue the report. Cartagena-Cruz, introduced Samuel Calian, to recognize Tom Gillespie, president of Princeton Theological Seminary, upon his retirement. Gillespie addressed the assembly and then introduced his successor at Princeton Theological Seminary, Iain R. Torrance, who spoke briefly to the assembly. Item 08-13 was approved. Cartagena-Cruz presented Liza Hendricks, who introduced Dean K. Thompson as the new president of Louisville Presbyterian Theological Seminary. Thompson addressed the assembly. Item 08-14 was approved. Moe presented the remainder of the report. The assembly disapproved Item 08-16 and also deleted the comment recommended by the assembly committee. Item 08-17 was disapproved with comment. Item 08-18 was approved with the following amendment: "Insert the following sentence as the end of the recommendation: 'This work should be coordinated with the Office of Theology and Worship.'" Item 08-19 was disapproved.

The report of the Assembly Committee on Theological Issues and Institutions was concluded, and is as follows:

The 216th General Assembly (2004) approved the following recommendations: [Consent agenda items are indicated by an asterisk (*). Items with financial implications are indicated by a dollar sign ($).]

Presbyterian Publishing Corporation

Item 08-01. Regarding Production of New Presbyterian Hymnal.

That the recommendation is approved with amendment: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through and with brackets; text to be added or inserted is shown with an underline and with brackets.]

“The Presbyterian Publishing Corporation (PPC) recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) authorize the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation, the Office of Theology and Worship, and the Presbyterian Association of Musicians to begin research into the feasibility of a new Presbyterian hymnal, [that the feasibility report be given to the 217th General Assembly (2006),] and further that, subject to action of a future General Assembly upon presentation and approval of a comprehensive publication plan, the 216th General Assembly (2004) designate the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation as the prospective publisher of the next Presbyterian hymnal, which would be developed in partnership with the Office of Theology and Worship and the Presbyterian Association of Musicians.”

In response to this recommendation, the 216th General Assembly (2004) approved the following statement:

The 216th General Assembly (2004) affirms the right and responsibility of presbyteries to determine whether candidates and ministers “sincerely receive and adopt the essential tenets of the Reformed faith as expressed in the confessions of our church,” together with all other matters expressed in ordination and installation vows.

Ordination vows and essential tenets have a long and complex history in the Presbyterian church. The church has worked through the issue of “essential tenets” many times before, so attention to that history is essential.

From the beginning, the church has lived in the space between two tendencies. One stressed the more “objective” aspects of Christian faith such as theological precision, the distinct character of the ministry, and ordered church government. The other placed more emphasis on spontaneity, vital experience, and adaptability. In 1729, division was averted by recognizing the concerns of both groups in the “Adopting Act.” The Adopting Act required:

1. That all ministers and candidates accept the Westminster Confession, together with the Larger and Shorter catechisms . . .
2. . . . but not categorically.
3. That all ministers and candidates must declare “agreement in and approbation of” the confessional standards “as being in all the essential and necessary articles, good forms of sound words and systems of Christian doctrine.”
4. That any minister who did not accept any particular part of the Confession or catechisms should state his scruple concerning that part, and the presbytery should then decide whether or not the scruple involved “essential and necessary articles of faith.”

The Adopting Act regularized confessional standards, but it did not require adherence to every confessional articulation. “Essential and necessary articles” were not identified. The Adopting Act was refined in 1758 at the repair of the Old Side/New Side schism:

1. With respect to any action deemed essential and necessary by the church, “every member shall actively concur . . . or passively submit . . . or peaceably withdraw.”
2. It became a censurable offense irresponsibly to accuse other ministers.
3. Presbyteries were to examine candidates on “religious experience” as well as doctrine.
4. Five questions were to be asked at ordinations and installations, including, “Do you sincerely receive and adopt the confession of faith of this church as contained in the system of doctrine taught in the holy Scriptures?” The “system of doctrine” was interpreted in the spirit of “essential and necessary.”

The 1910 General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America declared that the Adopting Act of 1729 called upon judicatories to determine which articles of faith are “essential and necessary.” The assembly then identified five doctrines as “essential” (although the assembly added, “others are equally so.”) (1) inerrancy of Scripture, (2) virgin birth, (3) sacrificial atonement, (4) bodily resurrection, (5) Christ’s miracles.

Although the 1910 deliverance was challenged repeatedly, it was not repealed. Following the 1923 General Assembly, and in reaction against the 1910/1916/1923 doctrinal deliverance, more than 1,200 ministers signed the “Auburn Affirmation” declaring that the five-point deliverance attempts to commit our church to certain theories concerning the Inspiration of the Bible, and the Incarnation, the Atonement, the Resurrection, and the Continuing Life and Supernatural Power of our Lord Jesus Christ. We all hold most earnestly to these great facts and doctrines... Some of us regard the particular themes contained in the deliverance of the General Assembly of 1923 as satisfactory explanations of these facts and doctrines. But we are united in believing that these are not the only themes allowed by the Scriptures and our standards as explanations of these facts and doctrines of our religion, and that all who hold to these facts and doctrines, whatever theories they may employ to explain them, are worthy of our confidence and fellowship.

The issue was set: narrowly defined confessional subscription or broadly defined confessional subscription. The question was not whether confessional subscription was required, but the specific nature of that confessional subscription.

The matter was referred to a special commission that reported in 1926 and 1927. The upshot of the special commission’s report, adopted by the 1927 General Assembly, was that:

1. The General Assembly does not have the constitutional power to give binding definition to the church’s essential faith. By denying that the assembly has the right to define authoritatively the “essentials” of the church’s faith, the commission eliminated the five points as a source of controversy.
2. While a measure of tolerance was embedded in the church, it was made clear that the church, and not the individual, must decide the limits of tolerated diversity, “either generally, by amendment to the constitution, or particularly, by Presbyterial authority.”

The church has decided limits generally, by amending the constitution to create The Book of Confessions, and particularly, by the continuing examination for ordination of candidates and for reception into membership of ministers. To this end, it must be acknowledged that in ordination the presbytery has historically demonstrated its power and responsibility in determining confirmation with the church’s theology.

That the recommendation is disapproved.

Item 08-17. Regarding the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Call for Presbyterians to Lead a Simpler Life.

That the recommendation is disapproved and that the assembly notes the comment from the General Assembly Council:

Comment: The General Assembly Council (GAC) welcomes the attention that this commissioners' resolution brings to the encouragement of simpler lifestyles. We believe that several components of the requested action are already in place. The GAC suggests that the most effective approach to accomplishing the commissioners' intent would be a communication from the assembly that calls Presbyterians to use existing programs as resources in a journey toward simpler, more faithful lifestyles.

Encouragement of simpler, less consumption-oriented, living finds expression in various programs of the General Assembly Council. The Spiritual Formation office commends simplicity as a spiritual practice; the Stewardship Education office interprets simpler living as a matter of Christian stewardship; and the Presbyterian Hunger Program encourages simpler lifestyles as a way to assure that all people share in God's abundance. All see a commitment to simpler lives as an expression of Christian discipleship.

The Presbyterian Hunger Program supports and promotes the work of the ecumenical organization Alternatives for Simple Living and distributes its "Whose Birthday Is It Anyway?" resource each year as an encouragement to a simpler observance of Christmas. Alternatives' resources deal with many dimensions of simpler lifestyles, from wedding plans to energy conservation.

For the past three years, several programs of the General Assembly Council have jointly sponsored the Enough for Everyone program, which promotes a related approach to congregational lifestyles. Through the Presbyterian Coffee Project, Sweat-Free T-Shirts, Electric Stewardship, and Investing in Hope, congregations are invited to engage in activities that represent a more just participation in the global economy.

REPORT OF THE ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON ECUMENICAL AND INTERFAITH RELATIONS

The Report of the Assembly Committee on Ecumenical and Interfaith Relations was presented by its moderator, Mary Gene Boteler. The consent agenda was approved as follows: Items 06-08 (approved), 06-10 (approved), and 06-11 (approved). Item 06-01 was approved as amended. Item 06-02 was disapproved with instruction to the General Assembly Council and the Office of the General Assembly. Items 06-03, 06-04, and 06-05 were approved. Item 06-06 was approved as amended. Recommendation 1. of Item 06-09 was approved as amended. Recommendation 2. of Item 06-09 was disapproved. Rebecca Drover, vice-moderator of the Assembly Committee on Ecumenical and Interfaith Relations introduced a video on the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A. Ellen Babinsky, moderator of the General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations, gave a brief overview of their review of the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A. Item 06-07 was approved. Boteler presented the remainder of the assembly committee's report. Recommendation 2. of Item 06-12 was disapproved. Item 06-13 was approved.

This concluded the report of the Assembly Committee on Ecumenical and Interfaith Relations and is as follows:

The 216th General Assembly (2004) approved the following recommendations: [Consent agenda items are indicated by an asterisk(*)].

Interfaith Relations

Item 06-01. Recommendation Regarding Expansion of Work Regarding 1999 Referral 25.246: To Equip Presbyterians to Better Articulate Their Faith in Interreligious Contexts.

That the recommendations are approved with amendment:

Amend Recommendation 1. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through and with brackets; text to be added or inserted is shown with an underline and with brackets.]

“1. Expansion of work responding to the 1999 referral to better equip the church for witness in pluralistic society, to be designed and carried out by a cross-divisional staff team coordinated by the Interfaith Relations Office. This team will also involve at least the Office of Theology and Worship and the Committee on Theological Education in the Congregational Ministries Division, the Office on International Evangelism in the Worldwide Ministries Division, and the Office of Evangelism and Church Development in the National Ministries Division. [To invite and include specialized ministers, chaplains, and others who work frequently in interfaith contexts to be included as part of the cross-divisional staff team.]”

Item 06-02. On Forming a Task Force to Draft a Denominational Policy Consistent with the Religious Pluralism Reality in the U.S.A.—From the Presbytery of Eastern Oklahoma. +GAC

That the recommendation is disapproved and, recognizing the religious pluralism that exists in the U.S.A. and the world that informs our religious life, we instruct:

1. The Office of Interfaith Relations of the General Assembly Council to communicate the strong policy statement opposed to religious bigotry and stereotyping as found in General Assembly Minutes, 1999, Part I, pp. 79 and 663, and as printed below; and

2. The Office of Interfaith Relations, together with other appropriate offices of the General Assembly Council, to prepare a guide for congregations that makes known and available the resources already available in regard to religious pluralism and Christian discipleship; and

3. The Office of the General Assembly and the Office of Interfaith Relations of the World Ministries Division to bring the 217th General Assembly a recommendation on what further study or action might be needed to better equip the church to live in a religiously plural world.

Policy Statement from 1999

. . . 1. call upon congregations and governing bodies of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to work prayerfully and carefully to eliminate the language, imagery, and symbols in their preaching and teaching ministries that perpetuate stereotypes through (a) viewing all persons of a particular religion as having certain characteristics in common without giving attention to differences within a religious community or tradition; (b) deriving characterizations of a religion from external sources rather than from the sources within the particular tradition involved; and, (c) comparing the best of Christian practices with the worst behavior or beliefs of the other community;

2. call upon individual Presbyterians to reflect carefully and prayerfully on their use of language, symbols, and images in relation to other religions and to challenge stereotypes through appropriate means;

3. call upon congregations and governing bodies to create opportunities for dialogues that provide opportunities to share ideas with adherents of other religions and to get to know them as persons of faith;

4. call upon congregations and governing bodies to join in interfaith ministries of justice with individuals or congregations, or other appropriate groups;

5. call upon individual Presbyterians to view media presentations of other religions critically and to challenge stereotypes when they are presented;

6. direct the [General Assembly Council, Worldwide Ministries Division, to make available resources that guide Presbyterians in overcoming problems that have developed through the history of Christian relationships with peoples of other faith communities and];

7. direct the Stated Clerk to communicate this action to congregations and governing bodies for study and action. (Minutes, 1999, Part I, p. 663)

Item 06-09. On Re-Examining the Relationship Between Christians and Jews and the Implications for Our Evangelism and New Church Development—From the Presbytery of Hudson River. +ACREC +GAC

That Recommendation 1. is approved as amended: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through and with brackets; text to be added or inserted is shown with an underline and with brackets.]

“1. Direct the Office of Theology and Worship, the Office of Interfaith Relations, and the Office of Evangelism to ‘reexamine [and strengthen] the relationship between Christians and Jews and the implications of this relationship for our evangelism and new church development in continuing response to the 211th General Assembly (1999) mandate to guide the church in “bearing witness to Jesus Christ in a pluralistic age.” ‘ “

Item 06-06. Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Understanding of 16th and 17th Century Condemnations of Other Churches in The Book of Confessions. *ACC

That the recommendations are approved with amendment:

1. Amend the second paragraph (policy statement) of Recommendation 1. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through and with brackets; text to be added or inserted is shown with an underline and with brackets.]

“Specific statements in 16th and 17th century confessions and catechisms in The Book of Confessions contain condemnations or derogatory characterizations of the [Roman] Catholic Church: Chapters XVIII and XXII of the Scots Confession; Questions and Answer 80 of the Heidelberg Catechism; and Chapters II, III, XVII, and XX, of the Second Helvetic Confession. (Chapters XXII, XXV, and XXIX of the Westminster Confession of Faith have been amended to remove anachronous and offensive language. Chapter XXVIII of the French Confession does not have constitutional standing.) While these statements emerged from substantial doctrinal disputes, they reflect 16th and 17th century polemics. Their condemnations and characterizations of the Catholic Church are not the position of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and are not applicable to current relationships between the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and the Catholic Church.”

2. Amend Recommendation 2. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through and with brackets; text to be added or inserted is shown with an underline and with brackets.]

“2. Amend the Preface to The Book of Confessions by inserting the policy statement [above] between [paragraph 4 and] paragraph 5 [~~and the concluding quotation from the Book of Order.~~”

3. Add a new recommendation, “6.” to read as follows:

“[6. Direct the General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations to consider proposing an additional paragraph in The Book of Confessions’ Preface concerning condemnatory language in The Book of Confessions towards other world religions similar to the one regarding the relationship between the PC(USA) and the Catholic Church.]”

Item 06-07. Review of National Council of Churches in Christ (U.S.A.).

Item 06-A. Minutes, Committee on Ecumenical Relations.

That the minutes are approved.

Announcements

Stated Clerk Kirkpatrick announced that Wednesday evening's meal traditionally was a simple meal with the amount saved donated to a local hunger project. Although the evening's meal was not a group meal, commissioners were invited to participate in this project by donating all or part of the per diem allowed toward this project.

Recess

Following prayer by Melissa Manhong Lin, ecumenical advisory delegate from the China Christian Council, the assembly recessed at 6:03 p.m., to reconvene at 7:30 p.m.

Wednesday, June 30, 2004, 7:30 P.M.

The 216th General Assembly reconvened at 7:30 p.m. with Moderator Ufford-Chase presiding. Lavender Kelley and Shannon Meacham, theological student advisory delegates from Louisville Presbyterian Seminary, led the assembly in prayer.

Speak-Out

Commissioners, advisory delegates, and corresponding members were given an opportunity to speak out on issues outside the deliberative mode of the assembly for fifteen minutes, with one-minute limits on individual speeches. Stated Clerk Kirkpatrick instructed the assembly on the procedure to be followed during the time allotted for the speak-out. Moderator Ufford-Chase then recognized persons, who spoke on various concerns.

ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON BILLS AND OVERTURES

Moderator Ufford-Chase recognized Nancy Thornton McKenzie, moderator of the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures, who presented an oral report from the committee.

Ecumenical Greeting

Moderator Ufford-Chase recognized the Reverend Younan Shiba, ecumenical advisory delegate, who brought greetings to the assembly from the Assyrian Presbyterian Church of Iraq.

Top Ten Giving Presbyteries

The Moderator recognized Vernon Carroll, chair of the General Assembly Council. Carroll gave a report recognizing the following top ten giving presbyteries: Donegal, Cascades, Lake Michigan, Carlisle, Philadelphia, Chicago, Grace, Mission, Detroit, and Whitewater Valley. The following presbyteries were recognized for their per-member giving: Santa Fe, Southeast Illinois, Redwoods, Des Moines, Kiskiminetas, and Alaska.

REPORT OF THE ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON PENSIONS, FOUNDATION, AND PILP

The report of the Assembly Committee on Pensions, Foundation, and PILP was presented by its moderator, Gilda Bonnemere. The assembly approved the consent agenda: Items 14-01 (approved), 14-02 (approved), 14-03 (approved), 14-05 (approved), and 14-06 (approved). Item 14-04 was approved. Ray Tanner,

General Assembly Council, introduced Robert Leech, president and CEO of the Foundation, who thanked the General Assembly. John Bartholomew addressed the 216th General Assembly (2004) regarding the review of the PILP. Item 14-07 was approved. Molly Baskin, PILP Board of Directors, introduced Jay Hudson, president of PILP, who thanked the General Assembly. Item 14-09 was approved. In response to Item 14-10, the assembly approved an alternate resolution. In response to Item 14-14, an interpretation was approved. The assembly voted to disapprove Items 14-08 and 14-11 with comments. The assembly voted to answer Item 14-12 by action taken on Item 14-09. The committee moved the disapproval of Item 14-13 with comment. An amendment from the floor was approved to add the following to the comment: “Hardship exceptions to this policy may be offered by the Board of Pensions on a case-by-case basis with an internal procedure to be established by the Board of Pensions.” The assembly voted to disapprove Item 14-13 with the comment as amended in plenary. The committee moved the referral of Item 14-15. An amendment was approved to strike the words “implementing the policy of the church by” in Item 14-15. The assembly voted to refer Item 14-15 as amended in plenary. This concluded the report of the Assembly Committee on Pensions, Foundation and PILP, and is as follows:

The 216th General Assembly (2004) approved the following recommendations: [Consent Agenda items are indicated by an asterisk (*).]

I. Board of Pensions

That the recommendations are approved.

* Item 14-03. Amended and Restated Articles of Incorporation and Bylaws.

That the recommendation is approved.

Item 14-04. Confirmation of Robert Leech.

That the recommendation is approved.

That the recommendation is approved.

III. Presbyterian Investment and Loan Program (PILP)

* Item 14-06. Recommendations Regarding PILP Board.

That the recommendations are approved.

Item 14-07. Confirmation of Jay Hudson.

That the recommendation is approved.

IV. Overtures

Item 14-08. On Appointing a Task Force to Review the Medical Plan of the Board of Pensions—From the Presbytery of Abingdon.

That the recommendation is disapproved with the following comment:

Comment: That the concerns raised in the overture be referred to the General Assembly Committee on Review for the Board of Pensions and reported to the 217th General Assembly (2006).

Item 14-09. On Directing the Board of Pensions to Revise Their Rules For The Calculation of Salary for Churches With a Clergy Couple Installed to One Position—From the Presbytery of Southeastern Illinois.

That the recommendation is approved.

Item 14-10. On Creating a Fund to Provide Shared Equity Loans for Pastors Serving Churches Where the Average Cost of a Home is Twice the US Average—From the Presbytery of San Francisco.

In response to this item, the 216th General Assembly (2004) approved the following:

That PILP organize a work group to explore the possibility of the creation of a program through PILP to establish shared equity loans for areas with high home ownership costs. This work group shall be made up of members of the PILP, the Presbyterian Foundation, and the Board of Pensions, along with members of presbyteries with home ownership cost of at least twice the average in the United States. Each entity shall underwrite the expenses of their work group members. The 216th General Assembly (2004) directs the work group to report to the General Assembly Council within one year with recommendations.

Item 14-11. On Appointing a Task Force to Review the Pension and Medical Plans of the PC(USA)—From the Presbytery of Providence.

That the recommendation is disapproved with comment:

Comment: That the concerns raised in the overture be referred to the General Assembly Committee on Review for the Board of Pensions and reported to the 217th General Assembly (2006).

Item 14-12. On Urging the Board of Pensions to Correct an Inequity for Churches Calling a Married Couple as Co-Pastors Sharing Less than Two Full-Time Calls—From the Presbytery of Northern New England.

That the recommendation is answered by the action taken on Item 14-09 of this report.

Item 14-13. On Reinstating Board of Pension Medical Coverage for Persons on Active Duty—From the Presbytery of Eastminster.

That the recommendation is disapproved with comment:

Comment: The overture addresses the availability of medical coverage for returning military personnel for the period of time between release from active duty and resumption of their civilian lives. The overture proposes that the Benefits Plan provide free medical coverage for up to 185 days to former Plan members and dependents upon their return from service. However, this coverage is already provided by the military benefit program and by the requirement that the former civilian employer immediately rehire the returning employee with full reinstatement of benefits.

TRICARE, the program that provides healthcare benefits to members of the uniformed services and their eligible dependents, continues coverage when members of the Reserve or National Guard return to civilian status.

Effective November 6, 2003, the Transitional Assistance Management Program provides 180 days of coverage for members of the reserves who were deployed more than thirty days and who separate from active duty status before December 31, 2004. Members who are deployed for thirty days or less retain coverage under the Benefits Plan for their entire period of military service. Several bills presently before Congress would extend the December 31, 2004, date. If the temporary program is not extended, service members with five or more years will be entitled to 120 days of free coverage and those with less than five years will be entitled to sixty days.

In addition, any Plan member who is mobilized for military service is covered by Federal law, the Uniform Services Employment and Reemployment Rights Act of 1994 (USERRA). The USERRA requires that the military members' civilian employers immediately restore the jobs and any medical coverage to which they were entitled prior to their military service. As a result of this reemployment requirement, all Plan members who serve in the uniformed services will be able to return to civilian employment and resume their prior medical coverage immediately.

Plan members' spouses and dependent children under age twenty-one who are mobilized retain their coverage under the Benefits Plan during their period of military service and coverage continues with no interruption upon their return. Dependent children age twenty-one or over who were previously enrolled as full-time college students experience a disruption of their coverage under the Benefits Plan if they are mobilized. These individuals are entitled to free coverage under TRICARE for 180 days after their return. If the TRICARE benefit expires before the next school term begins (fall or spring semester), the Board of Pensions will provide medical coverage for an affected dependent child between the end of the TRICARE benefit period and the first available date that the child may re-enroll as a fulltime student. Coverage is provided on the same terms as for any other dependent. Under the traditional Benefits Plan, no member contribution is required. For participation under the Affiliated Benefits Program, the contribution requirement, if any, will be that established by the employing organization for coverage of dependent children.

Because these existing programs fully meet the needs of returning service members, no additional benefits are required of the Board of Pensions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

Hardship exceptions to this policy may be offered by the Board of Pensions on a case-by-case basis with an internal procedure to be established by the Board of Pensions.

Item 14-14. ACC Request Regarding G-14.0506b(2), Mandatory Participation in the PC(USA) Benefits Plan—From Minister, Presbytery of Pittsburgh. [ACC]

In response to this item, the 216th General Assembly (2004) approved the following interpretation:

The language of G-14.0506b(2) includes the mandatory “shall” and not the permissive “may.” Therefore, the language does not permit the employing body to omit the payment based on a sum equal to the requisite percent of the minister’s compensation.

V. Commissioners’ Resolution

Item 14-15. Benefits Feasibility Study.

That the resolution, with amendment and with comment, is referred to the Board of Pensions to report back to the 217th General Assembly (2006):

Amendment: Strike the words “implementing the policy of the church by” so that the recommendation shall now read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through and with brackets.]

“That the 216th General Assembly (2004) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) request the Board of Pensions to explore the feasibility of ~~implementing the policy of the church by~~ providing domestic partners in long-term committed relationships the same benefits accorded to married couples, and to report its findings to the 217th General Assembly (2006).”

Comment: That the Board of Pensions review/deliberate the resolution in accordance with the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

VI. Committee Final Action and Report to Plenary

Item 14-E. Minutes, Presbyterian Investment and Loan Program

That the minutes are approved.

Memorial Minute for David L. Stitt

Louis B. Weeks, president of Union Theological Seminary-Presbyterian School of Christian Education, was recognized and presented a memorial minute for David L. Stitt.

Memorial Minute: David L. Stitt, 1912–2003

Prepared by Louis B. Weeks

David Leander Stitt, child of the covenant, faithful Presbyterian minister of the gospel, Moderator of the Presbyterian Church in the U.S., was born October 5, 1912, in Fort Worth, Texas. He received formal education at Texas Christian University, at Austin College (A.B. 1933), and Austin Seminary (B.D., 1936). After serving pastorates at First Presbyterian Church, Haskell, Texas, and at Westminster Presbyterian Church, St. Louis, Missouri, he was called in 1945 to be the fourth president of Austin Seminary. He served as that seminary's president for twenty-six years, and, with good colleagues he called to help, directed the growth of that flourishing institution that continues to thrive for the sake of the church.

In 1971, Dr. Stitt, who had been granted honorary doctorates by Westminster College, St. Louis, Austin College, Texas Christian University, Southwestern at Memphis (now Rhodes), Davidson College, and Presbyterian College, moved again into local congregational leadership as an associate pastor at First Presbyterian Church, Houston, and as pastor of the Bellaire Presbyterian Church of that city, from which he retired July 31, 1981.

His wife and partner in all efforts was Dr. Jane Dupuy Stitt, a Christian of uncommon gifts and a woman of wisdom and deep insight. The Stitts enjoyed thoroughly their six children and the extended family that eventually joined them. In the time of their retirement, the Stitts continued in effective ministry together, with Jane serving as the eyes of David when blindness overtook him.

In the words of his good friend and fellow Texan, James Wharton, when David Stitt “took over the reins as president of Austin Seminary, he soon discovered that while he indeed had the reins, he had no horse.” The seminary had a sizeable debt, few buildings and those in poor conditions, a tiny faculty, and eighteen students. Thanks to his strong leadership, his determination, and his consummate skill in challenging Presbyterians with the promise and merits of excellent theological education, he superintended the growth in the student body from 18 to 150, the exponential increase of the endowment, the securing of superb faculty members, and the general respect for Austin Seminary among Christians in North America and more broadly in the world. Friends at Austin remembered him returning to his office on Mondays after preaching, especially in West Texas, and emptying pockets stuffed with checks, dollar bills, and even loose change given for the seminary. Others remember him visiting the cities of the southeast, playing tennis, speaking and teaching, then managing one more tennis matches before supper and an evening responsibility.

In 1980, David Stitt served as Moderator of the Presbyterian Church in the U.S., and he brought to that task his customary strong leadership, boundless energy, and good sense of humor. In Christian hope, we rejoice in his presence among the Church Triumphant, October 3, 2003.

Announcements

Stated Clerk Kirkpatrick announced that an offering of $ 3,442.47 was received at the Ecumenical Worship Service, which will benefit the Commission on Religion in Appalachia in Mississippi. Kirkpatrick also announced a Red Cross Blood Drive to be held in Room B15c of the Greater Richmond Convention Center from 9:30 a.m.–3:30 p.m. on Thursday, June 1, 2004. Also announced was that prayer concerns raised would be displayed on the monitors between business meetings of the assembly.

Closing Prayer

Following prayer led by Elder Nancy Maffett, the assembly recessed at 9:30 p.m. to reconvene at 9:30 a.m. on Thursday, July 1, 2004.

Thursday, July 1, 2004, 8:30 A.M.

Commissioners, advisory delegates, and other participants worshiped together in the Hall A-B of the Greater Richmond Convention Center. J. Barrie Shepherd, from the Presbytery of Philadelphia, preached the sermon.

Thursday, July 1, 2004, 9:30 A.M.

The 216th General Assembly (2004) reconvened at 9:30 a.m. with Moderator Ufford-Chase presiding. Abdoulaye Abba Moussa, ecumenical advisory delegate from the Evangelical Church of the Republic of Niger, led the assembly in prayer.

Ecumenical Greeting

Moderator Ufford-Chase recognized Lynne Herring, stated clerk, who brought greetings to the assembly from the Cumberland Presbyterian Church in America.

FINANCIAL IMPLICATIONS UPDATE:

MODERATOR NOMINATIONS TO THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY NOMINATING COMMITTEE

The Moderator recognized the Susan Andrews, Moderator of the 215th General Assembly (2004), who brought nominees to the 2008 and 2010 classes of the General Assembly Nominating Committee (Item 00-05). Andrews moved, as a single motion, Item 00-05, the list of nominees, except for the names of Laura VanDale and Elona Street-Stewart. The assembly approved the motion. Andrews nominated Laura VanDale for election to the General Assembly Nominating Committee (Class of 2008). Commissioner Alison Bucklin nominated Sharlyn W. Stare from the floor to replace the Moderator Andrews' nominee, Laura VanDale. The assembly approved the nomination of Laura VanDale. Andrews nominated Elona Street-Stewart for election to the General Assembly Nominating Committee (Class of 2010). Commissioner Harper Brady nominated Penny Tvrdik from the floor to replace Moderator Andrews' nominee, Elona Street-Stewart. The assembly approved the nomination of Elona Street-Stewart.

Decade of the Child

Moderator Ufford-Chase recognized Patricia Chapman, associate for child advocacy, Social Justice Program, National Ministries Division, General Assembly Council, for a presentation on the Decade of the Child, which was produced by David Young.

REPORT OF THE ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON HEALTH ISSUES

The Moderator recognized Leigh Morris, vice-moderator of the Assembly Committee on Health Issues, to present the report of the committee. On behalf of the committee, Morris moved the approval of a response to Item 11-02. Kim Nelson, commissioner from the Presbytery of San Jose, presented a minority report concerning Item 11-02. Morris spoke briefly to the main motion. Moderator Ufford-Chase recognized Nelson. Nelson introduced Gloria Albrecht, commissioner from the Presbytery of Detroit, who spoke briefly to the minority report. The floor was opened for amendments to the main motion. The assembly voted that the main motion was perfected. The Moderator declared the minority report perfected. The merits of the main motion and the substitute motion were debated. Following prayer, Moderator Ufford-Chase placed before the assembly the question, “Shall the minority report be substituted for the main motion?” The assembly voted to substitute the minority report for the main motion. The assembly voted to approve the response to Item 11-02. The assembly voted to answer Item 11-03 with the action taken on Item 11-02. The assembly voted to approve Item 11-05 with amendment. The assembly voted to approve Item 11-06. The assembly voted to approve Item 11-07 with comment. The assembly voted to disapprove Item 11-01 with comment. The assembly voted to disapprove Item 11-04. This concluded the committee’s report and is as follows:

The 216th General Assembly (2004) approved the following recommendations: [There were no consent agenda items in this report. Items with financial implications are indicated by a dollar sign ($).]

I. Health Issues

In response to Item 11-02, the 216th General Assembly (2004) approved the following:

That the Moderator of the 216th General Assembly (2004) and the Stated Clerk shall write a pastoral letter to the congregations on the issue of problem pregnancy. In order to provide pastoral and tangible support to women and families confronting problem pregnancies, their letter shall include a copy of the pamphlets published by the Women’s Ministries program area, National Ministries Division, Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), entitled:

- When No Choice Is Easy: For the Pregnant Woman,
- When You Need the Wisdom of Solomon: Helping Others Face Problem Pregnancies,
- There Is Always a Father: Does the Father Have a Problem Too?, and
- When Pregnancy Involves Loss: Helping Others Face Problem Pregnancies.

To be included with these excellent resources shall be the publication Statement on Post-Viability and Late-Term Abortion, approved by the 215th General Assembly (2003). The letter shall also affirm adoption as a provision for women who deliver children they are not able to care for, and ask our congregations to assist in seeking adoptive families within the household of faith.

It is hoped that the pastoral leadership expressed by our denomination on this sensitive issue will assist pastors and congregations and the people with whom they work.

[Financial Implication: $3,700 (2004) (Per Capita: OGA)]

Item 11-03. On Clarity of Late-Term Pregnancy—From the Presbytery of Beaver-Butler. +ACSWP +ACWC

That the recommendation is answered by the action taken on Item 11-02 of this report.

II. Other

Item 11-05. On Opposing the Change in Requirements of Emission from Smoke-Stack Industries—From the Presbytery of Savannah. +ACSWP

That the recommendation is approved with amendment: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through and with brackets; text to be added or inserted is shown with an underline and with brackets.]

“1. Declare our opposition to the change in requirements of emission from smoke stack industries[, changes instituted by the Environmental Protection Agency on August 27, 2003, in the New Source Review permitting requirements for emissions from power plants and manufacturing facili- ties]. ‘The new rules would allow thousands of older power plants, oil refineries, and industrial units to make extensive upgrades without having to install new antipollution devices’ (New York Times, August 22, 2003, by Katherine Q. Seeley).

“2. Petition the president of the United States to draft rules that would further reduce tailpipe emissions by increasing the fuel efficiency of new [~~automobiles~~] [vehicles].

“3. Petition the major manufacturers of vehicles to accelerate the use of existing technologies that would increase fuel efficiency and to develop new technologies that would achieve further gains].

“~~3.~~ 4. Request the Stated Clerk to communicate this action to the president of the United States and the administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency and the appropriate members of Congress. The communication should include the impact that smoke stack and tailpipe emissions is having on the health of our most vulnerable population[s] and on our environment due to acid rain[, smog, increased ozone levels, and emissions of mercury and heavy metals].”

III. Commissioners’ Resolution

Item 11-06. On Reaffirming Ethical Values of Fetal Tissue and Stem Cell Research.

That the recommendation is approved.

Item 11-07. (Removed from Plenary Consent Agenda). 2002 Referral: Item 13-08. Overture 02-52. On Pastoral Resources for Women Who Have Experienced Abortion—from the Presbytery of Donegal. (Minutes, 2002, Part 1, pp. 70, 654)

That the response is approved with comment.

Comment: Committee approval only recognizes that the materials that have been prepared are in accordance with the directives of the original overture. The committee takes no action regarding the content of the brochure.

IV. Abortion

Item 11-01. On Calling for the End of Abortion, and Inserting a Statement in the Book of Order Regarding Abortion—From the Presbytery of Upper Ohio Valley. *ACC +ACSWP

That the recommendation is disapproved with comment.

Comment: In addition, we urge the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP), in their mandated monitoring report to the 217th General Assembly (2006) on the implementation of the assemblies’ policy on problem pregnancies, to include a survey of the ministries and educational resources seeking to implement the policies and to provide further encouragement and recommendations for additional ministries and resources as needed.

V. Other

Item 11-04. On Urging the FDA to Make Emergency Contraception Available Over the Counter—From the Presbytery of Baltimore. +ACWC

That the recommendation is disapproved.

Dissents

The following commissioner filed a dissent from the action taken on Item 11-02 of the Assembly Committee on Health Issues: Joseph Phipps, Presbytery of Lake Michigan.

The following commissioner filed a dissent from the action taken on Item 11-03 of the Assembly Committee on Health Issues: Joseph Phipps, Presbytery of Lake Michigan.

ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON BILLS AND OVERTURES

Moderator Ufford-Chase recognized Nancy Thornton McKenzie, moderator of the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures. Upon McKenzie's recommendation, the assembly approved changing the docket to move the report of the Evangelism and Higher Education up on the docket.

ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON EVANGELISM AND HIGHER EDUCATION

The Moderator recognized Jeanne McIver, moderator of the Assembly Committee on Evangelism and Higher Education, to present the report of the committee. The assembly approved the consent agenda: Items 09-03 (approved), 09-04 (approved), 09-05 (approved), 09-06 (approved), 09-07 (approved), 09-10 (approved), and 09-11 (approved). The Moderator recognized William Teng, vice-moderator of the committee, to present the next items of the report. The assembly approved Item 09-01 with amendment. The assembly approved Item 09-02 with amendment. The report of the committee was arrested.

Closing Prayer

Following prayer led by Lisa Valenti-Hein, youth advisory delegate from the Presbytery of Winnebago, the assembly recessed at 12:30 p.m. to reconvene at 2:00 p.m.

Thursday, July 1, 2004, 2:00 P.M.

The 216th General Assembly reconvened at 2:00 p.m. with Vice-Moderator Jeanne Marie Peacock presiding. Lisa Larges, led the assembly in prayer.

Speak-Out

Commissioners, advisory delegates, and corresponding members were given an opportunity to speak out on issues of importance to them that were not related to business before the assembly. The speak-out was scheduled to run fifteen minutes, with one-minute limits on individual speeches.

ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON BILLS AND OVERTURES

Vice-Moderator Peacock recognized Nancy Thornton McKenzie, moderator of the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures, who presented the committee's report orally. McKenzie informed the assembly that the report of the Assembly Committee on Evangelism and Higher Education that was arrested before lunch would resume.

Ecumenical Greeting

Vice-Moderator Peacock recognized the Reverend Alejandro Figueroa, ecumenical representative, who brought greetings to the assembly from the Dominican Evangelical Church.

REPORT OF THE ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON EVANGELISM AND HIGHER EDUCATION

Vice-Moderator Peacock recognized the vice-moderator of the Assembly Committee on Evangelism and Higher Education, William Teng, who introduced Curtis Kearns, director of the National Ministries Division. Kearns briefly addressed the assembly and presented a video showing ads for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). These television ads are showing in Richmond this week. Kearns also announced that there were printed ads as well and encouraged Presbyterians everywhere to use these resources.

Teng continued the presentation of the report of the Assembly Committee on Evangelism and Higher Education. Item 09-08 was referred to the General Assembly Council with comment. Item 09-09 was approved as amended by the assembly committee with Recommendation 2. being amended from the floor as follows: “beginning with the word growth, strike that word and the entire rest of the sentence and replace with the words ‘making disciples for the ministry and mission of Christ’s church.’” The moderator of the Assembly Committee on Evangelism and Higher Education, Jeanne McIver, resumed presentation of the report of the committee. Item 09-15 was approved with amendment and comment. Item 09-12 was referred to the General Assembly Council with comment. Item 09-13, Recommendation 1., was approved with comment and with editorial correction. Item 09-13, Recommendations 2 through 10, were referred as amended from the floor by adding two paragraphs as follows: “11. That Presbyterians be called upon to confront the stubborn continuance of racial prejudice, particularly the persistence of societal attitudes that discourage academic achievement among economically disadvantaged and children of color students and others at risk.” And “12. That because of the present educational difficulties that face many economically disadvantaged children of color and youth, the General Assembly Council, National Ministries Division, is charged with considering the advisability and feasibility of founding new primary and secondary schools open to all students that addresses the urgent educational needs of economically disadvantaged children of color and other students placed at risk due to the continuing effects of racial prejudice.” Item 09-14 was disapproved with comment.

This concluded the report of the Assembly Committee on Evangelism and Higher Education, and is as follows:

The 216th General Assembly (2004) approved the following recommendations: [Consent agenda items are indicated by an asterisk (*). Items with financial implications are indicated with a dollar sign ($).]

I. Immigrant Fellowships

Item 09-01. On Amending G-9.0503 Regarding Voice and Vote for Immigrant Fellowships—From the Presbytery of Des Moines. *ACC +OGA +ACREC

That the recommendation is approved with amendment: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through with brackets; text to be added or inserted in shown with an underline and with brackets.]

“(a) For immigrant fellowships the presbytery may, if it determines that its strategy for mission with that constituency requires it, grant designated leader(s) of a fellowship voice and vote in the meetings of presbytery on an annual basis.”

Item 09-02. On Amending G-9.0503 Regarding Recognizing Leaders of Immigrant Fellowships as Elders—From the Presbytery of Des Moines. *ACC +OGA +ACREC

“(b) For immigrant fellowships with roots in the Reformed tradition, if the presbytery determines (1) that its strategy for mission with that constituency requires it and (2) that the chosen lay leadership of the immigrant fellowship is equivalent to elders and session, then the presbytery or its administrative commission may recognize that status as equivalent and proceed to ~~ordain~~ recognize those leaders as elders. In making this determination the presbytery shall be guided by written criteria developed by the presbytery. These criteria shall be based upon the description of the nature of ordained office found in G-6.0100 and G-6.0300.”

[Note: The amendments in Items 09-01 and 09-02 were approved by the assembly with the alphanumeric designations of “(a)” and “(b)” respectively. For purposes of continuity, these designations were switched when the amendments were sent to the presbyteries for their vote. Thus, Item 09-01 became “(b)” and Item 09-02 became “(a)”.

II. Transfers/Unions

*Item 09-03. On Uniting Churches in Philip, South Dakota to Form a Union Church, the United Church of Philip—From the Presbytery of South Dakota.

Item 09-08. On Undertaking the Publication of a Mission Magazine that Would Use the Powerful Voice of American Youth—From the Presbytery of Huntingdon. +GAC

That the recommendation is referred to the General Assembly Council with comment:

Comment: We ask that the General Assembly Council seriously address the need for a youth-oriented publication that is both copy and Web-based form containing the elements found in Item 09-08 and seek funding for such a venture.

We ask that the General Assembly Council report on this matter to the 217th General Assembly (2006).

We thank the Presbytery of Huntingdon for bringing this matter to our attention and commend the youth of our denomination for seeking this publication.

Item 09-09. On Taking Decisive Action to Recover from the Decline in Membership and Development of Ministry and Mission—From the Presbytery of Mackinac.

That the recommendation is approved with amendments: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through and with brackets; text to be added or inserted in shown with an underline and with brackets.]

“1. That the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) take decisive action to initiate decisions that will lead to ~~[the PC(USA)’s recovery from its decline in membership]~~ [growth] and development of ministry and mission.

“2. That the General Assembly, synods, presbyteries, and congregations reaffirm ~~[as its first priority, the fulfillment of]~~ the goal of ~~[recovery of membership and development of ministry and mission of this church]~~ [making disciples for the ministry and mission of Christ’s church].

“3. That the whole church embrace, fund, and implement the goals of the mission initiative JOINING HEARTS AND HANDS—A Campaign to Renew the Church for Mission as the initial initiative to ~~[recover]~~ [growth in] membership and develop ministry and mission of this church.

“4. That the PC (USA) mobilize itself with continued and fervent prayer for the Holy Spirit to be poured out on our church for increase.”

Item 09-15. On Directing NMD to Develop a Plan for Resourcing and Funding Evangelism with Racial Ethnic Persons and Persons of Limited Economic Resources—From the Presbytery of Miami. +ACREC

That the recommendation is approved with amendment and with comment:

Amendment: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through with brackets; text to be added or inserted in shown with an underline and with brackets.]

“The Presbytery of Miami (Synod of the Covenant) overtures the 216th General Assembly (2004) to direct the National Ministries Division to develop a comprehensive plan for ~~[resourcing]~~ [accessing resources] and ~~[for]~~ funding evangelism with racial ethnic persons and persons of limited economic resources, including but not limited to coordination between Racial Ethnic Ministries and Evangelism and Church Development for funding and resources.”

Comment: The challenge of the implementation of the racial/immigrant church growth strategy must never be considered as a program of racial ministries program area, or as coming from the racial ethnic church, rather from the whole church that sees itself under a mandate to be an inclusive church.

IV. Education

* Item 09-10. List of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

That the recommendation is approved.

*Item 09-11. On Supporting the Association of Presbyterian Schools (APS)—From the Presbytery of Mississippi. +ACSWP

That the recommendation is approved.

Item 09-12. On Recognizing Bloomfield College as a Racial Ethnic College Related to the PC(USA)—From the Presbytery of Newark. Concurrence: Presbytery of New Brunswick. +GAC

That the recommendation is referred to the General Assembly Council, National Ministries Division (NMD), with comment:

Comment: That the NMD (1) consider the special circumstances of Bloomfield College as a historic institution in the Synod of the Northeast; and (2) consider ways in which Bloomfield College might be admitted to a list of racial ethnic colleges in a way that would not diminish the funding to other institutions.

Item 09-13. On Improved Education for African American and Other Students Placed At-Risk for an Excellent Education—From the Presbytery of National Capital. +GAC +ACREC

1. That Recommendation 1. is approved with comment.

Comment: That the National Ministries Division consider using the Pentecost Offering for some funding for youth and young adults at risk.

2. That Recommendations 2. through 10. are referred to the General Assembly Council, National Ministries Division, so that a feasible plan can be developed to address the central concerns of this overture; with a report being made to the 217th General Assembly (2006). And to add two additional recommendations, as follows:

“[11. That Presbyterians be called upon to confront the stubborn continuance of racial prejudice, particularly the persistence of societal attitudes that discourage academic achievement among economically disadvantaged and children of color students and others at risk.]”

“[12. That because of the present educational difficulties that face many economically disadvantaged children of color and youth, the General Assembly Council, National Ministries Division, is charged with considering the advisability and feasibility of founding new primary and secondary schools open to all students that addresses the urgent educational needs of economically disadvantaged children of color and other students placed at risk due to the continuing effects of racial prejudice.]”

V. Other

Item 09-14. On Recognizing Ms. Dianne Davis and Constructores Para Cristo for Their Christian Ministry in Mexico—From the Presbytery of New Harmony. +GAC

That the recommendation is disapproved with comment:

Comment: The General Assembly recognizes the legitimacy of the needs being addressed and encourages the discipleship and witness of Presbyterians in ministering to that need. Thousands of Presbyterians are following the leadership of the Lord in mission and their efforts are bearing great fruit. It is commendable that presbyteries are celebrating this fact.

Presbyterian Hunger Program

The Vice-Moderator recognized Gary Cook, associate director for Global Service and Witness, Worldwide Ministries Division, General Assembly Council, who, with Lionel Derenoncourt, associate for International Hunger Concerns, presented a report concerning the Presbyterian Hunger Program.

ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON NATIONAL ISSUES

The report of the Assembly Committee on National Issues was presented by its moderator, James H.Y. Kim. The assembly approved Items 10-01 and 10-02. The committee moved the approval of Item 10-03 with amendment. The assembly voted to amend this item by inserting "as a resource" after the words "to the church" in Recommendation 4.a., and by inserting "bearing in mind that the Belhar Confession emerged from the context of racism in South Africa" at the end of existing text in Recommendation 4.a. The assembly approved Item 10-03 as amended. The assembly approved Items 10-04 and 10-05. The committee moved the approval of Item 10-06 with amendments. The assembly voted to amend this item by striking the word "natural" and inserting the word "biological" in the second paragraph of "II. Theological Context," "A. Loyalty to God," "1. Sovereignty and Idolatry." The assembly approved Item 10-06 as amended. The committee moved the approval of a response to Item 10-11. Donald Wade, commissioner from the Presbytery of Greater Atlanta, presented a minority report on Item 10-11. Margo Tomlinson, vice-moderator of the committee, spoke briefly to the main motion. Moderator Ufford-Chase recognized Wade, who spoke briefly to the minority report. The main motion was declared perfected. The minority report was declared perfected. The merits of the main motion and the minority report were debated. Moderator Ufford-Chase placed before the assembly the question, "Shall the minority report be substituted for the main motion?" The minority report was defeated. The assembly voted to approve Item 10-11 with an alternate resolution.

The assembly voted to limit debate to 1½ minutes for the remainder of the meeting. The assembly voted to approve Item 10-15. The assembly moved the response to Item 10-17. The assembly voted to amend the statement in the response by inserting a new second bullet to read: "• Affirms the Presbyterian church's historic definition of the meaning of marriage as 'a civil contract between a woman and a man' (W-4.9001, as quoted in a resolution of the 208th General Assembly (1996), Minutes, 1996, Part I, p. 122)." After prayer, the assembly voted to approve the alternate response to Item 10-17 as amended. The assembly voted to approve the alternate statement to Item 10-16. The assembly approved Item 10-12 with amendment. The assembly approved the alternate response to Item 10-07. The assembly approved Item 10-09 with amendment. The assembly approved Item 10-10. The assembly disapproved Item 10-14 with comment. The assembly disapproved Item 10-08. The assembly approved Item 10-13. This concluded the report of the committee and is as follows:

The 216th General Assembly (2004) approved the following recommendations: [There are no items for the consent agenda.]

Item 10-01. Analysis of Church's Effort to Combat Racism.

That the recommendations are approved.

Item 10-02. Task Force on Election Report.

That the recommendations are approved.

[Note: The Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures points out that this item comes from the General Assembly Council and could be funded within its budget.]

Item 10-03. Task Force to Study Reparations Report. +OGA

That the recommendations are approved with amendment.

Amend Recommendation 4. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through and with brackets; text to be added or inserted is shown with an underline and with brackets.]

~~“4. Direct the Stated Clerk to initiate the process described in C-18.0201b by appointing a committee to consider designing a confessional statement repenting of the sin of racism and its various expressions, including slavery and genocide for inclusion in The Book of Confessions and to report to the 217th General Assembly (2006).”~~

“4. a. Commends the Belhar Confession to the church as a resource for reflection, study, and response, as a means of deepening the commitment of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to dealing with racism and a means of strengthening its unity; bearing in mind that the Belhar Confession emerged from the context of racism in South Africa;

“[b. Requests the General Assembly Council, Office of Theology and Worship, to prepare materials to facilitate churchwide reflection and study;

“[c. Urges each presbytery and all congregations to undertake a study of the Belhar Confession before the 218th General Assembly (2008);

“[d. Directs the Office of the General Assembly and the General Assembly Council, Office of Theology and Worship, to receive responses, prepare a summary, and report results to the 218th General Assembly (2008), together with possible recommendations for further engagement with the Belhar Confession.]”

Item 10-05. Resolution Calling for a Comprehensive Legalization Program for Immigrants Living and Working in the U.S. +COGA

That the recommendations are approved.

Item 10-04. Report on Limited Water Resources and Takings.

That the recommendations are approved.

Item 10-06. Transforming Families.

That the recommendations are approved with amendment:

1. Amend the second paragraph of “II. Theological Context,” “A. Loyalty to God,” “1. Sovereignty and Idolatry” as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through and with brackets; text to be added or inserted is shown with an underline and with brackets.]

“Jesus honored his family, but he also challenged deference to family authority with the shocking words: ‘Whoever comes to me and does not hate father and mother, wife and children, brothers and sisters, yes, and even life itself, cannot be my disciple’ (Luke 14:26). Furthermore, he called people to new family ties that went beyond ~~[natural]~~ [biological] ones. When he was told that his mother and brothers were outside and wished to speak to him, Jesus replied, pointing to his disciples: ‘Here are my mother and my brothers! For whoever does the will of my Father in heaven is my brother and sister and mother’” (Matt. 12: 49–50).

2. In “II. Theological Context,” “C. Marriage and Family,” “2. Marriage as Basic to Human Relationships,” amend the first paragraph as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through and with brackets; text to be added or inserted is shown with an underline and with brackets.]

“2. Marriage as Basic to Human Relationships

“Affirmation of marriage’s significance in the Christian tradition is by no means a claim that marriage exhausts what the church means by family. The church upholds the meaning and significance of marriage between a man and a woman, but it does not denigrate other forms of family life [that demonstrate and nurture godly character]. The language of the Confession of 1967 is instructive. The marital-biological family that is basic to human relationships is just that: basic. The marital-biological family is neither exhaustive nor exclusive as a family form. Rather, as the Confession of 1967 affirms, the marital-biological family ‘exemplifies in a basic way God’s ordering of the interpersonal life for which [God] created humankind,’ but it is not the only form of interpersonal life; and it does not fully exemplify God’s ordering of interpersonal life.”

3. In “II. Theological Context,” “E. The Nurture of Children,” “1. The Importance of the Nurture of Children, amend the fourth (last) paragraph as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through and with brackets; text to be added or inserted is shown with an underline and with brackets.]

“[Parents and guardians have the primary responsibility to care for their children, while [C]hurches are called to be communities that support and complete the nurture of children. Teaching children who they are in Christ is an honorable and important duty for the entire community. We should strive to provide for them, to keep them safe, to ensure that they will not be hungry or homeless, to prepare them for life, and to encourage their participation in the mission of the Triune God. In this way, families, individuals, and the entire church learn to live lives of service and love for the whole world.”

4. Under “2. Approve ‘A Vision of Transforming Families,’” amend the fifth paragraph as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through and with brackets; text to be added or inserted is shown with an underline and with brackets.]

“We envision a society in which the well-being of every child is nurtured and supported. In light of sociological data indicating that a loving, lasting marriage of the mother and father is the most successful (90 percent) context for children’s flourishing and that children who experience divorce flourish in a smaller, though significant, majority of cases (75–80 percent), the church urges both parents or guardians to be active in the nurture of children and recognizes the important assistance that congregations and other family support systems can offer. <sup>1</sup> The church commits itself to give special attention to those families ~~[, both single-parent and two-parent,]~~ where the well-being of children is most at risk. With support from church and other institutions, ~~[stepfamilies, adoptive families, and single-parent]~~ [even at-risk] families can successfully move through difficult times and their children can grow into healthy adulthood.”

5. Under “3. Approve the following recommendations,” insert a new item, “q.” to read as follows:

“[q. That the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) report back to the 217th General Assembly (2006) on the progress it has made implementing these recommendations.]”

Item 10-11. On Endorsing “A Christian Declaration of Marriage—From the Presbytery of Santa Barbara. +GAC +ACSWP +ACWC

In response to this recommendation, the 216th General Assembly (2004) approved the following:

That the 216th General Assembly (2004) ask all church members to join in a year of prayer for marriage renewal and reconciliation, and urge synods, presbyteries, and local congregations to seek ways of working with other Christian bodies in their areas toward these same purposes.

Item 10-15. Denial of Civil Rights in Virginia.

That the recommendation is approved.

Item 10-17. Recognize Civil Marriage for Same-Gender Couples.

In response to this recommendation, the 216th General Assembly (2004) approved the following resolution:

Recognize Civil Rights for Same-Gender Couples

That the 216th General Assembly (2004) affirm the following statement and request the Office of the General Assembly to communicate this action to all middle and lower governing bodies of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), as well as to the president of the United States of America and to all members of the Congress of the United States of America.

Statement

The 216th General Assembly (2004) does the following:

- Offers prayerful thanks for the Scriptures informing us that all persons are created in the image of God (Gen. 1:27).
- Affirms the Presbyterian church's historic definition of the meaning of marriage as a "civil contract between a woman and a man" (W-4.9001, as quoted in a resolution of 208th General Assembly (1996), Minutes, 1996, Part I, p. 122).
- Declares that all persons are entitled to equal treatment under the law (Constitution of the United States of America); therefore
- Urges state legislations to change state laws to include the right of same-gender persons to civil union and, thereby, to extend to them all the benefits, privileges, and responsibilities of civil union, and urges all persons to support such changes in state laws.
- Urges the Congress of the United States of America to recognize those state laws that allow same-gender union and to change federal laws to recognize all civil unions licensed and solemnized under state law to apply in all federal laws that provide benefits, privileges, and/or responsibilities to married persons.

Item 10-16. On Supporting the Federal Marriage Amendment.

In response to this recommendation, the 216th General Assembly (2004) approved the following statement:

Nothing the 216th General Assembly (2004) has said or acted upon is to be construed to state or imply a position for or against the Federal Marriage Amendment. General Assembly entities shall not advocate for or against the Federal Marriage Amendment.

Item 10-12. Resolution on Allegations of Child Abuse Against Educators.

That the recommendations are approved with amendment:

1. Amend Recommendation “2.a.” as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through and with brackets; text to be added or inserted is shown with an underline and with brackets.]

“a. adequate policies on child abuse that set forth the responsibilities and rights of both students [when they are abused] and educators [when they are falsely accused];”

2. Strike Recommendation 7. and re-number the following recommendation.

~~“[7.Direct the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) to conduct a study of the future of contemporary public education in the context of the long history of Presbyterian support for public education. The study of the systemic issues confronting public education should focus on the individual’s role in supporting public education, and the appropriate citizenship for a multicultural and interfaith society and report to the 218th General Assembly (2008).]”~~

Item 10-07. On Setting Compensation Standards—From the Presbytery of New Hope. +ACSWP

In response to this recommendation, the 216th General Assembly (2004) approved the following:

The 216th General Assembly (2004) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) commends the Committee on Mission Responsibility Through Investment (MRTI) for raising the issue of corporate compensation standards through proxy voting recommendations, and instructs MRTI to develop a comprehensive plan for increased advocacy on compensation standards, including dialogues with corporations, filing of shareholder resolutions, and public education. The MRTI should proceed to increase advocacy as it can within its mandate, and report its actions, and any recommendations, to the 217th General Assembly (2006).

Item 10-09. On Preparing a Policy Statement on Usury in the United States—From the Presbytery of Utah. +ACSWP, ACREC, ACWC

That the recommendations are approved with amendment:

1. Amend the first paragraph as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through and with brackets; text to be added or inserted is shown with an underline and with brackets.]

“The Presbytery of Utah overtures the 216th General Assembly (2004) to direct the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy to investigate the question of usury in the United States and to prepare a [~~policy statement~~] [resolution] for the 217th General Assembly (2006) that would do the following:”

2. Add a Recommendation 4. to read as follows:

“[4.Develop ethical criteria consistent with the Reformed Tradition for evaluating usury laws and other legislation to address various forms of lending, such as payday loans, sub-prime loans, predatory lending, and cash-back tax preparation arrangements.]”

Item 10-10. On Reaffirming the Importance of our Nation’s Social Insurance System (Social Security and Medicare)—From the Presbytery of Hudson River. +ACSWP, ACREC

That the recommendations are approved.

Item 10-14. On Appointing an Action Committee That Will Identify Media and Advertising That Has Excessive Sex, Violence, and Other Immoral Content for the Purpose of Influencing Producers and Sponsors.

That the recommendation is disapproved with comment:

Comment: Entities within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) sufficiently address the concern of Item 10-14:

- Mission Responsibility Through Investment (MRTI) partners with Interfaith Centers on Corporate Responsibility to advocate for change in business entities that create and market violent video games;
- The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) includes on its Web page a link to “the Electronic Great Awakening” with the purpose of making Presbyterians more aware of the immoral content in much of the media that we consume, including music, movies, and television;
- The Child Advocacy Office, with its focus on The Decade of the Child, disseminates information concerning the detrimental effects of violent video games on children and youth;
- The Presbyterian Peacemaking Office emphasizes the World Council of Churches’ Decade to Overcome Violence.

Item 10-08. On Expressing the Desire That the Patriot Act Be Repealed—From the Presbytery of Northern New York. +ACSWP, ACREC

That the recommendation is disapproved.

Item 10-13. On Seeking a Thorough, Calm, and Reasoned Review of the U.S.A. Patriot Act.

That the recommendations are approved.

Committee Final Action and Report to Plenary

[The items listed below were acted upon and approved by the assembly committee. No further action is needed, and is here for information only.]

Item 12-10 was disapproved.

This concluded the report of the Assembly Committee on Peacemaking and is as follows:

The 216th General Assembly (2004) approved the following recommendations: [Consent agenda items are indicated by an asterisk (*). Items that have financial implications are indicated by a dollar sign ($).]

Overtures

Item 12-01. On Supporting the Geneva Accord, Urging Israel and Palestine to Implement the Accord—From the Presbytery of St. Augustine. +ACSWP, ACREC

In response to Item 12-01, the 216th General Assembly (2004) approved the following:

At the time the Presbytery of St. Augustine approved Item 12-01, support for the “Geneva Accord” urging Israel and the Palestinians to implement the Accord seemed a practicable way forward in light of the derailed “road map,” especially in light of action taken by the 215th General Assembly (2003) strongly urging Israeli and Palestinian leaders “to be serious, active, and diligent about seeking peace for their peoples; or, if they are unwilling or unable, to step down and make room for other leaders who will and can” (Resolution on Israel and Palestine: End the Occupation Now, Recommendation D, Minutes, 2003, Part I, p. 636.)

At this time, however, several months since the approval of the proposed item by said presbytery, the situation and the prospects for a negotiated just peace have so deteriorated that people in the region generally, and particularly the Palestinians, have been driven to the edge of despair and hopelessness. Therefore, the 216th General Assembly (2004) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) does the following:

1. Confesses the sovereignty of God over all nations, states, governments, and peoples, acknowledging God’s supreme act of love for the whole world manifest in Jesus Christ so that by faith the world might not perish but be saved. In Christ, God has called us to show love, seek peace, and to pursue justice, so that the world might be transformed into a foretaste of God’s peaceable kingdom.

2. Continues to be inspired by the tenacity of hope of our Palestinian Christian partners in the face of ominous, cumulative gloom and foreboding; it affirms that God has not given us a spirit of timidity, nor have we been called to surrender hope to an attitude of despair.

3. Commends the Presbytery of St. Augustine on its concern for a just resolution of the conflict between Israel and the Palestinians, and for moving the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to persist in voicing this concern. The assembly, therefore, welcomes the possibilities for peace contained in the “Geneva Accord,” as a useful and practical approach. It would also be encouraged by other inspired initiatives that could advance the prospects of peace in the Middle East.

4. Reiterates and reaffirms the call of last year’s General Assembly on the Israeli government to “end the occupation now,” asserting that:

a. The occupation must end; it has proven to be at the root of evil acts committed against innocent people on both sides of the conflict.

b. The security of Israel and the Israeli people is inexorably dependent on making peace with their Palestinian neighbors, by negotiating and reaching a just and equitable solution to the conflict that respects international law, human rights, the sanctity of life, and dignity of persons, land, property, safety of home, freedom of movement, the rights of refugees to return to their homeland, the right of a people to determine their political future, and to live in peace and prosperity.

c. Horrific acts of violence and deadly attacks on innocent people, whether carried out by Palestinian “suicide bombers” or by the Israeli military, are abhorrent and inexcusable by all measures, and are a dead-end alternative to a negotiated settlement of the conflict.

d. The United States needs, now more than ever, to become an honest, even-handed broker for peace, and should review its approach to the problem, allowing more room for the more meaningful participation of other members of the U.N.-designated “Quartet” (the United States, Russia, Germany, and France) and others.

e. The international community has an obligation to provide physical protection for those isolated by fear and/or by physical and psychological barriers, thus making space for the restoration of security and creating a climate for the resumption of negotiations between the Israelis and Palestinians. We support the Palestinians’ persistent request to the United Nations to send a peacekeeping force.

5. Vigorously urges the U.S. government, the government of Israel, and the Palestinian leadership to move swiftly, and with resolve, to recognize that the only way out of this chronic and vicious impasse is to abandon all approaches that exacerbate further strife, lay aside arrogant political posturing, and get on with forging negotiated compromises that open a path to peace.

6. Endorses the letter sent on April 19, 2004, by the Stated Clerk, reiterating concerns of our denomination for Christian partners and their institutions that serve as agents of reconciliation and hope, as well as for their Palestinian and Israeli neighbors, in the Holy Land, in the framework of previous statements of the General Assembly.

7. Refers to Mission Responsibility Through Investment Committee (MRTI) with instructions to initiate a process of phased selective divestment in multinational corporations operating in Israel, in accordance to General Assembly policy on social investing, and to make appropriate recommendations to the General Assembly Council for action.

Item 12-02. On Calling for an End to the Construction of a Wall by the State of Israel—From the Presbytery of Chicago. +GAC +ACSWP, ACREC

That the recommendation is approved with amendment and with comment: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through and with brackets; text to be added or inserted is shown with an underline and with brackets.]

“[The Presbytery of Chicago respectfully overtures] [Recognizing that God’s love as evidenced in Jesus Christ is for all God’s children, and recognizing the human rights of all people to God’s resources including land and water and livelihood,] the 216th General Assembly (2004) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) [to] request[s] [that] the Stated Clerk make known to the president of the United States, the members of Congress of the United States, [and] the State of Israel[, and the Palestinian National Authority,] its opposition to the construction of a wall and other barriers by the State of Israel and further to make known the desire of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) that the United States of America make no monetary contribution to the 1.3 billion dollar cost of the construction of this wall, construction of which has already begun and will continue for several years.”

Comment: The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has approved numerous resolutions on Israel and Palestine, repeatedly affirming, clearly and unequivocally, Israel’s right to exist within permanent, recognized, and “secure” borders (for example: 1969, 1974, 1977, 1983, 1989, etc.). It has deplored the cycle of escalating violence—carried out by both Palestinians and Israelis—which is rooted in Israel’s continued occupation of Palestinian territories (cf. statements of successive assemblies since 1967). Presbyterians have continued to be concerned about the loss of so many innocent lives of Israelis and Palestinians (see “Resolution on the Middle East,” approved in 1997, and “Resolution on Israel and Palestine: End the Occupation Now,” approved in 2003).

Because of its deep concern for peace in the area, and how the “Separation Barrier,” generally referred to as the “Security Wall,” is impacting the lives of people on both sides, the GAC expresses grave alarm at the construction of this barrier. Further, given the long-standing, deeply rooted spiritual and programmatic bonds existing between the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and its partner churches in the Holy Land, it is particularly concerned that the life and ministry of the dwindling remnant of the Christian community will be severely impeded. As it voices these concerns within the framework of many General Assembly statements over more than thirty-five years, the GAC wants to help Presbyterians to understand some of the aspects of the wall’s impact. These may be summarized as follows:

- The “Separation Barrier,” currently under construction, consists of a twenty-five-foot high concrete wall meandering through mostly Palestinian lands, plus stretches of electrified barbed-wire fence extensions of the wall.
- Israel claims it is building the wall between Israel and the West Bank, but only 10 percent will be on the Green Line (i.e., Israel’s 1967 border).
- Ninety percent of the rest stretches into the West Bank, isolates significant amounts of land, and affects the lives of many thousands of Palestinians. This year approximately 210,000 people will be economically and socially cut off from their neighborhoods, their families, their farmlands, their employment, their educational and health-care facilities, and their places of worship.

- A wall built along the Green Line would be half the length of the current wall and much easier to patrol.

Many believe that the route of the wall has been determined not by security, but by the political goals of maintaining the settlements and impacting future peace talks. Palestinian church partners have expressed the view that they might not object to the construction of a wall if it were built on Israeli land. The current wall ghettoizes the Palestinians and forces them onto what can only be called reservations.

The General Assembly Council is engaged in various ministries that support the Christian churches and ecumenical bodies in their own work of evangelism, outreach and church growth, health ministries, education, economic and social development, peacemaking, interfaith dialogue, reconciliation, and cooperation.

Especially following a recent visit by an official PC(USA) delegation to Israel and Palestine (in February 2004), the GAC believes that the best hope for security for both Israelis and Palestinians may be found in laying down all forms of aggression on both sides, ending the Israeli occupation, and finding ways to build bridges of peace rather than walls of separation. Good neighborly relations, rather than mutual isolation and suspicion, are urgently needed between Israel and its neighbors in Palestine and the Middle East.

That the recommendations are approved with amendment and with comment.

Amend Item 12-03 as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through and with brackets; text to be added or inserted is shown with an underline and with brackets.]

“The Presbytery of Chicago respectfully overtures the 216th General Assembly (2004) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to actively oppose Christian Zionism and to develop a plan to communicate the theological and political ramifications it engenders within our denomination, in the mass media, and among U. S. government officials. Specifically, we call upon the General Assembly to do the following:

“1. [Call upon the Stated Clerk to] [I][i]ssue to all churches in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) a pastoral letter on Christian Zionism and the ongoing conflict in Israel and Palestine by making this letter available on the PC(USA) Web site. [The assembly requests the following offices to assist the Stated Clerk in the preparation of this letter: the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy, Corporate Witness, Interfaith Relations, Middle East, and the Office of Theology and Worship.]

“2. [Direct the Stated Clerk to] [I][i]nform current government officials [~~of the Christian alternatives to Christian Zionism~~] [that Christian Zionism does not represent the majority of American Christians and the faith of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)].

“3. Direct the General Assembly Council to continue to commend and promote the PC(USA) list of resources found in the September/October 2003 issue of Church & Society, entitled “Israel and Palestine: The Quest for Peace,” so that Presbyterians can and will become knowledgeable of the present day Middle East situation and have a better understanding of its history and people.

“4. [Direct the Office of the General Assembly and the General Assembly Council to] [E][e]ducate Presbyterians about the Reformed principles for interpreting Scripture [~~in light of the gospel and the rule of love of God and neighbor,~~] as affirmed by previous General Assemblies. [Specifically, interpreting Scripture as follows:

“[a. In light of the entire witness of Scripture: ‘Thus the New Testament’s emphasis on the gospel is not to be understood apart from the Old Testament’s emphasis on the grace of the law; and the Old Testament’s emphasis on the law is not to be understood apart from the New Testament's emphasis on the grace of the gospel,' Presbyterian Understanding and Use of Holy Scripture (Minutes, PCUS, 1983, Part I, p. 615).

“[b. And the rule of love of God and neighbor: ‘The fundamental expression of God’s will is the two-fold commandment to love God and neighbor, and all interpretations are to be judged by the question whether they offer and support the love given and commanded by God,’ Presbyterian Understanding and Use of Holy Scripture (Minutes, PCUS, 1983, Part I, p. 615).]

“[5. Direct the General Assembly Council (GAC), through its offices on the Middle East, Interfaith Relations, Theology and Worship, and the Presbyterian Peacemaking Program, to develop a brief resource and study guide to assist Presbyterians in understanding how biblical faith and Reformed theology guide our understanding of present realities and possibilities in the Middle East. This resource/study guide is to be mailed to all churches and posted on the PC(USA) Web site.]

“[5.] [6.] Continue to cooperate with other denominations]’ church bodies and] like-minded groups to promote [an understanding of] peace in the Holy Land.

“[6.] [7.] Urge our Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)-related colleges and seminaries to address this issue.

“[8. Commend to the church the following works to better understand dispensationalism and Christian Zionism:

“[a. Our own resources from the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.):

Comment: Item 12-03 calls on the General Assembly to oppose Christian Zionism and to develop a plan to communicate the theological and political ramifications it engenders to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), in the mass media, and among U.S. government officials.

Item 12-03 rightly calls on the General Assembly to look closely at the role that Christian theology has in relation to current struggles in Middle-East politics and to work for peace in that troubled region.

Presbyterians have a strong history of careful theological and social analysis, and the question of Christian Zionism and its relation to U.S. policies toward the Middle East deserves that type of consideration.

1. What Is Christian Zionism?

Christian Zionism “weds religion with politics and interprets biblical faithfulness in terms of fidelity to Israel’s future” [<http://www.hcef.org/hcef/index.cfm/ID/159>]. It is a particular political philosophy and strategy. Christian Zionist leaders share 5 core beliefs:

(1) The Covenant. God’s covenant with Israel is eternal and unconditional; the promises of land given to Abraham will never be overturned. The church has not replaced Israel; therefore, Israel’s privileges have never been revoked.

(2) The Church. God’s plan has always been for the redemption of Israel. When Israel failed to follow Jesus, the church was born as an afterthought or “parenthesis.” At the rapture the church will be removed and Israel will once again become God’s primary agent in the world. We now live in “the times of the Gentiles” that will conclude soon. There are two covenants now at work, that given through Moses and the covenant of Christ. The new covenant in no way makes the older covenant obsolete.

(3) Blessing Modern Israel. Genesis 12:3 is applied literally and applied to modern Israel: “I will bless those who bless you and curse those who curse you.” Christians have a spiritual obligation to bless Israel and “pray for the peace of Jerusalem.” While many Christians throughout history have also believed it important to observe the injunction of Genesis 12:3 in regard to the Jews, Christian Zionism links this specifically to support of the modern state of Israel. To fail to support Israel’s political survival today will incur divine judgment.

(4) Prophecy. The prophetic books of the Bible specifically refer to events today, though some may also refer to events in biblical times. Therefore when we look at, say, Daniel 7, if we possess the right interpretative skills, we can see current events foreshadowed in it. This quest for prophecy has spawned countless books of end-time speculation involving the state of Israel based on Biblical prophecy.

(5) Modern Israel and Eschatology. The modern state of Israel is a catalyst for the prophetic end-time countdown. If these are the last days, then we should expect an unraveling of civilization, the rise of evil, the loss of international peace and equilibrium, a coming antichrist, and tests of faithfulness to Israel. Above all, political alignments today will determine our position on the fateful day of Armageddon. Since the crisis of September 11, the wars in Afghanistan and Iraq, it has been easy to persuade the public that history is unraveling precisely as Dispensationalism predicted. [<http://www.hcef.org/hcef/index.cfm/ID/159>]

2. What Is Dispensationalism?

Historic Premillennialism holds that Christ will return to the earth prior to the Last Day in order to exercise rule over the nations for a thousand years in the last stage of human history. It is pessimistic concerning the role and prospects of the Church in human history; therefore it posits another age, the millennium, between Christ’s return and the Last Day, during which Christ rules in person over a theocratic kingdom to which all the nations of the world are subject.

Periods of great world upheaval and crisis have tended to spawn and multiply despair in society, and premillennial visions within Christianity. . . .

Dispensationalism gives premillennialism a complete system. Human history is regarded as a series of ages (dispensations) in which humanity is tested with respect to some aspect revealed of God's will. In each case humankind fails, is judged by God, and then set on the trail under new covenant conditions. (For further detail, see "Dispensationalism," Minutes, PCUS, 1944, Part I, pp. 123–27.)

The General Assembly in 1944 was very careful to distinguish premillennialism in general from its specific application in Dispensationalism. It was the latter that was singled out for specific criticism:

It is the unanimous opinion of your committee that Dispensationalism as defined and set forth above is out of accord with the system of the doctrine set forth in the Confession of Faith, not primarily or simply in the field of eschatology, but because it attacks the very heart of the Theology of our Church, which is unquestionably a Theology of one Covenant of Grace. ["Dispensationalism," Minutes of the General Assembly, PCUS, 1944, Part I, pp. 123–27.]

We, too, must make important distinctions. Most Christian Zionists are Dispensationalists, but this does not imply that all Dispensationalists are Christian Zionists, especially in respect to political action. Many Dispensationalists still remain completely apart from the U.S. political system, for instance. Further, we cannot assume uniformity on every point. For instance, Item 12-03 states "Finally, pre-millennialist interpretations that underlie Christian Zionism ultimately exclude any validity of the continuity of efficacy of God's covenant with the Jewish people themselves, and ultimately are anti-Semitic." John Hagee, a popular television preacher and Christian Zionist leader who recently delivered $1 million to Israel [<http://www.hcef.org/hcef/index.cfm/ID/159>], has defended a parallel and enduring covenant with the Jews: "I believe that every Jewish person who lives in the light of the Torah, which is the word of God, has a relationship with God and will come to redemption" ["San Antonio fundamentalist battles anti-Semitism," Houston Chronicle, April 30, 1988, sec. 6, pg. 1.]. In such matters, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) must speak with a firm, but careful voice. See [<http://www.pcusa.org/ga213/business/OVT0125>] and [<http://www.pcusa.org/theologyandworship/issues/reflection>] "Between Millennia" and "Eschatology: The Doctrine of Last Things."

In a time when the PC(USA) is beset with its own internal disagreements, we should resist the temptation to bolster our own self-confidence by throwing stones at others. Any judgments must be made with great care.

Item 12-04. On Urging Peace in Colombia, South America—From the Presbytery of Baltimore. +ACSWP, ACREC

That the recommendations are approved with amendment. [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through and with brackets; text to be added or inserted is shown with an underline and with brackets.]

"The Presbytery of Baltimore overtures the 216th General Assembly (2004) to do the following:

"[1. Reaffirm the positions of the 210th and 213th General Assemblies (1998) and (2001) that call for ecumenical efforts toward peace in Colombia and call for the United States to demilitarize its anti-drug policies and support in Colombia, that it speak against the violation of human rights, and that aid be in the form of national debt relief and humanitarian and self-developmental grants for the Colombian people.]

"[1.] [2.] ~~Join the Presbyterian Church of Colombia, Council of Churches of Colombia, and Colombia's Commission of Human Rights and Peace in calling for the transformation of the vicious circle of death and destruction produced by military aid into a 'virtuous circle' of abundant life and peace, so that the Colombian people will begin to receive a different type of message from the north, sent by the church, a message of solidarity and respect for human life. [Join the Presbyterian Church of Colombia, other Christian churches, and other Christian organizations in calling for the~~ redirection of United States military aid into social, educational, health, and developmental assistance in the hope that peace would be restored.]

“~~[3.]~~ [4.] [Commend the Nonviolent Communities of Resistance in Colombia] [Support and accompany the ‘communities of peace and resistance’] who reject all military involvement [by guerrillas, paramilitary, and Colombian armed forces].

“[5.] Call for the immediate closure of the Western Hemisphere Institute for Security Cooperation, previously known as the School of the Americas.]

“~~[4.]~~ [6.] Stand with our sisters and brothers in Colombia who are witnessing to the truth that peace cannot be achieved by [armed military] violence.

“[7.] Because of the dire plight of more than 3 million internally displaced people in Colombia, including the Colombian Church, we urge the members of the PC(USA) to pray for displaced people, and to provide direct aid to the church, for their work with the displaced; and we direct the Stated Clerk and Presbyterian Washington Office to use every opportunity to urge the United States government to provide food, water, medicine, and other necessities to Colombia rather than weapons.

“[8.] Commend the ministry and work of the Reverend Dr. Alice Winters with the Reformed University of Colombia, School of Theology. Winters has served on behalf of the PC(USA) since 1977.]

“~~[5.]~~ [9.] Urge Presbyterians to [go to Colombia to get to know our sisters and brothers there] [learn about the situation through study and organized visits] and better understand the realities ~~[they]~~ [Colombians] deal with every day.

“[10.] Call upon all transnational corporations operating in Colombia to utilize their influence to promote publicly peace and justice, protect their employees from violence in the workplace and as they participate in trade union activities, and contribute to the well-being of the communities where they are located.

“[11.] Commend to the church the resource created by the Presbyterian Peacemaking Program, in cooperation with the PC(USA) Office for Latin American and the Caribbean, entitled ‘Colombia,’ (PDS # 70-270-04-015), which is available from the Peacemaking Office and through the PC(USA) Website.]”

§ Item 12-05. Iraq: Our Responsibility and the Future.

That the recommendations are approved with amendment.

1. Amend the third paragraph of the resolution as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through and with brackets; text to be added or inserted is shown with an underline and with brackets.]

“Opposition to the military action against Iraq based on just war principles and other principles of conscience, while not unanimous among Presbyterians, has been sufficiently widespread to indicate much concern. From the beginning, it has been the judgment of many church leaders, both in the United States and elsewhere, that an [essentially unilateral] invasion of Iraq has been unwise, immoral, and illegal. The [216th] General Assembly [(2004)] concurs with this judgment. That judgment has also been evident in widespread public feeling in numerous countries, including countries long friendly to the United States.”

2. Amend the fourth paragraph of the resolution as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through and with brackets; text to be added or inserted is shown with an underline and with brackets.] [Note that the last two sentences of paragraph four become a new paragraph.]

~~“[Since ‘God alone is Lord of the conscience,’ those who have come to a different judgment are entitled to their convictions, but they are not entitled to regard those with other views as ‘unpatriotic’ or somehow lacking the moral stamina to combat evil.] [Presbyterians affirm, ‘God alone is Lord of the conscience.’ Every member of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is both entitled, and called upon, to consider this matter prayerfully and lovingly. Every Presbyterian, however, is also called upon to treat those with whom they disagree with respect. We deplore the actions of those who regard persons with positions different from their own as being unpatriotic or un-Christian.]~~

“Moreover, the military action taken against Iraq is not directly or necessarily connected to the effort to deal with the threat of terrorism. It raises different issues and must be assessed using different moral considerations.”

3. Amend paragraphs five and six by merging them into one paragraph to read as follows:

“Despite the moral cloud surrounding the military invasion of Iraq and growing concern about the loss of life on both sides of the conflict, there is widespread agreement that the United States bears a legal and moral burden for the reconstruction of Iraq. Many people feel this burden can only be carried out properly and successfully through full cooperation with the international community, especially the United Nations. The complexities and difficulties in the road ahead must not be the occasion for indecision or for seeking simplistic solutions in the momentous task of nation building. Acknowledging the moral perplexity caused by Operation Iraqi Freedom, the 216th General Assembly (2004) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) does the following:”

4. Amend Recommendations 5. through 7. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through and with brackets; text to be added or inserted is shown with an underline and with brackets.]

~~“5. Urges the United States government to move speedily to restore sovereignty to Iraq, to internationalize the reconstruction efforts without penalty to those nations that chose not to endorse the U.S.-led invasion, and to recognize the United Nations as the body most suitable to facilitate the transition to peace, freedom, and participatory governance in Iraq. We commend the administration for its recent efforts to work through the United Nations to help Iraq people take charge of their own political destiny and urge the United States to recognize that the United Nations should play the leading role in helping the transition to Iraqi self-rule. [In light of the transfer of power from the representatives of the United States Government to the Interim Governing Council in Iraq, we urge that further steps be taken to internationalize the reconstruction efforts and to help the people of Iraq to take charge of their own political destiny. Meanwhile, we continue in prayer for peace and stability in that country.]~~

~~“6. [We suggest] [Suggests] that the United Nations, with more than fifty years of experience of peace-building in more than 170 countries, play a lead role in the recruiting and training of persons who have special skills in establishing the rule of law—police, judges, [lawyers,] court staff, and corrections officers—to establish peace and stability in Iraq and other areas of the world striving to build post-conflict stability and order. The deployment of military personnel for this purpose should be avoided as much as possible as it places additional burden, responsibility, and need for training that stretches the current forces beyond their expertise.~~

~~“7. [We deplore the use of torture against prisoners. Such use violates international law, the best traditions of our country, Christian morality, and just war teaching.] [Condemns in the~~ strongest possible terms torture and abuse of prisoners held any place in the world, in United States government, military, or civilian custody, and we oppose any continuation of this practice.] As a church in the United States, we acknowledge and repent of our complicity in the culture leading to such acts, confess our collective sinfulness that is at the root of this practice, and ask God’s forgiveness.”

5. Add a new Recommendation 9. to read as follows:

“[9.Supports the people of Iraq on a long-term basis in rebuilding their government and nation without prejudice to any ethnic and religious group and urge the United States government to provide assistance to Iraq in the long-term rebuilding efforts, including working for relief of foreign debt.]”

6. Amend Recommendations 9. through 12. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through and with brackets; text to be added or inserted is shown with an underline and with brackets.]

“[9.] [10.] Commends the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly for his strong leadership in [opposing, on the basis of previous General Assembly policies, the U.S. led intervention in Iraq, [representing policies of the General Assembly and brothers and sisters in the church at large,] and for his leadership among world religious leaders in calling for interfaith cooperation to address the crisis created by this action for relations between Christians and Muslims.

“[10.] [11.] Expresses deep regret over the failure of the current administration, prior to military action, to meet with religious leaders seeking to offer a full explanation of the basis for their opposition to an invasion of Iraq, and the subsequent unwillingness of the administration to meet with those leaders to discuss the role the churches might play in creating a free and prosperous future for Iraq.

“[11.] [12.] Approves the report as a whole for churchwide study and implementation (noting that the study developed for Iraq and Beyond, approved by 215th General Assembly (2003), has continuing usefulness for the church: PDS order # 68-600-03-005).

“[12.] [13.] Directs the Office of the General Assembly to publish the resolution (with recommendations and background rationale) and place the document as a whole on the PC(USA) Website, sending a copy to the presbytery and synod resource centers, the libraries of the theological seminaries, making available a copy for each requesting session or middle governing body, and directs the Stated Clerk to notify the entire church of the availability of this paper on the Website.

7. Add new recommendations 14. and 15. to read as follows:

“[14. Due to the immense sacrifice of our partner churches in Iraq, calls on the PC(USA) to give sacrificially to the real needs of our brothers and sisters in Christ. We call on the General Assembly Council (GAC) to immediately develop and promote a coordinated effort to highlight the Extra Commitment Opportunity titled, ‘Iraq—The Peace Fund for Solidarity with the Churches’ (E051722).

“[15. Calls on the GAC to research and dialogue with our partner churches in Iraq in order to present at the 217th General Assembly (2006) a plan for the use of personnel (mission co-workers, mission volunteers, etc) and other resources that responds to the needs and concerns of our brothers and sisters in Iraq.]”

[Financial Implications: 2004: $950 (Per Capita-OGA)]

§ Item 12-06. Resolution on Violence, Religion, and Terrorism.

That the recommendations are approved with amendment.

Amend Recommendation B.1.b. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through and with brackets; text to be added or inserted is shown with an underline and with brackets.]

“ b. [~~Discourage~~] [Disavow] the resort by the United States government to ‘preemptive attack’ against other nation states as a means to deter terrorism.”

[Financial Implications: 2005: $14,605 (Mission-Restricted)]

That the recommendation is approved with amendment.

1. Amend Recommendation 1. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through and with brackets; text to be added or inserted is shown with an underline and with brackets.]

“1. Commends [~~those sessions~~] [the 4,723 sessions (as of June 4, 2004)] that have adopted the ‘Commitment to Peacemaking[.]’ [and the 216th General Assembly (2004) gives thanks for the faithful work for Christ’s peace by the Presbyterian Peacemaking Program staff and countless volunteers throughout the PC(USA) for twenty-five years.]”

2. Amend Recommendation 6. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through and with brackets; text to be added or inserted is shown with an underline and with brackets.]

“6. Commends the [~~seventy-one~~] [seventy-two] presbyteries and six synods that have 50 percent or more of their congregations whose sessions have adopted the “Commitment to Peacemaking.”

Item 12-08. Call to Confession of Prison Abuse in Iraq.

That the recommendations are approved with amendment.

1. Strike the title and insert new copy to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through and with brackets; text to be added or inserted is shown with an underline and with brackets.]

~~“[CALL TO CONFESSION OF PRISON ABUSE IN IRAQ]~~
[A RESOLUTION AND CONFESSION ON THE TORTURE AND ABUSE OF PRISONERS]”

2. Strike Recommendation 2. (including letter and prayer) and insert new copy to read as follows:

“2. The treatment of those incarcerated in the naval base in Guantanamo, Cuba, and in the Abu Ghraib prison in Iraq (and perhaps elsewhere), has highlighted serious legal and moral issues that cannot be ignored and must not be allowed to pass unexamined. Violations of international law as well as serious moral malfeasance are involved.

“[Such treatment is contrary to the Geneva Convention Relative to Treatment of Prisoners of War (1949), particularly Articles 13, 14, 15, 17, and 18. Article 17, Fifth Paragraph, provides:

“[Neither physical or mental torture nor any other form of coercion may be inflicted on prisoners of war to secure from them information of any kind whatever. Prisoners of war who refuse to answer may not be threatened, insulted, or exposed to any unpleasant or disadvantageous treatment of any kind.]

“[Objections to such practices have been voiced by lawyers within the armed services as well as by human rights organizations. Such practices have been deplored by a great majority of the citizens of our country, quite irrespective of their views as to the legitimacy of taking military action against Iraq. These actions have undercut American claims to a moral high ground and opened the way for enemies to maltreat members of our own society that fall into their hands. Moreover, they constitute flagrant violations of the Geneva Convention Relative to the Treatment of Prisoners of War, to which the United States is a signatory [<http://www.unhchr.ch/html/menu3/b/911.htm>].

“[As citizens of our country, members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) have been urged to engage in repentance for these actions, even if their personal responsibility for them is indirect and minimal. That call for repentance is an indication of the extent to which these actions must be deplored.]

“[But efforts must be made to ensure that such actions are eliminated from future practice. This can be done only if there is a complete and adequate understanding as to why they have arisen—a matter of present uncertainty and possible confusion.]

“[3. Further, efforts must be made to ensure that such torture and abuse do not occur in the future. To that end, the 216th General Assembly (2004) directs the Stated Clerk to take the following actions:

“[a. Commend all who have brought this prison abuse to the attention of the public as well as all who have recognized the seriousness of the issues raised and the need to deal vigorously with the policy and administrative questions that are involved;

“[b. Urge the U.S. Congress to direct an appropriate independent and formal inquiry to determine what led to these events. This body should have full investigative powers and issue its findings publicly.]

“[c. Urge government officials to develop safeguards that will serve to prevent such behavior from arising in the future.]

“[4. Write and send a pastoral letter to the churches, communicating the intent of this resolution.]”

Commissioners’ Resolutions

*$ Item 12-09. On Establishing a Palestine Working Group.

In response to Item 12-09, the 216th General Assembly (2004) approved the following:

1. Direct that the formation of a Worldwide Ministries Division-related Palestine Mission Network move forward as soon as possible, for the purpose of creating currents of wider and deeper Presbyterian involvement with Palestinian partners, aimed at demonstrating solidarity and changing the conditions that erode the humanity of Palestinians living in Jerusalem, the West Bank, and Gaza.

2. Authorize a feasibility study to be conducted by the Worldwide Ministries Division (WMD) of the General Assembly Council to explore the dimensions, costs, appropriate development approach, stability of political conditions, availability of expertise, and possible sources of funding, of an intentional and systematic effort of development and compassionate action in Palestine either by or through a team connected to the WMD-related Palestine Mission Network, and to make recommendations for concrete measurable action plans to the General Assembly Council at its fall meeting in 2005.

That the recommendation is disapproved.

Memorial Minute for Dorothy Barnard

Moderator Ufford-Chase recognized Gay Mothershed, executive of the Presbytery of West Virginia, who offered a Memorial Minute for Dorothy Barnard, Moderator of the 121st General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States.

Memorial Minute for Dorothy Gaskill Barnard, 1925–2004

Prepared by Gay Mothershed

February 28th would have been her 79th birthday. Instead of the small dinner party planned for family and a few friends, more than four hundred gathered that Saturday morning in LaDue Chapel in St. Louis for a service of witness to the resurrection and to celebrate the life of Dorothy Gaskill Barnard. Her courageous battle with pancreatic cancer ended on February 25 when she joined the great cloud of witnesses who from their labors rest.

Dotty, elected in 1981 as the Moderator of the 121st General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, was the second woman to hold this office. She deemed it her highest honor and her greatest privilege. Dotty relished every moment and she blessed the church with her leadership. Many of us remember her leading the PCUS assembly through the halls of the convention center in Houston, Texas, to interrupt the 193rd General Assembly of the United Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A., following the approval by both assemblies of the recommendations of the Joint Committee on Presbyterian Union. “Holy kisses” and the joyous singing of “Amazing Grace” captured the joy and excitement of that occasion in 1981.

For fifty-six years, Dotty was the beloved wife and companion to Gene. Their home was a center of activity and a symbol of hospitality. Daughters, Susan, Lynn, and Cindy, sons-in-law, Bob West and David Stinson, and grandchildren, Sean and Robin, filled her life with joy.

Reared in St. Louis, Dotty graduated magna cum laude from Washington University with a B.S. in Education and an A.B. in Liberal Arts. She was a member of Phi Beta Kappa and Kappa Delta honorary societies. Throughout her life, Dotty met monthly with her Pi Beta Phi sorority sisters, symbolic of her loyalty as a friend.

In every area of her life in the congregation, presbytery, synod, and General Assembly, Dotty expressed her faithful commitment to partnership and ecumenicity: serving as the regional communicator of the Synod of Mid-America, providing leadership for Church Women United, working tirelessly as a member of the Consultation on Church Union and its successor, Churches of Christ Uniting, visiting and interpreting the ministries of our national and international mission efforts, and dedicating her energy and gifts to the office of ordained elder.

For the past eight years, she served as the director of mission of St. Luke’s Hospital, working to integrate the Episcopal-Presbyterian heritage into the day-to-day operations and initiating mission-based activities at the hospital. Called the “heart and soul” of St. Luke’s, she was instrumental in relocating the Pediatric Care Center to improve access and provide care to more children. Of this she seemed most proud!

Among her honors, there is the PC(USA) Woman of Faith Award, the Church Women United Valiant Woman Award, the St. Louis Woman of Achievement Award, and, in 2004, she was listed in the St. Luke’s Top 100. Westminster College in Fulton, Missouri, granted her the Doctor of Divinity degree in 1982.

Dotty treasured the opportunity and faithfully attended each General Assembly. She was humbled each year as she stood with the great host of leaders who have served the Presbyterian church as moderators! However, to the best of my knowledge, she is the only Moderator of either the present or former denominations who has ever been hijacked on an airplane between St. Louis and Kansas City! She loved to share that story!

Through all her life, Dotty was a Christian by example. If you met her casually, you would never know of her many accomplishments. But once you were around her, you would understand the strength of her faith and her willingness to work to accomplish God's tasks. Dotty was like a river slowly but steadily moving across the rock until suddenly a canyon emerged. She was not a religious zealot, but a person of immense faith and spirituality that crystallized through her action, the way she lived her life, the relationships she built with others and the differences she made in the lives of others. Throughout her life, Dotty exhibited kindness, strength, perseverance, compassion and gentleness. If Dotty wanted to get something done, it was truly just a matter of time before it would be accomplished. As she reflected over the last months of her life, she asked two questions, "Did I make a difference? And, will I be remembered?" Her life speaks for itself.

Thanks be to God for the gift of Dorothy Gaskill Barnard!

ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON CHURCH ORDERS AND MINISTRY

The report of the Assembly Committee on Church Orders and Ministry was presented by its moderator Scott Schaefer. The assembly approved the consent agenda: Items 05-03 (approved) and 05-13 (approved), except Item 05-02 that was removed. Schaefer presented Muriel Brown, vice-moderator of the assembly committee, who continued with the presentation of the report. Item 05-04 was approved with amendment. Item 05-01 was disapproved. Stated Clerk Kirkpatrick offered a definition of an authoritative interpretation of the Book of Order in preparation of a vote on Item 05-02. Item 05-02 was approved. Items 05-10 and 05-11 were disapproved. Item 05-12 was approved as amended. Schaefer resumed presentation of the committee's report. The committee moved the approval of a response to Item 05-07. Moderator Ufford-Chase announced there was a minority report for Item 05-07. Schaefer, moderator of the assembly committee, briefly spoke to the main motion. Moderator Ufford-Chase recognized Kyle Otterbein, commissioner from the Presbytery of East Iowa, who presented the minority report. The main motion was amended as follows: "Add the sentence 'The 216th General Assembly (2004) encourages the Task Force on the Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church in its work and calls the church prayerfully to seek God's will as it receives the task force report in 2006.'" The main motion was declared perfected. The minority report was declared perfected. The merits of the main motion and the minority report were debated. Moderator Ufford-Chase placed before the assembly the question, "Shall the minority report be substituted for the main motion?" The minority report was approved. The assembly voted to approve the alternate statement to Item 05-07. Items 05-05, 05-06, 05-08, and 05-09 were answered by the action taken on Item 05-07.

Shall D-1.0101 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italics.]

“Church discipline is the church’s exercise of authority given by Christ, both in the direction of guidance, control, and nurture of its members and in the direction of constructive criticism of offenders. The church’s disciplinary process exists not as a substitute for the secular judicial system, but to do what the secular judicial system cannot do. ~~Thus,~~ The purpose of discipline is to honor God by making clear the significance of membership in the body of Christ; to preserve the purity of the church by nourishing the individual within the life of the believing community; to achieve justice and compassion for all participants involved; to correct or restrain wrongdoing in order to bring members to repentance and restoration; to uphold the dignity of those who have been harmed by disciplinary offenses; to restore the unity of the church by removing the causes of discord and division; and to secure the just, speedy, and economical determination of proceedings. In all respects, ~~members~~ all participants are to be accorded procedural safeguards and due process, and it is the intention of these rules so to provide.”

Comment:

Elements of an Apology

1. We, the 216th General Assembly (2004) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) acknowledge that our children, adolescents, and adults have suffered sexual abuse, molestation, and exploitation as committed by members and leaders of our congregations, governing bodies, and agencies, including those specific incidents that occurred in the Congo and continued in the U.S. church during the period of 1946–1985, as identified in the Final Report of the Independent Committee of Inquiry, Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) (September, 2002).

2. We apologize that we as a church did not take adequate steps to prevent the specific incidences as confirmed in the Final Report, that our church did not understand the significance of, or believe, the earliest reports of incidents of sexual abuse when survivors turned to people in positions of authority and responsibility, that our church did not do more at the time of their reporting to intervene and stop the perpetrators of sexual abuse, and that our church did not do more after discovering the truth of the victims’ allegations to reach out to others who might have been victimized.

3. We apologize that some of us in our church chose to doubt and discredit the survivors who came forward with the truth, that some dismissed the reports, and that some demonized them, all of which added a layer of pain and anguish to the original abuse.

4. We apologize that our church's inactions over the years allowed hurt and harm to extend to the survivors' families, children, friends, and faith. We recognize that we as a church have suffered losses in the nature and quality of our relationships as a community of faith.

5. We apologize that some of us in our church were complicit as our sisters and brothers in the body of Jesus Christ suffered the loss of their innocence, had childhoods stolen, lost opportunities to enjoy more of the fullness of life that God offers all in Jesus Christ (John 10:10b), and lost a child's ability to trust the people of the church.

6. We acknowledge that survivors who have come forward have demonstrated a primary motivation to work through the church to improve our faith community, tell the truth, prevent further victimization, seek healing, and make our church safe for all.

7. We express our thankfulness to God for the courage of the survivors whose witness has held us accountable to be true to our calling as the followers of Jesus Christ. We express our gratitude to those among us who have listened to victims, supported their efforts, and worked for justice.

8. We welcome the many other women and men in our church who have been abused as they come forward, and we pledge to work with them so that they may be restored to God's fullness of life.

3. In response to Recommendation 4., the 216th General Assembly (2004) approved the following:

The 216th General Assembly (2004) directs the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Shall D-11.0403e be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“e. If the accused is found guilty or after the guilty plea, the session or permanent judicial commission ~~may~~ should hear evidence as to the extent of the injury suffered, mitigation, rehabilitation, and redemption. This evidence may be offered by either party, or the original accuser, or that person's representative. The person who was directly harmed by the offense may submit a victim impact statement. The statement shall not be subject to cross-examination. The session or permanent judicial commission shall then meet privately to determine the degree of censure to be imposed. (D-12.0000) Following such determination and in an open meeting, the moderator of the session or permanent judicial commission shall then pronounce the censure.”

4. That Recommendation 5. is approved.

5. In response to Recommendation 6., the 216th General Assembly (2004) approved the following:

The 216th General Assembly (2004) directs the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes

Shall G-9.0503a be amended by adding a new section to read as follows: [Text to be added is shown as italic.]

“(7) To make pastoral inquiry in the event that jurisdiction in a judicial proceeding is ended as a result of the death of, or renunciation of jurisdiction by, the person accused of the disciplinary offense of ‘sexual abuse of another person.’ (D-10.0401b) The inquiry shall:

- “(a) not be a part of the church’s judicial proceedings;*
- “(b) be empowered to receive witnesses and to consider evidence; and*
- “(c) reach a determination of truth related to the accusation and make a full report to the governing body who appointed it, including recommendations for appropriate action.”*

6. In response to Recommendation 7., the 216th General Assembly (2004) approved the following:

The 216th General Assembly (2004) directs the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendments to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Item 04-10. On Adding Section D-10.0106 to Provide for Administrative Leave in Case of Alleged Child Abuse by Clergy—From the Presbytery of Baltimore. *ACC +ACWC

In response to Item 04-10, the 216th General Assembly (2004) approved the following:

The 216th General Assembly (2004) directs the Stated Clerk to send the following amendments to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Shall a new section, D-10.0106, be added to the Rules of Discipline to read as follows:

“D-10.0106 Administrative Leave When Allegations of Sexual Abuse Submitted

“When a written statement of an alleged offense of sexual abuse toward any person under the age of eighteen, or who it is alleged lacked the mental capacity to consent, has been received against a minister of the Word and Sacrament, the stated clerk receiving the allegation shall immediately communicate the allegation to the permanent judicial commission. The moderator of the permanent judicial commission shall, within three days, designate two members who may be from the roster of former members of the permanent judicial commission, to determine whether the accused shall be placed on a paid administrative leave during the resolution of the matter. The cost of such shall be borne by the employing entity whenever possible or be shared by the presbytery as necessary. While administrative leave is in effect, a minister or other employee may not perform any pastoral, administrative, educational, or supervisory duties, and may not officiate at any functions such as Baptism, funerals, or weddings.

“a. The designated members of the permanent judicial commission, after giving the accused the opportunity to be heard, shall determine whether the risk to the congregation and to potential victims of abuse, when considered in light of the nature and probable truth of the allegations, requires administrative leave or other restrictions upon the minister’s service. Such administrative leave or restrictions will continue until resolution of the matter in one of the ways prescribed in the Rules of Discipline or the leave or restrictions are altered or removed by the designated members of the commission.

“b. If the designated members of the commission determine that no administrative leave or restriction is required, the investigating committee appointed to investigate the allegations shall be free at any point in its investigation to present additional evidence to the designated members supporting the imposition of administrative leave or other restrictions.”

Recess

Moderator Ufford-Chase suggested to the assembly that the remaining report from the Assembly Committee on International Relations be presented at Business Meeting 12. Following prayer led by David McKechnie, commissioner from the Presbytery of New Covenant, the assembly recessed at 10:02 p.m., to be reconvened at 9:30 a.m. on Saturday, July 3, 2004.

Saturday, July 3, 2004, 8:30 A.M.

Commissioners, advisory delegates, and other participants worshiped together in Hall A-B of the Greater Richmond Convention Center. The preacher for the morning worship was Chris Glaser, elder from Atlanta, Georgia.

Saturday, July 3, 2004, 9:30 A.M.

The 216th General Assembly reconvened at 9:30 a.m. with Moderator Ufford-Chase presiding. David Tenbrook, youth advisory delegate from the Presbytery of San Francisco, led the assembly in prayer.

REPORT OF THE ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON BILLS AND OVERTURES

The report of the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures was presented by its moderator, Nancy Thornton McKenzie, who reported that the committee had reviewed the minutes of the General Assembly through Friday morning, July 2, 2004; had found them in order; and that, in accordance with the Standing Rules of the General Assembly, the minutes of the remaining meetings shall be sent to the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures subcommittee for review after the meeting. McKenzie reported that the committee had received protests and dissents, found them in decorous language, and that these protests would be recorded in the Minutes as follows:

Protest of Item 12-05, Third Paragraph of the Resolution (War in Iraq Deemed Illegal)—From Ted Worley, commissioner from Cherokee Presbytery; David Andrew, commissioner from Presbytery of Glacier; G. Christopher Scruggs, commissioner from Presbytery of Memphis; Richard Kreutzer, commissioner from Presbytery of Mission; John Judson, commissioner from Presbytery of Mission; Nancy E. Reeves, commissioner from Presbytery of Mission; Martha Richardson, commissioner from Presbytery of Mission; Lita Simpson, commissioner from Presbytery of Mission; Bruce Goodlock, commissioner from Presbytery of Mission; Eugene Smith, commissioner from Greater Atlanta; Donald D. Wade, commissioner from Greater Atlanta; Walter D. Seigfried, commissioner from Presbytery of Pittsburgh; Anne Beach, commissioner from Presbytery of Charlotte; Rod Bakker, commissioner from Presbytery of Great Rivers: “We protest the action of this General Assembly declaring the involvement of the United States in the war in Iraq as ‘illegal.’”

Protest of Item 11-02—From Timothy Harrison, commissioner from Presbytery of Elizabeth: “We voted against the committee decision to protect the life of children still viable in the womb. However, in the video affirming the Decade of the Child: “We take seriously our baptismal vows to take care of all children.” I see these two actions in direct opposition to one another, and therefore protest the vote on 11-02.”

Protest of Item 13-04—From Mary H. Schaafsma, commissioner from Presbytery of Chicago: “During debate of whether or not the minority report shall be the main motion, I stood in line with a yellow paddle to ask a question about whether or not the Women’s Concerns Committee agreed to the minority report. I was not allowed to ask the question, despite the fact that I was in line before debate was ended. I thought the assembly would benefit from an answer to that question, particularly given the fact that Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns spent time considering this overture.”

Moderator Ufford-Chase recognized Vice-Moderator Jean-Marie Peacock, who assumed the chair.

REPORT OF THE ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON INTERNATIONAL ISSUES

The report of the Assembly Committee on International Issues was presented by its moderator, Justin Johnson. In response to Item 13-07, the assembly voted to approve an alternate response.

The assembly voted to answer Item 13-01 with the action taken on Item 13-07. [Item 13-02 was withdrawn before the start of the assembly.] The assembly voted to approve an alternate resolution in response to Item 13-03. On behalf of the committee, Johnson moved the disapproval of Item 13-04. David Henry, commissioner from the Presbytery of Utah, presented a minority report concerning Item 13-04. Johnson spoke briefly to the main motion. Henry spoke briefly to the minority report. After opening the floor for amendments, Vice-Moderator Peacock declared the main motion and the minority reports perfected. The merits of the main motion and the substitute motion were debated. Peacock placed before the assembly the question, “Shall the minority report be substituted for the main motion?” The assembly voted not to substitute the minority report for the main motion. The assembly voted to disapprove Item 13-04. Johnson introduced Marcia Borgeson, vice-moderator of the committee, who presented the next section of the report. The assembly approved Item 13-05 with comment. The assembly approved Item 13-06. Johnson assumed presentation of the remainder of the report. The assembly approved Item 13-08 with amendment. The assembly approved Item 13-09 with amendment. The assembly voted to approve Item 13-10 with amendment. The assembly approved the referral of Item 13-11. The assembly approved Item 13-12 with amendment.

This concluded the report of the committee and is as follows:

The 216th General Assembly (2004) approved the following recommendations: [There are no items for a consent agenda. Items that have financial implications are indicated with a dollar sign ($).]

Taiwan

Item 13-01. On Expressing Our Solidarity with the Presbyterian Church in Taiwan and with the Taiwanese People—From the Presbytery of New Covenant. +ACSWP, ACREC

That the recommendation is answered by the action taken on Item 13-07 of this report.

Item 13-07. On Expressing Our Solidarity with the Presbyterian Church in Taiwan and with the Taiwanese People—From the Presbytery of the Pacific. +ACSWP, ACREC

In response to this recommendation, the 216th General Assembly (2004) approved the following:

The 216th General Assembly (2004), recognizing and honoring the feelings about national identity expressed on both sides of the Taiwan Straits, reaffirms the action of the 208th General Assembly (1996) in both its “Resolution: Taiwan Monitoring” (Minutes, 1996, Part I, pp. 522–23, paragraphs 36.443–.456) and the ‘affirmations concerning partnership in mission with Christians in Hong Kong, Taiwan, and China’ (Minutes, 1996, Part I, pp. 381–82, paragraphs 34.019–.027). In addition, the 216th General Assembly (2004) does the following:

1. Directs the Stated Clerk to commend both the Taiwan Center for Disease Control for its prompt and thorough action in addressing the outbreak and management of Severe Acute Respiratory Syndrome (SARS) and the United States of America Center for Disease Control and Prevention for its mission and continuing commitment to engage in the international public health community and, particularly, for its involvement with Taiwan during the SARS outbreak.

2. Directs the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP), in consultation with the General Assembly Council (GAC) and the National Taiwanese Presbyterian Council (NTPC), to continue its monitoring of the mainland China/Taiwan relationship as an emerging issue fraught with danger and to consider providing study materials on the situation.

3. Calls on Presbyterians and General Assembly entities to advocate for access that permits direct interaction and provision of services in the World Health Organization for Taiwan and other peoples and places in times of health crisis.

4. Encourages all Presbyterians to become familiar with issues and concerns of the East Asia region and the United States foreign policy in regards to the United States-Taiwan-mainland China triangular relationship.

5. Invites all Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)-related media outlets and publications, such as Presbyterians Today, Stewardship for Public Life (Washington Office), and Church & Society magazine to devote one publication on the human rights and democracy development in Taiwan.

Item 00-02

[The assembly approved Item 00-02. See p. 28.]

The General Assembly Nominating Committee recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) approve the 2003 nominations as found on pages 28–36.

Item 00-03

[The assembly approved the Reverend Dr. Clifton Kirkpatrick for a third, 4-year term. See p. 63.]

The Stated Clerk Review/Nomination Committee recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) elect the Reverend Dr. Clifton Kirkpatrick for a third, four-year term as Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

Committee Report and Rationale Part I

The Stated Clerk Review/Nomination Committee (SCR/NC), elected by the 215th General Assembly (2003), has the responsibilities of (1) conducting an end-of-term evaluation of the Stated Clerk; (2) deciding whether to nominate the incumbent Stated Clerk to another term; (3) receiving applications of potential candidates who may wish to stand for Stated Clerk; (4) ensuring that information regarding any candidates for Stated Clerk is made available to the commissioners and advisory delegates to the 216th General Assembly (2004); and (5) placing in nomination a single candidate at the 216th General Assembly (2004). (See Standing Rules (SR) G.1.c.(1)(c)–(k) and G.1.c.(2)(a).)

Following an organizational meeting by teleconference on July 22, 2003, the SCR/NC met on September 2–3, 2003, in Chicago, Illinois, to review the applicable Standing Rules of the General Assembly and begin its end-of-term evaluation of the Reverend Dr. Clifton Kirkpatrick, current Stated Clerk of the General Assembly. Input was sought and received from throughout the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and its ecumenical partners.

The committee prepared a broad-based evaluation questionnaire that included effectiveness of the Stated Clerk in carrying out the required responsibilities regarding the Constitution, General Assembly sessions, ecumenical relations, actions of the General Assembly, and administration. Evaluation was also requested regarding qualitative areas such as communication and listening skills, leadership style, ecclesiastical expertise, organization and planning, supervision, and team building.

Questionnaires were sent to representatives of General Assembly and Office of the General Assembly staff and elected leaders, ecumenical partners, all presbytery and synod stated clerks, and other PC(USA) committees and organizations, including some affinity groups, that worked with the Stated Clerk during his second term. Three hundred fifteen questionnaires were sent out; 168 were returned—over 50 percent response. Also, several persons provided verbal comments to SCR/NC members at the fall meetings of stated clerks and executive presbyters.

Additionally, the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) provided its end-of-term review, which the SCR/NC reviewed and considered. This evaluation represented the views of some thirty staff and elected persons.

Further, the committee invited comments from members of the church-at-large regarding the evaluation of the Stated Clerk. About 190 letters were received.

Also, the Rev. Dr. Kirkpatrick submitted an end-of-term self-evaluation along with several documents describing his work relating to the responsibilities of the Stated Clerk.

At its November 24–25, 2003, meeting in Chicago, Illinois, the SCR/NC considered all the information, responses, letters, and comments. The committee found widespread affirmation and appreciation of the work and ministry that the Rev. Dr. Kirkpatrick has done to carry out his responsibilities as Stated Clerk during his second, four-year term. For example, regarding the responses received to the questionnaire (1–5 scale with 5 being excellent), the Rev. Dr. Kirkpatrick received mostly 5s with some 4s performance rating across all categories of evaluation on more than 95 percent of the responses. This strong positive evaluation was echoed in the results of the COGA end-of-term review and a majority of the letters from members at large.

Examples of descriptive comments received: passionate love for the church; trustworthy and candid, conscientious and dedicated; clearly delineates proper authority of the clerk; collegial, pastoral; shines at assemblies; excellent at grasping a vision and suggesting concrete actions toward it; leader in ecumenical relationships; effectively and eloquently carries out actions of General Assembly; knowledgeable, supportive, joyful; brings people together; respectful listener; energetic, and has the style of leadership needed in the church.

The committee did receive a few questionnaire responses and some letters with negative comments and criticisms of the Rev. Dr. Kirkpatrick's performance. These comments and criticisms were reviewed with the Rev. Dr. Kirkpatrick (maintaining the confidentiality of the sources). The committee acknowledges that some of the actions or inactions of the Stated Clerk raised concerns among some in our church, reflecting the variety of views held by members of the church around the country. However, the committee is satisfied that the criticisms communicated to us were based on what the committee views as a misunderstanding of the Stated Clerk's role and responsibility or represented genuine disagreement with what a vast majority of other responders thought was appropriate action of the Stated Clerk.

The SCR/NC had extensive review and dialog with the Rev. Dr. Kirkpatrick at its November 2003 meeting, including sharing summaries of the results of the questionnaires and other information received. The questionnaire responses also identified areas for growth that may further enhance the effectiveness of the Rev. Dr. Kirkpatrick's performance. These comments were reviewed with the Rev. Dr. Kirkpatrick as well (again maintaining the confidentiality of the sources). The Rev. Dr. Kirkpatrick expressed his strong support for the review process and his thanks to all who participated in the review.

The committee concluded that the Rev. Dr. Kirkpatrick has fulfilled the responsibilities of the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly with competence, pastoral sensitivity, appropriate firmness and tact, a large measure of commonsense and uncommon wisdom, and with obvious Christian faith and conviction. The committee strongly affirms his job performance during his second, four-year term.

As provided for in Standing Rule G.1.c.(1)(f)(1), the Rev. Dr. Kirkpatrick sent a letter on December 19, 2003, to the committee declaring his sense of God's call to seek renomination for another term as Stated Clerk.

At its meeting on January 28–29, 2004, in Berkeley, California, the SCR/NC unanimously and enthusiastically declared its intention to nominate the Rev. Dr. Clifton Kirkpatrick at the 216th General Assembly (2004) to serve a third, four-year term as Stated Clerk of the General Assembly (Standing Rule G.1.c.(1)(f)(2)) and issued a press release to that effect.

Also at its January 2004 meeting, in accordance with G.1.c.(1)(f)(3), the committee established an application process for other potential candidates, who may want to stand for election for Stated Clerk. An application form was prepared and a press release regarding the application process was issued to notify the church at large. The prescribed 120-day deadline to submit applications was February 27, 2004. Three other persons have submitted applications. The Rev. Dr. Kirkpatrick's background information submitted during the end-of-term review was accepted as his "application."

The committee intends to review the applications, conduct preliminary screenings of the applicants, including contacting references and others as appropriate, and request the information and answers to questions prepared by the committee as called for in Standing Rule G.1.c.(1)(k). Such information and answers of the Rev. Dr. Kirkpatrick and any other person who previously submitted an application and formally declares to the committee his/her intention to be nominated for Stated Clerk by May 13, 2004, will be sent to the Office of the General Assembly for distribution to the commissioners and advisory delegates.

The committee plans to meet on March 22–23, 2004, in Charleston, South Carolina, to continue its work.

Committee Report and Rationale Part II

In Part I above, the Stated Clerk Review/Nomination Committee (SCR/NC) summarized its work regarding the end-of-term evaluation of the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly, the Reverend Dr. Clifton Kirkpatrick, and its recommendation to the 216th General Assembly (2004) to elect Rev. Dr. Kirkpatrick for a third term as Stated Clerk. This report reviews the committee's work regarding applications of others for the position of Stated Clerk and answers some questions commissioners may have relating to the Stated Clerk Review and Nomination process.

The SCR/NC did receive three applications for the position of Stated Clerk submitted to the committee by February 27, 2004, 120 days before the opening of the 216th General Assembly (2004) as required by Standing Rule (SR) G.1.c.(1)(h). After review of the applications and phone interviews with references, the committee found the applications in order at its meeting on March 22–23, 2004, in Charleston, South Carolina. The applicants have until May 13, 2004 (forty-five days before the opening of General Assembly), to formally declare to the committee their intention to be nominated for Stated Clerk (G.1.c.(1)(j)). The committee then requested from Rev. Dr. Kirkpatrick and from the three applicants the information called for in Standing Rule G.1.c.(1)(k)—background information and answer to committee questions—which will be submitted to the commissioners by the time of the convening of the General Assembly. The committee also reviewed time deadlines and General Assembly process details with the applicants and Rev. Dr. Kirkpatrick.

At its March 22–23, 2004, meeting, the SCR/NC affirmed its decision to nominate the Reverend Dr. Clifton Kirkpatrick for a third term as Stated Clerk.

The top ten questions (and answers) commissioners might have regarding the Stated Clerk review and nomination process and the SCR/NC's role in it are as follows. The standing rules referred to are from the current Standing Rules of the General Assembly and were approved by previous General Assemblies.

1. How were the members of the SCR/NC selected and elected?

The SCR/NC consists of nine members selected as specifically prescribed in Standing Rule G.1.c. Three members, including the moderator, are from the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA), nominated by COGA; one member is from the General Assembly Council (GAC), nominated by GAC; and five members at large—one governing body stated clerk and four past General Assembly commissioners—nominated by the General Assembly Nominating Committee. This slate was elected by the 215th General Assembly after opportunity for nominations from the floor for the at large positions.

2. In the end-of-term evaluation process, did the SCR/NC receive back directly the questionnaires it sent out and the comment letters it requested?

As part of the end-of-term review of the Stated Clerk, the committee prepared and sent out more than 300 questionnaires to specific individuals having firsthand knowledge of the work of the Stated Clerk. The committee also invited written comments from the church at large. All returned questionnaires and all written comments were received directly by the committee through its staff person, the Reverend Katherine Runyeon. The questionnaires were not sent to nor were they reviewed by staff of the Office of the General Assembly or anyone else.

3. Did the SCR/NC review and consider all the questionnaires returned and all the comment letters received?

The committee did read and consider all questionnaires that were returned (more than 160) and all letters that were received (approximately 190).

4. How did the SCR/NC make its decision to renominate the Reverend Dr. Clifton Kirkpatrick for another term as Stated Clerk?

Our decision was based on a thorough review of the functions of the Stated Clerk, how well Rev. Dr. Kirkpatrick was fulfilling those responsibilities as measured by evaluation by others and Rev. Dr. Kirkpatrick's self-evaluation, and our assessment of how well Rev. Dr. Kirkpatrick would continue to carry out the functions of the Stated Clerk for another term.

The responsibilities of the Stated Clerk are broad and varied—duties regarding the Constitution, General Assembly meetings, ecumenical relations (which includes serving as the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) representative on a variety of interchurch bodies), reporting the actions of the General Assembly, and administration (which includes serving as the chief executive officer of the Office of the General Assembly). As noted in our earlier report, we found widespread affirmation of Rev. Dr. Kirkpatrick's outstanding work in all these areas from our questionnaires received. The committee was very satisfied that Rev. Dr. Kirkpatrick would continue to very ably fulfill the duties of the Stated Clerk for another term.

5. What about the letters received by the committee that expressed concerns about how the Stated Clerk was carrying out his responsibilities?

As noted in our first report, we did receive some letters with negative comments and criticisms of Rev. Dr. Kirkpatrick's performance. We read them all. The committee acknowledges that some of the actions or inactions of the Stated Clerk raised concerns among some in the church, reflecting the variety of views held by members of the church around the country regarding several issues. However, the committee was satisfied that the criticisms communicated to us were based on what the committee viewed as a misunderstanding of the Stated Clerk's role and responsibility or represented genuine disagreement with what the vast majority of other responders thought was appropriate action of the Stated Clerk.

6. Can other persons apply to stand for Stated Clerk and how do they do so?

Yes, others could apply. They must have submitted an application to the committee no later than 120 days before the opening of the General Assembly—Standing Rule G.1.c.(1)(h). Then they were required to formally declare their intention to be nominated to the committee no later than forty-five days before the opening of the General Assembly—Standing Rule G.1.c.(1)(j).

7. Why did the SCR/NC announce its intention to renominate Rev. Dr. Kirkpatrick before applications of others were received?

The Standing Rules provide for a sequential order of actions—Standing Rule G.1.c.(1)(f). The Stated Clerk must declare his/her intention to be renominated no later than 180 days before the beginning of the General Assembly, which Rev. Dr. Kirkpatrick did. Then the SCR/NC must declare its intention as to whether it will nominate the incumbent no later than 150 before the opening of the General Assembly, which the committee did based on the reasoning stated in answer to Question #4. As noted above, other applicants have until 120 days before the opening of the General Assembly to submit their applications. In this situation, the SCR/NC receives any such applications and gathers required further information regarding the applicants for the commissioners' review, but the SCR/NC is not a search committee.

8. If not in the current situation, when would the SCR/NC act as a search committee on behalf of the General Assembly?

In the event Rev. Dr. Kirkpatrick had decided not to stand for renomination or the SCR/NC had decided not to nominate him, the SCR/NC would then proceed to conduct a search, including recruiting, receiving applications, screening, interviewing, and selecting a candidate to nominate for Stated Clerk—Standing Rule G.1.c.(1)(g).

9. Are there any rules or guidelines regarding campaigning for the position of the Stated Clerk?

Although there are Standing Rules relating to the expenditure of funds and other campaign activities in connection with the election of the Moderator (Standing Rule F.1.c.), there are currently no corresponding rules for Stated Clerk campaign practices. The committee will recommend to COGA that such campaign rules be added to the Standing Rules for future elections.

10. Regarding the election of the Stated Clerk, why are nominations made on Sunday afternoon (2nd day of the General Assembly), but the election is not held until Friday morning (next to the last day of the General Assembly)?

The Stated Clerk election procedures at the General Assembly are provided for in Standing Rule G.1.c.(2). Nominations are to take place within forty-eight hours of the convening of the General Assembly. If there are multiple candidates, the election is to take place as the first order of business on the next to the last day of the assembly's session.

Have a question that is not on the list? All of the SCR/NC members (listed below) will be at the General Assembly and available to answer commissioners' questions. In particular, some members of the committee will be at the Group Dinners on Sunday, June 27; Monday, June 28; and Thursday, July 1. You are welcome to come and speak with one of us.

It has been an honor and a privilege to serve the 215th and 216th General Assemblies (2003) and (2004) as the Stated Clerk Review/Nomination Committee.

The Stated Clerk Review/Nomination Committee consists of ministers Sandy Peirce, El Dorado Hills, Calif., chair; Thomas Are Jr., Prairie Village, Kans.; Karen Dimon, DeWitt, N.Y.; John Goodman, Elizabethtown, N.C.; and Charles Heyward, Charleston, S.C.; and elders Cynthia Joe, San Francisco, Calif., vice chair; Stephen Grace, Midland, Mich.; Suzanne Souder, Mechanicsburg, Pa.; and Kathy Walker, St. Petersburg, Fla. Staff to the committee is the Reverend Katherine Runyeon, stated clerk of the Presbytery of San Francisco.

Rationale

These recommendations are in response to the following referrals:

- Item 02-03. That the General Assembly Nominating Committee Bring to the General Assembly Any Request for Extensions to the Two-Term Limit (Minutes, 2003, Part I., p. 122).
- Item 02-09. That the General Assembly Nominating Committee, in Consultation with the Various General Assembly Entities ... Bring Recommendations to the 216th General Assembly (2004) for the Adjustment of Terms of a Limited Number of Current Members During the Conversion of Terms of Office (Minutes, 2003, Part I, p. 139).

The General Assembly Nominating Committee reconfigured the classes for persons currently serving on a General Assembly entity. This change was made necessary by the General Assembly's action to meet biennially in even-numbered years as well as to change terms of service in light of the shift to biennial assemblies.

Persons who are eligible for renomination to a second term are being renominated to the Class of 2006 or the Class of 2008. The names appear in the slate of nominees found in Item 00-02. The change to biennial assemblies means that some persons who are serving in the Class of 2005 and anticipated finishing their second term at the close of the 2005 General Assembly will now complete their service a year earlier—at the close of the 216th General Assembly (2004).

The General Assembly authorized the General Assembly Nominating Committee to make a limited number of exceptions when adjusting terms. In considering requests for exceptions, the General Assembly Nominating Committee took great care to ensure that the diversity of committees was not adversely affected by the transition. In many instances the exceptions or extension of terms take into consideration the need to maintain balanced diversity on the entity.

In proposing extensions of term and reassignment of class of classes, the General Assembly Nominating Committee considered a number of factors including diversity and balance issues, implication to future classes, need to maintain a historical sense on an entity, etc. In addition, the General Assembly Nominating Committee, through the reassignment process, ensured that classes for all entities are converted to even-numbered years.

Rationale

The Book of Order (G-13.0111) mandates the following for the General Assembly Nominating Committee:

... Consideration shall be given to the nomination of equal numbers of ministers (both women and men), laymen, and laywomen. The committee shall consist of members equal in number to the synods of the church, each member resident in a different synod, and members distributed so that there are one third ministers (both women and men), one third laymen, and one third laywomen. ... Within thirty days prior to the regular meeting of the General Assembly, the Moderator of the preceding General Assembly shall nominate persons for election by the General Assembly to fill the vacancies occurring at the adjournment of the ensuing General Assembly. ...

There are seven vacancies on the General Assembly Nominating Committee. The Moderator has consulted with each of the synods where a vacancy exists. Each of the persons nominated has been highly recommended by one or more person in her or his synod. This slate of nominees represents the greater diversity of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) as mandated by G-4.0403 in the Book of Order. Elmore filled a one-year vacancy and is eligible for renomination.

If this slate is elected, the full membership of the General Assembly Nominating Committee will consist of

5 laymen

5 ministers of the Word and Sacrament

The racial ethnic breakdown will be:

1 Asian American

1 African American

1 Hispanic

1 Native American

12 Caucasian

The membership of the General Assembly Nominating Committee will include two young adults (26–35 years of age) and one member with a disability.

A short descriptive paragraph for each nominee is included below.

Biographical Information:

David Bennett—David is a Presbyterian minister. He is a new pastor who is serving the Presbyterian Church of Ballston Spa in Ballston Spa, New York. During his studies at seminary, David served as an elder at Fort Square Presbyterian Church in Quincy, Massachusetts. He represented Gordon-Conwell Theological Seminary as a theological student advisory delegate in 2001. Bennett's commitment to Jesus Christ takes on its fullest expression within his family and community, yet he feels called to serve beyond the local level. David believes his gifts of discernment and shepherding will benefit the larger church as he serves at the General Assembly level. David and his wife have one daughter.

William Gregory Elmore Sr.—Greg is an elder and a member of Briarwood Presbyterian Church in Jackson, Mississippi. He has served as moderator of presbytery council and the committee on ministry. He now serves on the committee for preparation of ministry and as elder commissioner to the Synod of The Living Waters. As a member of the Presbyterian Ministry Partnership Committee, he was the liaison to the Mississippi Campus Ministry Board, and was recently nominated as synod stewardship coordinator. He is currently a member of the General Assembly Nominating Committee and is completing a one-year vacancy in the Class of 2004. Greg has two children, Eleanor and William.

Richard Kampa—Dick is an elder serving the third and final year of his term on session at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church in Tucson, Arizona. One of his main interests is in outreach ministries and he leads the active Mission Committee of ten with a woman co-elder. Dick's faith in Christ was solidified while living and working for Motorola in Peru and Ecuador where he completed a thirty-five-year career as a general manager of new ventures. He is married and has four children and ten grandchildren.

James M. Madson—Jim is an elder member of the First Presbyterian Church of Kirkwood, Missouri, where he is clerk of session and serves on the staff as a volunteer director of new programs. Dr. Madson has served the church in a number of capacities having been a commissioner to three meetings of the General Assembly, moderator of his presbytery, and chair of the presbytery committee on ministry and nominating committee. He currently serves as vice chair of the Board of Directors of the Church Development Corporation of the Synod of Mid-America. Dr. Madson retired in 1997 from the McDonnell Douglas Corporation after serving for twenty-nine years as a scientist and engineering manager.

Janet Schlenker—Janet is the chief ecclesiastical and administrative officer of the Presbytery of Denver. She has served as stated clerk since 1994 and she relates directly to all clerks of session as well as to higher governing bodies on behalf of the presbytery. Schlenker serves as staff resource for the committee on ministry and presbytery council, overseeing risk management policies and procedures of the presbytery and managing judicial process should it occur. Her responsibilities cover a broad range of other activities. She has served the larger church at every governing body level, including moderator of the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission.

Elona Street-Stewart—Elona is program staff in the Synod of Lakes and Prairies for Racial Ethnic Ministry and Community Empowerment. In addition since 1980, she has served on a variety of General Assembly and middle governing committees addressing racial justice, women's concerns, mission priorities, and leadership for small church, urban, and reservation ministries, including chair of council on church and race and Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns. She is very active in public service and was elected to the St Paul School Board in 2001, and currently is vice chair. She and husband, the Reverend David Stewart, have four children and one grandchild.

Laura VanDale—Laura is an elder in the Lakewood Presbyterian Church in Lakewood, Ohio, and currently serving on session. She is a woman of deep faith and a lifelong Presbyterian. VanDale is the daughter of a Presbyterian minister and a parish nurse. She has served, with her husband, as a mission co-worker in Ethiopia. Laura has served as a youth director in several Presbyterian congregations. She chairs the mission committee at her church and is a frequent commissioner to presbytery. Laura served as a commissioner to the 215th General Assembly (2003).

Item 01-02

[The assembly approved Item 01-02 with amendment (removal of C.1., F.12, F.13). See p. 4.]

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) approve the plenary consent agenda, consisting of the referrals in progress and the final responses to referrals, as follows:

REFERRALS IN PROGRESS

ADVISORY COMMITTEE ON SOCIAL WITNESS POLICY

*A. 1996 Referral: 36.636. Response to Recommendation That ACSWP Monitor the Implementation and Consequences of the Recent International Agreements and Mechanisms for Expanding World Trade (Minutes, 1996, Part I, pp. 114, 542).	Periodic progress; 214th GA 2002 215th GA 2003 216th GA 2004 217th GA 2006
B. 1999 Referral: 25.038. Response to Recommendation Directing ACSWP, Consulting with Appropriate Agencies, to Develop Comprehensive Disabilities Policy, and Report It to the 217th General Assembly (2005) (Minutes, 1999, Part I, pp. 41, 308).	217th GA 2006
*C. 1999 Referral: 25.039. Response to Recommendation Directing ACSWP, Consulting with Appropriate Agencies, to Develop a Comprehensive Serious Mental Illness Policy, and Report to the 217th General Assembly (2005) (Minutes, 1999, Part I, pp. 42, 309).	217th GA 2005 217th GA 2006 218th GA 2008
*D. Overture 99-17. Response to Recommendation on Affirming the Equality of Women and Men (Minutes, 1999, Part I, pp. 80, 591).	214th GA 2002 216th GA 2004 217th GA 2006
E. 2000 Referral: 25.087. D. Monitoring Report on the Implementation of General Assembly Policy on Abortion, Recommendation 6.a., That the 212th General Assembly (2000) Direct the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy to Develop a Monitoring Report on the Implementation of the Problem Pregnancies and Abortion Policies Every Five Years, Beginning in 2005, and Report to the Appropriate General Assemblies—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 2000, Part I, pp. 34, 265).	217th GA 2006
*F. 2001 Referral: 25.110. Response to Recommendation Directing ACSWP to Instruct Its Task Forces on Disabilities and Mental Illness to Include Dimensions of Domestic Violence in Their Respective Work (Minutes, 2001, Part I, pp. 61, 239).	217th GA 2006 218th GA 2008
G. 2001 Referral: 25.172. Response to Recommendation Calling the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy to Monitor the Implementations of this Policy on Domestic Violence Periodically with a Final Report to the 219th GA (Minutes, 2001, Part I, pp. 61, 243).	218th GA 2008
*H. 2002 Referral: Item 12-06. Overture 02-57. On Revising the Denominational Policy on the Issue of Energy—Susquehanna Valley (Minutes, 2002, Part I, pp. 72, 596).	216th GA 2004 217th GA 2006
I. 2003 Referral: 07-01(F.12). Call Upon ACSWP to Monitor the Actions Listed Above and Report to the 217th GA (2006) (Minutes, 2003, p. 56, 441).	217th GA 2006
J. 2003 Referral: 11-13. Commissioners' Resolution 03-09. On Calling to Prayer and Action—SARS Epidemic and Taiwan (Minutes, 2003, p. 40, 631).	217th GA 2006

*A. The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy previously made available for churchwide study two papers examining trade and globalization issues: “The Globalization of Life: Challenge to the Church” (PDS 68-600-01-002); “The Employment Effects of Free Trade and Globalization” (PDS 68-600-01-003). Two further papers are now available for churchwide study: “Globalization and the Environment” (PDS 68-600-03-004); and “Globalization and Culture” (PDS 68-600-03-003). Due to workload and staff limitations, the anticipated resolution on trade and globalization for this year’s assembly is now anticipated for the 217th General Assembly (2006).

*C. The prospectus for the task force was distributed to the presbyteries and congregations and a task force has been appointed. Due to committee workload and staff limitations, the ACSWP recommends an extension of this work with anticipated response to the 218th General Assembly (2008).

*D. The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy has been pursuing this referral on a number of fronts, some of which have been completed in prior years as well as in this year’s proposed policy statement on “Transforming Families.” Still outstanding is work on pay equity issues, for which the ACSWP recommends an extension of this work with anticipated response to the 217th General Assembly (2006).

*H. The ACSWP appointed a work group to update the policy on energy and due to committee workload and staff limitations recommends the extension of this work with an anticipated final report to the 217th General Assembly (2006).

*A. The 213th General Assembly (2001) approved “Renewing the Commitment: A Churchwide Mission Strategy for Ministry in Higher Education” by the PC(USA) and requested an annual report to the General Assembly regarding the implementation of the Strategy. The programmatic recommendations and their stages of implementation are as follows.

1. Establishment of Campus Ministry Internship Program by 2003–04 Academic Year

The pilot project in the Synod of the Mid-Atlantic developed one internship program at a PC(USA) related college. The evaluation of this effort proved very positive. Three other proposed sites failed to develop due to an unsatisfactory pool of intern applicants and/or inability on the part of the local campus based ministry to develop funds sufficient to support the project. The effort is ongoing for that initial synod. A second synod has been focused on implementing the internship program through congregation based ministries and appears more possible in this context.

2. Funds Development Process

The funds development process in an initial step is working with the Synod of the Sun to create a partnership. This partnership of the synod, its presbyteries and local churches with Higher Education/Student Ministries is developing a plan to increase financial support for synod-related, campus-based ministries. It is expected that this model may be replicated in other synods of the church. It is anticipated that other models will also be developed.

3. Electronic Based Process for PC(USA) Constituents to Connect with Higher Education Ministries

Data gathering among seven denominations is completed and the directory came online during the fall of 2003. Concurrent with this process a “Higher Education Ministry Catalog” was published and made available through compact disks and the denomination’s Web site. Its contents include a directory of all PC(USA) related collegiate ministries (campus and church based); information on scholarship assistance; contact information on all of our church-related colleges/universities; information on how churches can minister to college student from their churches and in their communities and information on program units of the GAC that relate to young adults.

4. Leadership Development of Collegiate Ministry Staff and Students

In the week prior to the 216th General Assembly (2004), a conference was held in Richmond, Virginia, that had excellent representation from campus- and church-based collegiate ministry staff, chaplains from PC(USA) related colleges and universities, students and members of presbyteries and synods with responsibilities for the accountability and oversight of collegiate ministries within their bounds. Emerging from this conference is the establishment of an as yet untitled association or partnership of staff, students and advocates of PC(USA) higher education ministry. This organization may well be modeled after the influential Association of Presbyterian Church Educators with similar goals of professional development, advocacy and interpretation to the denomination of the mission of ministry in higher education.

5. Continuation and Expansion of the Presbyterian Student Strategy Team

The Strategy Team has taken on the planning of annual student leadership conferences encouraging the establishment and liaison with “affinity groups” including racial/ethnic students and partnerships with the National Network of Presbyterian College Women. The team has identified and set up a communications network with the Korean-American Student Empowerment organization and among Hispanic students related to the PC(USA) and will coordinate with the above mentioned staff task group focusing on ministry with African American college students.

*B. Funding has been made available through the office of the Native American Congregational Enhancement Office. The consultation is scheduled for 2005 and a final report will be forwarded to the 217th General Assembly (2006).

*D. Work is progressing on the Native American Comprehensive Statistical Report, however additional time is needed for the completion of this report and for review by the Native American Consulting Committee. The final report will be forwarded to the 217th General Assembly (2006).

*E. Progress report mandated by assembly. Unfortunately, the denomination continues to show a net loss of members, but groundwork is being laid that will put us in the position for positive growth. Here are some of the things being done to address the losses:

The Vision for Church Growth for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and the Racial Ethnic/Immigrant Evangelism and Church Growth Strategy are foundational to the work of the National Ministries Division, especially in the areas of Evangelism and Church Development and Racial Ethnic Ministries.

01 ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON BUSINESS REFERRALS

Training for presbytery leadership in new church development (NCD) has increased from six presbyteries with 50+ participants to fifty-five presbyteries with 150 participants. The NCD coaches have been trained and are working with NCDs and presbyteries. The 2003 annual NCD conference attracted 480.

The annual Congregational Transformation Conference brought 600 participants for training. A new training process for presbytery teams was developed and used three times in 2003 with more scheduled in 2004.

Support for immigrant pastors, fellowships, and churches are increasing. Especially noteworthy is the work being done among Brazilian immigrants. There is an increase in the number of racial ethnic fellowships and churches. The Racial Ethnic/Immigrant Evangelism and Church Growth Strategy has been reviewed and updated. The racial ethnic caucuses are developing goals and plans to support an increase in racial ethnic churches and membership.

Commitment to developing a multicultural church is growing. Two hundred seventy-five attended the fourth multicultural conference in April 2003. Future conferences and training events are being planned cooperatively with presbyteries and synods. There is growing interest in multicultural ministry among the seminaries.

We continue to work ecumenically to provide evangelism resources. An evangelism training event for middle governing bodies was held in January 2003.

Mission Program Grants support new church, congregational transformation and specialized ministries. After some decrease following September 11, 2001, presbyteries are expressing renewed interest in these efforts. During 2003, sixty-one applications for General Assembly matching grants were received. Sixty percent of the grants are being made for racial ethnic/immigrant projects.

Rural, small church, and urban ministries are identifying and responding to specialized needs in these areas. "We Are What We Eat," the General Assembly paper on support for family farmers is widely used. A revision of "New Times New Call," pastoral options for small churches has been produced, along with an update of the commissioned lay pastor manual. The 2003 Rural Ministry Conference at Dubuque Seminary focused on multiculturalism in rural ministry.

A new PCUSA media campaign titled, "Here and Now," designed for unchurched adults between the ages of 25-49 has been developed and test marketed. Materials in print, radio, and TV formats will be available by the 216th General Assembly (2004).

We are putting much energy and enthusiasm into "The Mission Initiative: Joining Hearts and Hands." Funds and pledges are being received from major donors and partnership campaigns are being conducted in a few presbyteries. The goal is to raise $20,000,000 for new church development and congregational transformation, with emphasis on racial ethnic/immigrant growth.

Response to Recommendation Create a Taskforce to Examine the Racial Justice Policies/Programs of BOP, Foundation, PILP, and PPC in Relation to the Racial Ethnic Members of the PC(USA); Report Its Findings and Recommendations to the 215th General Assembly (2003) (Minutes, 2001, Part I, pp. 58, 333).*

Response: For response to this referral, see Item 07-08, “Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) Task Force to Examine GA Entities: Report on Creating a Climate for Change Within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).”

2. 2003 Referral: Item 07-01. Recommendation F.6. Urging ACREC and ACWC to Work to Ensure That For-Profit Prisons Are Held Accountable to All Existing Laws Relating to Prisons and Protections of Prisoners; Failure to Show Accountability Meaning Termination of Contracts—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 2003, Part I, p. 440).

Response: The growth of the for-profit prison industry is having a significant and highly destructive impact on communities of color. Civil rights organizations and other advocacy groups have documented a direct correlation between the decline in funding for public education at all levels and increasing funding for prisons. Coupled with higher incarceration rates for people of color, the impact on low income and minority communities is severe. For example:

A study of the state of Mississippi found the following:

- There are almost twice as many African American men in Mississippi in prison (13,837) as in colleges and universities (7,330). The state spends more per year to incarcerate an inmate ($10,672) than to send them to college ($6,871).
- Rather than invest in education for the rural workforce and positive economic development for poor communities, the state is undertaking a backwards approach to budgeting in which they spend a great deal of taxpayer money on corrections and then shop for the inmates to validate these expenditures after the fact. Sixty-seven percent of those incarcerated in Mississippi prisons are nonviolent offenders. [Education v. Incarceration: A Mississippi Case Study, was released today at a news conference on the steps of the capitol by Grassroots Leadership, a nonprofit that for twenty-two years has been dedicated to community organizing in the South.]

Similar studies in California and New York have reached the same conclusions. Poor, working-class, and mostly minority communities—especially the African American community—have been hardest hit by the “War on Crime,” especially its “War on Drugs” front, even though there is no evidence that people in those communities commit more than their share of crime. Nationally, one out of three African American youths and men between the ages of 20 and 29 are under some form of criminal justice supervision on any given day.

The Colorado Legislative Council found that while people of color are a 21 percent minority in Colorado, they comprise 57 percent of Colorado's prison population—but only 18.6 percent of the entering students at the state's four-year colleges. African Americans are ten times more likely than whites to be incarcerated in Colorado, and Latinos/as are four times more likely than Anglos.

Since 1970, the number of men and women behind bars has grown by 500 percent, while the cost of corrections has grown by about 1,500 percent. In almost every state, prisons are replacing schools, homeless shelters, hospitals, and drug rehab programs in response to poverty and joblessness in rural and urban communities.

C. *Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC) Final Responses to Referrals

1. 2002 Referral: Item 13-08. Overture 02-52. On Pastoral Resources for Women Who Have Experienced Abortion—From the Presbytery of Donegal (Minutes, 2002, Part I, pp. 70, 654).

[The assembly approved this response to referral. See pp. 38, 850.]

Response: After reviewing available materials and in keeping with current PC(USA) policy and in consultation with other PC(USA) entities as well as the broader religious community, this resource has been written and will be available after June 15, 2004.

2. 2002 Referral: Item 11-01, Report: We Are What We Eat, Recommendation F., Direct the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns and Request Presbyterian Women to Identify Food Production/Consumption Issues as a Priority in Their Mission and Education Program—From the General Assembly Council (Minutes, 2002, Part I, pp. 23, 535).

Response: The ACWC is not a programmatic entity; however, ACWC has requested that the Office of Women's Advocacy fulfill this request. That office will do so in planning specific workshops and conferences, i.e., Women's Advocacy Conference and Economic Justice for Women Conference, and by producing resources and Action Alerts.

3. 2003 Referral: Item 04-01. Report, Clergywomen's Experience in Ministry: Realities and Challenges, Recommendation 10. That the General Assembly Instruct the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC) to Provide a Forum at Future General Assemblies for Clergywomen to Comment on Issues Raised in the 2002 ACWC Survey and Offer Continuing Feedback to the Church—From the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 62, 293).

Response: The ACWC has scheduled such a consultation to be held at the 216th General Assembly (2004) and will continue to provide means for regular collection and consideration of feedback.

D. *Board of Pensions Final Response to Referral

2002 Referral: Alternate Response to Item 15-03. Request the Board of Pensions to Study and Report to the 215th General Assembly (2003) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) a Recommended Design and Funding Source for an Adoption Assistance Program to Cover Compensation for Adoption Expenses for All Eligible Members of the Benefits Plan of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) (Minutes, 2002, Part I, pp.19, 742).

Response: Consistent with the view of the overture, the Board of Pensions supports the establishment of an adoption assistance program for Plan members, which should be sufficiently generous to approach the cost normally associated with childbirth that is covered under the Medical Plan.

The cost associated with childbirth under the Medical Plan has averaged $7,000 for the past three years. The expenses normally associated with adoption range from a few hundred dollars (in state-sponsored plans) to tens of thousands of dollars for private adoptions.

Federal income tax credits in amounts as high as $10,000 are available to taxpayers who adopt. Also, additional resources may be available from the spouse's employer because many other employers have adoption assistance benefits for employees.

The Board of Pensions would be willing to adopt and administer a program when and if adequate funding becomes available. The adoption expenses contemplated by this program cannot be reimbursed by a medical plan. Since no existing revenues to the Board of Pensions are currently available to provide this funding, the Board of Pensions is willing to commit to adding an adoption assistance program to its list of funds development opportunities.

The design of the Board of Pensions' program will depend on the funds developed to support it. The Assistance Program Shared Grants are currently available for adoptions based on financial needs.

E. Committee on the Office of the General Assembly Final Responses to Referrals

1. 2003 Referral: Item 03-17. Commissioners' Resolution 03-5: On Reviewing the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission and Remedial Case 215-12: Session of Westminster Presbyterian Church, Canton, Ohio, v. Moderator of the 214th General Assembly (2002), Fahed Abu-Akel, Et Al. (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 70, 246-47).

Response: In the remedial case filed against the Moderator (and others) in connection with the call for a special meeting of General Assembly (Westminster case), the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission found that it had jurisdiction over the Moderator, specifically the "Office of the Moderator," as an "entity of the General Assembly" for purposes of Book of Order, D-2,0202 and D-6.0202b. See the decision in the case (Remedial Case 215-12) in the Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 283-86.

The 215th General Assembly (2003) approved Item 03-17, Commissioners' Resolution 03-5 (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 70, 246-47; for text of the commissioners' resolution, see Attachment A below) directing COGA to review this portion of the decision in light of relevant provisions in the Book of Order, Standing Rules, and Robert's Rules of Order, and to bring any recommendations back to the 216th General Assembly (2004) to clarify the role and accountability of the Moderator.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA), as directed by the 215th General Assembly (2003) in Item 03-17 (Commissioners' Resolution 03-5), has reviewed the interim order in Remedial Case 215-12 (Westminster case) together with the relevant provisions of Book of Order, Standing Rules of the General Assembly, and Robert's Rules of Order. To clarify the role of the Moderator, COGA sends the following communication to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC) for its review and any recommendations the ACC may make to the 216th General Assembly (2004), per G-13.0112 c and d.

Communication to ACC: Since the Moderator is an elected officer of the General Assembly (G-9.0200 and Standing Rule F.2) and is accountable to the General Assembly and subject to its discipline, neither the Moderator nor "the Office of the Moderator" is an "entity of the General Assembly" as that term is used in connection with remedial cases in D-2.0202 and D-6.0000 and following. There is no provision in the Book of Order for bringing a remedial complaint against an individual member or officer of a governing body. Section D-6.0202 is specific about against whom a remedial case complaint may be filed. The Moderator of the General Assembly is an officer of the General Assembly, not an entity of the General Assembly.

Rationale

A moderator of a governing body is elected from its members. The moderator is an elected officer of that body and accountable to it. He or she can be censured or even removed from office by the body (Robert's Rules of Order, Section 61). Thus, the Moderator of the General Assembly is an elected officer of that body and responsible to it during his or her term (G-9.0202). The Moderator's responsibilities and functions come from the General Assembly and he or she is accountable to the General Assembly for carrying out those duties (Standing Rule F.2.). The Moderator or the Office of Moderator (a term used in the Westminster case decision) has no independent role apart from that derived from the General Assembly itself. He or she is answerable directly to the General Assembly and subject to its discipline.

Remedial cases in the Rules of Discipline are brought to correct an irregularity or a delinquency of a lower governing body, the General Assembly Council (GAC), or an entity of the General Assembly (D-2.0202). A remedial case against an entity of the General Assembly is intended to correct the collective action or inaction of that body itself. In every use of the word “entity” in the Book of Order, it refers to some organized body and not an individual or officer. No judicial precedent except the Westminster case applies the word “entity” to an individual.

Note: To confirm the accountability of the Moderator and Vice-Moderator of the General Assembly, and the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly and the General Assembly Council’s role assistance in ensuring that accountability, revised Standing Rule F. (Moderator of the General Assembly), includes a section calling for the submission and review of a written report by the Moderator and Vice Moderator to GAC and COGA at each of their stated meetings (F.6).

Attachment A

Commissioners’ Resolution 03-5. On Reviewing the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission and Remedial Case 215-12: Session of Westminster Presbyterian Church, Canton, Ohio v. Moderator of the 214th General Assembly (2002), Fahed Abu-Akel, Et Al.

That the 215th General Assembly (2003) direct the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly to do the following:

1. Review the interim order of the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission in Remedial Case 215-12: Session of Westminster Presbyterian Church, Canton, Ohio v. Moderator of the 214th General Assembly (2002), Fahed Abu-Akel, et al, in light of the role of the Moderator as described in the Standing Rules of the General Assembly, Standing Rule F., the role of the moderator as described in Robert’s Rules of Order (G-9.0302), and the role of the Moderator as described in G-9.0202.
2. Compare the role and responsibilities in those sections with the concept of “entity” as described in D-6.0202b
3. Bring recommendations to the 216th General Assembly (2004) necessary to clarify the current confusion surrounding the role and accountability of the Moderator to the electing body.

Rationale

In Remedial Case 215-12: Session of Westminster Presbyterian Church, Canton, Ohio v. Moderator of the 214th General Assembly (2002), Fahed Abu-Akel, et al (Westminster), the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission found that it had jurisdiction over the Office of the Moderator when, “the Moderator is acting in a representative capacity ... insofar as the Moderator is exercising [the] particular duty [to call a special meeting of the 214th General Assembly (2002)] in his or her representative capacity, the Office of the Moderator is ‘an entity of the General Assembly’ over which this Commission has jurisdiction. (See D-6.0202b; D-2.0202) . . . .” (See 03-Info, p. 30.)

Virtually any act undertaken by a Moderator, outside of actually moderating a meeting, would be undertaken in a representative capacity, i.e. appointing persons to committees, serving ex officio on committees or commissions, responding to correspondence to the governing body.

The decision in Westminster does not on its face limit itself to the Moderator of the General Assembly, and thus implicitly applies to jurisdiction over the moderators of the middle governing bodies.

Such assumption of jurisdiction gives vocal minorities the means to effectively frustrate the clear intention of the majority contrary to G-4.0301e.

Previous to the Westminster decision, there had always existed a virtually universal understanding that the electing body had the authority and responsibility to “discipline” its moderator for dereliction of duty or office.

Dr. Arnold Lovell, in his article in the Presbyterian Outlook (May 2003) noted our rich uniquely Presbyterian role for our moderators:

In referencing the role of the moderator, the structure of our Form of Government and our polity as a whole are derivative from our theology and confessions and insistent upon order. It is thus intentional that the structure our polity follows that only ordained presbyters may serve as moderators...with the varied role in each governing body explained in the chapters on the Session, Presbytery, Synod, and General Assembly.

All moderators, by virtue of their ordination to office, are subject to the jurisdiction of their ordaining bodies for offenses (D-2.0203b). In our system we assign discipline for offenses to permanent judicial commissions (D-3.0101). For dereliction in duties, it is the governing body itself that is represented and thus empowered.

R. Rhodes Stipp—Presbytery of South Louisiana
Sherry Joyce—Presbytery of Arkansas

2. 2001 Referral: Comment on Commissioners' Resolution 01-17. Encourage the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly to Create a Process in Which Overture Consultation May Take Place in an Easier and More Constructive Manner (Minutes, 2001, Part I, p. 22).

Response: The consultation process for overtures was added to the Standing Rules by the 212th General Assembly (2000). Since that time, 161 overtures have been received from synods and presbyteries to three General Assemblies. Consultations have taken place between middle governing bodies and the national church with all of the overtures. As of this date, there has been no reason to refer an overture to a future session of the General Assembly because of lack of consultation. Further, consultation has resulted in the correction to statement of facts, the accurate identity of responsible agencies, and use of more appropriate wording in the writing of overtures. It is the opinion of the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly that the consultation process is working well and further simplification is not needed.

1. 2003 Referral: Item 07-05. Overture 03-28. On Concurring with the "Action for Wellness and Healing for Our Present and Future Generations of Saint Lawrence Island Yupik People"—From the Presbytery of Yukon (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 59, 500–502).

Response: The Office of the Stated Clerk, with cooperation from the Presbyterian Peacemaking Program of the Congregational Ministries Division, the Social Justice Program and the Washington Office of the National Ministries Division, communicated to the secretary of defense urging him to apologize in writing to the people of Saint Lawrence Island for the damage and suffering caused by the military occupation and to hold the military accountable for the responsible and complete cleanup of the formerly used military sites on Saint Lawrence Island. The Peacemaking Program developed Web-based education and advocacy resources addressing environmental consequences of militarism that included materials related to the situation on Saint Lawrence Island.

2. 2003 Referral: Item 07-06. Commissioners' Resolution 03-30, Recommendation 1, to Urge the U.S. Government to Provide Resources for the Decontamination of the Land That Was Used By the U.S. Navy in Bombing Target Practice in Order to Ensure Safe Future Development of That Land (Minutes, 2003, pp. 59, 502–3).

Response: The Office of the Stated Clerk, with cooperation from the Presbyterian Peacemaking Program of the Congregational Ministries Division, the Social Justice Program and the Washington Office of the National Ministries Division, communicated to the president of the United States and the secretary of defense urging them to provide resources for the decontamination of the land that was used by the U.S. Navy in bombing target practice in order to ensure safe future development of that land; sent a letter to the attorney general of the United States asking for freedom for the two persons remaining in prison for civil disobedience; and developed Web-based education and advocacy resources addressing the environmental consequences of militarism including materials related to the situation on Vieques.

3. 2003 Referral: Item 11-03. Resolution on Africa, Recommendation E.1.f. That the General Assembly Direct the General Assembly Council, Through Congregational Ministries Division and Worldwide Ministries Division, to Seek Funding for and Create Companion Resources to the Hope for a Global Future: Towards Just and Sustainable Human Development Policy Statement as It Focuses on Development in Africa—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 38, 591).

Response: The Congregational Ministries Division, through the Presbyterian Peacemaking Program and in cooperation with the Worldwide Ministries Division, created a companion resource to Hope for a Global Future: Towards Just and Sustainable Human Development that focuses specifically on sustainable development in Africa.

4. 2003 Referral: Item 11-03. Resolution on Africa. Recommendation E.7.c. That the General Assembly Direct the Stated Clerk and Appropriate Entities of the General Assembly Council to Urge the U.S. Government to Support by Every Means the Restriction of the Arms Trade; Particular Emphasis Should Be Placed on the Prolif- eration of Small Arms—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 38, 593).

Response: The Office of the Stated Clerk, with cooperation from the Presbyterian Peacemaking Program of the Congregational Ministries Division, the Social Justice Program and the Washington Office of the National Ministries Division and the Africa Offices of the Worldwide Ministries Division, urged the U.S government to support the restriction of the arms trade, especially the proliferation of small arms. The Presbyterian Peacemaking Program developed Web-based educational and advocacy materials and Trembling Like Leaves in the Wind, a study guide on the Resolution on Global Security approved by the 214th General Assembly (2002) addressing international arms trade and small arms proliferation.

5. 2003 Referral: Item 11-03. Resolution on Africa. Recommendation E.7.d. That the General Assembly Direct the Stated Clerk and Appropriate Entities of the General Assembly Council to Urge the U.S. Government to Ratify the Land Mines Treaty—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 38, 593).

Response: The Office of the Stated Clerk, with cooperation from the Presbyterian Peacemaking Program of the Congregational Ministries Division, the Social Justice Program and the Washington Office of the National Ministries Division and the Africa Offices and Presbyterian Disaster Assistance of the Worldwide Ministries Division, urged the U.S government to ratify the Land Mines Treaty. The Presbyterian Peacemaking Program developed On Their Behalf—A Call to Presbyterians on Immediate Action on Landmines, a resource for education and advocacy that encourages Presbyterians to advocate for the ratification of the International Treaty to Ban Land Mines and to support efforts to clear land left uninhabitable by mines. Presbyterian Disaster Assistance provides support to landmine clearing efforts in Africa.

6. 2003 Referral: Item 11-03. Resolution on Africa. Recommendation E.7.e. That the General Assembly Direct the Stated Clerk and Appropriate Entities of the General Assembly Council to Urge the U.S. Government to Ensure That No Oil, Diamonds, or Other Natural Resources and Commodities Are Used to Fund Conflicts Around Africa and the World, and Also to Ensure That Such Items and Commodities so Used Are Prohibited from Entering U.S. Markets—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 38, 593).

Response: The Office of the Stated Clerk—with cooperation from the Presbyterian Peacemaking Program of the Congregational Ministries Division; the Social Justice Program, Mission Responsibility Through Investment, and Washington Office of the National Ministries Division; and the Africa Offices of the Worldwide Ministries Division—urged the U.S government to ensure that no oil, diamonds, or other natural resources and commodities are used to fund conflicts around Africa and the world, and also to ensure that such items and commodities so used are prohibited from entering the United States. The Presbyterian Peacemaking Program highlighted these concerns in Web-based resources for education and advocacy.

7. 2003 Referral: Item 12-01. Resolution on Israel and Palestine: End the Occupation Now, Recommendation C. That the General Assembly Urge the United Nations to Deploy an International Peacekeeping Force, in Order to Restore Calm in the Occupied Territories, While Resuming Peace Negotiations May Be Vigorously Pursued—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 15–16, 636).

Response: The Office of the General Assembly—with cooperation from the Presbyterian Peacemaking Program United Nations Office of the Congregational Ministries Division, the Social Justice Program and Washington Office of the National Ministries Division, and the Middle East Office of the Worldwide Ministries Division—urged the United Nations to deploy a multinational peacekeeping force as appropriate in order to restore calm in the occupied territories. This was accomplished through PC(USA) representation at the United Nations on the Nongovernmental Working Group on Israel Palestine. The Middle East Office convened a cross-divisional team representing many offices of the General Assembly Council that considers strategies for ongoing education and advocacy efforts related to peacemaking in the Middle East. The Presbyterian Washington Office regularly monitored the situation, regularly informing its Issue Network on the Middle East about developments in the region and opportunities for advocacy.

8. 2003 Referral: Item 12-01. Resolution on Israel and Palestine: End the Occupation Now, Recommendation H. That the General Assembly Urge the United States to Take Seriously Its Leadership Role to Begin a Peace Initiative That Will End Israel's Occupation of the West Bank, Gaza, and East Jerusalem and Fulfill the Stated Goal of a Two-state Settlement Based on the Pre-1967 Boundaries as Directed by UNSC 242—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 15–16, 637).

Response: The Office of the General Assembly, with cooperation from the Presbyterian Peacemaking Program United Nations Office of the Congregational Ministries Division, the Social Justice Program and Washington Office of the National Ministries Division, and the Middle East Office of the Worldwide Ministries Division, urged the U.S. government to take seriously its leadership role to begin a peace initiative that will end Israel's occupation of the West Bank, Gaza, and East Jerusalem and fulfill the goal of a two-state settlement based on the pre-1967 boundaries as directed by UNSC resolutions 242 and 338. This effort was facilitated in partnership with national and international ecumenical groups working for a just peace in the Middle East, including the World Council of Churches, the Middle East Council of Churches, the Churches for Middle East Peace, and the United Nations Non-Governmental Working Group on Israel-Palestine. It also included creating opportunities for Presbyterians to financially support the World Council of Churches campaign to end the occupation.

9. 2003 Referral: Item 12-01. Resolution on Israel and Palestine: End the Occupation Now, Recommendation I. That the General Assembly Urge the United States Government to Demonstrate Its Seriousness About Being the Sponsor of the Middle East Peace Process and the Creation of a Viable Palestinian State "Within Three Years" by Doing Items 1. –5. —From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 15–16, 637).

Response: The Office of the General Assembly, with cooperation from the Presbyterian Peacemaking Program United Nations Office of the Congregational Ministries Division, the Social Justice Program and Washington Office of the National Ministries Division, and the Middle East Office of the Worldwide Ministries Division, urged the United States government to demonstrate its seriousness about being the sponsor of the Middle East Peace Process and the creation of a viable Palestinian state within three years. This effort was done through education and advocacy in partnership with ecumenical and nongovernmental organizations including the World Council of Churches, the Middle East Council of Churches, the Churches for Middle East Peace, and the United Nations Non-Governmental Working Group on Israel-Palestine.

10. 2003 Referral: Item 12-01. Resolution on Israel and Palestine: End the Occupation Now, Recommendation J. That the General Assembly Call Upon the U.S. Government and the United Nations to Work Closely with Both the Israeli Government and Palestine Leadership to Establish Mechanisms for Examining Their Own Respective Applications of the Principles of Participatory Democracy, Decent Governance, and Respect for Human Rights—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 15–16, 637).

Response: The Office of the General Assembly, with cooperation from the Presbyterian Peacemaking Program United Nations Office of the Congregational Ministries Division, the Social Justice Program and Washington Office of the National Ministries Division, the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy of the Executive Director's Office, and the Middle East Office of the Worldwide Ministries Division, urged the U.S. government and the United Nations to work with the Israeli government and the Palestinian leadership to establish mechanisms for ensuring the application of principles of participatory government, decent governance, and respect for human rights. This effort was done through education and advocacy in partnership with ecumenical and nongovernmental organizations including the World Council of Churches, the Middle East Council of Churches, the Churches for Middle East Peace, and the United Nations Non-Governmental Working Group on Israel-Palestine. The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy lifted up concerns for human rights in Israel-Palestine in its annual Human Rights Update 2003.

11. 2003 Referral: Item 12-04. Overture 03-30. On Calling on the United States and Russia to Fulfill Their Commitments Under the Nonproliferation Treaty—From the Presbytery of Mission (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 18, 649–51).

Response: The Office of the Stated Clerk, with cooperation from the Presbyterian Peacemaking Program of the Congregational Ministries Division, the Social Justice Program and the Washington Office of the National Ministries Division, communicated to President George W. Bush, Secretary of State Colin Powell, Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld, and other appropriate decision-making officials, the church’s present and continuing opposition to weapons of mass destruction; developed web-based education and advocacy resources addressing nuclear disarmament issues, including the Nonproliferation Treaty and the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty; created a resource summarizing past General Assembly statements and overtures dealing with nuclear arms production, testing, and elimination; prepared resources for education and advocacy and made them available to the Peacemaking Program’s leadership network; and supported interfaith efforts to work for the abolition of nuclear weapons in cooperation with the Presbyterian Washington Office.

12. 2002 Referral: Item 09-04. Recommendation That the 214th General Assembly (2002) Grant a Two-Year Deferment to Congregational Ministries Division Publishing in Order to Make Available a “Library of Resources” in Addition to the Current General Assembly Action to “Review and Revise” the “God’s Gift of Sexuality” Curriculum [in response to Overture 00-70, 1999 Referral 27.007, Overture 99-46, and 2000 Referral 25.085]—From the General Assembly Council (Minutes, 2002, Part I, pp. 45, 493–94).

Response: (Background—In 2002, Congregational Ministries Division was given a two-year deferment to make available a “Library of Resources” as an alternative to the current General Assembly action to “Review and revise” “God’s Gift of Sexuality” in response to Overture 00-70, 1999 Referral 27.007, Overture 99-46, and 2000 Referral 25.085. This comment accompanied the action, “The Assembly Committee on Christian Education and Publications’ understanding is that the review and revision process will occur as part of customary, timely practices of the ... Congregational Ministries Division’s Congregational Ministries Publishing program area [Minutes, 2002, Part I, p. 45].)

In response to the 2002 General Assembly Item 09-04, Congregational Ministries Publishing has created a library of resources. As directed by the General Assembly, Congregational Ministries Publishing has made available “a ‘library of resources’ ... comprised of ... study aids; annotated bibliographies; specialized areas of concern related to human sexuality, such as incest, child abuse, and rape .... ; biblical and constitutional references ... ; providing congregations tools to create their own human sexuality learning events” (Ibid).

13. Alternate Resolution to 2003 Referral: Item 06-06. Overture 03-23. On Appointing a Pastoral Group Whose Primary Concern Would Be Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual and Transgendered Members and Their Families in Our Local Churches—From the Presbytery of Greater Atlanta (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 43–44, 401).

[The assembly approved this response to referral. See pp. 50, 579–80.]

Response: (Background: Congregational Ministries Division has been directed to identify and post on the appropriate pages of the Congregational Ministries Division Web site existing resources and models consistent with current General Assembly policies to assist presbyteries, pastors, and sessions in their pastoral ministries to gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgendered members and their families.)

A Directory of Web Sites and Representative Bibliographies has been created and is available on-line at <http://www.pcusa.org/overture2000-38/> . It may also be obtained through Presbyterian Distribution Services at 1.800.524.2612. Ask for Item Number 067821, available at no charge. The directory contains a representative, rather than exhaustive, list of the wide-ranging resources, both secular and religious, for ministering to gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgendered persons.

The directory includes the statement, “The Church, Sexual Healing, and Transformation in Christ,” which was drafted by the 213th General Assembly (2001) in response to differing viewpoints on sexual healing. The statement reads as follows:

The Church, Sexual Healing, and Transformation in Christ

The 213th General Assembly (2001) offers the following words of affirmation and challenge to the individual members, sessions, and congregations of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) as they minister to those who struggle with transformational issues in the area of their sexual lives:

We believe, with Scripture, that “God is able to do far more abundantly than we could ask or think,” and that God wills us all to be a part of the “New Creation” that is possible in Jesus Christ.

We believe that this hope of transformation involves all of life, and we express our concern over divisions within the church that continue to be exacerbated by efforts that focus narrowly upon sexuality as the primary locus for defining purity of life.

We call attention to the action of the 211th General Assembly (1999) regarding “conversion therapies,” an approach related to “transformational ministries,” each of which, in its own way, is designed ... to bring about a reversal of sexual orientation and behavior in those who are self-identified as homosexual, and who express a desire to change:

The 211th General Assembly (1999) [of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)] affirms that the existing policy of inclusiveness welcomes all into membership of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) as we confess our sin and our need for repentance and God’s grace. In order to be consistent with this policy, no church should insist that gay and lesbian people need therapy to change to a heterosexual orientation, nor should it inhibit or discourage those individuals who are unhappy with or confused about their sexual orientation from seeking therapy they believe would be helpful. ... [The 211th General Assembly] affirms that medical treatment, psychological therapy, and pastoral counseling should be in conformity with recognized professional standards. (Minutes, 1999, Part I, p. 80)

Previous General Assemblies have noted that there is still no conclusive evidence clarifying the origin and basis for sexual orientation, or that “transformational/ conversional therapies” or “transformational ministries” are effective in bringing about lasting reversals in sexual orientation.

We should not reject the possibility of such change out of hand, but neither should we be blind to the dangers of offering false hopes. Given the complex realities surrounding the issue of sexual orientation, we join previous General Assemblies in declining to approve as policy a position that would place the General Assembly on only one side of the ambiguities that remain. (Minutes, 2001, Part I, p. 26)

14. 2003 Referral: Item 10-06. Recommendation 3. That the General Assembly Urge the General Assembly Council, Congregational Ministries Division, to Produce a New Confirmation Curriculum Based on The Study Catechism (Confirmation Version)—From the General Assembly Council (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 22, 565–66).

Response: (Background—Congregational Ministries has been directed to produce a new confirmation curriculum based on “The Study Catechism [Confirmation Version]” and to integrate the Catechisms into the “We Believe” curriculum materials for all ages.)

A confirmation curriculum based on the Study Catechism is in the production process and will be ready for use in the church beginning with fall 2005. The catechism’s are well integrated in the “We Believe” curriculum. The materials are currently in use in the church.

15. 2003 Referral: Item 10-06. Recommendation 5. That the General Assembly Urge the General Assembly Council, Congregational Ministries Publishing, to Integrate the Catechisms into the “We Believe” Curriculum Materials for All Ages—From the General Assembly Council (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 22, 565–66).

Response: See Congregational Ministries Division Response to 14. 2003 Referral: Item 10-06. Recommendation 3. above.

16. Alternate Resolution to Overture 01-34. Item #1. On Preparing Worship Resources Based on The Book of Confessions That Include Inclusive Language—From the Presbytery of Detroit (Minutes, 2001, Part I, pp. 38, 445–47).

Response: As part of its continuing effort to provide the church with gender-inclusive liturgical resources drawn from The Book of Confessions and other confessional material, as well as from Scripture, the Office of Theology and Worship has prepared an inclusive language version of the Confession of 1967, together with excerpts from the Confession of 1967 that are designed specifically for use in worship. Both the full inclusive language text and the liturgical excerpts from the Confession of 1967 have been published and sent to every congregation in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

The Office of Theology and Worship is also preparing a supplemental liturgical resource containing inclusive language liturgical texts drawn from the church's confessions, and other confessional sources. This resource will be complete in 2004 and made available to the church.

17. Alternate Resolution to Overture 01-61. On Requesting the Office of Theology and Worship to Make Available The Book of Confessions, Worship Edition—From the Presbytery of Alaska (Minutes, 2001, Part I, pp. 38, 476–77).

Response: See Congregational Ministries Division Response to 16. Alternate Resolution to Overture 01-34, above.

18. 2002 Referral: Item 07-02. Overture 02-7. On Directing the Office of Theology and Worship to Develop a Lectionary-Based Liturgical Resource Which Draws Affirmations of Faith from The Book of Confessions – From the Presbytery of Yellowstone (Minutes, 2002, Part I, pp. 38, 425–26).

Response: See Congregational Ministries Division Response to 16. Alternate Resolution to Overture 01-34, above.

19. 2002 Referral: Item 07-10. Overture 02-18. Item 1. On Celebrating the Confession of 1967 and Authorizing the Provision of an Inclusive Language Version for Liturgical Use—From the Presbytery of Hudson River (Minutes, 2002, Part I, pp. 39, 436).

Response: See Congregational Ministries Division Response to 16. Alternate Resolution to Overture 01-34, above.

20. 2003 Referral: Item 10-05. Recommendation 4. That the General Assembly Instruct the Congregational Ministries Division, Office of Theology and Worship, to Produce and Distribute Materials That Will Assist Presbyteries in Their Study of the French Confession of 1559—From the General Assembly Council (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 22, 563–64).

Response: Liturgical versions of the French Confession have been added to the Office of Theology and Worship Website (www.pcusa.org/theologyandworship), and their use is being encouraged.

21. 2003 Referral: Item 10-05. Recommendation 5. That the General Assembly Instruct the Congregational Ministries Division, Office of Theology and Worship, in Reporting the Results of Their Engagement with the French Confession of 1559—From the General Assembly Council (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 22, 563–64).

Response: Liturgical versions of the French Confession have been added to the Office of Theology and Worship website (www.pcusa.org/theologyandworship), and their use is being encouraged.

22. 2003 Referral: Item 10-05. Recommendation 6. That the General Assembly Request Congregational Ministries Division, Office of Theology and Worship, and the Office of the General Assembly to Report to the 216th General Assembly (2004) the Progress of Their Collaborative Efforts to Engage the Church in Reflection on Its Confessional and Ecclesial Foundations—From the General Assembly Council (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 22, 563–64).

Response: In 2003, the Office of Theology and Worship hosted its third quadrennial theology convocation, “We Believe in One God.” The new Lilly-funded initiative “Re-Forming Ministry” seeks to bring together the three traditional teaching offices of the church (pastors, theological professors, and church officials) to work on the vital ecclesiological issues before the church.

G. General Assembly Council Final Responses to Referrals

1. 2003 Referral: Item 06-15. Commissioners' Resolution 03-23. On Funding for Mission Personnel (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 45, 410–12).

Response: The General Assembly Council has created a mission work plan team to envision and plan for its mission work and resource allocation for budget years 2005 and 2006. The Mission Work Plan Team developed four goals and objectives for each goal area. The General Assembly Mission Budget will be built based upon those goals and its resources will be allocated to support those goals. In the meantime, the General Assembly Council has undertaken a major funding effort by creating the Mission Initiative: Joining Hearts & Hands to raise funds for mission personnel and church development and redevelopment.

2. 2003 Referral: Item 09-04, Program Design for Racial Ethnic and Immigrant Communities, Recommendation 2. That the General Assembly Council Ensure That Funding from the Mission Initiative Be Made Available for the Ongoing Implementation of the Racial Ethnic/Immigrant Evangelism Church Growth Strategy—From the General Assembly Council (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 25, 536).

Response: General Assembly Council will ensure that funds received through Mission Initiative: Joining Hearts and Hands for the ongoing implementation of the Racial Ethnic/Immigrant Evangelism Church Growth Strategy are available for this purpose.

3. 2003 Referral: Item 13-03, Recommendation B. That the General Assembly Council, the Office of the General Assembly, and the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation Work Together to Assess the Feasibility of and Develop Models for a Central Ordering and Distribution Service for All Church Agencies—From the General Assembly Committee on Review (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 49, 666).

Response: The General Assembly Council (GAC) and the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation (PPC) have worked together in several areas in an effort to provide complete customer service from both entities.

In 1998, GAC and PPC developed a model to enable Presbyterian churches to place orders on-line through the Presbyterian Marketplace [PC(USA) Website for on-line ordering] for resources carried by GAC and PPC.

Also in 1998, GAC and PPC worked out an agreement for orders to be taken over the phone and routed to the appropriate entity for processing, or to transfer the caller to speak to the responsible entity.

The accounting areas of PPC and GAC provide good customer service by working closely together to ensure customer payments are accurately applied. The PPC and GAC routinely transfer customer invoice inquiries between the two entities.

The PPC and GAC maintain the same shipping/handling policies in order to provide consistency to church customers. The GAC and PPC are in constant communication with each other regarding customer inquiries.

The Office of the General Assembly (OGA) currently uses GAC as their primary source for distribution of OGA resources. The OGA has several collaborative efforts to produce and distribute their products with PPC. The GAC also provides Customer Service/Distribution for The Presbyterian Foundation, Horizons, and Presbyterian Women.

The PPC and GAC are currently evaluating the communication processes already in place to determine what improvements can be made and are exploring other areas to enhance cooperative customer service. The PPC and GAC believe that the cooperative efforts currently in place supersede the need for a centralized distribution/ordering point and that customers are being well-served at the present time.

4. 2003 Referral: Item 02-03. Recommendation C. That All Corporations Shall Amend Their Articles of Incorporation, Bylaws, and Other Pertinent Documents to Carry Into Effect the Purposes and Intent of This Deliverance and Related Enactments of the General Assembly and to Report to the 216th General Assembly (2004)—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly and the General Assembly Council (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 34, 124).

Response: The 215th General Assembly (2003) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) directed the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation (the Church Corporation) to amend its bylaws to institute new board terms. The General Assembly also directed the Church Corporation to report all amendments to the 216th General Assembly (2004).

At its September 27, 2003, meeting, the board of directors of the Church Corporation amended Article II, Section 2.01 (2) of its bylaws (regarding at-large members) as follows—

(2) Other members of the Board of Directors of the Corporation may be elected or removed by the General Assembly Council of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) (hereinafter sometimes referred to as the “General Assembly Council”). Such at-large members shall be elected by the General Assembly Council for ~~three~~ four-year terms after consideration of the recommendations of the Board of Directors of the Corporation, subject to confirmation by the General Assembly, and each person so elected shall be eligible to serve one additional term. A person elected to an unexpired term shall be eligible to serve only one additional ~~three~~ four-year term.

Note: Pursuant to Article II, Section 2.01 (1) of the Church Corporation’s bylaws, the members of the General Assembly Council, by virtue of their office, are the directors of the Church Corporation. Because the terms of General Assembly Council members are established in G-13.0200 of the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), the Constitution was amended to change those terms from three years to four years. The amendment of the Constitution was an act beyond the Church Corporation or the General Assembly Council and, so, is not reported here.

5. Alternate Resolution to 2003 Referral: Item 02-16. Commissioners’ Resolution 03-25. On Adding a New Question to the Annual Statistical Report (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 35, 144–45).

Response: In response to this resolution the following question was added to the 2003 Annual Statistical Report:

Q-8. How many “friends of the church” does your congregation have—that is, non-members aged 15 or older who regularly worship there and give their time, talent, and/or treasure to your congregation?

The results to this question will not be available until the summer of 2004. Research Services will post the results on their Web site at that time and in a report to the 217th General Assembly (2006).

6. 2003 Referral: Item 06-03. Overture 03-05. On Re-establishing a Witness Season Including a Witness Offering—From the Presbytery of Coastal Carolina (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 43, 399).

Response: For the final response to this referral, see Item 07-06, “Special Offerings Review Task Force.”

7. 2003 Referral: Item 06-04. Overture 03-11. On Instituting a New Annual Offering for the Support of Full-time Mission Personnel—From the Presbytery of San Gabriel (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 43, 399–400).

8. 2003 Referral: Item 06-14. Commissioners’ Resolution 03-22. On Itinerating National Staff (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 44, 409–10).

Response: The General Assembly Council supports the concept of using professional staff members of the General Assembly national staff to provide itinerancy service at the small church level and serving as resource to presbyteries that need assistance in serving the small churches in the denomination. The GAC recognizes and supports the strong commitment of the denomination in serving faithful witness in mission and evangelism.

The General Assembly Council will change their personnel policies to provide the opportunity for professional staff members to select an employment option of offering their services to an itinerancy service for periods of three to twelve months to serve the congregations of small churches. This service could be taken under the current study leave policies of the current personnel policy manual or under the new provisions to be adopted.

The General Assembly Council recommends that the assignment to itinerancy service be at the option of the staff member so as to avoid the family-related issues that would be created from a “forced” assignment. Forced temporary living arrangements for a staff member and family with minor children would impose both difficult personal hardships as well as additional financial burdens both on the church and the staff member and family. By maintaining the program on a “volunteer” or personal option basis, the staff member is better able to identify the personal and family issues related to such an assignment.

The human resources department staff of the General Assembly Council will work with the office of the Churchwide Personnel Services program area in the National Ministries Division to identify the small church and presbytery opportunities for professional staff to provide the itinerancy service.

Funding for the itinerancy service remains a key issue. The General Assembly Council is able only to fund the salary and benefits of the staff member on itinerancy service and only if that staff member is paid from unrestricted budget funding. The General Assembly Council Ministries Divisions cannot pay staff from restricted funds if the position they are occupying is not directly involved in the program activities paid for by the restricted funding.

9. Commissioners’ Resolution 00-11. Concerning General Assembly Policies and Actions Related to Women (Minutes, 2000, Part I, pp. 65, 493–94).

Response: The General Assembly Council has prepared a comprehensive document that outlines each action taken since 1970. A copy of this document was distributed to the heads of all six General Assembly agencies in April 2004 with instructions to review how the policies and actions related to women are being implemented in their respective agencies.

This document includes a chronological summary table of each policy paper, resolution, overture, commissioners’ resolution, or other action taken, as well as a listing by subject category and by year of each action. It also includes a summary of the actions taken by the General Assembly Council to implement each of these policies. Finally, this comprehensive document includes a listing of all cross-references from one General Assembly to another (listing the previous policies cited, or previous General Assembly actions that have called for the current action, as well as the subsequent General Assemblies where reports are requested.).

10. 2001 Referral: 26.004. Response to Recommendation Directing GAC to Create a Task Force to Study the Disenfranchisement of People of Color in the United States’ Electoral System; to Consider Whether the Church Should Make a Policy Statement; Report Findings to the 215th General Assembly (2003)—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (Minutes, 2001, Part I, pp. 60, 333).

Response: For the final response to this referral, see Item 10-02, “Task Force on Election.”

11. 2001 Referral: 26.013. Response to Recommendation to Create a Task Force to Study Issues of Reparations for African Americans, Native Americans, Alaskan Natives, Asian Americans, Mexicans, Puerto Ricans, and Others Who Have Experienced Unjust Treatment; Report Findings to the 216th General Assembly (2004)—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (Minutes, 2001, Part I, pp. 60, 334).

Response: For the final response to this referral, see Item 10-03, “Task Force to Study Reparations.”

12. 2003 Referral: Item 13-03. Recommendation C. That the General Assembly Agencies Develop a Memorandum of Understanding as a Means of Addressing Publishing Problems and Opportunities Encountered by the Church and Its Multiple Publishing Arms—From the General Assembly Committee on Review (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 49, 666).

Response: Refer to K. Presbyterian Publishing Corporation Final Responses to Referral, 3. Recommendation D Regarding Recommendation C, below.

13. 2003 Referral: Item 13-03. Recommendation D. That the General Assembly Agencies Regularly Report to the General Assembly on the Progress on Recommendations B. and C., Beginning with the 216th General Assembly (2004)—From the General Assembly Committee on Review (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 49, 666).

Response: Refer to K. Presbyterian Publishing Corporation Final Responses to Referral, 2. Response to Recommendation D Regarding Recommendation B, below.

H. National Ministries Division Final Responses to Referrals

1. 2001 Referral: 22.118–.127. Response to Recommendation That Churchwide Personnel Services, in Consultation with the Committee on Theological Education, Convene a Major Consultation to Address Critical Issues in the Recruitment, Nurture, and Support of Those Preparing for Ordained Ministry—From the General Assembly Council (Minutes, 2001, Part I, pp. 39, 214–15).

Response: The National Ministries Division, through its Churchwide Personnel Services, in consultation with the Committee on Theological Education, convened a national Entrance Into Pastoral Ministry Consultation, June 25–26, 2004, in Richmond, Virginia.

2. 2003 Referral: Item 04-11. Commissioners' Resolution 03-13. On the Integrity of the Call Process (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 65, 329–30).

Response: The National Ministries Division, through its Churchwide Personnel Services and in consultation with the Office of the General Assembly, polled stated clerks of the 173 presbyteries about their presbytery's experience with "...churches that have recently established or that are in the process of establishing a co-pastor model of leadership with the effect of circumventing the normal interim call and pastoral call process and enabling a direct succession of pastoral leadership." Approximately one-third of the stated clerks responded; about one-half of those indicated they currently have at least one church using the co-pastor model in the presbytery. Most of those who responded gave opinions on whether or not they think the co-pastor model is being abused in the denomination; there was no consensus on this subject. The majority recommend that no change occur.

The staff also compiled congregational statistics to determine how many congregations in the denomination employed co-pastors at the end of 2002. Of the 136 congregations utilizing this model, at least 92 of these were using a married couple. This left only 44 congregations in the denomination (or less than .004 of PC(USA) congregations) that were employing unmarried co-pastors.

We have come to the conclusion that there does not appear to be a need to change the Book of Order in regard to co-pastors at this time. Many presbyteries appreciate the flexibility that is available to them as they counsel with their congregations regarding pastoral leadership. Because of the relatively low number of congregations that are led by co-pastors, it seems wisest for the General Assembly to continue to allow presbyteries to work closely with their congregations concerning pastoral leadership while also allowing the current Book of Order to remain unchanged.

3. 2003 Referral: Item 11-01. Recommendation 2. That the General Assembly Request the Research Team to Review the Situation of Prostitution Around Military Bases, Write Its Findings, and Publish the Report on the PC(USA) Website—From the General Assembly Council (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 39, 585).

Response: The research team that went to the Republic of Korea to look into the current situation of prostitution around U.S. military bases published a report with its findings. It is posted on the Web page of the Peacemaking program area of the PC(USA) Website.

4. 2002 Referral: Item 11-01, Report: We Are What We Eat, Recommendation C.2. That the Racial Ethnic Program Area, Environmental Justice, and the Rural Ministry Office Work Collaboratively in Advocating for the Concerns of Racial Ethnic Farmers and Ranchers, and Supporting Organizations That Provide Advocacy for Racial Ethnic Farmers/Ranchers—From the General Assembly Council (Minutes, 2002, Part I, pp. 23, 535).

Response: Initial advocacy efforts are underway and these efforts have become part of the ongoing work of the office of Network Support: Rural and Small Church Ministries.

5. 2002 Referral: Item 11-01, Report: We Are What We Eat, Recommendation C.1.a.–f. That the Rural Ministries Office Coordinate the Implementation of the Recommendations of the Report; Continue the Grant Program, “Grants for Rebuilding Rural Community Life”; Inform Rural Churches, Organizations, and Governing Bodies of General Assembly Resources Available to Them; Keep the Church At-Large Informed About Rural Issues; Continue to Participate in Ecumenical/Interfaith Groups; and Continue to Support Organizations Working on Family Agriculture Issues—From the General Assembly Council (Minutes, 2002, Part I, pp. 23, 534).

Response: The Rural Ministry Network office continues to urge presbyteries and programs within the General Assembly Council (GAC) to implement the recommendations of the report, “We Are What We Eat.”

Several presbyteries have scheduled events specifically addressing the issues and the Synod of Lakes and Prairies dedicated a portion of its fall 2003 meeting to these issues.

In response to a resolution from Presbyterian Women (PW) of the Synod of Lakes and Prairies, PW, at its business meeting in July 2003, adopted the recommendations contained in the report for implementation throughout the PW networks.

The Washington Office has signed-on to letters/petitions supporting specific rural issues that respond to the recommendations.

Mission Responsibility Through Investment took action recently to participate in the Agribusiness Accountability Initiative, coordinated by the Center of Concern and the National Catholic Rural Life Conference.

Grants for Rebuilding Rural Community Life continue to assist churches that, with other churches and/or organizations in their community, sponsor projects to strengthen community life.

The availability of other grant programs has been communicated and was especially effective when Presbyterian Disaster Assistance responded to the effects of the drought in the Presbytery of Northern Plains and the Presbytery of South Dakota.

Presbyterian Hunger Program continues to fund projects in rural communities as well as coalitions that address rural community issues.

Information about rural issues has been communicated through various media of the PC(USA), including: Presbyterian News Service, Presbyterians Today, Horizons, “Good News” (Evangelism and Church Development newsletter), and through the Presbyterian Rural Network Website. Action alerts have been disseminated through the Rural Ministry Network database.

In March 2003, General Assembly Moderator, Fahed Abu-Akel, itinerated across the Presbytery of South Dakota, visiting congregations, ranches, and farms, conveying the denomination's affection and support of rural communities and congregations, especially during this time of economic hardship.

Participation in and/or financial support of continues for the organizations mentioned as they engage in advocacy and public policy action in support of family-owned and -operated farms and ranches.

The implementation of all of the recommendations will continue to be a part of the ongoing responsibilities of the Presbyterian Rural Network office.

6. 2003 Referral: Item 09-03. Strategy for Ministry with Hispanic-Latino Constituencies in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), Recommendation 1. That the General Assembly Approve the Strategy for Ministry with Hispanic-Latino Constituencies and That the Office of National Ministries Division, Hispanic Congregational Enhancement, Print the Strategy Document in Spanish and Portuguese, and Distribute It to Hispanic/Latino Caucuses and Churches—From the General Assembly Council (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 24–25, 531).

Response: The Comprehensive Strategy for Ministry with Hispanics in Portuguese, Spanish, and English is available at the following Web addresses:

Spanish: <http://www.pcusa.org/hispanic/pdf/estrategia.pdf>

Portuguese: <http://www.pcusa.org/hispanic/pdf/estrategia-portuguese.pdf>

7. 2003 Referral: Item 09-04. Recommendation 1. That the General Assembly Approve the Educational Process Entitled, “Program Design for Racial Ethnic/Immigrant Church Growth and Evangelism” and Make It Available Electronically for All Governing Bodies, Racial Ethnic Caucuses, and Appropriate Offices of the General Assembly Council, Particularly the Evangelism and Church Development and the Racial Ethnic Ministries Program Areas of the National Ministries Division—From the General Assembly Council (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 25, 536).

Response: The “Program Design for Racial Ethnic and Immigrant Church Growth and Evangelism” is available on the Web at the following Web addresses:

8. 2002 Referral: Item 13-06, Recommendation B.1.–2. That the General Assembly Council Work Proactively to Educate Leaders and Membership of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) of the Need for Cultural and Linguistically Appropriate Services in Healthcare Standards (CLAS) By Advocating for the Adoption of the Standards By All Individual Health Service Providers and Submitting Public Comment and Appropriate Testimony Supporting the Need for the Standards—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (Minutes, 2002, Part I, pp. 70–71, 644).

Response: The Presbyterian Washington Office wrote a letter to the U.S. Department of Health & Human Services Secretary Tommy Thompson encouraging HHS to establish a timetable for mandating adoption of Cultural and Linguistically Appropriate Services in Health Care Standards (CLAS). The Washington Office also wrote a Stewardship for Public Life quarterly bulletin to its Health Care Network to inform Presbyterians about the General Assembly policy and to encourage Presbyterians to share CLAS information with their local communities. There have been no formal public comment opportunities.

9. 2003 Referral: Item 07-01. Resolution Calling for the Abolition of For-Profit Private Prisons, Recommendation F.1. That the General Assembly Direct the Presbyterian Washington Office, in Partnership with the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns and the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns to Do Items a.-d.)—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 56, 440).

Response: The Presbyterian Washington Office sent a letter to the Judiciary Committees of both the Senate and the House of Representatives, expressing the concern of the General Assembly against the establishment of privately owned prisons. The Washington Office communicated with both the Advocacy Committee on Women Concerns and the Advocacy Committee on Racial Ethnic Concerns to urge that they also get their constituency involved by getting letters to their elected officials.

10. 2003 Referral: Item 11-03. Resolution on Africa, Recommendation E.7.b. That the General Assembly Direct the Stated Clerk and Appropriate Entities of the General Assembly Council to Express to the U.S. Government, the Business Community, and Our World Trading Partners Our Continued and Strong Advocacy for Fair Trade Policies and the Global Assistance Programs—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 38, 593).

Response: The Stated Clerk has sent letters to President Bush, Secretary of State Colin Powell, the U.S. Department of Commerce, the World Bank, and the World Trade Organization stating the General Assembly's concern and support for fair trade policies and increased global assistance programs for Africa. The following is an excerpt. The letters urged the U.S. government and our world trading partners to take a stronger and more active role in supporting fair trade policies that would benefit all—not simply the most prosperous, and to increase funding of global assistance programs for Africa.

Catherine Gordon, from the Washington Office, participated in the World Council of Churches consultation with the World Bank in October of 2003. During this event, the concerns regarding the World Bank's policies of promotion of privatization and free trade were voiced. Evidence was given to the economists and other officials in the World Bank and IMF that demonstrated how their current policies are harming the most impoverished of the most impoverished countries.

The Washington Office continued to advocate, along with our ecumenical partners, for increased funding for global assistance programs, specifically for the Millennium Challenge Account (MCA) and for fighting the HIV/AIDS epidemic. In 2003, Congress appropriated $1.9 billion in new money to the Millennium Challenge Account ($1 billion) and the AIDS initiative ($2.4 billion total, including $900 million in new funds).

In March of 2004, the Washington Office cosponsored the Ecumenical Advocacy Days for Global Peace with Justice. This event consisted of six thematic tracks with one track dedicated specifically to Africa. Workshops were held in order to educate our members concerning fair trade policies and global assistance programs and help them address their representatives in Congress and the Administration on these issues. The following workshops were offered: the Southern Africa Free Trade Agreement, the U.S. agricultural agenda and indigenous farmer rights, TRIPS and access to affordable medicines, the U.S. thirst for African oil, Water privatization, HIV/AIDS and the U.S. agenda, and Development assistance: 0.7% and the Millennium Development Goals.

11. 2003 Referral: Item 11-06. Overture 03-24. On Reaffirming the Church's Commitment for an End to the U. S. Embargo Against Cuba and the Restoration of Diplomatic Relations—From the Presbytery of Santa Fe (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 39, 615–17).

Response: The Washington Office sent a letter specifically to Presbyterian members of Congress expressing the concern of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) that remittances cannot be paid in full to our Cuban pensioners. The Washington Office encouraged these members of Congress, along with other non-Presbyterians, to sponsor legislation that would give U.S. churches the authority to send to retired Cuban pastors and teachers the pension payments to which they are legally entitled. Letters were also sent to the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives and the Finance Committee of the Senate regarding these pension payments.

The Washington Office has been in contact with Gene Hemphill of the Board of Pensions to discuss the legal intricacies of this issue. The Board of Pensions continues to experience difficulties.

In addition, the Washington Office has continued to advocate (through education, action alerts, and direct congressional advocacy) for the lifting of the United States' embargo against the Republic of Cuba. The lifting of this embargo would allow churches in the United States to meet their contractual obligations to their Cuban pensioners. We have worked individually and in coalition with our ecumenical partners through the Cuba Steering Committee of the Latin American Working Group.

12. 2003 Referral: Item 11-08. Overture 03-33. On Opposing the Free Trade Area of the Americas in Its Current Form—From the Presbytery of San Francisco (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 40, 618–22).

Response: The Washington Office, along with the Hunger Program, sent representatives to the Church World Service consultation—"Just Trade Agreements: Churches in North America Addressing Globalization." Denominations gathered to pool their various principles on these issues, find the common ground, affirm a declaration, and celebrate their commitment to address the Free Trade Area of the Americas (FTAA) and related economic globalization issues that affect all of us. The declaration and related resources were shared with our overseas partner churches and our ecumenical partners. The event and the language used helped PC(USA) craft how we speak about the issues. The meeting and declaration helped inform the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy's multiyear study of economic globalization. Andrew Kang Bartlett from the Hunger Program was on the planning team for this consultation. Below, listed by program area, are the responses to the overture opposing the Free Trade Agreement of the Americas.

Catherine Gordon in the Presbyterian Washington Office has been dealing with globalization and trade public policy and has represented the PC(USA) in ecumenical/interfaith working groups.Carolynn Race is keeping up on environmental issues around globalization and trade.

The Washington Office has continued its participation in the Interfaith Working Group on Trade and Investment and its ongoing work with our ecumenical and faith partners supporting just trade and opposing unfair trade agreements, specifically the Free Trade Agreement of the Americas in its current form. The Washington Office began participation in the Economic Issues Group of the Latin American Working Group, which does work on trade issues that specifically affect Latin America, specifically the FTAA and Central America Free Trade Agreement (CAFTA). Through these groups, the Washington Office has assisted in organizing press conferences, sign on letters, and lobby visits urging the U.S. government and the world community not to support unfair trade agreements including the FTAA and CAFTA. The Washington Office also sent a letter to all Presbyterian members of congress and the Administration informing them of our policy opposing the FTAA.

The Interfaith Working Group on Trade and Investment has put together a Website that has resources concerning the FTAA as well as other fair trade and globalization issues.

The Washington Office, along with our ecumenical partners, organized the "Ecumenical Advocacy Days for Global Peace with Justice," March 5–8, 2004. The event was comprised of six thematic tracks. The Economic Justice track focused specifically on globalization and fair trade issues. The Latin America track had as one of its foci the FTAA. This event culminated in a lobby day in which many Presbyterians used what they had learned during the event to speak to their members of congress concerning trade issues.

The Washington Office published a background article on the Free Trade Agreement of the Americas (FTAA) for our Global Security Network and Washington Office Website. Information on the FTAA and other trade issues was included in our new year introductory packet. An article on the FTAA was also written for our Latin America and Hunger Stewardship of Public Life (SPL) networks.

Action alerts and updates on the FTAA were sent regularly to our online computer networks through our E-serve and Presbyterian Legislative Action Networks at www.pcusa.org/washington.

The Presbyterian Hunger Program organized "No to the FTAA" ballots for Presbyterians to voice their opposition to the FTAA in its current form to our representatives at the November consultation. Balloting on the FTAA was coordinated in countries throughout the hemisphere by the Hemispheric Social Alliance, a coalition of anti-FTAA coalitions in all the countries of the Americas.

Joining Hands Against Hunger (JHAH) sponsored globalization trainings by Agricultural Missions in JHAH presbyteries. One of the trainings stimulated the writing and introduction of the Overture on Trade and Globalization, which passed at the 2003 General Assembly. A Website was created www.pcusa.org/trade specifically to address the issues of the just trade and the trade agreements such as the Free Trade Agreement of the Americas. Andrew Kang Bartlett of the Hunger Program coordinated the establishment of the Website in conjunction with the Washington Office, Peacemaking Program, United Nations Office, Social Justice Ministries, Presbyterian Women, Enough for Everyone, and Women's Advocacy.

Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) congregations assisted the Coalition of Immakolee Workers in their thirty-four-mile "poor people's march" to the FTAA Ministerials in Miami.

Enough for Everyone gives congregations ways to act in favor of alternatives to destructive free trade systems, through the Coffee Project and Sweat-Free T. The program moved its efforts toward deepening and widening its networks involvement in trade and other economic globalization issues. The program is considering working with ecumenical partners on an international coffee agreement. It is also considering working with a group called Sabbath Economics, which is developing/compiling economic readings of the Bible that will help shed light on economic globalization and the FTAA, and help reach those for whom a biblical approach is most accessible.

The Advisory Committee for Social Witness Policy has published four papers on various aspects of globalization—economic life, employment, effects on environment, and effects on culture—available through PDS.

The August 2004 Peacemaking, Hunger Program, Environmental Justice and Self-Development of People joint conference—Hope for a Global Future—will focus on the environment, poverty, human development, and various aspects of economic globalization. This year's Peacemaking Offering focused on children, the environment, and globalization. Peacemaking developed worship resources in collaboration with JHAH that touched on economic globalization issues. Some Peacemaking Advent materials also dealt with globalization.

The voting representatives to the 2003 Churchwide Business Meeting of Presbyterian Women passed the following resolution: "That Presbyterian Women affirm support of Overture 03-33 approved by the 215th General Assembly (2003) which states the churches 'support for international cooperation based on fair trade, respect for diversity and common concerns for a peaceful, just and sustainable world.' "

The Ecumenical Mission Partnerships publicized resources on trade and economic globalization to its networks and incorporated these themes into its trainings/gatherings.

The United Nations Office held a Seminary Masters January Course (in collaboration with Columbia University) on Globalization and the Church—January 12–23, 2004.

13. 1999 Referral: 25.030. Response to Recommendation Urging Entities Engaged in Health Ministries to Develop Appropriate Documentation to Quantify Their Programmatic Work, to Be Included in the Denominational Health Programs and Policies Monitoring Report Going to the 216th General Assembly (2004)—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 1999, Part I, pp. 41, 308).

Response: As noted in the response below to Referral 25.040, documentation and full visibility for the work among General Assembly Council (GAC) entities on health issues in the U.S. is provided through joint published materials, coordinated Web sites, and educational events that inform, motivate, and equip persons for ministries of compassion and advocacy. Among the most important current initiatives are those in the areas of access to health care, support for affordable drugs for the elderly, and the development of parish nurse programs and congregational care teams.

14. 1999 Referral: 25.040. Response to Recommendation That the General Assembly Council Submit to the 216th General Assembly (2004), a Monitoring Report with Appropriate Recommendations Based on a Review of the Denominational Health Policies Since 1988, the Health Activities and Programs of General Assembly Entities and Related Organizations for 1999–2003, and the Sociopolitical Context at the Time of That Review—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 1999, Part I, pp. 41, 309).

Response: The Office of Health Ministries USA works closely with the Presbyterian Washington Office, the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy, and the Board of Pensions to give visibility to the policies of the General Assembly and to encourage churchwide action to implement those policies. This is accomplished through joint publication of resources and an active, continuously updated Web site that provides information on health issues from faith-based, government, and secular sources. The site is linked with that of other agencies in order to provide a coordinated approach. In view of the urgent need to prioritize the use of diminishing financial resources, a more formal, long-term review is not deemed the best stewardship at this time.

15. 1999 Referral: 25.086. Response to Recommendation That the General Assembly Council Submit a Report with Appropriate Recommendations, That Assesses the Church's Progress Toward Implementing the Recommendations in This Resolution and to Provide the Necessary Funds to Ensure That This Assessment Can Be Presented to the 216th General Assembly (2004)—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 1999, Part I, pp. 43, 343).

Response: As noted in the Final Response to Referrals 25.040 and 25.030 above (13. and 14.), a coordinated approach, with continuous updating of the church's involvement in health ministries of education and advocacy is available. No financial resources beyond those already committed to these programs are available for a more comprehensive report with recommendations.

16. 2003 Referral: Item 07-01. Resolution Calling for the Abolition of For-Profit Prisons, Recommendation F.3. That the General Assembly Direct the Mission Responsibility Through Investment Committee to Explore with the General Assembly Investing Agencies Strategies to Lead Lehman Brothers to Discontinue the Practice of Providing Investment Capital for the Building of For-Profit Private Prisons—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 56, 440).

Response: A shareholder resolution addressing this issue was filed and the Mission Responsibility Through Investment Committee (MRTI) endorsed proxy voting support. Other strategies are under consideration as the campaign against Lehman Brothers and others involved in for-profit private prisons continues.

17. 2003 Referral: Item 07-01. Resolution Calling for the Abolition of For-Profit Prisons, Recommendation F.9. That the General Assembly Encourage the General Assembly Council, Through Its National Ministries Division, Social Justice Program Area, to Focus Criminal Justice Sunday in 2004 on the Campaign to Abolish For-Profit Private Prisons—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 56, 440)

Response: The materials produced for Criminal Justice Sunday 2004, were focused on the Campaign to Abolish For-profit Private Prisons, as requested by the General Assembly.

I. Office of the General Assembly Final Responses to Referrals

1. 2003 Referral: Item 03-19. Commissioners' Resolution 03-28. On Furthering Theological, Social, and Political Purposes (Possible Misuse of Disciplinary Process) (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 71, 249).

Response: The 215th General Assembly (2003) referred the following to the Office of the General Assembly (OGA): study the possible misuse of disciplinary process to promote theological, social, or political interests; the frequency and financial costs of such judicial proceedings; and the standing of individuals and interested groups involved in promoting complaints and allegations. The assembly further requested that the OGA recommend any appropriate measures to ensure the spirit of the Rules of Discipline in the judicial process and report back to the 216th General Assembly (2004).

The Office of the General Assembly suggests that the Rules of Discipline not be amended out of fear but rather that the disciplinary process of inquiry and due process hearing for the purpose of community-wide correction, restraining, repentance, and reconciliation be affirmed.

In 2004, the OGA requested information from the clerks of all 173 presbyteries regarding the possible misuse of disciplinary process to promote theological, social, or political interests and the frequency and financial costs of such judicial proceedings. Of the 120 responding presbyteries, seven (or 5.8 percent) claimed to have had judicial proceedings that promoted theological, social, or political interests. The total financial cost of the judicial proceedings was approximately $10,000. The total human hours were not calculable, although reported as high.

In each of the disciplinary cases mentioned, the investigating committees declined to file charges either finding no probable cause to believe the alleged offense occurred or that the alleged offense could not be reasonably proven. In neither case did the investigating committees determine that the allegations were filed for frivolous or intentional purposes. If the investigating committees had found that such written allegations were filed for frivolous or intentional purposes, the committees could have filed allegations against the accuser for disruption of the peace, purity, and unity of the church.

2. 2003 Referral: Item 04-08. Request 03-10. Re. Sexual Abuse Guidelines Concerning Leaves of Absence in Matters of Sexual Abuse by Ministers—From the Stated Clerk, Presbytery of Florida (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 63, 326).

Response: The 215th General Assembly (2003) directed the Stated Clerk to urge all presbyteries to take immediate action to include in the terms of call for all ministers provisions for placing an accused minister on a leave of absence if the presbytery receives an allegation of sexual abuse. The Office of the General Assembly sent an e-mail communication on September 9, 2003, to each of the presbyteries reflecting the statement from the 215th General Assembly (2003) and simultaneously issued Constitutional Musing, Note 4 on the church's Website that may be accessed at the following address: <http://www.pcusa.org/oga/musings/note04.htm>.

3. 2003 Referral: Item 04-12. Commissioners' Resolution 03-20. On Allegations and Transfers [of Ministers] (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 65, 330).

Response: The 215th General Assembly (2003) referred to the Office of the General Assembly (OGA) the problem of allegations not involving misconduct or personal injury, which interrupt processes of transfers already initiated by governing bodies, thereby doing harm to individuals, congregations, presbyteries, and synods involved. The 215th General Assembly (2003) additionally requested that the OGA recommend any appropriate measures to ensure fairness in the judicial process of the church to 216th General Assembly (2004).

The OGA suggests that the Rules of Discipline not be amended out of fear but rather that the disciplinary process of fair inquiry and due process hearing for the purpose of community-wide correction, restraining, repentance, and reconciliation be affirmed.

The Rules of Discipline provides the means by which the community of the body of Christ as manifested in the church corrects and restrains wrongdoing in order to bring members to repentance and restoration of right relationship with the other members of the church community. When a governing body of the church that has jurisdiction over individuals (session or presbytery) receives a written allegation that a member of the governing body has committed an offense against Scripture or the Constitution, the governing body has been given notice and has a duty under the Rules of Discipline to inquire into the alleged offense and determine if there is probable grounds to believe the offense occurred and if the offense may be reasonably proven. If the committee of the governing body responsible for undertaking the inquiry (investigating committee) determines that there are probable grounds to believe the offense occurred and that the offense may be reasonably proven, the committee files formal charges with the governing body (session or permanent judicial commission of a presbytery) for a due process fair hearing regarding the alleged offenses.

Because of the responsibility of the governing body of the church that has jurisdiction over the individual accused of an offense to inquire into probable cause and reasonable proof of an allegation of offense or to provide a due process fair hearing for charges, there is a current provision (Book of Order, D-10.0105) that prohibits the transfer of a member or minister member to another governing body while the governing body is engaged in the inquiry or while charges are pending.

The OGA is aware of at least two written allegations filed against minister members of presbyteries within the last year that were ultimately determined to be without probable cause by the investigating committees of those presbyteries, but that had the effect of prohibiting otherwise reasonable transfers. In neither case did the investigating committees determine that the allegations were filed for frivolous or intentional purposes. If the investigating committees had found that such written allegations were filed for frivolous or intentional purposes, the committees could have filed allegations against the accuser for disruption of the peace, purity and unity of the church.

4. 2003 Referral: Item 10-05 (Recommendation 6). Request the Office of Theology and Worship and OGA to Report to the 216th General Assembly (2004) Regarding the Progress of Their Collaborative Efforts to Engage the Church in Reflection on its Confessional and Ecclesial Foundations (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 22, 563).

Response: In 2004, the Office of the General Assembly developed a curricula entitled “Common Faith, Common Mission.” During the year, representatives from this office have demonstrated the curricula for such study in a number of forums (governing body staff meeting, Presbyterian Youth Connection, and at the Association of Presbyterian Church Educators conference). By the time the 216th General Assembly (2004) convenes, this curricula will be available to the church in both print and digital formats.

J. Presbyterian Investment and Loan Program, Inc. Final Responses to Referrals

1. 2003 Referral: Item 02-03. Recommendation C. That All Corporations Shall Amend Their Articles of Incorporation, By-laws, and Other Pertinent Documents to Carry into Effect the Purposes and Intent of This Deliverance and Related Enactments of the General Assembly and to Report to the 216th General Assembly (2004)—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly and the General Assembly Council (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 34, 124).

Response: The Presbyterian Investment and Loan Program, Inc. reports the following:

a. On July 26, 2003, the Board of Directors of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Investment & Loan Program, Inc. (PILP) approved amendment of the PILP’s bylaws to reflect the change in the board terms from three-year terms to four-year terms consistent with PILP’s revised deliverance. The General Assembly Council concurred in these revisions to the bylaws at its September 2003 meeting. No other governance documents required revision.

b. On October 24, 2003, the Board of Directors of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Mortgage Corporation (“PMC”) approved amendment of the PMC bylaws to reflect the change in the board terms from three-year terms to four-year terms consistent with the PMC’s revised deliverance. The General Assembly Council concurred in these revisions to the bylaws at its February 2004 meeting. No other governance documents required revision.

2. 2003 Referral: Item 11-03. Resolution on Africa. Recommendation E.6.e. That the General Assembly Request the General Assembly Council, Through the Ministries Divisions, and Entities of the General Assembly to Work Together and Coordinate Their Support of Training Programs in and Among African Communities and Churches on Conflict Resolution, Equitable Distribution of Resources, Reconciliation, and Consensus-building Around Issues of Good Governance—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 38, 593).

Response: The Presbyterian Investment & Loan Program, Inc. is directed by the deliverance, “to provide for loans to Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) congregations, governing bodies, theological institutions, and educational institutions related to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)” We are, therefore, limited to providing loans and investment opportunities within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). However, we are glad to provide consulting services and information to persons and organizations requesting these services. We have consulted with an individual requesting information regarding the formation of an investment and loan program for his denomination in Kenya. We will remain open to being a resource to the churches in Africa.

3. 2003 Referral: Item 13-03. Recommendation C. That the General Assembly Agencies Develop a Memorandum of Understanding as a Means of Addressing Publishing Problems and Opportunities Encountered by the Church and Its Multiple Publishing Arms—From the General Assembly Committee on Review (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 49, 666).

Response: Refer to K. Presbyterian Publishing Corporation Final Responses to Referral, 3. Recommendation D Regarding Recommendation C, below.

4. 2003 Referral: Item 13-03. Recommendation D. That the General Assembly Agencies Regularly Report to the General Assembly on the Progress on Recommendations B. and C., Beginning with the 216th General Assembly (2004)—From the General Assembly Committee on Review (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 49, 666).

Response: Refer to K. Presbyterian Publishing Corporation Final Responses to Referral, 2. Response to Recommendation D Regarding Recommendation B, below.

K. *Presbyterian Publishing Corporation Final Response to Referral

2003 Referral: Item 13-03. Recommendation That PPC Regularly Report on Progress on Recommendations (1)–(6) of the General Assembly Committee on Review; That GAC, OGA, and PPC Work to Assess Feasibility of and Develop Models for Central Ordering and Distribution Service; That All Agencies Develop a Memorandum of Understanding as a Means of Addressing Publishing Problems and Opportunities; Agencies Regularly Report to General Assembly (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 49, 666).

1. Response to Recommendation A (Report on Progress on Recommendations (1)–(6) of General Assembly Committee on Review

Recommendation (1)—The Presbyterian Publishing Corporation (PPC) has launched a totally refreshed Website, one that can serve as a state-of-the-art e-commerce ordering tool.

Recommendations (2) and (5)—The PPC is taking the necessary steps to amend the Bylaws, Articles of Incorporation, and Organization for Mission as instructed/recommended by the General Assembly Committee on Review of the 215th General Assembly (2003). Please see Item 08-02, recommendation to the 216th General Assembly (2004).

Recommendation (3)—The PPC has revised the mission statement to a more succinct statement that better communicates the purpose of PPC.

Recommendation (4)—The PPC staff prepared, and the PPC board approved at the September 19–20, 2003, meeting, a strategic plan for 2004–2006.

Recommendation (5)—The PPC board has worked in consultation with the General Assembly Nominating Committee to begin the process to bring the composition of the PPC board into compliance with this recommendation.

Recommendation (6)—The PPC strategic plan for 2004–2006 calls for increased efforts to market to congregations, lay leaders, and seminarians, and progress is being monitored monthly by PPC's Expanded Executive Staff.

2. Response to Recommendation D Regarding Recommendation B

The General Assembly Council (GAC) and the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation (PPC) have worked together in several areas in an effort to provide complete customer service from both entities. In 1998, GAC and PPC developed a model whereby Presbyterian churches can place orders on-line through the Presbyterian Marketplace [the PC(USA) Website for on-line ordering] for resources carried by GAC and PPC. Also in 1998, GAC and PPC worked out an agreement where orders are taken over the phone and routed to the appropriate entity for processing or transferring the caller to speak to the responsible entity. The PPC and GAC accounting areas (in providing good customer service) work closely together to ensure customer payments get applied accurately. The PPC and GAC routinely transfer customer invoice inquiries between the two entities. The Presbyterian Publishing Corporation (PPC) and the General Assembly Council (GAC) maintain the same shipping/handling policies for consistency to church customers. The GAC and PPC are in constant communication with each other regarding customer inquiries. The Office of the General Assembly (OGA) currently uses GAC as their primary source for distribution of OGA resources. The OGA has several collaborative efforts to produce (and distribute) their products with PPC. The GAC also provides customer service/distribution for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation, Horizons, and Presbyterian Women.

The PPC and GAC are currently evaluating the communication processes in place, what improvements can be made, as well as exploiting other areas where the two entities can provide cooperative customer service. The PPC and GAC believe that the cooperative efforts currently in place supersede the need for a centralized distribution/ordering point and that customers are being well-served at the present time.

3. Recommendation D Regarding Recommendation C

After extensive discussion among the General Assembly agencies, these entities are in agreement that an adequate forum for adjudicating publishing problems and identifying publishing opportunities already exists.

The elected chairs and chief executive officers of the General Assembly agencies meet regularly (two to three times per year) to convey information about their respective work, share strategic plans, coordinate plans for inter-agency initiatives, and resolve interagency conflict. As a matter of fact, the chairs and executives have not engaged in this latter activity at all—on any front, publishing or otherwise—in the last four to five years. Unanimity of purpose and a spirit of general accord have in fact pervaded this conclave in recent years. Should “publishing problems” arise in the future, it is reasonable to expect that the chairs and executives forum would be able to handle them with alacrity in the normal course of events.

As for opportunities, the chairs and executives have been instrumental in facilitating several initiatives. The six agencies cooperate annually to produce the narrative Report to General Assembly and are currently collaborating on the first national pastor’s conference (which will involve PPC in terms of providing the retail bookstore). Moreover, the other five agencies are aware of PPC’s offer to be a vendor of choice for production services and avail themselves of the chance to benefit from PPC’s purchasing volume on a case-by-case basis. A recent chairs and executives meeting was the occasion for other agencies to contribute to PPC’s “Equipping the Saints” program for sending foundational published resources to new clergy.

The chairs and executives will formalize the process by which publishing problems would be adjudicated and publishing opportunities are identified in a memorandum of understanding at a future meeting.

L. *Worldwide Ministries Division Final Responses to Referrals

1. 2003 Referral: Item 11-01. Recommendation 10. That the General Assembly Request the PC(USA) Office of East Asia Pacific in the Worldwide Ministries Division to Find Ways to Work with Partner Churches in the Republic of Korea to Minister to Sex Workers in Military Camp Towns by Providing Support Systems That Protect Them from Human Rights Violations and Help Them Find Alternatives to This Work—From the General Assembly Council (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 39, 585).

Response: The Worldwide Ministries Division, in partnership with churches and ecumenical bodies in Korea, worked on this issue, including providing some counseling services and legal aid to sex workers. A particular concern is the violation of human rights stemming from an unequal treaty, Status of Forces Agreement (SOFA), between the Korean government and the U.S. Forces in Korea. For example, last year two children were crushed to death by a U.S. armored vehicle. The Korean legal system was not allowed to question the U.S. soldiers, who were sent back to the U.S. Thousands of Korean people held a prayer vigil and protest against the U.S. troops and asked for an apology from the president of the United States. Many human rights workers in Korea now look upon the U.S. troops in Korea as “occupation” forces.

The violation of the sex workers’ human rights in the military camp towns in Korea will be tracked, with a special concern for the provision of a counseling service and vocational training.

2. 2003 Referral: Item 11-03. Resolution on Africa. Recommendation E.1.b. That the General Assembly Encourage Congregations, Presbyteries, Synods, and Entities of the General Assembly to Establish New, and to Strengthen Existing Partnerships with African Churches, Parachurch Organizations, and Mission Agencies (in Consultation with the Worldwide Ministries Division, and Ecumenical Bodies in Sharing the Gospel and Doing Mission Together—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 38, 591).

Response: This is an encouragement addressed to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A) at all levels. The Worldwide Ministries Division (WMD) has moved forward with establishing mission networks, which serve to bring together existing presbytery and congregational partnerships, and to identify other partnerships and relationships from around the denomination that, by joining the network, can be encouraged to collaborate on a broader scale. These networks aim to strengthen the existing and foster new partnerships.

Regional liaisons have been put in place in Africa to facilitate communication and support with Presbyterians with partnerships and partner interests.

Since the 215th General Assembly (2003), initial network meetings have been held with the Kenya, Malawi, South Africa, Ethiopia, Sudan, Congo, and Ghana Mission Networks.

The Ecumenical and Mission Partnership program area and area offices have also continued to initiate support and provide resources to existing presbytery partnerships.

3. 2003 Referral: Item 11-03. Resolution on Africa. Recommendation E.1.e. That the General Assembly Direct the General Assembly Council, Through Worldwide Ministries Division, to Seek Funds for and Produce a Study Guide and Bibliography in Order to Assist Presbyterians and Others in Their Study of Africa—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 38, 591).

Response: At least the first parts of the Study Guide for the Resolution on Africa will have been produced by the time of the 216th General Assembly (2004). It includes a bibliography and links to WMD Africa Office and other Websites that contain current information on Africa and African churches.

4. 2003 Referral: Item 11-03. Resolution on Africa. Recommendation E.2.a. That the General Assembly Call on the General Assembly Council, Through Worldwide Ministries Division, and Governing Bodies of the PC(USA) to Strengthen Existing and Forge New Partnerships with Africa Partners That Will Enable Both African and American Mission Personnel to Give Direct Short, Intermediate, and Long-term Service in Areas of Health, Education, Evangelism, Relief and Development, and Church Administration—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 38, 592).

Response: New PC(USA) mission personnel have been recruited, oriented, and assigned to work with African partners.

Additional new mission positions with various lengths of service are being established and avenues for short-term involvement are being created.

As United States presbyteries and congregations have experienced increases in the numbers of African immigrants and as these groups have begun establishing worshiping communities, the Congregational Ministries Division (CMD), the Worldwide Ministries Division (WMD), and the Office of the General Assembly (OGA) have worked with sessions, presbyteries, and African partners to provide resources and, in some instances, personnel to assist these fellowships and immigrant groups. There are currently discussions with African church partners in Kenya, Sudan, Ethiopia, and Congo regarding possible roles for members from their communions serving immigrant groups in the United States.

5. 2003 Referral: Item 11-03. Resolution on Africa. Recommendation E.2.b. That the General Assembly Urge Entities of the General Assembly and Its Governing Bodies to Work Individually and Ecumenically to Provide Financial Resources to Self-help, Development and Micro-enterprise Projects and Programs in Africa—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 38, 592).

Response: The Presbyterian Hunger Program, Self-development of People, Presbyterian Disaster Assistance, and International Evangelism all have been and will continue to seek and provide funding for Africa's self-help initiatives in both civil society and ecclesiastical programs.

6. 2003 Referral: Item 11-03. Resolution on Africa. Recommendation E.4.a. That the General Assembly Direct the General Assembly Council, Through Worldwide Ministries Division, and Entities of the General Assembly, Local Congregations, and Middle Governing Bodies to Assist Africa Partners in Developing New Church-sponsored Educational Programs, and Strengthening Existing Ones, Equipping Christian Schools, and Providing Christian Education Opportunities in Secular Schools—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 38, 592)

Response: Educating society and the church has always been a cornerstone of Presbyterian mission efforts. As mission initiatives come from both local and national levels in the PC(USA), it is encouraging to see continued strong emphasis placed on supporting educational activities of overseas partner churches.

The Worldwide Ministries Division has emphasized higher education, theological education, and training of leaders since the 1950s. As more African leaders were trained, they returned to strengthen, indigenize, and in many cases create new programs and new institutions. Some current initiatives to note in Africa are:

- The Akrofi-Christaller Memorial Centre in Ghana is an initiative of the Presbyterian Church of Ghana to equip pastors and other church workers for a more “African” approach to church leadership. They are networking with other African universities and churches to define and increase African biblical study and theology.
- The Masters in Counseling in HIV/AIDS program of St. Paul’s Theological Seminary in Kenya is preparing grassroots Christian leaders already immersed in Christian communities affected by this crisis.
- The rebuilding of theological education in Rwanda. Following the genocide in Rwanda in the early 1990s, the Presbyterian church found itself with many of its pastors killed or missing. Elisée Musemakweli, one of their leaders supported in his doctoral studies with the assistance of the PC(USA), began the hard work of reconstructing the church’s seminary. Worldwide Ministries Division has placed a mission coworker (Michael Parker) at the new seminary to assist in the rebuilding efforts.
- A number of Presbyterian churches throughout Africa are initiating new universities in order to provide opportunities for their members and society at large. Some countries include Ghana, Kenya, Congo, and Malawi. Many Presbyterians in the U.S. are assisting these efforts as well as the Worldwide Ministries Division.

The PC(USA) made a conscious decision in the 1950s to emphasize higher education and not primary and secondary education. Unfortunately, in Africa many church partners are still left with this responsibility as governments are not providing educational opportunities for children. It is exciting to see that many church and presbytery partnerships include the supporting of schools run by overseas partner churches.

In an effort to coordinate and increase this support, Worldwide Ministries Division has encouraged the creation of an educational network that will highlight, encourage, and network PC(USA) efforts to support the educational programs and institutions of overseas partner churches. It is called IPEN, International Presbyterian Education Network, and can be reached at ipen@ctr.PC\(USA\).org.org). The Web site is currently being built.

7. 2003 Referral: Item 11-03. Resolution on Africa. Recommendation E.4.b. That the General Assembly Request That the General Assembly Council Continue to Seek to Increase Financial Support to the Leadership Development Component of the Church's Global Education Ministry, with Particular Attention to the Training and Equipping of Pastors, Evangelists, and the Laity for Continued Leadership in the Church and Civil Society in Africa—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 38, 592).

Response: A Worldwide Ministries Division (WMD) Fund Development effort was initiated in 2001 to build annual giving and a $6 million dollar permanent endowment fund for international leadership development. A quarterly newsletter highlighting current and past leaders of overseas partner churches can be found at www.PC\(USA\).org/globaled.org/globaled).

8. 2003 Referral: Item 11-03. Resolution on Africa. Recommendation E.4.c. That the General Assembly Direct the General Assembly Council, Through the Worldwide Ministries Division, to Seek Resources to Provide More Scholarships for Africa Students Wishing to Do Advanced Degree Studies and for Increased Funding for Physical Facilities of Partner Educational Institutions on the Continent—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 38, 592).

Response: Since 1950, more than three thousand international Christian leaders have been supported by the PC(USA) in advanced degree studies. The fund development effort mentioned in Final Response to Referral 7 above provides funds for leader development of PC(USA) partner churches in all areas, including advanced studies. Due to budget constraints, the number of persons assisted each year has dropped from more than 100 to approximately forty. The office on Global Education and International Leadership Development will continue its fundraising efforts.

9. 2003 Referral: Item 11-03. Resolution on Africa. Recommendation E.5.a. That the General Assembly Direct the General Assembly Council, Through the Worldwide Ministries Division, to Enhance Its Work with Partner Churches in Africa in Organizing Bilateral and Multilateral Programs That Enable Skilled Persons from an African Church to Provide Short and Intermediate Service to Sister Churches—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 38, 592).

Response: Priority will be given through the Worldwide Ministries Division Three-Way Mission pattern of service to enable skilled persons from one African church to serve elsewhere in Africa. Other opportunities are being pursued through particular program work, such as the assessment team sent to Liberia composed of Luke Asikoye of Presbyterian Disaster Assistance (PDA) and White Rakuba from the South Africa Council of Churches. The PDA had requested that the New Sudan Council of Churches (with PDA funding) send Telar Deng to attend the gathering of Liberian churches as they began to strategize how the church might provide leadership in grassroots peace building. It is PDA's clear intent to identify through the Emergency Management Training of Action of Churches Together and Church World Service on the continent, where strong leadership exists and utilizes those people within the network.

10. 2003 Referral: Item 11-03. Resolution on Africa. Recommendation E.5.b. That the General Assembly Call on the World Alliance of Reformed Churches, the World Council of Churches, and the All Africa Conference of Churches to Increase Their Efforts to Seek Justice and Secure Human Rights for Women in All Segments of the Church and in Civil Society—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 38, 593).

Response: The Moderator of the 215th General Assembly (2003) attended the Eighth Assembly of the All Africa Conference of Churches in Cameroon (AACC). In her remarks to the delegates, she encouraged the AACC and its constituent member churches to redouble their efforts in areas of justice, human rights, and increased participation in positions of leadership for women.

This challenge involves an ongoing dialogue between General Assembly Council staff and these organizations that will continue beyond a one-year period of time.

11. 2003 Referral: Item 11-03. Resolution on Africa. Recommendation E.6.d. That the General Assembly Request the General Assembly Council, Through the Worldwide Ministries Division, to Work Closely with Sudanese Church Partners in Advocating for Just Allocation of Oil Revenues, Cessation of the War, and an End to the Persecution of Christians Particularly Those in Southern Sudan—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 38, 593).

Response: The Worldwide Ministries Division (WMD) is actively engaged in the efforts in Sudan through a variety of avenues. Support to the New Sudan Council of Churches (NSCC) in the form of personnel and resources works directly towards supporting the peace efforts. Support of PC(USA) constituency efforts for advocacy for these Sudan issues works through the Sudan Mission Network, the Washington Office on Africa, and the PC(USA) Washington Office.

12. 2003 Referral: Item 11-03. Resolution on Africa. Recommendation E.6.e. That the General Assembly Request the General Assembly Council, Through the Ministries Divisions, and Entities of the General Assembly to Work Together and Coordinate Their Support of Training Programs in and Among African Communities and Churches on Conflict Resolution, Equitable Distribution of Resources, Reconciliation, and Consensus-building Around Issues of Good Governance—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 38, 593).

Response: This is a very complex matter dealing with issues of dependency and paternalism as well as accountability and transparency. The World Council of Churches has created new software specifically designed for use in churches of limited financial capability. It was field-tested in Africa and was an important step. This journey continues to be a high priority with our development related offices. We have, at our partners' request, sent a cross-divisional team to South Africa to help the uniting church address issues of governance. We have helped them and other churches in South Africa share their wisdom on conflict resolution with churches in South America.

13. 2003 Referral: Item 11-03. Resolution on Africa. Recommendation E.6.f. That the General Assembly Urge PC(USA) Partners in Africa to Press for Increased Levels of Transparency, Accountability, and Fiscal Responsibility in Both Church and Government Structures—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 38, 593).

Response: Our engagement with our partners is ongoing and entails these efforts. The Central/West Africa Office presentation of concerns to the Eglise Presbyterienne Camerounaise's General Assembly included elements of accountability and transparency necessary for effective partnerships as well as important for the partner church overall. That church has taken those concerns seriously and is implementing significant reforms.

14. 2003 Referral: Item 11-09. Overture 03-34. On Creating a Study Guide on the History and Evolving Present Day Situation of the Middle East—From the Presbytery of Chicago (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 40, 622–23).

Response: In collaboration with the Office for the Middle East, a 148-page comprehensive study guide was produced as the September–October issue of the church's bimonthly magazine Church & Society. This focused on the history and evolving present day situation of the Middle East, focusing primarily on the central issue of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict as proposed by the Presbytery of Chicago. It included the full text of the "Resolution on Israel and Palestine: End the Occupation Now" (both background and recommendations) approved by the 215th General Assembly (2003). It also included:

- Reflections and analyses (articles, sermons, commentaries, position papers, etc.) by diverse authors.
- A photo essay.
- A specific section on "Christian Zionism" addressing theological interpretations of biblical materials dealing with prophecies, covenant, promise, etc., vis-à-vis the current political situation in the region.

- Voices, expressions, letters and messages from partner church leaders, interfaith colleagues, news articles, etc.
- It concluded with an extensive list of resources and suggestions for further engagement.

15. 2003 Referral: Item 11-12. Recommendation That the General Assembly Affirm the Action of the General Assembly Council Executive Committee, on Behalf of the General Assembly Council, to Send a Delegation to the Middle East to Affirm Our Partnerships, Express our Solidarity with the Peoples of the Middle East, Demonstrate Our Church's Commitment to Peace, Justice, and Reconciliation, and to Strengthen the Bridges of Understanding That Have Continued to Be Built Over Nearly Two Hundred Years in Various Countries There—From the General Assembly Council Executive Committee (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 41, 630–31).

Response: Following an extensive process of consultations with denominational leaders, partner churches, and ecumenical bodies in the region and among various entities of the General Assembly structure, a diverse, representative delegation has been identified to respond to the invitation initiated by partner churches, approved by the General Assembly Council and reaffirmed by the General Assembly. The delegation's visit is scheduled to take place in late February-early March 2004, and is to be reported to the ensuing meeting of the General Assembly Council and to the church at large.

16. 2003 Referral: Item 12-01. Resolution on Israel and Palestine: End the Occupation Now, Recommendation D. That the General Assembly Strongly Urge Israeli and Palestinian Leaders to Be Serious, Active, and Diligent About Seeking Peace for Their Peoples, or, If They Are Unwilling or Unable, to Step Down and Make Room for Other Leaders Who Will and Can—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 15–16, 636).

Response: The Office of the General Assembly has communicated the concern of the assembly to the appropriate Israeli and Palestinian leadership, urging that they seriously, diligently, and actively seek peace for their peoples, and that, if they are not able or unwilling, they should make room for others who have the will and ability to pursue peace.

17. 2003 Referral: Item 12-01. Resolution on Israel and Palestine: End the Occupation Now, Recommendation E. That the General Assembly Challenge and Encourage Discussion of Theological Interpretations That Confuse Biblical Prophecies and Affirmations of Covenant, Promise, and Land, Which Are Predicated on Justice, Righteousness, and Mercy, with Political Statehood That Asserts Itself Through Military Might, Repressive Discrimination, Abuse of Human Rights, and Other Actions That Do Not Reveal a Will to Do Justice, to Love Kindness, and to Walk Humbly with God—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 15–16, 636).

Response: In the study guide titled “Israel and Palestine: The Quest for Peace,” (Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Church & Society, September–October 2003), published in response to General Assembly action, a number of articles discussed issues of biblical and theological interpretations involving prophecies, covenant, promise, and land. In those discussions, the danger of confusing elements of prophecy with notions of political statehood, military might, and abuse of human rights was pointed out.

18. 2003 Referral: Item 12-01. Resolution on Israel and Palestine: End the Occupation Now, Recommendation F. That the General Assembly Urge Israel to Hasten to End the Occupation of Palestinian Territories; and to Accept the League of the Arab Nations' Unanimous Offer for Peace in Return of the Land Occupied by Israel Since 1967 and Urges the League of the Arab Nations to Commit to Doing Everything in Their Power to Eliminate Funding and Support for Terrorist Acts Against Israeli Citizens—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 15–16, 636–37).

Response: The Office of the General Assembly, through the Stated Clerk, communicated the assembly's urgings to the government of Israel and the League of Arab States.

19. 2003 Referral: Item 12-01. Resolution on Israel and Palestine: End the Occupation Now, Recommendation G. That the General Assembly Urge the Israeli Government and the Palestinian Leadership to Work on Resolving the Issue of the Right of Return of Palestinians—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 15–16, 637).

Response: Though the assembly's concern over the problem of the right of return of Palestinian refugees was duly communicated to the parties involved, the stalled peace process seems to have a long way to go before it can adequately address and resolve the issue. Presbyterians need to continue their efforts to advocate this United Nations-affirmed right of return, and to urge that it be resolved justly as well as realistically in order to reach a mutual acceptance by Israelis and Palestinians, for the sake of an enduring peace.

20. 2003 Referral: Item 12-08. Statement on Iraq and Beyond, Recommendation 2. That a Brief Study Guide Be Prepared, as a Companion to This Statement, That Includes Scripture, Questions, Suggested Readings, Maps, Bibliographies, and Other References or Study Aids—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 17, 656).

Response: The concerns suggested by the Worldwide Ministries Division (WMD) for “additional discussion and prayer,” have been, and will continue to be, addressed in a number of ways:

- The text of these concerns, as articulated by WMD and endorsed by the General Assembly Council, have been included in and attached to the text of the resolution approved by the 215th General Assembly (2003), and spread upon the Minutes of the assembly.

- In the document “Iraq and Beyond, with Study Guide,” prepared by the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy in collaboration with the Office for the Middle East and Europe, the concerns of WMD are listed as Appendix A.

- These concerns are shared with PC(USA) mission personnel already on the field as well as those newly appointed, particularly those serving in Muslim countries.

- The WMD staff who relate to partners who make their witness in Muslim contexts keep these concerns before them when in communication with partner churches, ecumenical bodies, and interfaith contacts.

- The Office on Interfaith Relations and Education continues to be aware of these concerns as it seeks, through its dialogue and educational efforts and its programmatic planning, to be faithful to the mandate of the gospel and the functions entrusted to it by the General Assembly.

As the Iraq situation and related Middle East issues requiring faithful witness and advocacy for peace with justice continue to be of vital concern to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), a constant and conscientious effort to remain engaged is required—especially as we seek to accompany partners in the region, in a spirit of discernment, humility, and patience.

21. 2003 Referral: Item 12-09. Commissioners' Resolution 03-14. On Calling for Solidarity with the People and Churches of Pakistan (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 19, 660–61).

Response: This resolution affirms the persistent requests of the church leadership in Pakistan to lift up their nation and churches in our prayers. More than any other, prayers are the most coveted request by our partners in Pakistan. Strong efforts have been made to have a face-to-face meeting with leaders of the Presbyterian Church of Pakistan, and in the process we have expressed our commitment of solidarity and mission partnership, as we will continue to do. Worldwide Ministries Highlights articles and a special mailing on behalf of Forman Christian College have been important vehicles for calling thousands of Presbyterians to prayer and financial support for our brothers and sisters in Christ in Pakistan this year. In addition, the Stated Clerk's office has sent the letter to U.S. government officials that was mandated.

22. 2003 Referral: Item 11-03. Resolution on Africa. Recommendation E.3.c. That the General Assembly Direct the General Assembly Council, Through the Worldwide Ministries Division International Health Ministries Office, and Encourage PC(USA) Health-related Organizations to Continue Working with Partner Churches and Institutions in Developing Mechanisms and Resources to Address Africa's Endemic Diseases—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 38, 592).

Response: The “Diseases of Poverty” that seem to disproportionately affect Africa’s people, especially women and children, are malaria, tuberculosis, and HIV/AIDS. Working with agencies such as the UNAIDS, WHO, philanthropic organizations in the US and globally; the International Health Ministries, and Africa Area Offices have been part of projects such as the Malaria bed net project, antiretroviral drugs discussions, and other international efforts to fight these “diseases of poverty.”

The International Health Ministries Office sponsored an HIV/AIDS workshop for thirty-two participants from ten PC(USA) partner churches in Africa, October 5–19, 2003, in Malawi. The workshop included sessions on needs assessments, resource identification, community problem solving, program development, monitoring, and evaluation. The final week included visits to community-based orphan care projects, home-based care programs for AIDS patients, and meetings with men’s groups, women’s groups, youth groups, and funeral education committees.

In March 2004, the International Health Ministries Office funded a four-day African Church Leaders’ Meeting around HIV/AIDS in Kenya. Thirty church leaders are being invited to “wrestle” with their denominations’ response to the AIDS crisis. Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) staff and regional HIV/AIDS consultants will facilitate discussion, including talking with congregations about HIV/AIDS and human sexuality, destigmatizing persons living with AIDS, pastoral counseling of HIV-positive persons and their families, community-based approaches to care, educational programs for orphans, and income-generation programs for AIDS orphans (with a particular focus on girls).

23. 2003 Referral: Item 11-03. Resolution on Africa. Recommendation E.3.d. That the General Assembly Direct the General Assembly Council, Through the Worldwide Ministries Division, to Continue Its Work with Other Faith-based and Secular Health Organizations, Domestic and International, That Share a Similar Goal in the Massive Effort to Address Major Health Issues Facing Africa—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 38, 592).

Response: Working through the Washington Office on Africa (WOA) and the Advisory Network for Africa (ADNA), the WMD Africa Offices have monitored and advocated for the passage and funding of major congressional legislation—Africa Growth and Opportunity Act (AGOA) and the New Program for Africa’s Development (NePAD), which address AIDS and other diseases of poverty in Africa.

While this advocacy has been instrumental in keeping these and other legislation alive and moving through the policy-making process, funding for the passed bills continues to be difficult to secure.

The International Health Ministries Office (IHMO) works ecumenically through Interchurch Medical Assistance, Inc. to support several approaches to addressing diseases of poverty. The SANRU II program in the Democratic Republic of the Congo works with Presbyterian, Mennonite, United Methodist, and American Baptist hospitals to provide equipment, training, and supplies to provide basic health care to large segments of the population. The IHMO works with Lutheran World Relief and the Carter Center in River Blindness projects in Tanzania, with Lymphatic Filariasis projects in Haiti, and with malaria bed-net projects in six countries. The International Health Ministries Office is a member of Christian Connections for International Health, which facilitates several joint projects addressing HIV/AIDS prevention, counseling, and home-based care projects in Africa.

24. 2003 Referral: Item 11-03. Resolution on Africa. Recommendation E.3.e. That the General Assembly Urge Members of the PC(USA) and Appropriate Programs of the General Assembly (e.g. the Presbyterian Washington Office, the Presbyterian United Nations Office, and International Health Ministries Office) to Call for Increased Public Funding That Addresses Diseases of Poverty, Particularly HIV/AIDS—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 38, 592).

Response: Worldwide Ministries Division continues to encourage individuals and congregations to support increased public funding for HIV/AIDS and other diseases of poverty through both personal commitment and through advocacy for public funding. The HIV/AIDS program manager accomplishes this through both written materials, such as the IHMO quarterly newsletter, and by speaking engagements during her participation in denominational and ecumenical forums and educational activities.

25. 2003 Referral: Item 11-05. Overture 03-14. On the Crisis of Migrant Worker Deaths in the Borderlands—From the Presbytery of De Cristo [Recommendation 1. That The General Assembly Declare Our Opposition to “Operation Gatekeeper” and Other Border Strategies, Which Have Resulted in an Increase in Militarization, Violations of Human Rights Deaths from Dehydration and Exposure, and Racial Profiling of Hispanic Peoples in the Borderlands; and Recommendation 3. That the General Assembly Request the Presbyterian Disaster Assistance Program of the Worldwide Ministries Division to Be in Relationship with Congregations, Presbyteries, and Synods in the Borderlands to Determine Appropriate Ministries and Assistance for Migrants in Life-threatening Situations] (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 39, 613–15).

Response: At the request of the Presbytery of De Cristo, Presbyterian Disaster Assistance (PDA) provided $10,000 from the One Great Hour of Sharing offering in December 2003 to address the mounting death toll of migrants in the southwestern deserts of the United States. These funds will be used by ministries on both sides of the U.S./Mexico border to save as many lives as possible.

In January 2004, PDA helped facilitate a meeting of representatives from southwestern PC(USA) middle governing bodies, as well as a representative of the Presbyterian Church of Mexico, for the purpose of planning and designing a consultation of faith-based organizations that are responding to the border crisis. At the meeting, a decision was made to hold a “regional” consultation in Albuquerque, New Mexico, in late April to focus on the impending crisis this summer, followed by a national event in Tucson, Arizona, this November.

Attendees for the April gathering have been identified and planning is well underway. The planning team will be expanded to include representatives from the Synod of Southern California & Hawaii and the Synod of the Sun. This group will meet in advance of the April event to further plan and design the larger consultation in November. The objective of both of these gatherings is to share information and develop response strategies that will more effectively address the crisis surround the deaths of migrant workers.

26. 2003 Referral: Item 11-14. Commissioners’ Resolution 03-16. On Displaced Persons in Colombia (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 41, 633–34).

Response: Worldwide Ministries staff has coordinated a high level visit to Colombia for purposes of education and solidarity. The trip in January 2004 included Moderator Susan Andrews, a representative from Presbyterian News Service (Alexa Smith), and representatives from the Presbyterian Peacemaking Program. The Moderator was interviewed by two newspapers and appeared on television in Colombia. Reporter Alexa Smith remained for several weeks to continue to collect stories and testimonials in order to inform Presbyterians of the situation. Regular calls and letters to the Presbyterian Church in Colombia continue. Presbyterian Disaster Assistance and the area coordinator for Latin America have provided funds to support humanitarian assistance to the displaced. In addition, the Latin American and the Caribbean Office is working with Peacemaking, Social Justice, and the Washington Office to publish a resource (twelve-page booklet) on Colombia.

27. 2003 Referral: Item 12-08. Statement on Iraq and Beyond, Recommendation 4. That the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Be Encouraged to Act Through Appropriate Partner Agencies to Participate in the Humanitarian Response to the People of Iraq—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 17, 656).

Response: Presbyterian Disaster Assistance sent a churchwide appeal for Iraq, posted to the Presbyterian Disaster Assistance (PDA) Web site updates on relief work, and made the Iraq humanitarian response the front-page article in its Mission Mosaic magazine. Working through the Action by Churches Together (ACT) alliance partners including the Middle East Council of Churches, Church World Service, and Norwegian Church Aid, a total of $345,000 was sent in support of humanitarian work. An additional $44,000 is available to support ongoing aid when the security situation stabilizes. Humanitarian response was slowed by a deteriorating security situation slowing the programming of funds on the ground.

28. 2003 Referral: Item 11-01. Recommendation 4. That the General Assembly Request That the International Personnel Be Educated Through Existing Web, Newsletter, and Training Events About the Problem of Sex Trafficking—From the General Assembly Council (Minutes, Part I, pp. 39, 585).

Response: The Worldwide Ministries Division, as part of the General Assembly Council, following the recommendations of the Independent Committee of Inquiry that dealt with the sexual misconduct by a mission personnel in Congo, has developed a staff position that will deal with issues related to sexual misconduct and mission personnel. This staff member will, along with other duties, develop a “process [that would] include the creation of a comprehensive curriculum for the training of mission personnel in order to prevent, recognize, and deal with sexual or physical abuse.”

The specific problem of sex trafficking will be included in this curriculum and training, including venues such as the World Wide Web, newsletters, and training events.

Item 03-01

The Office of the General Assembly (OGA) recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) approve the following changes in the publication of the Minutes of the General Assembly (Parts I and III):

[The assembly approved Item 03-01, Recommendation 1. See p. 44.]

1. That, beginning in 2006, the Minutes of the General Assembly, Part I, Journal, be offered to ministers in a CD-ROM format without charge and that, when requested, a copy of the printed format be supplied at a cost to be determined by the direct expenses of printing the document.

[The assembly approved Item 03-01, Recommendation 2. See p. 44.]

2. That, beginning in 2005, the Minutes of the General Assembly, Part III, Directory, be offered to ministers, when requested, in a printed format at a cost to be determined by the direct expenses of printing the document.

Rationale

The growth of electronic media as a means to deliver documents and information provides a footing for the first recommendation, while recognizing the preference that some may have for a printed document. Costs for the printed documents in both recommendations will be kept to a minimum by allocating only direct publication expenses to the cost of the book.

The most current list of ministers is no longer found in the printed Directory, but can be accessed through the PC(USA) Website at <http://ogasys2.pcusa.org/mrcjava/mnstringv/i00010gc.mrc>. The OGA will continue to make a printed document available annually at a minimum cost.

Both recommendations will help to contain per capita expenses.

Item 03-02

[The assembly disapproved Item 03-02. See p. 44.]

The Office of the General Assembly (OGA) recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) instruct the OGA to use the Session Annual Supplemental Report every six years to gather data from congregations on the invitation of racial ethnic ministers to preach during their Sunday worship services; and to report this data to the subsequent General Assembly.

Rationale

The 211th General Assembly (1999) approved Commissioners' Resolution 99-9, which (1) urged "all local Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) churches to invite racial ethnic ministers to preach during their Sunday worship services at least annually," (2) instructed "the Office of the General Assembly to gather data by asking a question in the Session Annual Statistical Report as to compliance with this request," and (3) directed "the Office of the General Assembly to report this data to each future General Assembly" (Minutes, 1999, Part I, p. 684).

This question has been asked annually for the last five years and below is the compilation of the first four years of that data:

CONGREGATION INVITE A RACIAL ETHNIC MINISTER TO PREACH?*DATA FROM THE SASR 1999–2002

YEAR	TOTAL CONGREGS	TOTAL REPORTING	% REPORTING	INVITE R/E PREACHER	NUMBER SUNDAYS	MEAN SUNDAYS	MEDIAN SUNDAYS
1999	11,216	9,524	84.9%	27.6%	6,749	2.83	1.00
2000	11,178	9,116	81.6%	29.1%	6,397	2.62	1.00
2001	11,141	8,581	77.0%	31.1%	5,890	2.46	1.00
2002	11,097	8,190	73.8%	30.4%	5,567	2.42	1.00

IF NOT, WHEN WAS THE LAST TIME A RACIAL ETHNIC GUEST PREACHER WAS ASKED?

YEAR	NUMBER RESPONDING	LAST YEAR	2–3 YEARS	4–6 YEARS	7–9 YEARS	> 9 YEARS	NEVER
2001	4,298	20.2%	20.6%	11.9%	4.9%	15.3%	27.1%
2002	4,085	20.1%	21.3%	12.4%	5.2%	14.6%	26.4%

(The 2003 results are currently in the compilation process and should be ready to share with commissioners at the assembly meeting.)

The Office of the General Assembly affirms that this data is important to collect. This data is of benefit to the church as one measurement, along with others, of its movement toward becoming a multicultural inclusive church.

Equipped with the data from the last five years, we have now built a baseline against which to measure our future strivings. The measurement of this data over time will better indicate the shifts the church seeks to gauge. The collection of the data every sixth year will enable the Office of the General Assembly to compile the report in time for every third biennial meeting of the General Assembly.

Item 03-03

On Directing the Stated Clerk to Prepare a Comparative Statistical Report, to Include a Summation of the Sources and Uses of Funds by Presbyteries, Synods—From the Presbytery of Albany.

The Presbytery of Albany respectfully overtures the 216th General Assembly (2004) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to direct the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly to prepare a Comparative Statistical Report of Presbyteries and Synods collated from information currently reported by presbyteries and synods and/or required by the General Assembly. Said report will include a summation of the sources and uses of funds by presbyteries and synods.

Rationale

Sessions, presbyteries, and synods participate in the mission of the whole church:

- Session—Book of Order, G-10.0102c: “mission of the whole Church . . . G-3.0000”
- Presbytery—Book of Order, G-11.0103a: mission of the whole church . . . G-3.0000”
- Synod—Book of Order, G-12.0102a: “mission of whole church . . . G-3.0000”

Sessions, presbyteries, synods, and the General Assembly are in a continuing “reformation” and transformation:

- Book of Order, G-3.0401c, “The Church is called . . . to a new openness . . . to God’s activity.
- Presbytery—Book of Order, G-11.0103v: council to review relationship of structure and mission.

Sessions, presbyteries, synods, and General Assembly are a unity:

- Book of Order, G-4.0302, shared power and responsibility.

Sessions, presbyteries, and synods maintain records and establish budgets:

- Session—G-10.0102i (Budget); G-10.0300 (Minutes and Records)
- Presbytery—G-11.0304 (Budget); G-11.0305 (Minutes and Records)
- Synod—G-12.0303 (Budget); G-12.0304 (Minutes and Records)

Sessions, presbyteries, and synods prepare annual reports that are reviewed by their respective governing body:

- Session—G-10.0102i (“providing full information to the congregation”); G-10.0102p(7) (sent annually to presbytery stated clerk); G-10.0301 (minutes reviewed by presbytery)
- Presbytery—G-11.0305 (minutes reviewed by synod); G-11.0306 (annual report to Stated Clerk of General Assembly)
- Synod—G-12.0304 (minutes reviewed by General Assembly, annual report to General Assembly)

The Council of the Presbytery of Albany, attentive to the changing circumstances of its congregations and open to God’s transforming work (G-3.0401c), established a Budget Work Group to review the financial structure and mission (G-11.0103v) of the presbytery. The Budget Work Group relied upon the ten-year trend as reported by congregations to the presbytery and the Office of the General Assembly, G-10.0102p(7) and G-11.0306, and compiled and reported in the Comparative Statistics.

The ten-year trend report was helpful to the Budget Work Group in an analysis of congregational activity. However, the report did not address the concern of the Budget Work Group, namely how does the budget of the presbytery reflect the presbytery’s stated mission and does the presbytery structure undergird that mission.

The Budget Work Group would have found helpful a ten-year trend of the presbytery’s budget and have been able to compare the budget of the Presbytery of Albany with those presbyteries of similar size. However, the Office of the General Assembly does not compile or report that information.

Presbyteries do report that information to synods (G-11.0305) and synods to the General Assembly (G-12.0304). Both presbyteries and synods report statistical information to the General Assembly (G-11.0306; G-12.0304).

The Presbytery of Albany believes that as the whole church is addressing changing demographic and financial conditions a comparative report of the budget structures of presbyteries and synods would be helpful to each and all of the presbyteries and synods.

The Presbytery of Albany requests the Office of the General Assembly to develop the means to compile the information presently reported by presbyteries and synods and make this available to the whole church.

OGA COMMENT ON ITEM 03-03

Comment on Item 03-03—From the Office of the General Assembly.

The Office of the General Assembly welcomes the request to make available a report of synod and presbytery financial structures. Current forms can be reformatted to accommodate this request to collect additional information that will be needed for such a report. This data could prove to be a useful tool for middle governing body staff in facilitating their work.

Item 03-04

[The assembly approved Item 03-04. See p. 44.]

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) recommends to the 216th General Assembly (2004) that the dates for the 217th General Assembly (2006) in Birmingham, Alabama, be changed to June 15–22, 2006. [The dates previously approved by the COGA were June 17–24, 2006.]

Rationale

The 217th General Assembly (2006) is scheduled to be a concurrent assembly with the Cumberland Presbyterian Church and the Cumberland Presbyterian Church of America. This shift in meeting dates is necessary to accomplish the goal of all three denominations meeting in the same facilities at the same time, and to allow the scheduling of several joint events involving all three denominations.

Item 03-05

[The assembly approved Item 03-05 with amendment. See pp. 44–45.]

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) amend Standing Rule D. by inserting a new section “5. Special Meetings” following the existing text to read as follows:

“5. Special Meetings

“a. The Book of Order permits the calling of special meetings of the General Assembly (G-13.0104). The method of calling a special meeting is the required number of commissioners submitting a petition with the full text of the resolution to the Moderator of the General Assembly.

“(1) A special meeting may be called providing the petition’s subject matter falls within the General Assembly’s responsibilities. (G-13.0103).

“(2) The urgent matter shall be brought in the form of a resolution or resolutions, stating the specific action proposed to be taken by the commissioners at the special meeting and shall include the reasons for proposing the decision to be made.

“(6) The Moderator may consult with the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures to determine any questions concerning whether the resolution meets the criteria for a called meeting or concerning the specific actions in the proposed resolution. This may take place by conference call.

“(7) Resolutions requiring or proposing constitutional interpretation are subject to the 120-day requirement in G-13.0112c. The 120-day requirement begins upon receipt of the petition by the Moderator. The Moderator may consult with the Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC) to determine any questions concerning whether the resolution requires a constitutional interpretation.

“b. The Book of Order establishes the minimum number of signatures to require a called meeting. The Moderator, upon receipt of the petition, shall ask the Stated Clerk to [~~do~~] complete the following within thirty days:

“(1) Send each presbytery stated clerk or clerk of session a letter verifying the current Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) membership of the individual signatory to the petition.

“(2) Send each signatory to the petition a letter of verification asking the commissioner to verify the signature on the petition and if the commissioner concurs with the purpose of the request as stated in the resolution.

“(3) During the verification process, a commissioner may request removal of his or her name from the petition by notifying the Stated Clerk.

“(4) After all reasonable efforts to establish contact have been made, the name of a commissioner failing to reply to the letter of verification shall be removed from the petition.

“c. The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly has the responsibility to fix the date and place of a meeting of the General Assembly when the General Assembly is not in session.

“(1) Upon receiving certification from the Stated Clerk that the petition has met the requirements of the Book of Order and the Standing Rules of the General Assembly, the Moderator shall report to the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) the decision to call the meeting.

“(3) The COGA shall submit to the called meeting a plan to pay for its expenses. This plan shall be considered to be part of the business of the special meeting.

“(4) The letter of notification of the called meeting will be mailed to the commissioners no later than sixty days before the start of the meeting.”

Rationale

This recommendation is in response to the following referral: 2003 Referral: Item 02-13. Commissioners’ Resolution 03-7. On Clarifying the Procedures for Calling a Special Meeting of the General Assembly (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 35, 142–43).

The 215th General Assembly (2003) directed the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) to draft recommendations for amendments to Standing Rules of the General Assembly that would clarify the procedures for calling a special meeting of the General Assembly, as provided for in G-13.0104; and report back to the 216th General Assembly (2004). The recommendations shall include details concerning

1. the process whereby commissioners may attempt to recall an assembly,
2. appropriate types of business to be considered, as governed by the Constitution and Robert’s Rules of Order,
3. the process whereby the Moderator acts on issuing the call,
4. how the expense of a called meeting would be covered. (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 142–43)

Item 03-06

[The assembly approved Item 03-06. See p. 45.]

The General Assembly Committee on Representation recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) do the following:

1. Instruct presbyteries to work on issues of diversity and inclusiveness when selecting/electing commissioners to General Assemblies.
2. Ask presbyteries to consider cultural sensitivity as an opportunity for growth in leadership.
3. Ask presbyteries to continually address the issues that impede youth participation throughout the church.

Rationale

In the 1970s, the United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America (UPCUSA) underwent restructuring and new and larger synods were formed. Atlantic Synod became a part of the Synod of the Mid-South and Catawba Synod joined National Capital Union, Baltimore, and New Castle presbyteries to become the Synod of the Piedmont. Prior to Reunion in 1983, there were seven nongeographical African American presbyteries and one nongeographical Native American presbytery. The Synod of South Dakota overtured the 182nd General Assembly (1970) of the UPCUSA to allow Dakota Presbytery to remain a nongeographical presbytery and to continue to provide ministry for Native Americans (Minutes, UPCUSA, 1970, Part I, pp. 354–56). Today there are no nongeographical African American presbyteries. There are four nongeographical Korean presbyteries and one nongeographical Native American presbytery.

Over the years, many persons have wondered how presbyteries select, elect, or appoint commissioners to the General Assembly. With this in mind, each synod representative on the General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR) contacted each presbytery in their synod and asked them what procedure was being used for selecting/electing their commissioners. Thereafter, assisted by a representative from the Research Services Department, the responses, together with other church statistical reports, were reviewed by a GACOR task force for purposes of preparing the instant report.

As a result of inquiries sent to the presbyteries, GACOR received 159 responses (92 percent) from a total of 173 presbyteries. This information, along with the historical statistics and statistics from the reports, gave insight into the ways in which commissioner selection/election is carried out by the various presbyteries. Some have very specific written guidelines, while others are general or oral. Since this is the time when the General Assembly will be going to biennial meetings and the number of commissioners will change, GACOR suggests that each presbytery consider becoming more aware of balancing their selection/election of commissioners they send to the General Assembly. The GACOR is suggesting that whatever process is used, presbyteries should include diversity of all varieties in their guidelines. Diversity includes not only racial ethnic, but also age, gender, and persons with disabilities.

Following is a summary of the research on gender, race ethnicity, and age representativeness of elder and minister commissioners in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) from 1998 to 2003. The quality and quantity of the responses varied, in part because of apparent variation in detail and formality of presbytery policies. Because of this response variation, the analyses that follow should be viewed as a broad attempt to summarize the practices of all presbyteries on commissioner choice:

- Written Guidelines—Three in four presbyteries (75 percent) report having written guidelines that they follow in choosing commissioners to General Assembly.

- Reference to Book of Order—Only 18 percent of policies mention the Book of Order or make clear that they are following recommendations of the Book of Order in their process of selection, i.e., by using language identical to G-9.0104a.
- Nominations from the Floor—Four in ten presbyteries (40 percent) explicitly indicate that it is possible to nominate other names from the floor when the official names recommended for commissioners are brought to the presbytery for a vote.
- Racial Ethnic Criteria Mentioned—Around a quarter of presbyteries (28 percent) mention that they give consideration to race ethnicity in the choice of commissioners. These mentions vary from the very general (citing G-9.0104a) to explicit requirements that certain numbers of commissioners come from specific racial ethnic groups.
- Gender Criteria Mentioned—A third of presbyteries (33 percent) mention that they give consideration to gender in the choice of commissioners. These mentions vary from the very general (citing G-9.0104a) to explicit requirements that certain numbers of commissioners be female.

An analysis of the gender, racial ethnicity, and age characteristics of commissioners to the last six General Assemblies (1998–2003), including a comparison with the larger constituency groups in the presbyteries from which commissioners are drawn, provides an opportunity to evaluate how well presbyteries are complying with representation requirements outlined in the Book of Order.

- Gender—A large majority of presbyteries have included among their commissioners a representative number of women. In 140 presbyteries (81 percent of the total of 173), the percentage of female minister commissioners is greater than or equal to the percentage of ministers who are female in the same presbytery. In 104 presbyteries (60 percent), the percentage of female elder commissioners is greater than or equal to the percentage of female elders in the same presbytery. A majority of the presbyteries that fell short (24 out of 44 for ministers, 42 out of 69 for elders) were within ten percentage points of sending a representative number of female ministers or female elders.
- Race Ethnicity—A narrow majority of presbyteries have included among their commissioners a representative number of racial ethnic persons. In 88 presbyteries (51 percent of the total), the percentage of racial ethnic minister commissioners is greater than or equal to the percentage of ministers in the same presbytery who are racial ethnic. In 93 presbyteries (54 percent), the percentage of racial ethnic elder commissioners is greater than or equal to the percentage of racial ethnic elders in the same presbytery. A majority of the presbyteries that fell short (74 out of 85 for ministers, 72 out of 80 for elders) were within ten percentage points of sending a representative number of racial ethnic ministers or racial ethnic elders.
- Age Less than 56 Years—Only a minority of presbyteries have included among their commissioners a representative number of persons aged 55 years or younger. In only 20 presbyteries (11 percent of the total) is the percentage of minister commissioners less than 56 years of age equal to or greater than the percentage of ministers in the presbytery who are less than 56 years of age. In only 36 presbyteries (21 percent) is the percentage of elder commissioners less than 56 years of age equal to or greater than the percentage of members in the presbytery who are less than 56 years of age. (Age data on members is used as a proxy because age data on elders is not reported by congregations.) Furthermore, few of the presbyteries that fell short (10 of 20 for ministers, 33 out of 137 for elders) were within ten percentage points of sending a representative number of ministers or elders who were less than 56 years of age.

Most presbyteries are complying with representation requirements for gender; around half are doing so for race ethnicity; and only a minority are doing so for age. Most presbyteries that fall short on gender and race ethnicity could achieve representativeness in these areas by appointing a female or racial ethnic person as an elder or minister commissioner to the 2006 or 2008 General Assemblies. A greater effort would be needed to achieve representativeness for younger elders and ministers.

The overall representation statistically seems to balance by the action of a few presbyteries that work hard to see that all are included. We hope that the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) realizes that although the number of diverse persons makes up a small number or percentage of the total membership in our denomination, their contribution is important and must be sought and acknowledged as we do the business of this church.

The following statistics were used in this report:

- Trends in racial ethnic membership of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) 1985 to 2002.
- Percent female ministers and minister commissioners by presbytery 1998 to 2003.
- Percent female elders and elder commissioners by presbytery 1998 to 2003.
- Percent racial ethnic clergy and clergy commissioners by presbytery 1998 to 2003.
- Percent racial ethnic elder commissioners and all elders by presbytery 1998 to 2003.
- Percent elder commissioners and total members aged 56 years or less by presbytery 1998 to 2003.
- Percent ministers commissioners and ministers aged 56 years or less by presbytery 1998 to 2003.

Item 03-07

On Amending Standing Rule B.5.e. Regarding the Timeline for Submitting Commissioners' Resolutions—From the Presbytery of Eastminster.

The Presbytery of Eastminster respectfully overtures the 216th General Assembly (2004) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to amend the second paragraph of Standing Rule B.5.e. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“The Stated Clerk shall determine and announce at the first meeting at which business is conducted the deadline for receipt of commissioners’ resolutions. The deadline shall not be earlier than ~~twenty-four hours after the assembly has convened~~ the close of the last business session on the opening day of the assembly.”

Rationale

The Form of Government in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) allows ideas to be considered by a presbytery/synod and effect changes on a national level through the overture process, and explicitly provides that sessions may bring business to the General Assembly only through its presbytery [G-10.0102p(6)]. The presbytery/synod, by the Spirit’s leading and the community’s discernment, becomes a place for broader ownership and refinement of ideas through the overture process.

The Form of Government also allows for commissioners’ resolutions, making provision for items of interest to a commissioner, but not endorsed by a presbytery/synod. The General Assembly, by the Spirit’s leading and the community’s discernment becomes a place for broader ownership and refinement of ideas through the commissioners’ resolution process.

Commissioners’ resolutions are submitted after the assembly convenes, with the deadline for submission set by the Stated Clerk, not earlier than 24 hours after the assembly convenes. Distribution of the commissioners’ resolutions well after convening the assembly may limit thoughtful, prayerful consideration and discernment by commissioners and delegates. Committee dockets are considered prior to convening the assembly so that the most effective order of business may be planned. With little time to reflect on revision of the docket before committee work starts, committees typically place commissioners’ resolutions after other business has been completed. With the press of completing business in a timely manner, the last items on the committee docket may not be given the prayerful, thoughtful consideration warranted. Advisory and advocacy groups have little time to consider their response to the resolutions.

This overture would require that these resolutions be submitted earlier in the assembly, allowing more time for thought to be given about placement on the committee docket, and more time for commissioners, delegates, advisory and advocacy groups to consider prayerfully and thoughtfully the resolutions and discern the Spirit's leading.

Since there will be more commissioners, and potentially more business, as we move to biennial assemblies, if this is not approved, the situation will be even more difficult in 2006 and beyond.

COGA COMMENT ON ITEM 03-07

Comment on Item 03-07—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) counsels the 216th General Assembly (2004) to approve Item 03-07 with one change. That change would be to add “one hour after” the close of the last business session on the opening day of the assembly.

Currently, commissioners' resolutions are due to the Stated Clerk no later than twenty-four hours after the convening of the assembly. This requires the Stated Clerk and the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures to process each resolution according to Standing Rule B.5.e.:

... The Stated Clerk shall not transmit ... any resolution that deals with matters of business already before the General Assembly, nor transmit any resolution whose purpose can be achieved by the regular process of amendment and debate.

Should the commissioners' resolution deal with substantially the same issues considered by one of the two previous sessions of the General Assembly, the Stated Clerk shall recommend that the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures take one of the following actions on the commissioners' resolutions: “refer to a subsequent assembly,” “decline for consideration,” or “take no action.” If the proposed resolution does deal with new business, the Stated Clerk shall transmit it to the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures ... for its referral. ... (Manual of the General Assembly, Standing Rule B.5.e., p. 13)

The result is that General Assembly committees do not usually receive new assignments of commissioners' resolutions until late Sunday night or Monday morning. This requires changes in their agendas and the scheduling of additional open hearings.

The change to an earlier deadline for commissioners' resolutions would allow committees to have an opportunity to make adjustments to their agendas and open hearing schedules in a manner that better facilitates the work of the committee.

Commissioners, before their arrival, know the business of the General Assembly. The COGA believes this would allow sufficient opportunity to develop and submit commissioners' resolutions by this proposed deadline.

The Standing Rules authorize the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly to offer comment or advice on business under consideration by the General Assembly. The COGA is a committee of fifteen persons, elected by the General Assembly from across the church, made up of elders and ministers who supervise the work of the Office of the General Assembly.

Item 03-08

On Amending G-13.0104 to Require Annual Meetings of the General Assembly—From the Presbytery of National Capital.

The Presbytery of National Capital overtures the 216th General Assembly (2004) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Shall the first sentence of G-13.0104 be amended to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“The General Assembly shall hold a stated meeting ~~at least biennially~~ annually.” [The rest of the paragraph remains unchanged.]

Rationale

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is rife with contention over a variety of issues.

Dialogue ought never be exchanged for dollars.

It is a central belief of the Reformed tradition that the reason we gather together in dialogue and debate is to collectively discern the guidance of the Holy Spirit and to be accountable to one another.

Community, unity, and reconciliation are products of communication, not separation.

Much can happen in a two-year span that the church has a moral imperative to address.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 03-08

Advice on Item 03-08—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) answer Item 03-08 with the following comment:

The current language of G-13.0104 permits either annual or biennial meetings. Amending the Book of Order as proposed by this overture would limit the flexibility of each assembly to determine its meeting schedule.

There is no constitutional prohibition to the holding of annual meetings of the General Assembly. The amendments recently approved by the presbyteries are designed to accommodate either annual or biennial meetings.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution reminds the 216th General Assembly (2004) that a review of biennial assemblies has been mandated, and will be acted upon by the 219th General Assembly (2010).

COGA COMMENT ON ITEM 03-08

Comment on Item 03-08—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly advises that Item 03-08 be disapproved.

The 214th General Assembly (2002) and the 215th General Assembly (2003) discussed the issues raised in this overture. After much debate, they approved the trial period of holding biennial General Assemblies. In addition three Book of Order amendments concerning biennial assemblies were before the presbyteries this year. They were all approved by wide margins.

The action of the 214th General Assembly (2002) was not to permanently move to biennial assemblies but to engage in a trial period, conduct a study, and then make decisions about the future. The 214th General Assembly (2002) directed that after the 219th General Assembly (2010) a task force would be created to:

... ascertain the impact of biennial assemblies on the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in terms of its ministry and mission; stewardship including per capita apportionment, mission dollars, and special offerings; communication including knowledge of the General Assembly and its work in the church . . . ; the Form of Government and overtures sent to the General Assembly; use of judicial process and ways of dealing with conflictual issues, as well as addressing the theology of our Form of Government and how it has been impacted by biennial assemblies; and bring a report to the 220th General Assembly (2012). (Minutes, 2002, Part I, p. 159)

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly believes that biennial assemblies are a faithful expression of the historic principles of church governance and will allow the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to give a more effective witness to the contemporary world and to provide a better stewardship of resources for the mission of the whole church.

It is the historic nature of Presbyterian church government that governance is exercised through the collected wisdom and united voice of the whole church. A distinctive feature of the Presbyterian church has been the gathering together of elders and ministers of the Word and Sacraments in equal numbers in governing bodies. The General Assembly is the most inclusive of the governing bodies, with specific responsibilities for the whole church and its mission in the world.

Our world is very different today. The attendees at the first General Assembly came by horseback and carriage. Later attendees would come by rail and jet. As the United States grew, so did the geography represented in the General Assembly.

The first assembly had commissioners from the east coast of the United States. Today people travel from the four corners of the planet to participate in deliberations about the mission of the church. The communications in the world of the first General Assembly were by irregular mail and the distribution of materials printed by handset type. We now live in a world where communications are instant with the availability of electronic mail and voice mail.

The General Assembly began as an annual gathering of people who had a limited horizon of mission and limited means of communication to deliberate with each other about that mission. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in the twenty-first century has an unlimited horizon for mission and an endless variety of means to communicate about that mission.

In 1981, the United Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A. voted to amend the Book of Order to have General Assembly meetings “at least once in every two years.” The current language in G-13.104 was adopted with the new Book of Order at Reunion. The request for biennial assemblies has been growing in frequency and the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly, with the concurrence of the General Assembly Council, is now presenting its joint proposal in favor of biennial assemblies.

The matter of biennial assemblies and/or different patterns of assembly meetings is not new. Previous assembly responses to recommendations to reduce the frequency of assemblies were “no action” or referral. The General Assembly has voted to approve reports that recommended no change in annual assemblies. The General Assembly disapproved the proposal for biennial assemblies in 1992 and 1996. The disapproval in 1992 was based on alternative cost savings that reduced the meeting time to the current Saturday-to-Saturday schedule. In 1996, disapproval was based on several factors, including the attempt to legislate by Book of Order amendments.

A 1986 Presbyterian Panel found support among the majorities of laity and clergy for moving towards, or experimenting with, biennial assemblies. Those favoring biennial assemblies cited cost savings and time savings—the reasons still offered most frequently. The Presbyterian Panel summary also noted that those opposed “appear to hold their views very strongly” with some analysis of opinions of the assembly meeting.

“. . . The church affirms ‘Ecclesia reformata, semper reformanda,’ that is, ‘The church reformed, always reforming,’ according to the Word of God and the call of the Spirit” (Book of Order, G-2.0200).

Changes do engage Presbyterians in conversations about their church as they live out its credo of the church reformed, reformed and always being reformed. That credo is best lived out when Presbyterians have adequate time to reflect upon their faith, history, and theology. The PC(USA) engagement in reflection has transformed ecumenical commitments, developed better mission structures, created new funding resources, and allowed the growth of relationships that led to the reunion of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). Those long-term periods of reflection allowed the church to develop new future directions while being fully engaged in the ongoing mission of the church. Biennial assemblies would allow the PC(USA) to devote time and energy to the ongoing mission of the church. Biennial assemblies would generate longer periods of time and more energy to fully engage the PC(USA) in setting directions for the twenty-first century.

The Standing Rules authorize the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly to offer comment or advice on business under consideration by the General Assembly. The COGA is a committee of fifteen persons, elected by the General Assembly from across the church, made up of elders and ministers who supervise the work of the Office of the General Assembly.

Item 03-09

[In response to Item 03-09, the assembly approved an alternate resolution. See p. 45.]

On Directing GAC to Provide an Introduction to Antiracism Training for Assemblies in 2006, 2008, and 2010, and Making Recommendations in 2010 for Future Events—From the Presbytery of Detroit.

The Presbytery of Detroit overtures the 216th General Assembly (2004) to direct the General Assembly Council to do the following:

1. Provide an introduction to antiracism training for all commissioners attending the 217th General Assembly (2006), the 218th General Assembly (2008), and the 219th General Assembly (2010).
2. Evaluate the ongoing need for and impact of such events and make recommendations to the 219th General Assembly (2010) about holding such events at future General Assemblies.

Rationale

We believe that we are all created by God in God's image, have infinite value in the eyes of God, and are made one in Jesus Christ.

We confess that our society created a system of white privilege or racism by incorporating policies and procedures based on negative stereotypes of people of color into the normal operations of our institutions.

We confess that although progress toward equality has been made, this racism remains widespread and continues to damage and diminish all of us, our churches, our society and its institutions.

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) recognizes that the task of dismantling racism is a long-term struggle that requires discernment, prayer, and worship-based action (Facing Racism: A Vision of the Beloved Community, Minutes, 1999, Part I, pp. 273ff, esp. 284).

The 210th General Assembly (1998) approved the Racial Ethnic Immigrant Growth Strategy, which sets the goal of increasing racial ethnic membership to 10 percent by 2005 and 20 percent by 2010, and notes the necessity of understanding and dismantling racism in order to reach this goal.

The National Ministries Division developed and led a three-hour introduction to antiracism training for all commissioners to the 213th General Assembly (2001). More than 800 people attended this event, and it led to an increase in antiracism awareness and training across the PC(USA).

COGA & GAC COMMENT ON ITEM 03-09

Comment on Item 03-09—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly and the General Assembly Council.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) and the General Assembly Council (GAC) suggest that the 216th General Assembly (2004) refer Item 03-09 to COGA and GAC.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) and the General Assembly Council (GAC) strongly support the intention of this overture. The matter of providing antiracism training to commissioners and other attendees of future assembly meetings is both important and timely.

The COGA and GAC will work out the programmatic, logistical, and financial details of holding such training at future assemblies, and will bring a proposal for its implementation to the 217th General Assembly (2006).

ACREC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 03-09

Advice and Counsel on Item 03-09—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC).

Item 03-09 requests the 216th General Assembly (2004) to direct the GAC to provide an Introduction to Anti-racism Training for assemblies in 2006, 2008, and 2010, and to make recommendations for future antiracism events, from the Presbytery of Detroit.

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns concurs with the joint Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA)/General Assembly Council (GAC) comment recommending COGA/GAC provide a proposal for implementation to the 217th General Assembly (2006), stipulating that this training would be provided at the 218 General Assembly (2008), the 219th General Assembly (2010), and the 220th General Assembly (2012).

Item 03-10

[The assembly approved Item 03-10. See p. 46.]

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) do the following:

1. Amend Standing Rule E.7. by striking the existing text and inserting the following:

“7. *The Board of Directors for the Presbyterian Historical Society

“a. *The board of directors exists to assure that the mission of the Presbyterian Historical Society—to collect, preserve, and share our history—is achieved in the most effective and efficient manner, in faithfulness to God's call and in support of the mission of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

“b. *The board of directors shall be composed of a minimum of eight and a maximum of twelve persons. The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly shall elect and the General Assembly shall confirm the board. The members of the board of directors shall serve a four-year term and shall be eligible to serve one additional full or partial term.

“c. The budget for the Presbyterian Historical Society shall be submitted as part of the Office of the General Assembly’s regular budget process.

“d. The responsibilities of the board of directors shall include:

“(1) Establishing the strategic direction for the Presbyterian Historical Society with the concurrence of the Stated Clerk.

“(2) Providing oversight of and accountability for the Presbyterian Historical Society to the church at large.

“(4) Advocating for and promoting the work of the Presbyterian Historical Society.”

Rationale

In 2001, archival consultants Warner & Yakel recommended that a task force be created to review the Presbyterian Historical Society’s form of government. In 2003, that task force recommended to the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) that the PHS’s advisory committee be replaced by a more traditional nonprofit board, with significant new governance responsibilities. This Standing Rule change reflects the transition from a General Assembly advisory committee to the new governance structure.

2. Amend the second paragraph of Standing Rule G.3.c. by striking “Committee for the Presbyterian Historical Society” and inserting “Board of Directors of the Presbyterian Historical Society,” so that the second paragraph of G.3.c. reads: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“The following will be related to the Office of the General Assembly for staffing and budgeting purposes: Committee on the Office of the General Assembly, Permanent Judicial Commission, ~~Committee for the Presbyterian Historical Society~~ Board of Directors of the Presbyterian Historical Society, Committee on Representation, Advisory Committee on the Constitution, Advisory Committee on Litigation, General Assembly Nominating Committee, Presbyteries’ Cooperative Committee on Examinations for Candidates, and commissions and special committees of the General Assembly (see Standing Rule E.8).”

Rationale

This Standing Rule change reflects the transition from a General Assembly advisory committee of the new governance structure as described in Standing Rule E. The board of directors as the new governance structure of the Presbyterian Historical Society replaces the current advisory committee, the Committee for the Presbyterian Historical Society.

Item 03-11

[The assembly referred Item 03-11 to the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly-appointed task force. See p. 46.]

On the Montreat Historical Center—From the Presbytery of South Louisiana.

The Presbytery of South Louisiana overtures the 216th General Assembly (2004) to do the following:

1. Cancel or postpone any movement of church records to Philadelphia until all problems are resolved.

2. Develop a long-range funding plan to support regional archival sites for church records using modern archival methods.
3. Notify all churches with records in Montreat of any plans that affect their records and obtain their consent to any changes.
4. Budget funding to restore the staff of the Department of History in Montreat and its operation.

Rationale

There are General Assembly plans to move items stored in the former Historical Foundation, now called the Department of History, from Montreat, N.C., to Philadelphia, Pa.

The items to be moved consist mostly of those from churches in the former PCUS, which in the great majority are in much closer proximity to Montreat than Philadelphia.

These churches would have greater difficulty accessing their records in Philadelphia than Montreat.

These records for many years have been kept in excellent climate-controlled conditions in Montreat.

A former ordained pastor and missionary member of the Presbytery of South Louisiana made a large gift to build an annex to the Montreat Historical Foundation for the preservation of records of churches in the former PCUS.

This facility is recognized as the best archival facility of any denomination.

If contents were moved, this facility would be idled, negating the purpose of the donation.

The moving of these delicate records would be very expensive.

The consent of each church with records stored there would be required.

Additional funding for this function can be raised from the churches having records stored there.

COGA COMMENT ON ITEM 03-11

Comment on Item 03-11—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly counsels the 216th General Assembly (2004) to answer Item 03-11 with the following:

That the 216th General Assembly (2004) instruct the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) to receive the recommendations of the task force and take action as appropriate in relation to the Presbyterian Historical Society (PHS) and report its actions to the 217th General Assembly (2006).

That the action by COGA be based on the following:

- mission of the Presbyterian Historical Society (PHS),
- requirements of the Constitution of the PC(USA),
- development of affiliations with other church-related institutions,

- accessibility to scholars, governing bodies, and the people of the PC(USA),
- long-term financial viability of the PHS based on an assessment of per capita resources,
- ability to maintain and house the current collection and its expansion,
- integration and utilization of new technology, and
- retention of a highly skilled and dedicated staff.

That COGA work diligently to provide ongoing historical programs and resources for the whole denomination, including those regions that currently have an established site.

Background

The PHS currently has three locations: Montreat, N.C., Philadelphia, Pa., and Louisville, Ky. In 2001, the society contracted with archival consultants Robert Warner and Elizabeth Yakel to examine the infrastructure, programs, funding base, and facilities of the society. As a result of the Warner-Yakel report, COGA appointed a task force comprised of members of COGA, General Assembly Council, PHS, and the Montreat community to study the recommendations the consultants generated. The areas under review cover all the areas of concern raised by this overture.

Members of the task force are: Elder Anne Bond (Denver, Colo.), co-moderator of the task force and current moderator of the Committee on the Presbyterian Historical Society; the Reverend Katherine Cunningham (Ridgewood, N.J.), co-moderator of the task force and current moderator of the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA); the Reverend Catherine Ulrich (Fort Smith, Ariz.) also represents COGA on the task force; Burnett Kelly (Midland, Mich.) represents the Committee on the Presbyterian Historical Society. Members-at-large include Elder Walter Baker (Mound, Minn.) representing the General Assembly Council; Elder Jim Henderson (Montreat, N.C.); the Reverend Richard Ray (Bristol, Tenn.); and the Reverend Clifton Kirkpatrick, Stated Clerk of the General Assembly. Fred Heuser, director of the historical society, and Margery Sly, deputy director, serve as staff to the task force.

This task force met in Louisville, Kentucky, on January 7–8, 2004, where members organized themselves for their work and began the process of studying the issues of PHS in its three locations. The second meeting of the task force was in Montreat, N.C. on April 15–17, 2004, which provided an opportunity for consultations with those who had a strong interest in PHS and its future.

At the consultation in Montreat, a representative of Columbia Theological Seminary expressed on behalf of its board of trustees that the seminary was “serious about working in partnership with the task force.” It is anticipated that the potential of such affiliations will have impact positively the work of the task force.

The task force anticipates having its report and recommendations completed by the spring of 2005.

1. Financial Considerations

Financial viability of the society was a concern highlighted in the Warner-Yakel report. At present, more than 85 percent of the PHS budget comes from per capita revenues—an amount of approximately $2 million a year.

It has become increasingly clear that per capita receipts cannot sustain the rising costs to operate three locations. The elimination of duplicate costs could free up funds for building and technological needs. The society continues to receive archival material and has increasing costs for staff, insurance, and building upkeep. In addition, both Philadelphia and Montreat have inadequate financial reserves for major facility repairs and renovations needed in the next few years. Currently funds do not exist for any new technological infrastructure. The COGA senses the urgency of moving toward consolidation.

The financial situation has given greater priority to development efforts. This was an area identified by the Warner-Yakel report. The results of a recent major development initiative have gone for specific projects and have not been available for the general operations of the society. Guided by the Warner-Yakel report development, efforts will continue to be a priority to preserve this rich heritage. However, development efforts cannot answer all of the challenges in the financial situation.

2. Formation of the Society

The archives of the UPCUSA and PCUS were designed as places where records could be deposited and placed under safekeeping and made available to serve the whole church. The stories of individual congregations, presbyteries, and synods are intertwined nationally as well as regionally. The history of an individual congregation in the western part of the United States could begin with the work of the home mission board in Atlanta or New York. The creation of separate regional archives would change the mission of the PHS from a common point for research to a collection of storehouses for historical materials. That would mean that finding the total historical record of any one ministry would require more effort by the professional historical researcher or the individual looking up their family history.

In 1931, the church affirmed the direction of the Historical Foundation:

The conditions upon which the original collection was donated were: (1) The continued maintenance and development of the library, (2) that it should be kept under the best fire protection, and (3) that it should not be restricted in scope to the materials bearing directly on our own division of the Church, but so extended as to provide materials in the study of Presbyterianism throughout America. From the beginning, two or more of the other Branches of the Presbyterian Family have been represented on our Executive Committee, and the Associate Reformed Synod particularly has given us their hearty co-operation.

The purposes of the Foundation are (1) the protection of official and rare materials against loss, and (2) the assemblage of the same at one point for the encouragement of research study. In a word, the Historical Foundation was not to be storehouse, but for practical service. The distribution of official records and materials throughout the wide extent of the Church prohibited any great amount of research because of expense. In fact our rich official files, save for local purposes and these only to a very limited extent, were idle capital. This disadvantage the late Drs. R. C. Reed and H. Dosker greatly lamented. The different synods and presbyteries, not to say local churches, were interested in different institutions and could not be expected to assemble their official records at any one of these without giving an undue advantage, as well as imposing an extra expense. Hence the necessity of an agreement to establish a separate and distinct organization at a common point where these records could be deposited and thus placed under safe-keeping and where they would be brought into the service of the whole Church. This forward step on the part of the Church has been more than justified. Many records thought to exist were found lost, and only after the most diligent efforts extending through years have been recovered, while some continue to be lost to the Church. The assemblage of the materials has greatly stimulated the entire Church in the preservation and study of its history. (Minutes, PCUS, 1931, Part I, p. 102)

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly is a committee of fifteen persons, elected by the General Assembly from across the church, made up of elders and ministers who supervise the work of the Office of the General Assembly.

Item 03-12

On Amending the Standing Rules to Increase the Number of Youth Advisory Delegates (YADs) to the Biennial Meetings of the General Assembly—From the Presbytery of Greater Atlanta.

The Presbytery of Greater Atlanta overtures the 216th General Assembly (2004) to amend the standing rules (A.2.c.) by increasing the number of youth advisory delegates (YADs) attending biennial assemblies by adding one YAD per assembly from each synod. [This will increase the number being sent to 189, making the ratio approximately 189:820 or 23 percent (a 2 percent increase). The increase in the number of YADs will be approximately 9 percent per assembly, and the decrease over the two-year period will be 45 percent.]

Rationale

One youth advisory delegate (YAD) is sent to General Assembly each year. Assuming all presbyteries send one, this should total 173. Currently, the YAD to commissioner ratio is approximately 173:554 or 31 percent. In 2006, at the first biennial assembly, the number of commissioners will be raised to approximately 820 from 554. This is a 48 percent increase in the number of commissioners per assembly, but over a two-year period, it is a decrease of 26 percent. However, if left alone, the ratio will become approximately 173:820 or 21 percent. It is a 0 percent increase in the YADs per assembly, and a decrease of 50 percent over a two-year period.

Biennial assemblies will give fewer opportunities for all Presbyterians to represent at General Assembly. But, adjustments have been made for commissioners so that their numbers are increased per assembly. However, the number of YADs would be cut in half with the current resolution. The overall YAD experience is quite different from the commissioners', and is something that more, not fewer, youth should experience. Unfortunately, not many get to attend assembly in either case. The age range for YADs is 17–22, which gives one a six-year window of opportunity. With the onset of biennial assemblies, that window decreases to three years. An elder or minister can go at any time after ordination.

The representation of the YADs will still be a smaller percentage, but there are a few more able to experience the life and work of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

With the current resolution, there will be fewer opportunities to touch the lives of young people. Our youths want to be involved and know what their church is doing. Many of them have been worshiping in Presbyterian churches all their lives, and they are finally getting the chance to see and worship with Presbyterians from all over the country, from all walks of life, and from every side of every issue.

The young people are the future of the PC(USA). But, they are also the present. A trip to General Assembly helps shape their lives. It gives them an opportunity to be in communion with people who do what they may do in the future. In this church everyone is a minister, including our youth. It is inspiring to see their energy and enthusiasm and passion for things lost on so many other youths. They love the Lord, they love the Word, and they love the church. It is refreshing to see how many young people there are that are not only willing, but eager and anxious, to be involved. The life of the General Assembly is only enhanced by their presence.

In the church today, approximately 3 to 4 percent of ordained ministers of the Word and Sacrament are under 35. General Assembly is a way to encourage a life of ministry to the younger generation. Each year the YADs have one night dedicated to education about Presbyterian seminaries. Many YADs will have life-altering experiences at General Assembly, and it may lead them to a life's vocation of service to the Lord.

After General Assembly, commissioners' and YADs' jobs are not over. They take the General Assembly home with them, back to their presbyteries and back to their churches. Many YADs will spend time with their youth groups, relaying their experience, and bringing enthusiasm to their peers. But, they also bring it to their whole congregation. So many people want to go to General Assembly, and so few get to attend. And, to be able to share their experiences is a unique gift.

COGA COMMENT ON ITEM 03-12

Comment on Item 03-12—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) counsels the 216th General Assembly (2004) to disapprove Item 03-12.

The cost of the sixteen additional youth advisory delegates adds $20,800 to the cost of a biennial assembly.

In developing the formula for commissioners for the biennial assemblies, COGA was mindful of concerns that the number of commissioners had decreased since reunion while the number of advisory delegates has been consistent. In 1985, the number of commissioners was 674 and the number of advisory delegates was 229. Today the number of commissioners is 544 and the number of advisory delegates is 221.

	Commissioners	Advisory Delegates
197th Assembly (1985)	674	229
216th assembly (2004)	544	221
Biennial assembly	787	221
Proposed overture	787	237

The Standing Rules authorize the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly to offer comment or advice on business under consideration by the General Assembly. The COGA is a committee of fifteen persons, elected by the General Assembly from across the church, made up of elders and ministers who supervise the work of the Office of the General Assembly.

ACREC, ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 03-12

Advice and Counsel on Item 03-12—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns and the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns.

Item 03-12 requests the 216th General Assembly (2004) to amend the Standing Rules [A.2.c.] to increase the number of youth advisory delegates (YADS) to the biennial meetings of the General Assembly by adding one YAD per assembly from each synod, from the Presbytery of Greater Atlanta.

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns and the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns advise that Item 03-12 be approved.

Rationale

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns and the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns affirm that the issues raised in Item 03-12 are important dimensions of the overall PC(USA) commitments to diversity and inclusion, and therefore offers these additional supportive points of emphasis:

1. That there shall be no age discrimination in the whole life of the whole church is the clearly repeated biblical, theological, and polity thrust of many statements in the Constitution of the PC(USA). Persons of all ages shall have full and fair access, participation, and representation in the mission, ministries, and decision-making of the church.

2. Directly and indirectly, specific attention is paid to persons under twenty-five years of age, so that youth shall have full voice and vote in the life of the church. Notably, G-14.0201a permits, if not encourages, congregations to nominate, train, elect, and ordain youth as elders and deacons of the church.

3. The Companion to the Constitution (an authorized publication of the Office of the General Assembly) rightly states that young people are affirmed and commissioned to tasks as they “join the church.” Youth therefore should receive leadership training and development along with all other persons of any and every age that would be servant leaders. Service as a YAD is a preeminent opportunity for leader development of youth who already are active leaders (some of whom are ordained elders and deacons) in the PC(USA).

4. The Presbyterian “Pastoral Leadership Search Effort.” (PLSE) has tested the “pulse” of the church and rightly determined that major new efforts must be devoted to identifying and nurturing new generations of young leaders and pastors. Every congregation is being urged to name and support high school and college youth/young adults with leadership ability and a desire to serve the church. The PLSE goal is no less than to benefit the church by increasing the pool of candidates for ministry. Clearly, increasing the pool of YADS participating in General Assembly is a complimentary part of this whole process of enriching the present and future life of the PC (USA).

Further, while advocating for the full inclusion of youth, the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns and the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns urge that all governing bodies give close and careful attention to the inclusion and fair representation of youth from all racial ethnic and immigrant groups in the PC(USA).

Item 03-13

[The assembly referred Item 03-13 to the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly. See p. 46.]

On Amending Standing Rule A.2. Regarding Advisory Delegates—From the Presbytery of Minnesota Valleys.

The Presbytery of Minnesota Valleys overtures the 216th General Assembly (2004) to amend the Standing Rules of the General Assembly as follows:

1. Youth Advisory Delegates

Amend Standing Rule A.2.c. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“c. Each presbytery shall appoint an active member of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), who shall be between the ages of seventeen and twenty three years of age on the date the General Assembly convenes, to be a youth advisory delegate. When the General Assembly meets biennially, presbyteries with membership of more than 24,000 members shall appoint one additional youth advisory delegate.”

2. Theological Student Advisory Delegates

Amend the first paragraph of Standing Rule A.2.d. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“d. There shall be a delegation of theological student advisory delegates each year: two from each of the theological institutions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.); one from each of the theological institutions in a covenant relationship with the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.); and one each from three selected other theological seminaries. When the General Assembly meets biennially, theological institutions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) shall appoint one more theological student advisory delegate (in addition to the other two). The selection process for these delegates is as follows:”

3. Missionary Advisory Delegates

Amend Standing Rule A.2.e. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“e. There shall be eight missionary advisory delegates who shall be chosen by the Worldwide Ministries Division from persons who are members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and mission personnel assigned by the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in another country in which this church is engaged in mission. To the degree possible, the selection shall provide a global geographical representation with no two delegates representing the same country or geographical area and rotating the geographical representation. When the General Assembly meets biennially, the Worldwide Ministries Division shall appoint two additional missionary advisory delegates. The division shall notify the Stated Clerk at the time these persons are named. The expenses to the General Assembly of each missionary advisory delegate shall include transportation only from the point of entry or domicile of the delegate in the United States and return.”

4. Ecumenical Advisory Delegates

Amend Standing Rule A.2.f. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“f. There shall be up to fifteen ecumenical advisory delegates. Ten of these delegates shall be from churches outside of the United States. No more than five shall be from member churches of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches. When the General Assembly meets biennially, there shall be twelve ecumenical advisory delegates appointed from churches of the United States, and six appointed from member churches of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches; totaling eighteen ecumenical advisory delegates. Ecumenical advisory delegates shall be selected by the highest ecclesiastical authorities of their churches, in response to the invitation of a previous General Assembly. The assembly shall extend such invitations at the recommendation of the General Assembly Council upon nomination by the Committee on Ecumenical Relations (see Standing Rule E.8).”

Rationale

The 214th General Assembly (2002) approved biennial meetings starting in 2006. The 215th General Assembly (2003) reaffirmed the biennial meetings as well as approved around a 50 percent increase in both pastor and elder commissioners, moving from 548 commissioners to 816. However, the last General Assembly did not approve any increase in the number of advisory delegates. Advisory delegates include youth, theological students, ecumenical representatives, and missionaries.

By keeping the number of advisory delegates the same in biennial meetings as in annual meetings, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is losing the knowledge gained of potential future leaders of the church that did not have the opportunity to attend General Assembly. Advisory delegates gain tremendous knowledge about the governing bodies of the church. Many times they even learn parliamentary procedures!

With biennial General Assembly meetings, the total advisory delegates decreased from 39.6 percent to 26.5 percent while pastor and elder commissioners gained 50 percent. But numbers are not the sole consideration. The immense knowledge gained by advisory delegates on how a General Assembly operates is shared with the individual's local church, presbytery, and synod. If we are truly a connectional church, we need to offer opportunities for our future leaders to be a part of the governing body of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

These amendments would allow 2 more missionaries, 10 theological, 3 ecumenical representatives, and an estimated 12 to 20 additional youth advisory delegates to attend the biennial General Assembly.

COGA COMMENT ON ITEM 03-13

Comment on Item 03-13—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) counsels the 216th General Assembly (2004) to disapprove Item 03-13.

The cost of forty-two additional advisory delegates adds $54,600 to the cost of a biennial assembly.

In developing the formula for commissioners for the biennial assemblies, COGA was mindful of concerns that the number of commissioners had decreased since reunion while the number of advisory delegates has been consistent. In 1985, the number of commissioners was 674 and the number of advisory delegates was 229. Today, the number of commissioners is 544 and the number of advisory delegates is 221.

	Commissioners	Advisory Delegates
197th Assembly (1985)	674	229
216th assembly (2004)	544	221
Biennial assembly	787	221
Proposed overture	787	263

The committee also raises concerns about the proposed formula for adding additional youth advisory delegates for presbyteries with memberships above 24,000. This proposal would eliminate any additional youth advisory delegate representation from seven of the sixteen synods that do not have any presbyteries in their bounds with membership above 24,000.

Item 03-14

[The assembly disapproved Item 03-14. See p. 46.]

On Amending Standing Rule A.2. to Restrict Advisory Delegates to the Same Privilege in Committee as They Have in Plenary—From the Presbytery of Northeast Georgia.

The Presbytery of Northeast Georgia overtures the 216th General Assembly (2004) to amend Standing Rule A.2.b. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“b. Advisory delegates shall be assigned to assembly committees ~~as voting members and shall have the privilege of the floor of the General Assembly~~ with the same privileges as in the plenary session of General Assembly, i.e., privilege of the floor without vote. Only voting members shall have the privilege of proposing or seconding a motion. When certain issues come before ~~a assembly committees and plenary session~~ of the General Assembly, the advisory delegates may be polled prior to the vote of the commissioners to determine their advice.”

Rationale

Advisory delegates provide a vast resource for General Assembly meetings. Their viewpoint has come to be highly regarded. Nothing should interfere with their participation in the Presbyterian system of church government, especially at General Assembly. Many valuable experiences result from this participation.

In 1973–74, the United Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A. had a special committee who reported the expectations for youth advisory delegates (YADs) as follows ([XIV, 6] 12 B):

It is expected that a youth advisory delegate will participate in the General Assembly process in the following ways: (a) Consciousness raising, i.e. increasing the sensitivity of the General Assembly as to how young Christians see and respond to issues and concerns before the church. (b) As visible and articulate members of the General Assembly. (c) To sharpen the issues and concerns before the church that affect youth particularly. (d) To seek and contribute to the openness, the sensitivity, and the faithfulness of the church on the level of General Assembly. (e) Youth advisory delegates shall not be elected to General Assembly with either a direct or tacit understanding as to how they will speak at the assembly, or speak and vote in committee on any pending subject.”

We totally agree with these expectations.

However, this overture questions whether the role of advisory delegates are “advisory” when given the privilege of vote in General Assembly committees. Advisory delegates have the power to change the outcome of a particular bill or overture by overriding the vote of commissioners. This happens on close votes where there are enough advisory delegates to change the decision. While the General Assembly has the final vote, the action of a committee either sending forward or withholding legislation can have a significant impact on the final disposition of that legislation.

In the thirteen committees in the 215th General Assembly (2003), advisory delegates represented a minimum of 25 percent (Assembly Committee 02) of the votes to a maximum of 31 percent (Assembly Committee 01) of the votes. The average was 26.92 percent of the votes per committee (one in four votes). This clearly causes distortion in the historical parity of elder/minister votes in PC(USA) actions.

The issue can be easily resolved by granting all advisory delegates, including YADs, the same privilege in committee that they have in plenary session. They are encouraged to speak to issues (privilege of floor) with no vote, except, an advisory vote, which may be taken prior to the commissioners' vote on certain issues.

The practice of advisory delegates voting in committee dates back to the early 1970s. Considering that this is the 216th General Assembly (2004), this is a relatively new approach. When enacted it was a distinct break with historical government of the church by duly elected presbyters.

COGA COMMENT ON ITEM 03-14

Comment on Item 03-14—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly counsels the 216th General Assembly (2004) to disapprove Item 03-14.

Previous assemblies have debated this issue. Commissioners have consistently reaffirmed the value of advisory delegates having voice and vote in committees.

The work of General Assembly committees is to process and hone recommendations for deliberation and vote in plenary. Advisory delegates make a positive contribution to these deliberations. They enrich the life of the General Assembly and help it to fulfill the call of the Book of Order in G-4.0403:

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) shall give full expression to the rich diversity within its membership and shall provide means, which will assure a greater inclusiveness leading to wholeness in its emerging life. Persons of all racial ethnic groups, different ages, both sexes, various disabilities, diverse geographical areas, different theological positions consistent with the Reformed tradition, as well as different marital conditions (married, single, widowed, or divorced) shall be guaranteed full participation and access to representation in the decision making of the church.

The full participation of advisory delegates in the work of the committee brings a richer and broader perspective to the debate and the recommendations made to the plenary. The full participation of advisory delegates ensures their ownership in the work of the committee. The process involving advisory delegates sharpens recommendations.

The Standing Rules authorize the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly to offer comment or advice on business under consideration by the General Assembly. The COGA is a committee of fifteen persons, elected by the General Assembly from across the church, made up of elders and ministers who supervise the work of the Office of the General Assembly.

ACREC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 03-14

Advice and Counsel on Item 03-14—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC).

Item 03-14 proposes amending Standing Rule A.2.b. so as to remove the right of vote by advisory delegates in their assigned assembly committees.

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) concurs with the advice and comment of the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC) that Item 03-14 be disapproved.

The ACREC adds this additional advice and comment:

1. That there shall be no age discrimination in the whole life of the whole church is the clearly repeated biblical, theological, and polity thrust of many statements in the Constitution of the PC(USA). Persons of all ages shall have full and fair access, participation, and representation in the mission, ministries, and decision-making of the church.

2. Directly and indirectly, specific attention is paid to persons under twenty-five years of age, so that youth shall have full voice and vote in the life of the church. Notably, G-14.0201a permits, if not encourages, congregations to nominate, train, elect, and ordain youth as elders and deacons of the church.

3. The Companion to the Constitution (an authorized publication of the Office of the General Assembly) rightly states that young people are affirmed and commissioned to tasks as they “join the church.” Youth therefore should receive leadership training and development along with all other persons of any and every age who would be servant leaders. Service as a YAD is a preeminent opportunity for leader development of youth who already are active leaders (some of whom are ordained elders and deacons) in the PC(USA).

4. The Presbyterian “Pastoral Leadership Search Effort.” (PLSE) has tested the “pulse” of the church and rightly determined that major new efforts must be devoted to identifying and nurturing new generations of young leaders and pastors. Every congregation is being urged to name and support high school and college youth/young adults with leadership ability and a desire to serve the church. The PLSE goal is no less than to benefit the church by increasing the pool of candidates for ministry. Clearly, increasing the pool of YADS participating in General Assembly is a complimentary part of this whole process of enriching the present and future life of the PC(USA).

Further, while advocating for the full inclusion of youth, the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns urges that all governing bodies give close and careful attention to the inclusion and fair representation of youth from all racial ethnic and immigrant groups in the PC(USA).

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 03-14

Advice and Counsel on Item 03-14—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns.

Item 03-14 calls to amend Standing Rule A.2.b. to give advisory delegates the same privilege in committee as they have in General Assembly plenary.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC) advises that Item 03-14 be disapproved.

Rationale

The right of voice and vote in committee gives substance to the opinions of advisory delegates thereby increasing the value of their participation in the decision-making process of the General Assembly. Giving advisory delegates voice without vote in plenary ensures that final decision of the assembly are made by the elected commissioners.

Item 03-15

[The assembly disapproved Item 03-15. See p. 46.]

On Amending Standing Rule A.2. to Remove Advisory Delegate Vote in Assembly Committees, and to Investigate the Possibility of Study Credit for YADs—From the Presbytery of the Peaks.

The Presbytery of the Peaks overtures the 216th General Assembly (2004) to do the following:

1. Amend A.2.b. of the Standing Rules of the General Assembly to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italics.]

“b. Advisory Delegates shall be assigned to assembly committees ~~as voting members~~ and shall have the privilege of the floor in committee and plenary session of the General Assembly without vote. Only voting members shall have the privilege of proposing or seconding a motion. When certain issues come before a committee or plenary session of the General Assembly, the advisory delegates may be polled prior to the vote of commissioners to determine their advice.”

2. Direct the Office of the General Assembly to investigate the possibility of an educational study credit for youth advisory delegates attending General Assemblies.

Rationale

The role of the advisory delegate, according to Standing Rule A.2.a., is “to attend the meeting of the General Assembly in an advisory role so that the assembly may be assured of hearing and taking cognizance of their special viewpoints.” Advisory delegate vote in committee oversteps the intended purpose of the advisory delegate by elevating these positions to that of regular, ordained commissioners while in committee.

Many advisory delegates are not ordained and yet participate at assemblies as if they were because of advisory delegate vote in committee. Reformed tradition tells us that the call of God to lead must first be recognized before an individual should help in making decisions affecting the entire church.

Presbyterian polity has always made it a point to maintain parity between ministers and laypeople when governing the church. The Book of the Order clearly states in G-13.0102 that “the General Assembly shall consist of equal numbers of elders and ministers from each presbytery.” Advisory delegate vote in committee disrupts this parity by outnumbering minister commissioners.

The role of the advisory delegate is to give advice to the assembly, but the experience does not end there for those delegates. This overall experience is hampered by the politics that become involved due to advisory delegate vote in committee. Without that vote, the advisory delegate opportunity would be enhanced as political pressure fades away replaced by pure education of how the PC(USA) works. For all advisory delegates (youth, theological student, missionary, ecumenical), this shift from politics to education would be beneficial. It might even provide more space for spiritual growth, which is of course, the most important reason for any advisory delegate to attend the assembly.

COGA COMMENT ON ITEM 03-15

Comment on Item 03-15—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly counsels the 216th General Assembly (2004) to disapprove Item 03-15.

The full participation of advisory delegates in the work of the committee brings a richer and broader perspective to the debate and the recommendations made to the plenary. The full participation of advisory delegates ensures their ownership in the work of the committee. The process involving advisory delegates sharpens recommendations.

This issue of seeking academic credit for service as a youth advisory delegate is beyond the scope of the Office of the General Assembly. Youth advisory delegates (YAD) come from a wide variety of colleges, universities, and other schools. While it might be possible to develop a program with PC(USA)-related colleges, it would not be a benefit to many YADS.

The Standing Rules authorize the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly to offer comment or advice on business under consideration by the General Assembly. The COGA is a committee of fifteen persons, elected by the General Assembly from across the church, made up of elders and ministers who supervise the work of the Office of the General Assembly.

ACREC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 03-15

Advice and Counsel on Item 03-15—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC).

Item 03-15 proposes amending Standing Rule A.2. so as to remove the right of vote by advisory delegates in their assigned assembly committees.

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) concurs with the advice and comment of the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC) that Item 03-15 be disapproved.

The ACREC adds this additional advice and comment:

1. ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 03-15

Advice and Counsel on Item 03-15—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns.

Item 03-15 asks to amend Standing Rule A.2. to remove advisory delegates’ vote in assembly committees and to investigate the possibility of study credit for youth advisory delegates.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns advises that Item 03-15 be disapproved.

Rationale

The right of voice and vote in committee gives substance to the opinions of advisory delegates thereby increasing the value of their participation in the decision-making process of the General Assembly. Giving advisory delegates voice without vote in plenary ensures that the elected commissioners make final decisions of the assembly.

Item 03-16

Joint Report of the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) and the General Assembly Council (GAC)—Recommendations Pertaining to the General Assembly Per Capita Budget

[The assembly approved Item 03-16, Recommendation 1. See p. 47.]

1. The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly and the General Assembly Council recommend that the 216th General Assembly (2004) incorporate into the Minutes the 2003 Per Capita Apportionment Budget and Statement of Activities, and the Comparative Statement of Financial Position at December 31, 2003.

[The assembly approved Item 03-16, Recommendation 2. See p. 47.]

2. Noting in the above financial statements the closing of the books on per capita receipts for 2002, in which the amount of uncollectible per capita is one of the lowest amounts in the last decade ($188,061), the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly and the General Assembly Council recommend that the 216th General Assembly (2004) express its special thanks to presbyteries and congregations for their faithful financial support for the work of the whole church.

Rationale

The Per Capita Budget of the General Assembly principally provides for the costs of holding the General Assembly meetings, expenses of the permanent and special committees, the Office of the General Assembly, facilitating the work of the Stated Clerk (including the historical function), the General Assembly Moderator, the General Assembly Council, the Executive Director’s Office, and related expenses of our memberships in ecumenical bodies.

The 215th General Assembly (2003) received the 2003 per capita apportionment budget totaling $14,411,213. The Statement of Activities for the year ended December 31, 2003, is presented on the following pages. Actual expenditures totaling $13,606,810 for 2003 were under budget by $804,403. The under expenditures were primarily due to savings in General Assembly meetings and other committee meeting costs, savings in administrative expenses, and continuing cost improvements by the use of technology. The total actual revenue for the past year amounted to $14,079,191 resulting in a contribution to reserves in the amount of $472,381. The reduction in the uncollectible provision for 2002 per capita receipts to an actual amount of $188,061 accounted at the end of budget year 2003, also contributed to budget savings.

3. The Committee of the Office of the General Assembly and the General Assembly Council recommend that the 216h General Assembly (2004)

a. approve the Proposed 2005 Per Capita Expenditure Budget totaling [~~$12,403,390~~] [$12,559,362] and a Proposed 2006 Expenditure Budget totaling [~~$15,003,117~~] [$15,165,205];

b. approve that $956,563 be designated in 2005 (about half the cost of the General Assembly meeting), and be reserved for use in the year of the General Assembly meeting (2006).

[The assembly approved Item 03-16, Recommendation 4., with amendment. See p. 94.]

4. The Committee of the Office of the General Assembly and the General Assembly Council recommend two proposals to the 216th General Assembly (2004) for determining a per capita apportionment rate for each year 2005, and 2006:

[~~Proposal I: To approve a per capita rate of $5.46 for 2005, per active member (a reduction of five cents per capita), and a per capita rate of $5.56 for 2006 (an increase of ten cents per capita), OR~~]

Proposal II: To approve a per capita rate of [~~$5.54~~] [$5.57] for each year 2005 and 2006, per active member [(same as in 2004, without change for the two years)].

Rationale

Both COGA and GAC have joint responsibility for submitting a budget to be supported by per capita funds to the General Assembly (Minutes, 1995, Part I, p. 301). The 215th General Assembly (2003) approved the Proposed Per Capita Budget for 2004. The budget figures presented for 2004 include the financial implications of General Assembly actions totaling $68,297 (approved on the last day at the 215th General Assembly (2003)).

Definition of Per Capita

“Per capita is an opportunity for all communicant members of the Presbyterian church through the governing bodies to participate equally, responsibly, and interdependently by sharing the cost of coordination and evaluation of mission; of performing ecclesiastical, legislative, and judicial functions that identify a Reformed church, while at the same time strengthening the sense of community among all Presbyterians” (Minutes, 1995, Part I, p. 301, paragraph 24.003).

Building the Per Capita Budget for 2005 and 2006 continues to be a challenge, more than it has been for previous years, not only because of the controversial issues and the ongoing threat to withhold funds in the church, but also because of the shift from conducting annual General Assemblies to biennial General Assemblies, on a trial basis, beginning in 2004. Since the next General Assembly after 2004 will meet in Birmingham, Alabama, during 2006, except for related expenses in 2005, most General Assembly expenses in Schedule-I have been budgeted to be spent in 2006. However, in order to avoid an awkward budget decrease during the year that there will be no General Assembly meeting, and a steep increase during the year of the General Assembly, about half the cost of the General Assembly meeting budget is shown in the cash flow as a designation in 2005 and reserved to be expended in 2006.

It continues to be difficult to forecast both the level of membership and the percentage of presbyteries paying their full per capita apportionment. We are projecting for budget purposes that our membership loss for 2003 and 2004 (which sets the basis for the 2005 and 2006 per capita apportionments respectively) will be 45,000 each year. Although we had previously assumed that the amount of withholding of per capita would be $425,000 during the current year 2004, we were encouraged by the fact that the actual uncollectible for 2002, which was written off at the end of 2003, amounted to only $188,061. Based on this, we have reduced the uncollectible provision to $350,000 each year 2005 and 2006. It is, however, difficult to predict what the actual financial impact of this situation will be on the budgets.

Taking all of these factors into account, the General Assembly Council and the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly are proposing that we submit two recommendations to the 216th General Assembly (2004) on the per capita apportionment rates, to be determined by the General Assembly. Both proposals will pretty much have the same impact on the cash flow and year-end reserve levels at end 2006. Proposal I: to approve a per capita rate of $5.46 for 2005, per active member (a reduction of five cents per capita or approximately 1 percent), and a per capita rate of $5.56 for 2006 (an increase of ten cents per capita or approximately 1.8 percent), OR Proposal II: to approve a per capita rate of $5.51 for each year 2005 and 2006, per active member (same as in 2004, without change for the two years).

We are also proposing an expenditure budget for 2005 of $12,403,390, which represents a reduction of $2,373,166 or 16 percent lower than the level of 2004 (the direct impact of no General Assembly meeting in 2005). For 2006, we are proposing an expenditure budget of $15,003,117, which represents an increase of 1.5 percent over the 2004 level. The planned use of reserves have been carefully allocated to augment sources of funds in 2006, and reduce the direct impact on per capita. We believe that such restraint in the increase in the per capita rate and the expenditure level are necessary for the well being of the church and the fiscal integrity of the Per Capita budget. The details behind these calculations can be found on the attached sheets.

If we had continued annual General Assembly meetings, we would have on that basis required an additional $2,012,237 (cost of General Assembly session, Schedule 1), and a total of $14,415,627, for 2005. This would have necessitated an increase of at least 38 cents per capita for 2006, and would deplete all available reserves above the required minimum, by end 2006.

5. The Committee of the Office of the General Assembly and the General Assembly Council recommend that the 216th General Assembly (2004) approve the attached allocation of designated funds for OGA, and General Assembly task forces totaling $1,695,838 for 2005, and $1,526,118 for 2006.

Rationale

The allocation of designated funds are reserved for specified expenditure planned to augment the per capita budget so that steep increases to the per capita apportionment rate may be cushioned. The primary items include the General Assembly session, conducting ordination examinations, the production and distribution of Office of the General Assembly (OGA) publications, part of the Presbyterian Historical Society operations, and General Assembly Council (GAC) task forces. The sources of these funds are mostly from independently generated revenue, including gifts and endowments.

STATEMENT OF PER CAPITA BUDGET

Actual and Projected Sources of Funding and Expenditures 2003–2006

USING THE FOLLOWING ASSUMPTIONS

- Actual expenditures for 2003.
- Budgeted expenditures for 2004, 2005 and 2006.
- Actual apportionments for 2004 are reflected in the apportionment revenue.
- Projected apportionments for 2005 and 2006 are based on a reduction of the 2004 membership by 45,000 in each year.

OPPORTUNITIES:

- Higher return on investments.
- Expenditures less than budgeted.

RISKS

- Actual membership declines more than projected.
- Actual expenditures exceed budgeted expenses.
- Impact of church and economic related issues

Item 03-17

On Amending G-9.0404d Regarding Per Capita—From the Presbytery of Lake Erie.

The Presbytery of Lake Erie overtures the 216th General Assembly (2004) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Shall G-9.0404d be amended to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“d. Each governing body above the session shall prepare a budget annually for its operating expenses, including administrative personnel, and may fund it with a per capita apportionment among the particular churches within its bounds. The presbyteries shall be responsible for raising their own per capita funds, and for ~~raising and~~ timely transmission of per capita funds, received from the churches within its bounds, to their respective synods and to the General Assembly. The presbyteries may direct per capita apportionments to the sessions of the churches within its bounds.”

Rationale

The Book of Order, G-9.0404d, states “...The presbyteries shall be responsible for raising their own per capita funds, and for raising and timely transmission of per capita funds to their respective synods and to the General Assembly. The presbyteries may direct per capita apportionments to the sessions of the churches within their bounds.”

The session is “to establish the annual budget, determine the distribution of the church’s benevolences, and order offerings for Christian purposes ...” Book of Order, (G-10.0102i).

The requirement of presbyteries to raise and transmit per capita funds to their respective synods and to the General Assembly without allowing for the session of a particular church to determine the distribution of its benevolences places a hardship upon presbyteries to remit per capita funds that are not received from churches within its bounds.

Some church sessions choose not to raise or remit per capita apportionments to higher governing bodies due to the same funds not being received from their membership, or as a statement of protest or dissatisfaction with the use of same funds by higher governing bodies.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 03-17

Advice on Item 03-17—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 216th General Assembly (2004) to disapprove Item 03-17.

Rationale

The Presbytery of Lake Erie seeks to amend the manner in which certain work of the more inclusive governing bodies is funded. The proposed overture would not alter the current mandated language that a presbytery is responsible for raising its own per capita funds. However it would give presbyteries freedom to forward to synods and General Assembly only such funds as the sessions within its bounds contribute to the presbytery for this express purpose. The amendment as proposed presents no problems of constitutional language; however it represents a negation of a series of General Assembly determinations and judicial decisions that have maintained an established pattern of funding the work of the denomination for those who choose to use it.

Governing bodies vary in their use of per capita assessment. Many presbyteries have been placed in a difficult situation when they are asked to forward money that had not been received from sessions. In 1999, the General Assembly issued an authoritative interpretation seeking to address the matter:

G-9.0404d provides that “The presbyteries shall be responsible for raising their own per capita funds, and for raising and timely transmission of per capita funds to their respective synods and to the General Assembly.” [Emphasis added]

16.006

Further, G-9.0404d provides: “The presbyteries may direct per capita apportionments to the sessions of the churches within their bounds. . . .” [Emphasis added]

16.007

Therefore, a presbytery has the responsibility to remit per capita allocations to synod and General Assembly, even though a congregation does not pay the per capita allocated to it by the presbytery.

16.008

. . . If churches refuse to pay their portion, . . . the presbytery [has] the responsibility to pay the full amount irrespective to the specific collection from churches, as long as funds are available within the presbytery[.]

16.012

A presbytery may use unrestricted funds to pay per capita allocations to synod and General Assembly. (Minutes, 1999, Part I, p. 107)

The General Assembly has been presented with proposals to amend the provision for the payment of per capita repeatedly. In the past it has rejected substantial alteration. The ACC notes two observations shared by the Stated Clerk in an advisory opinion (number 9) on this matter: (1) the Book of Order does not mandate the payment of per capita by sessions, and (2) the Book of Order provides no right on the part of sessions to withhold per capita as a form of protest.

A recent decision of the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission (GAPJC) (Minihan v. Presbytery of Scioto Valley, Remedial Case 216-1) has raised concern by questioning the traditional assertion that the words “may direct” in G-9.0404d convey an obligation rather than an opportunity.

In Minihan v. Presbytery of Scioto Valley, Remedial Case 216-1, we read the following:

[T]here is a high moral obligation based on the grace and call of God to participate fully in the covenant community. Full participation includes time, talent, and treasure (G-10.0102h; W-5.5004). Moreover, all officers are obligated, by virtue of ordination vows (G-14.0207i; G-14.0405b(9)), to participate fully in the life of the Church. To participate partially or not at all and yet claim to be within the covenant community represents a grievous misunderstanding of our reciprocal covenantal obligations under the singular Lordship of Jesus (The Second Helvetic Confession, C-5.124–.141) In other words, we are called to turn from the sin of individualism run rampant and embrace the covenantal community in which our Lord Jesus has called us to live as those who love as we have been loved (John 13:34). Therefore, withholding per capita as a means of protest or dissent evidences a serious breach of the trust and love with which our Lord Jesus intends the covenant community to function together (G-7.0103)

While the specifics of the case and the decision of the GAPJC suggest that a presbytery may not take any action to compel the payment of per capita, the above portion of the decision states in clear and strong terms that our system of governance assumes a partnership of interrelated bodies. While the proposed language of this overture would absolve presbyteries of a mandated responsibility to contribute what is requested, it would not resolve the inherent conundrum of living and sharing resources together as one church. The current per capita system does put presbyteries in a difficult position, but the entire funding system is not unworkable.

There are options available to the church:

- The overture from the Presbytery of Lake Erie could be approved. However, given the variety of ways in which presbyteries fulfill their obligations to the synods and the General Assembly, the language of the overture may create broader consequences than its rationale suggest are intended. For example, if a presbytery does not apportion per capita among its sessions, the language of the overture could be interpreted to mean that a presbytery is not required to forward any funds.
- A constitutional amendment could be proposed that would give a presbytery authority to require that sessions remit the requested per capita assessments. If this is the desire of the 216th General Assembly (2004), the following language would serve that purpose:

“Each governing body above the session shall prepare a budget annually for its operating expenses, including administrative personnel, and may fund it with a per capita apportionment among the particular churches within its bounds. The presbyteries shall be responsible for raising their own per capita funds, and for raising and timely transmission of per capita funds to their respective synods and to the General Assembly. ~~The presbyteries may direct per capita apportionments to the sessions of the churches within their bounds.~~ When presbyteries choose to direct per capita apportionments to the sessions of the churches within their bounds, those sessions shall remit payment. The presbytery waives such payments upon finding the session unable to remit.

- The 216th General Assembly (2004) could remind the presbyteries that the authoritative interpretation issued by the 211th General Assembly in 1999 offers acceptable flexibility and opportunity for relief to those governing bodies unable to remit the assessed amounts. (See 1999 authoritative interpretation excerpted above.) It could further remind the sessions of the covenantal responsibilities described most recently in the Minihan decision excerpted above.

- The subject of the current overture speaks to only a small part of the total funding system that undergirds the work and witness of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). If the 216th General Assembly (2004) believes the concern of the overture to be as serious as it suggests, the assembly could direct that a comprehensive study be undertaken (by the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly, or some other entity or special committee) to review the entire funding system at work within the denomination. The ACC is particularly concerned that the result of such a study include provisions to adequately fund essential ecclesiastical and administrative functions along with maintaining our historic ecumenical relationships. The study should involve wide consultation between and among all governing bodies and address how various funding activities interact with each other within the church.

COGA COMMENT ON ITEM 03-17

Comment on Item 03-17—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly counsels the 216th General Assembly (2004) to disapprove Item 03-17.

This overture comes to the assembly seeking to correct perceived problems created by the recent decision of the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission in Minihan v. Presbytery of Scioto Valley (see Item 04-Info, B. General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission, 2. Final Decisions of the Permanent Judicial Commission, a. Remedial Case 216-1, pp. 4–8). The committee does not believe this “bind” really exists.

The 1999 Authoritative Interpretation provides the relief this overture is seeking, and does so without amending the Book of Order. The Authoritative Interpretation reads:

...the presbytery [has] the responsibility to pay the full amount irrespective to the specific collection from churches, SO LONG AS FUNDS ARE AVAILABLE[.] a presbytery may use unrestricted funds to pay per capita allocations to synod and General Assembly.

Approval of this overture would have the unintended consequence of potentially requiring all presbyteries to adopt a similar funding model. Many presbyteries currently use different models for raising these funds. Some presbyteries pay all such expenses out of unified giving and collect no separate per capita amounts.

The current figure of uncollected per capita “...is one of the lowest amounts of the last decade” (see Item 03-Info, E. General Assembly Per Capita Payments by Presbytery, p. 23). That report suggests that the per capita system is functioning more effectively than any of the other national funding systems.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly is committed to conducting a thorough study of the per capita system in consultation with middle governing bodies. This study would include provisions to adequately fund essential ecclesiastical, administrative and ecumenical functions. The study would interact with studies being conducted by the General Assembly Council on the mission funding system. The result of this study and any recommendations would be brought to the 217th General Assembly (2006).

The Standing Rules authorize the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly to offer comment or advice on business under consideration by the General Assembly. The COGA is a committee of fifteen persons, elected by the General Assembly from across the church, made up of elders and ministers who supervise the work of the Office of the General Assembly.

Item 03-18

[The assembly approved Item 03-18. See p. 47.]

ACC Request Regarding Interpretation Concerning General Assembly Moderator as an Entity—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly: 2003 Referral: Item 03-17.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) answer Item 03-18 (ACC Request 04-11) with the following authoritative interpretation:

“The word ‘entity’ in D-2.0202 and D-6.0202b denotes an organized body, such as a committee, board, council, division, etc. It does not denote an individual or an office held by an individual. Supervision of an officer’s official acts belongs to the electing body or any agency to which the electing body has referred it.”

Rationale

The question raised by the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly arose in response to the interim order of the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission in Remedial Case 215-12 (Westminster PC v. OGA, et al). In that interim order it is stated that the Office of the Moderator of the General Assembly is in some circumstances an “entity” of the General Assembly as that term is used in D-1.0202 and D-6.0202b.

Letter of Request Received by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

At its meeting of February 8–10, 2004, the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) approved a recommendation in response to General Assembly 2003 Referral: Item 03-17. Commissioners’ Resolution 03-5. On Reviewing the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission and Remedial Case 215-12 (Westminster vs. Fahed Abu-Akel). The COGA requests that the Advisory Committee on the Constitution ascertain whether this is a current understanding of the Constitution in this matter.

The COGA, as directed by the 215th General Assembly (2003) (Item 3-17), has reviewed the interim order in Remedial Case 215-12 (Westminster case) together with the relevant provisions of Book of Order, Standing Rules of the General Assembly, and Robert’s Rule of Order.

Since the Moderator is an elected officer of the General Assembly (G-9.0200 and Standing Rule F.2) and is accountable to the General Assembly and subject to its discipline, neither the Moderator nor “the Office of the Moderator” is an “entity of the General Assembly” as that term is used in connection with remedial cases in D-2.0202 and D-6.0000 and following. There is no provision in the Book of Order for bringing a remedial complaint against an individual member or officer of a governing body. Section D-6.0202 is specific about against whom a remedial case complaint may be filed. The Moderator of the General Assembly is an officer of the General Assembly, not an entity of the General Assembly.

Rationale

A moderator of a governing body is elected from its members. The Moderator is an elected officer of that body and accountable to it. He or she can be censured or even removed from office by the body (Robert's Rules of Order, section 61). Thus, the Moderator of the General Assembly is an elected officer of that body and responsible to it during his or her term (G-9.0202). The Moderator's responsibilities and functions come from the General Assembly and he or she is accountable to the General Assembly for carrying out those duties (Standing Rule F 2). The Moderator or the Office of Moderator (a term used in the Westminster case decision) has no independent role apart from that derived from the General Assembly itself. He or she is answerable directly to the General Assembly and subject to its discipline.

Remedial cases in the Rules of Discipline are brought to correct an irregularity or a delinquency of a lower governing body, the General Assembly Council (GAC), or an entity of the General Assembly (D-2.0202). A remedial case against an entity of the General Assembly is intended to correct the collective action or inaction of that body itself. In every use of the word "entity" in the Book of Order it refers to some organized body and not an individual or officer. No judicial precedent except the Westminster case applies the word "entity" to an individual.

Note: To confirm the accountability of the Moderator and Vice-Moderator of the General Assembly, and the COGA and the GAC's role assistance in ensuring that accountability, revised Standing Rule F. (Moderator of the General Assembly), includes a section calling for the submission and review of a written report by the Moderator and Vice Moderator to GAC and COGA at each of their stated meetings (F.6).

[The assembly approved Item 03-19 with amendment. See p. 47.]

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) amend Standing Rule F. by striking the existing text and inserting new text as follows:

“The Moderator of the General Assembly is an ecclesiastical officer, along with the Stated Clerk, of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). The ministry of the Moderator is grounded in the ministry of baptized persons and in the particular ordained ministry of elders and ministers of the Word and Sacrament.

“1. Title

“The title of the Moderator is ‘The Moderator of the (number) General Assembly (year) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).’

“When the Moderator presides at the assembly, it is to be a sign of the bond of unity, community, and mission in the life of the church. During the period between assemblies, the Moderator serves as an ambassador of the unity of the Spirit in the bonds of peace, telling the story of the church’s life and upholding the people of God through prayer.

“When the Moderator travels throughout the church, it is for the purpose of strengthening the mission of congregations and governing bodies, encouraging officers and members, and their work. The Moderator listens for the joys and concerns of the church and ascertains the needs of the world and the gifts of the church’s mission program.

“When the Moderator serves as an ecumenical representative, s/he expresses the concern of Reformed churches for the visible unity of Christ’s body and fuller communion among churches.

“When the Moderator visits national and international mission sites, s/he encourages mission personnel, brings the prayerful concern of Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to sister churches, and helps to proclaim the gospel of Christ to the world.

“When the Moderator addresses the church and the society, s/he speaks pastorally and prophetically from within the standards of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), preserving the rights and responsibilities outlined in G-6.0108.

“a. Preside Over General Assembly

“The Moderator shall preside over the General Assembly that elects him or her, and over the meetings of the next General Assembly until a successor is elected. The Moderator possesses the authority necessary for preserving order and for conducting efficiently the business of the governing body (G-9.0202).

“b. Membership

“The Moderator of the General Assembly is a voting member of the General Assembly Council and the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly. The Moderator of the General Assembly may attend and participate without vote in the meetings of all other entities of the General Assembly.

“c. Official Representative

“The Moderator shall be the official representative of the church at gatherings and functions, both civic and ecclesiastical, at which the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is invited or expected to be represented, unless otherwise provided by the General Assembly. In the event that the Moderator is unable to attend, the Vice-Moderator, or some other person designated by the Moderator in consultation with the Stated Clerk, may represent the church.

“d. Report to the General Assembly

“The Moderator and the Vice-Moderator shall submit a written report of their work to the session of the General Assembly at which their successors are installed.

“a. Eligibility and Endorsement

“Each person nominated to serve as Moderator of the General Assembly must be a commissioner to the General Assembly. Action by presbyteries to endorse candidates for Moderator of the General Assembly shall not take place until after the adjournment of the immediately preceding assembly. The Office of the General Assembly shall provide resourcing and orientation for Moderatorial candidates.

“b. Announcement of the Selection of a Vice-Moderator

“Ordinarily, no later than forty-five days prior to the convening of the assembly, the Moderatorial candidates will announce the name of a commissioner each has selected to offer to the assembly to confirm as Vice-Moderator.

“c. Campaign Procedures

“The following campaign procedures shall be observed:

“(1) Candidates should budget campaign spending of no more than $1,500, excluding travel and meeting expenses related to their candidacy. Each candidate shall submit to the Stated Clerk an itemized statement of expenses, including travel and meeting expenses related to his/her candidacy and in-kind contributions. This statement shall be submitted to the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly prior to the convening of the General Assembly. This information shall be distributed to commissioners and advisory delegates prior to the election of the Moderator. The statement of expenses of all candidates shall be kept on file in the Office of the General Assembly following the meeting of the General Assembly. The Office of the General Assembly shall not reimburse a candidate for campaign expenses, but shall assume expenses involved in printing and distributing material submitted for information packets as outlined in Standing Rule F.3.c.(5).

“(2) In order to encourage reliance on the leading of the Holy Spirit in the selection of the Moderator, no candidate shall send a mailing of any campaign materials, print or electronic, to commissioners and/or advisory delegates or permit such a mailing to be sent, nor shall candidates or their advocates contact commissioners and/or advisory delegates by telephone.

“(3) Distribution of written campaign materials at General Assembly outside of the candidate’s room shall be limited to printed materials placed in mailboxes.

“(4) On the day of the convening of the General Assembly, the Stated Clerk shall provide a room for each candidate where commissioners and advisory delegates may meet and talk with the candidate.

“(5) Not less than fifteen days before the convening of the General Assembly, the Stated Clerk shall distribute to commissioners and advisory delegates an information packet containing the following material regarding each candidate for Moderator [and Vice-Moderator] who is known to the Stated Clerk and who wishes to be included:

“• A photograph, a biographical sketch, a personal statement by the candidate, including a statement regarding the candidate’s sense of call to the office,

“• A written presentation by the presbytery having jurisdiction over the candidate, if that governing body has endorsed the candidate,

“• An announcement of the commissioner each candidate has selected to be presented to the assembly for confirmation as Vice-Moderator if the candidate is elected,

“The material submitted shall be typewritten on paper 8-1/2 x 11 inches in size. The layouts for the presentation under this Standing Rule (as outlined above) may be chosen by the candidates, but the copy submitted for each presentation shall be provided in one color on one side of one sheet. The material shall be submitted to the Stated Clerk no less than forty-five days before the convening of the General Assembly for reproduction and distribution, and shall be accompanied by a statement indicating the willingness of the candidate to serve as Moderator, if elected.

“d. Election Procedures

“The Moderator of the General Assembly shall be elected in the following manner:

“(1) When the General Assembly is ready to elect its Moderator, only one speech shall be made placing in nomination the name of each nominee. The speech shall be made by a commissioner to the General Assembly. Such speech shall not exceed five minutes in length. There shall be no speeches seconding the nomination of any nominee. The order of speaking shall be determined by lot, the drawing conducted by the most recent Moderator attending the General Assembly.

“(2) After nominations are closed, each nominee shall be afforded an opportunity to address the General Assembly for a time not to exceed five minutes, expressing the concerns that nominee feels to be the most important for the church. The nominees shall speak in the same order as the presentation of nominating speeches.

“(3) At the conclusion of all the presentations by the nominees, they shall respond to questions from the floor. The first question shall be addressed to the nominee who spoke first in the original presentation, and the same question shall then be put to the other nominees in the same order in which they spoke earlier. The second question shall be directed to the second nominee in this order and then to each of the other nominees in sequence. Each nominee shall be afforded an opportunity to answer each question. This process shall continue for a period not to exceed the number of nominees times fifteen minutes, or for one hour, whichever is shorter, unless terminated earlier by vote of the General Assembly.

“(4) Where there is only one nominee for Moderator, the election may be by acclamation. Where there is more than one, the election may be by secret ballot in one of the following ways:

“Each commissioner shall vote by means of an electronic voting system. The Stated Clerk shall advise the Moderator of the totals. The Moderator shall announce the result of the vote as tabulated. If no nominee has received a majority of the whole vote, another vote shall be taken in the same manner. When one nominee shall have received a majority, the Moderator shall announce the result and declare the nominee to be elected.

“If the assembly votes to use paper ballots, the Stated Clerk shall provide ballots and assign no fewer than ten commissioners to act as tellers, collecting and counting the ballots. The results shall be given to the Stated Clerk who shall report the totals to the Moderator who shall announce them to the assembly.

“e. Installation

“The Stated Clerk shall provide a service of installation for the newly elected Moderator as the last item of business at the session in which the Moderator is elected. The family of the newly elected Moderator and all present previous Moderators shall be invited to the platform. The service shall use the order of service for ‘Installation of Governing Body Officers and Staff’ from the Book Of Occasional Services. The processional banner of the Moderator shall precede the newly elected Moderator into the assembly. The Moderator’s cross and stole shall be presented by the most recent serving Moderator. A representative of the presbytery of the Moderator’s membership shall ask the questions of installation. The newly elected Moderator invites a person to lead the prayer of installation. The most recent serving Moderator gives the charge, a hymn is sung by the assembly, and the newly elected Moderator gives the benediction.

“4. Enabling the Moderator and Vice-Moderator to Serve

“a. Stewardship of Time

“It is incumbent upon the church to understand, respect, and remain accountable for the balance of the stewardship of time between the ministry of the Moderator and Vice-Moderator and the larger vocation of the ones serving in these roles. That balance includes a commitment to respect the need for Sabbath by the Moderator and Vice-Moderator of the General Assembly.

“The church should expect the Moderator to ordinarily spend no more than half of their work time responding to invitations in attending meetings of General Assembly entities, in participating in other opportunities, and attending to constitutional functions, In assisting the Moderator in these activities, the church should expect the Vice-Moderator to ordinarily spend no more than a third of their work time.

“b. Itineration of the Moderator and Vice-Moderator

“The Moderator, the Vice Moderator, and the Office of the General Assembly shall jointly develop a comprehensive plan for their travel based upon the mission of the church and the needs of agencies, governing bodies, institutions, ecumenical partners, and other constituencies.

“Each synod, in consultation with its presbyteries, will be invited to develop a plan for itineration of the Moderator or Vice-Moderator. Ordinarily, a single invitation for a visit within a presbytery will be accepted during each term.

“c. Leave of Absence of the Moderator and Vice-Moderator

“The Stated Clerk shall request the congregation or employer of the Moderator and Vice Moderator to grant a leave of absence for time appropriate to their commitments to permit the Moderator and Vice-Moderator to fulfill the functions of their offices.

“No later than three months following the election, the Stated Clerk, in consultation with the Moderator and Vice-Moderator and representatives of the congregation or employer they serve, shall conduct an appropriate service of dedication and covenant between these leaders and their faith and/or vocational community, recognizing the unique demands and responsibilities placed upon these officers.

“d. Financial Arrangements for the Moderator and Vice-Moderator

“To prevent financial sacrifice to these leaders personally, or undue adverse effect upon the work in which they are engaged, the Stated Clerk, in consultation with the Moderator and Vice-Moderator, shall propose appropriate financial arrangements to the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly.

“e. Expenses

“The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly shall budget for the official travel of the Moderator and Vice Moderator and their spouses, and other expenses incurred in the performance of official duties.

“f. Administrative Support for the Moderator

“An office for the use of the Moderator and Vice-Moderator shall be provided within the office suite of the Office of the General Assembly.

“5. Vice-Moderator

“a. Ordinarily, no later than forty-five days before the convening of the assembly, a Moderatorial candidate shall announce the selection of a commissioner who will be proposed to serve as Vice-Moderator. At the next business session of the assembly following the election of the Moderator, the Moderator shall propose to the assembly the name of the commissioner for Vice-Moderator. After a brief speech by the person selected, the assembly shall immediately proceed to vote on his or her confirmation. Should there be no confirmation, the Moderator shall bring another commissioner’s name for confirmation to the next business session of the assembly. The Stated Clerk shall provide a service of installation for the newly elected Vice- Moderator.

“b. The Vice-Moderator represents the assembly at the request of the Moderator. When the Vice Moderator serves in this capacity, all those duties incumbent on the Moderator shall be expected of him/her.

“c. The Vice Moderator shall serve as a corresponding member without vote on the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly and the General Assembly Council.

“d. Should there be a Moderator’s Conference, the Vice-Moderator participates with the Moderator in planning the Moderator’s Conference.

“f. The Vice Moderator shall consult with the Moderator and the Office of the General Assembly about the special emphasis for the Vice Moderator’s itineration.

“g. The Moderator may request the Vice-Moderator to preside and to assist in the performance of other functions of the Moderator during and following the General Assembly.

“6. Regular Reporting: Accountability of the Moderator and Vice-Moderator

“The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) and the General Assembly Council (GAC) shall assist the General Assembly in ensuring the accountability of the Moderator and Vice-Moderator of the General Assembly by receiving and reviewing, at each of their stated meetings, a written report from the Moderator and Vice-Moderator.

“7. Vacancy in the Office of the Moderator or Vice-Moderator

“Should the office of the Moderator of the General Assembly become vacant, the Vice Moderator shall fulfill the functions of the Moderator. In such circumstance, all constitutional obligations and functions as prescribed by the Standing Rules of the General Assembly and the Book of Order shall be incumbent upon the Vice-Moderator of the General Assembly.

“Should the office of the Vice-Moderator of the General Assembly also become vacant, the most recent living Moderator shall fulfill the functions of the Moderator as specified in the Constitution of the church.”

Rationale

This amendment is necessitated by the approval of a biennial assembly pattern, which will require changes to the work and witness of the assembly’s Moderator and Vice Moderator.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly consulted with persons throughout the church, including a survey of former assembly Moderators, concerning the role and responsibilities of a two-year Moderator and Vice Moderator. There was broad agreement that three major issues needed to be addressed: (1) the stewardship of time for both the Moderator and the Vice Moderator, (2) the role of the Vice Moderator, and (3) the accountability of this leadership team during their terms.

This recommendation seeks to set an expectation for the amount of time these elected leaders are to devote in fulfilling their roles (See proposed language in Standing Rule F.4.b.). In order to meet this expectation, synods will be invited to develop plans for the itineration of these leaders within their bounds.

In this proposal, there are two important changes to the role of the Vice Moderator. In proposed Standing Rule F.5.a., each candidate for Moderator is expected to announce who they propose to serve as Vice Moderator. After the Moderator’s election, the person shall be presented to the assembly for a vote of confirmation.

In the interest of providing accountability during these leaders’ terms of office, the leaders are expected to provide written reports to the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly and to the General Assembly Council (F.6.).

During the course of making these changes to the text of the Standing Rule, the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly found it helpful to reorder and restructure this entire rule. This rationale seeks to provide you with the substantive changes that were incorporated.

In the process of reviewing this rule, the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly found it helpful to reorder the materials. Beyond restructuring the chapter, the following changes are included in the text:

1. A new opening paragraph to the Standing Rule is included.
2. The first six paragraphs of F.2. are new material.
3. The second sentence of F.2.a. is new.
4. The language in F.2.b. has been restated but not substantively changed.
5. Proposed Standing Rule F.3.b. consists of new material, replacing language regarding to the selection of a Vice Moderator.

6. The third bulleted point in F.3.c.(5) is new material.
7. The second bulleted paragraph in F.3.d.(4) replaces language about a procedure for using paper ballots.
8. F.3.e. is new material.
9. The language in F.4.a. and the second paragraph of b. is new material.
10. The language in F.4.b.–e. has been restated to encompass the work of both the Moderator and Vice Moderator.
11. The language in F.4.f. has been amended from the original.
12. The text in F.5. is new material.
13. The text in F.6. is new material.
14. Section F.7. replaces a former paragraph dealing with the incapacity, resignation, or death of the Moderator and offers a new order of succession.

Item 03-20

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) approve the following amendment to the first paragraph of Standing Rule A.3., to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“The following persons shall be corresponding members: Moderators of earlier General Assemblies; the Stated Clerk, Associate and Assistant Stated Clerks, and other members of the staff of the Office of the General Assembly as designated by the Stated Clerk; the members of the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly; the members of the GAC Executive Committee ~~members~~ and staff of the General Assembly Council, and of the divisions and related entities designated by the council; all members of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution; the executives of synods; one person designated by each entity reporting directly to the General Assembly, including permanent, special, and advisory committees (additional persons may be designated by such bodies if authorized by the Moderator of the preceding General Assembly in consultation with the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly); and the presidents (or their designee) of the theological institutions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), and the seminaries related by covenant agreement.”

Rationale

The covenant agreement between the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and Auburn Theological Seminary and the Evangelical Seminary of Puerto Rico require that the schools report to the General Assembly on a regular basis. Therefore, the official representatives of these two institutions should be granted the same corresponding member status as the official representatives of the ten Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) seminaries.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly oversees the work of the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly and the Office of the General Assembly between the meetings of the assembly. Particularly, they approve the General Assembly docket and committee structure prior to each assembly. Thus, their participation as corresponding members at the General Assembly enhances their ability to fulfill these tasks for future assemblies.

Regarding the Executive Committee of the General Assembly Council, this just follows practice that has been in place for the last several assemblies.

Item 03-21

The Office of the General Assembly recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) direct the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly to study the directives of the four most recent assemblies concerning “affinity groups” or “special interest organizations,” and to bring recommendations to the 217th General Assembly (2006) that define such organizations and provide coordinated requirements of such groups in providing information to the church about their organization, its membership and goals, and its funding.

Rationale

This recommendation is in response to the following referral: 2003 Referral: New Business from the Report of the Assembly Committee on General Assembly Procedures Recommendation Requesting OGA to Publish at Each General Assembly a Definition of “Affinity Group” with a List of Qualifying Groups; Communication Sent Each Year to Qualifying Groups Requesting Information. Response (or Failure to Respond) Report to the Next Assembly (Minutes, 2003, Part I, p. 36).

Chapter XXVIII of the Book of Order for the United Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A. from 1958 to 1983 defined and outlined the jurisdiction for special organizations in the church. The same language from that source was used in the PC(USA)’s Book of Order from 1983–1989. In 1989, the General Assembly removed the language regarding review and control and 1991 removed the remainder of the rule that defined special organizations.

In an overture (Overture 00-49) that was approved with amendment in 2000, the assembly directed the Office of the General Assembly “to request all special interest organizations that use the name Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in their names and contribute information [voluntarily] to church members to provide, annually and voluntarily” data relating to their legal name, “tax status, date of founding, location of offices, number of paid staff, number of members if a membership organization, list of annual publications and their circulation,” “total annual budget,” list of donors giving more than $1,000, “statement of the organization’s goals and methods,” and a “summary of the organization’s theological emphases and vision of the Church of Jesus Christ” (Minutes, 2000, Part I, p. 424–25).

In 2001, through the approval of a alternate resolution to Commissioners’ Resolution 01-23, the assembly simplified the request that asked all “affinity groups to submit a one-page statement to include: the organization’s goals and methods of operation and theological emphases; the annual budget; the number of staff,” plus an “additional statement listing all donors who give more than $1,000 to the activities of this organization in any calendar year” (Minutes, 2001, Part I, p. 22). This information, along with a list of those not complying, has been provided annually to assembly commissioners and posted on the church’s Website.

In 2002, the assembly approved a commissioners’ resolution that required organizations that apply for space in the General Assembly Exhibit Hall and that file an IRS 90 form to furnish the most recent copy of that form prior to the assembly (Minutes, 2002, Part I, p. 197).

The 215th General Assembly (2003) approved a piece of new business that requested the Office of the General Assembly to publish a definition of “affinity groups” along with a complete list of qualifying organizations (Minutes, 2003, Part I, p. 36).

As is evidenced above, there have been a number of attempts in recent years to find a way for “affinity groups” or “special interest organizations” to report responsibly to the church regarding their work and funding. With the exception of the assembly in 2000, there has been no clear definition for determining which groups qualify as special organizations. This recommendation asks the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly to propose clarification of a definition of these groups and to coordinate the collection and categories of information needed for these groups to report responsibly to the church on their activities.

On Appointing a Panel to Study the Apportionment of General Assembly Commissioners from Presbyteries—From the Presbytery of San Diego.

The Presbytery of San Diego overtures the 216th General Assembly (2004) of the PC(USA) to direct the Moderator of the 216th General Assembly (2004) to appoint, within sixty days of the ratification of this overture, a five-person panel to study the apportionment of General Assembly commissioners from presbyteries in the PC(USA) and their representation at General Assemblies and make recommendations to correct what appears to be an imbalance in the current representation. In regards to the findings of this panel, the assembly recommends the following:

1. The panel shall present its findings by November 1, 2004, to the General Assembly Council and the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly.
2. Those findings shall also be posted on the Office of General Assembly Website by November 1, 2004.
3. The availability of the findings shall be made known to Presbyweb as a means of communicating to the membership of the denomination. This will allow the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly or the presbyteries to develop timely business for consideration by the 217th General Assembly (2006) to correct any identified problems.

Rationale

Since the 1983 reunification that formed the PC(USA), the membership of PC(USA) has declined. This decline has been greater in some presbyteries than in others and appears to generally be inversely proportional to the membership within the presbytery. The result is that presbyteries have disproportionate voting representation at the General Assembly. The current formula, pending presbytery voting on Amendment 03-A.3, provides for a roughly 20 percent disparity in members per commissioner. The formula proposed in Amendment 03-A.3 provides for a roughly 50 percent disparity in members per commissioner. While it is practically impossible to provide exactly equal representation across the 173 presbyteries, this overture proposes that a 50 percent disparity is too large.

This overture proposes a review of the formula used for determining the number of voting commissioners for presbyteries (in Amendment 03-A.3 that was passed by the 215th General Assembly and is currently subject to the vote of the presbyteries). The stated intent is to correct the inequality in the number of congregational members per voting commissioner that exists in the current formula. There are currently fewer commissioners per member in larger presbyteries than in smaller presbyteries with the result that larger presbyteries have a disproportionately smaller voice and vote in the issues decided by the General Assembly.

Amendment 03-A.3 is before the presbyteries for approval or rejection. This amendment changes the formula for determining the number of General Assembly commissioners that each presbytery may send to the General Assembly. The new formula gives unfair voting powers to the small presbyteries in the PC(USA). “Fair representation” is a historic principle that permeates every aspect of the governance of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and is a well-documented principle at every level of governance throughout the Book of Order except for the determination of the number of General Assembly commissioners. The old formula also has this fault, but it was less severe.

Under the new formula, there will be 808 General Assembly commissioners. With the current PC(USA) membership at 2,451,969, the average General Assembly commissioner will represent 3,035 members. Under the new formula there are forty-four presbyteries with less than 8,000 members (the first breakpoint) and each General Assembly commissioner from those small presbyteries will only represent 2,300 members. At the next breakpoint (8,001 to 16,000 members) there are seventy-two presbyteries and each General Assembly commissioner will only represent 2,833 members. Presbyteries that have more than 16,001 members will have General Assembly commissioners representing 3,165 to 3,476 members. This means that smaller presbyteries will have a voting power greater than that of the larger presbyteries—clearly an unfair circumstance, if the discrepancy is too great. In addition, however, there are several instances of presbyteries with very similar memberships with unequal representation. One solution to this lack of fair representation is to modify the formula used for determining General Assembly commissioners from the presbyteries.

COGA COMMENT ON ITEM 03-22

Comment on Item 03-22—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) counsels the 216th General Assembly (2004) to refer Item 03-22 to the 219th General Assembly (2010).

As of this writing, 115 presbyteries have approved an amendment to the Book of Order, G-13.0102, that specifies the commissioner formula for biennial assemblies:

b. When the General Assembly meets biennially, it shall consist of equal numbers of elders and ministers from each presbytery, in the following proportion: Each presbytery consisting of not more than 8,000 members shall elect one elder and one minister. Presbyteries consisting of more than 8,000 members shall elect one additional elder and one additional minister for each additional 8,000 members, so that:

Presbyteries of 8,001 to 16,000 members shall elect 2 elders and 2 ministers;

Presbyteries of 16,001 to 24,000 members shall elect 3 elders and 3 ministers;

Presbyteries of 24,001 to 32,000 members shall elect 4 elders and 4 ministers;

Presbyteries of 32,001 to 40,000 members shall elect 5 elders and 5 ministers;

Presbyteries of 40,001 to 48,000 members shall elect 6 elders and 6 ministers;

Presbyteries of 48,001 to 56,000 members shall elect 7 elders and 7 ministers.

These persons, so elected, shall be called commissioners to the General Assembly. [The provisions of this amendment shall not take effect until the adjournment of the 217th General Assembly (2006).]

Given that this amendment has just been adopted, the committee believes the formula should remain in place until the trial period for biennial assemblies has been completed and a study of implications has been made.

The 214th General Assembly (2002) took the following action to study the trial period for biennial assemblies:

That the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly prepare a full evaluation of biennial assemblies after the 219th General Assembly (2010) through either a special task group or by a committee . . . The assigned task shall be to ascertain the impact of biennial assemblies on the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in terms of its ministry and mission; stewardship including per capita apportionment, mission dollars, and special offerings; communication including knowledge of the General Assembly and its work in the church, on governance of the church; the Form of Government and overtures sent to the General Assembly; use of judicial process and ways of dealing with conflictual issues, as well as addressing the theology of our Form of Government and how it has been impacted by biennial assemblies; and bring a report to the 220th General Assembly (2010). (Minutes, 2002, Part I, pp. 26, 159)

Some of the principles used by COGA to develop the biennial formula were:

- A fair distribution that would give a majority of presbyteries additional commissioners.
- A balance between the additional number of commissioners and the cost of additional commissioners.
- A formula that would be simple and easily understood.

The current median size presbytery has 11,689 members. This would give it two commissioners to an annual assembly and four to a biennial assembly.

The Standing Rules authorize the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly to offer comment or advice on business under consideration by the General Assembly. The COGA is a committee of fifteen persons, elected by the General Assembly from across the church, made up of elders and ministers who supervise the work of the Office of the General Assembly.

Item 03-23

[The assembly answered Item 03-23 by the action taken on Item 03-09 of this report. See p. 45.]

On an Introduction to Antiracism Training for Assemblies in 2006, 2008, and 2010, and at General Assembly Council Meetings—From the Presbytery of San Francisco.

The Presbytery of San Francisco overtures the 216th General Assembly (2004) to direct the General Assembly Council to do the following:

1. Provide an introduction to antiracism training for all commissioners attending the 217th General Assembly (2006), the 218th General Assembly (2008), and the 219th General Assembly (2010).
2. Evaluate the ongoing need for and impact of such events and make recommendations to the 219th General Assembly (2010) about holding such events at future General Assemblies.
3. Provide antiracism trainings for all the members of the General Assembly Council in their meetings for the number of years described in 1 and 2.

Rationale

We believe that we are all created by God in God's image, have infinite value in the eyes of God, and are made one in Jesus Christ.

We confess that our society created a system of white privilege or racism by incorporating policies and procedures based on negative stereotypes of people of color into the normal operations of our institutions.

We confess that although progress toward equality has been made, this racism remains widespread and continues to damage and diminish all of us, our churches, our society, and its institutions.

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) recognizes that the task of dismantling racism is a long-term struggle that requires discernment, prayer, and worship-based action (Facing Racism: A Vision of the Beloved Community, Minutes, 1999, Part I, pp. 273ff, esp. 284).

The 210th General Assembly (1998) approved the Racial Ethnic Immigrant Growth Strategy, which sets the goal of increasing racial ethnic membership to 10 percent by 2005 and 20 percent by 2010, and notes the necessity of understanding and dismantling racism in order to reach this goal.

We have many congregations composed by new immigrants, worshiping in their own languages and looking to be accepted, included, and recognized with their unique cultures and traditions to enrich the PC(USA).

The National Ministries Division developed and led a three-hour introduction to antiracism training for all commissioners to the 213th General Assembly (2001).

More than 800 people attended this event, and it led to an increase in antiracism awareness and training across the PC(USA).

ACREC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 03-23

Advice and Counsel on Item 03-23—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC).

Item 03-23 requests the 216th General Assembly (2004) to direct the GAC to provide an Introduction to Anti-racism Training for assemblies in 2006, 2008, and 2010, and make recommendations for future antiracism events, from the Presbytery of Detroit.

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns concurs with the Joint Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA)/General Assembly Council (GAC) comment on Item 03-09 recommending COGA/GAC provide a proposal for implementation to the 217th General Assembly (2006), stipulating that this training would be provided at the 218th General Assembly (2008), 219th General Assembly (2010), and 220th General Assembly (2012).

[The assembly referred Item 03-24 to the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly-appointed task force. See p. 46.]

On Directing the Office of the General Assembly (OGA) to Develop a Long-Range Plan for the Department of History to Provide for Regional Historical Centers—From the Presbytery of Western North Carolina.

The Presbytery of Western North Carolina overtures the 216th General Assembly (2004) to do the following:

1. Direct the Office of the General Assembly to develop a long-range plan for its Department of History that would provide for regional historical centers, with the Montreat facility serving several synods in the south (e.g., Living Waters, Mid-Atlantic, South Atlantic, and the Sun) and their presbyteries, congregations, and church-related institutions.
2. Direct the Office of the General Assembly to develop a funding plan that would provide limited funding from the General Assembly for the Montreat facility with major funding being raised from individuals, churches, governing bodies, and church-related institutions in the south that are served by the Montreat facility.
3. Direct that all plans for the moving of the Montreat holdings to Philadelphia be held in abeyance until a plan for regional historical centers can be considered by the various synods and their constituencies.

Rationale

The Office of the General Assembly is now considering major changes in the plan for the future of the Presbyterian Historical Society.

The preserving and sharing of the story of the American Presbyterian church for posterity is a matter of major importance to the total church in planning for the future.

There already exists two major centers for the preserving of these archives, each with excellent facilities and with a distinctive set of archives and other material related to our Presbyterian heritage.

The cost of moving the Montreat holdings to the facility in Philadelphia would be extremely expensive and time consuming, and would make such holdings inaccessible for years to come.

The housing of the archives in one high-cost urban center would make it much more difficult for churches, governing bodies, church-related institutions, and individuals to make use of the archives.

The Montreat Conference Center is both a regional and a national gathering place for many congregations.

Item 03-25

Commissioner's Resolution. On Providing Disability Awareness Training for Commissioners to the 217th General Assembly (2006).

That the 216th General Assembly (2004) instruct the Office of the General Assembly to provide disability awareness training for commissioners, committee leadership, and committee on local arrangements to the 217th General Assembly (2006) to the end that the 217th General Assembly (2006) and all subsequent General Assembly meeting be made as accessible to all peoples as possible.

Rationale

Members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), like members of all churches of Jesus Christ, are all members of the body of Christ, “baptized into one body and made to drink of one Spirit.”

The Holy Scriptures declare that “love is patient and kind.”

“Persons of all racial ethnic groups, different ages, both sexes, various disabilities, diverse geographical areas, different theological positions consistent with the Reformed tradition, as well as different marital conditions shall be guaranteed full participation and access to representation in the decision making of the church.”

“Governing bodies of the church shall be responsible for implementing the church’s commitment to inclusiveness and participation.

Members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) with physical disabilities have experienced barriers to their full and joyous participation in the events of the General Assembly meetings both in the past years and in this year.

A lack of awareness of these barriers among brothers and sisters in Christ has caused physically disabled brothers and sisters in Christ to be excluded and hindered from full and joyous participation in the proceedings of General Assembly meetings.

The Office of the General Assembly, through the General Assembly Council, is fully equipped to provide disability awareness training and, in fact, has already produced materials sufficient for this purpose.

COGA COMMENT ON ITEM 03-25

Comment on Item 03-25—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA)

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) suggests that the 216th General Assembly (2004) refer Item 03-25 to COGA and the General Assembly (GAC).

The COGA supports the intention of this overture. The matter of providing disability awareness training for commissioners, committee leadership, and the committee on local arrangements for the 217th General Assembly (2004) is important to ensure attention to inclusiveness and diversity.

The COGA will work out with the GAC the programmatic, logistical, and financial details of holding such training at future assemblies, taking into account resources already developed, and will bring a proposal for its implementation to the 217th General Assembly (2006).

Item 03-26

[The assembly approved Item 03-26 with amendment. See p. 48.]

Commissioners' Resolution. Emphasizing the Importance of Scripture.

That the 216th General Assembly (2004) direct the Office of the General Assembly to do the following:

1. To be careful to include and emphasize fidelity to Scripture [in the questions that are asked of commissioners and advisory delegates] in the commissioning service at future General Assemblies.

2. Amend “Life Together in the Community of Faith: Standards of Ethical Conduct for Members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)” to include in the introductory paragraph and further in the body of the document an emphasis on obedience and faithfulness to Scripture.

Rationale

The General Assembly needs to underscore and emphasize the importance of Scripture in all that we do, and keep with our Reformed tradition.

At this year's General Assembly, the commissioning service did not contain a mandate of fidelity to Scripture. The pre-assembly document “Life Together in the Community of Faith: Standards of Ethical Conduct for Members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)” was also lacking in this area.

COGA COMMENT ON ITEM 03-26

Comment on Item 03-26—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA)

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly advises that this commissioner resolution be disapproved.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly affirms that one of the cornerstones of the Reformed tradition is a faithful adherence to Scripture in the deliberations, decisions, and directions of all governing bodies.

Commissioners are elders and ministers of the Word and Sacrament who have made an ordination vow to “fulfill your office in obedience to Jesus Christ, under the authority of Scripture, and be continually guided by our confessions.” Each commissioner at General Assembly has been chosen by a presbytery, and as such is also fulfilling an ordination vow to serve in the governing bodies of the church.

The commissioning service presumes that all commissioners intend to be faithful to the Scriptures in their service to the General Assembly and the presbyteries that sent them.

The Standards for Ethical Conduct are rooted in the concept of fidelity to Scripture. In the report of the Special Committee on a Professional Code of Ethics to the 210th General Assembly (1998), the committee affirmed that Scripture, The Book of Confessions, and the Book of Order all provide guidance in ethics. The committee also noted that “it is sometimes unclear how to make the connections between their general guidance and the particular ethical dilemmas that confront persons in the conduct of life and ministry. The Standards of Ethical Conduct are intended as a bridge between these guiding resources and the specific issues that persons in ministry face on a day-to-day basis” (Minutes, 1998, Part I, paragraph 43.0006). In addition, the report notes that

The Standards of Ethical Conduct summarizes and calls attention to authoritative standards already found in Scripture, and those in The Book of Confessions and the Book of Order. (Ibid, paragraph 43.0010)

No further addition to the Standards of Ethical Conduct relating to the fidelity to Scripture is necessary because the document presumes that the ethical practices of members, officers, and those employed by the church will be based in faithfulness to Jesus Christ as revealed in the Scriptures.

Item 03-27

Commissioners Resolution. Recording Commissioners' Votes in the Minutes of the General Assembly, Part I.

That the 216th General Assembly (2004) direct that all votes of the General Assembly plenary sessions, other than those taken by voice vote or show of hands, shall be recorded showing each commissioners' vote and shall be published in the Minutes of the General Assembly, Part I.

Rationale

“... people loved darkness rather than light because their deeds were evil. For all who do evil hate the light and do not come to the light, so that their deeds may not be exposed. But those who do what is true come to the light, so that it may be clearly seen that their deeds have been done in God” (John 3:19–20, NRSV).

Item 03-Info

A. General Assembly Committee on Representation Agency Summary

1. Assigned Responsibilities

The General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR), in its constitutional mandate, shall advise, advocate, resource, review, recommend, and consult with the General Assembly committees, councils, and Ministries Divisions in order to ensure that the principles of inclusiveness are implemented. Its main function shall be to advise the governing bodies with respect to their membership and to that of their committees, boards, agencies, and other units in implementing the principles of participation and inclusiveness to ensure fair and effective representation in the decision making of the church. The committee shall advise the General Assembly on the employment of personnel in conformity with the Churchwide Plan for Affirmative Action and Equal Employment Opportunity.

2. Accomplishments

The priority of GACOR is to equip synod committees on representation (CORs) with skills and resources to carry out the mandate found in the Book of Order. Members of the committee and the manager provided training and resources to synod and presbytery CORs upon request.

The GACOR continues its liaison relationship with the Human Resource Department to promote equal employment opportunity and affirmative action. We receive job postings and, in turn, circulate them to constituents on our mailing lists in order to ensure a more inclusive pool. The GACOR continues to maintain a liaison relationship with the cross caucus and racial ethnic caucuses, as well as each synod.

New members on GACOR attended orientation at the Presbyterian Center in Louisville, Kentucky, during an executive committee meeting following General Assembly, and mentors were appointed to assist the newly appointed members.

The “COR Tool Box” is a compilation of resources to help COR leaders to understand and to implement the objectives of COR. Approximately 500 tool boxes have been distributed for synod and presbytery COR training.

The GACOR newsletter, “Fixings,” has been well received as an informative resource as well as a training aid by synods and presbyteries. Five hundred copies of the November 2003 newsletter were published and distributed throughout the church.

The GACOR Training Subcommittee planned and sponsored a training event for synod COR chairs and staff on October 10–11, 2003, at the El Caribe Resort and Conference Center in Daytona Beach, Florida. The purpose of the workshop was “to equip and challenge synod committee on representation (COR) members to achieve, accomplish, realize, endorse, and preserve the commitment of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to inclusiveness in their synods and presbyteries through worship, training, strategies, study, and sharing.” An examination of the evaluation forms from the event revealed that all of the participants said they received familiar information in a new perspective, and new ideas, concepts, or methods for future use in their own synods and presbyteries. Especially effective were the worship service led by the Reverend Dr. Arlene Gordon; sharings from synods and presbyteries including a skit from one synod; workshops on practical skills, communicating across cultures, and “How to Start or Redevelop a COR”; a presentation entitled, “The Biblical Basis for the Work of COR”; suggested resources; presentations on putting the components of COR together; a review of the COR Annual Report form; and work time when members of individual synods could plan how they would apply what had been learned in their own synods.

The Program Subcommittee has noted a great year for synod CORs since many synod COR members took advantage of the biennial training event at Daytona Beach in October 2003. Nine synods have conducted COR training for their presbyteries using many of the resources that were provided at the training event. Some synod CORs are distributing resources at synod schools and mission rallies to promote the work of COR within their synod and presbyteries.

Synod COR annual reports were reviewed by the Program Subcommittee. Based on the annual reviews, synods with the most inclusive representation throughout their leadership and committees continue to also have the most direct interaction with their synod’s COR and nominating committee. Having a member of COR attend nominating committee meetings (either as a full member of the committee or as liaison with voice), annual joint meetings, and annual joint training sessions are general characteristics of these successful collaborations. A challenge to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) at all governing body levels is to incorporate these characteristics in their COR’s and nominating committee’s work toward fulfilling the mutual responsibility to a diverse and inclusive church. There should be a noticeable improvement in the years ahead because of the goals projected by the synods in their annual reports. The Synod of the Pacific was most enthusiastic with their goals for three years using a program of mission visitation. This has increased the diversity among the leadership of the synod committees, and the synod now has a mixture of all ethnic groups.

The Planning and Strategy Subcommittee has endeavored during this year to work on, reevaluate, and update the various materials that are used as references for training purposes and/or to disseminate the role and goals of COR. The subcommittee has completed updating a handout entitled “How to Start or Revive a Presbytery COR” and has begun the task of overhauling its Manual of Operations, a necessary task in light of the change from annual to biennial General Assemblies. A COR Tool Box setting forth a historical perspective, objectives, theological and Book of Order underpinnings was prepared for use by CORs and was distributed at the 2003 training event for representatives of synod CORs. Tool boxes were also provided for synod COR training as well as GACOR’s video and study guide, Motivated by Gospel, Not by Law.

In keeping with GACOR’s responsibilities to foster the more efficient use of resources and effective communications, the subcommittee successfully promoted the use of e-mail to send minutes and other documentation to GACOR members.

Over the years many persons have wondered how presbyteries select, elect, or appoint commissioners to General Assemblies. One of the responsibilities of GACOR is to review the performance of governing bodies as to how they promote principles of inclusiveness. After discussion, GACOR decided to pursue this project. The GACOR synod representatives contacted their respective synod and presbyteries and asked the procedure used for selecting/electing commissioners to General Assemblies. The GACOR members were asked to explain to synods and presbyteries that the request for this information was for interpretation only. The GACOR was advised to go back at least six years to compare statistics. The GACOR Task Force was assisted with this part of the work by Research Services in the General Assembly Council (GAC). Out of the 173 presbyteries, 159 responded.

These responses gave GACOR insight into the ways in which presbyteries select/elect commissioners to General Assembly. Some have very specific guidelines while others are very vague. As the GACOR task force prepared a recommendation with a report summarizing the practices of 92 percent of the presbyteries on commissioner choice, responses reflect that only 28 percent specifically state in their guidelines that race ethnicity is considered in the choice of commissioners and only 33 percent specifically mention gender in the choice of commissioners. Since this is the time when General Assembly will be going to biennial meetings and the numbers of commissioners will change, GACOR suggests that each presbytery consider including in their guidelines the need to balance their selection/election of commissioners they will be sending to General Assemblies. The GACOR is suggesting that the process used by each presbytery be mindful of and include diversity. Diversity includes not only racial ethnic, but also age, gender, and persons with disabilities.

The GACOR and the General Assembly Nominating Committee (GANC) continue to work together to promote inclusivity and diversity throughout the church. The GACOR's Recommendation Form is one example of GACOR's working with GANC to get names of racial ethnic persons, persons with disabilities, and youth or young adults to serve in the work and mission of the church. The GACOR assists the candidates in getting their names in a pool that will help GANC as they search for candidates to fill vacancies on boards, agencies, and committees within the church.

3. Membership

The GACOR's commitment to inclusiveness is reflected in the diversity of its membership from the sixteen synods as follows:

Alaska-Northwest, Beulah Townsend, White (*SA)
 Covenant, Artence Walton, African American (SA)
 Lakes and Prairies, Robert Cross, African American (SA)
 Lincoln Trails, Mary Payne, White (SA)
 Living Waters, no representative to date
 Mid-America, William W. Gardner, White (SA)
 Mid-Atlantic, Roy Knight, African American (SA)
 Northeast, Yung Suk Park, Korean (A)

B. Moderator's Report

... [those] who join themselves to the Lord, to minister to him, to love the name of the Lord ... and hold fast my covenant—these I will bring to my holy mountain, and make them joyful...for my house shall be called a house of prayer for all peoples. (Isaiah 56:6–7; Theme Text for 215th General Assembly (2003))

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

Grace and peace to you in the name of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ!

What a joy it has been for me, as your Moderator, to see and experience the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) growing toward Isaiah's vision—a joyful “house of prayer for all people.” And everywhere I have traveled, I have discovered Presbyterians who love the name of the Lord, ministering to him, and holding fast the covenant of our Sovereign God.

Imagine ... the new church building in Dembidollo, Ethiopia—a simple concrete structure built with your mission funds. With its 2,000 seats, it was intended to hold a growing church for years to come. But already it is too small—worshippers arriving forty-five minutes early to crawl through the windows and squeeze into the crowded pews. The Ethiopian Evangelical Church Makane Jesus has grown from 20,000 to 4 million in the past forty years.

A HOUSE OF PRAYER FOR ALL PEOPLES.

Imagine ... the Church of All Nations in Minneapolis, Minnesota, a new church development incorporated in January with more than 300 members. On Sunday morning the gathered congregation includes second and third generation worshippers from Korea, Taiwan, China, Thailand, and Africa, along with African Americans and European Americans, some with biracial and adopted children. This, according to Pastor Jin S. Kim, is a multi-cultural community of faith, not multiethnic. Instead of gathering a variety of folk together who follow the practices and culture of the dominant group, a truly “multicultural” church begins with everyone at the table, developing worship, language, program, mission, and vision that is truly representative of all the groups involved.

A HOUSE OF PRAYER FOR ALL PEOPLES.

Imagine ... the Harlem Presbyterian Church in rural Montana, membership twenty-seven. In the back of the sanctuary is the community food pantry, serving several hundred clients a year. Each week, as the ten or twelve worshippers arrive to praise God, the first thing that greets them is the toilet paper, the canned corn, and the macaroni and cheese—the gifts of God for the people of God.

A HOUSE OF PRAYER FOR ALL PEOPLES.

Imagine ... Kilometer 7, a refugee camp for 300 families and 500 children outside of Baranquilla, Colombia. This is just one of the desperate places harboring the 4 million villagers who have been displaced by the violence in that brutal but beautiful country. There is no water, no employment, no school, no clinic—almost no hope. But, in the midst of the darkness is the light of the Iglesia Presbiteriana de Colombia—our 6,000 member global partner. Through visits, Bible studies, counseling, education, self-development micro-business and agricultural projects, the church volunteers offer a helping hand and the hint of abundant life. And at the risk of their own lives, the church leaders are speaking truth to military power, as they publicly advocate for human rights and humanitarian aid amidst the violence and poverty.

A HOUSE OF PRAYER FOR ALL PEOPLES.

Imagine .... New Genesis—a program for homeless men, housed in the basement of Central Presbyterian Church in Denver, Colorado. The 160 beds are neat and tidy amidst bright rooms and bathrooms that are spotless. All the maintenance and food services are done by the residents, who need to be employed within two days of entering the shelter. They have thirty days—post prison, post addiction, post dependency—to get their lives together and move into transitional housing. The success rate is 70 percent the first time through. And the program transforms 700 lives a year, sending these brothers in Christ back into the community as independent and productive citizens.

A HOUSE OF PRAYER FOR ALL PEOPLES.

Imagine ... Vienna Presbyterian Church in Vienna, Virginia, a growing 2,600 congregation that witnesses with evangelical joy and serves with passionate outreach. The congregation is about to fund its third new church development in ten years, and begin a third building expansion program for its own campus. The congregation hosts a large and thriving youth ministry, and has started an adult lay academy, offering dozens of courses each week equipping church members to be full-time Christian “ministers” in the board rooms, the classrooms, the operating rooms, and the living rooms of their lives. And, the pastor and the senior associate pastor—who disagree on many of the issues dividing our denomination—model a form of leadership that honors unity amidst diversity.

A HOUSE OF PRAYER FOR ALL PEOPLES.

Imagine ... the Lazarus Project, a ministry started twenty years ago by West Hollywood Presbyterian Church to provide pastoral care and healing to dozens of people dying from AIDS. Today it continues as an advocacy group and support group for gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgendered people (GLBT)—faithful Christians who have been baptized and confirmed within the PC(USA). And an important Lazarus outreach is to the parents and families of GLBT people—those whose lives and faith convictions are challenged and transformed by the real stories of the real people whom they love.

A HOUSE OF PRAYER FOR ALL PEOPLES.

Imagine ... 600 teenagers laughing, dancing, singing, hugging, and worshiping for two hours, twice a day. These youth leaders gathered for the Presbyterian Youth Connection Assembly last July. And they fell in love with Jesus, with each other, and with the polity and promise of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

A HOUSE OF PRAYER FOR ALL PEOPLES.

Imagine ... 300 people connecting at the Coalition Gathering in Portland ... 400 people gathered at the Centennial Celebration of Korean American presence in the PC(USA) in Hawaii ... 600 people gathered at the Covenant Network Conference in Washington, D.C. ... thousands of women celebrating and learning at the Presbyterian Womens Gathering in Louisville ... 2,000 energized educators gathered at the APCE Conference in Norfolk ... 300 curious musicians and pastors and elders gathered at the Emerging Worship Conference experiencing multisensory, multicultural, sacramental worship ... eager seekers gathered at Massanetta Springs and MoRanch, Montreat and Stony Point and Ghost Ranch ... hundreds of Presbyterians gathered for the Transforming Congregations Conference, and the Moderator’s Conference, and the MultiCultural Conference, and the Wee Kirk Conference, and the National Asian Presbyterian Women’s Conference. Across this land, around the world, and throughout the year, Presbyterians joyfully study and learn and change—a Spirit-led church, reformed and always being reformed.

A HOUSE OF PRAYER FOR ALL PEOPLES.

Imagine ... the USS Theodore Roosevelt, an air craft carrier, stationed in Norfolk, Virginia, that, when deployed, is home to 5,000 sailors, many between the ages of 18 and 23. And Lt. Diana Lantz, navy chaplain, is creatively engaged in the largest young adult ministry in the PC(USA).

A HOUSE OF PRAYER FOR ALL PEOPLES.

Imagine ... the 11:15 worship service at Collegiate Presbyterian Church in Ames, Iowa, where an average of 175 college students worship each week. Unlike the traditional service at 9 a.m. (whose devotees agreed to give up their prime time spot), this contemporary flavored worship experience offers a joyful praise band, sermons with visual images, and a dress code centered around blue jeans. And following the service, the church feeds all those hungry “Millennial Children” a home-cooked meal.

A HOUSE OF PRAYER FOR ALL PEOPLES.

Imagine ... the Bastos Presbyterian Church in Yaounde, Cameroon, where Pastor Christian Nganje joyfully preaches and teaches Jesus. On Christmas Eve, the congregation celebrated 55 infant baptisms, 28 adult baptisms, and 66 confirmations. And the three choirs, hundreds of voices strong, sang with the passion and power of human angels rooted in the very Voice of God.

A HOUSE OF PRAYER FOR ALL PEOPLES.

Imagine ... the Pasadena Presbyterian Church, a growing congregation in the heart of Southern California. On any given Sunday morning, the congregation celebrates four different worship services—one in Farsi, one in Spanish, one in Korean, and one in English. And several times a year these different communities join together for worship that glorifies God and enjoys God in language and music representing all the voices of this truly multicultural congregation.

A HOUSE OF PRAYER FOR ALL PEOPLES.

Imagine ... the Presbyterian Interracial Dialogue, a partnership of three Caucasian and three African American congregations in Winston-Salem, North Carolina, who have struggled together, grown together, and served together for twelve years. Emerging out of a tense time of police brutality and racial tension in their community, these congregations have worked for integration and tolerance in the public schools, in the city administration, and in the police department. They have advocated for the legal rights of citizens falsely arrested, built Habitat houses together, held discussions shaped around race-related books, worshiped together twice a year, provided racism training for Salem Presbytery, and created an interracial youth dialogue. And undergirding it all has been the warm personal friendship and commitment of the founding pastors, Steve McCutchan, Sam Stevenson, and Carlton Eversley.

A HOUSE OF PRAYER FOR ALL PEOPLES.

Imagine ... my beloved home congregation in Bethesda, Maryland, Bradley Hills Presbyterian Church, where for more than thirty-five years, we have shared space with the Bethesda Jewish Congregation. Together we have built new space—a star-shaped Covenant Hall, next to our cross-shaped sanctuary. There, with a built in ark and Torah scrolls, our Jewish friends celebrate Shabbat Services and weddings, bar mitzvahs and bat mitzvahs. And there, day in and day out, we Christians gather for fellowship, education, and meetings. As “spiritual siblings sharing sacred space,” our Jewish and Christian believers often share adult education seminars, mission outreach projects, peace initiatives in the Middle East, programs for interfaith families, and occasional joint worship. Each congregation passionately and intentionally witnesses to our respective faith traditions. We learn from each other and respect each other and offer a model of interfaith cooperation in our pluralistic community.

A HOUSE OF PRAYER FOR ALL PEOPLES.

Yes, my friends, for thirteen months it has been my privilege to wander around among the Presbyterian people of God. And I am a changed person because of it. Today I have a closer walk with Jesus, a deeper passion for justice, a wider love for the diversity of God’s human family, and a stronger hope that we can move forward together—as an excited, united, creative, evangelical, prophetic, missional Presbyterian people. By the time this year has ended, I will have visited more than seventy-five presbyteries, traveled within the bounds of thirteen of our synods, visited twelve theological institutions, spoken at fifteen conferences, preached in dozens of pulpits, and been transformed by the beauty and the suffering of brothers and sisters in Ethiopia, South Africa, Cameroon, Venezuela, and Colombia. As I step back and reflect on this marvelous Moderatorial journey, I have learned what matters to Presbyterians.

1. Worship Matters

Large, small, or medium—conservative, liberal, or somewhere in-between—Presbyterians love to worship, to glorify God and enjoy God in a variety of creative and reverent ways. Instead of the “worship wars” I had expected to experience, I have discovered instead a “worship wealth”—of praise and proclamation, sacrament and singing—that is blending the best of our Reformed tradition with the rhythms and languages of contemporary music and liturgy.

From reverent classical worship (exquisite organ and sacred choral texts, lectionary preaching, and carefully crafted prayers) to contemporary praise services (bands, screens, visual sermons, and clapping congregations) to meditative vesper services (Taize music, lots of silence, spontaneous intercessory prayer, and narrative preaching) to joyful multicultural celebrations (a balanced blend of two or more cultures in terms of music, language, ritual, and visual arts) to services that successfully integrate many of the elements above. Yes, through a variety of styles and structures, the worship in most of our churches is proclaiming the Good News of the gospel and joyfully telling the unfolding story of our salvation through Jesus Christ. The services that are most effective, regardless of style, are those that

- focus on God—providing true worship and not entertainment;
- grow out of the biblical text for the day;
- encourage a high level of lay participation, both in planning and leadership;
- provide both transcendent (connecting with the Other) and immanent (connecting with each other) experiences of God;
- combine an honest and prophetic word about the broken-ness of human life, with the hopeful promises and grace-filled vision of God;
- appeal to all five senses and the multiple intelligences (heart, soul, mind, and body);
- represent in image, liturgy, participation, and/or music the global, multicultural diversity of the human family;
- celebrate the sacraments as an integral part of worship; and
- spend quality time and effort, within the resources available to each particular congregation, doing worship well—delighting in offering each service as a fragrant gift to God.

Worship is where we begin. And the growing churches in our denomination—those growing in membership and mission, those growing in commitment and compassion—are the congregations that center their life together in the passion and the wonder of worship.

2. Mission Matters

The church began on Pentecost Day when the Spirit poured out—when the Spirit sent out the new believers to be the Resurrected Body of Christ in the world. When our worship is ended each Sunday morning, our worshipful work begins—our vocation as disciples serving our Lord, day in and day out, in the courtrooms, the classrooms, the board rooms, and the living rooms of our everyday lives. Our mission is not only overseas, but also right outside our back doors—as we spread the Good News of Jesus Christ is all that we do and all that we say.

We Presbyterians are very creative in matching our mission with the context of our communities and context of the lives of the people we serve.

In Tulegit, Ethiopia, John and Gwen Haspels are reaching out to the Suri people, who five years ago had never heard the Gospel. Through joyful evangelism, biblical translation efforts, a growing school (where the first graders range in age from 5 to 19), daily worship, and a medical clinic, these passionate evangelists are spreading the Good News and offering abundant life.

In Warren, Pennsylvania, amidst the rolling hills of small town America, the First Presbyterian Church centers much of its mission at the local Farmer's Market. Selling a huge amount of fruits and vegetables each week, all the money goes to the Presbyterian Hunger Fund, and each bag of produce includes stories about the needs of people in Iran and Brazil, Malawi and South Africa—a creative way of stretching the hearts and widening the horizons of this fairly insulated community.

In Capetown, South Africa, mission worker Doug Tilton is working tirelessly with the South Africa Council of Churches to turn post-apartheid promises into post-apartheid reality. He partners with members of parliament to create public policy legislation and political and social structures that will provide abundant life for all the people in this troubled but beautiful country. And PCUSA mission dollars make it all possible.

At the Presbyterian Church of Jackson Hole, Wyoming (a ten-year-old new church development, which is the only Presbyterian church for a hundred miles around, and now averages 400 in worship each Sunday morning), two distinctive mission projects reach out to the community. One is Christ House, a residential community for young adults who come to this resort town to work in the tourist industry, and who learn how to live and grow within a framework of the Christian life. The second project is called Christ in the Mountains, a father/son wilderness program that combines recreation, Bible Study, and spiritual formation for Christian males.

At the Guarenas Community Center, in a barrio outside Caracas, Venezuela, the Presbyterian Church of Venezuela is providing free medical care, dental services, youth programming and counseling, community advocacy groups, Bible studies, and craft classes for all members of the neighborhood. And a joyful Presbyterian elder is volunteering his time to be the director.

On Capitol Hill, in Washington, D.C., the Presbyterian Washington Office is providing advice and counsel to our congressional representatives and their staff. Taking the policies approved by the General Assembly, this hard-working staff communicates the positions of the PC(USA) as they affect legislation that is pending before Congress. And they provide resource materials for local congregations on all kinds of social justice and human rights issues.

Network Ministries is an ecumenical partnership serving in the Tenderloin neighborhood of San Francisco. For thirty-five years, these faithful Christians have built SafeHouse for women wanting to leave a life of prostitution. They have built low-cost housing for thirty-eight working poor families. They have created a computer center for children and for homeless men and women, and Listening Place, where street people can receive prayer and counseling. Glenda Hope, the director of Network Ministries for thirty-two years, leads the memorial services for most of the homeless people who die on the streets. And she organizes political efforts to protest budget cuts for the poor and tax breaks for the wealthy, as well as providing advocacy for such concrete needs as public toilets on the streets of San Francisco.

The stories are endless and fascinating. They are stories combining evangelism and compassionate service and social justice advocacy—“the whole gospel for the whole person,” as our mission workers in Ethiopia like to say. And all of them reveal the Word Becoming Flesh in the context and unique circumstances of the particular places where they are found. My friends, mission is what brought us together as a church. And I am convinced, that in these days of disagreement and tension within our denominational family, it will be mission that will keep us together.

[*Special Note: The Mission Yearbook for Prayer and Study is an invaluable tool, telling all our mission stories, with Scripture, prayer, and mission vignettes for each day of the year. ### 3. Evangelism Matters

In every presbytery I have visited, evangelism is at the heart of the vision and the strategy for mission. New church developments are springing up everywhere, along with immigrant fellowships and exploratory probes and preaching places. The Presbytery of New York City has 15 immigrant fellowships, National Capital has 10, Atlanta has 11, Grace Presbytery has a combination of 15 new church developments and immigrant fellowships. With a priority being given for new church developments (NCD) and evangelism efforts at every level of our mission funding, the PC(USA) is positioning itself to grow numerically by reaching out to brand new groups of believers. And multicultural congregations—those that welcome and integrate two or more cultural groups, with leadership, worship, and culture expressing the stories of all the groups involved—are becoming one of the most creative and exciting trends in our denomination. In the Presbytery of the Pacific, more than 50 percent of the congregations are multicultural. Across the country, 350 of our 11,125 congregations nationally are considered multicultural. A Pentecost church indeed! (But, in a nation that is 35 percent non-Caucasian, our 7 percent non-Caucasian denomination has a long way to go!)

At St. John's Presbyterian Church in Los Angeles, a large group of Cameroonians have joined this primarily Anglo congregation and are adding their rhythmic, joyful voices to the musical language of worship.

At Honey Creek Presbyterian Church in New Carlisle, Ohio, the session is struggling with survival issues, as this historic small church grows smaller. Will they expand their outreach to the growing Latino population beyond the after-school tutoring program and bilingual vacation Bible school? Will they continue to shrink away, or will they rise again as a multicultural congregation, serving the contemporary needs of their changing town?

In the Castro community of San Francisco, the Seventh Avenue congregation has grown from six to ninety in the last ten years. Welcoming everyone includes reaching out to the single mothers and gay and lesbian residents in their immediate neighborhood, and serving the needs of children, as well as the victims of AIDS. At the same time, a worship team of fifteen members works with the pastor each week to create rich sacramental worship based on the lectionary texts of the week.

In Medellin, Colombia, the Iglesia Presbiteriana de Colombia has started a school and community center serving the social and spiritual needs of a large community of refugees displaced by the violence in that war-torn land. On Sunday morning, 200 children and 75 parents squeeze into a converted classroom to sing and pray with hope and passion.

At Fourth Presbyterian Church in Chicago, a large number of young adults keep joining this almost 5,000 member congregation because of its excellent reverent worship, its outreach to the city, and its astounding adult education program—spiritual learning that offers rich opportunities for theologically curious and spiritually hungry contemporary Christians. With our “big tent” tradition of theological diversity and spiritual practices, our encouragement of faith questioning and exploration, our willingness to deal with contemporary issues such as faith and science, bioethics, globalization, war, and environmental justice, I believe that the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has a particular calling to reach out to institutionally suspicious, doctrinally skeptical, but deeply faithful believers.

Evangelism is the way the church grows—numerically, spiritually, culturally. But it doesn't happen unless each congregation makes a decision to grow, and then makes a plan as to how that growth will happen. The PC(USA) has lost 40 percent of our membership in the last forty years. Though the biblical story shows God doing the most amazing things in times of decline and diminishment—transforming the people during the exile of the faithful remnant in Babylon, using the embryonic fellowship of small house churches in New Testament times to turn the Roman empire on its ear—nonetheless, we as 21st century Presbyterians are called to turn our minority status into a countercultural voice for change and growth.

The General Assembly Council has named evangelism as one of its four main goals for the next two years of our denominational life, and will make budget decisions accordingly. The biggest challenge before us is to encourage each Presbyterian to understand himself or herself as an evangelist, and develop models for sharing our faith that match the theology and style of our Reformed tradition. If we are successful, we will turn membership decline into a new renaissance within the PC(USA).

4. Education Matters

The quality of our educational life sets the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) apart from many other Christian denominations, both at home and around the world. Everywhere I have gone—parish, seminary, global mission field, governing body—the quality and effectiveness of our training and education is evident.

I started out the year believing that ten theological institutions (plus two affiliated schools) was simply too many—particularly in these financially difficult times. But I have come to a different conclusion, having visited most of our seminaries. Each institution has excellent faculty, well-maintained facilities, and curriculum that celebrates our Reformed tradition. And the quality of the students—across the board—is one of the most exciting discoveries I made all year. Whether they are twenty-five or sixty, male or female, conservative or liberal, from this country or from abroad, we have a wealth of potential leadership, equipping itself to joyfully, eagerly, and creatively serve the church.

In general, our seminary populations are growing younger in average age, and the balance between male and female is evening out. Each of our theological institutions has something to set it apart—whether it is the focus on rural and small churches and commissioned lay pastor training at Dubuque and Union/Presbyterian School of Christian Educators (PSCE); or the spiritual formation focus at San Francisco; or the full-time, campus-based ethic at Princeton; or the parish focus at Austin and Columbia; or the combination of commuter, part-time, and full-time students at Pittsburgh; or the justice and interfaith focus of Union/Auburn; or the family focus at Louisville; or the urban focus at McCormick and Johnson C. Smith. Put together, the strong programs of all our schools is simply stunning. And the percentage of racial ethnic students and immigrant students is on the rise, to serve the growing diversity that increasingly defines our membership. One of the most hopeful aspects of our theological communities today is the respectful way that students learn and listen and grow together across the theological spectrum—learning how to be a church that balances peace and purity with the central call of gospel unity. Put it all together, and the combined strengths of our seminaries create a powerful portrait of the educational excellence of the PC(USA).

But, there is more! Within our congregations, the gifts and skills of educators and youth pastors are raising up new believers, offering nurture that is creative in process and style. Recognizing the multiple intelligences, utilizing the rotation model of learning, offering Godly Play programs for preschoolers, designing mentor-based confirmation curriculums, and heart-expanding mission trips for youth, the PC(USA) is countering the secular values of this country with the hospitality, the moral teachings, the social ethic, and the transforming forgiveness of the Gospel. And everywhere, the certification track for educators is adding training and excellence to the ministry staffs of our churches. (And, from my very biased but very passionate perspective, it is about time that we honored John Calvin's theology and provide a fourth ordained office of educator!)

Our educational excellence is also evident overseas. In the five countries that I visited, I learned that Presbyterian mission always begins with education. In Venezuela and Colombia, the schools were built first, and the worshipping communities grew out of them. In Ethiopia, the Bethel Makane Jesus School in Addis Ababa offers quality learning, self-esteem, and opportunity for 600 girls—in a country where only 25 percent of females are literate. And the BESS school in Dembidollo has raised up much of the leadership for Western Ethiopia during the past four decades.

As Africa and Latin America come of age politically and economically, the need for leadership training and education is crucial to raise the standard of living and build the social structures and values that can lead toward independence and abundance for all. And in these global churches that are bursting at the seams, the leadership needs are extraordinary. In the Western Bethel Synod in Ethiopia, there are more than 250 congregations and preaching places, but only 34 pastors! As we continue to encourage and support our partners overseas, the most crucial thing we can do is to fund schools and training opportunities, and continue to send mission personnel who can teach, train, and offer developmental advice. (NOTE: generous participation in the denominational Hearts and Hands Mission initiative—coming to your presbytery soon—will provide $20 million dollars to send more missionaries abroad to do just this!)

Unique to our Reformed tradition is our understanding that God lives at the intersection of life and faith—that what we do from Monday through Saturday is where our vocation as baptized disciples and ministers really takes place. Across the country, the growing emphasis in our preaching and teaching is on equipping our members to go out into the world and live their faith—in the workplace, in family life, in community involvement and political advocacy, in the voting booth, and at the shopping mall. All of this is central to our educational ministry and at the heart of what it means to be Presbyterian.

5. Leadership Matters

The growing creativity around patterns of leadership is simply astounding!

In the Presbytery of Utah in February, two lay pastors were commissioned to share one job—serving a small rural church two hours from where they live. Each of these leaders has a full-time professional job and a growing family. But each of them will spend two weekends a month serving the small church that has called them.

In Cincinnati, a commissioned lay pastor (CLP) who is also a registered nurse, serves her congregation twenty-five hours a week. Because she can't do it all, the lay leadership has been empowered to take hold of their own ministry. And that small church is growing.

In my home congregation, Joanie Friend is a registered nurse who went through eight months of parish nurse training, and was commissioned to serve on our pastoral care team as a volunteer. Joanie partners with the pastors to provide care to those in the hospital, taking special responsibility for discharge plans and continuing home care. She counsels with families and members contemplating a move to a senior residential community or nursing home. She provides medical advice, free blood pressure screening, an annual flu shot clinic, and general wellness education through adult seminars and regular newsletter columns.

Alice Winters has been a mission worker in Colombia for more than thirty-five years. And despite the danger of the violence that is tearing that beautiful land apart, Alice has refused to leave. Eighty-five percent of the pastors of the Columbian church are under thirty-five, and Alice has taught them all in the seminary in Baranquilla. With her evangelical love of the Gospel and her prophetic vision shaped by the Hebrew prophets, Alice has given birth to an entire church leadership—equipping these pastors to proclaim Good News with joy and courage, while also speaking truth to the power of a militaristic government that is abusing the rights of the poor.

In presbytery after presbytery, imaginative leadership—both elder and minister of Word and Sacrament and certified educator—is helping our “solid” church to melt and flow into the “liquid” church that reflects the change in process and structure that is taking place in our larger culture (with thanks to Rodger Nishioka for this image). In many places, standing committees are being replaced by ministry teams, task forces, mission partnerships, and covenant communities—relational structures that equip coalitions of congregations to engage in ministry that grows out of their context. In the Presbytery of Denver, the presbytery staff design includes a presbytery pastor, and the mission of the presbytery is simply to help each congregation create a vital and healthy mission identity, in partnership with other congregations in the presbytery. In the Presbytery of Miami, a central focus has been to respond to the growing Hispanic community in the Dayton area, with twelve projects nested in various congregations. In Grace Presbytery, the vision is to become a missional body—gathering seekers, growing disciples, and sending apostles into the world.

In Louisville, I have discovered that the “them” is “us!” Almost without exception, these leaders understand that they are servants of the larger church, implementing the mandates of the General Assembly and providing resources to empower the ministry of congregations and presbyteries. Every staff person I have met in Louisville belongs to a local congregation, and regularly worships and serves in their local community. And, in the midst of downsizing and budget troubles, these people work with annual anxiety about personnel cuts. Despite the fact that they are doing more with less, I have experienced a deep love of the church and a desire to build up the Body of Christ among these creative and devoted disciples.

As concerns arise about the clergy shortage for small churches, creative models of bi-vocational ministers and commissioned lay pastors is filling the need. As budget cuts eliminate positions in Louisville, more and more young adult volunteers are providing inspiring and energetic service. As our global partners ask for more help overseas, more and more professional people are offering to respond—either on a short-term basis or as career missionaries. As program needs grow in our congregations, more and more lay professionals—certified Christian educators, parish nurses, administrators, worship and music leaders—are stepping forward. And the call of ministry that lies at the heart of our baptism is taking shape in a dizzying variety of ways.

There continues to be a concern about quality candidates for the ministry of Word and Sacrament. And the Presbyterian Pastoral Leadership Search Effort (PLSE) program has been designed to meet that need. Geared at young men and women of all racial ethnic groups who might be considering a call to professional ministry, it engages middle school and high school youth in a computer-based network for information and encouragement. With the cooperation and support of their congregations, each of these young people is commissioned and enrolled as a potential leader within our denomination. And through gentle persuasion, they are invited to choose professional ministry over all the other career choices that stretch before them. (NOTE: As I have traveled around the church, several people have expressed their dismay that in a time when some are decrying the lack of candidates for ministry of Word and Sacrament, there are a whole category of trained, faithful, and talented people certified and ready for a call, but unable, constitutionally, to receive one. These are the gay and lesbian candidates who are unable to proceed toward ordination at this time.)

At the winter meeting of the General Assembly Council, leadership was adopted as one of the four main goals to shape our denominational priorities and budget during the next two years. And my experience this year tells me that the PC(USA) is more than stepping up to the challenge.

6. Theology Matters

Wherever I have gone this year, I have raised the theological issues that are dividing our denominational family. The last thing a counselor will suggest to a family that is in conflict is to stop talking or avoid talking about what is dividing them. I am concerned that our congregations and presbyteries are either waiting for someone else to solve our differences about ordination, Christology, and biblical authority, or are digging in their heels and remaining isolated in groups of like-minded people. Such avoidance of dialogue is making our divisions all that much more difficult.

The Theological Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity is making their interim report to this 216th General Assembly (2004) in Richmond. After three years of intentional theological and biblical reflection, after three years of building Christian community across theological lines, after three years of spiritual friendship and sacramental worship, they have produced a statement that proclaims that through Christ we already have been given our peace, unity, and purity as a church. And they have asked that each congregation and presbytery engage in intentional dialogue around these difficult issues, seeking out people with whom they disagree. Such dialogue is not about convincing anyone or changing anyone's mind. It is about listening and truly understanding the heartfelt convictions of the other.

As I have traveled around the church this year, I have heard some who believe that purity is more important than peace or unity. These voices, coming from deep and honest conviction, believe that either the purity of the literal word of Scripture—or the purity of the justice voice of Jesus—demand that one voice be adopted by the whole church. And, if people don't agree, well then, they should just leave the church. Though these two voices suggest opposite ways of resolving our conflicts, the purity tone of their "one" way sounds very much alike.

There are others who put peace above unity and purity. These voices suggest that we should just ignore all the conflict, hoping it will magically go away. Or, they suggest that we should just ignore the restrictions that currently exist in our Book of Order. This solution, unfortunately, has no integrity. Peace, within a biblical perspective, involves both honesty and justice.

The challenge before the task force and the whole church is to figure out what unity in Christ really means, and how the Lordship of Jesus Christ can hold us together, balancing both the peace and the purity of God's grace. My prayer is that the WHOLE church will care enough about holding the Body together, that we will be able to reach out in authentic love to those with whom we disagree. If there is one thing that I have learned this year, it is that ALL the voices of the church are important, and if we will eagerly and patiently listen to one another, all of us will change—growing more fully into the Body of Christ that God has called us to be.

7. Church Matters

Though worship matters, though mission matters, though evangelism matters, though education matters, though leadership matters, though theology matters—what all of these expressions of faith point to is the church. What really matters is the church, this human institution called to be the Resurrected Body of Christ on earth. Or, as our Book of Order suggests, we are called to be “the provisional demonstration of what God intends for all of humanity” (G-3.0200). If we are to honor our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, then we must live our lives as the church, embodying his grace, his truth, and his sacrificial love. We are called through Scripture to be the salt of Christ, flavoring the world with hope and grace. We are called to be the yeast of Christ, living so fully within the wilderness of the world, that we provide abundant life for all. And we are called to be the light of Christ, illuminating the possibilities of justice and peace and compassion in the darkest corners of violence and despair. And so, as I leave this office of Moderator, I challenge the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.):

- Bring good news to the poor, proclaim release to the captives, and recovery of sight to the blind (Luke 4).
- Love your enemies, and bless those who persecute you (Matt. 5).
- Make disciples of all nations, teaching them to observe all that God has commanded us (Matt. 28)
- Let justice roll down like water, and righteousness like an everlasting stream (Amos 5).
- Take the log out of you own eye, before you try to remove the speck from your neighbor's eye (Luke 6).
- Remember that you are the body of Christ, and individually members of him (1 Cor. 12).
- Do justice love kindness, and walk humbly with your God (Mic. 6:8).
- Have courage; hold onto what is good; render no one evil for evil; honor all people; love and serve the Lord, rejoicing in the power of the Holy Spirit.
- “Finally, beloved, whatever is true, whatever is honorable, whatever is just, whatever is pure, whatever is pleasing, whatever is commendable, if there is any excellence and if there is anything worthy of praise, think about these things. Keep on doing the things that you have learned and received and heard and seen ... and the God of peace will be with you” (Phil. 4:8–9).

8. Postscript

As I finish this most amazing year of my life, I am grateful to so many who have sustained me and supported me on my Moderatorial journey:

- to the commissioners of the 215th General Assembly (2003) who elected me and supported me throughout the year;

- to Elder Charles Easley Jr., who served as Vice Moderator, offering wisdom, warmth, joy, and deep faithfulness as he traveled with me to Africa, and as he spoke in many presbyteries and conferences and congregations throughout the year;
- to the congregation and Session of Bradley Hills Presbyterian Church, who offered me to the larger church for a year, paying my salary, upholding me in prayer, and cheering me every step of the way;
- to my colleagues, Scott Winnette, Laura Cunningham, Karen Werner, and Sue Dickson, who led the Bradley Hills community with energy, intelligence, imagination, and love;
- to the Presbytery of National Capital, under the leadership of Interim General Presbyter Cindy Bolbach, who endorsed me, offered weekly prayer for me, and encouraged Bradley Hills during my absence;
- to colleagues across the country—particularly Deborah Block, J. Barrie Shepherd, John Wimberly, Bryant George, Sheila Gustafson, Cynthia Campbell, Pam Byers, and Tricia Dykers-Koenig—who preached for me, encouraged me, prayed for me, and sustained me during this year;
- to Valerie Small, Sharon Youngs, Cliff Kirkpatrick, and all the members of the Office of the General Assembly who guided me and organized me and prepared me for the responsibilities of the year;
- to (Saint) Mary Ann Ledman, my personal assistant, who spent endless hours making airline reservations and site contacts, and kept me sane through all the endless details of travel;
- to all the executives and elders and pastors who met me at airports, drove me to churches, took me out to dinner, and provided spiritual friendship as I wandered around the country;
- to Jon Chapman, Doug Welch, and Maria Arroyo, the Worldwide Ministries Division area coordinators who made my overseas trip both meaningful and wonderful, and who helped me open up to the indescribable gifts of God’s people in Africa and Latin America;
- to my father, the Reverend Mark L. Andrews, who was my most enthusiastic cheerleader all year;
- to my children, Nathan and Anna, for putting up with all my stories, and encouraging me along the way;
- and, most of all, to my beloved Sim—partner, husband, and dearest friend—who lived without me for most of the year, enduring significant illness alone, and offering sage advice and a listening ear when my energy and perspective dwindled.

THANKS BE TO GOD—AND TO GOD BE THE GLORY!

Susan R. Andrews, Moderator of the 215th General Assembly (2003)

C. General Assembly Nominating Committee

The call of Christ is to willing, dedicated discipleship.

Our discipleship is a manifestation of the new life we enter through baptism.

Discipleship is both a gift and a commitment, an offering and a responsibility. “Commissioning to a Ministry Outside a Congregation,” Book of Occasional Services

The General Assembly Nominating Committee is responsible for ensuring “careful nomination of members of such boards, agencies, and committees as the General Assembly shall from time to time designate....” (Book of Order, G-13.0111). Through the General Assembly’s nominations process, the church has the benefit of selecting, from the varied gifts and services of Presbyterians, the most qualified persons to serve on General Assembly level entities. The committee makes nominations to twenty-nine such General Assembly level entities.

The General Assembly Nominating Committee

- presents to the General Assembly for election, nominees for at-large vacancies on General Assembly entities;
- submits to the General Assembly for election, nominees from persons proposed by synods and presbyteries in consultation with the General Assembly Nominating Committee for rotation vacancies or for middle governing body representation on General Assembly entities; and
- transmits to the General Assembly the names of persons from General Assembly entities for their representatives (linkages) to other General Assembly entities.

The General Assembly Nominating Committee (GANC) is responsible for identifying persons who are qualified to serve as at-large members of General Assembly entities. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) guarantees full participation and access to the decision-making processes of the church (Book of Order, G-4.0403). This commitment to the ministry of the whole people of God moves Presbyterians to respond to God's call for service—to use their gifts for the life and mission of the church. In cooperation and consultation with the General Assembly Committee on Representation, the General Assembly Nominating Committee gives careful consideration to Book of Order mandates that persons of all racial ethnic groups, different ages, both sexes, various disabilities, diverse geographical areas, different theological positions consistent with the Reformed tradition, as well as different marital conditions, be guaranteed full participation and access to representation in the decision-making of the church (G-4.0403 and G-13.0108). The GANC follows, insofar as possible, Book of Order guidelines, G-13.0111, that consideration shall be given to the nomination of equal numbers of ministers, laymen, and laywomen, except where other membership is mandated by the Book of Order. The GANC also encourages synods, presbyteries, and other linking entities to keep Book of Order mandates in mind as they submit persons for nomination.

1. Accomplishments in 2003–2004

The General Assembly Nominating Committee publishes a brochure explaining the nominating process, as well as providing a description of all committees, agencies, and boards to which it makes nominations. This brochure is disseminated, as part of a packet of nomination materials including an “application for nomination” form, to all middle governing bodies and sent to congregations and individuals at no cost upon request.

The General Assembly Nominating Committee solicits applications for nomination to at-large positions from all governing bodies, other official Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) groups, and individual Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) members. In addition, correspondence was sent to every Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) pastor and interim pastor this year asking her or him to “help in developing a deep pool of faithful, competent Presbyterians who can serve the whole church with energy, intelligence, imagination, and love.” Pastors were asked to look in their pews for church members whose gifts might be used at the General Assembly level as well as to consider this possibility for themselves.

During 2003–2004, persons hoping to be considered for service on a General Assembly level committee had the opportunity to find information on the General Assembly Nominating Committee website concerning the nominating process and entities to which the General Assembly Nominating Committee makes nominations. In addition, for the first time, persons wishing to file an application for nomination were able to file on-line via the committee's web access application form.

No person can be proposed for nomination unless an Application For Nomination form is filed. Subsequently, three confidential appraisals are secured. One of the three appraisals must come from the person's governing body of membership. The Application For Nomination forms remain active for two General Assemblies following their receipt. As of March 1, there were approximately 380 active Applications For Nomination forms on file. The nominating committee greatly appreciates individuals who have completed Application For Nomination forms or have responded to requests for appraisals. This year the nominations process was changed so that members of General Assembly Nominating Committee personally solicited appraisals for each applicant from her or his synod. This was a change from the practice of requiring each applicant to provide the reference forms to at least three appraisers. With this change in process, General Assembly Nominating Committee members are able interact personally with each applicant's references.

All application forms are shared with each General Assembly Nominating Committee member. Each member of the General Assembly Nominating Committee has access to the confidential appraisal materials for all applicants.

The nominating committee maintains a rotation system by which synods and/or presbyteries nominate persons to serve on the Mission Development Resources Committee, the Presbyterian Investment & Loan Program, Inc., and the National Committee on the Self-Development of People, as well as a rotation system for presbytery representation on the General Assembly Council, as outlined in the Organization for Mission. It is important to remember that nominations for these middle governing body positions, as well as for positions on the permanent judicial commission, are made from proposals received from presbyteries or synods—through their regular nominating process.

Members of the General Assembly Nominating Committee are actively engaged with middle governing bodies and General Assembly entities throughout the year. Each General Assembly Nominating Committee member serves as a liaison to the nominating committee of the synod in which the member resides. Each member attends at least one synod or synod nominating committee meeting annually to observe and to explain the nominations process.

The General Assembly Nominating Committee asks all General Assembly entities to send a written report every year concerning the specific needs of the entity regarding nominees presented to the General Assembly. In addition to this effort, the Nominating Committee's liaison member meets with the entity or is in contact by telephone or mail. It is the responsibility of each liaison to ensure that the nominating process is explained and that the skills and expertise needed by the entity are identified. This information, along with advice and counsel received from the General Assembly Committee on Representation, assists the General Assembly Nominating Committee in its work.

The General Assembly Nominating Committee continues to be concerned about issues regarding the needs of persons with disabilities, persons with children and/or other dependents, and youth and young adults on entities of the General Assembly.

The General Assembly Nominating Committee has tried to find alternative ways of meeting—either via email or conference call—when dealing with renomination of persons to a second term. Given the work to be completed on transition of terms in light of the move to biennial assemblies, the GANC was not able to do this as often as it wished this year. It is important, however, for members to be engaged in nontraditional ways of working, when adopting a schedule with fewer on-site meetings.

The General Assembly Nominating Committee and the General Assembly Committee on Representation are committed to working together to discover persons with disabilities, youth, and young adults who are willing to be considered for service on General Assembly committees and agencies. The General Assembly Nominating Committee and the General Assembly Committee on Representation take note that many applicants do not identify themselves as persons with disabilities even when a disability does exist. Thus, the number of persons with disabilities serving the church on committees at the General Assembly level is actually higher than reported.

Through conversations and engagement with the General Assembly Committee on Representation and with the cross caucus, as well as individual contact at all governing body levels, the General Assembly Nominating Committee strives to increase the number of racial ethnic persons in its pool of applicants.

The 214th General Assembly (2002) acted to institute biennial assemblies, beginning with the 217th General Assembly (2006). The General Assembly Nominating Committee began immediately to plan for the conversion. The General Assembly Nominating Committee's Rotation Sub-Committee worked through the conversion of terms for members of General Assembly entities and the realignment of classes for each entity. In preparation for its report to the 216th General Assembly (2004), the General Assembly Nominating Committee has consulted with General Assembly entities to explain the change in terms as well as to discuss issues of concern. The GANC endeavored to be attentive to the needs of each entity, to visit where welcomed in order to explain the process, and to be sensitive to the impact of the transition on current members. The General Assembly Nominating Committee gave particular attention to the ways in which changes in the Standing Rules regarding class term will affect the membership of future classes. The General Assembly Nominating Committee's recommendations regarding extension or adjustments of terms may be found in Item 00-04. The General Assembly Nominating Committee will have a resource with "Frequently Asked Questions" regarding this topic at its booth in the General Assembly Exhibit Area.

Two meetings of the nominating committee have been held since the 215th General Assembly (2003): Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, in October 2003, and San Antonio, Texas, in March 2004. A third meeting of the nominating committee will be held immediately preceding and during the General Assembly in Richmond, Virginia.

2. Membership

There are sixteen members on the General Assembly Nominating Committee—one member residing in each of the sixteen synods. A Moderator of the General Assembly, following consultation with the appropriate synod, appointed each member of the Committee to serve a five-year term. The following officers were elected and served in 2003–2004: Susan Davis Krummel, Synod of Lakes and Prairies, moderator; Melva W. Costen, elder, Synod of the South Atlantic, vice-moderator; Rita Fossell, Synod of Lincoln Trails, elder, secretary. The other members of the committee are Greg Elmore, elder, Synod of Living Waters; Donald A. Ericson, elder, Synod of Alaska-Northwest; David Hunter, minister, Synod of the Rocky Mountains; Grace S. Kim, elder, Synod of the Pacific; Robert Lucy, elder, Synod of the Sun; Albert G. Peery, minister, Synod of Mid-Atlantic; Cynthia Schweitzer, elder, Sinodo Presbiteriano Boriquen en Puerto Rico; Carmen Stokes, laywoman, Synod of Mid-America; Anna Pinckney Straight, minister, Synod of the Trinity; A. Jarrell (Jerry) Tankersley, minister, Synod of Southern California and Hawaii; Abe Valenzuela, elder, Synod of the Southwest; and David A. Zuidema, elder, Synod of the Northeast. The position for the Synod of the Covenant is vacant.

The office of the General Assembly Nominating Committee is located in the Office of the General Assembly, 100 Witherspoon Street, Louisville, KY 40202-1396. Valerie Small, elder, serves as the manager for General Assembly Nominations.

The General Assembly Nominating Committee's website can be found at www.pcusa.org/nominations.

D. *Advisory Committee on Litigation

1. Narrative—Assigned Responsibilities

The Advisory Committee on Litigation is composed of six Presbyterian attorneys. Each year the General Assembly elects one member to a six-year term. Each member is eligible for reelection to an additional term, but in no case may a member serve for a period exceeding twelve consecutive years of service. The General Assembly Nominating Committee makes nominations to the committee. The Advisory Committee on Litigation was established by the 200th General Assembly (1988) to advise the Stated Clerk on matters relating to legal actions.

The consultations of the committee typically take place via telephone conference calls after committee members have been provided copies of all pertinent pleadings, orders, and information. The committee ordinarily meets face-to-face at least once each year. It is normally consulted whenever the Stated Clerk is asked to participate in litigation involving matters of civil and religious liberty, church and state relations, and other matters related to the mission and interests of the church.

The Advisory Committee on Litigation (ACL) has been working on a number of issues in the past year. The 214th General Assembly (2002) directed the ACL to advise the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy as they deal with the issue of "takings." The ACL appointed one member to meet with ACSWP and provide legal advice on this issue. The ACL additionally took up the issue of the erosion of civil rights and judicial oversight since the terrorist attacks on September 11, 2001 and has been monitoring the civil litigation around this issue. Of much concern are the issues that involve immigrant and asylum detainees without judicial review.

2. Disposition of Cases Reported Last Year

a. Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, et al. v. City of New York, et al.; U.S. Court of Appeals, 2nd Circuit

On March 5, 2002, the Stated Clerk, Clifton Kirkpatrick, joined an amicus curiae brief in the Second Circuit Court of Appeals in Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, et al. v. City of New York, et al. prepared by the Becket Fund, a nonpartisan and ecumenical public-interest law firm that defends the free expression of all religious traditions. The brief addressed the question of whether the practices of Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, which allowed homeless persons to sleep on their property, are religious in nature. The Second Circuit Court upheld the District Court preliminary injunction in favor of Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, et al. This prevented the City of New York from dispersing homeless individuals who were sleeping by invitation on the church's landings and steps. The United States Supreme Court denied certiorari, which means that no further appeals are possible.

b. Abington Township, et al. v. Congregation Kol Ami, et al.; U.S. Court of Appeals, 3rd Circuit

On May 1, 2002, the Stated Clerk, Clifton Kirkpatrick, joined an amicus curiae brief in the Third Circuit Court of Appeals in Abington Township, et al. v. Congregation Kol Ami, et al. Kol Ami, a Jewish congregation, purchased the land formerly used by a Catholic monastery as a place of worship and is awaiting a decision in litigation to allow it to use the property as a Jewish congregational place of worship. The brief challenges the township zoning ordinance that would prohibit this transfer and use of property. The case is still before the U.S. District Court.

c. Wyoming Sawmills Inc. v. United States Forest Service; U.S. Court of Appeals, 10th Circuit

On October 30, 2002, the Stated Clerk, Clifton Kirkpatrick, joined an amicus curiae brief in the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals in Wyoming Sawmills Inc. v. United States Forest Service. This case dealt with the issue of whether the decision by the U.S. Forest Service to designate 50,000 acres of a national forest as a "sacred site" violates the Establishment Clause (that the state may not establish a religion). The brief argued that the accommodation of private religious practice was not a violation of the Establishment Clause nor an unconstitutional entanglement of state and religion. As of the date of this report, no decision has been made in the matter.

d. ACL Case 2003-00: O Centro Espirita Beneficiente Uniao Do Vegetal v. Ashcroft; U.S. Court of Appeals, 10th Circuit

On February 20, 2003, the Stated Clerk, Clifton Kirkpatrick, joined an amicus curiae brief in the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals in O Centro Espirita Beneficiente Uniao Do Vegetal (UDV) v. Ashcroft. The context of the case is the use of a governmentally controlled substance used in the ceremonies of a traditional indigenous religious belief. The brief in this case argued that under the Religious Freedom and Restoration Action (RFRA) the government must show a compelling governmental interest with respect to restricting particular religious conduct of the individuals in question and that it does so by the least restrictive means.

The 10th Circuit Court held that Uniao Do Vegetal could use hoasca in its religious services. The court balanced the harms and adversity to the public interest, recognizing the importance of enforcement of criminal laws, including the Controlled Substance Act. Nevertheless, the court found that harm would ensue from the denial of free exercise and the public had a significant interest in legitimate religious expression.

e. ACL Case 2003-01: Elvig v. Calvin Presbyterian Church, et al.; U.S. Court of Appeals, 9th Circuit

On March 24, 2003, the Stated Clerk, Clifton Kirkpatrick, joined an amicus curiae brief in the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals in Elvig v. Calvin Presbyterian Church, et al. The brief argued that the complaint alleging a Title VII employment discrimination based upon sexual harassment was in violation of the First Amendment right to Free Exercise of Religion. The case presented an important question regarding the interplay between Title VII and the religion clauses of the First Amendment. The scope of the “ministerial exception” to Title VII is of importance to all hierarchical church organizations as it impacts their ability to freely choose their representatives. Furthermore, appellant’s effort to seek review of the final decision of a church adjudication in federal court would have a wide-ranging impact on the structure and authority of internal ecclesiastical courts. The First Amendment’s guarantee of church autonomy secures the exclusive jurisdiction of churches over matters of doctrine, polity, religious teaching, and governance, thereby ensuring that churches can govern their spiritual and ecclesiastical affairs free from state oversight or entanglement. As of the date of this report, the court has not made a decision in this case.

f. ACL Case 2003-02: Child Evangelism Fellowship of New Jersey, Inc. v. Stafford Township School; U.S. Court of Appeals, 3rd Circuit

On April 24, 2003, the Stated Clerk, Clifton Kirkpatrick, joined an amicus curiae brief in the Third Circuit Court of Appeals in Child Evangelism Fellowship of New Jersey, Inc. v. Stafford Township School. The brief argued that the school district unconstitutionally discriminated against Child Evangelism Fellowship (CEF) when it refused to extend to CEF the same right to distribute and post flyers and participate in back-to-school nights that secular community organizations enjoyed. In 1988, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) took action stating that:

... Religious expression by the government itself or sponsored by the government threatens religious liberty and is forbidden by the establishment clause [of the U.S. Constitution]. On the other hand, religious expression by private citizens and organizations, initiated by private citizens and organizations, is protected by both the free speech and free exercise clauses [of the U.S. Constitution] and cannot be banned from public places. (God Alone Is Lord of Conscience, Minutes, 1988, Part I, p. 567, paragraph 37.1138)

As of the date of this report, the court has not made a decision in the case.

3. Matters Considered (2003–2004)

a. ACL Case 2003-03: Glassroth v. Moore; U.S. Court of Appeals, 11th Circuit

On April 28, 2003, Clifton Kirkpatrick, Stated Clerk of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), joined in an amicus curiae brief in Glassroth v. Moore in the 11th Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals. The brief argued that a display in the Alabama State Judicial Building was unconstitutional under the First Amendment Religious Establishment Clause of the U.S. Constitution and was harmful to religious liberty. In 1988, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) took action opposing “the permanent or unattended display of religious symbols on public property as a violation of religious neutrality required of government.” Additionally the same assembly stated that:

... Religious expression by the government itself or sponsored by the government threatens religious liberty and is forbidden by the establishment clause [of the U.S. Constitution]. On the other hand, religious expression by private citizens and organizations, initiated by private citizens and organizations, is protected by both the free speech and free exercise clauses [of the U.S. Constitution] and cannot be banned from public places. (God Alone Is Lord of Conscience, Minutes, 1988, Part I, p. 567, paragraph 37.1138)

The 11th Circuit Court held that the display did indeed violate the First Amendment dictate that prohibits the Congress from enacting any law respecting the establishment of religion. The court reiterated the U.S. Supreme Court interpretation that the First Amendment prohibits the government from “promoting or affiliating itself with any religious doctrine or organization, may not discriminate among persons on the basis of their religious beliefs and practices, may not delegate a governmental power to a religious institution, and may not involve itself too deeply in such an institution’s affairs” (492 U.S. 573). The U.S. Supreme Court refused to hear an appeal of the case and let the 11th Circuit Court decision stand as the final opinion in the case.

b. ACL Case 2003-04: CEF of Maryland, Inc. v. Montgomery County Public Schools; U.S. Court of Appeals, 4th Circuit

On June 10, 2003, the Stated Clerk, Clifton Kirkpatrick, joined an amicus curiae brief in the 4th Circuit Court of Appeals in Child Evangelism Fellowship of Maryland, Inc. v. Montgomery County Public Schools. The brief argued that the county unconstitutionally discriminated against Child Evangelism Fellowship (CEF) when it refused to extend to CEF the same right to distribute and post flyers and participate in back-to-school nights that secular community organizations enjoyed. In 1988, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) took action stating that:

... Religious expression by the government itself or sponsored by the government threatens religious liberty and is forbidden by the establishment clause [of the U.S. Constitution]. On the other hand, religious expression by private citizens and organizations, initiated by private citizens and organizations, is protected by both the free speech and free exercise clauses [of the U.S. Constitution] and cannot be banned from public places. (God Alone Is Lord of Conscience, Minutes, 1988, Part I, p. 567, paragraph 37.1138)

As of the date of this report, the court has not made a decision in the case.

c. ACL Case 2003-06: Locke v. Davey; U.S. Supreme Court

On September 8, 2003, Clifton Kirkpatrick, as the Stated Clerk of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), joined in an amicus curiae brief in support of Joshua Davey before the U.S. Supreme Court in Locke v. Davey. The brief argued that the State of Washington violated the Free Exercise, Equal Protection, and Free Speech Clauses of the U.S. Constitution when it offered a state scholarship to everyone except individuals who pursued degrees in theology. The brief argued that the otherwise neutral statute unfairly imposed a discriminated classification based upon religion. The 200th General Assembly (1988) stated that:

Government payments on behalf of individuals, under programs such as ... scholarship assistance, should without exception be available to ... students at church-sponsored agencies and institutions on exactly the same terms as if those ... [students] were receiving their services from secular entities.... Government must be neutral in matters of religion. God Alone is Lord of the Conscience (Minutes, 1988, Part I, pp. 562 and 569, paragraphs 37.1078 and 37.1156).

The U.S. Supreme Court decided on February 25, 2004, that the state of Washington's exclusion of the pursuit of a devotional theology degree from its otherwise inclusive scholarship aid program did not violate the Free Exercise Clause. The Court found that the case revolved around state action permitted by the Establishment clause and not required by the Free Exercise clause. The Court found that the State's interest in not funding the pursuit of devotional degrees was substantial and that the exclusion of such funding placed a relatively minor burden on the recipients of the scholarship.

d. ACL Case 2004-01: Westchester Day School v. Village of Mamaroneck; U.S. Court of Appeals, 2nd Circuit

On January 14, 2004, Clifton Kirkpatrick, as the Stated Clerk of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), joined an amicus curiae brief in the 2nd Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals in Westchester Day School v. Village of Mamaroneck. The case involved the interpretation of the Religious Land Use and Institutional Persons Act (RLUIPA) when a village denied a permit for a new classroom building to an Orthodox Jewish school. The brief argued the constitutionality of RLUIPA and that the statute's "substantial burden" test of the burden of a governmental regulation on a religious institution's free exercise right should be liberally interpreted so as to maximize the institution's free exercise of religion. As of the date of this report, the court has not made a decision in the case.

e. ACL Case 2004-02: In Support of Rodi Alvarado Pena; Appeal before the Attorney General

On January 12, 2004, the Stated Clerk, Clifton Kirkpatrick, joined an amicus curiae brief to the Attorney General, John Ashcroft, in support of asylum seeker Rodi Alvarado Pena. The brief requested that the attorney general affirm the decision of the immigration judge granting Alvarado's application for political asylum based on an undisputed record reflecting years of severe domestic violence and the failure of the government of Guatemala to respond to Alvarado's repeated efforts to obtain protection from the abuse. This brief addressed only the question of Alvarado's eligibility for asylum based on her membership in a particular social group defined by her gender, her marital status, and her status as a victim of domestic violence. As of the date of this report, the attorney general has not yet resolved this case.

f. ACL Case 2004-03: Sosa v. Alvarez-Machain; U.S. Supreme Court

On February 27, 2004, Clifton Kirkpatrick, as Stated Clerk of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), joined with the Presbyterian Church of Sudan to file an amicus curiae brief in support of Alvarez-Machain before the Supreme Court of the United States in Sosa v. Alvarez-Machain. The case involves the interpretation of the Alien Tort Claims Act (ATCA) enacted in 1789 to provide jurisdiction and a substantive cause of action for an alien to file a claim based upon a tort (an avoidable injury) committed in violation of the law of nations or a treaty of the United States. The brief argued that the act was enacted in conformity with U.S. foreign policy including the promotion and protection of international religious freedom. The brief was consistent with the many policies adopted by the General Assembly regarding religious freedom, human rights, and due process. The co-amici, the Presbyterian Church of Sudan, is a plaintiff in a separate class-action suit brought under the ATCA against Talisman Energy, Inc. The plaintiffs allege that Talisman collaborated with the government of Sudan to commit gross violations of customary international law including genocide, war crimes, extrajudicial murder, religious genocide, forcible displacement, torture, and other crimes against humanity including and targeting religious congregations and ministers. As of the date of this report, the U.S. Supreme Court has not yet rendered a decision in this case.

g. ACL Case 2004-04: Roper v. Simmons; U.S. Supreme Court

On March 31, 2004, the Stated Clerk, Clifton Kirkpatrick, joined an amicus curiae brief to the U.S. Supreme Court in Roper v. Simmons. The case requests that the U.S. Supreme Court define the use of the death penalty as punishment for a crime committed by a juvenile defendant as a violation of the Eighth Amendment guarantee against cruel and unusual punishment. Beginning in 1959, the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and its predecessors declared the church theologically and ethically opposed to the use of capital punishment. "Believing that capital punishment cannot be condoned by an interpretation of the Bible based upon the revelation of God's love in Jesus Christ, and that as Christians we must seek the redemption of evil doers and not their death, and that the use of the death penalty tends to brutalize the society that condones it, the 171st General Assembly (1959) declares its opposition to capital punishment." The 1966, 1977, 1978, and 1985 General Assemblies reaffirmed this statement and called upon the church to work for abolition of the death penalty calling capital punishment an expression of vengeance that contradicts the justice of God on the cross. The 212th General Assembly (2000) called for an immediate moratorium on all executions in all jurisdictions that impose capital punishment. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has been consistently opposed to capital punishment and does not distinguish among categories of defendants. As of the date of this report, the U.S. Supreme Court has not yet issued a decision in this case.

E. General Assembly Per Capita Payments by Presbytery

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) is grateful to the presbyteries for their increasing level of faithfulness in the payment of per capita apportionments. The COGA is happy to report that since the year 1996, the amount of unpaid per capita has been reduced from approximately $350,000 to about $191,000 at end of the year 2002 ($188,061 was written off after adjustment). Continued improvement of the level of giving is encouraged.

"Per capita is an opportunity for all communicant members of the Presbyterian church through the governing bodies to participate equally, responsibly, and interdependently by sharing the cost of coordination and evaluation of mission" (Minutes, 1995, Part I, p. 301).

Full participation in per capita giving preserves the connectional nature of our Presbyterian system and provides a strong witness to good stewardship as believers of the Reformed Theology, based on the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ.

The following pages contain a statement of all per capita payments to the General Assembly for the last five years (1999–2003) by presbytery, indicating the total annual per capita apportionment, the amount paid, and the unpaid balance. It can be observed that the total unpaid per capita for 2003 (as of May 11, 2004) stands at $244,908. The OGA will continue to receive further payments for 2003 from a few presbyteries, which will hopefully reduce the level of unpaid per capita to be equal to or lower than last year's level.

We are grateful that the vast majority of our congregations continue to be faithful and support our denomination by participating in the giving of per capita, even when they have disagreements with our governing bodies. Each member's share of these costs for the year (2004) is $5.51.

F. Affinity Groups

The Office of the General Assembly, in response to Overture 00-49, was directed by the 212th General Assembly (2000) to request that all affinity groups that use the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in their name provide information to assist commissioners in understanding the goals of each affinity group and whom they represent.

The 213th General Assembly (2001) modified the amount of information to be requested from groups by taking action on Commissioners' Resolution 01-23. According to that action, the request for information will be annual and the compliance is voluntary. The information received is displayed on the PC(USA) Website, but is also to be sent to all commissioners each year.

The Office of the General Assembly sent a communication to a wide range of groups related to the PC(USA) who might be considered an affinity group. Listed below are the groups to which this communication was sent. Material follows that was submitted by the groups in response to this communication.

Association of Presbyterian Church Educators
 Association of Presbyterian Interim Ministry Specialists

A response was not received from the following organizations: Association of Stated Clerks, Clergy Exchange International Foundation, Messiah Now Ministries, Presbyterian Border Ministry, Presbyterian Center for Mission Studies, Presbyterian Church Business Administrators Association, and Voices of Sophia.

The following groups in previous years have responded that they do not qualify as an affinity group (as defined by the assembly's action): BorderLinks, Knox Fellowship, Literacy and Evangelism International, Presbyterian Council for Chaplains and Military Personnel, Presbyterian Lay Committee, Presbyterian Outlook Foundation, Presbyterian Reformed Renewal Ministries International, Presbyterians for Faith, Family and Ministry, Presbyterians Pro-Life, and Voices of Orthodox Women. Literacy and Evangelism International, Presbyterian Lay Committee, Presbyterians Pro-Life, and Voices of Orthodox Women voluntarily submitted reports this year.

A.P.C.E.

The Association of Presbyterian Church Educators

The mission of APCE is to Connect, enrich, empower and sustain persons serving in the educational ministries of the Reformed family of churches.

Though our 1600+ members are primarily from the PC (USA), we have formal partnerships with the Christian Reformed Church, the Presbyterian Church in Canada, and the Reformed Church in America. We are also primarily professionals in the fields of Christian education, Directors of Christian education and pastors with education portfolios, but we encourage the membership of volunteers as well.

We produce a quarterly professional journal called The APCE Advocate, which features articles on timely themes and is a privilege of membership. Our largest endeavor is our annual event, which this year took place January 28-31, in Norfolk, VA. It is typical to have over 1,000 of our members at these conferences where we offer internationally recognized keynote speakers and dozens of workshops, in addition to honoring our own Educator of the Year. Throughout the year, we work in many areas of advocacy for both Christian educators and Christian education in our denominations. We continually lift up the certification process through courses and recognition. We also post updates on our website: www.apcenet.org.

Our membership is organized into fourteen geographical regions. Each region elects a member to our governing cabinet. In addition, our racial ethnic members elect four representatives. Our officers are elected out of this rotating cabinet of volunteers. The cabinet meets twice a year, for several days each October and in conjunction with the annual event. We have no employees, but we have several part-time contracts. There is a contract with the editor of our journal and with a copy editor, and we are in our second contract year with a new management team, American PressWorks. This fine organization, which serves non-profits, manages our membership database, mailings, and financial transactions. We are also most grateful for the staff hours contributed to us by PC (USA). Pat Murphy, from Congregational Ministries Division, puts many hours in as our Annual Event Registrar. Carl Horton and Donna Cook meet with us as advisors.

Our 2003-2004 operating budget is $305,900, exclusive of our annual event expenses, which are covered by the income from the event. Our annual event budget is usually $192,851.89 (depending on location, leadership, and attendance). Our primary source of income is our annual membership dues. We also receive a grant from the PC (USA), through our covenants with Congregational Ministries Division and National Ministries Division. Realizing that we need to develop other sources for our growing operating budget, we have established an Endowment Fund managed by the Presbyterian Foundation. We encourage gifts in memory and in honor of educators. This fund is still too small to contribute to our budget, but it is an investment in our future.

Association of Presbyterian Interim Ministry Specialists

Vision Statement

The Association of Presbyterian Interim Ministry Specialists (APIMS) exists to provide support for pastors, spouses and families as well as governing bodies within the Presbyterian Church (USA) who are involved with interim ministry and to provide information regarding placement, training, certification, and research in the specialized field of interim ministry.

APIMS' Goals

Our goals as a servant of the Church are:

In service to the Church...

1. To develop a body of Interim Ministry Specialists who will be available to congregations, governing bodies, and other church organizations;
2. To encourage more effective placement systems for interim ministry clergy within the Church;
3. To develop, maintain, and advocate the highest standards of all interim ministry specialists.

In service to members...

1. To encourage continuing growth in interim ministry skills;
2. To provide guidance and support for that growth;
3. To advocate within the Church a clear understanding of the value of interim ministry, thus promoting the use of interim ministers or pastors;
4. To advocate the concerns of interim pastors and their families.

Meetings, Membership, and Dues

Annual business meetings are held in conjunction with the Interim Ministry Network's Annual Conference. Each member and governing body has one vote.

APIMS Association annual dues are used to support:

- Circulation of availability lists
- Professional certification
- Advocacy within the Church
- Advocacy at General Assembly
- Dissemination of information about interim ministry Collegial Support
- Interim Pastor's Publications and office

Membership is open to all members of the Presbyterian Church (USA) who subscribe to the purpose, charter, and bylaws of APIMS, and remit annual dues. Members may attend all APIMS meetings, vote, serve on committees, and hold office. They receive printed membership materials and have access to the membership lists.

Governing Body membership is open to any Governing Body or recognized group within any Governing Body which will: subscribe to the purpose, charter, and bylaws of APIMS, remit Governing Body annual dues, and encourage the study and practice of interim ministry within the Governing Body and the Church at large.

APIMS supports the use of all denominational relocation procedures. In addition, APIMS supplies Presbytery and Synod executives with lists showing APIMS members' names, addresses, phone numbers, and anticipated dates of availability.

APIMS does not espouse a theological position and is as diverse theologically as its membership.

Association of Presbyterian Tentmakers (APT)*Purposes

- To be advocates for alternative models of ministry throughout the church.
- To define and affirm tentmaking as a valid expression of Christian ministry.

- To nurture and support tentmakers as continuing active members in good standing of presbyteries.
- To foster mutually beneficial contacts and relationships with similar organization in other denominations and other parts of the world.
- To organize conferences which will provide opportunities for worship, fellowship, spiritual growth, and for meetings of the association

Activities

- An annual national conference for worship, fellowship, spiritual growth, discussion of issues of concern to tentmakers, and meeting of the Association.
- A newsletter (Tent Talk) for APT members and denominational leaders.
- Providing resources for congregations, governing bodies, and other interested groups for the purpose of interpreting tentmaking.
- Facilitating greater communication among tentmakers through various forms of networking.
- Providing supportive service and training for governing bodies.

Did you know?

- John Calvin was a tentmaker.
- Most Presbyterian pastors on the American frontier supplemented their parish income with farming, teaching, or other work.
- One third of all Presbyterian congregations have less than 100 members – many of these don't have regular pastoral leadership.
- Tentmaking also works well in multi-staff congregations.
- An increasing number of Presbyterian congregations are searching for tentmaking pastors.
- Tentmaking has a long and continuous history with our denomination.
- APT members include ordained ministers, commissioned lay pastors, churches with tentmaking pastors, presbytery staff, members of committees on ministry, and other interested persons and institutions.
- The Office of the General Assembly recognizes tentmaking pastors through the 170 series in the statistics volume

Coalition for Appalachian Ministry

Affinity Report—2004

1329 Wears Valley Road, Townsend, TN 37882-3417, Ph. 865-448-5940

Our mission statement says:

“The mission for the Coalition for Appalachian Ministry is to make a positive impact wherever Reformed tradition and Appalachian culture come together by networking with church and community, to provide educational and service opportunities.”

To that end we continue to strive to:

- Serve as a communications link among church governing bodies of the region. (Our member communions include the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.); The Reformed Church in America, The Cumberland Presbyterian Church, The Cumberland Presbyterian Church in America, and the Christian Reformed Church.)
- Hold events on issues of concern to the churches in the Appalachian Region.
- Provide information to congregations and judicatories (governing bodies) on issues such as small membership church ministry, Appalachian culture, and ethnic diversity in the region.
- Channel grant funds from the Presbyterian Hunger Program and other sources to grassroots projects and communicate with governing bodies about this.
- Maintain relationships with other church-related Appalachian agencies.
- Provide help in orienting clergy and laity to minister in the region.
- Provide, through the CAM Cabin Crafts, a means for craft-persons in the region to market their products.
- Provide a means by which those looking for volunteer opportunities in Appalachia can be put in touch with projects seeking volunteers.

Covenant Network of Presbyterians

www.covenantnetwork.org

1. The Covenant Network of Presbyterians envisions a church as generous and just as God's grace. We work to uphold and act on the Presbyterian Church's historic, progressive vision. We actively pursue conversation and fellowship across theological divides, even as we continue to press for constitutional change to permit the full participation of gay and lesbian Presbyterians and to welcome the leadership gifts of all whom God calls to ordained service. We are committed to helping the church stay together in faithful ministry despite our differences.

The Covenant Network addresses a broad range of theological, biblical, pastoral, and ecclesiastical matters facing our church by:

- Fostering communication and theological dialogue through our quarterly newsletter, Covenant Connection, our website, www.covenantnetwork.org, and occasional books, booklets, and videos;
- Mounting annual national conferences on theological topics;
- Encouraging discussion, study, and mutual prayer both on-line and through local groups;
- Providing education and information on matters relating to ordination, and giving moral, legal, and financial support to officers and sessions challenged under the provisions of G-6.0106b of the Book of Order;
- Working for needed changes in the church, including the eventual removal of G-6.0106b.

The Covenant Network encourages all Presbyterians to participate actively in the work and deliberations of their local presbyteries. Local chapters in a number of presbyteries and seminaries connect supporters and others for discussion, study, and political action.

The Covenant Network's participation at G.A. includes hosting a number of public events, staffing a booth in the exhibit hall, publishing recommendations on selected business before the G.A., and offering resources, information, and assistance to commissioners as requested.

With others in the church, we desire to live out the Reformed faith found in Scripture and our confessions. We strive to proclaim and embody the gospel as we have learned it from the life and ministry of Jesus; we affirm the centrality of the Bible in our church; and we value the dynamic tension between unity and diversity.

Our vision for the church is embodied in "A Call to Covenant Community," which is posted on our website.

2. Total expenditures in 2003 were approximately $365,000. Principal expense categories include salaries, printing and mailing, travel, expenses for the annual conference, and expenses for G.A. participation.

The Covenant Network is supported by donations of varying sizes from individuals and congregations in the Presbyterian Church (USA). In 2003 we received contributions from 87 congregations and nearly 1,100 individuals. Eighteen individuals or couples and 21 sessions made donations of more than $1,000. These 21 sessions are listed on the attachment.

3. In 2003, the Covenant Network employed two full-time and three part-time staff members.

Literacy and Evangelism International

I. Goals, methods of operation and theological emphases:

Our goal is that all the peoples of the earth would be able to read the Bible for themselves, in their own language.

Our methods of operation are to further literacy efforts around the world by providing consultant services to any mission group or church for (1) creating adult literacy materials in needed languages, (2) offering materials for teaching English as a Second Language, (3) training leaders for literacy and/or English-as-a-Second-Language ministry.

Our theological emphases: Here is the most important statement on our theology from our Brief Statement of Faith:

Jesus Christ, who by virtue of His deity, virgin birth, sinless humanity, substitutionary death, atoning blood, bodily resurrection and ascension to heaven as King and Priest, is the only one capable of redeeming people.

II. Our annual budget:

$725,905 for 2003, broken down:

Missionary costs:	$399,229
Ministry:	$180,219
Management:	$ 79,479
Fund Raising:	$ 66,978

III. The number of staff in our organization:

Paid workers: 5 (full-time and part-time)
 Self-supporting: 29
 Non-salaried staff: 3

Medical Benevolence Foundation

Validated Mission Support Group of the Presbyterian Church (USA)
 Report prepared by: The Reverend Daniel L. Force, Executive Director
 May 7, 2004

Mission Statement

The Medical Benevolence Foundation (MBF) with the Presbyterian Church (USA) proclaims and demonstrates the gospel of Jesus Christ by encouraging and supporting the healing ministries of our worldwide partners.

The Medical Benevolence Foundation is a non-profit corporation established in 1963 in the State of Tennessee. IRS Exemption Code: 501(c)(3)

International Headquarters

3100 S. Gessner, Suite 210
Houston, Texas 77063-3743
Telephone: 1.800.546.7627
Web site: www.MBFoundation.org

Policy setting and management: A Board of Trustees consisting of 45 persons governs the Medical Benevolence Foundation (MBF). A Nominating Committee searches for prominent Presbyterian people in the religious, business, medical, and academic community to recommend candidates for the Board. Trustees can be elected to two consecutive three-year terms, but then must leave the Board for at least one year before they can be considered again for membership. The Board meets semi-annually to set policy and direct affairs of the foundation through the following ten standing committees:

Executive	Finance	Personnel
Development	Grants	Strategic Planning
Equipment and Supplies	Mission Field	Nominating Volunteers

The Executive Committee meets monthly and has authority to act on behalf of the Board of Trustees on all matters except appointment of the Executive Director and election of trustees.

The Medical Benevolence Foundation serves as an arm of the International Health Ministries program of the Presbyterian Church (USA) as a Validated Mission Support Group of the Presbyterian Church (USA).

What Does MBF Do?

1. Raise funds from Presbyterian congregations and individuals to support the International Health Ministries program of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). It also receives US Government funds via American Schools and Hospitals Abroad (ASHA) a division of USAID.
2. Obtains and ships donated medical supplies and equipment to overseas church partners, in a joint program with Project C.U.R.E.
3. Provides information to Presbyterian congregations and individuals about Presbyterian Church (USA) international health ministries.
4. Recruits physicians and other volunteers for mission health care programs outside the U.S.

In addition to its International Headquarters in Houston, MBF has staff in FL, GA, CA, TX. Total staff: 14 full- time, 1 part-time staff and 1 full- time volunteer

Theological emphases:

MBF seeks to provide a service on behalf of all congregations of the Presbyterian Church (USA). It is guided by the Book of Order and The Book of Confessions of the Presbyterian Church (USA)

Request for a list of all donors who gave more than $1,000 to MBF in 2003: Privacy considerations forbid our providing such information.

More Light Presbyterians

PMB #246, 4737 County Road 101, Minnetonka, MN 55345-2634
www.mlp.org

GENERAL ASSEMBLY AFFILIATED ORGANIZATION REPORT
March 2004

The More Light movement within the Presbyterian Church started in 1974 and gained momentum after the General Assembly in 1978 began enacting a series of policies reducing gay and lesbian members to second-class status in the church. These policies, including a ban on ordination, are based on the categorical assumption that any and all same-sex behavior is intrinsically sinful. That assumption has never been an essential tenet of our Reformed theology.

We, along with the majority of Presbyterian biblical scholars, believe that this is a false assumption based on misinterpretation of scripture. In seeking to emulate God's goodness, we believe with the Confession of 1967 that the whole "Bible is to be interpreted in the light of its witness of God's work of reconciliation in Christ." It is our affirmation that for Christians, the primary norm of loving relationships, reflecting God's beloved community, is Jesus' life and behavior.

While we are in disagreement with the policies that deny that homosexual persons are fully created in God's image, we are committed both to the Presbyterian Church (USA) and its polity. Our vision for the church of Jesus Christ is anchored in our Reformed theology and we concur with the Great Ends of the Church as stated in our denomination's constitution. We joyously affirm the theological foundations explicitly set forth in the first four chapters of the Form of Government. It is our prayer that the realm of God will come to earth as it is in Heaven.

GOALS—Our mission statement sets forth our goals. "Following the risen Christ, and seeking to make the church a true community of hospitality, the mission of More Light Presbyterians is to work for the full participation of lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender people of faith in the life, ministry and witness of the Presbyterian Church (USA)."

METHODS—MLP works with individuals, chapters and congregations to: provide support for their life in the church, education and training through published materials, a web site, a resource center, materials for worship, Bible study, retreats and outreach. We advocate and work for a polity and practice that embodies full Christian community for all Presbyterians, regardless of sexual orientation or identity. We also cooperate with Presbyterian partners, other denominations and faith traditions to support the LGBT community in matters of justice and compassion, especially for those who feel disenfranchised by the church.

BUDGET—The total annual operating budget for More Light Presbyterians for 2003 was $215,981. All income came from Presbyterian individuals or congregations. Our membership and donor list is confidential. We are surveying our donors to determine their willingness to have their names public. Nine individuals and twelve congregations or other organizations contributed $1,000 or more, totaling $52,009. This figure includes board members' contribution of their organizational travel and lodging expenses.

STAFF—We are primarily a voluntary organization. In 2003 we employed one full-time field organizer. We also employed one part-time administrative assistant and one part-time bookkeeper.

Respectfully submitted,
Bill Moss and Donna Riley
Co-Moderators, MLP

National Association of Presbyterian Clergywomen (NAPC)

Informational Report for the 216th General Assembly (2004) of PC(USA)

Purpose: Convene a National Organization for Presbyterian Clergywomen, with local and regional emphasis, inclusive in membership, supportive in community, and representative in advocacy within the PC(USA). The first NAPC assembly was in Arlington, VA, October 10, 1986.

Vision and Theological Emphasis: Believing in the all-encompassing love of God in Christ, we seek to enable all Presbyterian Clergywomen to serve one another in the spirit of the Paraclete: to stand alongside one another, to comfort one another, to counsel one another, to be advocates of justice for one another, to empower one another.

Membership: Members may be any active or retired Presbyterian Clergywoman, candidate for ministry in the PC(USA), or any other person who accepts the vision of NAPC, who indicates a desire to work toward its growth and goals, and remains current in the payment of dues.

Meetings: The membership convenes at least triennially in a Triennial National Conference. The last conference was in Albuquerque, New Mexico 4/26/02 – 4/29/02. The next Triennial National Conference will be in Princeton, New Jersey 3/31/05 – 4/3/05. These conferences also provide challenging addresses, worship, workshops, and networking opportunities. NAPC is also present at each General Assembly with a booth and a luncheon event.

Staff: NAPC has no paid staff.

NAPC Officers (2002-2005):

Charie Bowman Reid -- Moderator
Carey Vanderkar -- Vice-Moderator
Kathy Keener-Han -- Historian/Secretary
Melissa Bane Seiver -- Membership Secretary
Sharon Yunker-Deatz -- Treasurer
Janet Macgregor-Williams -- Triennial Coordinator
Georgia Ann Snell -- Newsletter Editor
Karen Hernandez Granzen -- Racial/Ethnic Representative
Jacqueline J. Lewis -- Racial/Ethnic Representative
Aleida Jernigan -- Liaison to National Entities of the PC(USA)

Annual Budget: Membership dues generate $7,000 to $10,000 per year. Contributions, gifts, and interest received in recent years average about $800 per year. Expenditures cover membership advertising & mailings, annual GA presence, quarterly newsletter printing & mailing, meetings & conference calls for the Officers & Steering Committee, and other supplies & postage.

Contributions over $1,000: NAPC receives income of about $1,500 per year, separate from its annual budget, through the Presbyterian Foundation, from The Reverend Anne Marie Meyerhoffer Endowment. Revenues received are accumulated over a three year period and then are all used to further the development of the organization at its Triennial Conference by providing scholarships to selected attendees requesting financial assistance and by helping to defray some of the Triennial leadership honoraria and costs. The income from the Meyerhoffer Endowment is the only donation to NAPC by an individual or organization, which exceeds $1,000 per year.

National Association of Presbyterian Scouters

Office of the President
1817 Ems Road East
Ft. Worth, Texas 76116

April 15, 2004

Mr. Kerry Clements
Associate Stated Clerk
Office of General Assembly
Presbyterian Church (USA)
100 Witherspoon Street, #4418
Louisville, KY 40202

Dear Mr. Clements:

The National Association of Presbyterian Scouters (NAPS) is pleased to provide the following information requested by the 215th General Assembly for display on the PCUSA web site and mailed to all commissioners.

The Mission of NAPS is to: “Develop Scouting in Presbyterian Churches to teach and recognize religious values.”

To accomplish our mission, NAPS is working in the following areas:

- Encouraging churches to sponsor new units
- Promoting Religious Awards
- Working with council religious relationship groups
- Developing material for the chaplain aide’s use on campouts
- Developing an effective NAPS organization

Our organization’s annual budget depends on the number of annual member renewals we have at $20.00 dollars each. The money is only used for direct expenses of being in contact with the members: printing, postage, phone, and a few souvenirs for the Scouts.

NAPS is chartered in the state of Texas as a nonprofit organization and is staffed by volunteers that pay their own travel expenses.

Unfortunately, no contributions were received near $1,000.00.

Yours truly,
Eliot Kerlin
President

National Council of Presbyterian Fourth Day Movements

The National Council of Presbyterian Fourth Day Movements is an organization of local groups, which are predominantly composed of Presbyterian (PCUSA) members, around the nation. These groups, or communities, are utilizing the Cursillo Method as a vehicle to attempt, through spiritual renewal, to implement the commission of our Lord Jesus Christ, to “go into all the world and proclaim the Gospel” of God’s grace. The Cursillo Method was established and has been refined by Roman Catholics over the past 50 years. A number of expressions similar to Catholic Cursillo have developed in the United States over the past 25 years, including Walk to Emmaus, Great Banquet, Tres Dias, Presbyterian Pilgrimage, and Via de Cristo, all of which allow interdenominational participation. Expressions which utilize the name Cursillo, i.e. Episcopal Cursillo and Presbyterian Cursillo, are required by license agreement with the Catholic Church to restrict participation to members of their denominations. These movements all follow the basic format of Catholic Cursillo, which includes a Pre-Cursillo phase, a Three-day weekend centered around 15 talks, and the Post-Cursillo (known as Fourth Day) which is an accountability and support organization made up of those individuals who have participated in a Three Day weekend.

The role of the National Council is to (1) develop, offer and support a model Cursillo-like weekend experience; (2) assist local groups in implementing their weekends and developing their communities; (3) assist new groups in starting communities as opportunities present themselves and as the Holy Spirit leads; (4) certify new member Fourth Day Movement communities and re-certify existing Fourth Day Movement member communities on a periodic basis, and (5) continually emphasize that the overriding purpose of Cursillo is the evangelization of our environments, to be realized as a result of the spiritual renewal of individual participants who are called the Fourth Day. The National Council supports a version of the Cursillo Movement which is consistent with Reformed theology and the Constitution of the PC(USA), and will make it available as desired throughout the denomination. This Movement is offered as one method of supporting the denominational emphasis on evangelization and spiritual formation, and to encourage growth in Christian faith and commitment within the local church. Presbyterian Fourth Day Communities are led by lay members of the PC(USA), in partnership with their clergy, for members of the PC(USA). The theological emphasis of Presbyterian Fourth Day Movements is on the infinite grace available to all who recognize and accept the love of Christ. The weekend experience proposes a method of living the Christian Life based on piety, study, and action. No doctrinal positions have been adopted or are supported, and no positions are taken on the volatile theological and polity issues facing the PC(USA) today.

The National organization is currently made up of thirteen Presbyterian Cursillo Communities and five Presbyterian Pilgrimage Communities. Each community elects two representatives to attend, at their own expense, semi-annual meetings of the National Council. All officers serve on a volunteer basis. There are no “staff” members associated with Presbyterian Fourth Day Movements, either at the local or national level. Each community is requested on a voluntary basis to contribute funds to the National Council based on a “per participant at Three Day Weekends” basis. Over the past several years this has produced total revenues of between $3,000 and $4,000 annually. The primary expenditure of the National organization over the past three years has been the expense associated with having a booth at General Assembly. There are no individual “donors” to the National Council of Presbyterian Fourth Day Movements.

The Network for Churchwide Transformation

The purpose of the Network for Churchwide Transformation is to provide an organic web of relationships, support and education for redevelopment/transformation churches, practitioners, governing body staff and committee persons.

VISION STATEMENT

Our present changing culture context has radical implications for many congregations. This dynamic change frightens many congregations into retrenchment and a survival lifestyle. For many others this cultural change is opening their eyes to exploring:

- How to become engaged in a continuous process of corporate and personal transformation and spiritual renewal.
- Challenges to reorient and redirect ministry to meet the needs of persons in their immediate community context.
- Engagement in ministry in a variety of settings among and with a variety of persons.
- Congregational life that is open to and inclusive of all persons.
- Pastoral and lay leadership committed to and trained in reshaping congregational life.
- New partnerships with the presbytery and sister congregations for cooperative ministry and sharing resources.
- Active participation in a Churchwide redevelopment system for education and support.

Activities and Events of the Network for Churchwide Transformation

- Supports, promotes and plans the Annual National Redevelopment/Transformation Conference, in partnership with Evangelism and Church Development.
- Supports and promotes Redevelopment/Transformation Training for Pastors and Congregational Ministry Teams and Presbytery Teams.
- Publishes quarterly electronic newsletter “Transforming Times.”
- Maintains a website—www.churchwidetransformation.org
- Maintains General Assembly Exhibit with Redevelopment/Transformation Information.
- Sponsors a General Assembly Luncheon.
- Supports and Sponsors regional Redevelopment/Transformation Training Events.

The Network for Churchwide Transformation’s Budget and Staff

- Annual budget is $9,000 for coordinator, supplies, website and General Assembly exhibit. Income comes from a grant from the Office of Congregational Transformation, Network sponsors and fundraisers.
- All Sponsors for 2003 and 2004 of the Network for Churchwide Transformation are listed at www.churchwidetransformation.org.

NPWL: The Network of Presbyterian Women in Leadership

A Christ-centered renewal network for women

OUR MOTIVATING BELIEFS

(The driving force behind why we do what we do.)

1. We believe God calls women to leadership in Christ’s church.
2. We believe women benefit from the strength and support found in community with other women.
3. We believe it is vital to build a network that recognizes, affirms, and raises up women for leadership at all levels within the PC(USA).
4. We believe the PC(USA) needs renewal in areas that women can uniquely effect.
5. We believe that every woman who works for renewal, whether from the pulpit, pew, or prayer closet, is a leader in the PC(USA).

OUR MISSION

(This statement declares why we exist and what we intend to do.)

Network of Presbyterian Women in Leadership: Renewing the PC(USA) by creating a Christ-centered community to encourage, resource, equip, and mobilize women to glorify God in the ministries to which Christ has called them in their local congregations, the denomination, and the world.

VISION STATEMENT

(This is how we will do it and what we believe success will look like.)

Our Vision is a community of women, Christ-centered and used by God to renew the PC(USA).

We will work toward this vision by developing networks in which women experience community, share resources, equip and nurture one another, and urge one another toward deeper commitment to Jesus Christ and the renewal of the church.

We work toward the day when women throughout our denomination are growing in faith, biblically literate, centered in Jesus Christ, and actively serving him in their homes, workplaces, congregations, communities, and the world.

NPWL seeks to accomplish its mission by calling women to pray; creating networks for women clergy, seminarians, and leaders in congregational women's ministry; providing Bible studies and other resources; and offering conferences, retreats, and training events.

NPWL is a vibrant, growing ministry under the leadership of Director Becce Bettridge. A growing network of volunteers has enabled NPWL to increase ministry opportunities on a budget of only $53,000. See the NPWL Web site: www.npwl.org.

New Wilmington Missionary Conference

Affinity Group Report

THE GOAL of the New Wilmington Missionary Conference is primarily the deepening of the missionary spirit with a view to the fulfillment of our Lord's Great Commission. To this end, a prominent place is given in the conference to Mission Interpretation and to the presentation of the duty and ideal of carrying the gospel to ALL the world. Because of the vital relations existing between the missionary spirit and a deep spiritual life, the conference aims at the cultivation of a life of fellowship with God by promoting service and witness for Jesus Christ.

THE THEOLOGICAL EMPHASIS of the New Wilmington Missionary Conference (from Constitution/Bylaws, revised March 27, 2004):

IV Doctrinal Standard

(1) The New Wilmington Missionary Conference is linked to the Presbyterian Church (USA) whose doctrines become the standards for emphases at the Conference.

How Can You Be Faithful in a Sexually Unfaithful Culture?

- Don't just say no. Respond pastorally to individuals struggling to live in chastity in singleness or fidelity in a covenant of marriage.
- Invite a OneByOne Speaker's Bureau representative to your church or presbytery in order to teach about pastoral care to individuals with sexual conflict.
- Consider starting a local support group.

Recommended Resources:

- OneByOne Pastoral Care Guide: a 190 page manual. Topics include: "Responding to Pro-Gay Theology; An Overview of Sexual Conflict; The Transformation Process; Becoming a Listening, Healing Community" and more! To order, send $16.50 to OneByOne.
- OneByOne Testimonial Booklet - 14 individuals who have experienced freedom from homosexuality. Can be ordered in bulk-$1each.
- Other articles and resources visit www.oneby1.org.

Our ministry activities involve the following:

- (1) Educational seminars in PCUSA congregations by members of the OneByOne Speaker’s Bureau.
- (2) Resource development - OneByOne has developed a series of educational booklets on the following topics: A Reformed Theology of Marriage and Sexuality; Understanding and Ministering to the Individual Struggling with Pornography; Personal Devotions for Individuals Seeking to Overcome Sexual Addiction; Ministry to the Sexual Abuse Victim; Is Sexual Reorientation Possible?
- (3) Youth and Sexuality Resources - OneByOne representatives will review curricula that address sexual brokenness among youth. We will promote this information to PCUSA youth pastors.
- (4) Website - OneByOne recognizes that the internet is the fastest growing medium for communication and education. Our site, www.oneby1.org includes articles, testimonies, and book reviews.
- (5) Support Group Curriculum Development - OneByOne is establishing a writing team that will develop a support group curriculum to be implemented in PCUSA congregations. The curriculum will serve individuals who struggle with various forms of sexual sin and temptation—both heterosexual and homosexual.

OneByOne Inc. has a staff of three (3) part-time employees and a dedicated, volunteer Board of Directors of ten (10).

The Reverend Kerry Clements
 Associate Stated Clerk
 Office of the General Assembly
 Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)
 100 Witherspoon Street, #4418
 Louisville, KY 40202

Dear Mr. Clements:

In response to the Office of the General Assembly's request for information about our work, The Outreach Foundation of the Presbyterian Church, Inc., is a Validated Mission Support Group that works in covenant relationship with the General Assembly Council of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to strengthen Presbyterian involvement in mission around the world. As we celebrate our 25th anniversary this year, The Outreach Foundation remains committed to helping our denomination, in an age of competing agendas, to stay focused on the first Great End of the church, the proclamation of the Gospel for the salvation of humankind.

The programmatic emphases of our work include supporting missionaries, planting and building churches, training leaders for the global Church, caring for vulnerable children, and serving as a catalyst for the renewal of PC(USA) congregations in their mission purpose. As we help congregations and individuals to find personal ways that they can participate in God's mission in the world, we seek to preserve a high level of trust with all who share in mission through The Outreach Foundation by strictly honoring donor intent, insuring strong financial accountability, and facilitating communication between mission supporters, projects and missionaries. In addition to providing mission partnership opportunities, we provide congregations with information about how to organize and take mission trips and how to hold mission conferences.

Each year, with input from PC(USA) staff, missionaries and global partners, the Board of Trustees of The Outreach Foundation identifies high-priority projects of holistic evangelism for which we then seek funding from individuals and congregations. We also identify PC(USA) missionaries who need salary support or ministry funds for their work. In 2003 our receipts for projects and missionaries increased over the prior year, and we disbursed more than $4.6 million for Presbyterian mission efforts, over $664,000 through the Worldwide Ministries Division. We also received a major gift of $10 million which is to be used for the purpose of developing, implementing, and multiplying programs of leadership development and training that will help churches in Africa to become more self-sustaining.

Our administrative budget enables us to develop new projects, facilitate partnerships, handle communications, and raise and disburse funds in ways that expand evangelistic mission. Our Board requests permission to apply 10% of each gift received by The Outreach Foundation to our administrative budget, but no amount is withheld from gifts that are given by donors who also make contributions that are designated for our administrative budget. The Board considers our donor list to be confidential and does not publish that information. While the 2004 budget figures below include funds to establish a Development Office, those staff members have not yet been hired.

2004 PROJECTED EXPENSES

Administrative costs	361,000
Personnel	566,000
Mission consultants	201,000

2004 PROJECTED MISSION DISBURSEMENTS: $5 million

The Board of Trustees, all of whom are ministers or officers in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), is being led in its work during 2004 by the following officers:

Chair – Rev. Dr. John W. Daniel, Richmond, VA
 Vice-Chair – Rev. Harry L. Slye, Houston, TX
 Secretary – Elder W. Powell Jones, Thomasville, GA
 Treasurer – Elder David C. Wood, Nashville, TN

The staff of The Outreach Foundation presently includes seven full-time persons in our office in Franklin, Tennessee, and a Missionary to the U.S., the Rev. Jose Carlos Pezini, who serves Portuguese-speaking immigrants in the United States. The Outreach Foundation has also contracted with mission consultants who help to facilitate our work in key parts of the world.

We share our hopes and prayers for the commissioners to the 216th General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). May their time together edify our church and strengthen us all for God's mission in the world.

Sincerely yours in Christ,

Robert J. Weingartner
 Executive Director

What Is Presbyterian Action for Faith and Freedom?

Presbyterian Action is a group of members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) who are concerned about their church's witness to society. It encourages a Presbyterian social witness that is more clearly centered around basic biblical teachings, more consistently derived from an open process by which church members discern how those teachings might apply, and more fully expressed in the lives of 2.5 million Presbyterians. Presbyterian Action sees itself as part of a larger movement of renewal. It aspires to be one instrument, among many, by which the Holy Spirit may convey afresh to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) its calling to "always being reformed according to the Word of God." Presbyterian Action is also affiliated with the Institute on Religion and Democracy, an ecumenical Christian group that seeks similar goals in various other denominations.

What Does Presbyterian Action for Faith and Freedom believe?

Presbyterian Action believes that the most powerful message the church can deliver to any society is simply the Gospel of Jesus Christ. In saying "yes" to the Gospel, the church must say "no" to any other ideology that would replace the Gospel or divert us from it. It believes that church pronouncements about partisan political issues should be made rarely, tentatively, and with full respect for others who reach different conclusions. The church must set an example of biblically-based democratic practice in its own life. Debates should be open and orderly, information should be freely available, and power should be widely distributed. Presbyterian Action believes that among the current issues on which the church should be able to speak most compellingly are the defense of fundamental human rights worldwide and strengthening the institution of marriage within U.S. society.

What Does Presbyterian Action for Faith and Freedom do?

Presbyterian Action challenges church social witness statements and programs that seem to represent only the partisan political views of a narrow segment of the church. It suggests ways in which those statements and programs might more closely reflect the teachings of Scripture, the input of church members, and the outcome of a fair democratic process. When a political debate appears to have become slanted in one direction, Presbyterian Action points out alternative facts and arguments that ought to be heard. It also supplies information and encouragement to Presbyterians seeking to advance religious freedom worldwide and strengthen marriage within U.S. society.

Who Is on the Presbyterian Action Steering Committee?

Michael W. Kruse (Kansas City, MO), President; John L. Boone (Nashville, TN), chairman; Robert P. Mills (Lenoir, NC), secretary; Will Adams (San Diego, CA); Gary Green (Chandler, AZ); Mary Elizabeth Lewis (Alexandria, VA); Rebecca McElroy (Monroe City, MO); Herbert Schlossberg (Burke, VA); Terry Schlossberg (Burke, VA); Roland H. Siebens (Glen Ellyn, IL). All of the above are members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

How Many Are on the Presbyterian Action staff?

One—Alan Wisdom, the director (parttime).

What Is the Annual Presbyterian Action Budget?

Expenses for 2003 (not yet audited) were $45,934.47.

The Presbyterian Association on Science, Technology, and the Christian Faith

May 2004

General: The Presbyterian Association on Science, Technology and the Christian Faith (PASTCF) is an independently incorporated non-profit membership organization recognized by the US Internal Revenue Service as a tax-exempt organization under Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code. Its affiliation with the Presbyterian Church (USA) is expressed through a formal covenant with the Office of Theology and Worship of the Congregational Ministries Division of the Presbyterian Church (USA).

Goals: The general purpose of the Association, as stated in the Bylaws, is "to challenge and assist the Presbyterian Church (USA), at all levels, to study, understand, discuss and act on the implications of science and technology as they affect the theology, worship, practice and moral actions of the church; and to challenge and assist Presbyterian scientists, engineers and other technical professionals to study, understand, discuss and act on the implications of the Reformed theological tradition for their scientific and technical vocations."

Methods of Operation: The Association seeks to fulfill this purpose through the following activities:

1. Publishing a quarterly newsletter (SciTech).
2. Maintaining a web page www.pastcf.org with information about the Association and links to other sites dealing with science and religion.
3. Providing an exhibit at the annual meeting of the Association of Presbyterian Church Educators.
4. Providing an exhibit at the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (USA).
5. Hosting a luncheon with speaker for commissioners and visitors at the General Assembly.
6. Recognizing Presbyterian scientists, engineers, science educators, and other science-related professionals, whose professional work is illumined by their faith and whose faith is enriched by their professional engagement.
7. Encouraging the formation of local Chapters to promote the goals of the Association at a local level (local chapters have been organized in the greater Denver, CO, area, in Gaithersburg, MD, and in Central Iowa), and supporting these by providing resources and advice.
8. Sponsoring educational programs for churches, presbyteries, synods, and Presbyterian conference centers and camps. On 2003, PASTCF sponsored a Ghost Ranch Seminar titled "Meeting the Creator Again for the First Time." A Seminar titled "God and Biology" is scheduled at Ghost ranch in July 2004.
9. Providing printed materials as resources for churches wishing to develop educational programs dealing with science and the Christian faith, and for individuals seeking such resources for personal growth.
10. Representing the Presbyterian Church (USA) in the Ecumenical Roundtable on Science, Technology and the Church.
11. Coordinating the Ecumenical Roundtable exhibit at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.
12. Providing consultative services to the Office of Theology and Worship, and to other Church bodies within the Presbyterian Church (USA), as requested.
13. Organizing mini-conferences on science and Christian faith in years when there is no General Assembly.

Theological Emphasis: There are no specific theological criteria for membership, but members are expected to be in sympathy with the goals of the Association. The Association respects the integrity of the scientific endeavor and of those who pursue it, regarding science as providing insights into the workings of God's creation. The Association also respects the integrity of the Reformed tradition and of those Christians who identify with it. The Association believes that there is no necessary conflict between these two principles, and encourages members to explore their implications for theology and worship.

Annual Budget: During the calendar year 2003, the Association received grants totaling $4,500 from the Office of Theology and Worship, membership dues totaling $10,265.00, gifts amounting to $ 8,331.58 and other miscellaneous income amounting to $ 246.57, for a total income of $23,343.15. The largest expense items were those associated with the General Assembly booth and luncheon, together with the Annual Meeting of the Association ($3,929.15), Board meetings and participation in the annual meeting of the Ecumenical Round Table ($4,666.14), publishing SciTech ($2,761.23), office expense ($1,916.41), the exhibit at APCE ($657.11), and the Association's share of the Ecumenical Round Table AAAS exhibit expenses ($845.63). Total expenses for the calendar year 2003 were $15,876.61. On December 31, 2003, the Association's bank balance was $13,834.23. Payments made in 2004 for expenses incurred in 2003 are not included in this summary.

The Association serves as "treasurer" for the contributions of ecumenical partners and science and religion organizations in support of the Ecumenical Roundtable exhibit at the annual AAAS meeting. In-and-out bookkeeping items for this event are omitted from the above budget summary.

Staff: The Association remains a fully voluntary organization with no paid staff. It is governed by an Executive Board comprised of three elected officers, four other elected Board members, and three non-voting ex officio members (SciTech editor and web master, development officer, and Theology and Worship representative).

Donors giving more than $1,000.00 to PASTCF during the calendar year 2003:

The Office of Theology and Worship of the Congregational Ministries Division of the PC(USA)
Derek and Barbara Pursey
Franklin D. Schowengerdt

Presbyterian Children's Homes and Related Ministries PC(USA) (PCHARM)

Presbyterian Children's Homes and Related Ministries (PCUSA) is a resource and an advocate in the Church on the issues of children and families. The established goals of the Association are:

- To provide a focus for children's issues within the PCUSA.
- To serve as a faith-based resource for churches, families and children.
- To provide opportunities for collaboration between Presbyterian child and family caring agencies.
- To serve as a national resource to the PCUSA on children's issues.

All members of the association shall be nonprofit child and family caring organizations that operate under a covenant agreement with a Synod or Presbytery of a Presbyterian or other Reformed ecclesiastical body. There shall be only one class of members.

The management and government of the affairs of the association shall be vested in the members. The members shall act only as a board, and an individual member shall have no power as such. All powers of the association shall be exercised by the members or under their authority, and the members shall control the business and affairs of the association. The members may give general, limited, or special power and authority to the committees, officers, and employees of the association to transact the general business, or any special business, of the association and may give powers of attorney to agents of the association to transact any special business requiring such authorization.

The association shall have the power to own, accept, acquire, mortgage, and dispose of real and personal property, and to obtain, invest, and retain funds, in advancing the purposes of the association. The association shall have the power to do any lawful acts or things reasonable necessary or desirable for carrying out the association's purposes and for protecting the lawful rights and interest of its members.

There is no staff; members of the association on a strictly volunteer basis share work.

The Presbyterian Coalition

Kerry Clements
Associate Stated Clerk
Office of the General Assembly
Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)
100 Witherspoon Street, #4418
Louisville, Kentucky 40202

Dear Kerry,

In response to your request for affinity groups who use the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in their names to supply information for use in educating General Assembly commissioners, we have attached the requested information in a way that does not compromise the covenant we have with our donors to not publish their names nor the amounts of their contributions. The Coalition received 27 contributions of $1000 or more in 2003. Four were from individuals, one from a charitable organization, and the remaining 22 from PC(USA) congregations. The Presbyterian Coalition is a 501c(3) not-for-profit organization founded in 1996. The Coalition offices are located in Orlando, Florida. It has no paid staff and is not a membership organization. The Coalition does not publish regular periodicals, only an occasional newsletter which is mailed to its supporters.

Mission statement:

“The Presbyterian Coalition is a movement of Christ’s people committed to the life and transformation of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) by exalting Jesus Christ, energizing congregations, and upholding historic biblical leadership standards.”

Theological statement: (See below – Union in Christ: A Declaration for the Church)

Budget:

The 2003 budget of the Coalition was $124,260 and employs two part time staff people (an Executive Director and an administrative assistant). We have a covenant with our donors which does not permit us to publish their names nor the amounts of their contributions. The Board of Directors has however, authorized me to inform you that in the year 2003 we had a total of 272 donors (churches and individuals) whose average gift was $457.

We trust that this information will be helpful as you seek to educate commissioners to the 216th General Assembly.

Blessings,

Union in Christ: A Declaration for the Church
“He is before all things and in him all things hold together (Col. 1:17).

With the witness of Scripture and the Church through the ages we declare:

I. Jesus Christ is the gracious mission of God to the world and for the world. He is Emmanuel and Savior,

One with the Father,
God incarnate as Mary’s son,
Lord of all, The truly human one.
His coming transforms everything.
His Lordship casts down every idolatrous claim to authority.
His incarnation discloses the only path to God.
His life shows what it means to be human.
His atoning death reveals the depth of God’s love for sinners.
His bodily resurrection shatters the powers of sin and death.

II. The Holy Spirit joins us to Jesus Christ by grace alone, uniting our life with his through the ministry of the Church.

In the proclamation of the Word, the Spirit calls us to repentance, builds up and renews our life in Christ, strengthens our faith, empowers our service, gladdens our hearts, and transforms our lives more fully into the image of Christ.

We turn away from forms of Church life that ignore the need for repentance, that discount the transforming power of the Gospel, or that fail to pray, hope and strive for a life that is pleasing to God.

In Baptism and conversion the Spirit engrafts us into Christ, establishing the Church's unity and binding us to one another in him.

We turn away from forms of Church life that seek unity in theological pluralism, relativism or syncretism.

In the Lord's Supper the Spirit nurtures and nourishes our participation in Christ and our communion with one another in him.

We turn away from forms of Church life that allow human divisions of race, gender, nationality, or economic class to mar the Eucharistic fellowship, as though in Christ there were still walls of separation dividing the human family.

III. Engrafted into Jesus Christ we participate through faith in his relationship with the Father.

By our union with Christ we participate in his righteousness before God, even as he becomes the bearer of our sin.

We turn away from any claim to stand before God apart from Christ's own righteous obedience, manifest in his life and sacrifice for our sake on the cross.

By our union with Christ we participate in his knowledge of the Father, given to us as the gift of faith through the unique and authoritative witness of the Old and New Testaments.

We turn away from forms of church life that discount the authority of Scripture or claim knowledge of God that is contrary to the full testimony of Scripture as interpreted by the Holy Spirit working in and through the community of faith across time.

By our union with Christ we participate in his love of the Father, manifest in his obedience "even unto death on the cross."

We turn away from any supposed love of God that is manifest apart from a continual longing for and striving after that loving obedience which Christ offers to God on our behalf.

IV. Though obscured by our sin, our union with Christ causes his life to shine forth in our lives.

This transformation of our lives into the image of Christ is a work of the Holy Spirit begun in this life as a sign and promise of its completion in the life to come.

By our union with Christ our lives participate in the holiness of the One who fulfilled the Law of God on our behalf.

We turn away from forms of Church life that ignore Christ's call to a life of holiness, or that seek to pit Law and Gospel against one another as if both were not expressions of the one Word of God.

By our union with Christ we participate in his obedience. In these times of moral and sexual confusion we affirm the consistent teaching of Scripture that calls us to chastity outside of marriage and faithfulness within the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman.

We turn away from forms of Church life that fail to pray for and strive after a rightly ordered sexuality as the gracious gift of a loving God, offered to us in Christ by the power of the Holy Spirit. We also turn away from forms of Church life that fail to forgive and restore those who repent of sexual and other sins.

V. As the body of Christ the Church has her life in Christ.

By our union with Christ the Church binds together believers in every time and place.

We turn away from forms of Church life that identify the true Church only with particular styles of worship, polity, or institutional structure. We also turn away from forms of Church life that ignore the witness of those who have gone before us.

By our union with Christ the Church is called out into particular communities of worship and mission.

We turn away from forms of Church life that see the work of the local congregation as sufficient unto itself, as if it were not a local representation of the one, holy, catholic and apostolic Church called together by the power of the Spirit in every age and time until our Lord returns.

By our union with Christ our lives participate in God's mission to the world: to uphold the value of every human life, to make disciples of all peoples, to establish Christ's justice and peace in all creation, and to secure that visible oneness in Christ that is the promised inheritance of every believer.

We turn away from forms of Church life that fail to bear witness in word and deed to Christ's compassion and peace, and the Gospel of salvation.

By our union with Christ the Church participates in Christ's resurrected life and awaits in hope the future that God has prepared for her. Even so come quickly, Lord Jesus!

IN THE NAME OF THE FATHER, AND OF THE SON, AND OF THE HOLY SPIRIT.

Presbynet: DEAN LEWIS e-mail: deanlewis@cybermesa.com

Report of the Presbyterian Cuba Connection—Year 2003
To the 216th General Assembly (2004) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)

Purpose: The Presbyterian Cuba Connection is an unofficial not-for-profit network of Presbyterians for support, interpretation and advocacy of the life and witness of the Presbyterian Reformed Church in Cuba.

Activities: The Presbyterian Cuba Connection publishes an occasional newsletter with news of developments in the life of the Cuban church and information about partnership activities within the PC(U.S.A.). The contributions of individual and congregational members are transmitted to the Presbyterian Reformed Church in Cuba for the support of programs and projects of the PRCC through the Treasury Department license held by the PC(U.S.A.).

Theological Emphases: The Presbyterian Cuba Connection does not promote or advocate theological positions. We affirm and seek to support the policies of the General Assembly regarding Cuba and work cooperatively with the Worldwide Ministries Division to support the mission policies and priorities of the General Assembly in relation to the Presbyterian Reformed Church in Cuba.

Staff: The Presbyterian Cuba Connection has a board of 9 persons, one of whom serves as the Executive Secretary. All serve as volunteers.

Budget: The Presbyterian Cuba Connection does not adopt a budget since the income is unpredictable and the only program expenditure is for grants to support the life and mission of the Presbyterian Reformed Church in Cuba. Income for the year 2003 was $27,807 for mission projects, and $1,175 for the newsletter and other administrative costs. Expenses for the year were $37,167 for mission projects and $2,912 for newsletter and other administrative costs.

Donors: There are approximately 400 members of the Presbyterian Cuba Connection in all of the 15 synods of the PC (USA).

Contributors of $1000 or more in 2003 were: United Church, Los Alamos NM; Westminster Church, Minneapolis MN; Fourth Church, Chicago IL; First Church, Farmington MI; First Church, Santa Fe NM; Trinity Church, Atlanta GA; and Second Church, Indianapolis, IN.

Respectfully submitted,
Dean H. Lewis, Executive Secretary

Presbyterian Elders in Prayer Theology Emphases and Vision

We believe that prayer is powerful, but often we do not experience its power. How can we experience it unless we utilize this God-given ability?

We know that fishhooks are capable of catching fish. But, we will not catch any fish unless we are willing to spend the time, energy, and resources to use it.

Scripture instructs the people to call upon the elders to pray and anoint them when they are sick (James 5:14). But, how can they do it unless they experience the prayer of their elders. The Book of Order of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), W-2.1001, instructs that prayer is at the heart of worship.

Our vision is to enable the elders to experience the power of praying, encouraging them to pray, individually and collectively. We do this by providing information, workshops, General Assembly Prayer Suites, and general assistance on how to pray.

Special emphasis is placed on daily prayer for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). We encourage Presbyterian church members, leaders, deacons, and elders to pray that God may pour forth the spirit of prayer upon their church elders.

Some special notes on our ministry:

1. We emphasize that Scriptures are a resource for prayer.
2. We emphasize that individuals pray for their churches, the presbytery of which their church is a member, their synod, and the General Assembly.
3. We emphasize that individuals pray for one another, especially elders to elders.

One of our symbols used on our current letterhead shows one person on each side of a cross with the statement in the banner above them, "Praying in One Accord." Our goal, which is really unmeasurable, is to unite more than 100,000 elders around the nation to pray daily for the church with one accord of mind and heart.

Circulation: unknown because published electronically

Budget

For the total annual budget with all donors or organizations giving aggregate amounts of over $1,000 to be listed by amount (as in public campaign finance), with the donor data to be kept on file with a copy of each organization's bylaws and/or charter at the Office of the General Assembly see our Form 990, on file with the Office of the General Assembly.

Goals and Methods

The Presbyterian Forum is the “certain trumpet” for denominational reform. We are committed to our confessional theology and are committed to actually change the structure of our denomination.

Throughout the last eight years, the Forum has developed a reputation for strong, accurate, and insightful analysis of the condition of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). We have become the first place where questions about legal cases are referred, we are constantly asked for training materials and information, and we have are known as “the people who get things done.”

The purpose of the Presbyterian Forum is to bring about the spiritual and theological reformation of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), beginning at the local presbytery level. This can be accomplished only by equipping pastors and elders to be able to use our connectional and representational system in order to foster confessional integrity and discipline throughout the whole General Assembly. We do the following:

1. Local Presbytery work: developing local networks, equipping pastors and elders to effect change in their presbytery's representational system by doing the work of connectionism.
2. Develop and distribute training materials: CDs and manuals for presbytery, for GA commissioners, etc.
3. Provide analysis and information: e-mails, website.
4. Legal work. Helping out with specific pleadings, polity issues, etc.

Many around the denomination lament that we should be getting back to the real work of the church. Empowering the clergy and equipping the laity is the real work of the church. That's discipleship. Strong mission grows out of strong discipleship.

More than ever, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) needs to be led by people issuing a clarion call via a certain trumpet; building up and training those who can be servant leaders down the line.

Theological Emphases and Vision of the Church of Jesus Christ.

Equipping the people of the church to do the work of the church is a joyful task. Think of the anecdotes: how people are on fire for Jesus when they return from their first mission trip, how people begin to have a new vocabulary (praising God) as they dig into Scripture to discover the sovereign gracious God—with who they have been acquainted but now know!

Presbyterians value “connection.” It reflects a biblical understanding of accountability to each other. Our shared confession that forms our connection -- not property, institutions, or anything but our shared and active call to pursue the Great Ends of the Church.

Edifying connection takes place in a simple way: how can you and I join together to “present the claims of Jesus Christ, lead persons to repentance, acceptance of him as Savior and Lord, and new life as his disciples.” Destructive connection takes place when we passively rely on someone else, somewhere else, to do something to be the church for us.

If it is not apparent yet, it will be soon: we are living in the midst of a huge opportunity for reform. Conditions are similar to the conditions leading to the Reformation. How are you preparing yourself, your brothers and sisters in Christ, your congregation, and your community for this transforming movement of God?

Though it will have a major impact on denominations and institutions, that's not why it's important to prepare. The primary goal is active faithfulness to the call of Jesus Christ on your life and on mine.

The structures that support active congregations are beginning to form. Networks are emerging. A shared vision, a corporate confession, and a sense of urgency are generating the energy to follow the new thing that God is doing in our midst.

Presbyterian Frontier Fellowship

Rev. David R. Hackett
Associate Director for Denominational Relations
574 Prairie Center Drive #135-313
Eden Prairie, MN 55344
www.pff.net Hackett@pff.net

Greetings in our Lord Jesus Christ. This report is in response to your request for an annual report from “PC(USA) Affinity Groups.” Presbyterian Frontier Fellowship does not include “Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)” in its legal/official name and so does not meet the criteria presented. However, in a spirit of openness and recognition of—in truth, appreciation for—our relationship to the PC(USA), we offer the following information.

Presbyterian Frontier Fellowship (PFF) is an expression within the PC(USA) of the worldwide frontier mission movement. As Presbyterians we join Christians of many cultures and communions in seeking to establish viable, indigenous Christian movements among the remaining unreached people groups on earth by calling and mobilizing the PC(USA) to fulfill the biblical mandate to declare Jesus Christ among all the “ethne” (people groups) of the earth.

PFF is a Validated Mission Support Group related by covenant agreement to the General Assembly Council. Our board-approved mission statement says: “We challenge, mobilize and empower Presbyterian congregations into global partnerships that establish indigenous churches among unreached people groups.” We work closely with WMD and NMD and existing/newly emerging international partners to support, fund and advance mission among unreached peoples. Our direct link to the PCUSA is through the PC(USA) Office of International Evangelism (OIE).

The PFF board and OIE jointly and initially determine our projects, which are subsequently ratified by the GAC. Our geographically dispersed team of 7 program-level, 13 adjunct (volunteer)-level, and four office-support-level members speak and preach continually in local churches and at presbytery, synod, and GA gatherings and at other conferences. We share our vision of deep engagement in Presbyterian frontier mission through frontier mission networks and partnerships at local, regional, national, and international mission gatherings. We invite generous donations to PC(USA) Frontier Mission projects through Extra Commitment Opportunity #863001 and related accounts. Our staff members raise personal support separately so that 100% of donations are delivered to the projects.

Our board-approved “Core Values” detail our theological emphases:

PFF is a missional servant community committed to the Lordship of Jesus Christ, seeking the empowerment of the Holy Spirit, rooted in Scripture and prayer, devoted to faithful stewardship of life and possessions, boldly proclaiming the gospel to every people, serving the Presbyterian Church (USA), uplifting the congregation’s faithfulness to God’s mission calling, focusing on the congregation as a wellspring for mission initiative, calling forth people movements to Jesus among unreached people groups, advocating the indigenous expressions of the body of Christ in all people groups, supporting the planting of indigenous churches committed to God’s mission, advocating a partnership approach to mission, [and] committed to the unity of the global church in mission.

Through our mission interpretation, we mobilize people and funds for PC(USA) frontier mission and also more generally promote all aspects of PC(USA) mission and provide resources to congregations. Interestingly, we urge donors to send funds for mission projects directly to the PC(USA) Frontier Mission Program, not to us. We take no percentage, overhead or administrative fee. In this sense we operate to raise funds for the PC(USA).

PFF’s budget (for FY 07/01/03–06/30/04) is $991,787.00. We remain grateful to God for our contributors and hold deeply the trust they place in our organization and the mission we advance in partnership with them. Some 1,100 congregations (10% of all PCUSA churches) and 1,300 individuals/families contribute financially to PFF. We decline to list donors to PFF to protect our organization’s viability and our donors’ privacy.

Sincerely partnering with you in Christ’s ministry,
David R. Hackett

Presbyterian Lay Committee on Ministry

Raising the Standard Since 1965

Board of Directors: John L. Boone, Stephen G. Brown, Constance K. Elliott, Sylvia Y. Fields, Robert B. Fish, John W. Forsberg, Kerry A. Fraas, Peggy M. Hedden, Robert L. Howard, John H. Jenks, Raymond A.M. Jones, John Kaddis, James H. Logan, Sr., Peggy J. Maier, Rebecca F. McElroy, Pamela Metherell, Wayne E. Naro, Richard E. Paul, Warren S. Reding, John H. Sanden, W. Robert Stover.

To work within the church for the following objectives:

1. To put greater emphasis on the teaching of the Bible as the authoritative Word of God in our seminaries and churches.

2. To emphasize the need for presenting Jesus Christ as the Lord and Savior through preaching, teaching and witnessing, with evangelical zeal, as the primary mission of the Church, and to stress the need for regular Bible study and prayer.

3. To encourage individual Presbyterians to take their place in society and, as led by the Holy Spirit, become involved in social, economic and political affairs as Christian citizens.

4. To encourage official church bodies to seek and express the mind of God as revealed in Scripture on individual and corporate moral and spiritual matters. We urge that official church bodies refrain from issuing pronouncements or taking actions unless the authority to speak and act is Biblical, the competence of the church body has been established and all viewpoints have been considered.

5. To provide an adequate and reliable source of information on significant issues confronting the church, including those being proposed for consideration at General Assembly or other governing bodies, in order to enable Presbyterians and others in the Reformed family of faith to express informed positions.

Mission Statement:

The mission of the Presbyterian Lay Committee is to inform and equip God's people by proclaiming Jesus Christ alone as:

- The Way of Salvation
- The Truth of God's Word
- The Life of Discipleship

Presbyterian Lay Committee: Raising the Standard Since 1965

There are presently ten members on the staff of the Presbyterian Lay Committee.

2003 budget: $2,021,789

The Presbyterian Lay Committee does not reveal the names of its donors.

Presbyterian Parents of Gays and Lesbians (PPGL)

Presbyterian Parents of Gays and Lesbians (PPGL) offers parent-to-parent support to people at a time when they may feel there is no one else who will understand. PPGL is made up of support groups of parents who share a common bond of love, respect and affirmation for their sons or daughters and a common belief that all are created and loved by God. PPGL assists parents who want to form a group by providing grants for initial start-up costs.

PPGL is not involved in political or social activism; professional guidance, counseling or therapy services; HIV/AIDS caregiving ministries; efforts of ministries to elicit changes in sexual orientation; or endorsement of products or programs.

PPGL operates with a voluntary board and has no employees.

There are no donations of $1,000 or more for this year.

Lander Bethel, President of the Board
Presbyterian Parents of Gays and Lesbians

Presbyterian Peace Fellowship

2003 Report of the Presbyterian Peace Fellowship to the General Assembly

The Mission Statement of the Presbyterian Peace Fellowship:

“The PPF is a national community of Presbyterians who trust in the nonviolent Jesus Christ. We call forth and celebrate prophetic action by individuals and by our denomination in the search for alternatives to violence, exploitation, militarism and war. Through the decades, across generations and in the changing circumstances of history, this is our trust and our task. Come and join us!”

We were founded in 1944 by conscientious objectors and their supporters to maintain a peace witness in the Presbyterian Church. In addition to influencing the church’s corporate witness on issues of peace and justice, we support those Presbyterians who take nonviolent risks of conscience. Since 2004 marks 60 years of this witness, we are rededicating our commitment to both the Church and to society to develop the practice of nonviolence for a world that better reflects God’s purpose of peace among all people.

Our strength is in the fellowship of committed Presbyterians who work through local churches and Presbyteries to bring our church to a more faithful response to the nonviolence of Jesus. Our members attend General Assembly at their own expense to staff our booth, where we provide information that helps people become more engaged in a witness for peace. Our major public event is our General Assembly Peace Breakfast, in which we present our Peaceseeker Award to a Presbyterian who has been engaged in a particularly meaningful peacemaking endeavor, and our keynote speaker encourages our church to faithful response.

We testify on peacemaking matters before GA committees, and throughout the church we advocate vociferously for peace-related issues. We are supportive to the leadership of our church, while offering our own perspective in peaceable dialogue. Our members participate fully in the life of the PCUSA, and some are elected as commissioners, or members of boards and agencies, or are on staffs of colleges, seminaries, or governing bodies.

We organize an annual Presbyterian delegation to Fort Benning, GA, to implement GA policy calling for the closing of the Western Hemisphere Institute for Security Cooperation, because of its continuing abysmal human rights record.

In the last 3 years we have sponsored seminars at Ghost Ranch, along with the Witherspoon Society and Presbyterians for Restoring Creation, dealing with globalization and militarism, alternatives to international violence, and the militarization of space. In July, 2004, the seminar will be ““There’s a Crack in the Liberty Bell,” focusing on threats to civil rights.

In cooperation with the Christian Peacemaker Teams we have conducted two trips to Israel/Palestine. With Witness for Peace 3 delegations have traveled to Colombia, the most recent in May of this year.

In the past year we have worked especially to reduce the disastrous effects of the occupation of Iraq, to support those who take conscientious-objector status against the war, to increase awareness of what amounts to a war in Colombia, and to be in solidarity with Presbyterians and others there. Our solidarity was also expressed by support for four Presbyterians who went to prison as part of nonviolent opposition to US terrorism in Latin America. We have emphasized the continuing threat of nuclear weapons, with a special concern for the development of new nuclear weapons. Violence in the nation related to guns continues to claim attention, as in the May Million Mom March.

We have two part-time paid staff persons and a current budget of $34,900. We have a quarterly publication called “Briefly,” which goes to over 2000 people. We are affiliated with the Fellowship of Reconciliation, an interfaith, international, pacifist organization (Box 271, Nyack, NY 10960); being part of the FOR keeps us in touch with 15 other religious peace fellowships. Our website is <www.presbypeacefellowship.faiithweb.com>.

Our basic theological position, within our affirmation of Jesus Christ as Lord and Savior, lies in our agreement with the universal testimony of the early church for active nonviolence and a rejection of the idolatry of the powers that be. We build upon the foundation of the prophets and apostles who sought justice and peace through sacrificial love. Scripture gives us our understanding of Jesus, who is our peace. We seek to be faithful to the blessing in the Sermon on the Mount in Matthew, where peacemakers are called the children of God. We recognize that this word from Jesus has within it a very sobering challenge, since Jesus the peacemaker, like the prophets, was put to death; we are called upon to embrace even this possibility, knowing that we too shall be raised to dwell in the peaceable reign of our Lord.

Donors who gave more $1000 in 2003: Lois & John Baker, 10723 Inwood Dr., Houston TX 77042

Presbyterian Writers Guild

Information requested by the 216th General Assembly

The Organization's Goals, Methods of Operation and Theological Emphasis

The Presbyterian Writers Guild is a voluntary, non-profit organization of writers who are affiliated with the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). The Guild operates through a Board which is elected at the annual meeting held at the General Assembly, for terms that run for three consecutive years. The Board "meets" during the year through telephone conference calls held on the second Saturday of the month in September, December, February, and April, and in person, when possible, at the annual luncheon held during General Assembly.

Dues per member per year are $25.00, with all dues expiring at the end of each calendar year.

The Guild provides support and encouragement to its members through two annual awards: The David Steele Distinguished Writer Award, given to a Presbyterian writer whose works have made an impact on the church at large; and the Jim Angell Award given to a writer for a first published book. The David Steele Distinguished Writer Award offers a prize of $1,000 and the Jim Angell Award offers a prize of $500, funded through an account given by Virginia Angell, widow of Jim Angell, for whom the award is named.

An annual luncheon and an information booth provided in conjunction with the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation offers members of the Guild a chance to work together, and introduces non-members to the work of the Guild.

A newsletter is published four times a year, providing information about the Guild, updates on publications of members, articles of help and interest to writers, and occasional examples of writing by members (for instance, hymns written by participants from the Hymn Writers Workshop have been published in the newsletter for the benefit of the readers).

Writing Workshops are held both regionally and nationally but not on a regularly scheduled basis. The intent of the workshops is to encourage new writers and provide helpful information, and to assist seasoned writers with programs to increase their writing opportunities.

Professional assistance through members who are educational consultants are provided for a small fee.

The Guild operates a web site, for which it receives annual funding through the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation. The web site can be found at www.presbywriters.org. The Guild has a ListServ through Yahoo: www.groups.yahoo.com/group/presbyterianwritersguild.

The Guild welcomes all theological viewpoints expressed by Presbyterians throughout the denomination, and encourages open dialogue among its members. The Guild's theological emphasis is that found in the Book of Order and The Book of Confessions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

The Organization's Annual Budget

In 2002–2003, the annual budget was set at $7,410.00

The majority of the income is raised through membership dues (currently set at $25.00), and through gifts made to the Guild, none of which have exceeded $1,000 in the past year.

The Number of Staff in Your Organization

The Board consists of President, Vice-President, Immediate Past-President, Treasurer, Recording Secretary, Membership Secretary, Corresponding Secretary, Corporate Agent, Editor, and at least two Members at Large.

A listing of current officers of the Board is attached.

Respectfully submitted,
Kathleen Long Bostrom, President, Presbyterian Writers Guild

Presbyterians for Renewal

Our Mission:

As followers of Jesus Christ, seeking to conform our lives and beliefs to the Word of God, our mission is to participate in God's renewing, transforming work in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

Our Values:

Obedience: Submitted to the Lordship of Jesus Christ.

Faithfulness: Anchored in God's Word and the historic Reformed faith.

Conviction: Passionate about shaping the church's life and theology.

Engagement: Involved positively in the structure and politics of the PCUSA.

Collaboration: Working with others who share our mission and vision.

Servanthood: Committed to ministry that reflects the graciousness of Christ

Prayer: Depending upon God's direction and power.

Our Vision:

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) will be a church that boldly proclaims Jesus Christ the incarnate Son of God and the only Savior and Lord of the world; confidently relies upon Scripture as the authority for our faith and life; effectively equips disciples to live abundantly in Christ; intentionally develops godly leaders for future generations; consistently supports congregations as the primary agents of God's mission to the world; willingly relies upon healthy governing bodies for accountability, mutual encouragement, and shared witness; courageously embraces action for social justice and evangelism as essential dimensions of our primary task, to proclaim the Good News; and faithfully lives with holy abandon in the power of the Holy Spirit, willing to risk all and serve all in order to show the love of Christ to all.

PFR seeks to accomplish its mission by calling the church to prayer, by networking congregations and individuals with the same values and vision, and by providing resources such as printed materials, conferences, and training events. In addition, PFR provides a team of informed persons during the Assembly for spiritual, theological and polity support. Contact can be made through the PFR Booth in the Exhibit Hall, or by email to Jim Berkley, PFR Issues Ministry Director, jim@pfrenewal.org.

The 2004 PFR Budget is $1,600,000. PFR currently employs five full-time and three part-time staff persons, and gratefully acknowledges the volunteer support of hundreds of persons.

Presbyterians for Restoring Creation

Organizational Information 2004

Presbyterians for Restoring Creation's goals and theological emphases:

In 1990, the 202nd General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church USA, adopted (by a resounding 97% majority) the policy report, Restoring Creation for Ecology and Justice. This report calls Presbyterians to focus on caring for creation as a central concern to be incorporated into the life and mission of the church at every level. In 1995, Presbyterians for Restoring Creation (PRC) was founded as a grassroots organization to help the church to educate and energize its members about the environmental crisis. In 2001, the Presbyterian General Assembly approved by 85% an overture on Preserving Bio-Diversity and Halting Mass Extinction. This overture was actively support by PRC. In 2002, PRC supported overtures on clarifying the PCUSA stance on "takings," cleaning up old coal-fired power plants, and others. PRC continues to help the church to fulfill its current environmental policies and to create new policies. We help the members of the church to address environmental concerns from a faith perspective.

PRC invites and encourages others to join us in:

- Reclaiming awareness of our spiritual connections with the whole of God's Creation, empowered by our rich biblical and theological heritage,
- Understanding our role in causing the suffering of Creation and repenting of that role,
- Trusting that Christ – whose incarnation reveals God's love and compassion, who suffered death that we might have life – has shown us how to challenge injustice with love and to transform brokenness into wholeness,
- Engaging in study, reflection, and dialogue to deepen our understanding of the issues,
- Working with agencies of ministry within the church to include environmental issues,
- Consciously resisting the values and norms of consumer-based economic systems, which emphasize growth at all costs;
- Cooperating with others actively involved in promoting values based on compassion, frugality, accountability, participation and sufficiency for all, and
- Celebrating the power of community, and utilizing the gifts, skills, and experience of all people to preserve and restore God's creation for future generations.

PRC's methods of operation:

PRC's volunteer leadership is composed of a ten person Steering Committee (Moderator, Vice Moderator, Treasurer, Publications Manager, and six regional representatives). Leadership is elected in staggered terms each year by the membership through newsletter ballots. Positions are elected for two-year terms (with no person serving more than six consecutive years.)

PRC 2004 operational budget

The 2004 operational budget is $46,010. Income is mainly from membership dues and donations. Additional funds come from grants and investments. Major expenses include newsletter printing, postage, presence at General Assembly and other meetings, office supplies and consultant.

PRC employs a consultant who helps coordinate the activities, membership, publications, web site, special projects, semi-annual national conferences and general promotion of the organization.

All donors who gave more than $1,000 to Presbyterians for Restoring Creation in the calendar year 2003: Environmental Justice Office (PCUSA) – support grant; Mary Louise Fisher – Next Step Campaign; Lowe-Marshall Trust – Next Step Campaign; First Presbyterian Church – New York City; Elva Selig Jackson Memorial Trust – Next Step Campaign; Presbytery of Chicago.

Presbyterians Pro-Life

Research, Education, and Care, Inc.
2004 Report to General Assembly

Presbyterians Pro-Life (PPL) works for the reformation of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and calls Presbyterians to our biblical and confessional standards, especially regarding the family and the nurture, care and protection of every innocent human life. Our mission emphasizes the family and the nurture, care, and protection of every innocent human life from fertilization to natural death.

Our goal is to influence the culture of the PC(USA) to the end that:

- I. The policies and positions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) on abortion, infanticide, euthanasia, sexuality and the family are consistent with Scripture and the Confessions.
- II. The culture of the Church is changed by the movement of its members to faithful discipleship and a biblical world-view regarding the family and the nurture, care and protection of every innocent human life.
- III. Broad-based reform is accomplished in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

IV. There is an effective and well-supported witness and ministry denomination-wide for the protection and nurture of all innocent human life

Methods for achieving our objectives:

In the areas of abortion, infanticide, assisted suicide and euthanasia, we provide resources that inform and motivate Presbyterians to seek a changes in policy so that the denomination recognizes the beginning of life at fertilization; so that it regards the deliberate taking of innocent human life as immoral; and so that it ceases financial and other support for ending innocent human lives, whether at the beginning or the end of life. We call the church to support adoption as an alternative to abortion.

In the area of sexuality, we work for ending any official denominational teaching or material on sexual behavior that is not consistent with Scripture and the Confessions. We work to ensure that biblical and confessional standards related to sexuality are upheld by church leaders in church law and practice. We emphasize the teaching of biblical morality to our children and youth.

In the area of family, we provide resources and work for the preservation of the biblical definition of family in PC(USA) policy.

In the area of broad-based reform efforts, PPL works with other renewal groups toward establishing proper accountability in practice in the PC(USA) structures and governing bodies. We work toward the development of policy-making as bottom-up rather than top-down process. We work for the elimination of entities and offices that do not contribute to the health, well being, and faithful Christian witness in our denomination.

We work toward witness and ministry aimed at protecting and caring for the innocent and vulnerable that is integrated into every aspect of the life of our denomination.

Resources:

PPL's resource development efforts currently emphasize teaching for children and youth and the general preaching, teaching, and pastoral care ministries of congregations in our denomination. A listing of our resources can be found on the web at www.ppl.org

We also develop materials intended to influence the policy-making decisions of General Assembly.

We recognize the developing area of bioethical issues and intend to stay abreast of those issues and bring a voice to the discussion that is rooted in Scripture and the confessions, and that applies Christian faith to the emerging issues.

PPL accountability:

PPL is governed by a Board of Directors made up of pastors and lay persons who are members of the Presbyterian Church (USA). The organization currently employs one fulltime program staff person. The PPL office is located in Burke, Virginia. PPL is a 501©3 tax-exempt organization, supported entirely by contributions from churches and individuals. A financial statement is available upon written request from the Division of Consumer Affairs, Richmond, VA 23209, or from PPL.

Voluntary Annual Information for 2003 as Requested by 212th and 213th General Assemblies

"We aim to chronicle the life and mission of the Church of Jesus Christ everywhere."

Goals, Methods of Operation and Theological Emphases

Presbyweb, "The Daily News for Presbyterians," is an independent news organization for members of the PC(USA). We post 6 daily issues on the web every week, at <http://www.presbyweb.com>. During GA we update throughout the day as needed.

We provide several categories of information:

- All the National Presbyterian News, "from left to right," official and unofficial, that can be found on the worldwide web.

- News about the church in the U.S. and worldwide in the broadest sense of the word, and the interaction with the cultures, as far as we believe it to be of interest to our readers.
- Opinion pieces, theological essays, book reviews etc.
- Links, directly or indirectly, to all Presbyterian web sites.
- We also offer a platform for our readers in our popular Letters section, and we highlight some unsolicited letters and op-ed pieces by posting them as Viewpoint articles. You find “voices from the entire spectrum” on Presbyweb.

As much as is humanly possible, we keep our own theological convictions from interfering with our purpose of providing the news. We do not try to create balance. Over time proponents of one side of a certain issue might generate more news than their opponents. So be it. We don't try to control the process. We try not to stand between the news and the readers.

We give summaries of the news, and always provide links to the “horse’s mouth.” Coming to Presbyweb first is the smart and easy way to miss nothing.

Our Finances

For almost 5 years we offered Presbyweb for free. Since early 2003 we require our readers to buy a subscription, if they want to continue to have access to Presbyweb after a free trial subscription of a month. The amount our subscribers pay, is determined by themselves, with a minimum of $15.

Presbyweb is owned by CHURCHandWORLD.com Inc, a privately held corporation.

The Shower of Stoles Project

57 Upton Ave. So.
Minneapolis, MN 55405
stoleproj@aol.com

Affinity Group 2003 Report

The Shower of Stoles Project is dedicated to sharing the stories of gifted people who have been barred from serving their faith communities because of their sexual orientation. The Project uses a collection of about 1000 liturgical stoles to provide a striking, powerful witness to the results of ecclesiastical discrimination. The stoles—symbols of leadership in service to a faith community—have been donated by gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender people of faith from twenty three denominations. In 2003, the project offered programming and displays at 150 sites across the United States and Canada.

The Shower of Stoles Project has captured the imaginations of people, offering a creative form of expression to illustrate the enormity of the denial of the calls of gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgender people for leadership in their faith communities. It gives a voice to faithful people, many of whom have been forced to choose between serving in silence or losing their livelihood.

The Shower of Stoles Project is the only national and ecumenical program of its kind. It has become a vital part of the broader welcoming church movement, providing education, advocacy and public witness programs on behalf of GLBT people of faith everywhere.

Our mission statement reads: “To use the Shower of Stoles to end ecclesiastical discrimination against gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender people of faith.” To achieve this, the program has established the following goals:

1. To honor and celebrate those who are called to leadership within their faith communities.
2. To empower gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender people of faith to claim their calls.
3. To increase public awareness of the gifts for leadership of gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender people and the discriminatory practices which prohibit them from fulfilling their calls.

4. To challenge and end such discriminatory policies.

The Shower of Stoles Project provides education, advocacy and public witness programs on behalf of GLBT people everywhere through the following programs:

1. Displaying the stoles in:

- Faith-based settings, including conferences, congregations, seminaries, and at large denominational, regional and national assemblies.
- Secular settings, including Pride events, colleges and universities, community educational events, conferences, and arts programs.

2. Providing educational programs for small secular and faith-based groups (congregations, women's, GLBT, and youth groups) on the issues facing GLBT persons in their faith communities.

3. Working with small and large groups, both local and national, strategizing for change toward more inclusivity in faith communities and in society at large.

4. Networking and strategizing with denominationally based GLBT organizations (Reconciling Ministries Network, More Light Network, Open and Affirming Churches, etc.), supporting their efforts to end ecclesiastical discrimination.

Our budget in 2003 was $86,032. The staff consists of a full-time National Program Director and a part-time Administrative Assistant. Ten dedicated key volunteers use their sewing skills to maintain the stoles themselves. Volunteers for displays are found through a site liaison.

That All May Freely Serve

That All May Freely Serve (TAMFS) was founded in 1993. In January of that year, the Reverend Dr. Jane A. Spahr was named evangelist and funded by the Downtown United Presbyterian Church. In March of the same year, the mission project That All May Freely Serve was launched.

Background. A 1992 court decision by the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) General Assembly's Permanent Judicial Commission set aside the pastoral call of the Reverend Dr. Jane Adams Spahr to the Downtown United Presbyterian Church (DUPC) of Rochester, New York. The Commission's reason: Dr. Spahr ("Janie") though an eminently qualified candidate, was a self-affirming lesbian. As a constructive response to this painful denial, DUPC in March 1993 established That All May Freely Serve (TAMFS) to participate in an intentionally educational process in the dialogue called for by the General Assembly. DUPC then invited Janie to become an evangelist to spread the "good news" of God's love for everyone by "personing" this issue. She has since traveled widely throughout the United States, most often with "touring partners," many of whom are from DUPC. This mission of evangelism has opened countless hearts and minds, as TAMFS has accepted invitations to preach, teach, counsel, and encourage inclusiveness throughout both the Presbyterian Church and the wider community.

Mission/Theological emphasis. Called by the life and teachings of Jesus, compelled by our faith and charged by our conscience, we advocate for an inclusive church that honors diversity and welcomes lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender persons as full members. Full membership includes eligibility for ordination to the offices of elder, deacon, and pastor.

Organization. TAMFS has national offices in Rochester, NY at the Downtown United Presbyterian Church (DUPC) and eight regional partnerships (TAMFS Baltimore, TAMFS South, TAMFS Michigan, TAMFS Chicago, TAMFS Northern California, TAMFS Texas, Presbyterian Promise and Presbyterian Welcome). Each region has a team dedicated to the same core principles of inclusiveness.

Currently the office of the National That All May Freely Serve is located at the Downtown United Presbyterian Church. There are three full-time staff: Dr. Spahr, Minister Director, Lisa Larges, Regional Partnership Coordinator, and Cassandra Womack, Administrative Associate, who manages the Rochester office.

Since 1993, DUPC has shared sponsorship of this special mission project with Westminster Presbyterian Church of Tiburon, California, which serves as employer and fiscal agent for TAMFS, enabling Janie's relationship with Redwoods Presbytery to remain in good standing. The Minister Director and the Regional Partnership Director are employees of Westminster Presbyterian Church. The Administrative Associate is an employee of the Downtown Presbyterian Church.

A semiannual newsletter has a mailing list of 7,000 individuals, many of whom are members of PC(USA). TAMFS has a Web Page at www.tamfs.org.

The TAMFS budget for 2004 is $345,000. In the past year, twenty-five donors gave $1,000–1,999; three donors contributed $2,000–2,999, seven donors gave $3,000–5,999, one donor gave $5,000–9,999, and three donors contributed over $12,500. The organization has an operations manual that is too long to be included here.

Where we are. TAMFS is growing and evolving, as several regional partnerships form across the U.S., each with its team of workers dedicated to the same core principles of inclusiveness. Since 1993 DUPC has shared sponsorship of this special mission project with Westminster Presbyterian Church of Tiburon, California, which serves as employer and fiscal agent for TAMFS, enabling Janie's relationship with Redwoods Presbytery to remain in good standing.

Where we are going. We will continue to

- Educate and engage in dialogue with members of faith communities; colleges; universities; seminaries; and other relevant groups to further this work of justice through education and advocacy.
- Build and coordinate a national network of regional partnerships
- Encourage regional partnerships to employ or call ministers of outreach and evangelism.
- Collaborate with More Light Presbyterians and other advocates for justice and inclusion.

Since 2000, TAMFS has had a booth at the General Assembly and has cooperated with More Light Presbyterians and Shower of Stoles on a shared hospitality suite, dinner, strategy room, and pastoral care.

Sincerely,

Mary S. Rees
Co-Moderator
TAMFS

Voices of Orthodox Women

Voices of Orthodox Women is a nationwide network of women committed to the renewal of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) through the promotion of the doctrines and practices of historic, biblical and confessional orthodoxy against those of an encroaching culture.

The work of the VOW network includes:

- Purposeful and specific prayer for our church and its ministries
- The encouragement of like-minded individuals and groups
- The political empowerment of orthodox women
- Education
- Calls for accountability
- A faithful and gently assertive presence

As Voices of Orthodox Women we believe in the Triune God—Father, Son and Holy Spirit, the authority of Scriptures, the biblical doctrines taught in The Book of Confessions, the sinfulness of human nature, the redemptive and transforming work of Jesus Christ, and Christ's sole Lordship over every area of life.

In submission to the Scriptures, we believe the intrusions of culture into the life of the church must be exposed and resisted; most particularly, that radical feminism is irreconcilable with biblical orthodoxy; an idolatry—in both our Church and our culture—to be unmasked.

In submission to Christ's Lordship over every area of life, we believe ourselves called, therefore, to build up the PC(U.S.A.) by promoting the doctrines and practices of historic biblical orthodoxy against those of this encroaching culture.

The Witherspoon Society

Kent Winters-Hazelton, President
201 Eucalyptus Drive
San Francisco, CA 94132

The following is the 2003 report of the Witherspoon Society as requested by the 212th General Assembly.

The Witherspoon Society is named for the Presbyterian minister, John Witherspoon, first Moderator of the General Assembly and the only minister to sign the Declaration of Independence. It was organized in 1973 to address significant social issues emerging from the 1960’s. In the spirit of the Confession of 1967 and the Brief Statement of Faith, we seek the whole counsel of God and its meaning for contemporary life.

We are a network of concerned Presbyterians responding to God’s call to do justice, and to work with hope for healing and wholeness in a world increasingly broken.

Our mission is:

- To listen and learn from those who have been silenced;
- To nurture the prophetic voice of the church through reflection, discernment and action;
- To equip Presbyterians for faithful participation in the church and the world;
- To challenge unjust relationship of power;
- To advocate for peace, justice, the integrity of creation, and the full inclusion of all God’s people in church and society.

Through our witness, we seek to revitalize the church’s proclamation and action, informed by the full witness of the Bible and the confessions, animated by our hope for the reign of God.

The 2003 budget of the Witherspoon Society was $55,000

The Witherspoon Society has one part-time employee and one contract bookkeeper

The Witherspoon Society received one gift over $1,000.

World Mission Initiative at Pittsburgh Theological Seminary

Affinity Group Report

Purpose: World Mission Initiative is a fellowship of Presbyterians dedicated to: developing mission vision; nurturing missionary vocations; cultivating missional congregations.

Seminary Focus: extending God's call to missionary vocations; sending seminary students to cross-cultural mission experiences; preparing seminary students to become world Christian pastors.

Congregational Focus: providing mission resources for the church; consulting with pastors and mission committees; educating the church about what God is doing in the world; networking to help churches reach out to the world; directing congregations to greater involvement and support.

Doctrinal Standard: World Mission Initiative is connected to Pittsburgh Theological Seminary, a graduate professional institution of the Presbyterian Church (USA), so our standard is the Book of Confessions

Methods Of Operation: World Mission Initiative is governed by a board comprised of staff, members of the seminary community, members of the community at large, and a representative of the Worldwide Ministries Division of the Presbyterian Church (USA), and reports to the Board of Directors of Pittsburgh Theological Seminary.

Staff: Rev. Dr. Donald Dawson, Director; Rev. Dr. Scott Sunquist; Dr. Glendora Paul; Rev. James and Lois Caldwell.

Donors of More Than$1,000 in 2003: We believe it is the responsibility of the Board to protect the privacy of donors, so we will not report individual donors. Following are the churches that have contributed: Mars UPC – Mars, PA; Paoli PC – Paoli, PA; Hampton UPC – Gibsonia, PA; Union PC– McKees Rocks, PA; The Presbyterian Church of Sewickley – Sewickley, PA; Riverdale PC – Moon Township, PA; Glenshaw PC – Glenshaw, PA; Memorial Park Community PC – Allison Park, PA; Mt. ## G. Committee on the Office of the General Assembly and the Office of the General Assembly Agency Summary

1. Building Community and Trust

“For just as the body is one and has many members, and all the members of the body, though many, are one body, so it is with Christ” (1 Cor. 12:12).

The Office of the General Assembly (OGA) is responsible for the ecclesiastical activities of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and for all duties the Book of Order assigns to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly. The OGA strives in all things to serve and care for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), listening, praying, preaching, teaching, and building community and trust throughout the church. The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) supports and advises the Stated Clerk and the OGA staff. The COGA exercises the assembly’s accountability for OGA between assemblies.

In 2003, OGA and COGA did the following

- Organized, convened, and managed the 215th General Assembly of the PC(USA) in Denver, Colorado, whose theme was “A House of Prayer for All Peoples.” In keeping with its theme, the 2003 assembly was marked by a distinctly pastoral tone and affirmed that Presbyterians, despite their differences, are one church family.
- Finished, with the General Assembly Council, a series of 115 consultations with synods and presbyteries mandated by the 211th General Assembly (1999) to strengthen relationships with PC(USA) middle governing bodies.
- Continued providing staff support to the Theological Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church, and helped produce task force resources, including the “Seeking Peace, Unity, and Purity” video series, intended to assist the church in studying the issues in the task force’s mandate. Learn more at www.pcusa.org/peaceunitypurity.
- Launched a new Web site called “MGB Connect” that collects practices successfully employed by presbyteries, synods, and the General Assembly. Visitors also will find information on such topics as stewardship, congregational life, clergy, governance, preparation for ministry, and much more. Learn more at www.pcusa.org/mgbconnect.
- Called the PC(USA) to faithfulness to its Constitution, supporting presbyteries as the governing bodies with primary responsibility for upholding the Constitution in matters relating to ministers and sessions.
- Provided staff support to the permanent and special committees of the General Assembly.
- Sponsored the annual Fall Polity Conference for staff of middle governing bodies.
- Began the seventh round of Catholic-Reformed dialogue with partners including the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops, the Christian Reformed Church in North America, the Reformed Church in America, and the United Church of Christ, focusing in this instance on the meaning and practice of Baptism.
- Assisted General Assembly Moderator Susan R. Andrews in organizing the 2003 Moderators Conference for synod and presbytery moderators on the theme, “Graceful Growth: Becoming the Generous Church of Jesus Christ.”
- Continued preparing the denomination for the change to every-other-year General Assemblies.

Clifton Kirkpatrick—Stated Clerk of the General Assembly

2. OGA and COGA

The Office of the General Assembly is supervised by the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly, and has a staff of seventy in three locations: Louisville, Kentucky; Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; and Montreat, North Carolina.

The fifteen-member Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) oversees and advises the Stated Clerk and the staff of OGA, exercising the assembly's accountability for OGA between sessions of the assembly. Its members are nominated by the General Assembly Nominating Committee and elected during the General Assembly.

The assembly Moderator is a regular member, and there are three corresponding members: the Stated Clerk, and the Executive Director and the Vice Chair of the General Assembly Council.

3. The Permanent and Special Committees of the General Assembly

The Permanent and Special Committees of the General Assembly are as follows: Committee on the Office of the General Assembly; Advisory Committee on the Constitution; Advisory Committee on Litigation; General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations; General Assembly Committee on Representation; General Assembly Nominating Committee; General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission; Presbyteries' Cooperative Committee on Examinations for Candidates; Theological Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church.

“Christ calls the Church into being, giving it all that is necessary for its mission to the world, for its building up, and for its service to God” (Book of Order, G-1.0100).

4. OGA, Princeton Seminary Co-host—Common Faith, Common Mission Event

In February, Princeton Theological Seminary was the site of a conference titled Common Faith, Common Mission. The conference name is the same as the multi-year effort by OGA to engage the whole church in dialogue on the core values of the Reformed faith, as articulated in the PC(USA) Constitution, and to discern how they might shape the future mission of the church and contribute to congregational renewal.

In his keynote address, the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly said: “The PC(USA) is in a new reality in the twenty-first century: a largely secular society, a multicultural world, and a wide breadth of diversity. The historic assumptions of being an established church in a Christian culture no longer hold. But what does hold is the richness of our constitutional vision. It is my hope that we will have a fresh encounter with that covenantal vision and be renewed by it.”

The event included worship and small-group discussions of such questions as, “How do we use the best of who and what we are in the present to fulfill the call to bear witness to Christ through our mission and ministry?”

Additional Common Faith, Common Mission events are scheduled for 2004, along with a Common Faith, Common Mission curriculum for officer training and for use by other study groups.

5. A Letter from Clifton Kirkpatrick, Stated Clerk, and Katherine Cunningham, Moderator, COGA

Sisters and Brothers in Christ,

OGA anticipates a busy 2004 as we seek to help the PC(USA) experience “fullness of life” in its work and witness.

The 216th General Assembly will convene on June 26, in Richmond, Va. As the commissioners “seek together to find and represent the will of Christ” (Book of Order, G-4.0301), many will choose to receive assembly reports electronically, continuing a trend toward a “paper-free” assembly. Presbyterians who can’t be in Richmond for the assembly will have access to live video streaming, news, and photos at www.pcusa.org/ga216.

The coming year will bring an expansion of our Common Faith, Common Mission project to engage the whole church in reclaiming the gift of the PC(USA) Constitution and the values we share as Presbyterians. We will build on partnerships with other PC(USA) entities to produce resources on the Constitution, including specific pieces on the “Great Ends of the Church.”

The OGA also will continue producing advisory opinions on questions that arise in the life of the church. These opinions and a wealth of other resources, including the monthly online magazine Perspectives, are available at our Web site, www.pcusa.org/oga.

Together with the General Assembly Council, OGA has created a brand-new site devoted to the sharing of practices and policies among middle governing bodies: www.pcusa.org/mgbconnect. The OGA is also a partner in the six-agency effort to plan the first national pastor’s conference in 2005. We think both of these will help us remain strongly connected with one another between every-other-year assemblies.

And we will be gathering this summer with representatives of 216 other Presbyterian and Reformed denominations—and of more than 75 million Christians—for the General Council of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches in Accra, Ghana, the closest thing we have to a Presbyterian “Vatican Council.”

In all these activities, the aim of OGA will be to help the church to authentically proclaim, in word and deed, the gospel of Jesus Christ.

Clifton Kirkpatrick—Stated Clerk of the General Assembly

Katherine Cunningham—Moderator, Committee on the Office of the General Assembly

6. Just The Facts

In 2003, OGA for the first time published all the General Assembly’s directives to other PC(USA) entities—presbyteries, synods, congregations, the whole denomination—online. The thirteen-page document contains brief summaries of assembly actions; full versions can be found in the 2003 Minutes, Part I. The OGA plans to do the same after the 2004 assembly. Learn more at www.pcusa.org/oga/publications/ga216-transmittal.pdf.

7. Theological Task Force Launches Video Series

The Theological Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church (TTF) last year released the first video in a series designed to help the church engage in community and study similar to the task force’s process.

In the video, task force member Vicky Curtiss, an Iowa pastor, offers tools the group has found helpful in creating deep camaraderie among its members over the past two years. The tape also includes material on Biblical interpretation presented by member Frances Taylor Gench, a Presbyterian seminary professor. A guide for discussion leaders is included.

A second video, scheduled for release during the 216th General Assembly (2004) in Richmond, will focus on Christology. It will feature task force member and Presbyterian seminary professor Mark Achtemeier.

Each video costs $10 and can be ordered from Presbyterian Distribution Services at (800) 524-2612. Video #1: item #OGA-03-069; Video #2: item #OGA-04-069 (available July 2004). Learn more about task force resources at www.pcusa.org/peaceunitypurity

8. Presbyterian Historical Society

In 2003, the Presbyterian Historical Society (PHS) continued its mission of collecting, preserving, and sharing the church's history. It also developed new donor support of the society's work. In response to a 2001 consultant's report, PHS began its transition to a new governance structure.

9. Speaking Prophetically

One of the duties of the Stated Clerk, the denomination's highest ecclesiastical officer, is to speak for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) on the issues of the day. Here are excerpts from two statements written by the Reverend Clifton Kirkpatrick in 2003:

On terrorist acts: "We are deeply troubled by the bombing of two synagogues in Istanbul. ... We urge Presbyterians and Americans to pray for all those innocents who have been killed. ... We must look deeply into the reasons why people of faith in many countries are targets of terrorist acts. ... Is it not time we turn from violence and pursue the paths of justice and peace?"

Prior to the U.S. war on Iraq: "It is clear that the church's calling is to be peacemakers — a critical priority for us in these days. We invite you to join a growing chorus of voices across the country calling for the United States to exercise restraint. ... At the same time, we remember in our prayers the military personnel who may be in harm's way, as well as their families and the military chaplains who minister in the armed services."

10. OGA: Working for the PC(USA) to Be a Vital Church in the World

Per capita is the means that Presbyterians have chosen to share the cost of coordination and evaluation of mission, as well as to perform ecclesiastical, legislative, and judicial functions that belong equally to the whole Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), so that the system can function for our mutual benefit.

Where did per capita money come from? In 2003, the General Assembly per capita rate for presbyteries was $5.44.

Where did per capita money go? In 2003: General Assembly Meeting ($1,801,138); Permanent and Special Committees ($536,981); Ecumenical Work ($1,198,099); OGA Departments ($5,431,902); General Assembly Council/Administration ($3,667,605); Shared Expenditures ($532,511); Outstanding Apportionments ($188,061). Total: $13,606,810.

11. OGA Staff Coordinating Cabinet

Members of the OGA Staff Coordinating Cabinet are Clifton Kirkpatrick, Stated Clerk; Gradye Parsons, director, Operations; Loyda Aja, director, Department of the Stated Clerk; Kerry Clements, director, Department of Communication of Technology; Frederick J. Heuser Jr., director, Department of History; Mark Tammen, director, Department of Constitutional Services; Gary Torrens, coordinator, Office of Middle Governing Body Relations (an OGA/GAC shared office); Robina Winbush, director, Department of Ecumenical and Agency Relationships; Sharon K. Youngs, coordinator, Communications.

Item 04-01

On Amending D-10.0401c, Time Limits, When Utilizing Alternative Dispute Resolution—From the Presbytery of South Louisiana.

The Presbytery of South Louisiana overtures the 216th General Assembly (2004) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative vote:

Shall D-10.0401c be reinstated with the addition of the phrase “, not to exceed two years.” Section D-10.0401c shall read as follows:

“If an alternative form of resolution is initiated, the time limits herein provided shall be extended for the duration of the process, not to exceed two years.”

Rationale

The presbytery’s permanent judicial commission recommended a negative vote on Amendment 02-E, and the presbytery concurred.

The rationale was expressed as follows:

The PJC, after studying Amendment 02-E, the information found in The Presbyterian Outlook of January 13–20, 2003, and the recommendations from the General Assembly Committee on Church Polity, feels Amendment 02-E in its present form, if not ratified by the Presbyteries, or if ratified, removes a Statute of Limitations which would allow alternate means designed to bring resolution in disciplinary cases to provide a means by which one could extend alternative resolutions indefinitely; prohibiting action by an Investigating Committee to prosecute charges, brought by individuals, Sessions, or Presbyteries before the PJC in a decent and orderly manner, thus causing additional negative feelings concerning the inability of our Governing Bodies to effectually govern and guide the Church.

However, it is the opinion of the PJC that no time limit provides a means for procrastination, diluting the validity of Governing Bodies to act in disciplinary cases.

Therefore, we encourage Presbytery to adopt this recommendation and to overture the 216th General Assembly to amend D-10.0401c.”

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 04-01

Advice on Item 04-01—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 216th General Assembly (2004) to disapprove Item 04-01.

Rationale

Section D-10.0401c was stricken by action of the presbyteries based on a proposal of the 214th General Assembly (2002). Thus the overture seeks to amend a provision that is no longer in the Rules of Discipline.

If the assembly wishes to amend the Rules of Discipline in accordance with the overture’s original intent, it would have to direct that the Stated Clerk send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Add a new section D-10.0401c to read as follows:

“If an alternative form of resolution is initiated, the time limits herein provided shall be extended for the duration of the process, not to exceed two years.”

Given the recent removal of any extension of time limitations in cases in which an alternative form of resolution is attempted, revisiting this issue so soon seems inappropriate.

Item 04-02

On Amending D-1.0103 to Add a Call to Prayer and Confidentiality—From the Presbytery of Western North Carolina.

The Presbytery of Western North Carolina overtures the 216th General Assembly (2004) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Shall D-1.0103 be amended by adding a new sentence at the end of the paragraph so that it shall read as follows:

“The traditional biblical obligation to conciliate, mediate, and adjust differences without strife is not diminished by these Rules of Discipline. Although the Rules of Discipline describe the way in which judicial process within the church, when necessary, shall be conducted, it is not their intent or purpose to encourage judicial process of any kind or to make it more expensive or difficult. The biblical duty of church people to “come to terms quickly with your accuser while you are on the way to court . . .” (Matthew 5:25) is not abated or diminished. It remains the duty of every church member to try (prayerfully and seriously) to bring about an adjustment or settlement of the quarrel, complaint, delinquency, or irregularity asserted, and to avoid formal proceedings under the Rules of Discipline unless, after prayerful deliberation, they are determined to be necessary to preserve the purity and purposes of the church. If after prayerful deliberation the formal proceeding of church discipline seems necessary, every church member should hold in prayer and confidentiality all aspects of the disciplinary case until disposition is made by the appropriate governing bodies or commissions.”

Rationale

Church discipline is the exercise of authority in the manner and name of Christ.

Discipline is for the direction, control, and nurture of the people of God.

In church discipline “members are to be accorded procedural safeguards and due process” (D-1.0101).

Confidential information can be revealed when “there is a risk of imminent bodily harm to any person (G-6.0204).

The call to prayer and confidentiality guides individuals who are involved in the discipline process and those who have information about a discipline procedure or case. The overture upholds the biblical principles on which the “Principles of Church Discipline” are founded.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 04-02

Advice on Item 04-02—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 216th General Assembly (2004) to disapprove Item 04-02.

Rationale

Item 04-02 seeks to add a call to prayer and confidentiality to the paragraph concerning our obligation to conciliate, mediate, and adjust differences. The call for prayer contained in the overture adds nothing new. Christians are routinely called to pray in situations of conflict.

If the requirement of confidentiality contained in the overture is intended to apply to remedial cases as well as disciplinary cases, it is not appropriate, since confidentiality is not usually presumed in a remedial case, and judicial proceedings are open to the public. The public announcement of the filing of disciplinary allegations against an officer or member of the church contains great potential for abuse. For example, publicizing the filing of allegation, with an intent to taint the fairness of the disciplinary process, may itself constitute a disciplinary offense. The proposed amendment, however, would restrict those who bring an accusation from legitimate, or even necessary, disclosure of the allegations. For example, if the person making the allegation is a victim of misconduct, who may be entitled to pursue other recourse for the alleged misconduct, such as an action in the civil courts, that person may have legitimate reason not to keep confidential the allegations made.

Item 04-03

[In response to Item 04-03, the assembly approved an alternate resolution. See p. 81.]

On Amending D-6.0306a and D-8.0302a to Specify a Time Limit in Exercising the Right to Challenge the Findings of the Moderator and Clerk—From the Presbytery of San Francisco.

The Presbytery of San Francisco overtures the 216th General Assembly (2004) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following amendments to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

1. Shall D-6.0306a be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“a. If a challenge is made to the findings of the moderator and clerk within thirty days after receipt of those findings, either by a party to the case or by a member of the permanent judicial commission, opportunity shall be provided to present evidence and argument on the finding in question. Parties shall be invited to submit briefs prior to the hearing on the jurisdictional question.”

2. Shall D-8.0302a be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“a. If a challenge is made to the findings of the moderator and clerk within thirty days after receipt of those findings, either by a party to the case or by a member of the permanent judicial commission, opportunity shall be provided to present evidence and argument on the finding in question.”

Rationale

In the context of either a remedial complaint (D-6.0100 et seq.) or the appeal of a remedial case (D-8.0100 et seq.), the above portions of Book of Order provide a right for a party to the case or a member of the permanent judicial commission to make a challenge to the jurisdictional and related findings of the moderator and clerk. The Book of Order also requires the permanent judicial commission to dismiss the case if it determines that any point listed in D-6.0305 or D-8.0301 is answered in the negative (D-6.0306a, D-8.0302c). However, unlike most of the steps in the judicial process, the Book of Order does not specify a time limit for exercising the right to challenge the jurisdictional findings of the moderator and clerk.

When no notice of a challenge has been received, the absence of such a time limit creates a lack of certainty as to how long the right to challenge should remain open, and when the permanent judicial commission is required to make its findings and dismiss a remedial complaint. A specified time limit for giving notice of a challenge would assist in planning the work of a permanent judicial commission; help bring about the speedy, just, and economical resolution of a remedial case or appeal; and would ensure essential fairness in the process.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 04-03

Advice on Item 04-03—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

The ACC advises the 216th General Assembly (2004) to approve Item 04-03 with the addition of the following language:

“3. Shall D-13.0302a be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“a. If a challenge is made to the findings of the moderator and clerk within thirty days after receipt of those findings, either by a party to the case or by a member of the permanent judicial commission, opportunity shall be provided to present evidence and argument on the finding in question.”

Rationale

This overture seeks to limit the time allowed for filing a challenge to the findings of the moderator and clerk of a permanent judicial commission on the jurisdictional questions relating to the filing of a complaint or appeal in a remedial case.

The possibility of a challenge to these findings is an example of the importance of fairness and due process in the Rules of Discipline. Currently, because no time limit exists for parties to the case or members of the permanent judicial commission to challenge the correctness of the findings, there is uncertainty as to when this opportunity ceases. This unnecessarily increases the possibility for confusion, error, and irregularity. The proposed amendments address this ambiguity and would result in greater clarity in the church’s judicial process.

Item 04-04

On Amending D-10.0201a to Specify a Time Limit—From the Presbytery of North Puget Sound.

The Presbytery of North Puget Sound overtures the 216th General Assembly (2004) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Shall D-10.0201a be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“An investigating committee shall have no more than five but no less than three members, and may include members from another governing body, if appropriate, in accordance with D-10.0104. A session shall not appoint members of the session as members of the investigating committee. When a written statement of alleged sexual offense is submitted by a minister of the Word and Sacrament accusing another minister of the Word and Sacrament, the investigating committee shall conclude its investigation within 30 days of the receipt of the written statement of alleged offense by the stated clerk.”

Rationale

In secular business, when dealing with employee-to-employee relations, allegations of sexual misconduct are normally concluded within seventy-two hours. In a congregation with a multiple staff, there is no time limit for such an investigation. Lengthy ongoing investigations, particularly where the investigating committee disseminates no information, creates an atmosphere of rumor and innuendo, particularly if either the accused or accuser is no longer present to and with the congregation. For the sake of all parties involved, particularly the congregation, such investigations and determinations whether formal charges will be filed must be concluded in a timely manner. (Our experience in this presbytery was that one investigation took more than a year before the decision was made to file no charges. This was a very painful experience for the congregation).

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 04-04

Advice on Item 04-04—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 216th General Assembly (2004) to disapprove Item 04-04.

Rationale

The overture seeks, in an amendment, to add to a paragraph specifying the membership of an investigating committee language providing a thirty-day limit for an investigating committee (IC) to do its work. If such a time limit is desirable, it would be more appropriate for inclusion in paragraph D-10.0401 on time limits.

Further, thirty days could be impractical, if not impossible, in some presbyteries. The recruitment, appointment, and assembling of an IC for its first meeting might well take thirty days or more. In particular, it is conceivable that the IC could complete its investigating work and run out of time to file charges, thereby ending the judicial process prematurely. The scenario provided in the overture's rationale certainly does not capture the norm in judicial cases. The logistics of creating a working investigating committee in a presbytery covering a large territory can be daunting and justice would not be served if there were a literal rush to judgment in the early phases in the judicial process.

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 04-04

Advice and Counsel on Item 04-04—From the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns.

Item 04-04 asks that D-10.0201a be amended to specify that an investigating committee conclude its investigation within thirty days of the receipt by the Stated Clerk of the written statement of alleged offense.

The Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns advises that Item 04-04 be disapproved.

Rationale

The Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns supports changes in the Book of Order that will give greater protection to victims and set clearer standards of communication and discipline for the church. The expectation that a sexual abuse or misconduct investigation can always be concluded in thirty days is unrealistic and could lead to injustice for the accuser, for the accused, or for both.

Item 04-05

[The assembly disapproved Item 04-05. See p. 81.]

On Amending D-10.0202h to Allow Dissemination of Findings—From the Presbytery of North Puget Sound.

The Presbytery of North Puget Sound overtures the 216th General Assembly (2004) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Shall D-10.0202h be amended to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“h. report to the governing body having jurisdiction over the accused ~~only~~ whether or not it will file charges; and if it will file no charges, the stated clerk shall disseminate its findings as the investigating committee may direct; and”

Rationale

Sometimes when there is a written statement of alleged offense and it is referred to an investigating committee, the situation becomes painfully obvious to a congregation and session. If there are allegations against a pastor, and the investigating committee decides that no charges will be filed, there may be a cloud over the accused. Currently, the investigating committee is prevented from disseminating any information about its investigation, allowing that cloud to remain. This overture would grant similar powers of information dissemination to that of a judicial commission, so that if the investigating committee deems it is in the best interest of the church, the accused, the accuser, or the respective governing body, it can instruct the stated clerk to disseminate its findings as it sees fit.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 04-05

Advice on Item 04-05—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 216th General Assembly (2004) to disapprove Item 04-05.

Rationale

Item 04-05, which calls for an amendment of D-10.0202h, endeavors to remove the possible taint upon a person's character when an investigating committee (IC), upon completion of its work as described in D-10.0200, does not file charges due to either a lack of evidence or a fraudulent accusation. The overture's rationale points to the situations in which there is common public knowledge that a certain person is the subject of an investigation. In those cases, when no charges are filed, the accused can suffer from common unanswered questions. This amendment calls for a dissemination of the investigating committee's "findings as the investigating committee may direct," in an effort to clear the name of the accused. The overture proposes an unnecessary and undesirable expansion of the duties of the IC.

The public release of the array of information uncovered in the typical investigating process would be unwise and potentially damaging to not only the accused, but also to other persons. Because the life of the accused is closely scrutinized, damaging data would become public.

The "Request for Vindication" D-9.0000, is designed to address the concerns articulated in Item 04-05:

"A member of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) who feels injured by rumor or gossip may request an inquiry for vindication by submitting to the clerk of session or stated clerk of the presbytery a clear narrative and statement of facts" (Book of Order, G-9.01101).

If appropriate, the most effective means of achieving vindication is to utilize the judicial process already part of the Rules of Discipline.

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 04-05

Advice and Counsel on Item 04-05—From the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns.

Item 04-05 asks that D-10.0202h be amended to allow dissemination of findings of an investigating committee even if the committee will file no charges.

The Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC) advises that Item 04-05 be approved.

Rationale

The Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns supports changes to the Book of Order that provide greater protection to victims. However, it is also important that investigating committees work under the principle of "innocent until proven guilty." Recognizing that this is not always the assumption of members of congregations and presbyteries, ACWC supports providing investigating committees with similar power of information dissemination to that of the permanent judicial commissions.

Item 04-06

ACC Request Regarding Conflict Resolution—From the Manager of Judicial Process and Social Witness, Office of the General Assembly.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) answer this request with the following authoritative interpretation of D-6.0304 and D-10.0202g:

“1. No provision in the Rules of Discipline empowers the stated clerk to take any steps other than to transmit the complaint and answer in a timely manner to the permanent judicial commission. To the contrary, D-6.0304 is mandatory: ‘When the complaint and answer have been filed with the stated clerk or the higher governing body, the stated clerk shall transmit them at once to the officers of the permanent judicial commission of the governing body and shall give notice to the parties that the case has been received’ [emphasis added].

“Once the complaint is filed, the respondent has forty-five days in which to file an answer. During this period, the parties are free to engage in attempts to resolve the complaint through alternative forms of resolution. Such efforts may continue after the permanent judicial commission holds a pretrial conference. While the stated clerk may advise parties of the availability of alternative forms of resolution, he or she must be careful to avoid any appearance of partiality that could call into question his or her neutrality into question.

“2. When an investigating committee begins alternative forms of resolution under D-10.0202g, the investigating committee must file charges at least concurrently with an agreement being filed with the permanent judicial commission in order to seek the permanent judicial commission’s approval of the agreement. Absent such charges, the permanent judicial commission has no basis to evaluate the proposed agreement. Moreover, if the agreement is not approved, the investigation should be prepared to move forward to prosecute such charges.

“3. An agreement approved by the permanent judicial commission under D-10.0202g(2) is a decision of the permanent judicial commission.”

Letter of Request Received by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

1. When a Remedial Complaint is filed with the Stated Clerk of the governing body, does the stated clerk have the capacity to refer the remedial complaint to a committee or commission to try conflict resolution prior to the initiation of the judicial process in D-6.0101?

2. When an IC begins AFR under D-10.0202g, must the IC file charges concurrently or prior to an Agreement being reported to the PJC for its approval (D-10.0202g(2))?

Explanation

With no charges, there is no case before the PJC and the PJC does not have jurisdiction to approve or disapprove any settlement on behalf of the Presbytery. The purpose listed in D-10.0202g is to determine if agreement can be reached between all parties involved concerning any charges that may be filed. However other language in D-10.0202g seems to indicate that AFR is begun prior to charges filed and, in D-10.0202g(4), if no settlement is reached then the IC shall proceed to the filing of charges.

This becomes important in agreements that do not include admission of guilt but do include agreement to censure. These types of agreement are quite common this year as the civil Presbyterian attorneys negotiate for their clients prior to the IC filing charges. We often see this coupled with confidentiality clauses.

3. Is an AFR agreement approved by the PJC under D-10.0202g(2) a decision of the PJC that triggers the duty of the stated clerk in D-11.0701 to report the decision? May a portion of the agreement be the decision? If it is not the decision to be reported to presbytery, how does the Presbytery enforce the agreement?

See: Minutes, 1990, Part I, 11.096, Remedial Case 202-1 (Baumann and Griffiths v. Session of Benefield Presbyterian Church) where it was not appropriate to hold confidential from a congregation an agreement which bound a congregation to certain actions.

Item 04-07

ACC Request Interpretation of D-10.0102, Referring a Statement of Offense from a Non-Member of the PC(USA)—From the Manager of Judicial Process and Social Witness, Office of the General Assembly.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) answer Item 04-07 with the following authoritative interpretation:

“When a clerk of session or stated clerk of presbytery receives a written statement of an alleged offense from a person who is not a member of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), the clerk or stated clerk becomes ‘a member of a governing body receiving information from any source that an offense may have occurred which should be investigated for the purpose of discipline’ (D-10.0102b). If a stated clerk or clerk of session receives a ‘written statement of offense’ from a non-member of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) that contains sufficient information to allow investigation and to suggest that an offense has been committed, the clerk or stated clerk should follow the provisions of D-10.0103, report that an offense has been alleged, and refer the statement immediately to an investigating committee. Determining whether the information received from a non-member contains sufficient information to allow investigation and to suggest that an offense has been committed requires the wise exercise of discretion by the clerk.”

Letter of Request Received by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

Must a clerk of session or stated clerk of the presbytery who receives a “written statement of offense” from a non-member of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) refer the statement to an investigating committee? The current language of D-10.0102 may be found below.

D-10.0102

The written statement may be submitted by

- a. a person under jurisdiction of a governing body of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) making an accusation against another;
- b. a member of a governing body receiving information from any source that an offense may have occurred which should be investigated for the purpose of discipline; or
- c. a person under jurisdiction of a governing body of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) coming forward in self-accusation.

Item 04-08

The General Assembly Council, upon recommendation of the Independent Committee of Inquiry Work Group, recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendments to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

[The assembly answered Item 04-08, Recommendations 1. and 2., by the action taken on Item 04-10 of this report. See p. 82.]

1. Shall G-11.0103o be amended as follows: [Text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“o. to establish the pastoral relationship and to modify the relationship or to dissolve it at the request of one or both of the parties, or when it finds that the church’s mission under the Word imperatively demands it;”

Rationale for Amendment 1.

[Refer to additional rationale for Recommendations 1–11 following Recommendation 11.]

This proposed change gives the presbytery the power to modify the pastoral relationship including, but not limited to, terms of leave of absence or administrative leave. This change would permit leave to be implemented promptly when the “Word imperatively demands it,” for example, when a person is temporarily incapable of engaging in effective ministry. This would provide the opportunity for the presbytery to initiate a leave of absence rather than dissolve the pastoral relationship.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 04-08 RECOMMENDATION 1

Advice on Recommendation 1, Item 04-08—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC) advises the 216th General Assembly (2004) to answer ICI Recommendation #1 (found on page 1) by the approval of ACC’s advice on Item 04-10. The rationale for this advice is set forth in the ACC’s advice concerning Item 04-10.

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 04-08

Preface: The “Final Report of the Independent Committee of Inquiry” is a major study of child sexual abuse and sexual abuse and misconduct. The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC) believes that through this study, the church has reached a Kairos moment in its life and is ready to act and improve our Book of Order process and procedures in relation to sexual misconduct. The ACWC has long been deeply troubled by incidents of sexual abuse of children and sexual misconduct in general and supports changes in the Book of Order that give greater protection to victims and provide clearer standards of communication and discipline for the church. The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns supports all of these amendments recommended by the General Assembly Council.

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 04-08, RECOMMENDATION 1

Advice and Counsel on Item 04-08, Recommendation 1—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns.

Item 04-08, Recommendation 1: Amend G-11.0103o to give presbytery the power to modify the pastoral relationship to include terms of leave of absence or administrative review.

Item 04-08, Recommendation 1 adds language that allows the presbytery more flexibility in its negotiations of pastor-church relationships.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns advises that Recommendation 1 be approved.

Rationale

The flexibility proposed will aid presbyteries in acting more quickly, especially in cases of sexual abuse of children, and will allow presbyteries to initiate leaves of absence for pastors incapable of carrying out their ministries.

Understanding that each situation in which accusations of sexual misconduct are made has its own dynamics, Recommendation 1 gives the presbytery options for intervening in the relationship between the church and the pastor on behalf of the accuser in an appropriate manner. Currently the language allows only for establishing and dissolving pastoral relationship. Adding the proposed language allows for actions such as negotiating administrative leaves.

2. Shall G-14.0506b be amended by adding a new section: [Text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“(4)The call shall also provide that the presbytery may, at its discretion, initiate a leave of absence (G-11.0103o). The call shall provide that the congregation may delegate to the session the power to negotiate specific terms of any leave of absence with the minister and the presbytery. The presbytery, through its committee on ministry, must approve the terms of all leaves of absence. (G-11.0502d and h)”

Rationale for Amendment 2.

[Refer to additional rationale for Recommendations 1–11 following Recommendation 11.]

This proposed change gives the presbytery the power to negotiate terms of leave of absence or administrative leave with a session and minister. This change permits leave to be implemented promptly when the “Word imperatively demands it,” for example, when the presbytery receives allegations of child abuse or criminal charges have been brought against a minister. Without this addition to the Book of Order, only the congregation has the power to initiate a change to the terms of call.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 04-08, RECOMMENDATION 2

Advice on Recommendation 2, Item 04-08—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC) advises the 216th General Assembly (2004) to answer ICI Recommendation #2 (found on page 1) with the approval of the ACC’s advice on Item 04-10. The rationale for this advice is set forth in the ACC’s advice concerning Item 04-10.

---

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 04-08, RECOMMENDATION 2

Advice and Counsel on Item 04-08, Recommendation 2—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns.

Recommendation 2: Amend G-14.0506b to give the presbytery the power to negotiate terms of leave of absence or administrative review.

Recommendation 2 proposes language that allows presbytery to work with a congregation in negotiating terms of administrative leave.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns advises that Recommendation 2 be approved.

Rationale

The proposed change is necessary in order that presbyteries may initiate leaves of absence for pastors incapable of carrying out their ministries.

This change gives the presbytery the authority to intervene on behalf of the accuser in the event that the local church is unable to advocate for the accuser, to make the situation safer for that person, and to recognize when the ministry of the accused is being hindered. The proposed change leaves the terms of the administrative leave in the hands of the congregation with the approval of the presbytery’s committee on ministry.

[In response to Item 04-08, Recommendation 3., the assembly approved an alternate resolution with comment. See pp. 82–83.]

3. Shall D-1.0101 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italics.]

“Church discipline is the church’s exercise of authority given by Christ, both in the direction of guidance, control, and nurture of its members and in the direction of constructive criticism of offenders. Thus, the purpose of discipline is to honor God by making clear the significance of membership in the body of Christ; to preserve the purity of the church by nourishing the individual within the life of the believing community; to achieve justice and compassion for all participants involved; to correct or restrain wrongdoing in order to bring members to repentance and restoration; to uphold the dignity of those who have been harmed by disciplinary offenses; to restore the unity of the church by removing the causes of discord and division; and to secure the just, speedy, and economical determination of proceedings. In all respects, ~~members~~ all participants are to be accorded procedural safeguards and due process, and it is the intention of these rules so to provide.”

Rationale for Amendment 3.

[Refer to additional rationale for Recommendations 1–11 following Recommendation 11.]

During their inquiry and the follow-up to it, the members of the Independent Committee of Inquiry and the victims of sexual abuse realized how the Rules of Discipline, in its current form, is oriented toward the offender. The offender is one of the principal parties of disciplinary procedure, the other principal party being the governing body through its investigating/prosecuting committee. The alleged victim (or the victim upon determination of guilt of the offender) fills the role of witness. In the current form of the Rules of Discipline, due process rights, goals of restoration, and the imposition of censure are all defined in relation to the offender. The person harmed (or alleged to have been harmed) is not a principal party, has no designated due process rights, and is not recognized in the Preamble to the Rules of Discipline.

With the recommended changes, the Preamble would recognize that accusers and victims are participants in the disciplinary process. With the recommended changes, the church would express—in the Preamble to its Rules of Discipline—that justice and restoration apply to all participants in disciplinary cases: the accused, the ones investigating, the accusers, the alleged victims, the victims, and the sessions or Permanent Judicial Commissions which will discern guilt or innocence and censure.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 04-08, RECOMMENDATION 3

Advice on Recommendation 3, Item 04-08—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 216th General Assembly (2004) regarding ICI Recommendation #3 with the following comment. This proposed amendment seeks to include in the Preamble to the Rules of Discipline language recognizing that the purpose of church discipline involves seeking justice and restoration not only for an alleged offender, but also for an alleged victim and accuser. It is clear and concise, and is consistent with other portions of the Book of Order.

However, it remains important to distinguish between the appropriate role of the church’s disciplinary process and the role of secular civil and criminal processes. This distinction is crucial to the effectiveness of the church’s disciplinary process. Confusion of these roles creates risks to the victim as well as to the church. The church’s disciplinary system exists not as a substitute for the secular judicial system, but rather to do what the secular judicial system cannot do—to protect and uphold the peace, purity, and unity of the church. Encouraging the church’s disciplinary system to substitute for the secular system risks depriving victims of their rights. Moreover, it is important to recognize the limitations of overloading the church’s volunteer-based system. Serious questions exist as to whether church’s volunteer-based system, in which training as compared to the secular system is minimal, is capable of supporting a heavier burden than it now faces.

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 04-08, RECOMMENDATION 3

Advice and Counsel on Item 04-08, Recommendation 3—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns.

Recommendation 3: Amend D-1-0101 so that the preamble expresses that justice restoration apply to all participants in disciplinary process.

Recommendation 3 alters the language of D-1-0101 so that it is inclusive of the victim as well as of the offender.

The Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns advises that Recommendation 3 be approved.

Rationale

This change recognizes that the judicial process within the PC(USA) is about justice, restoration, and reconciliation for all who participate in it.

The spirit in which the Rules of Discipline is written seeks wholeness and restoration of communities. Adding this language to the preamble shifts the primary focus from the accused to also supporting the victim. It thus enhances the restoration of the full community.

[In response to Item 04-08, Recommendation 4., the assembly approved an alternate resolution. See p. 83.]

4. Shall D-11.0403e be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“e. If the accused is found guilty or after the guilty plea, the session or permanent judicial commission ~~may~~ shall hear evidence as to the extent of the injury suffered, mitigation, rehabilitation, and redemption. This evidence may be offered by either party, ~~or~~ the original accuser, or that person's representative. The person who was directly harmed by the offense may submit a victim impact statement. The statement shall not be subject to cross-examination. The session or permanent judicial commission shall then meet privately to determine the degree of censure to be imposed. (D-12.0000) Following such determination and in an open meeting, the moderator of the session or permanent judicial commission shall then pronounce the censure.”

Rationale for Amendment 4.

[Refer to additional rationale for Recommendations 1–11 following Recommendation 11.]

The basis for this amendment is comments by former missionary children regarding ways to improve the church's response following occurrences of abuse, particularly the church's response to those who were victims of such abuse.

The intent of this amendment is to respond tangibly to such concerns. This amendment will extend the opportunity for a session or permanent judicial commission to receive a statement about the harm that was experienced by the person who was the victim. The judicial process is clearly one of discernment. Investigating committees discern the meaning of evidence as to whether they will bring charges against an accused. Sessions or permanent judicial commissions discern the evidence presented to them as to whether they will find guilt or innocence. If guilt is determined by a session or permanent judicial commission, it must discern the appropriate censure to impose. This amendment would make it clear that the censure hearing involves discernment by making explicit in the Rules of Discipline that statements regarding harm to the person who was the victim of the offense are permitted during a censure hearing.

This provision would function to ensure that an assessment regarding censure by a person who was harmed may be a formal part of the proceedings. This is important, because as a trial deals with the nature of the behavior of an accused person and whether that behavior is consistent with scripture and the Constitution, the determination of censure must include consideration of the consequences of that behavior. Victims have something important to say as to the consequences of abusive behavior on their lives.

The provision is worded so that in a case in which the person harmed is a minor or lacks the mental capacity to consent, a representative may speak on that person's behalf. This provision would also function to provide the session or permanent judicial commission with a more complete basis of information for its deliberations.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 04-08, RECOMMENDATION 4

Advice on Recommendation 4, Item 04-08—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 216th General Assembly (2004) to approve ICI Recommendation #4 with the following additional amendment:

Retain the original text's use of "may"; and strike "The statement shall not be subject to cross examination."

Rationale

The introduction of the concept of a hearing for the purpose of the level of censure is unwelcome and inevitably speaks of punishment. For that reason the mandatory "shall" should be deleted in favor of the use of "may."

In a similar fashion, it is unwise to allow the introduction of a victim's statement without a corollary cross-examination. The tone and style of the judicial process becomes punitive to the accused and removes from her/him important judicial protections.

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 04-08, RECOMMENDATION 4

Advice and Counsel on Item 04-08, Recommendation 4—From the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns.

Recommendation 4: Amend D-11.0403e to provide that the person directly harmed by an offense may submit a victim impact statement.

Recommendation 4 ensures that the victims' experiences be considered in the censure process. Further, it allows for a victim impact statement to be offered by the victim.

The Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns advises that Recommendation 4 be approved.

Rationale

The change proposed by Recommendation 4 gives the victim a voice. This change is necessary because it requires the voice of the victim to be part of the censure process whereby it was previously not required. Further, it provides flexible options for procedure that consider the comfort and convenience of the victim.

[The assembly approved Item 04-08, Recommendation 5. See p. 83.]

5. Shall D-13.0000 be amended as follows:

a. Shall the current text of D-13.0102 be deleted and new text inserted to read as follows:[Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italics.]

~~"Only the person found guilty may initiate the first level of appeal by the filing of a written notice of appeal. Either party may initiate the first level of appeal by the filing of a written notice of appeal."~~

b. Shall D-13.0106 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italics.]

"a. The grounds for appeal by the person found guilty are

~~"a.~~ *(1) irregularity in the proceedings;

~~"b.~~ *(2) refusing a party reasonable opportunity to be heard or to obtain or present evidence;

~~"c.~~ *(3) receiving improper, or declining to receive proper, evidence or testimony;

~~“d. (4) hastening to a decision before the evidence or testimony is fully received;~~

~~“e. (5) manifestation of prejudice in the conduct of the case;~~

~~“f. (6) injustice in the process or decision;~~

~~“g. (7) error in constitutional interpretation; and~~

~~“h. (8) undue severity of censure.~~

“b. The grounds for appeal by the prosecuting committee are

“(1) irregularity in the proceedings;

“(2) refusing a party reasonable opportunity to be heard or to obtain or present evidence;

“(3) receiving improper, or declining to receive proper evidence or testimony;

“(4) hastening a decision before the evidence or testimony is fully received;

“(5) manifestation of prejudice in the conduct of the case; and

“(6) error in constitutional interpretation.”

Rationale for Amendment 5.

[Refer to additional Rationale for Recommendations 1–11 following Recommendation 11.]

The current form of the Rules of Discipline provides that the initial right to appeal applies only to the due process rights of a party who is found guilty. Experience has shown that it is possible that prosecuting committees may suffer the effects of the above grounds for appeal in cases where the accused is found not guilty. Under the current form of the Rules of Discipline there is no recourse at the first level of a disciplinary case for the prosecuting committee if a session or permanent judicial commission commits reversible error in the process leading to finding the accused not guilty. Sadly, there have been times when permanent judicial commissions have made extra-constitutional decisions. The General Assembly in 1998 approved the following definitive guidance in response to an overture arising out of a case in which a permanent judicial commission allowed a plea of “nolo contendere” in a disciplinary case: “A plea of ‘nolo contendere’ or ‘no contest’ shall not be permitted in a disciplinary case” [Minutes, 1998, Part I, pp. 60, 159 (paragraph 16.0124), 669, (Overture 98-29)]

This amendment will ensure accountability at all levels of the disciplinary process, and that all parties have the same opportunity, in the service of justice, to appeal for the correction of errors.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 04-08, RECOMMENDATION 5

Advice on Recommendation 5, Item 04-08—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 216th General Assembly (2004) with the following comment:

This provision would allow either the prosecuting committee or an accused convicted of an offense to initiate an appeal. Currently, only an accused may initiate such an appeal. Whether such appeals are desirable raises several questions. Such appeal rights would be broader than the secular judicial system allows. It also would perpetuate disciplinary cases in a manner that may discourage victims from seeking civil remedies. On the other hand, the amendment is consistent with the concern that the potential for error is greater in a voluntary judicial process than it is in the professional secular system. If the 216th General Assembly (2004) believes that it is desirable to allow prosecuting committees to pursue such appeals, the proposed amendment appears clear and adequate to accomplish that intent.

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 04-08, RECOMMENDATION 5

Advice and Counsel on Item 04-08, Recommendation 5—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns.

Recommendation 5: Amend D-13.0000 to ensure accountability at all levels, and provide all parties the same opportunity to appeal for the correction of errors.

Recommendation 5 gives flexibility to the appeals process at the first level of appeal.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns advises that Recommendation 5 be approved.

Rationale

The proposed change gives equal accountability at all levels and is therefore more just. Current Rules of Discipline procedure allows only the accused to appeal a guilty verdict by a presbytery permanent judicial commission (PJC). Given the potential for procedural error in a presbytery PJC that may not have much experience with these issues, justice could be subverted. Opening the initial PJC decision to procedural appeals by the accuser honors both the rights of the accused and of the victim for a fair trial.

---

[In response to Item 04-08, Recommendation 6., the assembly approved an alternate resolution. See pp. 83–84.]

6. Shall G-9.0503a be amended by adding a new section to read as follows:

“(7)To make pastoral inquiry in the event that jurisdiction in a judicial proceeding is ended as a result of the death of, or renunciation of jurisdiction by, the person accused of the disciplinary offense of ‘sexual abuse of another person.’ (D-10.0401b) The inquiry shall:

“(a)not be a part of the church’s judicial proceedings;

“(b)reach a determination of truth related to the accusation and make a full report to the governing body who appointed it, including recommendations for appropriate action; and

“(c) be empowered to receive witnesses and to consider evidence.”

Rationale for Amendment 6.

[Refer to additional rationale for Recommendations 1–11 following Recommendation 11.]

The need for that pastoral inquiry by the General Assembly Council was precipitated by the death of a person accused of numerous and serious disciplinary offenses at the time of a presbytery investigating committee’s investigation.

The Book of Order states that “jurisdiction in judicial process ends when a church member renounces the jurisdiction of the church” [D-3.0106]. The practical result of this section is that if the accused renounces jurisdiction while a disciplinary proceeding is under way, either as an investigation or during a trial, the proceeding is terminated without either exonerating the individual accused or finding that the individual was guilty of the disciplinary offense. In practice, this provision is invoked when the accused dies, and results in the same practical outcome: judicial proceedings are terminated.

The untimely termination of the judicial proceeding due to lack of jurisdiction in the aforementioned case left the unwanted consequence of an unclear resolution. There was neither exoneration of the individual accused, nor a finding of guilt related to any charges and specifications. But more importantly, the truth had neither been discovered nor told. The Independent Committee of Inquiry was formed by the General Assembly Council through the Worldwide Ministries Division to provide the possibility of resolution and closure. Though there would be no disciplinary resolution, there would be resolution of the sort that truth-telling provides. The purpose of the inquiry was pastoral through-and-through, both for the accusers and other victims, and for the church.

There have been other cases in our church in which renunciation of jurisdiction by an accused person was exercised deliberately to thwart proceedings in matters of clergy sexual exploitation. There is evidence that renunciation of jurisdiction has been suggested to accused persons as an option of avoiding trial and a finding of guilt.

In matters as sensitive as the sexual abuse of children that have consequences for larger numbers of people (many of whom are members of our congregations), the abrupt termination of the church's formal judicial proceedings results in a high degree of duress and disappointment for the participants who remain in the church. When formal jurisdiction is terminated, either through death or renunciation of jurisdiction, the mission and ministry of the church can best be served by permitting a specially chartered pastoral inquiry to proceed for the sake of truth, healing, and justice.

A modern historical model for such action is the Truth and Reconciliation Commission inquiries conducted over a four-year period in South Africa. Avoiding the long-standing model of vengeance and retribution, the leaders of South Africa sought a different way, and turned to the model of truth-telling. Both victims and perpetrators found a sense of closure and redemption in the process. The church can be proud that Christians took the lead in both developing the Truth and Reconciliation Commission and participating in it.

The Independent Committee of Inquiry is a living model of how this amendment might be enacted in practice. It was given a specific charter, the components of which included: background, authorizing action, purpose, scope, the nature of the committee's work, confidentiality, membership and credentials, independence, duration, funding, responsibilities, reporting function, and communication strategy. [See the Final Report of the Independent Committee of Inquiry—Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) (September 2002), Presbyterian Distribution Service, #517002001, pp. 133–39.] The General Assembly Council's Executive Committee acted in 2000 to create a working model of an instrument of pastoral inquiry that served to further the purposes of the church of Jesus Christ. While this type of inquiry could be conducted under existing polity, this provision establishes a clear reference and purpose for proceeding. It would serve our congregations and presbyteries well to have in the Book of Order the option for proceeding in similar fashion.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 04-08, RECOMMENDATION 6

Advice on Recommendation 6, Item 04-08—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 216th General Assembly (2004) to disapprove ICI Recommendation #6.

Rationale

This proposal seeks to add to the list of tasks “ordinarily entrusted to an administrative commission” in G-9.0503a.

The proposed amendment is unnecessary because a presbytery already possesses power to conduct the type of inquiry contemplated, either through the creation of an administrative commission exercising the presbytery's powers under G-11.0103b, G-11.0103g, and G-11.0103k, or by its committee on ministry's exercise of its responsibilities under G-11.0502i.

Although the proposed amendment claims that the proposed inquiry will not be part of the church's judicial system, the result envisioned is quasi-judicial. A presbytery should make clear that such inquiry is not to be confused with a continuation of the disciplinary process.

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 04-08, RECOMMENDATION 6

Advice and Counsel on Item 04-08, Recommendation 6—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns.

Recommendation 6: Add to G-9.0503a to provide for pastoral inquiry in the event that jurisdiction in a judicial proceeding is ended.

Recommendation 6 adds a new section that provides the possibility of resolution and closure especially to victims of abuse or sexual misconduct.

The Advocacy Committee on Women’s Concerns advises that Recommendation 6 be approved.

Rationale

This proposed change is especially important in its ability to bring closure for victims when the renunciation of jurisdiction or the death of the accused person prevents a disciplinary case from coming to resolution.

Adding this language to the Book of Order offers a process for dealing with the needs of the broken community in the case of the renunciation of jurisdiction or the death of an accused person. While this process is not mandatory, the recommendation gives a starting point for the permanent judicial commission/investigative committee. It also gives constitutional voice to the need for further processing to facilitate the healing of the broken community.

“b. provide the person making the accusation with a statement of the investigating committee’s procedures;”

b. Amend D-10.0203 by adding new sections “a.” and “b.” and by adding a “c.” to the current text so that it shall read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“Rights of the ~~Person Accused~~ Persons [Editor’s Note: Captions in the Book of Order are not constitutional language. “c. At the beginning of each and every conference ...”

Rationale for Amendment 7.

[Refer to additional rationale for Recommendations 1–11 following Recommendation 11.]

The idea for this particular amendment came from a former missionary child who proposed ways to improve the church’s response following occurrences of abuse, particularly the church’s response to those who were victims.

Ecclesiastical proceedings that are governed by the Rules of Discipline are typically complex and stressful, involve parties with conflicting points of view and contrasting needs, and utilize portions of the church's polity that are unfamiliar to most Presbyterians and certainly to non-Presbyterians. In disciplinary cases involving the offense of "sexual abuse of another person" (D-10.0401b), the complexity and stress of the proceedings are intensified. It would be particularly helpful to people in these cases for the investigating committee to provide a statement of the procedures it will follow. While a stated clerk may provide information regarding the process of disciplinary cases, only a particular investigating committee is in a position to inform an accuser/victim of the process it will follow. The first portion of this amendment will make such information part of the duties of an investigating committee.

The first basis for the second part of this amendment arises from the church's experience in disciplinary cases. There have been instances in which the person on whose behalf an accusation was made, and who was the self-identified victim, was not a Presbyterian, and therefore was not familiar with the details and nuances of Presbyterian polity in general, nor the Rules of Discipline in particular. There have been instances in which, at the time of the accusation, the identified victim was a child or minor, and therefore lacked the capacity to be familiar with Presbyterian polity and the Rules of Discipline. In such situations, the person making the accusation and/or serving as a witness faces the additional duress of being alone, unrepresented, and uninformed while participating in the proceedings. The uncertainty and duress for the person in the accuser's/victim's role is magnified by a lack of fundamental information about Presbyterian polity. While some presbyteries' sexual misconduct policies have provided a support team or an advocate for the person who was alleged to have been harmed by the offense, those measures do not arise to the role of a designated advocate who may be present in conferences with the investigating committee, the prosecuting committee, and the session or permanent judicial commission.

The second basis is a matter of fairness and consistency. The person accused in a disciplinary case is entitled to counsel as a basic due process right. This serves the practical purpose of advice and a means of support throughout the entire sequence of disciplinary proceedings: at every conference with an investigating committee (D-10.0203), at the pretrial conference (D-10.0405), at trial (D-11.0301), and at a censure hearing (D-11.0403e). In practice, the person accused typically exercises this right and utilizes counsel soon after being notified of the accusation (D-10.0202a). The person who is identified as the one who was alleged to have been harmed in a case of "sexual abuse of another person" is not entitled by the Book of Order to a source of advice, polity consultation, or support. The role of that person in a disciplinary case is that of a witness. The role of witness is not regarded by the Rules of Discipline as a principal party in the case; only the investigating/prosecuting committee on behalf of its governing body and the person accused are identified as principal parties (D-11.0301). Only principal parties are entitled to counsel and support. Fairness and consistency would extend an advocate to the person who makes the accusation and/or is the person identified as the one alleged to have been harmed by the offense.

Provision of an advocate to that person from the outset and throughout all proceedings would function to express the commitment of the Book of Order to achieve justice and compassion for all primary participants.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 04-08, RECOMMENDATION 7

Advice on Recommendation 7, Item 04-08—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC) advises the 216th General Assembly (2004) to approve ICI Recommendation #7 with the following amendment:

In the proposed D-10.0203a second line, strike "with" and insert "between the person making the accusation and". The proposed paragraph would then read as follows: [Text to be deleted from the recommendation is shown with a strike-through and with brackets; text to be added to the recommendation is shown with an underline and with brackets.]

"D-10.0203a. The investigating committee shall inform the person making the accusation of the right to be accompanied by an advocate at each and every conference ~~with~~ between the person making the accusation and the investigating committee, the prosecuting committee, and the session or permanent judicial commission. The role of the advocate is to provide support and consultation."

Rationale

The proposed amendment limits the responsibilities of the advocate to providing support and consultation.

The ACC notes that it is possible that the presence of such an advocate may make the investigation more difficult. For example, if the advocate interferes with the investigating committee's attempts to probe the veracity of an accuser's account of events, the prosecution may ultimately be weakened or prevented by inability of the committee to gauge whether it can effectively prosecute the alleged offense. In considering the advisability of this proposed amendment, the ACC advises the 216th General Assembly (2004) to carefully balance these competing concerns.

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 04-08, RECOMMENDATION 7

Advice and Counsel on Item 04-08, Recommendation 7—From the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns.

Recommendation 7: Amend D-10.000 to provide at the outset and throughout the proceedings for an advocate for the person making the accusation.

Recommendation 7 amends D-10.000 allowing for a statement of procedures of the investigative process to be given to the victim and also for that person to have an advocate.

The Advocacy Committee on Women's Concerns advises that Recommendation 7 be approved.

Rationale

This proposed change is important as a means of providing clearer standards of communication thus greater protection for the victim.

In any process that is accountable to the interests of multiple parties, the interest of the victim can never be the final priority of anyone involved but the victim. Further, victims who do not know the process, who are suffering from posttraumatic stress, or are not capable of fully understanding the nuances of the process need an advocate that has as primary responsibility the interest of the victim.

[In response to Item 04-08, Recommendation 8., the assembly approved an alternate resolution. See pp. 84–85.]

8. Shall the following sections be amended:

a. Amend D-12.0103 by adding a new section to read as follows:

“d. In a case in which the offense is sexual abuse of another person, the rehabilitation program may include the advice that the person found guilty complete a voluntary act or acts of restitution as a form of repentance. Restitution may include: community service, symbolic restoration of what was lost by the person who was harmed, and/or contributions toward documented medical/psychological expenses incurred by the person who was harmed.”

b. Amend D-12.0104 by adding a new section to read as follows:

“c. In a case in which the offense is sexual abuse of another person, the rehabilitation program may include the advice that the person found guilty complete a voluntary act or acts of restitution as a form of repentance. Restitution may include: community service, symbolic restoration of what was lost by the person harmed, and/or contributions toward documented medical/psychological expenses incurred by the person who was harmed.”

Rationale for Amendment 8.

[Refer to additional rationale for Recommendations 1–11 following Recommendation 11.]

The concept of restitution was presented by the survivors as a means of restoration and healing for those who have been harmed as children by sexual abuse that occurred through the misuse of ministerial office.

The Preamble to the Rules of Discipline makes explicit that a purpose of discipline in the church is “to correct or restrain wrongdoing in order to bring members to repentance [or] restoration” (D-1.0101). This high calling is reinforced by the Preamble’s declaration that power in the exercise of church discipline “is one for building up the body of Christ, not for destroying it, for redeeming, not for punishing” (D-1.0102).

Subsequent to the language of the Preamble, the context in polity for this amendment is the rehabilitative best interests of a person who has been found guilty by the church’s disciplinary proceedings. The rehabilitative program is consistent with the Preamble’s intended outcomes of repentance and restoration, of building up and redeeming.

After cases involving the offense of “sexual abuse of another person” (D-10.0401b), numerous committees on ministry are assigned the responsibility of supervising ministers of Word and Sacrament whose censure entails supervised programs of rehabilitation. However, supervision can be challenging because of the difficulty of assessing the authenticity of offenders’ verbal expressions of remorse and determining whether those are sufficient demonstrations of repentance.

The biblical model of Zacchaeus’ response to his encounter with Jesus at Jericho (Luke 19:1–10) is instructive. Zacchaeus’ repentance is expressed by his freely acknowledging his sin and by assuming corrective action. This Scripture makes clear that repentance can include voluntary restitution as an outward expression of inner change.

This amendment utilizes several qualifying terms so that this amendment is consistent with G-1.0307, one of the historic principles of church order, that church power is “ministerial and declarative.” The term “advice” is used rather than terms that would require or mandate. The terms “may” rather than “shall” and “voluntary” rather than “required” are used to indicate the church’s moral exhortation to the offender. To interpret this amendment as a means of punishment or retribution is to misunderstand its intent as an instrument to encourage repentance and thus serve the rehabilitative interests of the offender. This amendment constructively promotes acceptance of responsibility and productive change.

While secular culture may define restitution exclusively in financial terms, the church as the body of Christ recognizes that the spiritual nature of repentance leads to a broader understanding of the nature of acts of restitution. Therefore, this amendment enumerates types of restitution that are nonfinancial but may nevertheless be concrete demonstrations of repentance.

By faith, confession of sin is a step in the journey toward redemption. By faith, restitution may be another step in the journey toward repentance.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 04-08, RECOMMENDATION 8

Advice on Recommendation 8, Item 04-08—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC) advises the 216th General Assembly (2004) to approve ICI Recommendation #8 with the following amendments:

In proposed D-12.0103d and in proposed D-12.0104c strike “restitution as a form of repentance. Restitution may include” and insert “repentance. Such acts may include: public acknowledgement of guilt,” so the paragraphs will read as follows: [Text to be deleted from the recommendation is shown with a strike-through and with brackets; text to be added to the recommendation is shown with a underline and with brackets.]

“In a case in which the offense is sexual abuse of another person, the rehabilitation program may include the advice that the person found guilty complete a voluntary act or acts of repentance. [~~restitution as a form of repentance. Restitution may include:~~] [Such acts may include: public acknowledgement of guilt,] community service, symbolic restoration of what was lost by the person who was harmed, and/or contributions toward documented medical/psychological expenses incurred by the person who was harmed.”

And redesignate D-12.0104 paragraphs “c.–h.” as paragraphs “d.–i.”

Rationale

Restitution to victims is almost always available through secular judicial process, but is beyond the authority of church courts, whose discipline is “purely moral or spiritual in its object, and not attended with any civil effects” (G-1.0308). Further, it is difficult to see how the church courts, as a system of volunteers with relatively minimal training, are better equipped to handle such issues than are secular courts. Moreover, the victim would have limited standing in church judicial proceedings, as compared to secular courts, to prove the damage he or she has suffered. Although the original wording of the proposed amendment makes restitution possible, concerns remain that such actions not be seen as a substitute for the victim’s right to seek civil redress and damages.

With the amendments above, the overture is clear and does not exceed the limits of the church’s authority.

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 04-08, RECOMMENDATION 8

Advice and Counsel on Item 04-08, Recommendation 8—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns.

Recommendation 8: Amend D-12.0103 and D-12.0104 by adding sections to provide for restitution, and provide suggested means of restitution.

Recommendation 8 adds two new sections to D-12, proposing a process whereby a rehabilitation program may involve a voluntary act or acts of restitution as a form of repentance.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns advises that Recommendation 8 be approved.

Rationale

The proposed change provides restitution as an additional way to assist in closure for the person found guilty and for the person who was sexually abused. The variety of options offered honors the many ways in which work towards wholeness in the community and in the individual may be lived out.

---

[The assembly approved Item 04-08, Recommendation 9. See p. 85.]

9. Shall D-10.0202g be amended by adding a new section “(3)” and renumbering the succeeding items in the section. New section “(3)” shall read as follows:

“(3) The session or permanent judicial commission shall convene to receive the settlement agreement; vote to approve it by at least two-thirds of the members eligible to vote; make a record of its proceedings according to the provisions of D-11.0601d, including the name of the accused, the substance of the accusation or charge, and censure; and transmit its decision to the clerk of session or the stated clerk, who shall report it according to the provisions of D-11.0701.

Rationale for Amendment 9.

[Refer to additional rationale for Recommendations 1–11 following Recommendation 11.]

Secrecy about the commission of sexual misconduct within the church puts others at risk for new harm. Secrecy undermines the safety of the church as a place and community in which people are safe and may trust others to act responsibly with care. Secrecy resists the movement of God's Spirit, who works for healing and justice.

The intent of this amendment is to ensure that the church's commitment to truthfulness as expressed in the disclosure provisions of a disciplinary trial (D-11.0701) are also expressed in disciplinary proceedings that utilize alternative forms of resolution to reach settlement agreements (D-10.0202g). Since the introduction of the provisions for alternative forms of resolution into the Book of Order, there is an increasing utilization of nondisclosure clauses in settlement agreements. In some instances, such nondisclosure agreements have resulted in the sealing of records. This practice is contrary to the provisions of D-11.0000 that result in the disclosure of the results of disciplinary case proceedings.

The provisions of this proposed amendment can be implemented with the same attention to sensitive information that is the standard of practice for disclosure of the outcome of disciplinary case trials.

This amendment is consistent with the action of the 214th General Assembly (2002) in approving Commissioner's Resolution 02-20. On Openness in Cases of Sexual Misconduct with Children, a resolution that was endorsed by the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns and the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy. (See Minutes, 2002, Part I, pp. 318–20.)

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 04-08, RECOMMENDATION 9

Advice on Recommendation 9, Item 04-08—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 216th General Assembly (2004) to approve this recommendation.

Rationale

This amendment provides useful clarification of the process for approving the settlement of charges. It would clarify the requirement of recording any alternative form of resolution in formal action and of a report by the session or permanent judicial commission. Such clarification would prevent attempts to keep settlements secret.

---

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 04-08, RECOMMENDATION 9

Advice and Counsel on Item 04-08, Recommendation 9—From the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns.

Recommendation 9: Amend D-10.0202g to ensure that the church's commitment to truthfulness is also expressed in proceedings that utilize alternative forms of resolution.

Recommendation 9 adds a new section that seeks to ensure that the church's commitment to truthfulness as expressed in the disclosure provisions of a disciplinary trial also are expressed in disciplinary proceedings that utilize alternative forms of resolution to reach settlement agreements.

The Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns advises that Recommendation 9 be approved.

Rationale

Recommendation 9 aids in providing clearer standards of communication in the church and therefore assists in preventing secrecy from dominating sexual abuse and sexual abuse and misconduct cases. Disclosure strengthens the ability of the church to provide greater safety and protection to the vulnerable members of the community.

---

[The assembly disapproved Item 04-08, Recommendation 10. See p. 85.]

10. Shall D-12.0105 be amended by adding a new section "e." and re-lettering the current section "e." as "f." New section "e." shall read as follows:

“e. A person who is removed from the office of minister of the Word and Sacrament who had been granted the status of ‘Honorably Retired’ shall be designated as ‘Retired’ and shall not be permitted to use the title ‘Honorably Retired.’”

Rationale for Amendment 10.

[Refer to additional rationale for Recommendations 1–11 following Recommendation 11.]

The strong recommendation of those who were survivors of sexual abuse was that the term “Honorably Retired” should not be retained by a minister of the Word and Sacrament who, after retirement, was found to have disgraced the office by acts of sexual abuse.

Removal from office in the case of a minister who is retired does not affect the minister’s right to continue to receive retirement benefits or health coverage from the Board of Pensions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). Loss of the use of the term “Honorably” as a consequence of removal from office is a symbolic act that expresses the church’s assessment of the serious nature of the offense that has been committed. Such a consequence is a tangible way to differentiate an offender from that person’s colleagues who are or will be retired, who continue in good standing as members of a presbytery, and who continue to deserve the honorific designation. For victims of sexual abuse, such a consequence of removal from office serves as a powerful voice of the church that such offenses are wrong and go to the core of the fiduciary trust inherent in the office of minister of the Word and Sacrament.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 04-08, RECOMMENDATION 10

Advice on Recommendation 10, Item 04-08—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 216th General Assembly (2004) to disapprove this amendment.

Rationale

The proposed amendment is unnecessary. A person permanently removed from the office of minister of the Word and Sacrament or from membership in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) thereby automatically forfeits the use of the title “honorably retired,” “minister,” and “reverend.”

---

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 04-08, RECOMMENDATION 10

Advice and Counsel on Item 04-08, Recommendation 10—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns.

Recommendation 10: Amend D-12.0105 to remove the word “honorably” from retired minister of the Word and Sacrament who were found to have committed acts of sexual abuse.

Recommendation 10 adds a new section that addresses cases involving a person removed from the office of minister of the Word and Sacrament who had been granted the status of Honorably Retired. Loss of the term “honorably” is a consequence.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns advises that Recommendation 10 be approved.

Rationale

The change proposed by Recommendation 10 aids in the healing process of survivors of sexual abuse. The symbolic act of removing an “honorably” title from retired pastors, who committed acts of sexual abuse, affirms the grievous nature of these acts thus supporting the survivors.

[In response to Item 04-08, Recommendation 11., the assembly approved an alternate resolution. See p. 85.]

11. Shall G-6.0000 be amended as follows:

a. Shall G-6.0204 be amended by adding an “a.” to the existing text and adding a new section “b.” to read as follows:

“a. In the exercise of pastoral care, ministers of the Word and Sacrament shall maintain a relationship of trust and confidentiality, and shall hold in confidence all information revealed to them in the course of providing such care and all information relating to the exercise of such care. When the person whose confidences are at issue gives express consent to reveal confidential information, then a minister of the Word and Sacrament may, but cannot be compelled to, reveal confidential information. A minister of the Word and Sacrament may reveal confidential information when she or he reasonably believes that there is risk of imminent bodily harm to any person.

“b. A minister of the Word and Sacrament shall report to civil legal authorities knowledge of harm, or the risk of harm, related to the physical abuse, neglect, and/or sexual molestation or abuse of a child or an adult who lacks mental capacity when (1) such information is gained outside of privileged communication specifically protected by civil law; or (2) she or he reasonably believes that there is risk of future physical harm or abuse.”

b. Shall G-6.0304 be amended by adding an “a.” to the existing text and adding a new section “b.” to read as follows:

“a. It is the duty of elders, individually and jointly, to strengthen and nurture the faith and life of the congregation committed to their charge. Together with the pastor, they should encourage the people in the worship and service of God, equip and renew them for their tasks within the church and for their mission in the world, visit and comfort and care for the people, with special attention to the poor, the sick, the lonely, and those who are oppressed. They should inform the pastor and session of those persons and structures which may need special attention. They should assist in worship. (See W-1.4003, W-2.3011B.3012, W-3.1003, W-3.3616, and W-4.4003.) They should cultivate their ability to teach the Bible and may be authorized to supply places which are without the regular ministry of the Word and Sacrament. In specific circumstances and with proper instruction, specific elders may be authorized by the presbytery to administer the Lord’s Supper in accord with G-11.0103z. Those duties which all Christians are bound to perform by the law of love are especially incumbent upon elders because of their calling to office and are to be fulfilled by them as official responsibilities.

“b. An elder shall report to civil legal authorities knowledge of harm, or the risk of harm, related to the physical abuse, neglect, and/or sexual abuse of a child or an adult who lacks mental capacity when (1) such information is gained outside of privileged communication specifically protected by civil law; or (2) she or he reasonably believes that there is risk of future physical harm or abuse.”

c. Shall G-6.0402 be amended by adding an “a.” to the existing text and adding a new section “b.” to read as follows:

“a. It is the duty of deacons, first of all, to minister to those who are in need, to the sick, to the friendless, and to any who may be in distress both within and beyond the community of faith.<sup>m</sup> They shall assume such other duties as may be delegated to them from time to time by the session, such as leading the people in worship through prayers of intercession, reading the Scriptures, presenting the gifts of the people,<sup>n</sup> and assisting with the Lord’s Supper. (See W-3.3616.)

“b. A deacon shall report to civil legal authorities knowledge of harm, or the risk of harm, related to the physical abuse, neglect, and/or sexual abuse of a child or an adult who lacks mental capacity when (1) such information is gained outside of privileged communication specifically protected by civil law; or (2) she or he reasonably believes that there is risk of future physical harm or abuse.”

Rational for Amendment 11.

[Refer to additional rationale for Recommendations 1–11 following Recommendation 11.]

The basis for this amendment was comments by participants in the inquiry who advocated for a standard of practice within our church that was weighted toward a principle of protecting children from sexual abuse in contrast to a principle of preserving confidentiality.

It is a long-standing principle of confidentiality that confidentiality is automatically waived when a person is in danger of doing harm to oneself, or of doing harm to another person. Laws regarding mandated reporting of physical abuse or sexual harm against minors and adults without capacity vary from state to state. Clergy, for example are not consistently included in state lists of mandated reporters. Enactment of this amendment would have both symbolic and practical value by demonstrating a commitment to the well-being of those who are vulnerable and those who trust the people of Jesus Christ to care with their actions as well as their words (Jas. 1:22, 2:18). For the church to establish a standard of practice on this matter for its ministers of Word and Sacrament, elders, and deacons is an affirmative and constructive act.

Elders and deacons are included in this amendment because it is not sufficient that a standard of practice that protects children and vulnerable adults be applied only to ministers of Word and Sacrament. Our Reformed tradition emphasizes the ministry of all believers, and our Presbyterian polity assigns significant responsibilities among the people of God to the offices of elders and deacons. Because of shared governance between ministers, elders, and deacons, it is crucial that this standard apply to all ordained officers.

This amendment recognizes that some elders and deacons may receive information in the performance of their professional role and that would not be abrogated by these standards, for example physician/patient privilege and attorney/client privilege.

The church depends on congregations in which an atmosphere of trust and interdependence serves the commitment to mission and ministry in the name of Jesus Christ. When leaders of congregations exercise responsible confidentiality regarding sensitive personal information, trust is reinforced and interdependence nurtured. However, withholding knowledge that may result in the perpetuation of conditions of abuse or the infliction of harm on vulnerable people will eventually destroy the bonds that form the foundation for healthy congregations. There have been several recent instances in our denomination in which failure to report to civil authorities, or procrastination in doing so, has led to great conflict and difficulty in congregations. This amendment expresses the moral position that honoring the need to protect children and adults who lack mental capacity outweighs the risk of breaking confidential knowledge about imminent risk of harm to those vulnerable persons. In our society, civil legal authorities are the proper vehicle to assess the veracity of claims of abuse and neglect, and to intervene when such intervention is warranted.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 04-08, RECOMMENDATION 11

Advice on Recommendation 11, Item 04-08—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 216th General Assembly (2004) to approve the proposal as amended in the following manner: [Text to be deleted from the recommendation is shown with a strike-through and with brackets; text to be added or inserted to the recommendation is shown with an underline and with brackets.]

a. Amendment to G-6.0204b

“b A minister of the Word and Sacrament shall report to civil legal authorities knowledge of harm, or the risk of harm, related to the physical abuse, neglect, and/or sexual molestation or abuse of a child or an adult who lacks mental capacity when (1) such information is gained outside of a [confidential communication as defined in G-6.0204a] [~~privileged communication specifically protected by civil law~~]; or (2) she or he reasonably believes that there is risk of future physical harm or abuse.

b. Amendment to G-6.0304b

“b. An elder shall report to civil legal authorities knowledge[ gained in the course of service to the church,] of harm, or the risk of harm, related to the physical abuse, neglect, and/or sexual abuse of a child or an adult who lacks mental capacity when (1) such information is gained outside of privileged communication, [~~specifically protected by civil law~~]; or (2) she or he reasonably believes that there is risk of future physical harm or abuse.”

c. Amendment to G-6.0402b

“b. A deacon shall report to civil legal authorities knowledge[ gained in the course of service to the church,] of harm, or the risk of harm, related to the physical abuse, neglect, and/or sexual abuse of a child or an adult who lacks mental capacity when (1) such information is gained outside of privileged communication [~~specifically protected by civil law~~]; or (2) she or he reasonably believes that there is risk of future physical harm or abuse.”

Rationale

As written, the proposed amendment would empower the state to determine what confessional privilege it will recognize for officers of the church. Such an approach is fundamentally at odds with the historic understanding of the church regarding the importance of confidentiality in the confessional context, as well as the principle of separation of church and state. The Presbyterian church historically has affirmed the importance of clergy confidentiality. In 1981, the General Assembly of the United Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A. reaffirmed the position that all ministers under its jurisdiction have a “spiritual and professional duty to hold in confidence all matters revealed to them in their counseling ministry, and that being called to testify in a court of law does not negate this sacred obligation, the law of God being prior to the laws of the human courts” (Minutes, UPCUSA, 1981, Part I, p. 539). In the same year, the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the U.S. affirmed, “that a minister is under an obligation not to reveal communications given to [the minister] in confidence without the authority of the person revealing the confidence” (Minutes, PCUS, 1981, Part I, p. 105).

The revisions proposed by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution are intended to remove from the proposed amendment the power of the state to determine when officers of the church have an obligation of confidentiality. Since the proposal still obligates reporting whenever the officer “reasonably believes that there is risk of future physical harm or abuse,” the concerns underlying the proposed amendment are addressed without compromising the separation of church and state or the confessional privilege.

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 04-08, RECOMMENDATION 11

Advice and Counsel on Item 04-08, Recommendation 11—From Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns.

Recommendation 11: Amending G-6.0000 to provide for mandated reporting to civil authorities knowledge of physical abuse or sexual harm against minors and adults who lack mental capacity.

Recommendation 11 is designed to give the greater value to protecting children from sexual abuse versus the value of preserving confidentiality regarding handling information and reporting to civil legal authorities knowledge of harm.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns advises that Recommendation 11 be approved.

Rationale

The change proposed by Recommendation 11 provides greater protection to the victim and potential victims by reporting to civil authorities imminent risk of harm to children and to adults who lack mental capacity to defend themselves.

---

Rationale for Amendments 1.–11.

In October 2000, the General Assembly Council of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) appointed an Independent Committee of Inquiry to explore allegations of sexual abuse of minor children at a missionary boarding school in the Congo. Among its findings, the Independent Committee of Inquiry found that fifty-one incidents of sexual abuse had been committed in the period of 1945–1985 by mission personnel against twenty-two children and adolescents, and three adults, most of whom were under the aegis of the American Presbyterian Congo Mission of the former Presbyterian Church in the United States (PCUS).

The background to these amendments is the Final Report of the Independent Committee of Inquiry—Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) (September 2002), Presbyterian Distribution Service, #517002001. Inquiry participants (most notably the victims) were invited to propose recommendations to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) regarding (1) prevention of such acts in the future, (2) accountability within the Rules of Discipline, and (3) changes and provisions that would provide for healing for the victims.

Item 04-09

[The assembly answered Item 04-09 by the action taken on Item 04-08, Recommendation 11., of this report. See p. 85.]

On Adding New Sections G-6.0204b, G-6.0304b, and G-6.0402b Regarding Reporting Requirements of Child Abuse, in Response to the General Assembly Independent Committee of Inquiry—From the Presbytery of Grace.

The Presbytery of Grace overtures the 216th General Assembly (2004) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendments to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

1. Shall G-6.0204 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“a. In the exercise of pastoral care, ministers of the Word and Sacrament shall maintain a relationship of trust and confidentiality, and shall hold in confidence all information revealed to them in the course of providing such care and all information relating to the exercise of such care. When the person whose confidences are at issue gives express consent to reveal confidential information, then a minister of the Word and Sacrament may, but cannot be compelled to, reveal confidential information. A minister of the Word and Sacrament ~~may~~ shall reveal confidential information when she or he reasonably believes that there is risk of imminent bodily harm to any person.

“b. Notwithstanding the intent and language of G-6.0204a, if a minister of the Word and Sacrament should receive knowledge of child physical or sexual abuse, she or he shall report this information to both ecclesiastical and civil authorities, regardless of the current civil law requirement.”

2. Shall G-6.0304 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“a. It is the duty of elders, individually and jointly, to strengthen and nurture the faith and life of the congregation committed to their charge. [The rest of the paragraph remains unchanged.]

“b. If, in service to the church, an elder should receive knowledge of child physical or sexual abuse, she or he shall report this information to both ecclesiastical and civil authorities, regardless of the current civil law requirement.”

3. Shall G-6.0402 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“a. It is the duty of deacons, first of all, to minister to those who are in need, to the sick, to the friendless, and to any who may be in distress both within and beyond the community of faith. [The rest of the paragraph remains unchanged.]

“b. If, in service to the church, a deacon should receive knowledge of child physical or sexual abuse, she or he shall report this information to both ecclesiastical and civil authorities, regardless of the current civil law requirement.”

Rationale

This request for an amendment to the Book of Order comes about in response to the General Assembly Independent Committee of Inquiry following allegations of repeated abuse of individuals by officers of the church that were subsequently never reported to civil authorities.

The amendments are submitted for inclusion in the Book of Order since the legitimate claims of government “. . . to establish justice . . . [and] promote the general welfare” should be supported by the church and are reinforced by the teaching of Paul (Romans 13:1–7) and by our Book of Confessions (The Confession of 1967 [9.25], the Heidelberg Catechism [Questions 101, 104, and 110], the Second Helvetic Confession [Chapter XXX, especially 5.258], the Scots Confession [Chapter XXIV], and the Westminster Confession of Faith [Chapter XXV]).

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 04-09

Advice on Item 04-09—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 216th General Assembly (2004) to answer Item 04-09 by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution’s suggested response to Item 04-08 (Recommendation 11).

GAC COMMENT ON ITEM 04-09

Advice on Item 04-09—From the General Assembly Council.

The General Assembly Council urges that Item 04-09 be disapproved and instead the commissioners approve “Item 04-08” that comes from the eleventh recommendation of the Independent Committee of Inquiry Work Group. Item 04-08 answers Grace Presbytery’s very important concern in a preferable way, as explained below:

The intent of Item 04-09 is to mandate civil reporting when an officer of the PC(USA) receives knowledge of child physical and/or sexual abuse.

The GAC commends the intent to require PC(USA) officers to report to civil authorities when that officer has knowledge of child physical or sexual abuse. However, the GAC has suggested an alternative response to this issue in Item 04-08, GAC Recommendation 11 from the ICI Work Group. The GAC recommended changes to G-6.0204, G-6.0304, and G-6.0402 differ from the overture in two ways.

First, GAC recommends that the provisions include neglect and/or sexual molestation as mandated triggers for reporting.

Second, GAC suggests that the mandate take into account that civil law may actually require a confidential relationship. For instance, if the officer is an attorney-at-law and receives the information in the context of legal representation and also while in the service to the church, Item 04-09 has the potential to place that officer of the church in a conflict of interest between their duties to the church and to the civil government (through the person who is being represented).

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 04-09

Advice and Counsel on Item 04-09—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns.

Item 04-09 asks the 216th General Assembly (2004) to direct the Stated Clerk to send three amendments to the presbyteries regarding reporting requirements of child abuse and adding new sections G-6.0204b, G-6.0304b, and G-6.0402b to the Book of Order.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns recommends that Item 04-09 be answered by the action taken on Item 04-08, Recommendation 11.

Rationale

The Independent Committee of Inquiry that was appointed by the 212th General Assembly (2000) has submitted proposed amendments to G-60000 that address the concerns of Item 04-09 in more clear and precise language. Those proposed amendments are the result of the thorough “Final Report of the Independent Committee of Inquiry”—Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) (September 2002).

Item 04-10

[In response to Item 04-10, the assembly approved an alternate resolution. See pp. 85–86.]

On Adding Section D-10.0106 to Provide for Administrative Leave in Case of Alleged Child Abuse by Clergy—From the Presbytery of Baltimore.

The Presbytery of Baltimore overtures the 216th General Assembly (2004) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Shall a new section, D-10.0106, be added to the Rules of Discipline (or, if Proposed Amendment 03-G is added to the Book of Order, that section be amended) to read as follows:

“D-10.0106 Administrative Leave When Allegations of Sexual Abuse Submitted

“When a written statement of an alleged offense of sexual abuse toward any person under the age of eighteen, or who it is alleged lacked the mental capacity to consent, has been received against a minister of the Word and Sacrament, the stated clerk receiving the allegation shall immediately communicate the allegation to the permanent judicial commission which shall within three days designate two members to determine whether the accused shall be placed on a paid or unpaid administrative leave during the resolution of the matter. While administrative leave is in effect, a minister or other employee may not perform any pastoral, administrative, educational, or supervisory duties, and may not officiate at any functions such as Baptism, funerals, or weddings.

“a. The designated members of the permanent judicial commission, after giving the accused the opportunity to be heard, shall determine whether the risk to the congregation and to potential victims of abuse, when considered in light of the nature and probable truth of the allegations, requires administrative leave or other restrictions upon the minister’s service. Such administrative leave or restrictions will continue until resolution of the matter in one of the ways prescribed in the Rules of Discipline or the leave or restrictions are altered or removed by the designated members of the commission.

“b. If the designated members of the commission determine that no administrative leave or restriction is required, the investigating committee appointed to investigate the allegations shall be free at any point in its investigation to present additional evidence to the designated members supporting the imposition of administrative leave or other restrictions.”

Rationale

The proposed Book of Order Amendment 03-6 provides no flexibility to a presbytery in requiring administrative leave, and therefore is subject to the possibility of grave abuse. On the other hand, the present Book of Order provides no means of taking the important step of requiring administrative leave in cases where it is clearly called for. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC), in its report to the 215th General Assembly (2003) (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 327–28), suggested an alternate procedure, which is proposed by this overture, with minor changes including using some of the wording of Proposed Amendment 03-G. It presents a reasonable middle ground between never being able to impose administrative leave and always having to impose administrative leave. The ACC provided the following rationale:

Issues of sexual abuse must always be of great concern in our covenant community. Recent allegations of sexual abuse in other denominations and within our own have heightened the sensitivity to this issue throughout our denomination. On the other hand, our denomination has a long history of affording its officers due process before decisions restricting or removing officers from the exercise of ordained office. False accusations of sexual abuse, particularly if given the appearance of being validated by a governing body by placement of the accused on administrative leave, can irreparably damage the reputation of the accused and deprive the church of that person's gifts for ministry. Current concern over the legal risk and moral obligation of congregations and governing bodies when faced with allegations of sexual abuse place these values in increased tension.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution believes that amending the current provisions of D-10.0100 to provide a process that balances these competing concerns is advisable. (Ibid., p. 328)

The Presbytery of Baltimore agrees with this and urges the 216th General Assembly (2004) to so act.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 04-10

Advice on Item 04-10—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 216th General Assembly (2004) to approve Item 04-10 with the following amendments: [Text to be deleted from the proposed amendment is shown with a strike-through and with brackets; text to be added to the proposed amendment is shown with an underline and with brackets.]

“D-10.0106 Administrative Leave When Allegations of Sexual Abuse Submitted

“When a written statement of an alleged offense of sexual abuse toward any person under the age of eighteen, or who it is alleged lacked the mental capacity to consent, has been received against a minister of the Word and Sacrament, the stated clerk receiving the allegation shall immediately communicate the allegation to the permanent judicial commission. [The moderator of the permanent judicial commission] ~~[which]~~ shall within three days designate two members~~[, who may be from the roster of former members of the permanent judicial commission.]~~ to determine whether the accused shall be placed on a paid or unpaid administrative leave during the resolution of the matter. While administrative leave is in effect, a minister or other employee may not perform any pastoral, administrative, educational, or supervisory duties, and may not officiate at any functions such as Baptism, funerals, or weddings.

“a. The designated members of the permanent judicial commission, after giving the accused the opportunity to be heard, shall determine whether the risk to the congregation and to potential victims of abuse, when considered in light of the nature and probable truth of the allegations, requires administrative leave or other restrictions upon the minister's service. Such administrative leave or restrictions will continue until resolution of the matter in one of the ways prescribed in the Rules of Discipline or the leave or restrictions are altered or removed by the designated members of the commission.

“b. If the designated members of the commission determine that no administrative leave or restriction is required, the investigating committee appointed to investigate the allegations shall be free at any point in its investigation to present additional evidence to the designated members supporting the imposition of administrative leave or other restrictions.”

Rationale

1. Overview

Issues of sexual misconduct must always be of great concern in our covenant community. Recent allegations of sexual misconduct in other denominations and the work of the ICI, as well as other incidents, within our own denomination have focused our denomination on the importance of this issue. On the other hand, our denomination has a long history of affording its officers due process before decisions restricting or removing officers from the exercise of ordained office. False accusations of sexual misconduct, particularly if given the appearance of being validated by a governing body by placement of the accused on a leave of absence, can irreparably damage the reputation of the accused and deprive the church of that person's gifts for ministry.

The 215th General Assembly (2003) sought to address the current lack of a constitutional avenue for placing a pastor on a leave of absence when an allegation of sexual misconduct with a minor or person lacking the capacity to consent is made. Proposed amendment 03-G would have amended the Rules of Discipline to add a new section D-10.0106 to place a pastor on leave of absence automatically upon receipt of an allegation of sexual misconduct involving a minor or person lacking the capacity to consent. This proposed approach to creating a mechanism for placing a pastor on a leave of absence appears to have been rejected by the presbyteries. The 215th General Assembly (2003) also recommended that all presbyteries amend the terms of call of the pastors within their bounds to provide that in the event of an allegation of sexual misconduct with a minor or person lacking the ability to consent, the presbytery's committee on ministry would have the authority to place a pastor on a leave of absence after affording the pastor the opportunity to be heard.

Item 04-08 (Recommendations 1 and 2), Item 04-10, and Item 04-11 offer several different, sometimes overlapping, approaches for addressing the current lack of constitutional provision for placing a pastor on administrative leave. Because these items raise differing approaches to address the same issue, consideration of the various proposals together is appropriate.

2. Issues Raised by Leaves of Absences in the Face of Allegations of Misconduct

Underlying all of the proposals for creating a mechanism allowing a pastor to be placed on a leave of absence are a number of common issues, which the Advisory Committee on the Constitution urges the 216th General Assembly (2004) to consider as it weighs each of the options presented:

- a. What process is due the accused before a leave of absence is imposed?
- b. Who should implement the process?
- c. What other parties, if any, should be involved in the process?
- d. What types of allegations should trigger the process of determining whether to place a pastor on a leave of absence?
- e. What timeline should apply to determining whether to place the pastor on a leave of absence?
- f. Whether a pastor placed on leave should be compensated, and if so, by whom?

3. The Proposals Before the Assembly

The 216th General Assembly (2004) has before it four different, but not necessarily mutually exclusive, proposals for creating a mechanism for placing a pastor on a leave of absence.

- a. The ICI's proposed amendment to G-11.0103o (Item 04-08, Recommendation 1) seeks to allow a presbytery not only to dissolve a pastoral relationship, but also to modify its terms, "at the request of one or both of the parties, or when it finds that the church's mission under the Word imperatively demands it." This proposed amendment does not identify which body in the presbytery would be charged with modifying the terms of call, but under existing interpretations of G-11.0103o, the action could only be taken by the presbytery itself or by an administrative commission appointed by it. See General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission Remedial Case 207-13, Lewis v Presbytery of New York City; Remedial Case 215-4, Gaba v. Presbytery of Eastern Virginia; Minutes, 2003, Part I, p. 68 and p. 234 (interpreting the requirements for applying G-11.0103o). The presbytery would be obligated to provide both parties to the call due notice of the matters at issue, and opportunity to be heard by the presbytery or its administrative commission before imposing a leave of absence. The proposed amendment to G-11.0103o would apply not only to a case of sexual misconduct with a minor, but far more broadly to any situation in which a congregation requested imposing a leave of absence or the presbytery found that "the church's mission under the Word imperatively demands it." Since the presbytery would have to either call a meeting to appoint an administrative commission to consider modifying the terms of call or would have to hold a special meeting to give the pastor the opportunity to be heard, a delay of several weeks, if not longer, from the time allegations are received is inherent in this process. The proposal would allow the presbytery to determine whether the leave of absence would be paid, unpaid or at reduced levels of compensation, and presumably to provide financial assistance to a congregation if such a leave was imposed.

b. The ICI's proposed amendment to G-14.0506b (Item 04-08, Recommendation 2) would give presbyteries broad discretion to impose a leave of absence at their discretion by mandating that such a provision be placed into the terms of call for all pastors. It does not contain any indication whether the presbytery itself would make such a decision, would delegate it to its committee on ministry or would create administrative commissions to make such decisions, although it specifically requires that the presbytery's committee on ministry "approve the terms of all leaves of absence." The proposed amendment does not contain any requirement that an accused be heard or otherwise be afforded any type of due process before the presbytery exercises its discretion to impose a leave of absence. Indeed, because the proposed amendment requires that terms of call give the presbytery discretion to impose a leave of absence, it might be construed to preclude including in such a call provision the basic due process elements the 215th General Assembly (2003) recommended to the presbyteries. The proposal does not establish a timeline under which a presbytery is required to exercise the discretion that would be granted. The proposed amendment is not limited to situations in which an allegation of sexual misconduct is made. The proposal does provide the committee on ministry with the responsibility to approve the terms of a leave of absence, and thus presumably to determine who will be responsible for compensating the pastor while on a leave of absence.

c. Item 04-10, as its rationale indicates, proposes that the 216th General Assembly (2004) approve a new section of the Rules of Discipline, D-10.0106, similar to the suggestion made by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution to the 215th General Assembly (2003). The proposal of Item 04-10 is different from that suggestion of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution in the following respects: (1) changes the description of the conduct covered from "sexual misconduct" to "sexual abuse," thereby making it consistent with other provisions of the Rules of Discipline; (2) adds the authority to determine whether the leave will be paid or unpaid; (3) clarifies the limitations upon service in the event of a leave of absence to provide that "[w]hile administrative leave is in effect, a minister or other employee may not perform any pastoral, administrative, educational, or supervisory duties, and may not officiate at any functions such as baptism, funerals, or weddings"; and (4) provides that an investigating committee may make a subsequent request that a leave of absence be imposed, if no leave is initially imposed.

Item 04-10 creates a clear process for determining whether a minister should be placed on a leave of absence. It assigns this responsibility to two members of the presbytery's permanent judicial commission. It requires that an accused be heard before the appointees of the permanent judicial commission impose a leave of absence. The proposal establishes a timeline under which the permanent judicial commission must initiate the process of determining whether to place a pastor on a leave of absence. The proposed amendment is limited to situations in which an allegation of sexual abuse involving a minor or person lacking the capacity to consent is made. The proposal provides the members of the permanent judicial with the authority to determine whether the leave shall be paid or unpaid, but does not specifically provide for the presbytery to compensate the accused during the leave of absence.

d. Item 04-11 also proposes to add a new section D-10.0106. Under the amendment proposed by Item 04-11, a presbytery would be empowered to place a pastor on a leave of absence after giving the pastor an opportunity to be heard. Item 04-11 is not specific as to how the presbytery would accomplish the preliminary investigation called for or who would conduct the preliminary investigation, and presumably intends to leave establishing such procedure to each presbytery. The proposal requires that the investigation begin immediately. The proposal does not provide the presbytery with the authority to determine whether the leave shall be paid or unpaid, or specifically address whether the presbytery should compensate the accused during the leave of absence.

4. Basis for the Advice to the General Assembly

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution believes that Item 04-10 provides the church with the clearest and most comprehensive response to the need to create a constitutional avenue for placing pastors on a leave of absence when allegations of sexual abuse involving a minor or a person lacking the capacity to consent. Item 04-10 is clear, creates a well-defined process for determining whether a leave should be ordered, provides for due process for the accused and a clear timeline for action, and allows determination as to whether leave is paid or unpaid.

Item 04-08, Recommendations 1 and 2, would grant presbyteries much broader authority to impose a leave of absence and are not limited to cases involving an allegation of sexual misconduct with a minor or a person lacking the capacity to consent. Granting the presbyteries broad discretion to impose a leave of absence when allegations of sexual or other misconduct are made raises several concerns. First, the broad grant of discretion to presbyteries may raise similar concerns as to the lack of due process as did Amendment 03-G. It is unclear why this provision is best included as a mandatory provision of terms of call in Chapter 14 of the Form of Government rather than as an amendment to Chapter 10 of the Rules of Discipline with specification of the procedure for determining whether imposing a leave of absence is appropriate.

Moreover, by not providing a clear process for determining whether a leave of absence should be required when allegations of sexual or other misconduct are made, the proposed amendments create the risk of inaction due to a lack of preparation on the presbytery's part to set structures in place to determine whether circumstances warrant a leave of absence. Item 04-11, similarly, does not establish a clear procedure for determining if a leave of absence should be imposed.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution suggests that the 216th General Assembly (2004) modify the proposed language of Item 04-10, in the manner suggested above. These changes first clarify that the moderator of the presbytery permanent judicial commission has the responsibility to appoint the two individuals who will determine whether a leave of absence should be imposed. Second, the suggested changes would allow the two appointees to be selected from the roster of former members of the permanent judicial commission (D-5.0206b), in order to give presbyteries flexibility in avoiding using too many members of the commission in preliminary phases of the disciplinary processes, and thereby losing their service in a trial of the allegations.

ACWC ADVICE AND COUSEL ON ITEM 04-10

Advice and Counsel on Item 04-10—From the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns.

Item 04-10 addresses the issue of administrative leave for clergy in cases of alleged child abuse or abuse of persons who lack mental capacity to consent by adding section D-10.0106 or amending Amendment 03 G to the Book of Order.

The Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns advises that Item 04-10 be approved.

Rationale

The changes proposed by Item 04-10 will give greater protection to victims and provide clearer standards of communication and just discipline for the church. It proposes a process for permanent judicial commissions to use, when appropriate, to place pastors on administrative leave.

Item 04-11

[The assembly answered Item 04-11 by the action taken on Item 04-10 of this report. See p. 86.]

On Adding a New Section D-10.0106 Regarding Administrative Leave in Case of Alleged Child Abuse by Clergy—From the Presbytery of Northern New York.

The Presbytery of Northern New York overtures the 216th General Assembly (2004) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Shall a new section, D-10.0106, be added to read as follows:

“When a written statement of an alleged offense of sexual misconduct toward a minor under the age of 18 or toward a person it is alleged lacked the mental capacity to consent has been received, the governing body receiving the allegation will immediately provide for the supervision of the accused, and for placing the accused on paid leave of absence after a prompt preliminary investigation, with an opportunity for the accused to be heard, into whether it is probable that the charges have merit and this is a risk of future abuse. Such leave will continue until resolution of the matter in one of the ways prescribed by the Rules of Discipline. While administrative leave is in effect, a minister or other employee may not perform any pastoral, administrative, educational, or supervisory duties, and may not officiate at any function such as Baptisms, funerals or weddings.”

Rationale

It is clear that minors under the age of eighteen and persons it is alleged lack the mental capacity to consent need to be protected from sexual predators within the church. It is also clear that ministers or other employees within the church who are accused of such an offense are not always guilty.

Immediately placing a minister or other employee on administrative leave at the mere accusation of wrongdoing can destroy a person’s career and ability to function within the church. The principle of due process is provided for in all other types of cases of judicial process in the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), therefore, the Presbytery of Northern New York brings this proposed amendment to the 216th General Assembly (2004).

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 04-11

Advice on Item 04-11—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 216th General Assembly (2004) to answer Item 04-11 by the approval of the ACC advice on Item 04-10. The rationale for this advice is set forth in the Advisory Committee on the Constitution’s advice concerning Item 04-10.

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 04-11

Advice and Counsel on Item 04-11—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns.

Item 04-11 asks that D-10.0106 be amended if Amendment 03-G passes. Amendment 03-G will add D-10.0106 and deals with the handling of a written statement of sexual misconduct toward either a minor or toward a person it is alleged lacked the mental capacity to consent. Item 04-11 revises the language of “immediately place the minister or other employee on administrative leave” to “immediately provide for the supervision of the accused ...”

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns advises that Item 04-11 be answered with the action taken on Item 04-10.

Rationale

Item 04-10 presents a more just process for the resolution of cases of alleged child abuse or abuse of those lacking mental capacity to consent than does Item 04-11. Amendment 03-G provides no flexibility to a presbytery in requiring administrative leave and the present Book of Order provides no means of requiring such leave for where it is clearly called. Item 04-10 proposes a process that permanent judicial commissions may use, when appropriate, to place pastors on administrative leave.

Item 04-12

[In response to Item 04-12, the assembly approved an alternate resolution. See p. 86.]

The Office of the General Assembly recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) approve the following:

1. Assign the following tasks to the Office of the General Assembly:
  - a. To undertake an extensive cycle of consultation with various groups and constituencies within the PC(USA), including but not limited to: governing bodies (sessions, presbyteries, synods), governing body staff, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, racial ethnic caucuses, pastors, new immigrant leaders, and other persons and groups interested in the role of the Form of Government in the mission and ministry of the PC(USA).
  - b. To bring recommendations to the 217th General Assembly (2006).
2. Assign the following tasks to the Office of the General Assembly and the Office of Theology and Worship:
  - a. To undertake a similar analysis of the Directory for Worship with the goal of evaluating its influence and effectiveness in guiding sessions, pastors, and higher governing bodies in planning and conducting worship that is authentically Reformed as culturally appropriate.
  - b. To bring recommendations to the 217th General Assembly (2006).

Rationale

These recommendations are in response to the following referral: 2002 Referral: 05-01. Overture 02-29. On Revision of Chapter XIV of the Form of Government, and Amendments to Chapters IX and XI of the Form of Government, and Chapter IV of the Directory for Worship—From the Presbytery of St. Augustine (Minutes, 2002, Part I, pp. 61, 355).

The 213th General Assembly (2001) sent down a wholesale revision of Chapter XIV of the Form of Government that was not ratified by a majority of the presbyteries as required to amend the Form of Government (G-18.0301d). Overture 02-29 from the Presbytery of St. Augustine asked the 214th General Assembly (2002) to send down a slightly modified version of Chapter XIV. Instead, the 214th General Assembly (2002) referred this item to the Office of the General Assembly with instructions to “pursue . . . broad-based conversation . . . regarding role of the Constitution in the life of PC(USA) (Minutes, 2002, Part I, pp. 61–62.”

The Office of the General Assembly (OGA) believes that the church continues to have great interest in a simplified Form of Government, particularly Chapters VII–XVIII. The OGA believes it would be unwise to send down the language proposed in Overture 02-29 because it is premature until a more extensive consultation with the wider church is conducted “regarding the role of Form of Government in the PC(USA).”

The church faces a new ministry context, involving a much wider range of world views and experiences than have been present within it any time in its history. Chapters I–V are widely revered and enjoy virtually universal acceptance, as they contain historic language, positions, and practices.

Because the church is deeply divided on several provisions of Chapter VI, it should not be included in this process, as its inclusion could politicize the process.

Item 04-13

On Amending G-7.0306 On Who May Moderate a Congregational Meeting—From the Presbytery of Heartland.

[The assembly approved Item 04-13. See p. 87.]

The Presbytery of Heartland overtures the 216th General Assembly (2004) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Shall G-7.0306 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted in shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown in italic.]

“The pastor shall be the moderator of all meetings of the congregation. In congregations where there are co-pastors, they shall, when present, alternately preside at meetings. When the church is without a pastor, the moderator of the session appointed by the presbytery shall preside at all congregational meetings. If it is impractical for the pastor or the moderator of session appointed by presbytery to preside, he or she shall invite, with the concurrence of the session, another minister of the presbytery to preside. A presbytery may appoint a lay pastor as moderator of session to the church to which she or he is commissioned. The person assigned to the commissioned lay pastor as mentor and supervisor shall also supervise his or her work as moderator. In addition, the moderator of the session of a church with a vacant pulpit may request an elder who is, or has been, a member of ~~the~~ that presbytery’s committee on ministry, the stated clerk, executive presbyter, or associate executive presbyter, to preside; such elder may not moderate the meeting of a congregation of which that elder is a member. When this is not expedient, and when both the pastor or the moderator of the session and the session concur, a member of the session may be invited to preside.”

Rationale

The experience of elders and ministers who have served on the committee on ministry is a valuable asset to presbyteries. With the limitations on length of service imposed by the Book of Order, this asset can be lost once an elder or minister completes his or her term of service. The importance to presbyteries of the skills developed by elders and ministers through service on the committee on ministry was underscored by the 2001 amendment to G-11.0501b, which enabled persons to serve on the committee for an aggregate of six years even if that involved using partial terms. The proposed amendment to G-7.0306 (above) would allow presbyteries and sessions to draw on the experience of elders who have served on the committee on ministry in the particular case of moderating congregational meetings.

It is sometimes the case, because of geography, past experience with a congregation while serving on the committee on ministry, or special skills suited to a particular situation, that it would be advantageous to call upon an elder who has served but is not currently serving on COM to moderate a congregational meeting. This amendment would allow for that and thereby widen the pool of persons available to moderate in unusual situations and allow presbytery to take advantage of their skills and experience.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 04-13

Advice on Item 04-13—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 216th General Assembly (2004) with the following comment:

The Presbytery of Heartland identifies a potential shortcoming and a reasonable response in its proposed amendment to G-7.0306. It is obvious that recent alterations to this paragraph [at the time of reunion only minister members of the presbytery were eligible to be considered for the function of moderating a congregational meeting] make it possible for a great number of persons be invited to serve this function. The proposed amendment adequately includes another category of person to the list.

Section G-7.0306 is a good example of the manner in which our Constitution has become a manual of operations. The foundational principles involved here are that congregations must have meetings and that those meetings are to be presided over by someone whom the presbytery authorizes to be the “agent” of the wider church in the interrelated governance we call “Presbyterian.” How a particular presbytery exercises its responsibility is entirely within its own jurisdiction subject to the normal processes of review or redress.

If the 216th General Assembly (2004) wishes to address the issue in a more fundamental manner it could choose to send the following language to the presbyteries for their consideration:

Shall G-7.0306 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

~~“The pastor shall be the moderator of all meetings of the congregation. In congregations where there are co-pastors, they shall, when present, alternately preside at meetings. When the church is without a pastor, [the moderator of the session appointed by the presbytery a minister of the Word and Sacrament or elder designated by the presbytery] shall preside at all congregational meetings. If it is impractical for the pastor or the moderator of session appointed by presbytery to preside, he or she shall invite, with the concurrence of the session, another minister of the presbytery to preside. A presbytery may appoint a lay pastor as moderator of session to the church to which she or he is commissioned. The person assigned to the commissioned lay pastor as mentor and supervisor shall also supervise his or her work as moderator. In addition, the moderator of the session of a church with a vacant pulpit may request an elder who is a member of the presbytery's committee on ministry, the stated clerk, executive presbyter, or associate executive presbyter, to preside; such elder may not moderate the meeting of a congregation of which that elder is a member. When this is not expedient, and when both the pastor or the moderator of the session and the session concur, a member of the session may be invited to preside.”~~

ACREC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 04-13

Advice and Counsel on Item 04-13—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC).

Item 04-13 requests the 216th General Assembly (2004) to direct the Stated Clerk to send an amendment to the Constitution to the presbyteries for an affirmative or negative vote regarding who may moderate a congregational meeting, from the Presbytery of Heartland.

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns advises that Item 04-13 be approved.

Rationale

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns concurs with the rationale given by Item 04-13 that it would be “advantageous to call upon an elder who has served but is not currently serving on COM to moderate a congregational meeting.” As it is the case with a number of racial ethnic and new immigrant churches, the lack of persons who may moderate a congregational meeting prevents these churches from conducting their business in a timely manner. By increasing the pool of persons available to preside the meeting of a congregation, these churches will be allowed to call on experienced elders who have previously served on the committee on ministry.

Item 04-14

[The assembly approved Item 04-14. See p. 87.]

ACC Request Regarding Interpretation on Whether an E-mail Vote Is Permissible—From Stated Clerk, Presbytery of Winnebago.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) answer Item 04-14 (ACC Request 04-2) with the following response:

This request asks whether it is permissible for a governing body to vote by e-mail, and if so, what guidelines are appropriate.

The Book of Order is not silent on how governing bodies vote.

“The Church and Its Unity

“G-4.0301e

“e. Decisions shall be reached in governing bodies by vote, following opportunity for discussion, and a majority shall govern;”

Governing Bodies

G-9.0302b

b. Meetings of governing bodies, commissions, and committees shall be conducted in accordance with the most recent edition of Robert's Rules of Order, except in those cases where this Constitution provides otherwise. (Book of Order, G-7.0302c states the same regarding all meetings of congregations.)

Robert's Rules of Order Newly Revised (10th Edition), in outlining in Chapter One, the characteristics of a deliberative assembly, notes the following:

Efforts to conduct the deliberative process by postal or electronic mail or facsimile (fax) transmission—which are not recommended—must be expressly authorized by the bylaws and should be supported by special rules of order and standing rules as appropriate, since so many situations unprecedented in parliamentary law may arise and since many procedures common to parliamentary law are not applicable.”

Robert's Rules of Order Newly Revised states on page 482 that “The opportunity for simultaneous communication is central to the deliberative character of the meeting, and is what distinguishes it from attempts to do business by postal or electronic mail or by fax.”

On pages 409 ff., Robert's Rules of Order Newly Revised provides guidance for a vote by mail that would be applicable to a vote by electronic mail.

The request correctly makes the distinction between the deliberative process and the vote that follows. A governing body could provide in its rules that e-mail polling is permissible in instances where the deliberative process has previously occurred. Such an instance might occur if a governing body has debated a matter at a meeting, but lacks certain information such as specific prices, or a consultant's opinion. Upon receipt of the information, a vote by e-mail could be provided for by rule. It is difficult to conceive of a situation in which vote by e-mail could assure the principles of a deliberative assembly, if such deliberation has not previously taken place. Meetings by conference call are often provided for in governing body bylaws, and with care can provide for the characteristics of a deliberative body that are outlined on pages 1 and 2 of RONR.

If a governing body wishes to provide by rule for voting by e-mail, it is advisable to consider the following areas: (1) The nature of any vote that may be conducted by e-mail should be clearly defined. (2) Care must be taken that all qualified to vote are included. (This is particularly important with an e-mail vote, as there may be individuals qualified to vote who do not have access to e-mail.) (3) If the vote is to be by secret ballot, additional provisions are required. (4) There should be provision for a member to object to the vote being taken by electronic means. As technological advances are made in electronic communication, the rules should be revised to accommodate such technology.

A governing body that is incorporated should ensure that there are no legal impediments to voting by e-mail.

In summary, voting by e-mail is permissible only if there has been provision for deliberation, and the governing documents of the governing body provide for vote by mail or e-mail.

Letter of Request Received by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

Two questions:

1. Is it permissible for a governing body, e.g., a Session, to vote on a motion via email polling?

2. If this is permissible, what guidelines would seem to be appropriate to make sure that a motion is fairly and fully considered and that respect for other considerations in our deliberative process is maintained, e.g., confidentiality in voting.

As electronic communication within decision-making groups becomes increasingly popular and evident, the question emerges whether decisions can be made electronically, via email, in order to capitalize on its efficiency and speed. Since this is clearly understood to be supplemental to a governing body's usual (stated) meetings for discussion and interaction rather than a replacement for such meetings and discussions, is it feasible to use email polling in order to confirm actions where general intent has already been approved but where final details need ratification, e.g., confirmation of negotiated terms of contract or names on a committee or commission? This implies that a set of guidelines would need to be developed in order to frame the appropriate use of such email polling.

Respectfully submitted,

Michael B. Lukens
Stated Clerk, Winnebago Presbytery

Item 04-15

[The assembly approved Item 04-15. See p. 87.]

ACC Request 04-6.Regarding G-9.0705, Termination of Presbytery Staff—From Member, Administrative Commission, Presbytery of Hanmi.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) answer this request with the following authoritative interpretation:

“1. The provisions of G-9.0705 do not apply to officers. Officers cannot be terminated under this provision, whether compensated or not. The term of office may end, or the officer may be removed from office by the electing body for misconduct or dereliction of duties. The Book of Order, G-9.0202b and G-9.0203b, provides that officers shall serve for specific terms. If the bylaws provide that officers shall serve until their successors are elected, or if the governing body has recorded an action to say that the officer will serve until a successor is elected, the officer remains in office even at the end of the term.

“If the governing body combines in one position responsibilities of an officer with non-ecclesiastical responsibilities, an officer who performs those latter duties is entitled to the protections of G-9.0705 only as related to the non-ecclesiastical portion of the position. The provision of G-9.0705 that a hearing must be provided is not applicable to officers except as they may be responsible for non-ecclesiastical functions. However, there is no prohibition to providing a hearing.

“2. Section G-9.0705 does not apply to officers, except as noted above. Section G-9.0705 is silent as to whether it applies to executives and other administrative staff in relation to end of term reviews.”

Rationale

Item 04-15 (ACC Request 04-6) requests interpretation of the requirements in G-9.0705 concerning dissolution of the relationship between executives or other executive staff and the middle governing bodies. Two specific questions are raised. (1) Does G-9.0705 apply to officers who may or may not be compensated in light of G-9.0201? (2) Does G-9.0705 apply to either officers or employees when there is an end-of-term-review, or only if there is no set term?

The Book of Order specifies who shall be the officers of governing bodies.

Governing Bodies

G-9.0201

Officers of each of the governing bodies shall be a moderator and a clerk. Governing bodies may provide additional officers as required. (Book of Order, G-9.021)

The Book of Order is silent regarding whether there are circumstances in which an individual who is an officer is also presumed to be staff. Practice varies within the denomination, from place to place, and from time to time.

The question arises most often in regard to the position of stated clerk. Many clerks are compensated, but compensation is not the determining factor for establishing that the stated clerk is also a staff member. The stated clerk is presumed to be staff only if the governing documents—such as bylaws, standing rules, manuals of administrative operation, or position descriptions—combine responsibilities of an officer with non-ecclesiastical responsibilities, and then only as regards those non-ecclesiastical functions. Traditional duties of the stated clerk include those enumerated in G-9.0203a, serving as resource for ecclesiastical committees as noted in G-9.0202, providing support for administrative commissions, and fulfilling the responsibilities of the stated clerk for support of the judicial process as provided in the Rules of Discipline.

Secular law may establish whether or not an officer is also an employee for purposes of those laws, but this is a separate issue from the ecclesiastical view.

Letter of Request Received by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

In light of the issues being raised in Hanmi Presbytery of the Synod of Southern California and Hawaii in connection with their Stated Clerk, I would like to ask the ACC to address some questions.

1. Does G-9.0705 apply to officers who may or may not be compensated in light of G-9.0201. There is significant confusion about and the Synod's Administrative Commission needs guidance in the matter.
2. Another way this might be addressed is with this question: Does G-9.0705 apply to either officers or employees when there is an end of term review or only if there is no set term.

Please accept my sincere gratitude for addressing these matters.

Sincerely,
Frank M. McCraven

Item 04-16

[The assembly approved Item 04-16. See p. 87.]

ACC Request Regarding G-7.0304a.(3) and G-14.0603, When a Motion to Dissolve the Pastoral Relationship Is in Order—From Stated Clerk, Presbytery of Missouri River Valley.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) answer Item 04-16 (Request 04-7) as follows:

This request inquires whether, at an annual meeting of a congregation, a previously unannounced motion to dissolve a pastoral relationship would be in order.

The Form of Government lists five items of business that can be transacted at meetings of the congregation (G-7.0304a(1–5)). That provision does not specify whether such items must be included in annual or special (called) meetings. Since an annual meeting is mandated by the Constitution, and other meetings are permitted but not required, then it stands to reason that any of the enumerated business items could be considered at the annual meeting. Such items, however, should be listed in the call for the meeting.

The 204th General Assembly (1992) responded to Request 92-9 [noted at both G-14.0603 and G-7.0304a(3) in the Annotated Book of Order] stating that, “a motion to dissolve the pastoral relationship would not be in order at a congregational meeting unless the dissolution of the pastoral relationship was an item specifically listed in the call for the meeting” (Minutes, 1992, Part I, pp. 307–8). This requirement applies to all meetings of the congregation, both special and called. This has been and continues to be the currently binding interpretation of these provisions (cf. G-13.0103r).

Letter of Request as Received by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

Confusion has arisen as to whether the General Assembly’s decision that “a motion to dissolve the pastoral relationship would not be in order at a congregational meeting unless the dissolution of the pastoral relationship was an item specifically listed in the call for the meeting” (Minutes 1992, pp.307-308; cited in the Annotated Book of Order at G-7.0304 and again at G-14.0603) applies to all meetings of the congregation or only to a special called meeting.

The question arose when, without notice, a motion to dissolve the pastoral relationship was introduced at the annual meeting of the congregation of First Presbyterian Church, Omaha. The moderator of the meeting ruled the motion out of order on the ground that this matter was not listed in the call for the meeting, nor was it included on the agenda. However, the decision of the chair was appealed, and the congregation voted to override the moderator’s ruling.

As stated clerk of Presbytery, I have interpreted the 1992 GA ruling cited above as applying to all congregational meetings. My rationale for that opinion is as follows:

The list of the things that can come before a congregational meeting in Chapter 7 of the Form of Government (G-7.0304) means that these things may not be decided by the session; they are the prerogative of the congregation. For example, calling a pastor cannot be done by the session; a congregational meeting is necessary.

But except for the five things listed in G-7.0304, in Presbyterian polity everything else is the responsibility of the session. The business of a congregational meeting is limited to these five things. This list names everything that requires a vote of the congregation, not just the session. But the question as to which of these items may be considered at an annual meeting and which require a special meeting of the congregation is not really addressed in G-7.0304.

Since it is clear in G-14.0502c that calling a pastor requires a special meeting called for that purpose, the fact that calling a pastor is one of the congregation’s prerogatives listed in Chapter 7 (G-7.0304a(2)) does not mean that someone can just stand up at the annual meeting and say, “I move that we call the Rev. John Smith as our pastor.” The process outlined in Chapter 14 must be followed.

Similarly, when it comes to dissolving the pastoral relationship, the fact that requesting the dissolution of the pastoral relationship is also on the list of things the congregation can do (G-7.0304a(3)) does not say anything about whether it is the annual meeting or a special meeting that does that—again, that is not the point in Chapter 7 (although dissolution of the pastoral relationship is not listed among the items of business at annual meetings in G-7.0302). One must consult Chapter 14 (G-14.0603) for the necessary process for seeking such dissolution.

Thus it appears that the ruling of the General Assembly that “a motion to dissolve the pastoral relationship would not be in order at a congregational meeting unless the dissolution of the pastoral relationship was an item specifically listed in the call for the meeting” (Minutes 1992, pp.307-308; cited in the Annotated Book of Order at G-7.0304 and G-14-0603) cannot be limited to special meetings, but would apply to the annual meeting of the congregation as well.

Since persons in this Presbytery have received conflicting interpretations on this point from different members of the staff of the Department of Constitutional Services, it would be useful to have a clarification from the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

Russell W. Palmer
Stated Clerk
Presbytery of Missouri River Valley

Item 04-17

[The assembly approved Item 04-17 with amendment. See p. 87.]

To provide for a further way to initiate special administrative review of a synod, the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly recommends that a new section, “c.” be added to Standing Rule B.8. to read as follows:

“c. [The General Assembly has authority to undertake special administrative review of synods (Book of Order, G-13.0103k). There are three ways the General Assembly could be requested to consider such review:

“(1) by an overture from a presbytery or synod (G-11.0103t(3); G-12.0102o(2); Standing Rule B.5.c.);

“(2) by request from one of the General Assembly entities (Standing Rule B.5.a.–b.); or

“(3) By a commissioners’ resolution (Standing Rule B.5.e). If such overture, request, or resolution is acted on favorably by the General Assembly, the General Assembly could undertake Special Administrative Review (G-9.0408–.0410) through commission or special committee as provided for in Standing Rule B.8 and G-9.0501–.0503.]

“Special administrative review of an alleged synod irregularity or delinquency may occur when a written request for such review is received by the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly from another synod or a presbytery within the synod of the alleged irregularity or delinquency. If the request relates to an alleged delinquency, the request can only be filed with the Stated Clerk after the failure or refusal of the synod to cure the alleged delinquency at its next meeting, having been requested to do so in writing prior to the meeting. When the request for special administrative review is received, the Stated Clerk shall convene a meeting of the Moderator of the General Assembly, the moderator of the General Assembly Council, and the moderator of the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly. If the request is in order and all the moderators agree that for the good of the church the special administrative review needs to be undertaken before the next meeting of the General Assembly (when the request could be considered by the whole General Assembly), the Moderator of the General Assembly shall appoint a special committee (Standing Rule B.8.) to conduct a special administrative review in accordance with G-9.0408–.0410 and report its findings and recommendations to the next General Assembly.”

Rationale

This recommendation is in response to the following referral: 2003 Referral: Comment on Item 03-B., Advise the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly to Clarify the Process of Administrative Review on the General Assembly Level; Suggest Changes to the Standing Rules to Make the Process More Clear (Minutes, 2003, Part I, p. 70)

Currently there is no provision in the Standing Rules to initiate special administrative review of a synod other than by General Assembly action in response to overture, request, or resolution as noted below.

Administrative Review is defined in the Book of Order, Form of Government, “Chapter IX. Governing Bodies.” The Book of Order distinguishes between two forms of administrative review: general and special.

General Administrative Review is defined in G-9.0407a–c as follows:

a. The congregation of a particular church and the committees, bodies, and organizations of that church shall report annually all proceedings and actions to the session, which shall review and summarize them and incorporate the summary in its minutes.

b. The moderator, the stated clerk, the councils, commissions, committees, boards, agencies, and organizations of every governing body above a session shall report annually all proceedings and actions to that governing body, which shall review them.

c. At least once a year every governing body above a session shall review the records of the proceedings of the next lower governing body. If any lower governing body shall fail to send up its records for this purpose, the higher governing body shall order them to be produced at a specified time.

Special Administrative Review is defined in G-9-0408, G-9.0409a, and G-4.0410 as follows:

If a higher governing body learns at any time of any irregularity or delinquency by a lower governing body, it may require the governing body to produce any records and take appropriate action. (G-12.0102n, G-12.0304, G-13.0103k,n) (Book of Order, G-9-0408)

a. In reviewing the proceedings of a lower governing body, the higher governing body shall determine, either from the records of those proceedings or from any other information as may come to its attention, whether

- (1) The proceedings have been correctly recorded;
- (2) The proceedings have been regular and in accordance with the Constitution;
- (3) The proceedings have been prudent and equitable;
- (4) The proceedings have been faithful to the mission of the whole church;
- (5) The lawful injunctions of a higher governing body have been obeyed. (Book of Order, G-9.0409a)

It is ordinarily sufficient for the higher governing body to record in its own proceedings, and in those under review, its approval, disapproval, or correction. If necessary, the higher governing body may direct the lower governing body to reconsider and correct an irregularity or cure a delinquency. (Book of Order, G-9.0410)

Administrative Review at the General Assembly Level: The Book of Order provisions noted above apply to administrative review at the General Assembly level as well as review at lower governing body levels. The Standing Rules of the General Assembly specifically provide for administrative review.

In particular, general administrative review of the entities of the General Assembly are undertaken through review of reports submitted to the General Assembly (Book of Order, G-13.0103h and Standing Rule B.5.f.) and through periodic review by committee (Standing Rule E.10.). Also, the General Assembly receives reports of the decisions of its Permanent Judicial Commission (Standing Rule G.2.g.).

Similarly, the General Assembly conducts general administrative review of synods through review of synod reports and minutes (Book of Order, G-13.0103l and Standing Rule B.5.f.).

The General Assembly has authority to undertake special administrative review of synods (Book of Order, G-13.0103k). There are three ways that the General Assembly could be requested to consider such review: (1) by an overture from a presbytery or synod (Book of Order, G-11.0103t3; G-12.0102o(2); Standing Rule B.5.c.), (2) by request from one of the General Assembly entities (Standing Rule B.5.a.–b.), or (3) by commissioner resolution (Standing Rule B.5.e.). If such overture, request, or resolution is acted on favorably by the General Assembly, the General Assembly could undertake the special administrative review (Book of Order, G-9.0408–.0410) through commission or special committee as provided for in Standing Rule B.8. and Book of Order, G-9.0501–.0503.

Item 04-18

[The assembly referred Item 04-18 to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution. See p. 87.]

On Amending Standing Rule G.2.g. and C.7. Regarding an Assembly Committee on Administrative Review—From the Presbytery of Mississippi.

The Presbytery of Mississippi respectfully overtures the 216th General Assembly (2004) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to make the following changes to the Standing Rules:

1. Amend Standing Rule G.2.g. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“g. On receipt of the certified record and final decision in a case of judicial process from the clerk of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the General Assembly, the Stated Clerk shall report the decision to the General Assembly if it is in session, or to its first session thereafter if it is not. ~~When a decision of the Permanent Ju-~~

~~cial Commission contains an order directed to another governing body, the Stated Clerk shall obtain from the governing body a statement of its compliance and make a full report to the next General Assembly. When a decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission contains an order directed to another governing body, the Stated Clerk shall obtain from the governing body a statement of its compliance. This report shall be referred to the Assembly Committee on Administrative Review, which shall in turn report to the General Assembly, making appropriate recommendations.”~~

2. Add a new section, “C.7. Assembly Committee Procedures” to the Standing Rules to read as follows:

“7. Assembly Committee on Administrative Review

“a. General Review of Synod Minutes

“(1) This committee shall conduct the annual review of synod minutes required in Standing Rule B.5.f. Members of the committee shall review the full text of each synod’s minutes.

“(2) This review shall take special care that synod minutes include a report of permanent judicial commission decisions (if any), and a report that any permanent judicial committee orders to presbyteries within the bounds of the Synod have been carried out by the presbyteries.

“b. Special review of General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission (GAPJC) decisions

“(1) All certified records and final decisions in cases of judicial process from the clerk of the GAPJC shall be reported by the Stated Clerk to this committee.

“(2) When decisions of the GAPJC contain orders directed to lower governing bodies, the Stated Clerk shall obtain from those governing bodies statements of their compliance and report them to this committee, as required in Standing Rule G.2.g.

“(3) If the committee is concerned that any GAPJC order has not been carried out by a lower governing body, it will recommend that the General Assembly specify the particular concerns to be addressed and direct the synod having jurisdiction to initiate the process of special administrative review. The synod will further be directed to report the progress of that review in its minutes to be reviewed by the next General Assembly.”

3. In the “Guidelines for Reviewing Synod Records,” found on pages 57–59 of the Manual of the General Assembly, strike the text of “6.” under “General Provisions” on page 58, and insert new text to read as follows:

~~“6. The review of the minutes of each synod shall ordinarily occur as peer reviews by a gathering of all synod stated clerks. Their written review of each synod minutes shall be submitted to the General Assembly Committee assigned the review of the minutes, who shall attest that the minutes of each synod have been reviewed. If peer review is not completed, the synod shall submit its minutes for review by the General Assembly Committee charged with overseeing this review. The review of the minutes of each synod shall be undertaken by the Assembly Committee on Administrative Review.”~~

Rationale

The 215th General Assembly (2003) advised “the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly to clarify the process of administrative review on the General Assembly level, and suggest changes to the Standing Rules necessary to make the process more clear” (Minutes, 2003, Part I, p. 70). This overture is not an attempt to preempt the work of the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA), but rather an effort to ensure that this important work continues to move forward.

There is a great need for greater clarity in the General Assembly’s Standing Rules regarding the process of administrative review. This is an essential element of Presbyterian polity, expressing our connectionalism and ensuring the unity of the church. The right of administrative review is enshrined in the first four chapters of the Book of Order, which provide the theoretical underpinnings of our polity:

The radical principles of Presbyterian church government and discipline are:

That the several different congregations of believers, taken collectively, constitute one Church of Christ, called emphatically the Church; that a larger part of the Church, or a representation of it, should govern a smaller, or determine matters of controversy which arise therein; that, in like manner, a representation of the whole should govern and determine in regard to every part, and to all the parts united: that is, that a majority shall govern; and consequently that appeals may be carried from lower to higher governing bodies, till they be finally decided by the collected wisdom and united voice of the whole Church. . . . (Book of Order, G-1.0400)

f. A higher governing body shall have the right of review and control over a lower one and shall have power to determine matters of controversy upon reference, complaint, or appeal; (Book of Order, G-4.0301f)

The power of administrative review is clearly stated in G-9.0407–.0411 of the Book of Order, and it is the right and responsibility, in one way or another, of every governing body of the church. The General Assembly needs to clarify its procedures for conducting both general and special administrative review so that it can fulfill its responsibilities under the Book of Order and so that the peace, unity, and purity of the church can be maintained.

1. Rationale for Changing the Way the General Assembly Reviews Synod Minutes

The General Assembly now reviews synod minutes only indirectly. Synod clerks undertake a peer review of each other’s minutes and submit their conclusions to the General Assembly. Because the General Assembly never directly interacts with the minutes, it is prevented from bringing its own concerns to bear on them. All that commissioners know about them is what the other synod clerks have told them. This certainly conflicts with the intent of G-9.0407c, which requires that “every governing body above a session shall review the records of the proceedings of the next lower governing body.” The General Assembly itself is given this task, so should it instead simply accept the testimony of someone who isn’t even a member of the assembly?

2. Need for Reviewing Compliance Reports

The General Assembly, by the Book of Order, has delegated judicial process to its permanent judicial commission, but it retains the right and responsibility of administrative review and control. Special Administrative Review specifically includes making sure “whether the lawful injunctions of a higher governing body have been obeyed” (G-9.0409a(5)). Unless a report of compliance with such injunctions is reviewed periodically, it is impossible for the General Assembly to carry out this part of its responsibilities.

3. Rationale for Combining Review and Control Measures Under One Committee

Combining the review of synod minutes with the review of compliance reports in a Committee on Administrative Review is advantageous for many reasons:

- It allows the documents to inform one another. A synod’s report on the compliance of one of its presbyteries may give additional insight to the compliance report from the presbytery itself. It may also satisfy the General Assembly that synod is doing everything that needs to be done in order to bring a presbytery into compliance, obviating the need for any further action.
- It provides more space and time to focus on review responsibilities. Now, the committees tasked with the pieces of review and control are distracted with other responsibilities. Having a committee tasked with this job alone should allow it to be done more thoroughly.

4. The Need for Action

We can’t deny that we live in an age of conflict within our church, much of which revolves around ordination standards. Unless there is a clear method in place of bringing resolution to these conflicts, they will fester, producing more strife and resentment. And unless the church has a method of making sure its governing bodies are in compliance with the Constitution, disobedience and thus disunity will only increase. Oversight is thus critical to ensure the peace, unity, and purity of the church. The best way to continue the troubles in the church is to let the current confusion continue.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 04-18

Advice on Item 04-18—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 216th General Assembly (2004) to refer Item 04-18 to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

Rationale

Item 04-18 seeks to address concern about compliance with decisions issued by permanent judicial commissions in remedial cases, in particular. There are some in the church who believe there is cause for such concern. Apparently for these Presbyterians the processes for monitoring the implementation of permanent judicial commission decisions by lower governing bodies remain unclear or are perceived to be inadequate.

This matter requires referral to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution if any additional constitutional processes for such monitoring are to be developed. The design of any further constitutional processes will require consultation between the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, the Office of the General Assembly, permanent judicial commissions, and middle governing bodies. A healthy and comprehensive plan needs to be articulated if compliance is to be achieved, always with the understanding that “the organization [of the church] is not designed to work without trust and love” (Book of Order, G-7.0103).

Item 04-18, as written, is not consistent with provisions of the Rules of Discipline, D-7.0601 and D-8.0404 concerning the handling of the certified records. To provide the full certified record of a case (which often runs to hundreds of pages) to an assembly committee for its review in the space of two or three days would place an insupportable burden on the members of that assembly committee. It would further run the risk that some commissioners might seek to re-try the case and substitute their judgment for that of the permanent judicial commission.

Further, it is not clear that the process outlined in paragraph C.7.b.(3) of the Standing Rule proposed by the overture provides “due process and procedural safeguards” (D-1.0101) for any governing body alleged to have failed to implement an order of the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission.

COGA COMMENT ON ITEM 04-18

Comment on Item 04-18—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) counsels the 216th General Assembly (2004) to refer Item 04-18 to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution. The COGA supports referral of Item 04-18 to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution to assess the perceived inadequacies regarding compliance and offers comment on the prospect of changing the methodology for the review of synod minutes.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly notes the concerns regarding noncompliance by some in the church and has consistently pointed out processes and procedures available to the church to address non-compliance. The committee is recommending a process to the 216th General Assembly (2004) to provide for a further way to initiate special administrative review of a synod (see Item 04-17). The COGA reminds the 216th General Assembly (2004) that several options already exist in our shared polity including administrative review, filing new judicial cases, and amendment of bylaws to explicitly provide for review.

This overture also proposes changes to the reading of synod minutes. The overture implies that the committee assigned the task of reviewing the minutes of the synod cannot see the actual minutes if they choose. That is not accurate. The committee always has the option of looking at the synod minutes.

The current method for reviewing the minutes of synods is entering its fourth year. The guidelines for review of these minutes are outlined in the Manual of the General Assembly, Guidelines for Reviewing Synod Records, pp. 57–59. The current process was adopted to provide for a more thorough review than previously experienced, while still preserving the responsibility of an assembly committee to conduct this task. This process includes the examination of each set of minutes from a synod being examined using a peer review methodology. Two synod stated clerks who compare findings from their independent reviews read each set of minutes. A report is prepared for the entire group of synod stated clerks with recommendations regarding comments or exceptions. This report is then delivered to the assembly committee assigned responsibility for the review. After examining the recommendations (and minutes, if they choose), the assembly committee then makes final recommendations to the assembly.

The Standing Rules authorize the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly to offer comment or advice on business under consideration by the General Assembly. The COGA is a committee of fifteen persons, elected by the General Assembly from across the church, made up of elders and ministers who supervise the work of the Office of the General Assembly.

Item 04-19

[The assembly approved Item 04-19 with amendment. See p. 88.]

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) and the General Assembly Council (GAC) recommend that the 216th General Assembly (2004) approve the following recommendations:

1. Amend Standing Rule E. by inserting a new section, “E.11.,” to read as follows:

“11. Review of Permanent, Advocacy, and Advisory Committees and Commissions of the General Assembly

“The permanent, advocacy, and advisory committees and commissions of the General Assembly will be reviewed to evaluate their processes to fulfill the mandates given to them by the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). The General Assembly will review the work of the permanent, advocacy, and advisory committees and commissions based on a six-year schedule. A committee at the General Assembly will be assigned the review. The assembly committee will use the Standards for Review of General Assembly Permanent, Advocacy, and Advisory Committees and Commissions in the Guidelines and Policies of the General Assembly. The assembly committee will report to the General Assembly the results of the review and make recommendations based on its findings.”

2. Amend the Manual of the General Assembly, Guidelines and Policies of the General Assembly, by adding “Standards for Review of General Assembly Permanent, Advocacy, and Advisory Committees and Commissions” to read as follows:

“Standards for Review of General Assembly Permanent, Advocacy, and Advisory Committees and Commissions

“A. Process

“The responsibilities of the committee or commission that are being reviewed

- “1. A self-study of its work based on the review standards covering the previous six years.

“2. The self-study will have to be available by the 120-day deadline before the General Assembly at which it is to be reviewed.

“3. Representatives of the committee or commission will need to be available at the assembly to serve as resources for the assembly committee.

“4. The committee or commission may include responses in the self-study and additional questions that explore the standards that apply to its particular work.

- “5. The committee or commission may utilize former members to help develop the self-study.

“B. The Responsibilities of the Office of the General Assembly in the Review

“1. The Office of the General Assembly (OGA), in consultation with the leadership of the committee or commission, will supervise the development of a survey instrument by the Office of Research Services.

“2. Specific training of assembly committee leadership and members as needed to accomplish the evaluation process.

“3. Budget for development of self-studies.

“4. The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) and the GAC will evaluate the review process after each assembly.

“C. The Work of the Assembly Committee for Review

“1. The review assignment will be given to a designated assembly committee.

“2. The assembly committee’s review will be limited to certain questions:

“Is the committee or commission fulfilling its mandate (based on self-study, surveys, consultations with committee or commission leadership)?

“3. Are there items that need to be referred for further study?

“4. The assembly committee will hold hearings, etc.

“5. The assembly committee will be in dialogue with representatives of the General Assembly permanent, advocacy, and advisory committees or commissions being reviewed.

“6. The assembly committee may break into subgroups to cover each committee or commission being reviewed.

“Standards

“A. Fidelity to Mission and Partnership

“1. Each committee or commission was created by the church and exists to serve and support the church’s mission in a particular area. Each committee or commission is expected to exhibit a constant faithfulness to and in fulfillment of its servant role in the life of the PC(USA).

“2. The basic process of the committee or commission should demonstrate fidelity to the mission and accountability procedures set forth in its establishing deliverance, charter, or mandate from the assembly. The committee or commission should exhibit leadership in guiding the church in engagement with the work and resources in which the committee or commission acts.

“3. The committee or commission should exhibit practical cooperation with the other agencies or committees of the church in areas of overlapping responsibility and opportunity.

“4. The committee or commission should provide timely responses to directives and requests from the General Assembly.

“B. Effectiveness of Services

The services of the committee or commission are consistent with its assembly or constitutional mandate.

“1. The committee or commission has a defined and consistent process for completing its work.

“2. The committee or commission has a regular process of self-evaluation of its services.

“3. The committee or commission employs a strategy for effective communication with the church-at-large.

“4. The committee or commission utilizes current and emerging technologies to enable it to fulfill its mission.

“5. The committee or commission has developed a vision and plans for its work in light of its historic mandate and the emerging issues before and context of the PC(USA).”

Rationale

These recommendations are in response to the following referral: 2002 Referral: Item 02-09, Recommendations 1 and 2. OGA and GAC, in Consultation with Permanent, Advocacy, and Advisory Committees, Develop a Process to Create an Independent Review Process for GA Permanent, Advocacy, Advisory Committees; Present to the 215th GA (2003) (Minutes, 2002, Part I, pp. 27, 171).

The 214th General Assembly (2002) approved the following recommendations:

1. That the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly and the General Assembly Council, in consultation with General Assembly permanent, advocacy, and advisory committees, develop a process and propose language for the Standing Rules of the General Assembly that would create an independent review process for all General Assembly permanent, advocacy, and advisory committees.
2. That the proposed recommendations be presented to the 215th General Assembly (2003) for consideration and approval.
3. That the standards for the review of agencies that were established by the 213th General Assembly (2001) be carefully considered by COGA and GAC as they develop the review process for permanent, advocacy, and advisory committees of the General Assembly.

The basic principles of Presbyterian government are found in Chapter IV of the Form of Government of the Book of Order. One of those principles is that a higher governing body shall have the right to review those for whom it is responsible (G-4.0301f.). The nature of those reviews can be as simple as the reading of the minutes of a governing body. The review can also be general administrative review required of congregations or governing bodies (G-9.0407a and b). In the Minutes of the 209th General Assembly (1997), the definition of those requiring review by a congregation included any group or organization whose activity “affects theological instruction, spiritual development, mission programs, raises money, uses property, or purports in any way to represent the congregation to the public.”

The ministry of the permanent, advocacy and advisory committees of the General Assembly is an important part of the mission of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). They encompass ministries from the Department of History to the General Assembly Committee on Representation. The review process will provide an opportunity to allow the General Assembly and an individual permanent or advisory committee to engage in a dialogue about its mission. The result will be continual confidence by the membership of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in the work of its committees. The review can be the opportunity to make recommendations for improvements, suggestions for ministry developments, and commendations for achievements.

The 213th General Assembly (2001) approved an independent review process for the agencies of the General Assembly (see Minutes, 2001, Part I, p. 67 ff). That process encompasses the development of standards for the review. Those standards were based on standards used for the accreditation of institutions of higher learning and in consultation with the agencies to be reviewed. That review process will begin in 2002 and will serve as a model for the review process for the permanent, advocacy, and advisory committees. (Minutes, 2002, Part I, pp. 171-72)

3. The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) and the General Assembly Council (GAC) recommend [that the 216th General Assembly (2004) refer] to the 217th General Assembly (2006) the [decision of] the application of this process as it relates to the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission.

Rationale

The Stated Clerk’s Office received a request from the Moderator of the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission that they not be included in the review process for all General Assembly permanent, advocacy, and advisory committees and commissions until there has been further study of the constitutional implications.

Item 04-Info

A. Governing Bodies Statements of Compliance with Permanent Judicial Commission Decisions

Standing Rule G.2.g requires that when a decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission contains an order directed to another governing body, the Stated Clerk report to the General Assembly a statement of the governing body's compliance. Below is a report of the statements of compliance received by the Stated Clerk from the governing bodies for cases decided by the Permanent Judicial Commission during the year 2003–2004.

1. 216-1, John Minihan and J. Randall Richards v. The Presbytery of Scioto Valley

The following orders were entered by the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission:

IT IS ORDERED that the Decision and Order of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of the Covenant is reversed.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Synod of the Covenant report this Decision and Order to the Synod at its first meeting after receipt, that the Synod enter the full Decision and Order upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of Scioto Valley report this Decision and Order to the Presbytery at its first meeting after receipt, that the Presbytery enter the full Decision and Order upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

The decision was reported at the Synod of the Covenant meeting on October 28, 2003, and the Presbytery of Scioto Valley meeting on September 16, 2003. Motion was carried to rescind the action presbytery adopted at its February 5, 2002, meeting regarding a session's responsibility for payment of per capita.

2. 216-2, Session, Crerar Memorial Presbyterian Church, v. Presbytery of Chicago

The following order was entered by the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission:

This Commission orders that the request of the session of Crerar Memorial Presbyterian Church for withdrawal of the appeal is approved with the understanding that the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission takes no position on the substance of the settlement document.

3. 216-3, Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) by The Presbytery of San Jose v. Steven P. Moyer

The following orders were entered by the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission:

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that the decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of the Pacific be reversed and that the case be remanded for a new trial.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Synod of the Pacific report this decision to the Synod at its first meeting after receipt, that the Synod enter the full decision upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the decision be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of San Jose report this decision to the Presbytery at its first meeting after receipt, that the Presbytery enter the full decision upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the decision be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

The decision was reported at the Synod of the Pacific meeting on February 12, 2004, and will be reported at the Presbytery of San Jose meeting on June 5, 2004.

A pre-trial conference was held with the new PJC and Mr. Moyer renounced jurisdiction.

4. 216-5, Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) by Presbytery of Northern Kansas, v. Michael B. Myers

The following orders were entered by the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission:

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED by this Commission that the decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of Mid-America is remanded to the Synod Permanent Judicial Commission for further proceedings consistent with this Decision and Order.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Synod of Mid-America report this decision to the Synod at its first meeting after receipt and that the Synod enter the full Decision and Order upon its minutes.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of Northern Kansas report this decision to the presbytery at its first meeting after receipt, that the presbytery enter the full Decision and Order upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of the Synod of Mid-America.

The decision will be reported at the Synod of Mid-America meeting on March 6, 2004, and the Presbytery of Northern Kansas meeting on January 20, 2004.

On January 10, 2004, the Synod of Mid-America made a decision to remand this matter to the Presbytery of Northern Kansas.

5. 216-6, Glenda Hope, Lynne Reade, Jerrold Jayne, David M. Lew, Cynthia Joe, David Soohoo, Mildred E. Kilgore, Katherine Reyes, Jeanne Choy Tate, Evangeline L. Hermanson, Robert F. Hermanson, Paul Watermulder, v. Presbytery of San Francisco

The following orders were entered by the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission:

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that the decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of the Pacific is reversed, except that the stay of enforcement remains in effect pending the final resolution of this matter, and this case is remanded to that Permanent Judicial Commission with directions to conduct a trial on the merits or to pursue any other pretrial mediation options that it deems appropriate.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Synod of the Pacific report this decision to the Synod at its first meeting after receipt, that the Synod enter the full decision upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the decision be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of San Francisco report this decision to the Presbytery at its first meeting after receipt, that the Presbytery enter the full decision upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the decision be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

The decision was reported at the Synod of the Pacific meeting on February 12, 2004, and the Presbytery of San Francisco meeting on November 11, 2003.

6. 216-7, Bu M. Park, v. Session, Hahna Korean Presbyterian Church

A Statement of Complaint in a remedial case came before this commission against the Session of Hahna Presbyterian Church in the Presbytery of Chicago dated May 8, 2003.

It appears that the Presbytery of Chicago failed to treat the complaint as initiating judicial process, but instead took some sort of administrative action with respect to the complaint.

The General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission finds that the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission does not have original jurisdiction in the case. The complaint should have been treated by the Presbytery of Chicago as initiating a remedial case under D-6.0202b(1).

7. 216-8, Gail B. Homer, v. Session, Lower Valley Presbyterian Church

A Statement of Complaint in a remedial case came before this commission against the Session of Lower Valley Presbyterian Church in the Presbytery of Newton dated May 8, 2003.

The General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission finds that the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission does not have original jurisdiction in the case, as the case should have been filed with the stated clerk of the Presbytery of Newton under D-6.0202b(4).

8. 216-9, Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) by Presbytery of South Dakota, v. John Poland

The following orders were entered by the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission:

IT IS ORDERED, that the appeal be dismissed.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED, that the Stated Clerk of the Synod of Lakes and Prairies report this decision to the Synod at its first meeting after receipt, that the Synod enter the full decision upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the decision be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED, that the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of South Dakota report this decision to the Presbytery at its first meeting after receipt, that the Presbytery enter the full decision upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the decision be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

The decision was reported at the Synod of Lakes and Prairies meeting on January 18, 2004, and the Presbytery of South Dakota meeting on October 24, 2003.

(1) Headnotes

The 1992 amendment to G-9.0404d did not grant a presbytery power to compel a session to transmit the per capita apportionment assigned to it. The decision in Session, Central Presbyterian Church v. Presbytery of Long Island (Minutes, 1992, Part I, p. 179) is reaffirmed.

The term “benevolences” in G-10.0102i includes per capita funds.

(2) Decision And Order

This remedial case comes before this Commission on appeal by John Minihan, minister, and J. Randall Richards (Appellants) from a decision by the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of the Covenant (SPJC).

(3) Jurisdictional Statement

This Commission finds that it has jurisdiction, that the Appellants have standing to appeal, that the appeal was properly and timely filed, and that the appeal states one or more of the grounds for appeal specified in D-8.0105.

(4) History

The procedural history, as well as the recent legislative and permanent judicial commission case decision history regarding per capita, are relevant. Each of these histories is summarized below.

(a) Procedural History

On February 5, 2002, the Presbytery of Scioto Valley (Presbytery) adopted the following Per Capita Statement:

To direct per capita apportionments to the sessions of the churches within its bounds, [G-9.0404d], the action of the Presbytery establishes a responsibility on the part of sessions, as governing bodies of the church, to raise and timely transmit per capita funds to the presbytery, unless the Presbytery excuses a session from doing so.

On May 1, 2002, the Appellants filed a complaint alleging that the Per Capita Statement was irregular in that it violated the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) by making the payment of per capita apportionments by sessions “mandatory.” Appellants asked that the Presbytery be ordered to rescind the Statement.

The SPJC tried the matter on December 7, 2002. In its decision dated December 8, 2002, the SPJC found that the Per Capita Statement adopted by the Presbytery was constitutional and provided the following explanation as the basis for its determination:

This SPJC believes that describing per capita by the mutually exclusive terms of “mandatory” or “voluntary” fails to reflect the pattern of mutual relations among and between the various governing bodies of our church as established by the Book of Order (G-9.0103).

It is our opinion that part of a session’s moral responsibility is to seek relief from presbytery if the session finds that it is unable to remit its per capita apportionment. In turn, part of the moral responsibility of the presbytery is to lovingly and caringly work with a session that finds itself in this situation.

Provision for excuses must be understood in terms of the covenantal relationship between sessions and presbytery. In this manner, the presbytery may be advised of the reasons for non-payment or late payment of per capita and be able to respond appropriately by either granting the request or by addressing the issues of concern in the relationship of session and presbytery.

The appeal, filed with this Commission on January 17, 2003, contends that the decision of the SPJC “creates an injustice pursuant to D-8.0105f and commits an error in constitutional interpretation pursuant to D-8.0105g.”

(b) Legislative and Permanent Judicial Commission Case Decision History

In 1991, G-9.0404d was added to the Form of Government:

Each governing body above the session shall prepare a budget annually for its operating expenses, including administrative personnel, and may fund it with a per capita apportionment among the particular churches within its bounds. ...

In 1992, G-9.0404d was amended by adding the following:

... The presbyteries shall be responsible for raising their own per capita funds, and for raising and timely transmission of per capita funds to their respective synods and to the General Assembly. The presbyteries may direct per capita apportionments to the sessions of the churches within their bounds.

In 1993, G-9.0103 was amended as follows:

All governing bodies of the church are united by the nature of the church and share with one another responsibilities, rights, and powers as provided in this Constitution. The governing bodies are separate and independent, but have such mutual relations that the act of one of them is the act of the whole church performed by it through the appropriate governing body. The jurisdiction of each governing body is limited by the express provisions of the Constitution, with powers not mentioned being reserved to the presbyteries, and with the acts of each subject to review by the next higher governing body. [Amendatory clause underlined.]

The 206th General Assembly (1994) adopted the following authoritative interpretation of G-11.0103f as to whether “guidance” constitutes a mandate in the Book of Order:

Within the list of responsibilities and powers of the presbytery are items that only the presbytery can effect, and items that require the concurrent action of the congregation(s) or other governing bodies, e.g., guidance regarding equitable compensation may be advisory for congregational employees, but mandatory for pastoral calls that require approval by the presbytery. The responsibilities of the session as listed in Book of Order, G-10.0102, may thus be limited by requirements established by the presbytery as it seeks to fulfill its responsibilities in G-11.0103. To the extent that guidance incorporates requirements established by the presbytery in the fulfillment of its unique responsibility, such advice is mandatory.

Presbytery overtured (Overture 01-01) the 213th General Assembly (2001) to approve an amendment which proposed to add the following sentences to G-9.0404d:

Unless excused by the presbytery, a session shall be responsible for raising and timely transmission of per capita funds to its presbytery. A presbytery may exercise care and oversight over congregations in its bounds that fail to raise or transmit such funds to the presbytery.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advised the General Assembly to disapprove the Overture, while the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly advised the General Assembly that presbyteries already had the powers proposed by the Overture. The 213th General Assembly (2001) disapproved the Overture.

In Session, Central Presbyterian Church v. Presbytery of Long Island (Minutes, 1992, Part I, p. 179), this Commission ruled that:

A governing body may adopt a per capita system for financing its operations, and may prepare and publish a list of churches which pay or do not pay according to that system.

A church may neither be compelled to pay nor punished for failure to pay any amounts pursuant to such plan.

As Presbyterians we have a unique relationship which obligates us morally to share in the mission enterprise of the Church and the processes and structure necessary to fulfill that to which we are called in the name of Christ.

In reaching its decision, the Commission stated, “This commission perceives that the presbytery’s resolution, by using the word ‘obligation,’ presents the potential for the presbytery to take coercive action such as demanding payment, assessing interest, or otherwise penalizing a church which is behind in making payments.”

In Westminster United Presbyterian Church of Port Huron, Michigan v. The Presbytery of Detroit (Minutes, UPC, 1976, Part I, p. 228), the church session withheld payment of its per capita apportionment notwithstanding its admitted ability to pay. Presbytery “disapproved of the action of the pastor and session..., removed the pastor, and dismissed the session from the conduct of their offices until the per capita tax is paid, and appointed an administrative commission to assume the responsibilities of the session.” The UPC General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission held that presbytery’s action was inappropriate because “it was based only upon refusal to pay per capita apportionment without other cause shown.”

(5) Specification of Error

That the SPJC erred in ruling that the per capita apportionment policy approved on February 5, 2002, by the Presbytery of Scioto Valley was not an irregularity and was, therefore, constitutional.

This specification of error is sustained.(6) Decision

In the instant case, the issue is whether the language added to G-9.0404d in the 1992 amendment (“presbyteries may direct per capita apportionments to the sessions”) grants a presbytery power to compel a session to transmit the per capita apportionment assigned to it.

Although the Presbytery contended at oral argument that its resolution did not compel a session to remit per capita monies, our reading of the resolution leads to a different understanding. Specifically, the necessity of a session applying to the Presbytery for an “excuse” from its “responsibility” to pay per capita monies strongly suggests compulsion if an excuse is not given.

Even if one concludes that the phrase “may direct” in G-9.0404d is ambiguous (meaning “may require,” as the Presbytery essentially argues, or “may ask,” as the Appellants contend), we conclude that it was not the intent of the 1992 amendment to G-9.0404 to change the historic practice of voluntary giving of per capita monies. There was nothing in the overture that indicated that it was intended to change the historically voluntary nature of per capita giving. The presbyteries approved the amendment by an overwhelming majority.

Moreover, if the General Assembly had desired to compel rather than trust sessions to transmit per capita to the presbyteries, it would have used mandatory language to express the sessions’ obligation regarding per capita parallel to the language used to express the presbyteries’ obligation. Finally, Presbytery’s own overture to General Assembly in 2001 proposing to add the language that “a session shall be responsible” for per capita payments suggests that it did not regard the 1992 amendment as clearly imposing such a requirement. Therefore, this Commission finds that the 1992 amendment was intended simply to codify the historic practice of per capita giving.

Thus, notwithstanding the fact that the 1992 amendment was neither considered nor a part of the Book of Order at the time of this Commission’s decision in the Central case, we hereby reaffirm this Commission’s holding that “a church may neither be compelled to pay nor punished for failure to pay any amounts pursuant to such [per capita system] plan.”

We are not persuaded by the argument of the Presbytery and the conclusion of the SPJC that the “reserved powers” clause of G-9.0103 and the 1994 Authoritative Interpretation confirm a power in the presbytery to compel payment by the session of per capita apportionment.

G-9.0103 provides that the jurisdiction of a governing body is limited by the express provisions of the Book of Order “with powers not mentioned being reserved to the presbyteries.” This Commission is of the opinion that this provision does not apply in the present matter because G-10.0102i gives a session the power to determine the distribution of a church’s “benevolences.” This includes the power to raise and transmit per capita funds. In making this determination, the Commission interprets the word “benevolence” to include per capita funds. The Commission therefore concludes that the power of presbytery to act in this regard has been preempted. Similarly, the 1994 Authoritative Interpretation of G-11.0103f, indicating that a presbytery’s guidance to sessions is “mandatory” to the extent that it incorporates requirements established by the presbytery, is also not applicable because G-9.0404d does not give the presbytery the power to require payment of per capita apportionment by sessions.

But, as both parties acknowledged, the theological heart of this case is the covenantal nature of the Church. Indeed, both parties refer to per capita as a high moral obligation and as one of the sinews that binds the covenant community together. This is consistent with the historic nature of Presbyterian order that we have shared power and responsibility (G-4.0302).

Therefore, while our Constitution does not technically permit presbyteries to make per capita mandatory, we are necessarily bound together as a covenant community through our union to God Almighty in Jesus through the Holy Spirit (A Brief Statement of Faith, C-10.4, lines 52-57). Thus, there is a high moral obligation based on the grace and call of God to participate fully in the covenant community. Full participation includes time, talent, and treasure (G-10.0102h; W-5.5004). Moreover, all officers are obligated, by virtue of ordination vows (G-14.0207i; G-14.0405b(9)), to participate fully in the life of the Church. To participate partially or not at all and yet claim to be within the covenant community represents a grievous misunderstanding of our reciprocal covenantal obligations under the singular Lordship of Jesus (The Second Helvetic Confession, C-5.124-141). In other words, we are called to turn from the sin of individualism run rampant and embrace the covenantal community in which our Lord Jesus has called us to live as those who love as we have been loved (John 13:34). Therefore, withholding per capita as a means of protest or dissent evidences a serious breach of the trust and love with which our Lord Jesus intends the covenant community to function together (G-7.0103).

(7) Order

IT IS ORDERED that the Decision and Order of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of the Covenant is reversed.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Synod of the Covenant report this Decision and Order to the Synod at its first meeting after receipt, that the Synod enter the full Decision and Order upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of Scioto Valley report this Decision and Order to the Presbytery at its first meeting after receipt, that the Presbytery enter the full Decision and Order upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

The following members of the Commission were not present and took no part in the deliberations or decision of the Commission on this case: William Carlough, John Dudley, and June Lorenzo. As a representative from the Synod of the Covenant, Catherine Borchert recused herself and did not take part in the hearing, nor did she take part in the deliberations or the decision in this case.

Dated this 12th day of July, 2003.

b. Remedial Case 216-2

-----
Session, Crerar Memorial Presbyterian Church, Complainant/Appellant,

ORDER OF DISMISSAL

v.

Remedial Case 216-2

Presbytery of Chicago, Respondent/Appellee.

(1) History

This remedial case came before this Commission on an appeal filed by the complainant, Session of Crerar Memorial Presbyterian Church (Church) in the Presbytery of Chicago and Synod of Lincoln Trails, against a decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of Lincoln Trails (SPJC) dated January 24, 2003.

This case arose when a petition signed by unhappy members of Complainant church (Ad Hoc Group) was sent to the Committee on Ministry of the Presbytery requesting intervention by the Presbytery of Chicago (Presbytery) in the governance of the church. The Committee on Ministry requested that the Presbytery form an administrative commission under G-9.0502 to investigate the complaints. At its stated meeting on April 21, 2001, Presbytery approved the formation of an administrative commission, which was subsequently appointed. The administrative commission was directed to work with the pastor, session, and congregation to resolve the alleged difficulties.

The final report and recommendations of the administrative commission were presented to Presbytery at its stated meeting on April 9, 2002. The receipt of the report, with its recommendations, led to the initiation of the remedial complaint filed by the session of the church with the presbytery.

The SPJC met on January 24, 2003, to hear the case. It affirmed Presbytery's decision to approve the report of the administrative commission. The session appealed that decision to this Commission.

The Commission approved the Preliminary Order of the Executive Committee that the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission has jurisdiction, that the complainant has standing to file the appeal, that the appeal papers were properly and timely filed, and that the appeal states one or more of the grounds for appeal set forth in D-8.0105 on July 11, 2003.

The Complainant now requests that this Commission approve the withdrawal of the appeal on the basis that the session and the Presbytery have arrived at an agreement to resolve the issues.

(2) Order

This Commission orders that the request of the session of Crerar Memorial Presbyterian Church for withdrawal of the appeal is approved with the understanding that the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission takes no position on the substance of the settlement document.

The following members of the Commission were not present and took no part in this Order: Fred Denson, John Dudley, Leon Fanniel, June Lorenzo, and Christopher Yim. Janet Wilson was recused from participating in this matter.

Dated the 12th day of October, 2003.

c. Disciplinary Case 216-3

Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) by The Presbytery of San Jose Complainant/Appellee,

DECISION AND ORDER

v. Disciplinary Case 216-3

Steven P. Moyer, Respondent/Appellant.)

(1) Headnotes

(a) Cross-examination of Witnesses: Due process requires reasonable opportunity and latitude in cross-examination of witnesses.

(b) Challenge to the Organization of a Permanent Judicial Commission: A permanent judicial commission must take action on each challenge of its organization.

(2) Arrival Statement

This disciplinary case came before this Commission (GAPJC) on an appeal filed by the Respondent/Appellant Steven P. Moyer from a decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of the Pacific (SPJC) dated February 27, 2003. This Commission finds that it has jurisdiction, that the Appellant has standing to appeal, that the appeal was properly and timely filed, and that the appeal states one or more grounds for appeal under D-13.0106.

(3) Appearances

Lynne Reade represented the Appellant. John Kelso appeared as counsel for the Appellee.

(4) History

This case is the second disciplinary case filed and tried against Appellant for a sexual offense, though against a different victim, and for offenses which occurred prior to offenses in the first case. While the first case was on appeal, new charges were brought against the Appellant. Although counsel for the Presbytery of San Jose (Appellee) requested admission of new evidence in the first proceeding, the denial of that petition led to the commencement of this action.

In the first case the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Presbytery of San Jose (PPJC) found the Appellant guilty and entered findings of fact stating its belief that Appellant “exhibited a consistent, and unrelenting pattern of lying.” On appeal to the SPJC, this finding on Appellant’s credibility was ordered stricken from the record. Also the censure was ultimately changed to a thirty-month temporary exclusion from the exercise of ordained office.

This appeal to the GAPJC arises from the second case. On April 24, 2002, the PPJC found the Appellant guilty on one count of sexual abuse through misuse of office or position with one woman and one charge of sexual misconduct with that same woman and one other woman. On April 25, 2002, the PPJC removed the Appellant from the office of minister of the Word and Sacrament following the censure hearing.

In the trial of both cases the organization of the PPJC was the essentially the same; that is, three of the seven commissioners on the second case had tried the first case and another three had participated in pretrial proceedings in that case. This appeal claims constitutional irregularities arising from the organization of the PPJC as well as other matters.

(5) Specifications of Error

Specification of Error Number 1: The SPJC erred in that Appellant’s challenge to the organization of the PPJC (D-11.0402b) was never properly voted upon but was treated only as a request for reference.

This specification of error is sustained.

Appellant argues that the PPJC erred by failing to rule on his challenge to the organization of the PPJC. Further the PPJC, having denied the request for reference, erroneously thought it had concluded the matter. Appellant argued before the PPJC that because many of the same people were on both commissions, their prior exposure to the allegations of the first case called into question their ability to be impartial triers of fact, especially those who had made credibility findings. In fact, the trial transcript in this second case discloses a clear antagonism by the Moderator, who sat on both cases, toward Appellant’s counsel. The Appellee responds that the challenge was not properly framed and could only be treated as a request for a referral to the SPJC. The Appellee complains that a “global challenge,” as made by Appellant, would have left the commission without a quorum, paralyzing the procedure.

Although the challenge was ambiguously and inartfully expressed, Appellant did succeed in challenging the individual organizational composition of the PPJC. Once faced with the issue, the PPJC had a duty to respond to the challenge. On the record before this Commission, the PPJC does not appear to have done so. In treating the challenge as a request for reference only, the PPJC ignored the major thrust of the Appellant’s concern.

As a further observation, Appellant would have been better served had Appellant challenged each PPJC commissioner individually by name, allowing the PPJC to deal with each challenge as it was raised. This would have avoided the problem of an alleged “global challenge.” which would have essentially forced the PPJC to disqualify itself en masse, leaving no quorum. Should a permanent judicial commission by disqualification no longer have a quorum, it is bound to pursue the steps under D-5.0206 for dealing with a lack of quorum.

Specification of Error Number 2: The SPJC erred in failing to conclude that the Presbytery PJC was not an impartial trier of fact.

The specification of error is sustained.

See Specification of Error Number 1.

Specification of Error Number 3: The SPJC erred in that, under the guise of “pastoral confidentiality,” a non-parishioner prosecution witness was improperly allowed to testify about statements made to her by the Appellant, but the defense was not allowed to cross-examine her about anything that she said to the Appellant.

This specification of error is sustained.

Appellee cannot use the alleged privilege as a sword to elicit testimony from the witness concerning statements made by Appellant during the allegedly privileged conversations and then invoke that privilege as a shield to prevent cross-examination on statements made by that witness in those same conversations.

Specification of Error Number 4: The SPJC erred in not allowing defense counsel to cross-examine a main prosecution witness on her credibility.

The specification of error is sustained.

The limitation of Appellant’s effort to cross-examine the Appellee’s principal witness violated Appellant’s right to due process. The record indicates that a witness produced by Appellee offered testimony essential for the prosecution. Appellant was prevented from follow-up cross-examination based on lack of relevance. This Commission finds that given the importance attached to this witness, due process required that reasonable opportunity and latitude for cross-examination be afforded.

In a trial in a disciplinary case, “The prosecuting committee shall present its evidence in support of the charges, subject to objection and cross-examination by the accused.” (D-11.0402g) The Preamble to the Rules of Discipline assert, “In all respects, members are to be accorded procedural safeguards and due process, and it is the intention of these rules so to provide.” (D-1.0101)

Procedural safeguards and due process must be protected in order to maintain the integrity of church discipline. Inattention to due process undermines the “church’s exercise of authority given by Christ” in the disciplinary process. (D-1.0101) Regardless of how egregious the offense might be, an accused should never be deprived of due process, lest in a zealous pursuit of the law the rule of law be undermined.

Specification of Error Number 5: The SPJC erred in failing to reverse the PPJC in their refusal to allow mitigating evidence.

This specification is not sustained.

A permanent judicial commission is not required by D-11.0403e to hear any mitigating evidence.

Specification of Error Number 6: The SPJC erred in failing to reverse for undue severity of censure.

This Commission’s decision to remand this case renders consideration of this specification premature.

(6) Order

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that the decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of the Pacific be reversed and that the case be remanded for a new trial.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Synod of the Pacific Permanent Judicial Commission ensure that the trial is conducted by commissioners who did not participate in the either of the trials against this Appellant. This direction is specific to this case and should not be construed as a precedent holding that a person may never serve in consecutive judicial proceedings involving the same parties.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Synod of the Pacific report this decision to the Synod at its first meeting after receipt, that the Synod enter the full decision upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the decision be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of San Jose report this decision to the Presbytery at its first meeting after receipt, that the Presbytery enter the full decision upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the decision be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

John Dudley, Leon E. Fanniel, and June Lorenzo were not present and took no part in the deliberations or decision on this case.

Dated this 12th day of October, 2003.

DECISION AND ORDER
Disciplinary Case 216-5

v.

Michael B. Myers,
Respondent/Appellant.
-----

(1) Headnotes

(a) Drafting of Charges: A charge that alleges two separate offenses does not comply with the requirement of D-10.0403 that each charge “shall allege only one offense.”

(b) Voting and Judgment on Charges: D-11.0403a and c require that a permanent judicial commission vote on each charge separately and prepare a written decision stating its judgment on each charge.

(c) Scope of Review: It is inappropriate for an appellate permanent judicial commission to review the innocence or guilt of an accused on an offense when no determination of innocence or guilt on that particular offense has been made by the governing body conducting the trial.

(2) Arrival Statement

This disciplinary case came before this Commission on an appeal filed by Michael B. Myers, Respondent/Appellant, from a decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of Mid-America dated January 18, 2003.

(3) Jurisdictional Statements

The Permanent Judicial Commission finds that it has jurisdiction, that the Appellant has standing to appeal, that the appeal was properly and timely filed, and that the appeal states one or more of the grounds for appeal set forth in D-13.0106.

(4) Appearances

Appellant Michael B. Myers represented himself. Rodney G. Nitz appeared as counsel for the Appellee.

(5) History

Michael B. Myers (Appellant) is a minister of the Word and Sacrament in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and a minister member of the Presbytery of Northern Kansas. Cheryl Myers, spouse of Appellant, commenced marriage dissolution proceedings in Shawnee County, Kansas, in September 2000. Having received allegations of misconduct against the Appellant, Presbytery appointed an investigating committee on January 10, 2001.

The investigating committee sent drafts of two charges to the Appellant on September 25, 2001, by certified mail. On December 20, 2001, Appellant met with the investigating committee. At this meeting, a verbal agreement was made to tape record the proceedings, but the tape recording was not to be used in evidence at a subsequent trial.

On January 7, 2002, the investigating committee formally brought two charges against Appellant alleging that he was guilty of misconduct:

1. Failure to file personal and business tax returns for several years (1996–2000) in violation of scripture (Romans, chapter 13) and G-6.0106a; 2. Failure to live in fidelity within the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman (W-4.9001), or chastity in singleness, in violation of G-6.0106b. You are married to Cheryl Myers, and you have acknowledged under oath that you are living with Jeanette Vicari. Further, the Honorable David E. Bruns found in a letter decision dated May 8, 2001, that you acknowledged to the Office of the Disciplinary Administrator that you have a “fiancée.” Judge Bruns concluded that it is questionable how one can still be married and have a “fiancée.”

The charges were amended on March 26, 2002, to read as follows:

(1) Failure to file personal and business tax returns for several years (1996–2000) as well as failing to resolve income tax returns in audit with the IRS in violation of scripture (Romans, chapter 13) and G-6.0106a and b; (2) Failure to live in fidelity within the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman (W-4.9001), or chastity in singleness, and permitting the children of a woman to whom you are not married to call you father, in violation of G-6.0106a and b.

You are married to Cheryl Myers, and you have acknowledged under oath that you are living with Jeanette Vicari. Further, the Honorable David E. Bruns found in a letter decision dated May 8, 2001, that you acknowledged to the Office of the Disciplinary Administrator that you have a “fiancée.” Judge Bruns concluded that it is questionable how one can still be married and have a “fiancée.” You have acknowledged that you permit Ms. Vicari’s children to call you “father.”

A pretrial conference between the Moderator and Clerk of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Presbytery of Northern Kansas (PPJC) and the Appellant was held on March 7, 2002. During that conference, the Moderator of the PPJC issued an Order setting forth a variety of rulings and setting March 29, 2002, as the date by which all motions were to be made, ordering Appellant to provide a list of anticipated witnesses and exhibits, and setting April 20, 2002, as the date for trial on the charges. During the pretrial conference, the Moderator denied Appellant’s motion to dismiss regarding standing, reasoning that Appellant’s spouse, who initiated the allegations, remained either an active or inactive member of a Presbyterian church and thus was a person under the jurisdiction of a governing body of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). At trial, Appellant did not meet his burden of showing that his spouse was not a member of a Presbyterian church, even though given an opportunity to do so.

On March 31, 2002, and again on April 10, 2002, Appellant filed a request with the Moderator of the PPJC for additional time in which to file his list of witnesses and documents. These requests were denied.

The trial before the PPJC was held on April 20, 2002. The oral decision was rendered on April 20, 2002, and the written decision was issued on April 25, 2002. The evidence at the trial consisted of testimony by the clerk of the investigating committee and testimony by Appellant. The evidence also included five documents presented by the prosecution. These included a letter dated May 8, 2001, from Kansas District Court Judge David E. Bruns to counsel for Appellant and counsel for Appellant’s wife regarding a procedural matter in their divorce proceeding; a letter dated April 19, 2001, from Gene Wheeler to the Appellant regarding Appellant’s use of the word “fiancée” during a telephone conversation; a letter dated April 17, 2001, from C. Brooks Wood to Appellant regarding the Appellant’s introduction of his assistant as his “fiancée”; and letters dated June 8, 2001, and September 29, 2001, from Appellant to the Moderator of the investigating committee.

The PPJC found Appellant guilty on both charges:

We, the Permanent Judicial Commission, find the accused guilty of the first Amended Charge, failure to file income tax returns. We, the Permanent Judicial Commission, find the accused guilty of the second Amended Charge, failure to live in fidelity within the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman, or chastity in singleness.

The PPJC censured Appellant to a rebuke on the first charge of failure to file income tax returns and to temporary exclusion from the exercise of ordained office for two years on the second charge. The PPJC further ordered that Appellant submit a report to the Committee on Ministry of the Presbytery of Northern Kansas through the stated clerk every six months “and shall address such conditions, including that: (1) you shall move out of the home of Jeanette Vicari in which you are now living, and (2) you shall not live with any woman without benefit of marriage.”

Appellant appealed the decision to the Synod of Mid-America Permanent Judicial Commission (SPJC), which heard the appeal and issued its decision on January 18, 2003. The SPJC sustained the action of the PPJC in regard to amended charge number 2 that Appellant was in violation of “G-6.0101a” (sic), but did not find sufficient evidence to warrant a finding that he violated “G-6.0101b” (sic).

(6) Determination to Remand

Because of significant deficiencies in the PPJC and SPJC proceedings, this Commission is compelled to remand the matter to the SPJC for corrective action.

Charge number 2 of the amended charges, as tried by the PPJC, alleged that Appellant violated both G-6.0106a and b by his alleged “failure to live in fidelity within the covenant of marriage,” by his permitting Ms. Vicari’s children to call him “father,” and by referring to Ms. Vicari as his fiancée. By combining two alleged offenses in one charge, the charge appears to violate the requirement of D-10.0403 that each charge “shall allege only one offense.”

Moreover, in its “Verdict,” the PPJC found the Appellant guilty of “failure to live in fidelity within the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman, or chastity in singleness,” which cites a violation of G-6.0106b only. The PPJC decision makes no mention of its determination on the alleged violation of G-6.0106a. By citing only G-6.0106b, the PPJC appears in violation of the requirements of D-11.0403a and c that a PJC vote on each charge separately and prepare a written decision stating its judgment on each charge. Finally, the decision does not indicate whether the assertions regarding the Appellant’s use of the term “fiancée” and his permitting the children to call him “father” were included in its finding of guilt on G-6.0106b.

These deficiencies in the trial proceedings regarding charge number 2 were exacerbated when the SPJC “sustained” the decision of the PPJC. In its decision, the SPJC stated, “the PPJC did not err in finding Appellant in violation of G-6.0106a, but did not find sufficient grounds to support the application of G-6.0106b.” This Commission’s reading and understanding of the PPJC decision differs from that of the SPJC in that the “Verdict” of the PPJC refers only to language from G-6.0106b and makes no mention of G-6.0106a. It is inconsistent with principles of due process and fundamental notions of fairness to find the accused guilty on appeal of a violation, which had not been addressed in the PPJC decision.

It is for these reasons that this matter is remanded to the SPJC for whatever corrective action it deems appropriate to comply with this Decision and Order. This shall include further remand to the PPJC for the purpose of modifying its decision, to indicate the Appellant’s innocence or guilt on the alleged violation of G-6.0106a, and to indicate the Appellant’s innocence or guilt on the alleged violation of G-6.0106b. Charge number 1 was not appealed and is therefore not before this Commission.

To facilitate subsequent proceedings, this Commission has made determinations on those specifications of error that pertain to events that occurred prior to the issuance of the PPJC’s written decision.

(7) Specifications of Error

Specification of Error Number 1: The SPJC erred in sustaining the determination of guilt regarding charge number 2 in violation of D-13.0106f and g as follows:

a. that Appellant's use of the term "fiancée" on a handful of occasions under oath or in private communications did not violate G-6.0106a and

b. that Appellant's permitting the children of a woman to whom he was not married to call him "father" did not violate G-6.0106a.

In view of the determination to remand, consideration of this specification of error is premature.

Specification of Error Number 2: The SPJC erred in affirming the PPJC's refusal to permit Appellant to supplement the record under D-13.0106a, b, c, d, e, f, and g.

This specification of error is not sustained. The matters that Appellant wants to supplement are already in the record.

Specification of Error Number 3: The SPJC erred in affirming the PPJC's denial of Appellant's motion to dismiss before trial and his oral motion for directed verdict after submission of the Presbytery's case pursuant to D-13.0106f and g.

This specification of error is not sustained. Appellant has not shown that the person who made the original allegations herein does not have standing. The Rules of Discipline do not provide for motions for directed verdicts. Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) v. Murdock and Woodard, Minutes, 1991, Part I, p. 183.

Specification of Error Number 4: The SPJC erred in affirming the PPJC's decision to deny Appellant the ability to call witnesses and submit exhibits pursuant to D-13.0106a, b, c, d, and f.

This specification of error is not sustained. The Appellant did not submit a list of witnesses and documents by March 29, 2002, as was required by the pretrial order dated March 7, 2002. Therefore, the Moderator's ruling was correct in that Appellant had not timely complied with the previous order.

Specification of Error Number 5: The SPJC erred in affirming the PPJC's decision to allow the prosecuting committee to use one of its own members as its sole testimony at trial pursuant to D-13.0106a, c, e, and f.

This specification of error is not sustained. There is nothing in the record that indicates that the parties entered into a confidentiality agreement during the meeting of December 20, 2001, between Appellant and the investigating committee, which would have precluded members of the investigating committee from testifying regarding what transpired at that meeting. If this were a mutual intent of the parties, it should have been memorialized in the form of a written agreement. The record is sufficient to show that the agreement extended only to the use of any tape recordings made during the meeting. As an experienced trial attorney, Appellant knew, or should have known, that a written agreement was necessary to prevent any misunderstandings on this arrangement. Moreover, the member of the prosecuting committee did not testify to anything substantial, but primarily introduced into evidence documents submitted by Appellant himself.

Members of a prosecuting committee may testify regarding the procedures used during the investigation of allegations of misconduct. Unlike this case, when the underlying factual allegations involve a third party, it is preferable to use the third party as the witness to those facts, especially when the third party is available.

Specification of Error Number 6: The SPJC erred in affirming the PPJC's decision to allow questions of the Appellant at trial beyond the compass of the amended charges and in violation of the accused's right to remain silent regarding questions not related to the amended charges pursuant to D-13.0106a, b, e, f, and g.

This specification is not sustained. This specification of error is not sustained on the basis that the SPJC already ruled that such questioning was not appropriate. This Commission would suggest that while not prohibited, it may not be wise for respondents in disciplinary cases to represent themselves.

Specification of Error Number 7:

a. The SPJC erred in upholding the severity of censure.

b. The SPJC permitted the PPJC to impose a censure without conducting a censure hearing pursuant to D-13.0106b, c, d, f, and h.

Consideration of Specification of Error Number 7A would be premature in view of our determination on remand.

Specification of Error Number 7B is not sustained. The Commission notes that in this case the Moderator created the impression in Appellant's mind that a censure hearing would be held. However, the Rules of Discipline do not require that a censure hearing be held. D-11.0403e.

Specification of Error Number 8: The SPJC erred in affirming the PPJC's decision to permit the admission of the Presbytery's exhibits pursuant to D-13.0106c and f.

This specification of error is not sustained. Determinations regarding the admissibility of evidence are within the discretion of the PPJC. This Commission does not find that the PPJC abused or improperly exercised its discretion in admitting the referenced exhibits. Absent a showing by Appellant that the PPJC improperly exercised its discretion, this Commission will not substitute its judgment for that of the PPJC, which thoroughly considered the admissibility of these exhibits during the pre-trial and trial proceedings.

(8) Decision

The decision is to remand this case to the SPJC for further proceedings, informed by the determinations on the specifications of error above.

In reaching this determination, this Commission is mindful that the censure imposed upon the Appellant will be completed in May 2004, if the conditions of the censure have been fulfilled. Therefore, this Commission urges prompt attention to and disposition of this matter.

The record reveals extreme confusion on the part of the Appellant, the prosecuting committee, and the PPJC on the relationship between civil law and the judicial process of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in attempting to apply concepts of secular law to church law and process. While there may be similarities between the two, they are not to be confused with one another.

(9) Order

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED by this Commission that the decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of Mid-America is remanded to the Synod Permanent Judicial Commission for further proceedings consistent with this Decision and Order.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Synod of Mid-America report this decision to the Synod at its first meeting after receipt and that the Synod enter the full Decision and Order upon its minutes.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of Northern Kansas report this decision to the presbytery at its first meeting after receipt, that the presbytery enter the full Decision and Order upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of the Synod of Mid-America.

The following member of the Commission was not present and took no part in the deliberations or decision of the Commission on this case: Leon Fanniel. Jesse Butler recused himself from any participation in the case.

Dated this 12th day of October, 2003.

DECISION AND ORDER
 Remedial Case 216-6

v.

Presbytery of San Francisco,
 Respondent/Appellee.

(1) Headnotes

(a) Presbytery's Discretion Regarding Candidates: In fulfilling its duties under G-4.0306a(2) and G-14.0304 to "give guidance" to a candidate and to evaluate a candidate's readiness for ministry, a presbytery enjoys wide discretion. "The responsibility of making a judgment about the wisdom of a person remaining on the roll of candidates belongs to the candidate's presbytery." Bedford-Central Presbyterian Church v. Presbytery of New York City, Minutes, 1987, p. 119.

(b) Presbytery's Use of Confidential Documents as Basis for Candidate's Removal from Rolls: A presbytery is not obligated to provide to a candidate either the text or the source of any confidential documents on which it relies in deciding to remove a candidate from its rolls. But the nature of the covenant relationship requires a presbytery to provide to a candidate in a timely manner the substance of the concerns raised in such documents when those concerns form the basis for a recommendation of removal. The information provided to the candidate should be sufficiently detailed to permit the candidate a fair opportunity to respond.

(c) Failure to State a Claim Upon Which Relief Can be Granted: In considering whether a complaint states a claim upon which relief can be granted, a permanent judicial commission shall base its determination solely upon the assumed truth of the facts alleged in the complaint. Daniel J. McKittrick v. The Session of West End Presbyterian Church of Albany, New York, Minutes, 2003, p. 273.

(d) No Summary Dismissal Where Facts Disputed: Where there are factual allegations that, if proved true, would entitle the complainant to some relief, "a dismissal is only appropriate after thorough examination of the record and opportunity for all parties to be heard." Minutes, 1990, p. 139.

(e) Duty to Transmit Record When Case Accepted by Higher Governing Body: The record in a case shall be transmitted to the clerk of the higher governing body only after notice that the case has been accepted. (D-6.0307c) A case is deemed "accepted" only after an affirmative ruling on the preliminary questions in D-6.0305. It may be necessary, however, to transmit minutes and papers related to a case before it is accepted for the purpose of deciding a challenge to a ruling on preliminary questions in a hearing under D-6.0306a.

(2) Arrival Statement

This remedial case comes to the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission (GAPJC) on appeal from a decision by the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of the Pacific (SPJC) dismissing a complaint on jurisdictional grounds—namely, for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted. (D-6.0305d) This Commission finds that it has jurisdiction, that the Appellants have standing to appeal, that the appeal was properly and timely filed, and that the appeal states one or more grounds for appeal under D-8.0105.

(3) Appearances

Lynne Reade represented the Appellants. Stephen Taber and Rick Ballard appeared as counsel for the Appellee.

(4) History

In this case the Appellants, various minister members and elder commissioners to a meeting of the Presbytery of San Francisco (Presbytery), challenged the regularity of the Presbytery's decision under G-14.0312 to remove a candidate for the ministry of the Word and Sacrament from its roll of candidates. The Presbytery's Committee on Preparation for Ministry (CPM) had recommended to Presbytery that the candidate in question be removed from its rolls, and the Presbytery voted to do so at its meeting on November 12, 2002.

Because the SPJC ultimately dismissed the complaint for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, the parties' pleadings are summarized below.

(5) The Parties' Pleadings

The complaint attacked the regularity of the Presbytery's action on four grounds.

(a) Reliance on Confidential Documents in Violation of G-1.0304

In making its recommendation that the candidate be removed from the covenant relationship, the Presbytery's CPM relied on a number of documents it had obtained or generated during the course of its evaluation of the candidate, but that it refused to share with the candidate on the grounds of alleged confidentiality. According to Appellants, the CPM shared with the candidate the concerns raised by these documents only in a generic way, and without giving the candidate either access to the documents or information specific enough to permit the candidate to rebut any of the specific matters from which the CPM's concerns may have arisen. The complaint alleged that the Presbytery's reliance on these secret documents in determining the candidate's fitness for ministry violates the directive of G-1.0304 that "truth is in order to goodness."

The Presbytery's answer defended the propriety of its reliance on confidential documents by noting the absence of any Book of Order provision requiring such disclosure and the allegedly common practice of presbyteries in granting confidentiality to people providing information about candidates. Presbytery further asserted that the candidate had waived any right to complain about the CPM's use of confidential information by signing the standard form for candidates and inquirers, which contains the following language:

I hereby release the Church and its committees, agents, and representatives from any claims, causes, or actions, which may arise from said inquiries and answers received to such inquiries and any use made of such answers. Further, I grant permission for the Presbytery Committee to contact any person listed by me as a reference or any other person not so listed to discuss my suitability and readiness.

(b) Ignoring Alleged Conflict of Interest

The complaint also charged that the CPM process was fundamentally unfair in that Presbytery ignored an alleged bias and conflict of interest on the part of one CPM member. That member had reportedly made a false allegation about the candidate, but had nevertheless participated in the CPM's recommendation to terminate the Presbytery's covenant relationship with the candidate.

The Presbytery denied that any CPM member had made any false statements, had a conflicting interest, or had acted with bias.

(c) Failure to Give Guidance in Violation of G-14.0306a(2)

Appellants charged that Presbytery violated its duty under G-14.0306a(2) to support a candidate "with an understanding and sympathetic interest" and to "give guidance in regard to . . . practical training and plans for education." According to Appellants, although the CPM appointed a task force to investigate concerns about the candidate's ability to resolve conflicts, the CPM gave the candidate "no guidance" regarding training or education that might help the candidate address these concerns.

The Presbytery's answer disputed the factual allegation of "no guidance," contending the candidate received "ample guidance."

(d) Abuse of Discretion

Finally, Appellants alleged that Presbytery abused its discretion and violated fundamental principles of fairness in reaching its decision that the candidate was not fit for the ministry of Word and Sacrament. The complaint enumerated several items as evidence of the CPM's alleged abuse: handling its investigation of the candidate as if it were a disciplinary matter, but without any of the due process protections, discouraging the candidate's request for the presence of an elder as counsel during a meeting with the CPM task force, refusing the candidate's request for specifics about allegations made against the candidate, voting to remove the candidate from the covenant relationship before giving the candidate an opportunity to speak with the full committee as required by G-14.0312, refusing a request for further conversation once the candidate received the more detailed information contained in the CPM's report to Presbytery recommending termination of the covenant relationship, and mischaracterizing reports and failing to note positive references about the candidate when discussing alleged negative "patterns."

The complaint requested a stay of enforcement of the Presbytery's decision to terminate the covenant relationship, submission to the SPJC under seal of the entire CPM file on the candidate, and reinstatement of the candidate to the covenant relationship.

The Presbytery denied each of Appellants' allegations and any abuse of discretion or violation of fundamental fairness. Presbytery opposed the requested submission of the entire CPM file to the SPJC and urged dismissal of the complaint for failure to state a claim on three grounds. First, while conceding that the SPJC could review the Presbytery's action for irregularity in the process, it argued that, under Donna Bevensee v. Presbytery of New Brunswick, Minutes, 1998, p. 134, the SPJC could not substitute its judgment for that of the Presbytery. Second, it contended that the SPJC had no power to compel the Presbytery to violate its agreements with third parties who had supplied information about the candidate only under a guarantee of confidentiality. Third, it contended that it had followed the procedures mandated by G-14.0312 and the Presbytery's own "Steps and Procedures" policy for removing a candidate "for sufficient reasons."

(6) The SPJC's Rulings

The SPJC granted a stay of enforcement of the Presbytery's decision to remove the candidate from its rolls. The Acting Moderator and Clerk of the SPJC issued a preliminary ruling on March 11, 2003, dismissing the complaint for failure to state a claim upon which relief could be granted. They concluded, among other things, that the "secrecy complained of is a reasonable part of the process of inquiry."

Prior to a May 2, 2003 hearing before the full SPJC on the Appellants' challenge to this ruling, the parties entered into a Stipulation of Facts setting forth the facts in the complaint assumed to be true for purposes of determining whether it stated a claim. Daniel J. McKittrick v. Session of West End Presbyterian Church of Albany, New York, Minutes, 2003, p. 273. At the hearing the SPJC also permitted testimony from witnesses "on the limited question of how the provisions of the Book of Order should be applied generally in matters involving the process of preparation of candidates for ministry."

Following the hearing, the full SPJC dismissed the complaint. It ruled that the stipulated facts, "[t]aken separately or in total," failed to show "that the process afforded to [the candidate] was unfair in any material regard" and that the Presbytery had acted within its discretion and not committed any irregularity.

Regarding the CPM's reliance on confidential documents, the SPJC held that the Book of Order does not require their disclosure to a candidate and that the Presbytery has discretion to seek and rely on confidential communications. In support of this conclusion, the SPJC cited the following evidence introduced at the hearing: a consent form signed by the candidate and the testimony of two witnesses regarding the practice of presbyteries in seeking and using confidential communications.

The SPJC further rejected Appellants' challenge to the participation in decision making of a CPM member with an alleged conflict of interest or bias. The SPJC held that the "CPM would certainly have had the discretion to believe or not believe” an allegedly false assertion about the candidate and “would also have the burden of decision as to what weight should be granted to it, if true.” Therefore, the SPJC concluded that “[b]elief or nonbelief in underlying factual determinations is the role and charge of the CPM members rather than a basis for recusal.”

With respect to the CPM’s alleged failure to provide any guidance to the candidate concerning conflict resolution, the SPJC held that the CPM has discretion to provide the guidance they deem appropriate. Citing a list of documents in the candidate’s CPM file, which list was entered as evidence during the May 2 hearing, the SPJC ruled that it “is clear on the face of this record that the many reports, minutes, and consultations provided the candidate would have been quite instructive as to the candidate’s status” and that the “CPM exercised appropriate discretion in not providing further guidance.”

Finally, the SPJC ruled that the process issues cited in the complaint as evidence of the CPM’s alleged abuse of discretion and violation of fundamental fairness “lack cogency and materiality.”

Although initially limiting its stay of enforcement until the filing of an appeal to this Commission, the SPJC ultimately granted a stay that permits the candidate to remain on the rolls of Presbytery pending this Commission’s resolution of the appeal.

(7) Specifications of Error

Specification of Error Number 1: The SPJC erred in concluding that confidential communications may be kept secret from the candidate.

This specification is sustained in part and not sustained in part. “The responsibility of making a judgment about the wisdom of a person remaining on the roll of candidates belongs to the candidate’s presbytery.” Bedford-Central Presbyterian Church v. Presbytery of New York City, Minutes, 1987, p. 119. The Presbytery, through its CPM, performs on behalf of the whole church the critical function of evaluating a candidate’s readiness to enter the ministry of the Word and Sacrament. That process of “guidance and evaluation” (G-14.0304) is a discernment process that necessarily requires the exercise of judgment and discretion on the part of a CPM. The Book of Order does not specifically address the use of confidential documents as a means by which a CPM may equip itself to make that judgment, nor does it mandate the disclosure of any such documents to a candidate.

But the Book of Order does describe the relationship between the candidate and a presbytery as a “covenant relationship.” (G-14.0301) Inherent in a covenant relationship is the expectation of candor and trust between the CPM and the candidate as they work together to discern the candidate’s readiness for ministry. Therefore, the nature of the covenant relationship requires that the CPM communicate in a timely fashion to the candidate the substance of any concerns raised in confidential documents that are of such gravity that these concerns may prompt a CPM to recommend the candidate’s removal from the rolls. That communication should be sufficiently detailed to permit the candidate to respond to or rebut any concerns or to undertake any corrective action or further education or training. The CPM is under no obligation to share either the text or the source of the document itself with the candidate. As this Commission said in Bedford-Central, a case challenging a presbytery’s removal of a candidate from its rolls, “[t]he Presbyterian Church, throughout its history, in this country, has sought to guarantee that its decision-making processes operate openly, deliberately, fairly, and inclusively, in ways most likely to secure ‘the approbation of an impartial public, and the countenance and blessing of the great Head of the Church universal.’ (G-1.0308.)” Therefore, while a CPM has discretion to use and rely on confidential documents in order to perform its gatekeeping function, “secrecy” is inimical to the candor and trust inherent in a covenant relationship.

Because the SPJC dismissed this case on a jurisdictional ground without the benefit of a trial, the SPJC did not have before it a full evidentiary record that would permit it to determine whether the CPM shared with the candidate the substance of concerns raised by the confidential documents in a way that permitted the candidate a fair opportunity to respond. That assessment of the CPM’s process will be a matter for the SPJC to determine following any trial that occurs on remand of this case to the SPJC.

Specification of Error Number 2: The SPJC erred in concluding that the CPM has the discretion to provide guidance as they deem appropriate.

This specification is not sustained. The duty of a CPM under G-14.0306a(2) to “give guidance” to the candidate necessarily entails the exercise of judgment about the needs of a particular candidate and the kind of further education or training that would be appropriate in helping the candidate prepare to serve the church in ordained ministry. In both the Bedford-Central and Bevenssee cases, this Commission acknowledged the wide latitude the Book of Order grants a CPM in discharging its responsibilities. Although the CPM’s discretion is not absolute or unfettered, the SPJC correctly concluded that a CPM’s fulfillment of its duties under G-14.0306a(2) involves discretion. Whether the CPM abused its discretion in this case is a matter for trial.

Specification of Error Number 3: The SPJC erred by attempting to decide the case on the merits, rather than limiting itself to determining whether a claim had been made.

This specification is sustained. The SPJC committed two procedural errors. First, in determining whether a complaint states a claim upon which relief may be granted, a judicial commission must assume the truth of all facts alleged in the complaint and decide whether those facts would entitle the complainant to any relief under the Book of Order. (McKittrick) In this case the complaint alleged, among other things, that the Presbytery violated its duty under G-14.0306a(2) “to give guidance in regard to . . . practical training and plans for education” in that the CPM provided “no guidance” (emphasis supplied) about training or education in conflict resolution. Because the SPJC was required to assume the truth of that factual allegation, the complaint on its face stated a claim that the Presbytery had committed an irregularity in the process of handling this candidacy. If the allegation of “no guidance” were ultimately supported with proof at trial, the Appellants would be entitled to a remedy that, at the very least, requires the CPM to correct this procedural default and to resume its work with the candidate.

Second, the SPJC clearly went beyond the face of the complaint to endorse the Presbytery’s factual assertion that it had provided “ample guidance.” Citing a hearing exhibit that listed the documents in the candidate’s CPM file, the SPJC held that it “is clear on the face of this record that the many reports, minutes, and consultations provided the candidate would have been quite instructive as to the candidate’s status.” (Emphasis supplied.) In relying on matters outside the complaint, the SPJC not only violated the standard set forth in McKittrick but also improperly determined the merits of disputed factual allegations without the benefit of a trial. As this Commission reminded stated clerks and moderators of permanent judicial commissions in 1990, the Book of Order contains no constitutional provision permitting “summary dismissal of any case” where there are disputed factual allegations that, if proved, would entitle the complainant to some relief. Under those circumstances, “a dismissal is only appropriate after thorough examination of the record and opportunity for all parties to be heard.” (Minutes, 1990, p. 139)

Specification of Error Number 4: The SPJC erred by basing its decision on the limited testimony and exhibits permitted at the hearing and the stipulation of facts, and not on the complaint itself.

This specification is sustained. For the reasons set forth under Specification of Error #3, the SPJC erred in its dismissal of this case.

Specification of Error Number 5: The SPJC erred in failing to require Presbytery to forward all minutes and papers related to the case.

This specification is not sustained. D-6.0307c requires the clerk of a lower governing body to forward “all minutes and papers pertaining to the case” upon notification by the stated clerk of the higher governing body that the case has been “accepted.” The SPJC dismissed this case on jurisdictional grounds and hence did not “accept” the case. Therefore, the duty of the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery to forward all records and papers related to the case had not been triggered.

Because, however, this Commission concludes that the SPJC erred in dismissing this matter and that the case should have been “accepted” and a trial on the merits conducted, the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery must now comply with D-6.0307c by forwarding all minutes and papers related to this case to the Synod Clerk. Said minutes and papers shall include the complete CPM file on the candidate, including those items deemed “confidential” by the CPM. The Presbytery may submit these “confidential” items to the Synod Clerk under seal, to be reviewed only by members of the SPJC for purposes of permitting the SPJC as the trier of facts to ascertain whether, as a matter of fair process, the CPM shared with the candidate the substance of any concerns raised in these confidential communications in a way that permitted the candidate to respond.

Although not at issue in this case, the Commission notes some tension between the language of “acceptance” in D-6.0307c and the requirement under D-6.0306a that a party challenging an adverse finding on a preliminary question be given an “opportunity to present evidence and argument on the finding in question.” In certain circumstances—for example, where the preliminary question of standing may depend upon disputed facts that might be resolved by reference to the minutes and papers related to a case—it may be necessary for the clerk of the lower governing body to transmit the record even at that stage.

Specification of Error Number 6: The SPJC erred in limiting the duration of its stay of enforcement until the filing of an appeal or expiration of the time allowed for appeal.

This specification is not sustained. This specification of error became moot when the SPJC amended its decision to continue the stay of enforcement until the expiration of the time for filing an appeal or the resolution of any appeal.

Specification of Error Number 7: The Presbytery committed constitutional violations, specifically a disregard of its duty under G-14.0306a(2), in removing the candidate from the covenant relationship.

This specification is not sustained. This alleged error raises a merits issue that can be determined only after any trial that occurs on remand of this case to the SPJC.

Specification of Error Number 8: The Presbytery mischaracterized documents in the candidate’s CPM file in reaching its decision to recommend removal of the candidate from the rolls.

This specification is not sustained. This alleged error raises a merits issue that can be determined only after any trial that occurs on remand of this case to the SPJC.

Specification of Error Number 9: The Presbytery abused its discretion by the manner in which it handled the process of evaluating the candidate throughout its covenant relationship with the candidate.

This specification is not sustained. This alleged error raises a merits issue that can be determined only after any trial that occurs on remand of this case to the SPJC.

(8) Order

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that the decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of the Pacific is reversed, except that the stay of enforcement remains in effect pending the final resolution of this matter, and this case is remanded to that Permanent Judicial Commission with directions to conduct a trial on the merits or to pursue any other pretrial mediation options that it deems appropriate.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Synod of the Pacific report this decision to the Synod at its first meeting after receipt, that the Synod enter the full decision upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the decision be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of San Francisco report this decision to the Presbytery at its first meeting after receipt, that the Presbytery enter the full decision upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the decision be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

Leon Fanniel was not present and took no part in the deliberations or decision of the Commission on this case.

Dated this 12th day of October, 2003.

A Statement of Complaint in a remedial case came before this Commission against the Session of Hahna Presbyterian Church in the Presbytery of Chicago dated May 8, 2003.

It appears that the Presbytery of Chicago failed to treat the complaint as initiating judicial process, but instead took some sort of administrative action with respect to the complaint.

The General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission finds that the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission does not have original jurisdiction in the case. The complaint should have been treated by the Presbytery of Chicago as initiating a remedial case under D-6.0202b(1).

The case is remanded to the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Presbytery of Chicago for proceedings under Chapter VI of the Rules of Discipline. Complainant's May 8, 2003, filing shall be treated as the commencement of judicial process, and Respondent's time for filing its answer to that Statement of Complaint shall commence as of the date of its receipt of this Order of Remand.

The following members of the Commission were not present and took no part in this Order: William Carrough, John Dudley, and June Lorenzo. Janet Wilson recused herself from participating in this matter.

Dated the 11th day of June, 2003.

ORDER OF DISMISSAL
Disciplinary Case 216-9

(1) History

This disciplinary case came before this Commission on an appeal filed by the Complainant/Appellant, Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) by Presbytery of South Dakota, against a decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of Lakes and Prairies dated May 9, 2003.

John Poland was found guilty of six charges by the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Presbytery of South Dakota on November 17, 2001, and was censured to temporary exclusion from the exercise of ordained office for a period of two years and supervised rehabilitation by the Committee on Ministry of the Presbytery of South Dakota.

Respondent/Appellant appealed the determination of guilt and censure to the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of Lakes and Prairies of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) (SPJC). The SPJC heard the appeal on May 9, 2003, and reversed the determinations of guilt on three of the charges and modified the degree of censure.

The General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission found that the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission has jurisdiction, that the appellant has standing to file the appeal, that the appeal papers were properly and timely filed, and that the appeal states one or more of the grounds for appeal set forth in D-8.0105 in its Order for Hearing dated July 12, 2003.

The Commission received a written communication from Sarah Hegena, moderator of the prosecuting committee dated July 21, 2003, in which the prosecuting committee waived its right to appeal the SPJC decision and, therefore, requested that the appeal be withdrawn.

(2) Order

IT IS ORDERED, that the appeal be dismissed.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED, that the Stated Clerk of the Synod of Lakes and Prairies report this decision to the Synod at its first meeting after receipt, that the Synod enter the full decision upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the decision be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED, that the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of South Dakota report this decision to the Presbytery at its first meeting after receipt, that the Presbytery enter the full decision upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the decision be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

Ernest Cutting was recused from participation in this case. The following members were not present and took no part in the decision in this matter: Fred Denson, John Dudley, Leon Fanniel, June Lorenzo, and Christopher Yim.

(1) History

1. On August 19, 2002, Carl James Sohn initiated a remedial complaint against Hanmi Presbytery alleging that Hanmi Presbytery failed to conduct a reasonable investigation in a disciplinary matter and failed to conduct an adequate review of the investigation. (Titled Request to Assume Jurisdiction).
2. On January 25, 2003, the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of Southern California and Hawaii dismissed the complaint and determined that a review of the work of the investigating committee had been conducted, pursuant to complainant’s petition for review on D-10.0303a.
3. On March 30, 2003, Carl James Sohn filed an appeal of the remedial case with the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission.
4. On April 23, 2003, the Executive Committee of the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission issued a Preliminary Order of Dismissal based on the grounds that the appeal does not state one or more grounds set forth set forth in D-13.0106.
5. On July 12, 2003, the Executive Committee of the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission issued a Second Amended Preliminary Order directing the parties to submit briefs in anticipation of a hearing on the jurisdictional questions as outlined in the Order.
6. On October 12, 2003, the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission overruled the Second Amended Preliminary Order and issued an Order of Dismissal based on lack of jurisdiction, determining that once the review of an investigating committee has been conducted pursuant to a petition for review under D-10-0303a, no further appeal is available.
7. Because of the earlier orders, this Commission’s Order of Dismissal dated October 12, 2003, gave the parties an opportunity to challenge the Order of Dismissal and to request a jurisdictional hearing.
8. By letter dated October 20, 2003, Complainant challenged this Commission’s Order of Dismissal.
9. On December 15, 2003, this Commission issued an Order for Hearing on the sole question of “Whether the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission has any jurisdiction to review the Synod Permanent Judicial Commission’s decision in light of the provision of D-10.0303e that ‘the matter is concluded’ once a petition for review process has been completed and no charges are filed.”
10. By letter dated February 13, 2004, the Stated Clerk of the Synod of Southern California and Hawaii informed this Commission of the process followed by the Synod Permanent Judicial Commission pursuant to the petition for review. The Stated Clerk also noted that no charges could be brought at this time arising out of the original allegations because of the time limits set forth in D-10.0401.

(2) Order

Because no further relief is available, this Commission orders that the appeal in this remedial case be dismissed. There will be no further proceedings in this matter.

The following members of the Commission were not present and took no part in this Order: June Lorenzo and Mildred Morales. Leon Faniel was recused from participating in this matter.

On October 12, 2003, the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission approved the findings in the Second Amended Preliminary Order that this Commission has jurisdiction, that the complainants have standing to file the case, that the complaint was properly and timely filed, and that the complaint states a claim upon which relief can be granted.

The trial in this matter before the Commission was set for February 27, 2004. The trial was to be limited to the question whether the Synod’s failure to appoint an investigating committee to handle this specific matter was a delinquency.

On February 7, 2004, the Synod of Southern California and Hawaii, through its Committee of Counsel, informed the Commission that “At its meeting on January 29, 2004, the Hanmi Administrative Commission authorized the designation of an investigating committee to receive any accusations that could still be charged under the time limit provided in D-10.0401. The Moderator of the Hanmi Administrative Commission, in consultation with the Started Clerk of the Synod, is moving ahead in naming that investigating committee.”

Having received notification that the investigating committee has been appointed and has begun its review, IT IS ORDERED that the matter is dismissed.

By letter dated April 21, 2004, the Complainant/Appellant requested that the appeal be withdrawn on the basis that the member had been restored to membership and office. The Commission subsequently received written verification of the action of the session. The counsel for the Respondent/Appellee objected to the dismissal of the appeal. However, this Commission has determined that there is no further judicial relief that can be granted to Carl James Sohn. The Synod Permanent Judicial Commission decision notes that the Synod Permanent Judicial Commission found that the process followed by the Session of Serone Church was fatally flawed and that Hanmi Presbytery failed to properly fulfill its role. It is unfortunate that the church members in this and related cases had to appeal to the Synod and, ultimately, to the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission to achieve justice and correction of the irregularities of the Session and the Presbytery found by the Synod in its decision.

IT IS ORDERED, that the appeal be dismissed.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED, that the Stated Clerk of the Synod of Southern California and Hawaii report this decision to the Synod at its first meeting after receipt, that the Synod enter the full decision upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the decision be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED, that the Stated Clerk of the Hanmi Presbytery report this decision to the Presbytery at its first meeting after receipt, that the Presbytery enter the full decision upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the decision be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED, that the Clerk of Session of Serone Church report this decision to the Session at its first meeting after receipt, that the Session enter the full decision upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the decision be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

 Remedial Case 216-14

(1) History

This remedial case came before this Commission on an appeal filed by the Complainants/Appellants against decisions of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of Southern California and Hawaii (SPJC) dated November 22, 2003.

The Session of Serone Church (formerly Korean Independent Presbyterian Church), Respondent/Appellee, purported to exercise church discipline against Complainants/Appellants as members and officers of the church in removing them from membership. Complainants/Appellants filed a remedial complaint challenging as irregular these actions by the Session. Complainants/Appellants also filed an appeal from the disciplinary action of the Session.

The SPJC assumed original jurisdiction of both matters after Hanmi Presbytery failed to act. In its decisions of November 22, 2003, the SPJC concluded that the “Session . . . did not follow the required procedure for exercising church discipline of a member.” The SPJC specifically found that the “record clearly indicates that the steps described in Chapters 10 and 11 of the Rules of Discipline were not followed.” Therefore, the SPJC ordered the reinstatement of Complainants/Appellants to the roll of active members with all the rights, privileges, and responsibilities of membership, and further ordered that its decision be reported to, and the full decision entered upon the minutes of, Hanmi Presbytery.

The SPJC also dismissed the remedial complaint filed by Complainants/Appellants as moot, reasoning that “[t]his decision has acknowledged irregularity in the proceedings and reversed the [Session’s] decision” so that “no further process is required.”

The Session appealed the SPJC’s reversal in the disciplinary cases. The Session has now, however, complied with the SPJC’s decision and reinstated Complainants/Appellants to full membership and office. Having received

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED, that the Stated Clerk of Hanmi Presbytery report this decision to the Presbytery at its first meeting after receipt, that the Presbytery enter the full decision upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the decision be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED, that the Clerk of Session of Serone Church report this decision to the Session at its first meeting after receipt, that the Session enter the full decision upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the decision be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

C. *Advisory Committee on the Constitution Agency Summary

1. Assigned Responsibilities

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC) is composed of nine voting members as established by the Book of Order, G-13.0112 and G-18.0301. The nine voting members must be former members of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the General Assembly, stated clerks or former stated clerks of synods or presbyteries, or other qualified persons with knowledge of and experience with the Constitution and polity of the church (G-13.0112a). The Stated Clerk of the General Assembly is a member ex officio without vote.

With regard to questions requiring an interpretation of the Book of Order, the advisory committee's responsibilities are set out in G-13.0112c and d as follows:

c. All questions requiring an interpretation by the General Assembly of the Book of Order arising from governing bodies of the church or from individuals shall be communicated in writing to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly no later than 120 days prior to the convening of the next session of the General Assembly.

d. The Stated Clerk shall refer all such questions of interpretation to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, except those pertaining to matters pending before a judicial commission. The Advisory Committee shall report its findings to the General Assembly along with its recommendations. Such recommendations may include proposals for constitutional change. The General Assembly shall vote on the recommendations, and may amend or decline to approve them.

With regard to proposed amendments to the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), the advisory committee's mandated responsibilities are set out in G-18.0301b, as follows:

b. The Stated Clerk shall refer all such proposed amendments to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution (G-13.0112), which shall examine the proposed amendment for clarity and consistency of language and for compatibility with other provisions of the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). The advisory committee shall report its findings to the General Assembly along with its recommendations, which may include an amended version of any proposed constitutional changes as well as advice to accept or decline the proposals referred to the committee. The General Assembly shall not consider any amendment until it has considered the report and any recommendation from the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

2. Process and Procedures, Responsibilities and Relationships

The advisory committee does not interpret the Constitution. The role of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, as its title suggests and as its constitutional mandate clearly establishes, is to advise the General Assembly. The committee's advice has no authority until and unless it is approved by the General Assembly. With respect to proposed amendments to the Constitution, the advisory committee focuses on clarity of proposed language, and consistency of the proposed amendment with the remainder of the Constitution. The advisory committee occasionally finds that the intent of the proposal is already inherent in other provisions of the Constitution or that it could be achieved by slight changes in language, by placing the amendment in a different section, or by different language entirely. The advisory committee sometimes has recommended such changes in order to avoid inconsistencies within the Book of Order, and also to make as few changes as possible in existing paragraphs and section numbering.

With respect to requests for interpretation, the advisory committee takes seriously the constitutional mandate that such requests require a binding authoritative interpretation of the General Assembly under the provisions of G-13.0103r. In many circumstances, the question has been answered by earlier interpretations and does not require action by the General Assembly. In these cases, the inquirer is notified of the standing interpretation.

All overtures and reports containing proposed amendments and all requests for interpretation of the Book of Order by the General Assembly must be communicated in writing to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly no later than 120 days prior to the convening of the next session of the General Assembly (G-13.0112c). This 120-day time period allows the advisory committee the time carefully to consider and research each proposed amendment and request. Those requests that the advisory committee brings to the General Assembly are those that it believes meet the constitutional criterion.

The advisory committee completed its preparatory work for the General Assembly in two meetings. At its three-day fall meeting, held in conjunction with the OGA Fall Polity Conference, we were able to orient one new member, begin work on our task of preparing for the 216th General Assembly (2004), offer preliminary evaluation of some proposals made by the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly, and advise the Independent Committee of Inquiry concerning its proposals for amending the Book of Order. At its spring five-day meeting and a subsequent conference call, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution concluded its work of preparing responses to constitutional issues to be considered by the 216th General Assembly (2004).

The primary focus for the advisory committee during this past year has been to fulfill its constitutional function of studying and making recommendations concerning the constitutionality of overtures, requests, and responses to General Assembly referrals. There is a remarkable diversity in the questions the committee has been asked to address. Each overture, request, or referral has received careful study and evaluation by a subcommittee of the advisory committee before consideration and recommendation by the full committee.

After it has received and considered the advice of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, the General Assembly is free to take whatever action it deems wise on proposed amendments, requests for interpretations and referrals.

3. Ordination Standards

Because Presbyterians hold significant differences of opinion about the wisdom of our current ordination standards, many presbyteries have submitted overtures seeking changes in those standards since the adoption of G-6.0106b in 1997.

In our history, Presbyterians, in the midst of our most serious conflicts have found themselves being reformed according to the Word of God (G-2.0200). One example is found in the Adopting Act of 1729, which anchored the ordination standards in the essentials of the Reformed faith and allowed candidates to declare differing opinions on matters not deemed “essential and necessary.” Another example is the deep division in the 1920’s in the fundamentalist/ modernist controversy that led to the report of the “Swearingen Commission” (Special Commission of 1925, Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A.). The report said in 1926, “The Church at large should illustrate as well as demonstrate, the power of the Gospel to bind up wounds and to soften animosities; and such, we are convinced, was the purpose of incorporating in the Presbyterian Constitution, the obligation for [Presbyterians] to maintain a patient, considerate and [caring] attitude toward each other” (Minutes, PCUSA, 1926, Part I, p.78). If we desire to resolve our present conflict, we must use the many and varied gifts God has provided.

For several years, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC) has sought to make the following salient points:

- a. There are three sources of constitutional authority for the PC (USA):
  - (1) The Constitution itself and amendments to it,
  - (2) General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission decisions interpreting the Constitution,

(3) Interpretive decisions by the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission and deliberate General Assembly interpretations together are referred to as “authoritative interpretations” (G-13.0103r).

b. The most recent interpretation of a provision of the Book of Order shall be binding.

c. The process of constitutional amendment is carefully defined in the Book of Order (Chapter XVIII).

d. The constitutional structure of the church is not modeled on the United States federal system with the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission as a supreme court that has final authority in constitutional matters because the General Assembly itself also has power to provide authoritative interpretations of the Constitution in accordance with G-13.0103r.

In 1978, the former UPCUSA adopted a policy statement that came to be called “definitive guidance.” The next year, 1979, the former PCUS adopted a similar statement. Both sought to prohibit the ordination of “self-affirming practicing homosexual persons.” The General Assembly of this church determined in a PJC decision (Union Presbyterian Church of Blasdell v. The Presbytery of Western New York, Minutes, PC(USA), 1985, Part I, p. 118 et seq.) that those earlier statements carried the authority of the present Constitution. Thus, the earlier “definitive guidance” became an “authoritative interpretation.”

Possible Responses the 216th General Assembly (2004) May Make

The ACC finds that the overtures submitted to the 216th General Assembly (2004) related to ordination standards offer several approaches to possible change:

a. Amend G-6.0106b: (Item 05-05 from the Presbytery of Western New York) This overture proposes to broaden the group of members who would be eligible to hold church office by changing the definition of the relationship within which one must live in fidelity. The overture leaves in place all of the church’s pronouncements and authoritative interpretations regarding homosexuality. See the ACC’s response to Item 05-05.

b. Delete G-6.0106b: (Item 05-06 from the Presbytery of Baltimore) This overture proposes the deletion of G-6.0106b in its entirety; it does not seek to set aside existing authoritative interpretations with respect to ordination standards. The ACC advised the 213th General Assembly (2001) that the removal of G-6.0106b alone would not alter the church’s position on ordination standards unless the General Assembly also amended or rescinded current authoritative interpretation regarding the eligibility of homosexual persons to hold church office. See the ACC’s response to Item 05-06.

c. Write a new authoritative interpretation: (Item 05-07 from the Presbytery of the Western Reserve). This overture proposes adopting an authoritative interpretation that would have the effect of rescinding existing authoritative interpretations regarding ordination standards that preceded the adoption of G-6.0106b, but proposes no amendment to the Constitution. See the ACC’s response to Item 05-07.

d. Delete or rescind existing authoritative interpretation: (Item 05-08 from the Presbytery of Detroit). This overture proposes no constitutional amendment and no new authoritative interpretation, but urges the deletion of existing authoritative interpretations regarding the eligibility of homosexual persons to hold church office that preceded the adoption of G-6.0106b. The adoption of either this overture or the preceding Item 05-07 would eliminate existing authoritative interpretations on ordination standards. While it is not fully clear what the precise effect of such action would be, the church would no longer rely upon the 1978/79 policy statements (“definitive guidance”) and subsequent authoritative interpretations based upon them when interpreting the Book of Order. Ordaining bodies would apply the language of G-6.0106b as they understand it unless and until new authoritative interpretations of that provision are crafted according to the process set forth in the Book of Order. See the ACC’s response to Item 05-08.

e. Delete G-6.0106b, amend G-6.0106a, and set aside existing authoritative interpretations: (Item 05-09 from the Presbytery of the Twin Cities). This overture proposes deletion of G-6.0106b together with amending G-6.0106a and setting aside all authoritative interpretations regarding the eligibility of homosexual persons to serve as church officers. This overture follows the 2001 advice of the ACC regarding the steps to be taken in order to change General Assembly policy on ordination standards if the General Assembly decided to do so. See the committee's response to Item 05-09.

4. Editorial Corrections

The Standing Rules of the General Assembly provide, at G.2.f., that the Stated Clerk shall prepare editorial changes in the Book of Order, which should be reviewed by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, provided the changes do not alter the substance of the text approved by the presbyteries.

Ann Melton on behalf of the Advisory Committee on Women and the Church requests an editorial change in the use of gender-specific pronouns in G-14.0510 of the Book of Order. The request is reasonable as some may wrongly infer that the sequence and manner in which optional pronouns are presented may signify a primacy of one gender over another that the church has long rejected and sought to overturn. In light of the church's long-standing opposition to gender discrimination, it is the opinion of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution that making an adjustment can be done editorially.

Ms. Melton is correct in pointing out that the use of pronouns in this manner appears only in G-14.0510 in the description of services of installation. The Office of the Stated Clerk should edit future editions of the Form of Government to eliminate this difficulty by substituting a form such as (she/he) or (him/her) in a manner as to hold up our commitment to equality against the limitations of common English usage. If feasible, similar references in the annotations to the Book of Order, where alteration would not change a judicial ruling or authoritative interpretation, could be made as well.

Therefore, the following editorial changes regarding inclusive language in G-14.0510 have been made by the Stated Clerk and approved by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution:

“G-14.0510a.(2)

“Do we agree to encourage ~~him (her)~~ him/her, to respect ~~his (her)~~ his/her decisions, and to follow as ~~he (she)~~ he/she guides us, serving Jesus Christ, who alone is Head of the Church?”

“G-14.0510a.(3)

“Do we promise to pay ~~him (her)~~ her/him fairly and provide for ~~his (her)~~ her/his welfare as ~~he (she)~~ she/he works among us; to stand by ~~him (her)~~ her/him in trouble and share ~~his (her)~~ her/his joys? Will we listen to the word ~~he (she)~~ she/he preaches, welcome ~~his (her)~~ her/his pastoral care, and honor ~~his (her)~~ her/his authority as ~~he (she)~~ she/he seeks to honor and obey Jesus Christ our Lord?”

5. Special Thanks

On behalf of the 216th General Assembly (2004), the Advisory Committee on the Constitution expresses its thanks and appreciation to the Reverend Neal Lloyd, the Reverend Jamie Pharr, and the Reverend James MacKellar for their dedicated service to the church through membership on the Advisory Committee on the Constitution. Each of them has served two, full, three-year terms on the committee and has given extraordinary service. They are not eligible for reelection.

The advisory committee is grateful for the staff assistance of the Reverend Mark Tammen, Associate Stated Clerk and director for the Department of Constitutional Services, Elder Mary Ruth Phares and Joanne Green, administrative assistants for the Department of Constitutional Services.

Item 05-01

[The assembly disapproved Item 05-01. See p. 78.]

On Amending G-14.0513 and G-11.0502f to Clarify Language Regarding Temporary Pastoral Relations—From the Presbytery of the Twin Cities Area.

The Presbytery of the Twin Cities Area respectfully overtures the 216th General Assembly (2004) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendments to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

1. Shall G-14.0513 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“When a church does not have a pastor, or while the pastor is unable to perform her or his duties, the session should obtain the services of a minister of this denomination in a temporary pastoral relation. When a congregation employs more than one pastor, or a pastor and one or more associate pastors, and there is a vacancy in one of these positions, it may obtain the services of a minister in a temporary pastoral relation. No formal call shall be issued by the congregation and no formal installation shall take place. Temporary pastoral relations are those of stated supply, associate stated supply, interim pastor, interim co-pastor, interim associate pastor, ~~temporary pastoral supply~~, or organizing pastor:

“a. A stated supply is a minister appointed by the presbytery, after consultation with the session, to perform the functions of a pastor in a church which is not seeking an installed pastor or while the pastor is unable to perform her or his duties. The relation shall be established only by the presbytery and shall extend for a period not to exceed twelve months at a time. A stated supply shall not be reappointed until the presbytery, through its committee on ministry, has reviewed her or his effectiveness. A stated supply may, with presbytery’s approval, serve as moderator of the session.

“b. An associate stated supply is a minister appointed by the presbytery, after consultation with the session, to perform functions of an associate pastor in a church which is not seeking an installed associate pastor or while the associate pastor is unable to perform her or his duties. The relation shall be established only by the presbytery and shall extend for a period not to exceed twelve months at a time. An associate stated supply shall not be reappointed until the presbytery, through its committee on ministry, has reviewed her or his effectiveness.

“~~b. c.~~ An interim pastor is a minister invited by the session of a church without an installed pastor to ~~preach the Word, administer the Sacraments, and fulfill pastoral duties~~ perform the functions of a pastor for a specified period not to exceed twelve months at a time, while the church is seeking a pastor. An interim co-pastor is a minister invited by the session of a church without an installed co-pastor which had a co-pastor model which was in effect for at least three years and where the congregation desires to continue such model of permanent ministerial relationship, to ~~preach the Word, administer the Sacraments, and fulfill pastoral duties~~ perform the functions of a co-pastor for a specified period not to exceed twelve months at a time, while the church is seeking a co-pastor. The session may not secure or dissolve a relationship with an interim pastor or interim co-pastor without the concurrence of the presbytery through its committee on ministry. A minister may not be called to be the next installed pastor, co-pastor, or associate pastor of a church served as interim pastor or interim co-pastor.

“~~e. d.~~ An interim associate pastor is a minister invited by the session to ~~serve in this position~~ perform the duties of an associate pastor while the church is seeking a new associate pastor or is seeking a pastor to serve as co-pastor in accord with G-6.0202. The session may not secure or dissolve a relationship with an interim associate pastor without the concurrence of the presbytery through its committee on ministry. An interim associate pastor shall serve for a specified period not to exceed twelve months at a time and may not be called to be the next installed pastor, co-pastor, or associate pastor of a church served as interim associate pastor.

“~~d. e.~~ A ~~temporary pastoral supply~~ may be a minister, a candidate, a commissioned lay pastor, or an elder, secured by the session to conduct services when there is no pastor or the pastor is unable to perform pastoral duties. The session shall seek the counsel of presbytery through its committee on ministry before securing a ~~temporary~~ pastoral supply. A ~~temporary~~ pastoral supply may not be called to be a pastor, co-pastor, or associate pastor of a church served as ~~temporary~~ pastoral supply, unless six months have elapsed since the end of the ~~temporary~~ pastoral supply relationship, except by a two-thirds vote of presbytery. A presbytery may choose to shorten or cancel the six-month interval if it is determined to be in the best interest of the congregation.

~~e. f.~~ When a church is without a pastor or when the pastor is unable to perform pastoral duties, the session, after obtaining the approval of the presbytery having jurisdiction over the church through its committee on ministry, may secure the services of ~~an inquirer or~~ a candidate to serve as ~~temporary~~ pastoral supply. Appropriate guidance and supervision for such ~~an inquirer or~~ a candidate serving as ~~temporary~~ pastoral supply must be assured by the presbytery having jurisdiction over the church and approved by the ~~inquirer's or~~ candidate's committee on preparation for ministry.

~~f. g.~~ [Text remains unchanged.]”

2. Shall G-11.0502f be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

~~f.~~ It shall counsel with sessions regarding stated supplies, associate stated supplies, interim pastors, interim co-pastors, interim associate pastors, and ~~temporary~~ pastoral supplies when a church is without a pastor or when the pastor or associate pastor is unable to perform her or his duties, and it shall provide lists of pastors, commissioned lay pastors, and qualified lay persons who have been trained and commissioned by the presbytery to supply vacant pulpits. Concurrence of the presbytery through its committee on ministry is required when a session invites an interim pastor, interim co-pastor, or interim associate pastor as provided for in G-14.0513b and c. Approval of the committee on ministry is required when a session invites a pastoral supply as provided in G-14.0513e.”

Rationale

This overture seeks to clarify and make the language of the Book of Order uniform regarding Temporary Pastoral Relations (G-14.0513). There are several reasons for this overture.

1. Standardize the language of pastoral duties. Descriptions of the several temporary relations listed contain different language regarding what duties can be included in the relationship. Changes are in paragraphs a, b, and e.

2. Make it clear when and under what circumstances temporary positions can become installed.

3. Establish an associate stated supply. This addition serves two purposes. First, it allows for the situation where an associate pastor becomes disabled and/or is unable to perform her or his duties. This situation might be handled through a pastoral supply, but in a lengthy disability situation, another solution is needed.

Second, this paragraph allows churches with installed pastors to attempt new models of ministry without the establishment of an installed position, either permanent or designated. This might be a new outreach ministry to an immigrant group, or a temporary staffing for membership growth, or simply a church determining the long-term viability of an associate pastor. The associate stated supply gives the flexibility of a year-to-year contract without the expectation that the ministry will continue (i.e., allowing “failure”) or that the person initially responsible for the ministry will continue if it is decided to establish an installed position. We find no other place in the Book of Order that allows this flexibility and creativity without establishment of a permanent, installed position.

4. Change “temporary supply” to “pastoral supply” to eliminate confusion between temporary relation, referring to several temporary situations, and temporary supply, referring to one specific temporary relation. Confusion over the meaning of these terms has been apparent in work with sessions, the presbytery, and the General Assembly.

5. Changes to G-14.0513f and G-11.0502f make these sections consistent with the changes to G-14.0513a–e as proposed.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 05-01
Advice on Item 05-01—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 216th General Assembly (2004) to disapprove Item 05-01.

Rationale

1. The overture proposes changes to the Book of Order that are unnecessary and do not advance the work of the church. The proposal to create a new position of “associate stated supply” is unnecessary. A stated supply is to be used when a church is not looking for an installed pastor. If a church has decided that it does not wish to look for an associate pastor, it does not need a stated supply. The church has an installed pastor. If it needs another pastor to do part-time or temporary work, that role can be filled by a temporary supply or a part-time associate pastor.

2. The overture also proposes having a stated supply to work in a church when a pastor is unable to perform his/her work. That can be covered by a temporary supply.

3. Even if the term “pastoral supply” were judged to be preferable to the term “temporary supply,” it does not seem to be worthwhile to amend the Book of Order to make only that change.

Item 05-02

[The assembly approved Item 05-02. See p. 78.]

ACC Request Regarding G-6.0502, Authoritative Interpretation Concerning Persistence in Disapproved Work—From Minister Member, Presbytery of the Cascades.

In response to this request, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) approve the following authoritative interpretation:

“1. In order to presume that an officer has renounced the jurisdiction of this church under G-6.0502, a governing body must follow the following procedure:

“a. The governing body must disapprove the work of the officer (Wilson v. Presbytery of Donegal, Remedial Case 206-8, Minutes, 1994, Part I, p. 149, 11.091).

“b. The governing body must notify the officer that it has disapproved his/her work and that he/she is prohibited from engaging in such work as an officer of the church (Stimage-Norwood v. Presbytery of Southern New England, Remedial Case 214-7, Minutes, 2002, Part I, p. 344).

“c. If the officer engages in the prohibited work after the notice of disapproval and prohibition, the governing body must consult with the officer and notify him/her of the consequences of his/her action, i.e., that his/her persisting in the work may result in a presumption of renunciation of jurisdiction.

“d. If the officer persists in the prohibited work after such consultation and notice, the governing body may presume that he/she has renounced the jurisdiction of the church. If the governing body so determines, it shall notify the officer of its decision.

“e. The officer has the right to challenge the governing body’s determination and to speak on the floor of the governing body in so doing. He/she also has the right to file a remedial case challenging the governing body’s determination of renunciation (D-6.0100).

“2. The term ‘work disapproved by the governing body’ relates to the exercise of the vocation of a minister of the Word and Sacrament or the official conduct of church business for which a deacon or elder was elected. It does not relate to particular acts of ministry, or to behavior, that might be considered an offense under the Constitution (D-2.0203). One can be presumed to have renounced jurisdiction because of persisting in disapproved work following consultation and notice, only if the work is engaged in after the disapproval of the work and if it is persisted in following a warning of the consequences.”

Rationale

Renunciation of jurisdiction, and its consequent loss of standing as a member and officer of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), is one of the most serious actions that can occur under the Constitution. Therefore, it is critical that a person be afforded due process and be given every opportunity to be heard before removal from office or membership. If one is going to be presumed to have renounced jurisdiction because of persisting in disapproved work following consultation and notice, that presumption can be made only if the work is engaged in after the disapproval of the work and if it is persisted in following a warning of the consequences. In addition, there must not be confusion between engaging in disapproved work and engaging in behavior, which would more properly be the subject of a disciplinary case.

Letter of Request Received by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

I would like to request an authoritative interpretation from the Advisory Committee on the Constitution (G-13.0103r) of Form of Government G-6.0502, “Persistence in Disapproved Work,” and in particular the issue of presumption of renunciation of jurisdiction.

As you may well be aware, there has been a recent lengthy thread (I think perhaps more than 200 notes) on the Presbynet meeting, “PCUSA POLITY DISCUSSION,” regarding the interpretation and application of the section.

Among the issues in the Presbynet discussion, and in some additional correspondence I’ve had with some of the participants:

- what constitutes adequate “consultation and notice” as it applies to this section;
- similarly, what constitutes due process as it applies to this section;
- what constitutes adequate “a [disapproved] work” as it applies to this section;
- the appropriateness of administrative procedures vis a vis disciplinary procedure, in particular;
  - when the allegations concern matters defined in D-2.0203b as disciplinary offense;
  - when the result is the removal of an officer from membership and ordained office and termination of the exercise of office (G-6.0501);
- the rights of a governing body in exercising its jurisdiction over members within a reasonable period of time;
- whether a presumption of renunciation of jurisdiction is reasonable when the person in question has claimed jurisdiction by appealing a previous decision; and
- whether an instruction from a PJC is an instruction from a governing body.

The Presbynet discussion revolved, of course, around the VanKuiken case in Cincinnati Presbytery, and I am aware that that case is still before a PJC (that of the Synod of the Covenant, as I understand it), and would likely affect the timing of securing an authoritative interpretation. However, it is possible that the decision of the Synod PJC, and of the General Assembly PJC, if the decision at the synod level is appealed, would not fully address the issues involved in the section.

My main interest in the matter is simply clarifying the polity issues involved, but I also have a personal interest as a member of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Presbytery of the Cascades and as chair of one of our regional Committees on Ministry.

Thank you for your attention to this request.

Sincerely,
John M. Salmon

Item 05-03

[The assembly approved Item 05-03. See p. 77.]

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC) recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) do the following:

- 1. Recognize and acknowledge that there is a prevailing myth that the work of supporting and sustaining clergywomen in the ministries of the PC(USA) is completed.
- 2. Acknowledge the need for ongoing, structured support on the part of all of our 173 presbyteries for all clergywomen.
- 3. Ask the Office of the Committee on Ministry to review resources currently available to meet the particular needs of clergywomen of all ethnicities in the call process and in pastorates as stated above and to report its findings to ACWC.
- 4. Request that ACWC make recommendations, following that review, which will contribute to a proactive, health-giving ministry to and relationship with our clergywomen.

Rationale

This recommendation is in response to the following referral: 2003 Referral: Item 04-01. Report, Clergywomen’s Experience in Ministry: Realities and Challenges, Recommendation 2. That the General Assembly Instruct the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns to Research Current Programs and Support for Clergywomen, Particularly Racial Ethnic and Single Clergywomen, and to Bring Recommendations to the 216th General Assembly (2004)—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 62, 293).

The ACWC sent a survey to executive presbyters, stated clerks, committees on ministry chairpersons, Presbyterian Women (PW) moderators, and PW enablers in September 2003. That survey showed the following:

- Support and programs for clergywomen are few. They range from formal and structured instituted by presbyteries, to informal meal gatherings and networking at presbytery meetings and other occasions arranged by clergywomen themselves. The structured programs included a monthly meeting of clergywomen in one presbytery and an annual clergywomen breakfast/brunch hosted by PW in another.
- “Top down” or presbytery-sponsored programs and implemented structure were rare. One program for racial ethnic clergywomen was reported; and, none for single clergywomen. Most presbyteries reported that their committees on ministries (COMs) were not actively involved in women’s advocacy training. And, education and the programs or structure appears to be a continuation of Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity requirements.
- One presbytery had all pastor nominating committees (PNCs) meet with a “clergywomen interpreter” before COM approved the church information form (CIF) for circulation. Another presbytery challenged pastors (especially in the mountain regions) to include at least one woman in the list of supply pastors. One presbytery used an interim placement program to support racial ethnic clergy and clergywomen. Mentors, retreats, justice for women committees, and newsletters were part of the formal structure of support in a few presbyteries.

- Informal support listed in the survey responses included networking on the part of individual clergywomen, Bible studies, and self-arranged clergywomen gatherings. Geography limited interaction in some presbyteries. In some predominately rural presbyteries, support came from ecumenical groups.

The ACWC commends presbyteries that have implemented specific programs of support for clergywomen and especially any that have programs to assist and sustain racial ethnic and single clergywomen.

Item 05-04

[The assembly approved Item 05-04 with amendment. See pp. 77–78.]

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC) recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) encourage all committees on ministry to conduct awareness training for gender, and racial ethnic awareness training, and disabilities concerns with ~~its nominating committees for all clergy~~ all pastor nominating committees.

Rationale

This recommendation is in response to the following referral: 2003 Referral: Item 04-01. Report, Clergywomen’s Experience in Ministry: Realities and Challenges, Recommendation 9. That the General Assembly Instruct the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns and the Women’s Ministries Program Area to Partner with the General Assembly Committee on Representation and the Racial Ethnic Caucuses to Monitor Clergywomen’s Call Processes and Equity Issues Related to Terms of Call—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 62, 293).

In consultation with the Women’s Ministries program area, the General Assembly Committee on Representation, and the Racial Ethnic Caucuses, ACWC reports for all parties that the information on specific calls is private, thus unavailable for comparison purposes.

Item 05-05

[The assembly answered Item 05-05 by the action taken on Item 05-07 of this report. See p. 79.]

On Amending G-6.0106b Regarding Gifts and Requirements for Officers—From the Presbytery of Western New York.

The Presbytery of Western New York respectfully overtures the 216th General Assembly (2004) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the Book of Order, Section G-6.0106(b), to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Shall G-6.0106(b) be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“b. Those who are called to office in the church are to lead a life in obedience to Scripture and in conformity to the historic confessional standards of the church. Among these standards is the requirement to live either in fidelity within ~~the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman (W-4.9001)~~ a covenanted relationship between two persons where a lifetime commitment is intended, or chastity in singleness. Persons refusing to repent of any self-acknowledged practice which ~~the confessions call sin~~ does not conform with this discipline shall not be ordained and/or installed as deacons, elders, or ministers of the Word and Sacrament.”

Rationale

Our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ, preached a gospel of love toward all the people of the earth (John 3:16); and therefore all people should be equally welcomed in the church, remembering that it is in the spirit of Christ to reach out most of all to those who have been persecuted and shunned by society.

We acknowledge that passages of Scripture have led to the condemnation of sexual intimacy between two people of the same sex; yet after long and intense discussion, prayer, and study of the Scriptures as a whole, we do not believe it was, or is now, Christ’s own desire to condemn sexual intimacy between people of the same sex as inherently bad. Sexual intimacy is a gift of God intended for sealing the most committed relationships that one person can have with another.

Our Lord’s gospel of love was also accompanied by high standards of self-discipline that he set for his followers, even that we should love our enemies.

In accord with our Lord’s teachings, we believe all people should be guided by the same principles of sexual behavior regardless of sexual orientation, summarized as chastity in singleness and fidelity in a covenanted relationship before God with one other person where a lifetime commitment is intended.

We also acknowledge that there continue to be strong differences of opinion among our members and churches over these matters, and that contrary opinions may be held in good faith with the backing of historical precedent; yet we believe Christ wants us to move forward here.

Concurrence to Item 05-05 from the Presbytery of Southern New England.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 05-05

Advice on Item 05-05—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 216th General Assembly (2004) that, if it wishes to change the Constitution to achieve the objective sought by the Presbytery of Western New York, it may do so with some revision to the presbytery’s proposed language to provide clarity in that language. The following alternative language is offered:

“b. Those who are called to office in the church are to lead a life in obedience to Jesus Christ, under the authority of Scripture, (G-14.0405b(6) and to be instructed and led by ~~in conformity to the historic confessional standards—confessions~~ of the church (G-14.0405b(3)). ~~Among these standards is the requirement~~ Those who are called to office in the church are also required to live either in fidelity within ~~the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman~~ ~~(W-4.90010~~ a covenanted relationship between two persons where a lifetime commitment is intended pledged or promised, or chastity in singleness. ~~Persons refusing to repent of any self-acknowledged practice which the confessions call sin shall not be ordained and/or installed as deacons, elders, or ministers of the Word and Sacrament.”~~

Rationale

The Presbytery of Western New York seeks to amend the Constitution by deleting a portion of G-6.0106(b) and adding alternate language. Since its initial addition to the Form of Government in 1997, a number of presbyteries have sought the removal or amendment of this paragraph by sending overtures to the General Assembly. Others have requested limits on its application or clarification of its language. Still others have pursued the enforcement of its limitations on those allowed to serve in ordained positions through judicial process.

The proposal by the Presbytery of Western New York, if approved, would broaden the group of members within the church who would be eligible to hold office. If the General Assembly wishes to achieve this result, the language of this particular proposal lacks clarity. As previous overtures have pointed out over the years, certain phrases in G-6.0106(b) may be seen as inconsistent with the language in the church's ordination questions [G-14.0405b(3) and (6)]. Because of the history of G-6.0106(b) and the attempts to amend or delete it, it is crucial that any language used with respect to the subject matter of this provision be clear and consistent.

Finally, if the General Assembly approves this proposal, the final sentence of G-6.0106(b) may be unnecessary since the preceding sentences spell out the requirements for church office. Section G-6.0106b would, even without the last sentence, provide both guidance for ordaining governing bodies and a basis for accountability.

It is noted that any action on Item 05-05 is related to actions taken on Item 05-06 and Item 05-09. Please see Item 04-Info, C. Advisory Committee on the Constitution Agency Summary, 3. Ordination Standards, pages 26–27, for further advice on overtures dealing with ordination standards.

Item 05-06

[The assembly answered Item 05-06 by the action taken on Item 05-07 of this report. See p. 79.]

On Striking G-6.0106b from the Constitution in Order to Welcome All Persons into the Life of the Church—From the Presbytery of Baltimore.

The Presbytery of Baltimore overtures the 216th General Assembly (2004) of the Presbyterian Church (USA) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative vote:

Shall G-6.0106b be stricken from the Book of Order.

Rationale

The peace, unity, and purity of the PC(USA) have been ruptured by the presence of G-6.0106b in our Book of Order. Rather than solving the issue of ordination standards, this addition has created a hostile and divisive environment in our church that is contrary to God's reconciling love. Numerous judicial cases have been brought to governing bodies over issues of ordination from individuals who are unaware of the calls and gifts of ministry of those against whom they file complaints. These judicial actions have cost individuals, congregations, and governing bodies untold time and money to defend those who have been accused. There is no longer any possibility of honest and open dialogue on this issue without fear of retribution. Section G-6.0106b does serious harm to our church by forcing the appearance of consensus and depriving the church of the benefit of discussion.

The wisdom expressed in G-6.0106a is sufficient in setting standards for ordination. The strength of the PC(USA) lies in its ability to hold freedom of conscience and church order in tension, and its trust of the governing body closest to those it ordains (G-6.0108b). Sessions and presbyteries have the responsibility to weigh the confessions, to determine which segments reflect essential tenets of the faith, and to judge the gifts and qualifications of those candidates who come before them.

The effects of G-6.0106b are contrary to our constitutional call to "seek the grace of openness in extending the fellowship of Christ to all persons" (G-5.0103). Instead it has the explicit and implicit effect of targeting one category of people, defined as "self-affirming, practicing homosexual persons," and of denying to them the full rights and privileges of active membership within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) (G-5.0202). Through this constitutional ban, G-6.0106b disregards the fact that a pluralism of methods of biblical and theological interpretation currently exists within the PC(USA) concerning homosexuality. Among these methods is the strongly held belief among many conscientious Presbyterians that homosexual practice is not a sin per se and that both heterosexual and homosexual relationships are capable of being either faithful and life-affirming or sinful and destructive. Section G-6.0106b, and its predecessor “definitive guidance” and subsequent affirmations, delineates human sexuality in categories more narrowly defined than the Scriptures seek to claim. For example, while Christians disagree on the interpretation of the limited biblical references to homosexuality, most acknowledge that the Bible is silent on the issue of lifelong, faithful homosexual partnerships. In contrast, the Bible is clear in its themes of covenant: the covenant between God and humanity, and the human covenants made before God. Removal of G-6.0106b from our Constitution would allow presbyteries and sessions to follow their understanding of the Holy Spirit’s leading in making decisions about candidates for ordination/installation by the application of a common ethic of faithfulness and fidelity within human covenantal relationships. This return to a mutual trust in each ordaining/installing presbytery’s or session’s ability to make individual judgments concerning the fitness of a candidate for ordination/installation would restore to the presbyteries and sessions their traditional duty and prerogative to approve, ordain, and install persons whom, after due examination, they deem gifted, worthy, and called by God through the voice of the people.

Concurrence to Item 05-06—From the Presbytery of Des Moines (with Additional Rationale).

Rationale

In concurrence with the Presbytery of Baltimore, we agree that “the effects of G-6.0106b are contrary to our constitutional call to seed the grace of openness in extending the fellowship of Christ to all persons (G-9.0104). Failure to do so constitutes a rejection of Christ himself and causes a scandal of the Gospel (G-5.0103).”

The Presbytery of Des Moines has historically supported this particular issue.

Referring to the PC(USA) Website, the Presbyterian 101 statement (“A General Guide to the Facts About the PCUSA”) under the heading “Presbyterian are BELIEVERS AND DOERS,” Paragraph 2 appears to be in conflict with G-6.0106b. It states; “WE BELIEVE—in a theology of mission, as expressed in the Westminster Confession of Faith, Christ hath commissioned the Church to go into the world and to make disciples of all nations. All believers are therefore under obligation—to contribute by their prayers, gifts, and personal efforts to the extension of the Kingdom of Christ throughout the whole earth.” In “Presbyterians are Attuned to the Times (Page 2), “the church” also adapts to newly emerging needs and to changing relationships in a sensitive manner.”

The Theological Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church (Mandate 1b) was established to pursue a process of discernment for the church. “This discernment shall include but not be limited to issues of Christology, biblical authority and interpretations, ordination standards, and power.” It will not report back to the assembly until 2006. It was not formed to make decisions on behalf of the General Assembly and/or the presbyteries. The same General Assembly in 2001 sent a proposed amendment to the Constitution to the presbyteries that would remove G-6.0106b. [Note: Text is an addendum. Please add to Item 05-06 as page 3.]

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 05-06

Advice on Item 05-06—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 216th General Assembly (2004) with the following comment:

The Presbytery of Baltimore seeks to amend the Constitution by the deletion of G-6.0106b in its entirety. Since its initial addition to the Form of Government in 1996, a number of presbyteries have sought the removal or amendment of this paragraph by sending overtures to the General Assembly. Others have requested limits on its application or clarification of its language. Still others have pursued enforcement of its limitations on those allowed to serve in ordained positions through judicial process.

As this committee advised the 213th General Assembly (2001), the removal of G-6.0106b alone would not alter the church's position on ordination standards unless the assembly also amends or rescinds its current authoritative interpretation concerning the eligibility of homosexual persons to hold office in the church. This overture does not seek to have the authoritative interpretation set aside.

The rationale's central argument is the contention that "G-6.0106a is sufficient in setting standards of ordination." If the assembly wishes to make G-6.0106a the foundational standard for ordination, then this overture would accomplish the stated purpose.

It is noted that any action on Item 05-06 is related to actions taken on Item 05-05 and Item 05-09. Please see Item 04-Info, C. Advisory Committee on the Constitution Agency Summary, 3. Ordination Standards, pages 26–27, for further advice on overtures dealing with ordination standards.

Item 05-07

[In response to Item 05-07, the assembly approved an alternate resolution. See pp. 78–79.]

On Issuing an Authoritative Interpretation Clarifying Standards for Ordination—From the Presbytery of the Western Reserve.

The Presbytery of the Western Reserve respectfully overtures the 216th General Assembly (2004) to issue the following authoritative interpretation:

In carrying out their responsibilities under the Constitution to determine fitness for office, sessions and presbyteries are not bound by statements of the General Assembly and its commissions, regarding ordained service by homosexual persons, that predate the adoption of G-6.0106b.

Rationale

In the decades preceding the adoption of G-6.0106b, General Assemblies and Permanent Judicial Commissions of the PC(USA), the UPCUSA, and the PCUS issued various policy and interpretive statements regarding ordained service by "self-affirming, practicing homosexual persons." Such statements were largely grounded in the "Policy Statement and Recommendations" issued in 1978 by the 190th General Assembly of the UPCUSA, known as "definitive guidance."

"Definitive guidance" and the "authoritative interpretations" that followed had the effect of amending our constitutional standards for ordination without the ratification of the presbyteries. This effect has been neither definitive nor authoritative. Rather, these statements have contributed to conflict and confusion in the church, and have undermined respect for the Constitution.

The 208th General Assembly (1996) moved to end this conflict and confusion by approving a new provision in the Constitution, G-6.0106b, that specifically addresses our standards for the sexual conduct of candidates for ordained office. This provision was ratified by the presbyteries, and actually changed the Book of Order. In order to eliminate continuing confusion and conflict, the 216th General Assembly (2004) should make clear that the language of the Constitution itself takes precedence over older General Assembly statements interpreting the Constitution before it was changed.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 05-07

Advice on Item 05-07—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 216th General Assembly (2004) with the following comment:

This overture from the Presbytery of the Western Reserve proposes no amendment to the Constitution, but does request that the General Assembly approve an authoritative interpretation that would have the effect of rescinding the currently binding authoritative interpretation of the Constitution concerning those who may hold office in the church.

Although the assembly may decide that such a result is to be desired, the language of the overture itself could be misunderstood. The General Assembly does have authority to issue statements interpreting the Constitution (G-13.0103r). The statements to which this overture objects predate the approval of G-6.0106b. The removal of these statements would allow the language of the Constitution itself to guide the church.

If the assembly believes that this action would help to reduce confusion and conflict in the church, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution proposes the following alternative language as authoritative interpretation:

“Sessions and presbyteries are no longer bound by statements of the General Assembly regarding ordained service by homosexual persons that predate the adoption of G-6.0106b.”

It is noted that any action on Item 05-07 is related to actions taken on Item 05-08 and Item 05-09. Please see Item 04-Info, C. Advisory Committee on the Constitution Agency Summary, 3. Ordination Standards, pages 26–27, for further advice on overtures dealing with ordination standards.

Item 05-08

[The assembly answered Item 05-08 by the action taken on Item 05-07 of this report. See p. 79.]

On Declaring That the Definitive Guidance Statements of 1978 and 1979, and Subsequent General Assembly Statements Shall Be Given No Further Force or Effect—From the Presbytery of Detroit.

The Presbytery of Detroit respectfully overtures the 216th General Assembly (2004) to approve the following:

1. The 216th General Assembly (2004) recognizes that within our denomination, people of good character and principle differ in their understanding of human sexuality, and in those differences we are called to exercise mutual forbearance toward each other (Book of Order, G-1.0305).

2. The 216th General Assembly (2004) reminds the church that freedom of conscience with respect to the interpretation of Scripture is to be maintained (Book of Order, G-6.0108a).

3. The 216th General Assembly (2004) declares that no further force or effect shall be given to the statement of definitive guidance by the 190th General Assembly (1978) of the United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America (UPCUSA) that characterizes the practice of homosexuality as sin and instructs that unrepentant homosexual practice does not accord with the constitutional requirements for ordination.

4. The 216th General Assembly (2004) declares that no further force or effect shall be given to the interpretation of the 119th General Assembly (1979) of the Presbyterian Church in the United States (PCUS) that states “homosexuality falls short of God’s plan.”

5. The 216th General Assembly (2004) declares that subsequent General Assembly statements that affirmed the 1978 and 1979 guidance on homosexuality and ordination shall be given no further force or effect.

Rationale

A great theological divide exists in our denomination on the issue of homosexuality. Over the years, as various proposed amendments were sent to the presbyteries, the votes cast by individual presbyters have indicated that a substantial minority, 40 to 45 percent, affirm an interpretation of Scripture that differs from the guidance of the 1978 and 1979 General Assemblies.

Current constitutional requirements for ordination have been built upon the scriptural interpretations of the 1978 UPCUSA and 1979 PCUS General Assemblies, and subsequent judicial rulings have stated that presbyteries and congregations are obligated to follow those constitutional requirements for ordination. Yet, the scriptural interpretation that is used to bind the conscience of presbyteries and congregations was never sent to the presbyteries for approval.

The preliminary principles of “mutual forbearance” and “God alone is Lord of the conscience” must be given full effect through acknowledging the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) contains theological diversity on the issue of homosexuality. Scriptural interpretation on nonessentials of the Reformed faith is to be entrusted to individuals as they teach and preach, and to ordaining bodies as they seek to discern the call of Christ in those being examined for ordained office.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 05-08

Advice on Item 05-08—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 216th General Assembly (2004) with the following comment:

Item 05-08 proposes the removal of currently binding interpretive statements concerning those who may hold office in the church. No amendment to the Constitution is proposed and no alternative authoritative interpretation is offered.

In 1978, the former UPCUSA adopted a policy statement that came to be called “Definitive Guidance.” The next year, 1979, the former PCUS adopted a similar statement. Both statements sought to prohibit the ordination of “self-affirming, practicing homosexual persons.” The General Assembly of this church determined in 1985 in a PJC decision (Union Presbyterian Church of Blasdell, New York vs. The Presbytery of Western New York) that those earlier statements carried the authority of the present Constitution. Thus the earlier Definitive Guidance became an Authoritative Interpretation.

Sources of constitutional authority are

1. the Constitution itself and amendments to it adopted by constitutionally mandated process,
2. General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission decisions interpreting the Constitution, and
3. actions of the General Assembly deliberately interpreting the Book of Order on the advice of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution (G-13.0112).

Interpretive decisions by the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission and deliberate General Assembly interpretations together are referred to as “authoritative interpretations.”

The deletion or replacement of the 1978 and 1979 interpretations would eliminate currently binding authoritative interpretations interpreting this portion of the Constitution.

While it is not fully clear what the precise effect of such action would be, the church would no longer rely upon the 1978 or 1979 policy statements and subsequent authoritative interpretations based upon them when interpreting the Book of Order. Ordaining bodies would apply the language of G-6.0106b as they understand it subject only to authoritative interpretations approved since the inclusion of G-6.0106b unless and until new authoritative interpretations of that provision are crafted according to the process set forth in the Book of Order.

If the assembly determines that such an action would bring greater clarity and focus to the church, then the overture would accomplish its purpose.

It is noted that any action on Item 05-08 is related to actions taken on Item 05-07 and Item 05-09. Please see Item 04-Info, C. Advisory Committee on the Constitution Agency Summary, 3. Ordination Standards, pages 26–27, for further advice on overtures dealing with ordination standards.

GAC COMMENT ON ITEM 05-08

Comment on Item 05-08—From the General Assembly Council.

Freedom of conscience regarding the interpretation of Scripture is a vital and historic value in our tradition. It must be maintained. Nevertheless the reference in Point 2 to “freedom of conscience with respect to the interpretation of Scripture is to be maintained” must be put in the broader context of G-6 in order to be understood properly.

Section G-6.0108 discusses the relationship of conscience in relation to the bounds within which officers serve. Thus officers “shall adhere to the essentials of the Reformed faith and polity as expressed in The Book of Confessions and the Form of Government.” In fulfilling their office, officers may exercise freedom of conscience in respect to interpretation of Scripture “as far as may be possible without serious departure from these standards, without infringing on the rights and views of others, and without obstructing the constitutional governance of the church . . .” (Book of Order, G-6.0108a). Thus, freedom of conscience with regard to the interpretation of Scripture is not an absolute right.

Further, freedom of conscience for officers is exercised within definite bounds when a person becomes a candidate or officer in the church. The conscience of the officer or candidate is “captive to the Word of God as interpreted in the standards of the church so long as he or she continues to seek or hold office in that body” (Book of Order, G-6.0108b).

Any appeal to freedom of conscience with respect to the interpretation of Scripture must be made within this broader framework.

Item 05-09

[The assembly answered Item 05-09 by the action taken on Item 05-07 of this report. See p. 79.]

On Amending G-6.0106 and on Approving an Authoritative Interpretation—From the Presbytery of the Twin Cities Area.

The Presbytery of the Twin Cities Area respectfully overtures the 216th General Assembly (2004) to do the following:

1. Direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendments to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

a. Shall G-6.0106b be stricken?

b. Shall G-6.0106a be amended by adding a new sentence to the end of the paragraph to read as follows:

“Their suitability to hold office is determined by the governing body where the examination for ordination or installation takes place, guided by scriptural and constitutional standards, under the authority and Lordship of Jesus Christ.”

2. Approve the following authoritative interpretation:

“Interpretive statements concerning ordained service by homosexual persons by the 190th General Assembly (1978) of the United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America and the 191st General Assembly (1979) of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, and all subsequent denominational affirmations thereof, shall be given no further force or effect; and Section G-6.0106a of the Form of Government, together with the other prerequisites for ordination expressly stated in our Book of Order, hereby are affirmed as the sole and exclusive standards for ordination by ordaining bodies acting in prayerful discernment of the leading of Almighty God.”

Rationale

We believe that the presence of G-6.0106b within our Book of Order has created a hostile and divisive environment in our church that is contrary to God’s reconciling love and the spirit of our Reformed faith. We are greatly saddened over the increasing number of accusations and judicial cases that have arisen in recent months as a result of this measure. These trials are causing the church to spend inordinate financial and human resources defending an exclusionary policy that is not an essential of the Reformed faith, drawing precious resources away from the primary mission of the church.

The effects of compliance with G-6.0106b run counter to the sentiment of G-5.0103 that “Each member must seek the grace of openness in extending the fellowship of Christ to all persons.” Failure to do this, it continues, “constitutes a rejection of Christ himself and causes a scandal to the gospel.” We would honor Christ’s last prayer with his disciples that all may be one (Jn. 17:11) and would heed the admonition of the New Testament writers that we avoid needless controversies lest the body of Christ be divided.

Presbyterians have historically valued the rights of governing bodies to make decisions that affect them the most directly, seeking unity in the essentials of faith but not necessarily in “truths and forms with respect to which [people] of good characters and principles may differ” (Book of Order, G-1.0305). Biblical interpretations differ, and the church should therefore leave it to local governing bodies to act out of their own faith as discerned together in prayer when such interpretations over nonessential matters are in conflict.

The confessions of our church are valuable guides in our decisions about ordination and many other issues, but they are always subordinate to Jesus Christ and the authority of Scripture (Book of Order, G-1.0307 and G-2.0200; The Book of Confessions, 3.18–.20, 5.011–.014, 6.010, and 9.03). Our Constitution affirms that “God alone is Lord of the conscience, and hath left it free from the doctrines and commandments of men which are in anything contrary to his Word, or beside it, in matters of faith or worship” (Book of Order, G-1.0301; see also G-1.0305 and G-1.0307; The Book of Confessions, 5.010–.014, 6.109, 6.174–.175, 7.215, and 8.20–21).

The church “is called to be a sign in and for the world of the new reality which God has made available to people in Jesus Christ,” reflecting that “(1) Sin is forgiven. (2) Reconciliation is accomplished. (3) The dividing walls of hostility are torn down” (Book of Order, G-3.0200). This leads to an affirmation of diversity and the welcoming inclusion of all people (Book of Order, G-3.0401, G-4.0203, G-4.0401–.0403, G-5.0202, and G-9.0104; The Book of Confessions, 9.06–.07, 9.10, 9.19–.20, 9.22, 9.29, 9.31–33, and 9.44).

We understand our polity and system of ordination to mean that leaders are called by God and confirmed by the people, and that all members whose manner of life demonstrates the gospel and who possess the gifts and training for leadership have opportunities to participate in leadership.

In faithfulness to our call to be good stewards of the resources entrusted to us, we would affirm and enable ordained service and outreach by all in whom we discern a call to serve (Book of Order, G-1.0306, G-4.0402, G-4.0403, G-6.0102, G-6.0107, G-7.0103, G-10.0102i, G-14.0201, and G-14.0204).

In our continuing struggle on these issues, the Church is called to be open to God’s continuing reformation “according to the Word of God and the call of the Spirit” (Book of Order, G-2.0200; see also G-3.0401, G-4.0303, G-10.0102j, and G-18.0101; The Book of Confessions, 9.03 and 9.29).

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 05-09
Advice on Item 05-09—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 216th General Assembly (2004) with the following comment:

This overture from the Presbytery of the Twin Cities Area takes a broad approach to changing the Constitution concerning those eligible to hold church office and governing bodies that determine the suitability of office holders. The assembly is asked to take three actions: to send the two proposed amendments to the Form of Government to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes, and to approve an authoritative interpretation.

The overture's first request is that G-6.0106b be deleted, contending that the "exclusionary policy" contained in G-6.0106b is "not an essential of the Reformed faith" and that the content of that paragraph is in conflict with other constitutional provisions.

Secondly, an amendment by addition is proposed to G-6.0106a. Our Constitution proclaims a hierarchy of authority in matters of faith and practice: the Confessions are subordinate to Scripture and Scripture is subordinate to Jesus Christ. The proposed amendment reflects that hierarchy. The content of the additional language, however, is contained elsewhere in the Form of Government, making this addition unnecessary.

Finally, this overture proposes an authoritative interpretation that would have the effect of setting aside currently binding policy. If approved, the phrase "sole and exclusive" should be deleted because the General Assembly would continue to have power and authority to interpret the Constitution (G-13.0103r), potentially affecting standards and practice.

The approval of this overture in its entirety would have the effect of changing the church's current position on standards for ordination. If the 216th General Assembly (2004) favors this result, the approval of the overture would accomplish its purpose.

It is noted that any action on Item 05-09 is related to actions taken on Item 05-07 and Item 05-08. Please see Item 04-Info, C. Advisory Committee on the Constitution Agency Summary, 3. Ordination Standards, pages 26–27, for further advice on overtures dealing with ordination standards.

Item 05-10

[The assembly disapproved Item 05-10. See p. 78.]

The Presbyteries' Cooperative Committee on Examinations for Candidates recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Shall G-14.0310c be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

"Inquirers or candidates are encouraged to take the Bible Content Examination in their first year of seminary. ~~The other four examinations may be taken by inquires or candidates after completion of two full years of theological education.~~ Inquirers or candidates shall be eligible to take the other four examinations only after completion of the equivalent of two full years of theological education. These four examinations shall only be taken upon approval by the committee on preparation for ministry of the inquirer's or candidate's presbytery."

Rationale

The so-called “Senior” Ordination Exams—four standard examinations in the areas of Biblical Exegesis, Reformed Theology, Worship and Sacraments, and Church Polity—are designed for inquirers and candidates who are in their final year of full-time theological education (or its equivalent). The purpose of the exams is to test for “readiness for ministry,” which includes both academic preparation and the process of integration and application of what one has learned in practical ministry situations.

Some committees on preparation for ministry (CPM) are permitting, even encouraging, inquirers and candidates to take some or all of these four standard examinations before they have completed the equivalent of two full years of theological training. This raises two difficulties with the exams. First, some candidates/inquirers ask to take particular exams after they have just completed a class in the subject. This approach emphasizes the academic nature of the exams to the exclusion of the practical nature (readiness for ministry). Secondly, inquirers and candidates are getting the message that they should take exams “early and often,” so that they will have a better chance of completing the four standard exams by the time they graduate. This sets up a mindset where inquirers/candidates believe they will fail the exams, and this mindset then becomes a self-fulfilling prophecy. If a person fails an exam or exams because s/he was not fully ready to take it, s/he is like to fail the exam a second time because of fear, nerves, or expectations.

The current wording in the Book of Order, G-14.0310c, sentence two, is fuzzy. The word “may” implies that the exams would ordinarily be taken during the final year of theological education, but leaves the door open for CPMs to permit those under their care to take these exams earlier. This is contrary to the spirit in which the exams are prepared and offered. The members of the Executive Committee of the Presbyteries’ Cooperative Committee on Examinations for Candidates (PCCEC) believe that it is important to clarify the language found in G-14.0310c so that when inquirers/candidates finally take the four standard exams, they will have the learning and experience to give their best efforts, and not be set up for failure.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 05-10
Advice on Item 05-10—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 216th General Assembly (2004) to disapprove Item 05-10.

Rationale

With dismay the Advisory Committee on the Constitution observes in this recommendation more material that is more appropriate in a manual rather than in the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution believes that the current wording of G-14.0310c is sufficient to allow each presbytery’s committee on preparation for ministry to exercise appropriate oversight of its inquirers and candidates. Inquirers and candidates are required to receive permission from the committee on the preparation for ministry to gain admission to the examinations. Committees should not grant permission prematurely.

On Amending G-14.0705c, G-11.0407, W-3.3603, and W-3.3616 Regarding Certified Christian Educators—From the Presbytery of Western North Carolina.

The Presbytery of Western North Carolina overtures the 216th General Assembly (2004) to send the following proposed amendments to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

1. Shall G-14.0705c be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“The presbytery shall grant the privilege of the floor to the Certified Associate Christian Educator at all its meetings with voice. (G-11.0407) Certified Christian Educators who have been examined and approved by the presbytery (or through its committee on ministry) shall be members of the presbytery with voice and vote, wherein they serve, but only as long as they are employed by a session or the presbytery (or another governing body or agency).”

2. Shall G-11.0407 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“The stated clerk shall maintain four rolls, . . . one listing all Certified Christian Educators who are members of presbytery, and Certified Associate Christian Educators within the bounds of the presbytery who are entitled to the privilege of the floor with voice at all presbytery meetings . . .”

3. Shall the last paragraph of W-3.3603 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“An elder or a Certified Christian Educator may lead the congregation in these professions and affirmations. (W-2.2009; W-2.3011–.3014)”

4. Shall W-3.3616d be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“d. The bread and the cup may be served by ordained officers of the church, Certified Christian Educators, or by other church members on invitation of the session or authorizing governing body.”

Rationale

The certified Christian educator has been entrusted by the church with one of its most important tasks—the nurturing of our children, youth, and adults in the faith and service of Jesus Christ.

The education and training of the certified Christian educator approximates that of the minister of Word and Sacrament. Generally, a Master of Arts in Christian Education has been earned, and Certified Christian Educators have passed General Assembly examinations in Biblical Interpretation, Reformed Theology, Human Development, Religious Education and Practice, Polity, Program and Mission of the PCUSA, and Worship and Sacraments. They have also usually been employed by a church for several years.

As a contrasting example, the office of commissioned lay pastor (much needed and much appreciated in our denomination) has been authorized to perform many more functions (G-14.0801), even though commissioned lay pastors have generally had less education, training, and experience.

Since certified Christian educators have usually been intimately involved in teaching church members about the Sacraments, it is fitting that they be able to assist in the celebrations of Baptism and the Lord’s Supper.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 05-11

Advice on Item 05-11—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 216th General Assembly (2004) to disapprove Item 05-11.

Rationale

The Presbytery of Western North Carolina seeks to amend the Book of Order in various places to alter the standing, role, and function of Certified Christian Educators and Certified Associate Christian Educators.

The direction and intent of the proposed amendments have been before the General Assembly (and predecessor bodies) for decades (most recently in 1997 and 2002). In 1987, a new section (G-14.0702ff) was added to the Form of Government speaking directly to the role of educators within the church and the protections to be afforded them by the presbytery. However, proposals to grant membership have not been approved either by an assembly, or when submitted to the presbyteries for a vote, by a majority. The reason for maintaining the current practice of restricting vote in presbytery to ministers of Word and Sacrament (who are continuing members) and elders (who are commissioned to presbytery by sessions) rests upon our foundational understanding of governance. Altering such a foundational principle constitutes a radical change in our polity. A decision not to grant membership in presbytery should not be viewed in any way as a denigration of faithfulness, qualifications, or training.

In 2001, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution (reiterating its comments to the 212th General Assembly (2000)) spoke to similar proposals:

The church is concerned about the status and honor given to educators within the church. The church should do all it can to reject any second-class status for educators in compensation, contribution, or tenure within the community of faith. However, the parity of ministers of Word and Sacrament along with elders in the governance of the church is a long-standing principle of governance that should not be easily compromised by an ever-increasing number of parallel offices granted vote in governance by virtue of either commission or certification. . . . (Minutes, 2001, Part I, p. 211)

For various reasons a presbytery may grant “membership” to an ordained elder “for a term.” However such a provision by rule and for a fixed term of service is different from what is proposed, namely a status of “member” based solely upon a certification process. The effect of this overture, if approved, would create a category of persons entitled to membership by virtue of a certification process outside the discretion of the presbytery. The historic principle of governance asserts that a presbytery has the right to determine its membership.

However, if it is the will of the assembly to radically alter the fundamental understandings we hold about governance in the church, it would be wise to initiate the process of changing those foundational assumptions rather than to continue to create these peripheral rights of membership, which only confuse and confound our historic principles.

The concern of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution for the proposed amendments to the Directory for Worship stem from these fundamental concerns. In the matter of who may propose to the congregation its vows in the sacrament of baptism (W-3.3603); the sacraments traditionally have been entrusted to the ordained officers. To alter this practice would open a whole new understanding of the nature of office in the church.

The proposed amendment to W-3.3616d is unnecessary. The session in its authority to authorize, oversee, and administer the sacrament of the Lord’s Supper may invite “other church members” to participate in the distribution of the elements. Since the provision does not specify “other members of the particular congregation,” one would have to assume that this provision would be required only if the Certified Christian Educator was not a member of any Presbyterian congregation, anywhere. While the possibility may exist, amending the Constitution to provide for it seems unwise.

Item 05-12

[The assembly approved Item 05-12 with amendment. See p. 78.]

ACC Request Regarding Interpretation of G-14.0515d, Parish Associates—From Stated Clerk/Co-Executive Presbyter, Presbytery of Whitewater Valley.

In response this request, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed alternative amending language to G-14.0515d to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

~~“d. The agreement between the session, and the parish associate, and the presbytery shall, whenever a pulpit becomes vacant, be terminated upon due notice by the session or the parish associate with the ap-~~

~~approval of the presbytery terminate when the call to the installed pastor is dissolved [or the presbytery acts to dissolve the relationship with the parish associate]. [The presbytery may dissolve the relationship with the parish associate upon the recommendation of the committee on ministry].”~~

Rationale

The requester relates an experience with a church that did not wish to terminate a relationship with a parish associate when the installed pastor’s call was dissolved and the pulpit became vacant. The relationship of a parish associate with a church is initiated by the installed pastor. The pastor nominates the parish associate to the session. The session in turn requests to presbytery’s COM that the relationship be established. The COM, in turn, recommends approval to presbytery. The relationship is to be reviewed annually by COM.

One reason noted by the Constitution for the annual review is “to insure ... that installed leadership of the particular church be protected in its effective functioning ...” [G-14.0515c(2)].

The Constitution further specifies, “The parish associate shall be responsible to the pastor...” (G-14.0515a). When the pastor who initiated the relationship in the first place is no longer on the staff of the particular church in which the parish associate serves, the structure of accountability is removed. Subsequent pastor(s) may or may not wish to continue the relationship, its accompanying supervisory responsibilities, and the specific activities or duties carried out by the parish associate during the leadership of the previous pastor.

The language of the Constitution could be clearer concerning the fate of parish associates when pastors retire or move. The alternate language proposed would accomplish that purpose.

Letter of Request Received by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

While recently working with a neighboring Presbytery, I encountered a problem regarding interpretation of a section of the Book of Order. I would appreciate a response from the ACC.

G-14.0515 Parish Associate

When the “pastor, as head of staff” leaves a congregation (in which there is a parish associate) and the “pulpit becomes vacant,” is the parish associate relationship automatically dissolved? And if so, how and by whom?

Context for question. The pastor of a church with a Parish Associate (HR MOWS) left to take another Call. The Session challenged the Presbytery’s contention that the Parish Associate relationship no longer existed, citing G-15.0515d “...be terminated upon due notice by the session...” “...with the approval of the presbytery.” Their position is that the language is “permissive” with regards to the session deciding whether to continue the relationship; it is “shall” only if the session terminates the relationship. The presbytery can only act to approve the action of the session.

The plain language of the text is not as plain as it could be. I was able to research such PJC decisions as Matsuda which states “...although such a relationship was not possible without an installed pastor.” And I am aware that 97-12, which would have made the language clearly permissive, was defeated by the Presbyteries. Such precedents were the basis of my argument that the relationship terminates with the departure of the installed pastor [the position clearly intended by the Book of Order and the denomination]—but I was left with the feeling that I could just as forcefully argue that the relationship is not dissolved until the session provides “due notice”—and if they choose not to provide “due notice” the relationship continues because the Presbytery only “approves” the Session action.

Even better than an interpretation, would be a recommendation to change the wording to read something like the following:

“The agreement between the session, and the parish associate and the presbytery shall, ~~whenever other pulpit becomes vacant, be terminated upon due notice by the session or the parish associate with the approval of~~

~~the presbytery~~ terminate when the call to the installed pastor is dissolved or the Committee on Ministry acts to dissolve the relationship.”

(The last phrase is necessary for those situations where the parish associate relationship needs to be dissolved other than at yearly review or when installed pastor leaves. It clarifies that, like MOWS, the presbytery can, if necessary, unilaterally dissolve the relationship.)

Thank you for your consideration of this matter.

Yours In Christ,
Dr. W. Keith Geckelder,
Co-Executive Presbyter/Stated Clerk

Item 05-13

[The assembly approved Item 05-13. See p. 78.]

The General Assembly Council requests that the 216th General Assembly (2004) delegate to the General Assembly Council the power to revise all portions of the Church Leadership Connection to bring it into conformity with the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Constitution and civil legal changes after such changes are established.

Rationale

In 1997, the General Assembly approved the new Call System with specific language to be used for the Personnel Information File attestation. In 2002, because of changes in the Book of Order, Rules of Discipline, it was necessary to ask the General Assembly to make changes. It is necessary to make further changes to comply with our Constitution. This authorization will facilitate necessary changes in a timely fashion.

Item 05-Info

A. Presbyteries' Cooperative Committee on Examinations for Candidates Agency Summary

During the year 2003, the Office of Examination Services and the Presbyteries' Cooperative Committee on Examinations for Candidates (PCCEC) took time to reflect, to evaluate, and to work to improve both communication and process in the area of ordination examinations.

The work that was begun by the joint task force (with representatives from Churchwide Personnel Services, the Committee on Theological Education, and the Presbyteries' Cooperative Committee on Examinations for Candidates) culminated in a report about trends, concerns, and recommendations regarding ordination examinations and the preparation for ministry process in general. The data for the report was collected and processed by Anthony Ruger, research fellow for the Auburn Institute. The report was presented to stated clerks at the Fall Polity Conference, at committee on ministry and committee on preparation for ministry training events, at the meeting of the Committee on Theological Education in November, to members of the Racial/Ethnic Recruitment Task Force, and to other pertinent groups in the PC(USA). The report will be presented to members of the PCCEC as a whole at their annual meeting in April 2004.

The members of the Presbyteries' Cooperative Committee on Examinations for Candidates gathered in April in Jacksonville, Florida, for their annual meeting. The Reverend Dr. James Goodloe IV continues to serve as moderator of the PCCEC. William Campbell (Presbytery of Scioto Valley), Thomas Tickner (Presbytery of Grace), and Paul Hooker (Presbytery of St. Augustine) completed their terms of service. Richard McClain (Presbytery of Mid-Kentucky), Susan Osoinach (Presbytery of Palo Duro), and Christine Fuller (Presbytery of Northumberland) were elected as new members of the PCCEC from three different reading groups. James Watkins (Presbytery of Providence) was elected as a new committee member by the General Assembly, and Stanley Hall was elected by the assembly to serve a second term.

The Bible Content Examination was offered on the first Friday in February. The four standard Ordination Examinations were offered in February and September.

Six hundred ninety-eight individuals took the 2003 Bible Content Examination; 522 of them (74.9 percent) passed the exam.

In February, 436 inquirers and candidates wrote a total of 1,003 Standard Ordination Examinations, as follows:

	% Satisfactory	% Unsatisfactory
Biblical Exegesis	53.3%	46.7%
Theological Competence	57.6%	42.4%
Worship and Sacraments	61.2%	38.8%
Church Polity	67.5%	32.5%

In September, 540 inquirers and candidates wrote a total of 1,497 Standard Ordination Examinations, as follows:

	% Satisfactory	% Unsatisfactory
Biblical Exegesis	65.0%	35.0%
Theological Competence	60.0%	40.0%
Worship and Sacraments	72.4%	26.6%
Church Polity	68.4%	31.6%
OVERALL	66.7%	33.3%
	(Total of 977 exams)	(Total of 500 exams)

During the year 2003, the Reverend Lesley Davies, executive secretary for the PCCEC, visited students and staff at all PC(USA) seminaries, as well as other seminaries attended by Presbyterian inquirers and candidates.

B. *Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC) Agency Summary

“God has told you what is good. To do justice, to love kindness, to walk humbly” (selected from Micah 6:8).

1. Responsibilities

The context of women's advocacy is a human situation where women experience injustice because they are women. Grounded in communal faith in “God [who] liberated the people of Israel from oppression . . . [and] covenanted with Israel . . . that they might do justice” (Book of Order, G-3.010b) and motivated by painful recognition of sexism within and without, the church explicitly articulated in the Articles of Agreement its commitment to work against gender-based discrimination. The Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC) is a contemporary fulfillment of this commitment. Created by the mandate of the 205th General Assembly (1993) at the recommendation of the Report of the Task Force on Shape and Form, ACWC is charged with the responsibility of assisting the church to give full expression to the rich diversity of its membership as specified in the Book of Order, G-4.0403 . . . monitor(ing) and evaluat[ing] policies, procedures, programs, and resources regarding the way in which they impact the status and position of women in the church...and advocat(ing) for full inclusiveness and equity in all areas of the life and work of the church in society [as a whole]. (Minutes, 1994, Part I, p. 262)

The ACWC's assigned functions are delineated in the GAC Manual of Operations (Appendix I, EV, Section VIII.B.), and they include:

- Preparing policy statements, resolutions, recommendations and reports on women's concerns to the General Assembly;
- Providing advice and counsel to the General Assembly and its committees on overtures, commissioners' resolutions, reports and any other actions before the General Assembly;
- Providing advice to the General Assembly Council on matters of women's concerns including statements concerning pressing issues between meetings of the General Assembly;
- Assisting the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy [ACSWP] in maintaining an up-to-date and accurate compilation of General Assembly policy on women's concerns and providing information as requested;
- Monitoring the implementation of policies and programs for gender justice;
- Providing the Stated Clerk, the Moderator of the General Assembly, and the Executive Director of the General Assembly Council with information as they fulfill their responsibilities to communicate and interpret GA policies on women's concerns;
- Maintaining a strong prophetic witness to the church and society on existing and emerging issues of women's concerns.

The ACWC is a function of the Office of the Deputy Executive Director, General Assembly Council, although its staffing is provided by the Women's Ministries program area, National Ministries Division. The committee has direct access to the General Assembly and the ACWC chair has corresponding member status with the General Assembly Council (GAC) and with the General Assembly. The ACWC has ten members nominated by the General Assembly Nominating Committee and elected by the General Assembly. They are chosen based on their individual qualifications and do not represent any constituencies. Current members are Karen Breckenridge (chair), Sarah A. Colwill, Adeline S. deCastro, Dean E. Foose, Charlene Heaton, Aleida Jernigan, R. Ani Lelea, H. Scott Matheney, and Nancy Neal. In addition, Lillian Oats is a full voting member of the committee, representing Presbyterian Women. Emily Wigger, likewise, is a full voting member, and sits on the committee, by virtue of her position on the General Assembly Council Executive Committee.

In addition, recognizing the complex ways in which gender inequality manifests itself because of class, race, ethnicity, education, age, status in employment, disability, sexual orientation, marital status, and culture, ACWC invites liaisons from other entities of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to sit with the committee at its regularly scheduled meetings. Those entities are the Advocacy Committee on Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC), the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP), the Congregational Ministries Division (CMD), the Presbyterian United Nations Office (PUNO), and the Worldwide Ministries Division (WMD). In turn, liaisons from the ACWC attend the meetings of the ACSWP, ACREC and the Committee on Mission Responsibility Through Investment (MRTI). In 1999, the ACWC began to work with the Board of Pensions (BOP) and, in 2002, with the Presbyterian Health, Education, & Welfare Association (PHEWA).

2. Current Work

During the year 2003, ACWC met three times—January 23–25 in Louisville, Ky., July 24–26 in Sacramento, Calif. (concurrent with the ACSWP and ACREC), and October 16–18 in Chicago, Ill. When choosing these meeting sites, one consideration is the availability of educational opportunities. At the January meeting in Louisville, Ky., the committee heard a presentation from the National Network of Presbyterian College Women (NNPCW) about their history and present work. While in Chicago, we began our time together with Dr. Anna Case-Winters for a lecture and discussion around liberation theology. Also in Chicago the committee received guests from the local presbytery's Justice For Women committee and heard about their work, and visited the mayor's office for a look at their extensive domestic violence hot-line program and the faith community's part in that work.

The following delineates ACWC's work in 2003:

a. Preparing Statements, Reports, Recommendations, and Advice & Counsel to General Assembly

The Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC) has a responsibility to prepare statements, reports, recommendations, and advice and counsel to the General Assembly on issues that impact the status and well-being of women. The ACWC fulfilled this responsibility in the following ways:

- Prepared advice and counsel memoranda on overtures and commissioners' resolutions affecting women and their children coming before the General Assembly.
- Continued, in partnership with others, a review of the church's policies on sexual misconduct by the clergy.
- Continued work on an initiative for assisting the church in use of inclusive language.
- Adopted a process for discerning future work for the committee.
- Led the effort to produce a post-abortion pastoral resource.
- Addressed all referrals from previous General Assemblies (individual reports contained in the following section of this document).
- Submitted ACWC's annual report to the 214th General Assembly (2003).

b. Networking, Monitoring, and Communication

In addition to the exposure to local advocates in areas where ACWC's regular meetings are held, the very make-up of the ACWC allows for networking, monitoring, and evaluating procedures, policies, and programs among General Assembly entities and program areas. Through staff to the ACWC, networking around public policy issues is carried out through the Public Policy Advocate Team (PPAT) made up of GAC staff, representing several program areas; the Cross-Caucus meetings of the Racial Ethnic Ministries; and through involvement in issue oriented inter-staff meetings and conferences.

In these ways a monitoring of broad concerns related to women of color, immigrant women, working parents (child care) can be affected. Likewise, such issues as domestic violence and other examples of violence against women, sexual misconduct, pay equity, women and health, and many other gender-related concerns can be lifted up and addressed in concert with other program entities of the church, making new partnerships possible.

The ACWC's chair meets regularly with GAC and reports ACWC concerns and actions to them.

Issue reports, approved by past General Assemblies, are made available through the Office of Women's Advocacy in the Women's Ministries program area. These reports serve as a means of communicating with the larger church and are available through the Presbyterian Distribution Service (PDS). Recent reports include:

- Clergywomen's Experiences in Ministry: Realities and Challenges (available from the Office of Women's Advocacy) 2003;
- Sisters of Mercy, Daughters of Grace: Presbyterians and Prostituted Women (PDS #095814) 2001;
- Women & AIDS: A Global Crisis (PDS #72 710 01 003) 2001;
- Prostitution in the United States (PDS #72 710 99 009) 1999;
- Report on the Girl Child (PDS #72710 98 003) 1997;
- The Plight of Women and Children Forced into International Prostitution (PDS #72 710 98 004) 1997;
- The Military and Sexual Exploitation and Abuse of Women (PDS #72 710 98 007) 1997;
- The Fourth World Conference on Women, Beijing, China (PDS #72710 98 005) 1996.

C. Task Force on Clergy Recruitment and Retention Report from the Board of Pensions

1. Keeping Our Promises

In the spring of 2003, the Board of Directors of the Board of Pensions commissioned a task force of its clergy-directors to review literature, statistical studies, and other materials with respect to the recruitment and retention of clergy for the pastoral ministry, specifically ministry in and with the local congregation. Based on their review, the task force was asked to make findings and recommendations to the board of directors of suggested actions for the Board of Pensions. Our concern was grounded in the observation that the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has suffered a decline both in membership and in the number of clergy with appropriate skills to answer the varied, and sometimes specialized needs, called for by the congregations. While we acknowledge that leadership in healthy congregations is expressed in many ways, we observe that more often than not, the pastor's leadership acts as a catalyst for the culture of faith, excitement, and community that draws people to our congregations. We, along with other General Assembly agencies, are dedicated to helping build church leadership, especially pastoral leadership, for now and for the future.

One conclusion is certain: Every Presbyterian, every church, every session, every middle governing body, and every General Assembly agency has both a role and a responsibility to sustain our ministers of the Word and Sacrament in their work and provide for ongoing support and growth.

This responsibility is made clear in our Constitution by questions posed to the members of the church.

We Presbyterians make promises to our clergy at the time of their installation. These promises result from our affirmative answers to the questions posed in section G-14.0510(a)(3) of our Book of Order:

Do we promise:

- To pay him or her fairly and provide for his or her welfare as he or she works among us?
- To stand by him or her in trouble and share his or her joys?
- To listen to the word he or she preaches, welcome his or her pastoral care, and honor his or her authority as he or she seeks to honor and obey Jesus Christ our Lord?

Initially, we identified several issues:

- What might the Board of Pensions do, within its mission, to help keep our part of those promises?
- What might we undertake to help attract to the ministry younger, talented persons who can give many years of service to the church?
- How might we help to retain qualified persons in parish ministry?
- In what tangible ways might intentional and attentive listening serve to encourage and enable a vital support network within the connectional framework of the denomination?
- How might we support our clergy so that they can provide the sort of strong, vibrant, spiritual leadership that inspires us and helps each of us to achieve and sustain the spiritual growth and contentment for which we hunger?

The work of the task force resulted in the following report to our board of directors.

The findings of our task force deserve the attention of all of us. While some findings may be addressed in part by the Board of Pensions, some require prayerful consideration and attention by others in the Presbyterian community. There is no simple answer, procedure, or program that results in a single solution.

In fact, there may be many solutions: some crafted to meet local or regional needs, others crafted at the national level. Much time and considerable resources, both human and financial, are required. We strongly believe that our denomination's combined efforts will be worthwhile. We further believe our ministers deserve our best efforts. The directors of the Board of Pensions urge us all to reflect upon the simple yet profound promises we have made to our ministers at the time of installation and to search for new ways to continue to keep them.

The Board of Pensions has committed itself to design, develop, and raise funds for some new programs that would address these issues. However, before we could begin the design phase, we needed to have a better definition of the problems we seek to ameliorate.

The Board of Directors of the Board of Pensions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) believes that the report of our task force is a valuable and helpful step forward in defining the problems and respectfully refers the following report to the 216th General Assembly (2004) for its thoughtful consideration.

Earldean V.S. Robbins, Chair, The Board of Pensions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)

2. Report and Recommendations to the Board of Directors of the Board of Pensions, March 6, 2004

The Task Force affirms the good and dedicated work of thousands of women and men who have answered the call to serve as ordained ministers of the Word and Sacrament. The church gives thanks for their faithfulness, commitment, sacrifice, and leadership. So many serve the church faithfully and well. So many witness to the love and justice of Jesus Christ as they live out their calling in congregations small and large, urban and rural. We rejoice in the unity among us and give thanks to God for their witness of Christian discipleship.

The task force, inspired by our fellow servants, offers its findings on clergy recruitment and retention to support the efforts of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to build and strengthen pastoral leadership.

a. The Charge to the Task Force on Clergy Recruitment and Retention

The task force was established by the Earldean V.S. Robbins, chair of the board of directors of the Board of Pensions, in February 2003. The Reverend Dr. Arthur E. Sundstrom, first vice chair of the board, was asked to moderate the task force and all other clergy directors, including co-opted and a candidate for ministry, were invited to participate.

The charge to the task force focused on the recruitment and retention of ministers of the Word and Sacrament in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). The task force was directed to review literature, studies, and anecdotal information on this topic; summarize its findings; and recommend to the board of directors what, if any, responses the Board of Pensions, within its mission, could make to the issues raised by the research. Early on, the task force realized that some of the matters surrounding recruitment and retention issues were beyond the mission of the Board of Pensions, but should be raised so that the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) at large would have the opportunity to learn from the findings and make any responses it feels appropriate and necessary.

b. Composition and Meetings of Task Force

The following members of the Board of Directors of the Board of Pensions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) participated in the task force: the Reverend Dr. Jefferson K. Aiken Jr.; the Reverend Gerald (Dan) Clark Jr.; the Reverend Dr. Stephen E. Gorman; the Reverend Dr. Isaiah Jones (co-opted); the Reverend Dr. Daniel P. Junkin; the Reverend Adele Langworthy (board, Class 2003); Adan A. Mairena (candidate for ministry); the Reverend Dr. Arthur E. Sundstrom, task force chair and first vice chair, board of directors; the Reverend John P. Wilson; the Reverend Dr. Jeffrey D. Yergler; the Reverend Dr. Richard E. Young. Ex officio: Earldean V.S. Robbins, board chair.

The following staff representatives of the Board of Pensions participated in the task force: Robert W. Maggs Jr., president; the Reverend Dr. William R. Forbes, vice president, Church Relations and corporate secretary; Francis E. Maloney, executive vice president; the Reverend Alexander S. McLachlan, special assistant to the president; the Reverend Peter C.S. Sime, director of assistance and retirement housing.

The task force held five meetings: April 3, 2003, Dallas, Tex.; July 10, 2003, Philadelphia, Pa.; October 22, 2003, Santa Fe, N.M.; January 12, 2004, Houston, Tex.; March 4, 2004, Philadelphia, Pa.

c. Materials Considered by the Task Force

The conclusions of the task force are based on the excellent work product of many institutions and authors. We sincerely appreciate the thoughtful and prayerful work of the people who contributed their time and effort in the preparation of the materials we used. A complete bibliography is listed at the end of the report.

The Board of Pensions data refers only to the number of ordained clergy who are members of the Plan. This total is 9,760. The Comparative Statistics published by Research Services lists the number of active ministers as 13,845 and this number is used by other sources. The difference is 4,085 persons who are engaged in many different forms of ministry and hold membership in a presbytery but are not currently members in the Plan.

d. Focus Areas

The research reviewed by the task force very consistently identified the following focus areas:

- stress management,
- conflict resolution,
- organizational development,
- personal health management,
- managing church finances,
- shepherding congregations,
- supporting fellow workers/staff relationships,
- understanding and reconciling family choices and exigencies,
- matching qualifications and needs within the call process,
- mentoring programs by pastors for pastors,
- support for innovative presbytery programs to provide for the shepherding and sustaining of small churches.

e. Findings

(1) Recruitment

Is there a clergy shortage? There is no simple answer. There is no shortage in the absolute number of ministers to serve in current church vacancies; however, there is a shortage of pastors. The Office of General Assembly reports that there are currently 11,097 congregations and 13,845 active ministers of the Word and Sacrament. Of course, many of these ministers are serving in specialized ministries, teaching, etc. But as the statistics illustrate, there are far more ordained ministers than total number of churches, and multiple times the number of vacant churches.

However, these statistics do not take into account the reality of a shortage of clergy willing or able to serve in available congregational settings. The reasons are many, including the fact that there are fewer pastors whose job qualifications, personal needs, or professional experiences match the requirements for current vacancies. This is sometimes attributable to the skill level or personal circumstances of the candidate, the match of the candidate's experience to the particular job qualifications desired, or the adequacy of the terms of call offered for an available position. In addition to normal turnover, vacancies may arise or remain unfilled because of the culture, the location, the work environment, or the resources of the congregation itself. Small rural and urban, immigrant and racial ethnic congregations may face a greater challenge in filling a vacancy.

Additional issues also greatly impact a pastor's decision to serve a church including the availability of work for a spouse (clergy couples serving churches and dual-career couples in which the spouse is involved in a secular occupation). This is an important issue for both the financial support of the family as well as personal satisfaction and degree of professional achievement of the spouse.

Further exacerbating the problem is declining membership and a resultant decline in resources. Many of our "vacant" churches have insufficient membership to sustain a full-time (and in many instances even a part-time) pastor. As of 2002, almost five thousand of our churches have a membership of 100 or fewer members. Using the definitions provided by our denominational Research Services unit, that means that 45 percent of all congregations in our denomination "qualified as very small."<sup>1</sup> The size of the congregation links directly to the congregation's ability to call and support a pastor. In 2002, the median total contributions from living donors to these very small churches was $34,020. While some of these churches may have revenue sources in addition to annual contributions by the congregation, this level of revenue makes it extremely difficult to financially support a pastor.<sup>2</sup> In addition, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) should continue to explore new ways to minister to communities that cannot afford an installed pastor.

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) must come to terms with the reality of the inability of a large percentage of our congregations to call a pastor and then recalculate the number of true vacancies in the denomination. When examined through this lens it becomes clear that the issue of a "clergy shortage" could be framed as a membership shortage.<sup>3</sup>

The statistics concerning the number of clergy vis-à-vis the number of churches that can sustain a pastor show that, in purely numeric terms, there is no clergy shortage nor will there be one in the foreseeable future.<sup>4</sup> However, these statistics should not suggest to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) at large that there is no need to recruit women and men for the ministry of the Word and Sacrament. The church, now as always, is in need of gifted and capable persons to serve congregations as pastors. It is the task of current leaders of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), including pastors, youth workers, sessions, professors, and chaplains, to identify persons who should be invited to explore God's call upon their lives. We should always be aware of women and men who may be exploring other career possibilities and invite them to consider the ministry as a vocation. We commend the Presbyterian Pastoral Leadership Search Effort (PLSE) for its leadership in this area and urge wide support and participation in its efforts.

(2) Retention

The second major focus of the task force's work is the matter of retention. Could and should the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) do more to retain persons in the pastoral ministry? In our view, the answer to both questions is "yes." The primary consideration for such an affirmative answer is that it is incumbent upon all of us to assure strong, experienced pastoral leadership for current members as well as for future generations. The statistical data of the Board of Pensions shows that a small, but significant, number of clergy are leaving the Plan within seven years of ordination. This is true of both first and second career clergy. This number seems to be increasing. Between 1990–1996, the average number leaving each year in this category was sixty-eight. Beginning in 2000, the average number has increased to ninety-six annually. This number becomes more significant when one considers the average age of the 9,760 ordained clergy in the Plan is 50.5 and that 2,905 of them (approximately 30 percent) are between ages 55–65 and can be expected to retire within the next ten to fifteen years. The research of Lucy Rupe shows that during the last twenty years the rate of retirement has averaged 360 per year and during last ten years the number of ordinations has been between 330–400.

Our research revealed many reasons people choose to leave the parish ministry. Some choices are based on personal and other non-job related considerations. Some choices may reflect weaknesses in our denominational gatekeeping and call processes. Some choices may reflect simple program omissions because we have relied too much on on-the-job learning for our clergy.

Historically, we have tended to blame our seminaries for any practical pastoral deficiencies. It is not clear, however, that such blame is properly placed. It is clear that blame alone does not serve to correct the deficiencies. We must all accept responsibility to help clergy be adequately prepared for the rigors and challenges of parish life.<sup>5</sup>

Our research identified a number of factors that contribute to retention problems. The most significant and often reported include stress, conflict, and burnout.

(a) Stress

While “stress” is experienced in many professions, studies have identified particular situations that specifically impact pastors’ feelings about their work. The leading “stressors” are:

- Inadequate skills in managing what are perceived to be unrealistic expectations of the congregation.
- Unrealistic expectations of pastors entering a new call, especially their first call.
- Feeling lonely or isolated.
- Inability to spend adequate time with family or loved ones.
- Insufficient terms of call, or to state it more bluntly, inadequate cash salaries, housing allowance, travel allowances, and continuing education allowances. In short, the entire compensation package.<sup>6</sup>

Both the Board of Pensions and the church at large should be particularly concerned about stress issues. If efforts to reduce or eliminate stress are successful, there would be less need for medical and psychological assistance, thus reducing medical claims. Reducing stress improves the health of our pastors, enables them to do the work they are called to do in more satisfying and productive ways, and thus reducing the cost to the church: a “win-win” situation for all.

(b) Conflict

Like stress, conflict is common in the modern workplace; but unlike typical workplaces, the key leader, in this case the pastor, is expected to understand and manage conflict while sometimes being the very source of conflict. While conflict in human communities will never be fully eliminated, identifying the sources of conflict enables adequate responses to be developed. Among the prime causes of conflict that pastors identify are:

- Conflict within the local church. Due to differences in leadership styles, worship practices, management issues, etc., significant disagreement leading to conflict between pastor and member may arise.<sup>7</sup>
- Conflict with denominational officials (executive presbyters, committee on ministry personnel, etc.). This conflict leads to a feeling of not being supported by those outside the local congregation, exacerbating issues of loneliness and stress.
- Conflict with head of staff or with other members of staff.
- Doctrinal conflict, which causes significant tension within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) at large, is reported by pastors to be a very minor issue in their local congregation.<sup>8</sup>

(c) Burnout

While the definition of burnout is imprecise and used to mean different things by different people, this term appeared in several studies and in each was considered to be a factor that negatively impacts a pastor’s work. For the purposes of this study, burnout included:

- A spiritual life/practice that is neither rich nor renewing.
- Being bored or feeling constrained by the current position.

- Feeling drained by the demands made by parishioners.<sup>9</sup>
- Inadequate on-going support mechanisms for pastors.<sup>10</sup>
- Receiving little satisfaction in the role/status of pastor.

(d) Summary

While additional items could be identified as special issues and concerns of parish clergy, the three most often reported are stress, conflict, and burnout. The issue of stress must be addressed by both comprehensive, at-large strategies and individual responses shaped by particular situations. In the matter of conflict, inadequate training in practical matters of church life and administration are often identified as a cause. Burnout could be attributed to lack of skills or knowledge in self-care and the external pressures noted. Important external pressures are unrealistic demands as perceived by the pastor and the feeling of loneliness or isolation that many experience.

f. The Interests of the Board of Pensions

Our recommendations address two questions:

- What are the interests of the Board of Pensions in this subject matter?
- What programs, within its mission, should the Board of Pensions consider in the near term to help address these findings?

The mission of the Board of Pensions is to provide benefits and financial assistance to Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) workers and their families. To support this mission, the Board of Pensions designs and administers benefits, assistance, and related programs and receives, invests, and disburses moneys for those programs.

To the extent that Benefits Plan members, and especially ministers of the Word and Sacrament, suffer mental and physical health problems because of working conditions, costs are increased for healthcare, death, and disability benefits. This reality impacts the entire Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) because congregations share in the funding of the Benefits Plan. Further, the responsibilities assigned to the Board of Pensions by the General Assembly specifically include designing and administering a program of financial assistance to help meet needs that are beyond the scope of the Benefits Plan.

Currently, the board only offers education programs for clergy related to financial and retirement planning. The task force recommends that, as funds become available, the board of directors consider new programs beyond financial and retirement planning as it seeks to fulfill the mission of the board in the 21st century.

g. Recommendations to the Directors of the Board of Pensions

(1) Program for Continuing Education for Pastoral Leadership

The task force recognizes that our seminaries, colleges, and several of our ministry units provide various forms of continuing education for pastors, church workers, and church members. These efforts continue to enrich the church and its membership in incalculable ways. However, we recommend that the board sponsor a multi-faceted program for continuing education specifically designed for professional skill building for pastoral leaders. Every profession finds that continuing education works to the advantage of the professionals and those whom they serve; most professions mandate such education. This program, for which funding must be found, would be a central resource for pastors to learn some of those skills that are frequently learned only on the job. The courses would be designed by the board in cooperation with other segments of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), including our seminaries and colleges, synods, presbyteries, and other ministry units as appropriate. The programs featured would be constructed to help pastors deal with those situations that are often the source of retention issues for them or their sessions. Opportunities for growth in practical and professional skills would also be a key component of a continuing education effort.

One of the great advantages of current board assistance programs is the active participation of presbyteries and employing organizations in both the selection of recipients and the sharing of the costs of the assistance provided. We recommend that this model should be used in the administration of the program for continuing education for pastoral leadership. In this way, the decision-making process is inherently a local one.

(2) Wellness Initiatives

Various studies<sup>11</sup> noted that many pastors are not caring for their physical health as well as they should. The board should continue to provide information, programs, and other responses that will encourage and enable ministers to move toward better health practices and conditions. Additionally, programs and incentives should be designed to respond to particular situations. Responses would vary depending on individual needs, location, availability of services, etc.

(3) Information Technology

In today's fast-paced, highly technological society, the pastor finds himself or herself even more isolated if he or she does not have access to computers and the Internet. The feeling of isolation can be intense for those pastors serving in less densely populated areas of the country.

Even though there are a great number of continuing education events throughout the country, transportation and cost both pose problems for many of our rural pastors. The board, in conjunction with presbyteries and local congregations, should assist churches with the cost of adding computer capability and training as well as aiding in the connection to the Internet where feasible. To further help the congregations and pastors, the board in partnership with other General Assembly agencies should raise funds and develop the highest quality user-friendly Web site that would allow pastors throughout the denomination to access information from the denomination as well as other sources. This Web site would facilitate the access to the information from the Board concerning benefits as well as other pertinent information from agencies of the denomination. Another opportunity for the use of the Web would be the dissemination of educational information concerning many of the previously mentioned topics by on-line seminars that could be accessed in the local church.

h. Concerns Suggested for Consideration of Others Within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)

The task force recognizes that many sessions, presbyteries, synods, General Assembly entities, seminaries, and other organizations are studying and addressing ways to help attract and retain persons in the parish ministry. We respectfully refer them to the excellent work done by those on whom we relied during the course of our work. Subjects deserving of a new look and a special focus include the following:

(1) More Carefully Discern the Suitability of Individuals for the Ministry of the Word and Sacrament

This includes revisiting the considerations, processes, and standards used during the inquiry and candidacy process. "Gatekeeping" occurs at many points in Presbyterian processes from inquiry to call. Each of these points is a focus of special responsibilities for participating governing bodies. Some inquirers and candidates are entering ministry who do not seem to have the gifts for ministry as evidenced by difficulties in their personal lives due to their work and the difficulties and conflict that arise in the churches they serve. The relatively short time they serve the church in active ordained ministry is another indicator of the lack of thoroughness in exploring the call during the time of discernment. It seems that at no point in the process were they constructively counseled toward serving the church other than as ministers of the Word and Sacrament. It appears that sessions, committees on preparation for ministry, presbyteries, and seminaries sometimes passed them through the process, each hoping that some other group would exercise theological and pastoral gatekeeping. The result of our collective failure is that, at times, inadequately trained and equipped, and emotionally unsuitable ministers are serving or have served, and sometimes damaged, churches.

(2) Review the Inquiry and Candidacy Process

We further recommend that one particular requirement of the inquiry and candidacy process be reviewed: the two-year under care provision. Some persons do not begin the process until their senior year in seminary, which means they are ineligible to receive a call for two years after graduation from seminary. In the meantime, they must work to provide for themselves and their families and often begin another career path. For many reasons, they do not want to abandon that other career when they become eligible to receive a call. Due to this requirement, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) may be losing many fine pastors who would otherwise enter congregational service.

(3) Examine the Vacancy Process

How do we best match qualifications and a call? How can a church realistically plan for succession of clergy within our polity? The question has to be asked if it is in the best interests of the congregation to have a vacancy that, from start to finish, can take a year to eighteen months and, in some cases, even longer. Many of our lay people find the process irritating, time consuming, frustrating, and at total variance with good personnel practices.

(4) Emphasize Continuing Education

While the Book of Order requires that at least two-weeks study leave be granted annually, it does not require that such time be used. Additionally, in most parish settings, there is little, if any, consultation between the pastor and the session, or the pastor and the presbytery, as to what subjects or skill development the pastor should pursue using the study leave granted by the church. Consultation could help identify skills that would enhance ministry in that particular setting resulting in less conflict and more satisfaction by both the pastor and the congregation.

Taking the issue of continuing education even more seriously, consideration should be given to mandating continuing education for all pastors. This is common practice in the helping professions (for example, physicians, nurses, practicing psychologists, social workers). Specifying which areas of continuing education are required may be left for pastors and governing bodies to decide.

(5) Review the Process to Call an Individual

The task force raises these questions for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) at large to consider:

- Should some of our processes be examined to encourage creativity and flexibility in matching clergy to vacancies?
- Should the church examine and rationalize the relative complexity of the process leading toward ordination for the minister of the Word and Sacrament with the relative simplicity of the process of commissioning lay pastors?

(6) Define Compensation for Pastors

This includes a look not only at “minimum” terms of call, but “adequate” terms of call. There can be much discussion as to what “adequate” may mean, but the answers to a few questions may provide some indication: What financial resources are required for a pastor (and family) to live in the same style as does the average member of the congregation he or she serves? Does the adequacy of compensation take into account any debt that the pastor may have incurred while preparing for the ordained ministry? Do allowances for professional expenses actually cover the expense or is the pastor expected to cover the actual expense from his or her salary? We urge each presbytery to define “adequate terms of call” and work toward ensuring that all pastors receive such compensation.

(7) Examine Support For Pastors

This includes an examination of resources and professional relationships that encourage and support our pastors by reducing stress, conflict, and burnout. In some presbyteries, the executive presbyter can serve this function well; in others, for a host of reasons, it may be wiser for another presbytery staff member or a contracted professional counselor to serve in this capacity.

i. The Board in Partnership with Others

The task force notes that the Board of Pensions cannot and should not be the sole sponsor of the many opportunities available to our church community to support our pastors as they work among us. We are aware of many innovative programs now under development in several of our seminaries, the ground-breaking work being undertaken by some General Assembly agencies, and the generosity of several foundations that provide for funding for new initiatives. We are also aware that many presbyteries and even local churches seek new ways to assist their pastors in their efforts to be faithful servants. But the task force has come to understand that the need is great and seems to be growing. Many opportunities and needs can be addressed by sessions, presbyteries, synods, and the General Assembly and all of its entities.

The Board of Pensions is keenly aware that declining membership is a phenomenon affecting all mainline denominations. We are also aware that there are many cultural, sociological, and demographic reasons contributing to this decline; however, our premise is that the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), in essence, has a “personnel problem” that, if left unaddressed, will soon become another contributing factor to the decline in membership. We believe the data we reviewed supports our premise. We believe we should each do our best, within our respective roles and responsibilities, to stand by our promises to our pastors, and help build the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) leadership for the future.

Certainly the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is far more than the women and men who have been called to the ministry of the Word and Sacrament, but as both Scriptures declare and history confirms, without a committed, well-educated, trained, and supported leadership, neither the church of Jesus Christ nor its members will ever grow into the fullness and faithfulness God intends. Men and women continue to respond to the Call of Christ. The church must ensure they are equipped and supported in their mission.

j. Acknowledgements

The directors of the Board of Pensions offer their thanks to our colleagues Marcia Clark Myers, associate director, Churchwide Personnel Services (GAC); Keith Wulff, coordinator, Research Services (GAC); and Lucy Rupe, executive presbyter of Winnebago Presbytery. All of these folks gave generously of their time and expertise to assist the project and made many helpful suggestions.

Beth Rutkowski and Craig Lomicky of the Board of Pensions staff provided the statistical details and information that were important to our task. Jean Hemphill provided legal advice. Deborah S. Bernard handled all of our administrative responsibilities throughout the project. They deserve our thanks and appreciation.

(3) Telephone Interviews

In addition, the task force conducted telephone interviews with persons who had recently left the active pastoral ministry to gain “first person” information concerning their decisions to enter and then leave active ministry. The methodology adopted by the task force was that the directors would personally call randomly selected clergy from each of the following cohorts:

- Those ordained at under age thirty who left active service within ten years.
- Those ordained at over age forty who left active service within ten years.
- Those who left active service within seven years of ordination from any category.
- Those who served for at least twenty years and left active service within ten years of retirement.

Item 06-01

[The assembly approved Item 06-01 with amendment. See p. 19.]

The General Assembly Council, upon recommendation of the Worldwide Ministries Division, with the concurrence of the Congregational Ministries Division and the National Ministries Division, recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) approve the following:

1. Expansion of work responding to the 1999 referral to better equip the church for witness in pluralistic society, to be designed and carried out by a cross-divisional staff team coordinated by the Interfaith Relations Office. This team will also involve at least the Office of Theology and Worship and the Committee on Theological Education in the Congregational Ministries Division, the Office on International Evangelism in the Worldwide Ministries Division, and the Office of Evangelism and Church Development in the National Ministries Division. [To invite and include specialized ministers, chaplains, and others who work frequently in interfaith contexts to be included as part of the cross-divisional staff team.]

2. Development of one or more study resources for congregational use, to equip Presbyterians in better articulation of their faith in interreligious contexts.

3. A change of the date for a final report on this project to the 217th General Assembly (2006).

Rationale

These recommendations are in response to the following referral: 1999 Referral: 25.246. "Policy Statement on Building Community Among Strangers," Religious Intolerance and Conflict, Recommendation f. Encouraging the General Assembly Council, Through the Worldwide Ministries Division, in cooperation with the Committee on Theological Education, to Convene a Consultation on Ways Seminaries and Others Might Provide Continuing Education on How to Train Church Members to Articulate Their Faith—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 1999, Part I, p. 404).

The 211th General Assembly (1999) acted to refer to the Worldwide Ministries Division that, "in cooperation with the Committee on Theological Education, [it] convene a consultation on ways seminaries and others might provide continuing education for pastors to enable their training church members to articulate their faith adequately in the context of interreligious dialogue" (Minutes, 1999, Part I, p. 404, paragraph 25.246).

The General Assembly referral focuses on the witness made by Presbyterians in interreligious relationships of every kind, but particularly in the arenas of everyday life. Many Presbyterians confess that they do not know how to talk about their faith with persons outside the church community. Consequently, their choices are limited—to avoid relationships with persons of other faiths; to meet persons of other religions without talking about faith matters; or to engage with neighbors who are followers of other religions, repeating "churchy" language that conveys little meaning to others. Presbyterians may even be adopting relativistic theological positions about religion simply because they are not articulate.

While witness is not solely a matter of words and speech, we believe what we say is important. We make our witness in the context of listening to the other as well as sharing our own experience. The General Assembly action puts an emphasis upon discovering appropriate ways to equip pastors for helping church members meet their needs in order that they may be witnesses in pluralistic society.

The Worldwide Ministries Division (WMD) indicated to the 214th General Assembly (2002) that it expected to make a final report on this project to the 215th General Assembly (2003). To that end, WMD's Interfaith Office began to work with the Committee on Theological Education (COTE) on a proposed consultation, which aimed to focus on ways the continuing education systems related to the PC(USA)—especially, but not necessarily exclusively, the theological institutions—might empower pastors to nurture church members in the articulation of their faith as they live among people of other religions.

The consultation planned would have given attention to issues of witness in pluralistic society and of congregational nurture in the context of determining means for pastoral continuing education. The understanding of witness to be addressed by the consultation was broad in scope, and based upon a dialogical approach that implies that Christian witnesses both express their own faith and listen to the witness of the other in an attitude of respect and openness.

This project was not pursued in 2002 nor in 2003, due primarily to a staff vacancy in the Interfaith Relations Office, which has now been resolved. Funds were reallocated for other work.

Reasons for Expanding the Referred Mandate

In 2004, Presbyterians continue to find themselves in increasing interaction with persons of other religious traditions. The political and social significance and complexity of our interactions is ever more clear. If anything, there is now more need to help Presbyterians feel comfortable and equipped to be articulate witnesses to their faith in interreligious situations of everyday life.

Conversations with pastors, members, and staff within the PC(USA) have raised a number of additional questions and concerns related to the completion of this project:

- We do not yet have enough information about what specific kinds of help pastors and congregants want and need with regard to witness in pluralistic society. Some research is needed to clarify what sort of resource or process will be of most help. Focus-group discussions and other conversations need to be conducted to clarify what is most needed by pastors, congregants, and seminary leaders in this area.

- Addressing theological questions and unfamiliarity with central affirmations of Christian faith clearly need to be part of any attempt to enable more adequate articulation of faith. One issue that has been raised for possible exploration by the Office of Theology and Worship is the question of what Presbyterians mean by “salvation.” New resources may be needed to help Presbyterians nourish their roots in Reformed Christian tradition that will support them as witnesses.

- To equip the church well in this area, it might also be helpful to clarify the variety of possible approaches to witness and evangelization, and to enable Presbyterians to study and discuss these. This work will require the cooperation of the Offices of Interfaith Relations, International Evangelism, and Evangelism and Church Development, on approaches to witness and evangelism.

It is in light of these concerns that the Worldwide Ministries Division makes this recommendation for cross-division work to complete the referred mandate on “Witness in Pluralistic Societies.”

Item 06-02

[The assembly disapproved Item 06-02, and made recommendations in response to this item. See pp. 19–20.]

On Forming a Task Force to Draft a Denominational Policy Consistent with the Religious Pluralism Reality in the U.S.A.—From the Presbytery of Eastern Oklahoma.

The Presbytery of Eastern Oklahoma overtures the 216th General Assembly (2004) to instruct the Stated Clerk to convene the presidents of seminaries associated with the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to designate scholars in the field of religious pluralism to form a task force to draft a denominational policy consistent with the religious pluralism reality in the United States of American and in the world that does the following:

- Informs our religious educational systems.

- Enlightens our liturgical practices.
- Enlarges our ecumenical efforts.

All this with the purpose in mind that our leadership and membership have a better appreciation of what neighbor love really means when our neighbors and work colleagues so often are people of another religion, which reality instructs us that our faith and its practice are not threatened by the acknowledgment and respect of religions other than Christianity nor by denominational instrumentalities other than Presbyterianism. And as a part of this process it is requested that General Assembly urge the Stated Clerk to do the following:

- Engage the staff of the Worldwide Ministries Division and the office of the Coordinator of Interfaith Relations to aid and assist the Stated Clerk in this effort.
- Seek the necessary funding from the Office of the General Assembly.

Organize this task force so that they can be prepared to come to the 217th General Assembly (2006) with a recommended policy statement that is sufficiently credible and judicious that it will not only serve the mission and ministry of this church, but serve as a model for other Christian denominations to emulate in their own fashion.

Rationale

Contending religious forces are certainly not the only source of hatred and war in this world and at this time, but it is a self-evident truth that: there will be no peace between nations until there is peace between religions.

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has a reputation known worldwide as a faith community that not only seeks peace as a program goal, but diligently works under the mandate of reconciliation to make peace between the alienated.

Presbyterians have long acknowledged and deplored our own failure to find reconciliation within our own communion that too often immobilizes good decision-making capabilities.

To our detriment, we have failed to employ our most learned thinkers often associated with seminaries and institutions of higher education to help our denomination find workable solutions to chronic but crucial religious and ideological problems that have confounded past General Assemblies.

We freely confess that our culture and our discords tempt us to be impatient when healthy outcomes actually require very long-term planning and very hard work.

GAC COMMENT ON ITEM 06-02

Comment on Item 06-02—From the General Assembly Council.

The General Assembly Council, in consultation with its Worldwide Ministries Division, offers to the 216th General Assembly (2004) the following comment:

This overture asks for the drafting of a denominational policy consistent with the religious pluralism reality in the U.S.A. and in the world that informs our religious education systems, enlightens our liturgical practices, and enlarges our ecumenical efforts with the purpose in mind that our leadership and membership have a better appreciation of what neighbor love really means when our neighbors are people of another religion.

Over the years, the General Assembly has approved a number of policy and study documents that address the Presbyterian's calling in relation to men and women of other religious traditions. For example, the 211th General Assembly (1999) approved “Presbyterian Principles for Interfaith Dialogue,” and “Building Community Among Strangers.”

These and other documents address the concern of this overture, and lay the foundations of the policy for which it calls. Yet such policies and studies are not well known by many Presbyterians.

The present financial realities also make it necessary to confess that funding for the kind of task force requested in the overture is not readily available.

Therefore, the General Assembly Council urges the 216th General Assembly (2004) to do the following:

1. Disapprove the specific process called for in Item 06-02.
2. Approve the spirit of the overture by
  - a. instructing the Office of Interfaith Relations, together with other appropriate offices of the General Assembly Council, to prepare a guide for congregations that makes known and available the resources already available in regard to religious plurality and Christian discipleship; and
  - b. instructing the Office of the General Assembly and the Office on Interfaith Relations of the Worldwide Ministries Division to bring to the 217th General Assembly (2006) a recommendation on what further study or action might be needed to better equip the church to live in a religiously plural world.

Item 06-03

[The assembly approved Item 06-03. See p. 20.]

The General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) invite the following churches to send ecumenical advisory delegates to the 217th General Assembly (2006):

Overseas Churches: Korean Christian Federation (North Korea), Presbyterian Church of Korea (South Korea), Presbyterian Church in the Republic of Korea (South Korea), Presbyterian Church of the Cameroon, Christian Evangelical Church of Minahasa (GIMM), Tomohon (Indonesia), United Church of Jamaica and Grand Cayman Island, Lesotho Evangelical Church, Apostolic Orthodox Church of Albania, Synod of the Nile of the Evangelical Church of Egypt, Presbyterian Church of Colombia.

North American: African Methodist Episcopal Church, Associate Reformed Presbyterian Church, Orthodox Church in America, United Church of Canada, United Church of Christ.

Rationale

The General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations nominates to each General Assembly churches to be invited to send ecumenical advisory delegates to the subsequent assembly (Standing Rule A.2.f. and E.8.). Ten overseas churches and five churches from within the United States are recommended. Of the overseas churches, we recommend at least one church from each area staffed by the Worldwide Ministries Division (WMD). Of the churches within the United States, we recommend at least one church from the Formula of Agreement, at least two churches from Churches Uniting in Christ, and at least one church in our current conciliar relationships.

Item 06-04

[The assembly approved Item 06-04. See p. 20.]

The General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) urge the congregations and middle governing bodies of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to engage in study and response to the World Council of Churches Decade to Overcome Violence until 2010. This program calls upon the Church to do the following:

- 1. Work together for peace, justice, and reconciliation at all levels—local, regional, and global.
- 2. Embrace creative approaches to peace building that are consonant with the spirit of the gospel.
- 3. Interact and collaborate with local communities, secular movements, and people of other living faiths towards cultivating a culture of peace.
- 4. Walk with people who are systematically oppressed by violence, and to act in solidarity with all struggling for justice, peace, and the integrity of creation.
- 5. Repent together for our complicity in violence, and to engage in theological reflection to overcome the spirit, logic, and practice of violence.

Rationale

In 2004, the United States is the focus of the World Council of Churches Decade to Overcome Violence—Churches Seeking Reconciliation and Peace (DOV). The U.S. focus for the DOV provides a great opportunity for raising awareness about this movement and will encourage Presbyterians to incorporate education and advocacy about the DOV in their programming and planning.

Item 06-05

[The assembly approved Item 06-05. See p. 20.]

The General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) instruct the General Assembly Council to continue its support for ecumenical formation.

Rationale

As part of its ecumenical commitment, the PC(USA) promotes the ecumenical formation through some of the program areas of the General Assembly Council. The majority of this work is done, either through the Worldwide Ministries Division (WMD) Ecumenical and Mission Partnership office or through the Congregational Ministries Division (CMD) Youth and Young Adult Ministries. Among the findings of the National Council of Churches Review Committee are the following:

- Educational programs should be provided for those who will be representatives of the PC(USA) in ecumenical councils and agencies. The younger generation should have opportunity to be more involved in work of the NCCC and CWS and to become aware of, and committed to, the ecumenical vision.
- Funding is required to support opportunities for ecumenical involvement and formation, especially special programs for leaders, congregations, and youth of the PC(USA).
- Even though this concern was raised in the context of the NCCC Review Report, it was also recognized by the Review Committee that it is a concern that applies to PC(USA) ecumenical formation in general.

Item 06-06

[The assembly approved Item 06-06 with amendment. See p. 21.]

The General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) do the following:

1. Approve the report, “Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Understanding of 16th and 17th Century Condemnations of Other Churches in The Book of Confessions” (which can be found following recommendations), and approve the following policy statement:

Specific statements in 16th and 17th century confessions and catechisms in The Book of Confessions contain condemnations or derogatory characterizations of the [Roman] Catholic Church: Chapters XVIII and XXII of the Scots Confession; Questions and Answer 80 of the Heidelberg Catechism; and Chapters II, III, XVII, and XX, of the Second Helvetic Confession. (Chapters XXII, XXV, and XXIX of the Westminster Confession of Faith have been amended to remove anachronous and offensive language. Chapter XXVIII of the French Confession does not have constitutional standing.) While these statements emerged from substantial doctrinal disputes, they reflect 16th and 17th century polemics. Their condemnations and characterizations of the Catholic Church are not the position of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and are not applicable to current relationships between the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and the Catholic Church.

2. Amend the Preface to The Book of Confessions by inserting the policy statement [above] between [paragraph 4 and] paragraph 5 [~~and the concluding quotation from the Book of Order.~~].

3. Instruct the Office of the General Assembly to include footnotes to relevant sections, referring to the policy statement in the Preface in all future editions of The Book of Confessions.

4. Request the Office of the General Assembly and the Office of Theology and Worship to initiate conversations with the World Alliance of Reformed Churches, seeking a WARC statement on the issue. Results of these conversations will be reported to the General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations.

5. Request the Office of the General Assembly and the Office of Theology and Worship to initiate conversations with the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops, seeking a joint Catholic-Presbyterian statement on 16th and 17th century condemnations and characterizations. Results of these conversations will be reported to the General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations.

[6. Direct the General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations to consider proposing an additional paragraph in The Book of Confessions’ Preface concerning condemnatory language in The Book of Confessions towards other world religions similar to the one regarding the relationship between the PC(USA) and the Catholic Church.]

Report

Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Understanding of 16th and 17th Century Condemnations of Other Churches in The Book of Confessions

Prepared by the Office of Theology and Worship

Chapter II of the Form of Government—“The Church and Its Confessions”—sets forth the church’s understanding of the role and function of the confessions in the life of the church.

a. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) states its faith and bears witness to God’s grace in Jesus Christ in the creeds and confessions in The Book of Confessions. In these confessional statements the church declares to its members and to the world who and what it is, what it believes,

what it resolves to do.

b. These statements identify the church as a community of people known by its convictions as well as by its actions. They guide the church in its study and interpretation of the Scriptures; they summarize the essence of Christian tradition; they direct the church in maintaining sound doctrines; they equip the church for its work of proclamation. (Book of Order, G-2.0100)

The church's confessions are not mere historic artifacts. The confessions guide, direct, and equip the whole church. Persons ordained as ministers, elders, and deacons vow to receive and adopt the essential tenets of the Reformed faith as expressed in the confessions, and to be instructed, led, and guided by them. Because the church is serious about its confessional basis, confessional statements that condemn other churches or express derogatory characterizations of other churches are troubling and confusing. How are 21st century Presbyterians to understand 16th and 17th century polemic?

The Confessional Nature of the Church, adopted by the 198th General Assembly (1986) notes that "Most confessions have been intended as polemical defense of true Christian faith . . . against perversion from within as well as attacks from outside the church. They are the church's means of preserving the authenticity and purity of its faith" (Minutes, 1986, Part I, p. 518, paragraph 29.131). In every age, the church has sought to express distinguishing marks of faithful Christian community. This has always entailed saying "Yes" to some things and "No" to others. Genuine confession of faith is always both affirmation of truth and denial of untruth. Sometimes the "No" is explicit, as with the Theological Declaration of Barmen and the Confession of 1967; at other times it is implicit, as with the Nicene Creed and A Brief Statement of Faith.

The church's denials are more than polite reservations; they are essential articulations of the boundaries of Christian faith and life. However, the church's expression of those boundaries should not be overstated, insulting to other churches, or ecumenically provocative. The intensity of Christian controversy in the 16th and 17th centuries, coupled with characteristically hyperbolic modes of expression, produced some confessional language that strike contemporary Christians as exaggerated, offensive, and confrontational.

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and its predecessor churches have dealt with this issue before. The 1647 edition of The Westminster Confession of Faith has been amended at several points in order to remove offensive references to Catholicism. The amendments did not conceal doctrinal disputes, eliminate points of theological disagreement, or mute Reformed affirmations, however.

Amending the confessions to suppress unpleasant realities may not be the best way to honor the integrity of the confessions and the integrity of contemporary witness. The Preface to The Book of Confessions is instructive:

The creeds, confessions and catechisms of The Book of Confessions are both historical and contemporary. Each emerged in a particular time and place in response to a particular situation. Thus, each confessional document should be respected in its historical particularity; none should be altered to conform to current theological, ethical, or linguistic norms. The confessions are not confined to the past, however; they do not simply express what the church was, what it used to believe, and what it once resolved to do. The confessions address the church's current faith and life, declaring contemporary convictions and actions. . . .

The tension between the confessions' historical and contemporary nature is a fruitful tension within the church. The confessions are not honored if they are robbed of historical particularity by imagining that they are timeless expressions of truth. They are best able to instruct, lead, and guide the church when they are given freedom to speak in their own voices. The confessions are not respected if they are robbed of contemporary authority by imagining that they are historical artifacts. They are best able to instruct, lead, and guide the church when they are given freedom to speak now to the church and the world.

How, then, can the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) honor both the historical and contemporary integrity of the confessions at points where the confessions characterize other Christian churches and other religious faiths in ways that are offensive and that do not express present understandings of ecclesial relationships? A survey of problematic sections of the church's confessions indicates both the seriousness and limited scope of the issue.

1. The Scots Confession (1560)

The Scots Confession was written at a turning point in Scottish history. The year 1560 marked the culmination of a long struggle to end Catholic rule and establish Scotland as a Protestant nation. Not surprisingly, the confession's language reflects the passions of the time.

Chapter XVIII

The Notes by Which the True Kirk Shall Be Determined from the False . . .

Since Satan has labored from the beginning to adorn his pestilent synagogue with the title of the Kirk of God, and has incited cruel murderers to persecute, trouble, and molest the true Kirk and its members, as Cain did to Abel, Ishmael to Isaac, Esau to Jacob, and the whole priesthood of the Jews to Christ Jesus himself and his apostles after him. So it is essential that the true Kirk be distinguished from the filthy synagogues by clear and perfect notes lest we, being deceived, receive and embrace, to our own condemnation, the one for the other. . . . [The Book of Confessions, 3.18]

Chapter XXII

The Right Administration of the Sacraments

. . . This is why we abandon the teaching of the Roman Church and withdraw from its sacraments; firstly, because their ministers are not true ministers of Christ Jesus . . . and, secondly, because they have so adulterated both the sacraments with their own additions that no part of Christ's original act remains in its original simplicity. . . . Similarly, if the teacher teaches false doctrine which is hateful to God, even though the sacraments are his own ordinance, they are not rightly used, since wicked men have used them for another end than what God commanded. We affirm that this has been done to the sacraments in the Roman Church, for there the whole action of the Lord Jesus is adulterated in form, purpose, and meaning. . . . [The Book of Confessions, 3.22]

2. The Heidelberg Catechism (1563)

The Heidelberg Catechism—warmly personal and irenic—has been adopted by Reformed churches throughout the world. Question 80 was not part of the original text, but was added at the insistence of Frederick the Elector.

Q. 80. What difference is there between the Lord's Supper and the papal Mass?

A. The Lord's Supper testifies to us that we have complete forgiveness of all our sins through the one sacrifice of Jesus Christ which he himself has accomplished on the cross once for all . . . . But the Mass teaches that the living and the dead do not have forgiveness of sins through the sufferings of Christ unless Christ is again offered for them daily by the priest (and that Christ is bodily under the form of bread and wine and is therefore to be worshipped in them). Therefore the Mass is fundamentally a complete denial of the once for all sacrifice and passion of Jesus Christ (and as such an idolatry to be condemned). [The Book of Confessions, 4.080]

3. The Second Helvetic Confession (1566)

The Second Helvetic Confession was written by Heinrich Bullinger as a personal testament for the church in Zurich, but it was soon adopted by Reformed churches in Switzerland and throughout Europe. While generally moderate in tone and catholic in spirit, it condemns numerous ancient heresies. Jaroslav Pelikan notes that “the confessions of the Reformation, reacting to the repeated charge of their Roman Catholic opponents that they are the recrudescence of ancient heresies, make it a point to condemn such ancient heresies by name . . . .” The confession also expresses disagreement with positions of the Catholic Church, of course, but sometimes doctrinal disputation lapses into broad, derogatory characterizations of the Catholic church as church.

Chapter II

Of Interpreting the Holy Scriptures; and of Fathers, Councils, and Traditions

. . . Nor consequently do we acknowledge as the true or genuine interpretation of the Scriptures what is called the conception of the Roman Church, that is, what the defenders of the Roman Church plainly maintain should be thrust upon all for acceptance. [The Book of Confessions, 5.010]

Chapter III

Of God, His Unity and Trinity

. . . Therefore we condemn the Jews and Mohammedans, and all those who blaspheme that sacred and adorable Trinity. . . . [The Book of Confessions, 5.019]

Chapter XVII

Of the Catholic and Holy Church of God, and of the One Only Head of the Church

. . . The Roman head does indeed preserve his tyranny and the corruption that has been brought into the Church, and meanwhile he hinders, resists, and with all the strength he can muster cuts off the proper reformation of the Church. [The Book of Confessions, 5.132]

Chapter XX

Of Holy Baptism

. . . We condemn the Anabaptists, who deny that newborn infants of the faithful are to be baptized. . . . We condemn also the Anabaptists in the rest of their peculiar doctrines which they hold contrary to the Word of God. We therefore are not Anabaptists and have nothing in common with them. [The Book of Confessions, 5.192]

4. The Westminster Confession Of Faith (1647)

The Westminster Assembly conducted its work in a time of national crisis. It attempted to find a way through intractable religious and political problems. Although the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has amended the Westminster Confession to eliminate objectionable statements, most Reformed churches retain the original wording. Both the 1647 text and the PCUSA amended text are shown.

Chapter XXII
Of Lawful Oaths and Vows

. . . [Popish] monastical vows of perpetual single life, professed poverty, and regular obedience, are so far from being degrees of higher perfection, that they are superstitious and sinful snares, in which no Christian may entangle himself. (PCUSA: removes “Popish”) [The Book of Confessions, 6.126]

Chapter XXV
Of the Church

The purest churches under heaven are subject both to mixture and error: and some have so degenerated as to become no Churches of Christ, but Synagogues of Satan. (PCUSA: The purest churches under heaven are subject both to mixture and error: and some have so degenerated as to become apparently no churches of Christ.) [The Book of Confessions, 6.144]

There is no other Head of the Church, but the Lord Jesus Christ: Nor can the Pope of Rome, in any sense be head thereof: but is, that Antichrist, that Man of sin and Son of Perdition, that exalteth himself, in the Church, against Christ, and all that is called God. (PCUSA: The Lord Jesus Christ is the only head of the Church, and the claim of any man to be the vicar of Christ and the head of the church is unscriptural, without warrant in fact [PCUS version adds “even anti-Christian”], and is a usurpation dishonoring to the Lord Jesus Christ.) [The Book of Confessions, 6.145]

Chapter XXIX
Of the Lord’s Supper

In this sacrifice Christ is not offered up to his Father, nor any real sacrifice made at all for the remission of sins of the quick or dead, but only a commemoration of that one offering up of Himself, by Himself, upon the cross, once for all: and a spiritual oblation of all possible praise unto God, for the same: So that, the Popish sacrifice of the mass (as they call it) is most abominably injurious to Christ’s one, only sacrifice, the sole propitiation for all the sins of the Elect. (PCUSA: . . . but a commemoration of that one offering up of himself, by himself, upon the cross, once for all, and a spiritual oblation of all possible praise unto God for the same: so that the so-called sacrifice of the mass is most contradictory to Christ’s one sacrifice, the only propitiation for all the sins of the elect.) [The Book of Confessions, 6.162]

5. The French Confession (1559)

The French Confession, “fashioned in common accord by the churches dispersed in France,” expresses John Calvin’s mature theological views. Although the French Confession is not included in The Book of Confessions, both the 209th General Assembly (1997) and the 215th General Assembly (2003) have commended it to the church for study, with the possibility that it may be recommended for inclusion at a future date.

XXVIII

In this conviction we declare that where the word of God is not received and its authority is not acknowledged, and where there is no use of the sacraments, we can conclude that there is no church, properly speaking. Thus we condemn the assemblies of the papacy where the pure truth of God is banished, where the sacraments are corrupted, bastardized, falsified, or annihilated altogether, and where idolatries and superstitions hold sway. We hold that all who engage in these acts by taking communion there separate and cut themselves off from the body of Jesus Christ. Yet because some small trace of the church continues in the papacy, and because the substance of baptism remains there (for the efficacy of baptism does not depend on the one who administers the sacrament), we confess that those who have been baptized have no need of a second baptism. However, because of corruptions, people cannot present children in those assemblies without polluting themselves.

* * * * *

Some contemporary churches recognize that 16th and 17th century condemnations and characterizations do not reflect current ecclesial understanding, and may hinder the deepening of relationships among the churches. The issue has been dealt with in a variety of ways.

- The Formula of Agreement, establishing full communion among the Evangelical Lutheran Church of America (ELCA), Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), Reformed Church in America (RCA), and United Churches of Christ (UCC) stipulates that the four churches “withdraw any historic condemnation by one side or the other as inappropriate for the life and faith of our churches today.”

- The Joint Declaration on the Doctrine of Justification, agreed to by the Lutheran World Federation and the Roman Catholic Church, states that “. . . the doctrinal condemnations of the sixteenth century, insofar as they relate to the doctrine of justification, appear in a new light: The teaching of the Lutheran churches presented in this Declaration does not fall under the condemnations of the Council of Trent. The condemnations in the Lutheran Confessions do not apply to the teaching of the Roman Catholic Church presented in this Declaration. Nothing is thereby taken away from the seriousness of the condemnations related to the doctrine of justification. Some were not simply pointless. They remain for us ‘salutary warnings’ to which we must attend in our teaching and practice.”

- The Church of Scotland declared in 1986 that “This Church no longer affirms the following contents of the Westminster Confession of Faith [specific wording cited in chs. 22.7; 24.3; 25.6; 29.2] . . . This Church therefore disassociates itself from the above statements and does not require its office bearers to believe them.”
- The Christian Reformed Church, in response to a 1998 overture asking that Q&A 80 be removed from the Heidelberg Catechism, has been in dialogue with the Catholic Church since 1998 “to clarify the official doctrine of that church concerning the mass.” The 2002 Synod received a report concerning the dialogue, and requested its Interchurch Relations Committee “to advise a future synod about any further action that may be needed regarding Q. and A. 80 of the Heidelberg Catechism.”

These cases are instructive. Each is helpful, but they are not adequate precedents for the issue before the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

Four of the 16th and 17th century documents in The Book of Confessions contain condemnations and derogatory characterizations of the Catholic Church. Removal of the offending statements would not change history. Moreover, removal of offending statements might deprive the church of salutary warnings about the danger of excessive zeal and disproportionate representations of opponents. Yet the offending statements cannot stand alone. They require commentary that adequately articulates the current understanding and policy of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is not called to agree with every statement in The Book of Confessions, but rather to be directed, guided, and equipped by the confessions. The church is not called to comment directly on every statement in The Book of Confessions with which it may differ. The statements in question are directed against others, however, and so the church is called to articulate its current understanding.

Condemnations and derogatory characterizations of the Catholic Church grew from momentous doctrinal disputes, especially in the areas of ecclesiology and the sacraments. Real differences in doctrine remain. The proposed policy statement does not presume to resolve doctrinal differences. These differences are being explored, and agreement sought, in the ongoing series of national and international Reformed-Catholic dialogues. The issue before the church now is far narrower in scope, dealing only with the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)’s current understanding of 16th and 17th century condemnations and characterizations of the Catholic Church and their applicability to the contemporary Catholic Church.

Rationale

The issue of 16th and 17th century condemnations has been before the General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations (GACER) since the two conversations between a delegation from the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and the Vatican’s Council for Promoting Christian Unity. At its February 2003 meeting, GACER voted to instruct the office of Theology and Worship to draft a proposed statement expressing PC(USA)’s understanding of specific sections in The Book of Confessions that express pejorative views of the beliefs and practices of other Christian churches and traditions; and that, if approved, will be used as the basis of consultations with WARC Department of Theology, the Ecumenical Office of the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops, or both.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 06-06

Advice on Item 06-06—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 216th General Assembly (2004) with the following alternatives to the recommendations for amending the Preface to The Book of Confessions and adding footnotes related to historic condemnations of the Roman Catholic Church.

There can be little doubt that a vast majority of the church finds the historic condemnations of the Roman Catholic Church to be offensive, as the proponents allege. However, the proponents rightly state that the confessions are not “mere historical artifacts” but have a living currency in the life of the church. To alter the text of such historic statements does indeed violate the integrity of the experience of our forbearers. To retain language that does not express our current understandings and even provides potential for offense to sisters and brothers in the faith, on the other hand, may violate the integrity of our present witness. This tension, inherent in maintaining a confessional tradition, may be one with which we must live. The proponents believe that leaving ancient texts unaltered and noting current belief and practice in extra-constitutional notation is the best solution for the time being.

The General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations correctly understands that certain material adjacent to a constitutional document (such as prefaces, footnotes, and titles) are not themselves of constitutional authority and are not binding on the church as reflections of our belief and practice. Therefore, in the strictest sense, it is not within the mandate of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution to respond to the proposal.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution observes that amending the Preface may not achieve the intent of the proponents. To seek significant alteration in what the church believes about its witness and relationships with other believers without giving those assertions full constitutional authority may aggravate rather than ease the difficulty. If it is the hope of the proponents that when officers vow to “receive,” “adopt,” “be instructed,” “led,” and “guided by the Confessions” the reversal of these ancient condemnations are included, then the full intent of the request may only be fulfilled by leading the church through the complete process of Confessional amendment (G-18-02011).

There are alternatives:

The Book of Confessions, The Form of Government, and the Directory for Worship each have a “Preface” composed of material that is not considered to be of constitutional authority, but instructive in nature. The Rules of Discipline has no Preface but includes, as its Chapter I, a “Preamble” that spells out fundamental material related to discipline, material that is often cited in decisions with constitutional authority. Should the assembly desire to submit this proposal to the process of full confessional amendment, it may be wise to cast that amendment as the attachment of a Preamble with unquestioned authority for the church.

The provision of G-13.0103p “to warn or bear witness against error in doctrine or immorality in practice in our outside the church” could be used to make a declaratory statement to the church that it is error to hold the confessional condemnations of others in any way apart from their historic context. Any of these actions or a combination may achieve the intent of the recommendation.

Item 06-07

[The assembly approved Item 06-07. See p. 21.]

Report on the Review of the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A.

The General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) do the following:

1. Affirm its intent that the PC(USA) shall seek to sustain the basic level of its support to the work of the National Council of Churches of Christ (NCCC) and Church World Service (CWS), both in finances and human resources, while urging other member communions to seek every possible way of increasing their support.

2. Commend the Board of Directors of Church World Service for developing and evaluating its Strategic Plan and for substantially involving member communions in this planning process and in the follow-up Listening Dialogue Sessions.

3. Commend the steps the National Council of Churches and Church World Service have taken to work in partnership with each other and with member communions on issues and programs related to communions; and request PC(USA) participants in NCCC and CWS governance to give attention to further steps that support the development of goals and priorities and accountability to these goals in the procurement and use of funds from all sources.

4. Request that, internationally, Church World Service and the National Council of Churches work closely together and in partnership with churches and councils of churches in various regions of the world; and requests that PC(USA) representatives in NCCC and CWS work to ensure the development of structures that allow such cooperative relations.

5. Request the General Assembly Council to support the programs and activities of the National Council of Churches and Church World Service through cognate funding and programmatic participation, in recognition of the place our own theology and priorities give to ecumenical life.

6. Request the General Assembly Council to provide more information to congregations about the value and work of the National Council of Churches and Church World Service through appropriate news and communication services and through programmatic offices and initiatives, with special emphasis upon ways that local churches may participate.

7. Express its support for the possibility of a broader ecumenical table while maintaining its involvement in the National Council of Churches and Church World Service.

8. Express appreciation for the open and responsive way that the senior staff of the National Council of Churches and Church World Service cooperated with the PC(USA) review of its work, giving of their time for meetings and providing full information in a timely and collegial fashion.

9. Affirm, with gratitude to God, the achievements and renewal of the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A. and Church World Service and express its appreciation to the member churches for their participation in this instrument of the ecumenical movement, as we seek to find the unity declared by our Lord Jesus Christ.

10. Request the Stated Clerk to communicate the above report and recommendations to the National Council of Churches, Church World Service, and their member communions.

Rationale

A. The Assigned Task and Introduction

The 212th General Assembly (2000) requested the General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations (GACER) “to design a process for review of councils and other ecumenical alliances to which the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) belongs” (Minutes, 2000, Part I, p. 108). The 214th General Assembly (2002) and the 215th General Assembly (2003) received reports on the World Alliance of Reformed Churches and the World Council of Churches respectively. This review of the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A. (NCCC) is presented to the 216th General Assembly (2004). The team that conducted and edited this review included: Edward Chan, Oscar McCloud, Donald Shriver, Peggy Shriver, Kenneth Thomas, Kristine Thompson, Wayne Wilson, and Belle Miller-McMaster.

The purpose of this report is twofold. It is the review committee’s intention not only to fulfill the requirements established by the General Assembly but also to provide a resource that will educate our church on the goals of the NCCC and the nature of the church’s commitment to the NCCC. It is important to remind our church that the NCCC is not just a religious organization but also a council of which we as the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) are members.

B. A Historical Summary of Presbyterian Church Commitment to the National Council of Churches in Christ in the U.S.A.

Founded in 1950 as a successor to the Federal Council of Churches, the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A. (NCCC) was born in hope and faith in the aftermath of World War II. It brought together many Christian denominations and more than a dozen interdenominational agencies to form a new ecumenical structure. Presbyterians have been at the heart of this endeavor to “covenant with one another to maintain ever more fully the unity of the Church” (NCCC Preamble). These thirty-six communions, which presently include mainline Protestant, Episcopal, Orthodox, historic African American, and peace churches, “responding to the gospel revealed in the Scriptures, confess together Jesus Christ, the incarnate Word of God, as Savior and Lord.”

The Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is consistent with the Preamble of the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A. as it affirms that “the Church universal consists of all persons in every nation, together with their children, who profess faith in Jesus Christ as Lord and Savior and commit themselves to live in a fellowship under his rule” (Book of Order, G-4.0101) The Book of Order also states “the unity of the Church is a gift of its Lord and finds expression in its faithfulness to the mission to which Christ calls it. The Church is a fellowship of believers which seeks the enlargement of the circle of faith to include all people and is never content to enjoy the benefits of Christian community for itself alone” (G-4.0201). Such language links the evangelical witness of the church to the struggle of all members of the body of Christ to exhibit their “visible oneness” as promised in Jesus’ own great prayer of consecration in John 17:17–23. The Book of Order is consistent on this point:

Visible oneness, by which diversity of persons, gifts, and understandings is brought together, is an important sign of the unity of God’s people. It is also a means by which that unity is achieved. Further, while divisions into different denominations do not destroy this unity, they do obscure it for both the Church and the world. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), affirming its historical continuity with the whole Church of Jesus Christ, is committed to the reduction of that obscurity and is willing to seek and to maintain communion and community with all other branches of the one, Catholic Church. (G-4.0203, Cf. G-15.0000)

Presbyterians, in short, do not look upon ecumenical involvement and participation as optional faithful Christian behavior. As United Methodist John McCullough, executive director of Church World Service, observes of Presbyterians, “Ecumenism is in the soul of this church!”

There are many ways that Presbyterians carry out some aspects of this commitment in groups and organizations that gather individual Christians or agencies in a common endeavor. Often these agencies make their witness by concentrating on service to particular vital human needs worldwide, for example, disaster relief, housing for the poor, and protection of religious liberty. The National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A., however, brings churches into regular fellowship, theological dialogue, and joint social and programmatic action. This is a uniquely precious and spiritually grounded church-to-church official relationship. It welcomes all churches that meet the basic requirement of confessing Jesus Christ, the incarnate Word of God, as Savior and Lord into a mutual search for and response to the will of God in today’s world. The three major streams of activity characterize the central ministry of the NCCC in faith, justice, and education: (1) Faith and Order, (2) Life and Witness, and (3) Christian Education. Through Church World Service, the churches that are members of the NCCC together reach out in compassion to the needy of the world and advocate policies that have their concerns in mind. Programs of Church World Service (CWS) fall into five basic categories: Immigration and Refugee Aid, Emergency Response and Disaster Relief, Education and Advocacy, Mission Relationships and Witness, and Economic and Social Development.

Through fifty-three years of struggle to be faithful churches in times of plenty and times of crisis, the NCCC has responded to challenges of war and nuclear threat, provided the best current scholarship through preparation of the Revised and New Revised Standard Versions of the Bible (RSV and NRSV), engaged in efforts to ameliorate poverty and racism, advocated for human rights, linked public policy advocacy to the needs and concerns of church councils around the world, prepared the ongoing Uniform Lesson Series for church schools, held conferences and done research on issues as diverse as evangelism, radio/TV communications, gender and family issues. When asked why he accepted the challenging office of NCCC General Secretary, Robert Edgar answered, in addition to his confession of faith, “Because the council has been a voice for justice, because it has been courageous, and because it is necessary.”

A courageous voice is likely also to be a controversial one. The NCCC has weathered some serious controversies around unpopular positions, including some, like urging the recognition of the Peoples Republic China, that were simply ahead of their time. Over the past year, for example, the NCCC rigorously questioned a preemptive strike in Iraq and urged United Nations involvement in peaceful initiatives for change. Church partners around the world turn to the U.S. council to respond to international issues that are vital to these partners' life as churches. Advocating on their behalf may be in tension with policies that serve only our national interests, as both the NCCC and CWS have had to confront. Presbyterian participation in the world of the NCCC has been so strong and consistent that, as one elected official of our church has remarked, a critique of National Council social witness policy is also a critique of PC (USA) social witness policy!

Presbyterians come by their consistent ecumenical commitments as adherents of a long Reformed tradition embodied in John Calvin's teachings and his famous remark that he could "cross several seas" if it would serve to heal the divisions of the Christian church. It is not surprising then that both before and after the Presbyterian reunion in 1983, our northern and southern streams have been leaders in the ecumenical movement both having been part of the NCCC from its beginnings. Presbyterians have contributed presidents to the National Council, such as Eugene Carson Blake, Patricia McClurg, Syngman Rhee, and William P. Thompson; a general secretary, Clair Randall; numerous staff such as Jorge Lara-Braud, James Gunn, Karen Hessel, Eileen Lindner, Jovelino Ramos, Margaret Shafer, Peggy Shriver, Jay T. Rock, and Franklin J. Woo as well as key leaders like James Andrews, Vernon Broyles, Clifton Kirkpatrick, Belle Miller McMaster, Dan Rift, George Telford, and Frederick Wilson on oversight boards and committees. Indeed, participation by Presbyterians in this ecumenical reality is so profound that one can hardly imagine the NCCC functioning with the same effectiveness and structural integrity without it.

The NCCC leadership has recently been influential in helping fashion a new, more broadly ecumenical body, Christian Churches Together (CCT), which would bring together Roman Catholics, mainline Protestants, Orthodox, Evangelicals, and Pentecostal. Its leaders hope to deepen mutual understanding of the different theological stances and polities of their respective bodies, but it does not anticipate united public action and advocacy in the foreseeable future. This "broadened table" is welcome and a hopeful sign; it does not replace the distinctive seasoned spiritual voice, international church ties, advocacy and social action of the National Council of Churches in the U.S.A. Many denominations that are not members of the NCCC participate and contribute financially in many ministry areas and programs of the NCCC, such as Faith and Order Commission. Although there has been much collaboration between some NCCC commissions and programs and the Roman Catholic Church, Pentecostals, and some largely evangelical churches, no step that would lead to full membership in the council has been successful. It is with considerable appreciation, therefore, that Billy Graham's openness to ecumenical dialogue, beginning in 1991, was received. He came to the council to express solidarity with fellow Christians who call Jesus Lord and Savior and who work for justice and peace with concern for the needs of the poor. He thanked the secretary for evangelism of the National Council of Churches in the U.S.A. "for the integrity of my own ministry," and spoke of his "conversion to ecumenism." Echoing the Roman Catholic decree on Ecumenism, Graham said,

There can be no ecumenism worthy of the name without an interior conversion. The faithful should remember that they promote union among Christians better, and indeed they live it better, when they try to lead lives according to the Gospel. The closer their union with God, with the Word and the Spirit, the more closely and easily they will be able to grow in mutual love. This change of heart and holiness of life, along with public and private prayer for Christian unity and for all Christians, should be regarded as the soul of the whole ecumenical movement.

Such testimony leads unity-minded Christians to hope, dream, and work toward the wholeness of Christ's body, even while encountering various kinds of resistance and taking some false steps along the way. Like the denominations that comprise the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A., the NCCC has undergone financial hardships and winnowing of staff in recent years. Presbyterians can be especially grateful, therefore, for those who have honored the Holy Spirit as the "bond of unity," for the vision sketched by the Book of Order, for the ecumenical tradition taught by John Calvin, for the Christian leaders from many richly varied traditions who eagerly learn from one another, and for those who willingly take up the challenge of shared faithfulness in today's complex world environment.

C. Nature and Structure of the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A.

Throughout the years since its founding in 1950, the NCCC has waxed and waned along with the national structures of its member communions. Staffing and program depend largely upon the staffing strength, resources, and interests of the denominations that participate in the council. The NCCC staff that once numbered in the hundreds, at the present time has been reduced to approximately forty.

1. A Search for Amicable Autonomy

Church World Service (CWS), whose resources include federal funds for some of its programs as well as contributions from churches and individuals, has always been significantly larger in staff and budget than its conciliar host. Over the past few years, a greater autonomy has been negotiated for CWS with the financial and administrative separation of CWS from the rest of the NCCC's ecumenical programming activity. Prior to the separation, while CWS had its own corporate identity with its own executive director and board, the NCCC had ultimate control over CWS, including its finances and its director. Separation of CWS from NCCC was seen as necessary to enable clearer bookkeeping and tighter control over the moneys designated for the advocacy, relief, and development work of CWS, as distinct from NCCC programming funds. As of the end of 2000, control over CWS finances rests with a CWS board composed of representatives of member churches, to whom the CWS executive director is responsible. The CWS board remains elected by, and thus accountable to, the General Assembly of the National Council of Churches of Christ in the USA, but CWS is otherwise separate from the NCCC's other ecumenical programming activity. An exchange of board members between entities provides continuity and coordination, and the chair of the CWS board is a vice president of the NCCC.

Both the NCCC and CWS collaborate with councils of churches worldwide. Clarity about which body, the NCCC or CWS, is primary in certain relations with ecumenical partners globally needs further work. A Memorandum of Understanding on International Affairs is being developed jointly to refine that part of an important continuing collaboration between CWS and the NCCC. A very recent example of ongoing collaboration is the seven-member delegation from the NCCC and CWS to North Korea, which brought significant food aid (132,000 pounds of wheat flour) and met in worship and encouraging fellowship with the small but steadfast Christian congregations and their Christian Federation in Pyongyang, North Korea. In search of peace and just relationship they also visited the National Council of Churches in Korea, government leaders in North and South Korea, and U.S. State Department officials.

2. Programs and Priorities

The NCCC amended its constitution and bylaws in 2002 to make official its new relationship with CWS and to reconstitute five commissions in the following five program areas:

- Communication
- Faith and Order
- Interfaith Relations
- Education
- Leadership Ministries
- Justice and Advocacy.

Presbyterians have long provided seconded staff to the NCCC in interfaith relations that enabled the NCCC to work in this area. Now that the NCCC has directly hired a staff and has revitalized the Commission for Interfaith Relations, these actions are extremely important in today's multi-religious world. Each commission may establish program ministries under its oversight. Some of these program areas are long-standing (Uniform Lesson Series, NRSV, etc.) while other respond to the times or adjust to changing technologies (computer databases, e.g. the Yearbook of American and Canadian Churches). Annually the General Assembly, composed of denominational (communion) delegations, meets as the primary legislative body. In addition to worshiping and fellowshiping together, it sets policy, adopts public statements and recommendations, elects officers and the general secretary, receives reports, and conducts a program review. It also witnesses to and assists the ecumenical sharing and community life of its member communions.

In addition to, but also infusing, the program areas, the NCCC sets key priority concerns. In the quadrennium concluded at the end of 2003, it has focused upon expanding the Christian ecumenical table, mobilizing to overcome poverty, and peace and justice issues. Through the “expanded table” initiative, the Christian Churches Together has taken on a life of its own. Mobilization on poverty concerns has been gathering slowly but now has new staff leadership. The NCCC, through its energetic leadership, was at the forefront of those raising issues of warning about the Iraq war, both before and since its inception. A remarkable conciliar effort spurred worship-led rallies in Washington and also took various delegations to visit personally with the Vatican and with top government leaders in England (Prime Minister Tony Blair), Germany (Chancellor Gerhard Schroeder), Russia (President Vladimir Putin), and France (President Chirac administration).

Although the NCCC, like its member churches, has endured severe cutbacks in staff and financial resources, it is in stable condition and has stabilized its finances so that a precariously balanced budget now includes a reserve of about $10 million. Through internal and external evaluative work, in which Presbyterians played a leading role, the council is striving to express its vision in a resurgence of responsible communion and staff leadership. It means to be, as the constitution says, the place where a community of Christian communions “makes visible their unity given in Christ, and lives responsibly in witness and service.”

Our Presbyterian church, enabled by the National Council of Churches of Christ and Church World Service, speaks to power in various parts of our endangered planet with added authority, serves needy and suffering peoples in partnership with others through providing material comfort, spiritual nurture, and political advocacy, help sustains Christian brothers and sisters near and far, and witnesses to our unity in Christ. Our ecumenical vision statement says it well: Presbyterians “in gratitude for God’s grace and mercy commit ourselves to faithful use of God’s gifts in search for the fuller expression of the visible unity to which we are called.”

D. Financial Situation and Organizational Changes

In 1999, the NCCC found itself in a severe financial crisis. Years of consecutive budget deficits led to the exhaustion of its reserve funds. The NCCC appealed to member churches for an emergency recapitalization fund. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) contributed $500,000 towards this effort, conditioned on the NCCC retiring its debts and balancing its subsequent budgets. The recovery process of the NCCC occupied the energy of staff and board members for the next several years. A new general secretary took office in 2000, and a new associate general secretary for Administration and Finance was charged with reining in expenses. Staffing was severely cut. Moneys were also raised from foundation grants and individual contributions in addition to the contributions that had come from the member churches. A significant structural change that occurred during this time was the financial and administrative separation of CWS from the rest of the NCCC’s ecumenical programming activity.

E. National Council of Churches of Christ

The outlook for the future is much brighter. Since the 2002–2003 budget year, the NCCC has balanced its budget without tapping into its long-term reserves. The NCCC’s long-term reserves have been rebuilt and now stand at about $10 million, although most of that came from a single anonymous gift to the NCCC. New policies prevent the tapping of reserves without action of the board of directors. The NCCC deserves much credit for this turnaround, as does the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) for its large role in the process, through the energy and time of its staff as well as elected board members. The NCCC is now on a much more secure financial footing compared to years past, but continued vigilance is required. The NCCC’s financial statements are independently audited, and have been found to be in order.

The NCCC budget for 2003–2004 is approximately $5.8 million. As a member of the body, the Presbyterian Church (USA) supports the life of the council through its giving. The primary form is the Ecumenical Commitment Fund (ECF), which is composed of unrestricted moneys contributed by the member communions to support the maintenance of the council as a whole. In 2002–2003, the PC (USA) contribution was $421,000. Of the thirty-six member communions, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is the second largest contributor to the NCCC, after the United Methodist Church. Together these two denominations provide more than two-thirds of the Ecumenical Commitment Fund (ECF). Other member communions make contributions ranging from more than a hundred thousand dollars, down to nothing at all.

The member communions of the NCCC vary in size and wealth. Many of the member communions of the NCCC are very small in terms of membership, and more importantly, are not structured with a national body, which has programming emphases, staff, or budget. In addition, denominations in this country have historically varied in the representation of differing socioeconomic classes among their members. Simple dollar-per-member comparisons among the member communions are thus not appropriate. Still, disproportionate giving levels raise serious questions about whether the larger denominations exert undue influence in the council, while smaller denominations find themselves marginalized. It is the goal of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and the NCCC that no one denomination's funding exceed 25 percent of the ECF.

In addition to the Ecumenical Commitment Fund, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) gives designated grants to support specific programming activities of the NCCC. Known as cognate funds, these funds are used for projects in which our programming entities are working closely with the NCCC. In 2002–2003, the PC (USA) supported some fifteen different NCCC program areas with cognate funding totaling $125,000. The bulk of these moneys have gone to “Micah 6,” an NCCC initiative for getting local congregations involved in economic justice and hunger ministries in their communities. Other areas where cognate funds have gone include education programs such as the development of the Uniform Lessons Series curriculum, and support for Faith and Order and Interfaith Relations programming. Cognate funding as a whole has suffered in recent years with budget cuts both within our denomination and within the NCCC. When a program area is cut in either body, an avenue of cooperation and cooperative funding is also lost. Interestingly, some denominations that do not contribute to ECF, do give to cognate funding.

Denominational giving, both ECF and cognate, account for only about 30 percent of the NCCC revenues. In recent years, an increasing amount of income has come from foundation grants and individual and other contributions. The development of alternative sources of funding has helped stabilize the finances of the NCCC and is a testament to the NCCC's fundraising efforts. However, as foundation support increases as a percentage of revenue it is vitally important for goals and priorities to be set by the NCCC board and for accountability to these directions to be the focus of the development and use of all funds.

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) cannot be characterized simply as a donor to the National Council of Churches of Christ. It is a member of the council. Our core contribution to the NCCC demonstrates the seriousness with which we take our membership and is an expression of our quest for Christian unity. As one of the wealthiest denominations in the council, and indeed, the country, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) can be proud of its leadership in supporting the NCCC.

F. Church World Service

The Church World Service budget for 2003–2004 is approximately $65 million of which more than 80 percent goes towards program expenses. The budget for the 2002–2003 was slightly reduced in order to match revenue; CWS ended that year and earlier years without deficit. The budget for 2003–2004 is projected to be balanced. A current focus of CWS is to increase its cash reserves. The CWS's financial statements have been independently audited and found to be in order.

In 1999, CWS concluded a period of study and planning by its board and staff with the adoption by the board of a Strategic Plan, which revised the structure of CWS and set goals and objectives for all the programs for the coming quadrennium. Then the board entered into Listening Dialogue Sessions with the member churches of CWS to share information about the Strategic Plan and the new structure and future program plans. Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) representatives on the CWS board, PC(USA) staff, and officers and staff of CWS met for a day to discuss common concerns and to hear from each other. In 2003, the CWS board reviewed and evaluated the progress in implementing the Strategic Plan, identified areas needing further work, and set goals for the next quadrennium. The program committees will next develop objectives to recommend to the board.

Church World Service is supported by a variety of sources. Funding from member communions is the third largest source of CWS revenue, combining to account for fewer than 15 percent of the CWS budget. In 2002, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) contributed more than $2.2 million to CWS. This funding comes primarily from One Great Hour of Sharing, Disaster Relief, and Hunger funds, and is for the most part designated towards various programs and projects. The PC (USA) is the largest denominational contributor to CWS, with the United Church of Christ and the Disciples of Christ as second and third respectively. (It should be noted that some of the other member communions, while contributing substantially to CWS, also channel some of their relief efforts through structures such as the United Methodist Committee on Relief, or Lutheran World Relief. Presbyterians, by contrast, have always been committed to respond to disasters and support relief and development as much as possible in an ecumenical way.) In addition to moneys given at the national level by the member communions, individual congregations of the various denominations, make contributions to CWS. In 2002, individual congregations of the PC(USA) directly contributed a total of $1.3 million to CWS.

The second largest source of CWS revenue is perhaps the one most familiar to Presbyterians, the CROP Walks. This source represents about 20 percent of the budget. Income from CROP Walks was down approximately $1 million in 2002–2003, with terrorism fears cited as a reason; so that at least a few walks cancelled out of concerns about being a visible target.

By far the largest portion of CWS funding comes from federal and state government grants for such programs as refugee relief and economic development. This amount has been increasing over the past few years and now accounts for about a third of the budget. The CWS also receives contributions from individuals and foundations.

While money received from sources beyond the member communions and their congregations enables CWS to do far more than it would be able to do otherwise, it is vitally important for the goals and priorities set by the CWS board to govern the procurement and use of all funds so that the priorities rather than sources of funding set the direction of the ministry. .

Just as it does with the NCCC's faith, justice, and education programs, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) supports CWS not simply as a donor, but as a member. There are a multitude of relief and development agencies that do good and important work around the world. Church World Service is distinctive among these agencies however, in not being merely a ministry of Christians, but rather a ministry of the churches in partnership with one another. Presbyterians have supported this ministry generously, not just at the national level but also from the congregational and individual level and should be commended.

G. Findings Within and Beyond the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)

The Presbyterian Panel in 1996 showed that the majority of all its categories of respondents—Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) members, elders, and pastors—supported the participation of the PC(USA) in the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A. Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) sources continue to affirm the importance of our church's membership and participation in the NCCC as an expression of the PC(USA)'s theological commitment to the visible expression of the oneness of the body of Christ and its intention to work in ecumenical partnership.

Both representatives of the PC(USA) and of other member churches of the NCCC recognize the valuable roles of the NCCC as an instrument for churches to relate to one another in discussions of theology and issues of mutual concern, as an umbrella organization to express their concerns to society at large about issues of peace and justice, and as a way to work together worldwide in witness and service. The NCCC/CWS enables the churches to have greater visibility than the denominations speaking and acting individually.

In particular, the functions of the NCCC highlighted as significant were:

- Bible translation (the Revised Standard Version and New Revised Standard Version),
- Publications (e.g., “The Yearbook of American and Canadian Churches”),
- Christian education ministries (e.g., the Uniform Lesson Series),
- The worldwide ministry of CWS in relief, refugee, and development work,

- Faith and Order studies (e.g., the current “Authority of the Church in the World” and “Christian Mission in Multi-religious Society” studies),
- Public policy advocacy (e.g., on peace, poverty, and justice issues),
- Study materials (e.g., “Mind the Children” and environmental studies),
- Research (e.g., the current bio-technology study, environment),
- Interfaith relations (e.g., the Interfaith Policy Statement and the “Living Faithfully Together” seminars held cooperatively with regional and state councils of churches),
- Support of local and regional ecumenism.

Many expressed the opinion that, if the NCCC did not exist, another similar organization would need to be established to provide these services. Representatives of other member churches of the NCCC expressed their appreciation for the leadership and financial support provided to the NCCC by the PC(USA).

H. Issues

The main issues considered by the NCCC Review Committee can be presented comprehensively in a question and answer format.

1. Does the PC(USA) disproportionately fund the NCCC?

- Our level of involvement in the NCCC is based on our self-understanding as a member of Christ’s church universal and our commitment to work together with other communions.
- We should be proud of the PC(USA)’s contributions to the NCCC and maintain our funding commitment.
- We recognize the excellent work being done by the current NCCC general secretary and leadership to achieve a balanced budget and growing NCCC reserves and by the CWS executive director and leadership to continue with balanced budgets and to increase CWS reserves.
- All member communions need to contribute to the NCCC, as they are able. The leadership of the PC(USA) can help by taking a direct role in urging other member communions to increase their giving.

2. Are the priorities of the PC(USA) and other member communions reflected through the NCCC?

- The NCCC administration often asks the churches to support its agenda rather than assisting the churches in cooperative agenda setting through joint decision-making by their representatives.
- Sometimes the agenda of the PC(USA) will not be the priority of the NCCC, but we can expect that—as part of the learning that comes through the experience of ecumenical involvement—we will be called upon to share with and learn from other member communions.
- There are examples of joint planning done by the member communions in setting the agenda of the NCCC, and the member communions participated in developing the Strategic Plan of CWS.
- The new NCCC board, which includes PC(USA) representatives, should take strong leadership that would allow it to set the agenda and direct the priority setting of the NCCC. Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) representatives can help encourage full and active participation and regular attendance of all elected and designated persons from every member communion.

• More denominational involvement in the various commissions of the NCCC is needed. The organization of the NCCC is in transition, and this is a time for the member communions to take an active role in its development.

3. Does non-church funding received by the NCCC and CWS unduly impact the agenda of the organization?

- There are some examples of influence on the agenda of the NCCC by its partnerships with foundations and other organizations that have their own agendas.
- The NCCC has begun to address this issue and recognizes the potential for conflict with the interests of the member communions.
- The CWS board has voted not to have non-member participation on the board in order that the representatives of the member communions set its agenda.
- The CWS has struggled with the issue of accepting government money for its programs and has refused to take such money when it would compromise the stand of the NCCC in relation to religious and justice issues.
- The PC(USA) representatives can encourage development of clear policies that ensure accountability to the member churches for the use of funds from non-church sources.

4. Is CWS part of the NCCC?

- Both the NCCC and CWS have their own boards, elected by and accountable to the General Assembly of the NCCC, with some members serving on both boards. The structures of both CWS and NCCC should be representative of the member churches in order to enable their programs to reflect the priorities of the member churches.
- The relationship between the NCCC and CWS is improving and there are examples of their working together, although they basically continue to work independent of one another.
- The elimination of international area desks by CWS has changed the way the NCCC deals with international issues and the way it relates to regional councils of churches in other parts of the world. CWS and NCCC are working on ways to mitigate the detrimental effects of that elimination.
- A memorandum of understanding between CWS and the NCCC is being developed in relation to international relations. A new NCCC staff person will work in the area of international affairs, including the relationship between the NCCC and CWS.

5. How are the NCCC and CWS different from other interdenominational or nondenominational organizations?

- The NCCC and CWS are ecclesial in nature, with policies and programs determined by representatives of their member communions rather than by individuals who are members of different churches but not chosen by those churches.

6. What is the renewed focus of the NCCC and CWS at this time?

- There is a general renewed focus on NCCC programs to promote peace and alleviate poverty. Additionally, each of the different NCCC commissions will determine priorities in its own program area. Faith and Order, the search for Christian unity, education, and interfaith relations continue to be an integral part of the work of the council.
- The CWS board approved a strategic plan in 1999 and, later, reviewed its progress and revised it in 2003. The plan's focus is on work with churches and other partners in various regions of the world to promote peace and justice and to eradicate poverty and hunger.
- The NCCC is undertaking a new emphasis on interfaith relations. After many years of interfaith staff being seconded by churches—most particularly, the PC(USA)—the newly created position of associate general secretary for Interfaith Relations is now being funded by the NCCC itself.

7. How can we in the PC(USA) better communicate the importance of the NCCC and CWS and other ecumenical work to people in the pews?

- The particular churches' knowledge of the importance and activities of the NCCC and CWS is limited, and this affects the support given to them.
- The PC(USA) news services and offices are doing some communication and ecumenical education.

- There need to be more opportunities for leaders at various levels of the PC(USA) to be involved in ecumenical programs.
  - Educational programs should be provided for those who will be representatives of the PC(USA) in ecumenical councils and agencies.
  - The younger generation should have opportunity to be more involved in work of the NCCC and CWS and to become aware of—and committed to—the ecumenical vision.
  - Funding is required to support opportunities for ecumenical involvement and formation—especially special programs for leaders, congregations, and youth of the PC(USA).
8. Will the Christian Churches Together initiative replace the NCCC?
- The NCCC has been a catalyst in an initiative called Christian Churches Together (CCT). One of the main goals of CCT is to bring together the churches in the NCCC with evangelical and Pentecostal churches and the Roman Catholic Church. Those involved in this process recognize that this will have a more limited role than the NCCC and that it will therefore not be a replacement for it.
  - The PC(USA) offers hope and prayer for the future of the CCT, but our future involvement in CCT should not diminish our commitment to traditional ecumenical organizations.
9. How do the NCCC and CWS benefit the PC(USA)?
- The NCCC and CWS provide an ecumenical approach to interfaith relations, peace initiatives, racial justice, and mission worldwide through refugee relief and economic and social development, as well as the opportunity to interact with people from other communions who bring a diversity of experiences and viewpoints.
  - Participation in the NCCC provides Presbyterians with the opportunity to live out their ecumenical calling, and deepens their understanding of the nature and mission of the Church.
  - The PC(USA) programs can benefit from the learnings gained from other churches through our connection with them enabled by the NCCC and CWS.

Item 06-08

[The assembly approved Item 06-08. See p. 21.]

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) amend Standing Rule E.8.b as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“The Committee on Ecumenical Relations shall be composed of ~~sixteen~~ twenty members. ~~Eight~~ Twelve shall be members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) nominated for at-large positions by the General Assembly Nominating Committee (GANC) and elected by the General Assembly in as nearly equal classes as possible. Four shall be members of four churches invited by the Stated Clerk to appoint one member each from their communion to serve as voting members of the committee. One of the four churches shall be one of our ecumenical church partners. The other three shall be our Full Communion partners. One member shall be appointed by the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly. One member shall be appointed by the General Assembly Council. The other members of the committee shall be the Stated Clerk or the Associate Stated Clerk for Ecumenical Relations and the Executive Director of the General Assembly Council or the Associate Director of Ecumenical Partnerships of the Worldwide Ministries Division, both serving ex-officio with vote.

“In addition, the directors of the three divisions of the General Assembly Council shall be corresponding members without vote.”

Rationale

The increasing complexity and large number of ecumenical relationships have led the General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations (GACER) to believe that an increased membership of diverse expertise/representation and knowledge of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is needed for GACER to effectively meet its mandate. This change would increase the ratio between Presbyterian to ecumenical representatives from 75 percent to 80 percent, and the ratio between at-large and appointed members from 50 percent to 60 percent. This change would also afford the possibility of increasing the diversity of expertise of members on the GACER.

On Re-Examining the Relationship Between Christians and Jews and the Implications for Our Evangelism and New Church Development—From the Presbytery of Hudson River.

The Presbytery of Hudson River overtures the 216th General Assembly (2004) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to do the following:

[The assembly approved Recommendation 1. of Item 06-09 with amendment. See p. 20.]

1. Direct the Office of Theology and Worship, the Office of Interfaith Relations, and the Office of Evangelism to “reexamine [and strengthen] the relationship between Christians and Jews and the implications of this relationship for our evangelism and new church development in continuing response to the 211th General Assembly (1999) mandate to guide the church in ‘bearing witness to Jesus Christ in a pluralistic age.’”

[The assembly disapproved Recommendation 2. of Item 06-09. See p. 20]

2. Suspend funding of any additional proposals for “Messianic Judaism” new church developments until such time as the General Assembly may hear the results of this study and approve a policy governing and funding such requests.

Rationale

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is committed to “make joyous witness to persons of other faiths in the spirit of respect, openness, and honesty and has implemented a policy encouraging the formation of new churches around distinct ethnic and cultural identities. In respect to our Jewish brothers and sisters, their ethnic and cultural distinctiveness are historically and theologically inseparable from their religious identity. “Messianic Judaism,” by self-definition, therefore, syncretizes two theological identities, thereby imperiling the integrity of both Judaism and Christianity.

Paul and the early church were clear that the covenant established by God with Sarah and Abraham was not superseded by the coming of Christ, “...for the gifts and the calling of God are irrevocable” (Rom. 11:29); yet misunderstanding of this central New Testament truth has led to injustices by Christians toward Jews.

In recent times, Presbyterians have joined with Roman Catholics and other Christians in acknowledging the church’s role in fostering anti-Semitism, and in accepting responsibility and making amends for the wrongs that have been committed. In 1987, the study document by our General Assembly, “A Theological Understanding of the Relationship Between Christians and Jews,” calls us to engage one another in ways that promote peace, understanding, and justice while simultaneously honoring the distinctive blessings entrusted to each community. Therefore, we view the launching of Avodat Yisrael by the Presbytery of Philadelphia, with endorsement and financial support by the Synod of the Trinity, as calling into question the basic understanding of the relationship between Presbyterians and Jews.

Concurrences to Item 06-09 from the Presbyteries of Carlisle and New York City.

Concurrence to Item 06-09 from the Presbytery of Chicago (with Additional Rationale).

Rationale

It is the intention of this overture to stimulate focused theological reflection on the nature of the relationship between Christians and Jews, specifically as related to the evangelism efforts of the PC(USA).

It is not the intention of this overture to undermine or cancel commitments already made to provide funding for new church developments currently under way, but it is the intention to prevent the funding of new proposals for Messianic Jewish new church developments, until the PC(USA) has clarified the implications that denominational sponsorship of such congregations has on interreligious relations with our Jewish sisters and brothers.

In seeking to lay a foundation for a new and better relationship between Christians and Jews, a 1987 study document adopted by the 199th General Assembly (1987) affirmed, among others, the following four theological points:

1. A reaffirmation that the God who addresses both Christians and Jews is the same—the living and true God.
2. A new understanding by the church that its own identity is intimately related to the continuing identity of the Jewish people.
3. A willingness to ponder with Jews the mystery of God’s election of both Jews and Christians to be a light to the nations.
4. An acknowledgement by Christians that Jews are in covenant relationship with God and the consideration of the implications of this reality for evangelism and witness.

These theological points were offered “as a basis for an ever deepening understanding of the mystery of God’s saving work in the world.”

In light of these theological affirmations, new church developments sponsored by the PC(USA) that function as synagogues, following the liturgical cycles of Jewish religious life rather than Christian, and which elevate Torah over Gospel, raise theological questions about what it means for a new church development to be called Presbyterian and Reformed.

Similarly, relations between the PC(USA) and Jewish interreligious dialogue partners become strained when the Jewish community encounters Presbyterian new church developments that seem to subsume Jewish identity into a Christian theological commitment.

In the course of addressing the relationship between Christians and Jews, the authors of the 1987 study document noted that “We have come to understand in a new way how our witness to the gospel can be perceived by Jews as an attempt to erode and ultimately destroy their own communities.”

Messianic Jewish congregations sit in relationship to both Christian and Jewish communities. Their identity and their existence raise new questions and call upon the PC(USA) to clarify its commitment to maintaining a “spirit of respect, openness, and honesty,” in evangelical efforts.

Given a long and complicated history of Jewish Christian relations, the 1987 study document reminds us that, “We must be sensitive as we speak of the truth we know, lest we add to the suffering of others or increase hostility and misunderstanding by what we say.”

GAC COMMENT ON ITEM 06-09

Comment on Item 06-09—From the General Assembly Council.

Historic and theological connections between Christianity and Judaism, as well as the relationship of Christians and Jews, call for careful attention to our theological understanding of this relationship, and to appropriate forms of Christian witness to Jews.

In “A Theological Understanding of the Relationship Between Christians and Jews,” adopted for study and reflection by the 199th General Assembly (1987), our church acknowledged that “the same Scripture which proclaims [Christ’s atoning work for both Jew and Gentile]... also states that Jews are already in a covenant relationship with God who makes and keeps covenants.... Dialogue is the appropriate form of faithful conversation between Christians and Jews.” In this light, questions and concerns have been raised regarding the appropriateness and integrity of Congregation Avodat Yisrael, a “Messianic” new church development in the Presbytery of Philadelphia, in particular, and, in general, regarding the mission commitments and theological understandings of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in relation to the Jewish community.

A Theological Understanding of the Relationship Between Christians and Jews has been a valuable resource for the church, and for church-synagogue relationships since its introduction in 1987. Further examination of biblical, theological, and missional aspects of the Christian-Jewish relationship can deepen the church’s understanding and refine the church’s mission in an increasingly pluralistic society.

Our Presbyterian polity is clear, however, in relation to the authority and obligation of presbyteries to establish congregations within their bounds and to oversee those congregations, to approve calls to ministers of the Word and Sacrament as members of the presbytery, and to exercise pastoral care and discipline in the oversight of their ministries. The process for funding new church development work is likewise carefully delineated. It provides for regular review by the Presbytery for continued financial support of such projects by all other bodies involved.

Therefore, the General Assembly Council urges the 216th General Assembly (2004) to approve the first recommendation of Item 06-09, and to disapprove the second recommendation of Item 06-09.

ACREC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 06-09

Advice and counsel on Item 06-09—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC).

Item 06-09 requests the 216th General Assembly (2004) to examine the relationship between Christians and Jews and the implications for our evangelism and new church development, from the Presbytery of Hudson River.

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns advises that Item 06-09 Recommendation 1 be approved and that Recommendation 2 be disapproved.

Rationale

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns makes the following comment supporting its advice:

Item 06-09 is timely in nature. The U.S. religious culture is changing, and a fresh analysis of the PC(USA)’s response to this change is surely needed.

Jewish people combine their ethnicity and religion in their understanding of who they are as people of God, and Presbyterians honor their definition of themselves. The result is a historic wholesome relationship between Presbyterians and the Jewish community in the U.S.A. Item 06-09 will aid in maintaining both our understanding of how we reach out to Jewish people, and it gives promise in helping the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) practice Christian integrity in its witness.

Item 06-09 requests the appropriate response to “new religious phenomena” in the society, asking that all new church developments with and among “Messianic Jewish” followers be halted until the study is completed. The PC(USA) holds that all who accept Jesus Christ as Lord and Savior are welcomed to its congregations. Previously, Jewish people have not been targeted as a religious group to be evangelized, especially because of who they say they are.

Item 06-10

[The assembly approved Item 06-10. See p. 21.]

The General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) elect the following persons to be delegates and alternates to the 9th Assembly of the World Council of Churches (2006). The GACER also requests authorization to make adjustments to the delegation if necessary to achieve appropriate representational balances as defined in the Book of Order, G-4.0403.

Principals: The Stated Clerk of the General Assembly, the chair of the Worldwide Ministries Division (in 2006 or beyond), Vanessa Luciano.

Alternates: The Associate Stated Clerk for Ecumenical Relations, the director of Worldwide Ministries Division (in 2006 or beyond), Marissa Galvan.

Rationale

The World Council of Churches will hold its 9th assembly February 14–23, 2006, in Porto Alegre, Brazil. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has been allotted seats for three delegates. The Office of Ecumenical Programming and Facilitation solicited nominations from around the church for the General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations (GACER) consideration. By virtue of the Standing Rules G.2.p., the Stated Clerk is a member all ecumenical delegations. The GACER sought to include in this delegation representation from the international mission work of the church as well as a youth/young adult. Because of the shift to biennial assemblies, this recommendation is offered without information or knowledge about the chair of the Worldwide Ministries Division in 2006 or beyond. Therefore, GACER requests authorization to adjust the delegation if necessary to ensure appropriate balances as defined in the Constitution.

Item 06-11

[The assembly approved Item 06-11. See p. 21.]

The General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) confirm the election of Michael Racelis as a delegate and William A. Radford as an alternate to the 24th General Council of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches.

Rationale

The 214th General Assembly (2002) elected delegates and alternates to the 24th General Council of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches. However, both the youth/young adult delegate and the alternate are unable to attend the General Council meeting. Because of both the World Alliance of Reformed Churches requirement for a youth delegate and our own constitutional expectations of a representative delegation, a replacement for the previously elected youth delegate and alternate is needed.

Item 06-12

Commissioners' Resolution. On Calling on the Stated Clerk to Justify His Endorsement of the World Council of Churches and Reviewing PC(USA) Relationship with the World Council of Churches.

That the 216th General Assembly (2004) do the following:

[The assembly disapproved Item 12-10, Recommendation 1. See p. 76. (Note: This recommendation was sent to 12 Assembly Committee on Peacemaking as Item 12-10.)]

1. Call the Stated Clerk, the Reverend Clifton Kirkpatrick, to define the intention of the World Council of Churches' (WCC) request to "prosecute," to discuss the relevant Scriptures, confessions, General Assembly Council (GAC) directives, and General Assembly statements in justifying his endorsement, and to defend his authority as Stated Clerk to make such endorsements that are contrary to the stated position of the General Assembly in regards to Item 12-08 of the 215th General Assembly (2003) of the PC(USA) (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 656ff). [Note: This recommendation was sent to 12 Assembly Committee on Peacemaking as Item 12-10.]

[The assembly disapproved Item 06-12, Recommendation 2. See p. 21.]

2. Review the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) relationship with the World Council of Churches at each General Assembly through the committee charged with that work to ensure the WCC's actions and positions more closely represent those of the majority of PC(USA).

Rationale

The 215th General Assembly (2003) of the PC(USA) approved the statement entitled "Iraq and Beyond" as a resource for study and reflection; and acknowledged that there are ongoing disagreements regarding the war and urges tolerance for differing opinions.

"Iraq and Beyond" clearly states that the position of the PC(USA) is "to encourage a process of reflection, discussion, and understanding ..." (Minutes, 2003, Part I, p. 656). [Editor's Note: This quote originally came from a statement of the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy, which followed the recommendation section and was rationale for writing "Iraq and Beyond." That statement reads as follows: "The U.S.-led war against Iraq, the motives, dynamics, and process leading up to it, and the consequences that will flow from it have presented our church and its members with serious issues around which much reflection, theological debate, and prayerful discussion is yet to be done. To encourage a process of reflection, discussion, and understanding, the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy made the above recommendations."]

"Iraq and Beyond" explains that, "The church must urge every jurisdiction within the land, from the federal government to the local governing body, to make every effort to protect the right of disagreement, to sustain the civility of policy debate, and to tolerate demonstrations in support of all viewpoints" (Ibid, p. 658).

"Iraq and Beyond" goes further to say, "The anguish of those who feel that this war is unjustifiable and the conviction of those who support the war must be acknowledged as legitimate moral responses that should not be condemned" (Ibid).

“Iraq and Beyond” emphasizes the need for continued debate on differences of moral judgment regarding U.S. military doctrine “with poise and graceful thoughtfulness.”

“Iraq and Beyond” warns of tabling debate “for the sake of maintaining an assumed sense of peace,” which is contrary to “American political, social, and religious life.”

In contrast, the World Council of Churches issued a “Statement on Iraq,” which clearly states that the war was an “immoral” and “illegal resort to war.” Additionally, the WCC’s “Statement on Iraq” calls for the United Nations to “promptly investigate” and “prosecute” the democratically elected officials of the coalition forces in Iraq. Finally note, the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly, the Reverend Clifton Kirkpatrick, endorsed the WCC’s “Statement on Iraq” during the 8/26/03–9/6/03 meeting of the WCC without the consent of the General Assembly or in consultation with its council.

COGA COMMENT ON ITEM 06-12

Comment on Item 06-12—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA)

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) notes that the authority of the Stated Clerk as a member of an ecumenical body, such as the World Council of Churches, comes from Standing Rule G.2.p. relating to the duties of the Stated Clerk.

p. The Stated Clerk is a permanent ecumenical representative of the General Assembly and shall be a member of each delegation representing the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in ecumenical or interchurch bodies or councils...

The responsibilities of full participation of the Stated Clerk in World Council of Churches (WCC) deliberations and actions do not require further consultation with the GAC. These responsibilities have been given to the Stated Clerk by virtue of the office and are in compliance with the Standing Rules.

Item 06-13

[The assembly approved Item 06-13. See p. 22.]

Commissioners’ Resolution. On Cooperative Ecumenical Strategy.

That the 216th General Assembly (2004) encourage the leadership of synods and presbyteries, in cooperation with long-time ecumenical partners, to

- 1. develop or renew regional plans to ensure ministry in areas of declining population and/or resources;
- 2. coordinate meeting locations, fellowship, and educational experiences when feasible;
- 3. meet with leaders of partner denominations, to share reports, public communications and visits;
- 4. cooperate in efforts of evangelism, witness, and service in new ways.

Rationale

Our Full Communion partner denominations (The Reformed Church, the United Church of Christ, the Evangelical Lutheran Church) and our partners in the Churches Uniting in Christ (CUIC) face many of the same demographic and cultural changes we face.

In urban and rural areas where most needed, interdenominational strategy and cooperation have frequently weakened, despite mutual recognition of each other's ministries.

Item 06-Info*A. General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations Agency Summary1. Purpose

The purpose of the General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations is to give a high profile to the vision of the ecumenical involvement and work as central to the gospel and key to the life of the church; plan and coordinate, in consultation with the agencies and governing bodies of the church, the involvement of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in ecumenical relations and work; connect the ecumenical efforts of all governing body levels of the church; provide a common point for all ecumenical efforts connecting us with those outside our church; keep a unity of vision that includes the ecclesiastical, programmatic, ecumenical, and denominational parts of our ministries and commitments; articulate the Reformed and Presbyterian identity in the midst of our ecumenical commitments; and promote awareness of the role of the unity of all humankind in the search for the unity of the church; and promote the unity of the church as an exhibition of the kingdom of God to the world.

The committee is composed of sixteen members, inclusive of the Stated Clerk and the Executive Director of the General Assembly Council, ecumenical representatives inclusive of Full Communion, dialogue partners, and members elected at large from the General Assembly.

2. Ministry and Accomplishments

The General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations held its two regular meetings: the spring meeting on January 30 to February 1, 2003; and the fall meeting on October 2–4, 2003. The following provides some highlights of these meetings:

Spring Meeting—The committee engaged in theological reflection through a panel presentation on the subject of “Visioning-Ecumenical Formation.” The panel members were Nancy Jo Kemper, Margaret Haney, and Phil Wickeri. The committee also heard a presentation from Bertrice Woods, director of Churches Uniting in Christ, on the subject of “Ecclesiology and Ecumenism.” Among other actions, the committee received the report from the Review Committee of the World Council of Churches. The report was forwarded to the 215th General Assembly (2003).

Fall Meeting—The theological reflection was offered by a panel discussion on the topic of “CUIC Mutual Recognition and Reconciliation of Ministries.” The committee received an introduction to the ministries of National Council of Churches and Church World Service. The general secretary of the NCCC and the director of CWS did the introduction. The committee received and discussed two proposals, one from the CUIC Ministry Task Force, and the other to join Christian Churches Together in the USA. They approved a recommendation to begin the Second Round of the Interfaith Listening Project. The committee received a report of the efforts of the Ecumenical Relations Office in strengthening ecumenical ministries at the presbytery level. The National Council of Churches delegation for the new quadrennium was approved.

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), in gratitude for God's grace and mercy, commits itself to a faithful use of God's gifts in the search for fuller expression of the visible unity to which we are called. The General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations, following the mandate of the 212th General Assembly (2000) is reviewing our relationship with the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A. The CER formed a review committee in accordance with the assembly guidelines. The committee members were: Kristine Thompson, chair, Ed Chan, Wayne Wilson, Don Shriver, Kenneth Thomas, and Oscar McCloud. The committee received a partial report from the review committee at its fall meeting. The final report will be presented in the spring 2003 General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations meeting. The finished report will be then presented to the 216th General Assembly (2004) in Richmond, Virginia.

In harmony with our understanding that "we engage in bilateral and multilateral dialogues with other churches and traditions in order to remove barriers of misunderstanding and establish common affirmations," the General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations continues in dialogue with the Moravian Church, and ongoing conversation with the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, Cumberland Presbyterian Church in America, and the Korean Presbyterian Church in America. The dialogue with the Episcopal Church, initiated in January 2002, entered in its second year. This dialogue has proven to be of great relevancy, as they engage in finding ways to reconcile the ordained ministries of both denominations. A success in this effort could be well-received by a similar work done in the Churches Uniting in Christ.

During the month of September, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) participated in two bilateral dialogues: the Lutheran/Reformed Dialogue and the Reformed/Roman Catholic Dialogue. The Reformed/Roman Catholic Dialogue began a new series of conversations. The main topic for this series will be the Sacraments. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is represented in dialogue by Richard Mouw and Marta Moore-Keish.

Through this past year, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has maintained and strengthened our conciliar relationships. As we make every effort to preserve the unity of the church we strengthened our relationship with the World Alliance of Reformed Churches, the World Council of Churches, and the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A. The committee has closely followed the fiscal responsibility of the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A. and has witnessed the change in course of the council finances. The WCC finished its process of finding a new general secretary to succeed Konrad Raiser when he retired at the end of 2003. The Reverend Samuel Kobia, a Methodist minister from Kenya, became the first general secretary from the African continent. We also continued our relationship with our full communion partners (the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America, United Church of Christ, and the Reformed Church of America).

Our participation this year in Churches Uniting in Christ was reciprocal to our commitment to the organization. The CUIC began to develop specific strategies and programs that will strengthen the witness of its nine member churches in our country. The following includes a summary of the work of the three task forces during 2003:

a. Local and Regional Ecumenism Task Force

The Local and Regional Ecumenism Task Force has identified several initiatives to engage the member churches of CUIC, at the local, state, and regional levels, more fully into life and witness of Churches Uniting in Christ. Pilot programs are being developed in Denver, Los Angeles, and Memphis, involving local religious leaders and councils of churches. The task force is also working to build relationships with seminaries and theological communities related to CUIC member communions. Conversations with some seminary leadership have identified the role that polity courses highlighting CUIC and its churches would have in enhancing the ecumenical formation of emerging church leadership.

b. Ministry Task Force

The Ministry Task Force has met five times attending to its task of preparing a foundation for the mutual recognition and mutual reconciliation of ordained ministries among the CUIC member communions. Following conversations aimed at helping task force members understand the ecclesiologies and patterns of ministry that charac-terize the churches, a writing group has begun to prepare a draft text of a proposal for consideration and action by the member communions in mid-2005.

c. Racial Justice Task Force

The Racial Justice Task Force is organizing a consultation for March 29, 2004, in Chicago, that will bring together church leaders, academics, seminary students, and grassroots workers who are committed to the eradication of racism. The theme of the consultation is “Eradicating Racism: Liberating Tomorrow’s Children.” Most of the day will be spent in eight working groups in order to prepare models that the churches might use in pursuing our commitment as CUIC churches to work for racial justice.

The General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations continues to be faithful to its responsibilities of planning and coordinating the involvement of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in ecumenical relations and work; and also to its call to search for diverse patterns of the visible unity of Christ’s Church.

B. Corresponding Bodies Reports

1. National Council of the Churches of Christ in the U.S.A.—Report of the 2000–2003 Quadrennium

The National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A. (NCCC) has just begun its 2004–2007 quadrennium on a note of stability and optimism, a welcome contrast to conditions four years ago. At the close of the previous quadrennium, in November 2003, the General Assembly met in Jackson, Miss., and reviewed the incredible four-year journey that NCCC member communions have taken together. The following message is adapted from the report in Jackson of the NCCC’s general secretary, Dr. Robert Edgar:

As we moved from General Assembly to General Assembly in recent years, some wondered if each meeting might be our last. But we have survived, and thrived, under the worst-case scenario our founders back in 1950 could ever have imagined.

When we gathered in Cleveland in 1999, we met to celebrate a heritage of fifty years of ecumenical achievement, to remember the best of our journey. But in the shadows, and too soon in the spotlight, there was crisis as well. The NCCC was running on fumes, both financially and in that less tangible sense of mission. The prospects looked ominous.

On that fiftieth anniversary, we tapped the distinguished Andrew Young to be our president, recalling his achievements in public service, civil rights, international diplomacy, and in ministry, as a minister of the United Church of Christ and especially as a former staff member in the youth department of the NCCC. And I was elected as the new general secretary.

On my first day in office, I was faced with the Elian Gonzalez case—a study in advocacy crisis management, involving hundreds of players on a complex chessboard of values, legalities, public opinion, political stakes, and faith commitments. We survived, and Elian survived, and I got a baptism of fire in international, ecumenical action that was preparation for the tumultuous internal struggle that awaited us.

The full dimensions of the fiscal crisis began to emerge soon after I arrived at NCCC offices in New York. We were $6 million over budget and had—over the previous decade—spent $21 million of our $24 million reserve fund to avoid laying off personnel or closing down programs. Now the decisions were urgent and unavoidable. We were in danger of disappearing in a collapse that would be heard across Christendom.

Underlying all of this financial concern was a broader question about direction and future, the vision and mission of the NCCC. The optimists among us saw that our challenge was to trim the sails of the ecumenical ship, but I would remind you that trimming the sails is not just cutting the cloth to make it smaller. It also means setting them just right, to catch the wind of God’s spirit, that our journey might be sure. One dimension of that challenge was the evidence that the world of Christian faith had grown far beyond our table, with more than half the Christians in America related to organizations outside the NCCC's circle. How to design a setting for fellowship to which all might want to come?

We set ourselves the goal of building a wider ecumenical table. We already had experienced some of the wider table within the council itself, because there are many non-NCCC participants serving on NCCC commissions. Still, the field of American Christianity is much, much broader, so in 2000, as the General Assembly met in Atlanta, we proposed what has become the hope of a table for all Christians in America, Christian Churches Together in the USA (CCT)—for which Wesley Granberg-Michaelson of the Reformed Church in America has provided leadership.

It is becoming evident as CCT emerges that it will not replace the National Council of Churches. The CCT's strength, which is the incredible variety of churches and church-related groups that are members, also means that it may not achieve the consensus required to carry out substantive program ministries or to be a public voice on a wide range of peace and justice issues. Nor is it staffed and structured to do so.

The next step in our journey was in Oakland, California, where we installed Elenie Huszagh, a prominent lay member of the Greek Orthodox Church, as our president. The installation took place in a Greek Orthodox cathedral in a splendid setting high in the hills overlooking Oakland—symbolic of the high standard and the long-range view that Elenie would hold us to in her term as our leader.

We worked hard at building accountability into our fiscal management as the base on which we would build future program. The NCCC's interim chief financial officer, Spencer Bates, began by reducing his own staff. Working with NCCC Treasurer Phil Young of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and members of the Finance and Administration Committee, he began a careful program of cost cutting and innovative management that dealt with just about everything from space utilization to investment strategy.

Another way we stretched our resources to fulfill our mission was through partnerships with highly focused, specialized organizations who shared our goals in strategic areas of our multiyear Poverty Mobilization, a major focus of the council's work. By linking our programs to these effective sources of energy and experience, we were updating an honored council tradition established years ago with Children's Defense Fund, by welcoming others into that relationship.

And our oldest partners, the local and state councils of churches and interfaith organizations, The World Council of Churches, and the family of national councils around the globe are becoming increasingly important allies in our mission of justice, reconciliation, and peace, moving forward.

In 2002, the General Assembly met in Tampa, Florida, amid the first signs of a financial turnaround. There was an exciting run of success in our fund-raising efforts, with growth in foundation grants and individual gifts. Lilly Endowment, whose leaders had said in the year 2000 that they would make no further gifts to the NCCC, by 2002, had committed a half-million dollars to give us the capacity for enlisting donor support. Lilly had been watching, as we were able to announce the welcome news that we had achieved the first balanced operating budget in more than a decade.

As the NCCC community gathered in Jackson, Mississippi, at the end of their four-year journey, they did so with renewed energy and stable resources—and a productive new working relationship with Church World Service (CWS). The CWS is the global humanitarian organization of the NCCC's thirty-six Protestant and Orthodox member communions and is headed by the Reverend John L. McCullough of The United Methodist Church. The NCCC/CWS relationship already is proving itself in our work on Africa, Korea, and the Middle East. These giant steps forward free us to focus on building our capacity and vision for the years ahead.

Even while attending to internal matters, the NCCC and its member communions gave full attention to pressing national and global concerns—remembering that the Christ who unites us was given because God so loved the world. From the autumn months of 2002 through the spring of 2003, our initiatives to advance the cause of peace put us in conflict with the nation's leaders as we questioned the rush to war in Iraq, and the preemptive strike policies and unilateralism that have marked America's current foreign policy. We took to the airwaves, the streets, and the corridors of Congress to speak truth to power.

The peace initiative crossed national boundaries as we met with the leaders of Britain, France, Germany, and Russia, and visited with the Pope at the Vatican in pursuit of ecumenical solidarity. And we joined with Church World Service in helping organize All Our Children, a campaign for the well-being of Iraq's children.

In a modern-day echo of the parable of the talents, we took our limited resources and invested them in the high priority of peacemaking. The faithfulness of the council and its churches gave courage to increasing numbers of people to witness for peace. And the council—shown to be trustworthy in these things—was entrusted with more: a $7 million gift from an anonymous donor, much of which has been used to increase our long-term reserves.

At every crossroads over the past four years, we have searched for the right direction and the organizing strategy to bring it to life. Survival mode was an uncomfortable classroom in which to learn some important lessons.

One of the ways we sought to get our bearings was a Substantive Reflection Task Group, organized by our president, Elenie Huszagh, and chaired by Robert Welsh of the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ). What this group helped us envision was a future that is beginning to take shape in actions begun in recent months and—to echo the theme of the Jackson assembly—is still being shaped “In the Hands of the Potter,” who will work through us as we seek to honor our call to be good stewards.

Now, we are moving forward from Jackson, under the leadership of our new president Bishop Thomas L. Hoyt Jr., of the Christian Methodist Episcopal Church, into a new quadrennium that will have its own potholes, and detours, and challenges of every kind. A New Testament scholar, preacher, writer, teacher, administrator, and pastor, Bishop Hoyt brings an approach that stresses Christian unity and social justice as twin concerns inherent in the Gospel.

Also helping to move into the future is the fact that an effective organizing principle has emerged in the form of our five program commissions, spanning the full spectrum of our work together.

Some are already well-established, like Faith and Order. Others, like Justice and Advocacy, are just beginning, though their assignment gathers up in a new way our historic and prophetic commitments in the justice arena, including a renewed emphasis on environmental programs. Some have a newly urgent nature, like Interfaith Relations. Others are long-standing ecumenical concerns, like Education and Leadership Ministries, which gathers under its umbrella more than a dozen program committees that serve the churches in everything from the Uniform Series, to racial ethnic ministries, ministry with people with disabilities, young adult ministry, and much more. And the Communication Commission lifts up all four of these commissions and gives them a wider voice and a public presence, even as it manages its own communication-related advocacy and education agenda.

Together, these five commissions represent a vehicle to carry us into the future, encompassing our programs and emphases in an ecumenical design that involves all of our communions in the detailed agenda of the council.

Undergirding the work of the commissions, our research and planning office, under the expert direction of Eileen Lindner, a PC(USA) minister, continues to draw foundation support for its studies of trends and issues of concern to the ecumenical family. Eileen and Marcel Welty, also a PC(USA) minister, enjoy wide acclaim for the annual Yearbook of American and Canadian Churches, not only for its statistical value and its comprehensive listing of religious leadership, but for its provocative and far-reaching analysis of topics and trends in religion.

One of the major initiatives of the council over the past several years has been our concern for poverty and economic justice. That work received an infusion of new energy several months ago, when Dr. Paul Sherry, former president of the United Church of Christ, committed to spending a year of his retirement to mobilize our churches for effective action on economic issues. Karen Hessel, another NCCC staff member from the PC(USA), helps to staff the Mobilization, as well as the Justice for Women Working Group.

This is a breakthrough for us as we seek to consolidate all we have learned from our history—and move forward from Jackson into a new, more effective era ahead. Some of the best advice for the journey that we have heard comes from Dr. Sam Kobia, the new general secretary of the World Council of Churches, who shares with us this African proverb: "If you want to walk fast, walk alone. But if you want to walk far, walk together."

2. Report on the 2003 General Assembly of the National Council of Churches in the U.S.A.

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) delegation consisted of Belle Miller-McMaster, Roberto Delgado, Gordon Webster, Janet E. Leng, Clifton Kirkpatrick, Aimee Moiso, Robina Winbush, Carlos Malavé, Kathy Lueckert, Cindy Pierse, Phil Young, and Margaret J. Thomas.

The 2003 General Assembly of the National Council of Churches in the U.S.A. (NCCC) celebrated its general assembly in Jackson, Mississippi, on November 4–6. The assembly opened with the music of the Piney Woods School Choir, a school for African American children. The choir brought the congregation to a moment of joyful praise by their contagious music. As the congregations praised and listened to God’s word, a potter worked on his clay, forming a beautiful piece from the formless clay. At the opening service the preacher, the Reverend Thelma Chambers-Young, emphatically declared “God is sovereign, God can re-mold us,” and “we are in the Masters hand.”

After the conclusion of the worship service, several people shared words of welcoming, among them: Eleine K. Huszagh, president; the Reverend Bob Edgar, general secretary; the Reverend John McCullough, director of Church World Service (CWS); and the Reverend Paul Jones from the Mississippi Religious Leadership Conference.

The general secretary presented his report to the assembly, highlighting the accomplishments of the last four years and emphasizing the financial recovery of the organization. The young adults who participated on the Young Adults pre-assembly event presented a report. This year was the first time that the NCCC celebrated an event for young adults. They made three general observations:

- There was a lack of knowledge among young people about the NCCC in general, and also about the “Come to the Feast” event.
- There was also a lack of knowledge about the Ecumenical Young Adult Ministry Team.
- All agreed that a young adult assembly pre-event was needed.

The day concluded with a moving presentation on the resurrection of the Orthodox Church in Albania. Presbyteria Renee Ritsi described the process by which the country of Albania, which became the first declared atheistic nation, was rediscovering its Christian heritage.

The Presbyterian delegation met on the opening night for a dinner and briefing at the Covenant Presbyterian Church in Jackson. The delegation had the opportunity to hear the Reverend Paul Means describe some of the exciting ministries of Covenant Presbyterian Church.

a. Reports Presented

During the second day of the assembly, several reports were presented:

(1) Board of Directors Report

One of the major activities during the year was the review of the general secretary's work. A great deal of time was also spent in re-visioning and evaluating the council in general.

(2) Interfaith Relations Commission Report

It was announced that Jay Rock, who served the NCCC for approximately seventeen years as the staff for the interfaith office, had finished his service. The job description for the position was re-evaluated and a search for the new person was started. The search committee recommended the hiring of the Reverend Shanta Premawardhana, a Baptist minister. Rev. Premawardhana was introduced to the assembly and shared some of his goals for the interfaith office.

(3) Church World Service Board Report

The board adopted a strategic plan in Cleveland. The plan called for financial and administrative autonomy. One of the highlights from this period was the hiring of the new executive director. During the last year and a half the CWS has met with fifteen of the member communions. These conversations intend to strengthen the relationships with the churches.

(4) Communications Commission Report

The communications commission is supporting all the work of the council. The staff has been in the front lines of the news and media in their efforts to speak about the war in Iraq. Eculink has become a publication noticed all over America. The Ecu-news Web site had more than 200,000 visitors last year. Eculink has more than 75,000 readers. The commission is an expression of the wider ecumenical table, which includes churches like Seventh-day Adventist, Canadian churches, and many others. In partnership with Roman Catholics, Southern Baptists, and Jewish religious organizations, the commission has shared in media projects in partnership with major TV networks. The NCCC communications commission was the driving force behind the corporate ownership of broadcast media judicial case. The communication commission is experiencing a real renaissance. The current leadership looks forward to the future.

(5) Education and Leadership (E & L) Ministries Commission Report

Minister's support, curriculum for Sunday school, camps; these are only a sample of the varied ministries of the E & L Commission. The commission has evolved over the years, but the commitment to education has not changed. The Committee on Uniform Series has been in existence for 133 years. Some fifteen ministries are at the core of the commission's ministries. All these ministries are accomplish with a modest budget of $528,000. All this work is grounded in prayer and theological reflection.

(6) Human Genetics Report

As an introduction to the report, Richard Hayes presented a challenging lecture on the possible frightening or positive effects of human genetics and cloning. He provided basic information about Human Genetic Modification and cloning. The big questions were: Where do we draw the line? and Who draws the line?

Claire Chapman presented the report in behalf of the chair. The report recommended process, not issues. People with particular expertise are being recruited for the committee continuance. The church must be prepared to respond to public policy questions on these issues. This will involve educational efforts from the NCCC and its member churches. The committee proposed two options for providing the financial resources needed to move ahead with the proposed plan.

(7) Justice and Advocacy Commission Report

Michael Kinnamon, the chair of the new commission, gave a detailed explanation of the history, necessity, and plans of the justice ministries and the new commission.

(8) Church World Service Financial Report

The years 2002–2003 have been a challenge to the CWS. The financial situation of the country has had a negative impact on the fundraising of the agency. The agency has been able to maintain their commitment to the projects around the world. The administrative costs have been down. The unrestricted reserves have been increased. The administration of the fundraising this year was 18.4 percent. The CWS has been faithful in using the funds given for specific projects strictly for those projects. Two million dollars will be added this year to unrestricted reserves. This has been difficult to do, but CWS feel that it is important to do.

(9) NCCC Financial Report

The audit of the NCCC was presented. The treasurer also presented a balanced budget for the year 2004. As of June 30, 2003, the council investment portfolio consisted of $9,250,124. The total assets of the council consisted of $12,651,535.

(10) Faith and Order Commission Report

The commission has concluded their present work, and is ready to begin a new set of studies. The Meaning of Full Communion and the Authority of the Church in the World are two of the documents that will publish in the coming two years. Some of the themes for the new period are, justification/sanctification, Theosis, and Justice/Ethics. The dialogue with the foundation for the next Faith and Order continues, as they work to find the funds. The commission has benefited from the support of various theological institutions.

(11) Church World Service (CWS) Report

Education and Advocacy Program: The main issues addressed by this area of ministry are globalization, HIV/AIDS, and Decade to Overcome Violence.

Immigration and Refugee Program: The government reduced the number of refugees allowed to come to the US from 70,000 to 28,000. The CWS is in charge of processing all refugees coming from Africa to the U.S.A. One of the big challenges is the displaced and uprooted peoples in their own countries. Half of the people displaced in the world are in Africa.

Emergency Response Program: 3.5 million dollars have been distributed in the last three months alone. The Interfaith Trauma Response Training was established as a response to the tragedy of 9/11. The All Our Children Response is a program in Iraq that has been increased because of the war. Many other programs are being implemented in various parts of the world, places like, Afghanistan, Brazil, etc. Another program is the building of houses for disaster-affected people; thousands of houses have been built.

Social & Economical Development Program: It focuses in community developing programs; this work is done in cooperation with many partners around the world. The CWS is also present in the Balkans. They have been working in Vietnam for fifty years. The Africa Initiative will be launched in 2004; this work will be in partnership with the All-Africa Conference of Churches. At the heart of this initiative is the Water for Life program. This program will address the water crisis affecting many African countries. In a nation like Angola, in 1999, 62 percent of the population had no access to water.

Other reports given included: Office of International Affairs and Peace, Constitution and Bylaws Committee.

b. Resolutions Approved by the Assembly

The NCCC assembly endorsed consumer boycotts of Taco Bell and Mt. Olive Pickle products, both effective immediately, to put pressure for improvement of wages and working conditions of their suppliers' farm workers.

Given the NCCC's insistence that boycotts are a measure of last resort, the affirmative votes on the two boycotts are especially significant. It has been more than fifteen years since the NCCC endorsed a boycott (May 1988, related to Royal Dutch/Shell's connections at that time to apartheid South Africa).

Urging support for the boycott of Taco Bell, Gerardo Reyes Chavez, a Florida farm worker and member of the Steering Committee of the Coalition of Immokalee Workers, described farm workers' low wages and lack of any benefits such as health insurance or overtime pay.

"And in the most extreme circumstances we find modern day slavery," said Chavez, speaking in Spanish through an interpreter. "By modern day slavery I mean people forced to work at gunpoint."

The General Assembly also approved resolutions on the following:

- "The Churches and Public School" urging member communions and their congregations to redouble their efforts in support of public education.

- "Preserving U.S. Pharmaceutical Sales to Canada" urging the president, the Food and Drug Administration, and Congress to enact legislation enabling U.S. consumers to purchase prescription drugs at costs comparable to those charged by U.S. companies to other countries and opposing legislative attempts to make it illegal for U.S. consumers to purchase prescription drugs from Canada.

- "The Conflict in the Middle East" urging in particular the dismantling of the "Separation Wall" being constructed between Israel and the West Bank.

And the assembly, reissuing its 2002 "Resolution Recognizing the Patriarch of Jerusalem," renewed its call to the State of Israel to recognize the 2001 canonical election of His Beatitude Irenaios as Greek Orthodox Patriarch of Jerusalem, enabling the patriarchate to function as a legal entity in Israel.

c. Officers

Since this was the end of the quadrennium, new officers were installed. The installation service took place at the Anderson United Methodist Church. Around four hundred people worshiped with joy until past 10:00 p.m. on that evening.

Dr. Thomas L. Hoyt Jr., was installed as the National Council of Churches' new president for 2004–2005. Dr. Hoyt, 62, of Shreveport, Louisiana, is bishop of the Christian Methodist Episcopal Church's Fourth Episcopal District, comprising Mississippi and Louisiana. He is the first member of the historic African American C.M.E. to serve as NCCC president since the council was founded in 1950.

Other NCC officers installed were:

- General Secretary: The Reverend Dr. Robert W. Edgar, a United Methodist, reelected to a second, four-year term as NCCC general secretary, with headquarters in New York City.

- President Elect: The Reverend Michael E. Livingston, of Trenton, New Jersey, executive director, International Council of Community Churches, as NCCC president elect for 2004–2005. He will serve as the council's president in 2006–2007.

- Vice President: Clare J. Chapman, executive director of Finance and Administration, General Commission on Christian Unity and Interreligious Concerns, United Methodist Church, New York City, and chair of the NCCC's Administration and Finance Committee.

- Vice President: Betty Voskuil, coordinator for Diaconal Ministries, Hunger Education and Reformed Church World Service, Reformed Church in America, Grand Rapids, Michigan, chair of the Church World Service Board of Directors.

- Vice President At Large: The Reverend Dr. Randall R. Lee, assistant to the bishop and director, Department for Ecumenical Affairs, Evangelical Lutheran Church in America, Chicago, Illinois.
- Vice President at Large: The Reverend Dr. Thelma Chambers-Young, director of Christian Education, Holy Temple Baptist Church, Progressive National Baptist Convention, Inc. (PNBC), Oklahoma City, Oklahoma; immediate past president of the PNBC Women's Department.
- Secretary: Bishop Vicken Aykazian, diocesan legate and ecumenical officer, Diocese of the Armenian Orthodox Church of America, Washington, D.C.
- Immediate Past President: Elenie K. Huszagh, Esq., a Greek Orthodox laywoman from Nehalem, Oregon, concluding her 2002–2003 term as the NCCC's president, continues in 2004–2005 in the office of NCCC immediate past president.

d. Conclusion of Assembly

On the last day the assembly, the general secretary-elect of the WCC, Dr. Samuel Kobia, brought greetings from the World Council of Churches.

He gave thanks for the historical participation of the U.S.A. churches in the in the Faith and Order Commission. He stressed the importance of the full involvement of all the member churches of WCC in the process of re-configuration of the worldwide Ecumenical Movement. Dr. Kobia spoke extensively about the rationale and the importance of the focus of the Decade to Overcome Violence (DOV) program in the U.S.A. during the year 2004. After Dr. Kobia's address, the assembly heard an introduction to the Decade to Overcome Violence by Hansul-risch Gerber. The DOV promotes solidarity, understanding, celebration (peace and justice), peace, and overcoming violence.

The General Assembly will convene again on November 9–11, 2004, in Saint Louis, Missouri.

3. *World Council of Churches, Activities in 2003: A Report to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)

The year 2003 marked several significant transitions in the life of the World Council of Churches (WCC). The first day of the year brought a new organizational structure, and the final day saw the retirement of WCC General Secretary Konrad Raiser after nearly eleven years in that position. The WCC Central Committee, meeting at Geneva in late August and early September, elected Samuel Kobia as the new general secretary to take office in 2004, selected a place and theme for the Ninth Assembly of the WCC in 2006, and hailed indicators that the financial situation of the council has improved significantly since the crisis of 2002.

a. Selected Highlights 2003

In 2003, the life and program of the WCC were diverse and dynamic, despite financial difficulties experienced in the preceding year. Fourteen core programs and two international ecumenical initiatives were implemented during 2003, covering dozens of activities worldwide. A selection of highlights is given below. More detailed activities reports were presented to the central committee in August 2003, and a comprehensive WCC annual report for 2003 is scheduled to be published in April 2004. The fully audited WCC financial report for 2003 will also become available in the spring of 2004. Details of many of the initiatives of the WCC may be found on the council's website: <http://www.wcc-coe.org>

b. Election of a New General Secretary

In August 2003, the Central Committee elected a new WCC general secretary, the Reverend Dr. Samuel Kobia, a Methodist originally from Kenya. Sam Kobia is the first African general secretary of the WCC, and he took office in January 2004. In his acceptance speech following his election, Kobia reaffirmed his commitment to the ecumenical vision: "I believe very strongly that working together and walking together will help us stay together

... This is a spiritual journey we need to sustain, to fulfill the prayer of the Lord Jesus Christ that all may be one, that the world may believe.” For further information: http://www.wcc-coe.org/wcc/press\_corner/index-e.html

c. WCC Ninth Assembly Theme and Venue Announced

“God, in your grace, transform the world” will be the theme of the Ninth Assembly of the World Council of Churches, planned for February 2006 in Porto Alegre, Brazil. The decision was taken by the WCC Central Committee in August 2003. As a result of conservative budgeting, the ninth assembly will have 700 delegates, almost 300 fewer than in previous years. It will last for ten days, two days less than previously. Alongside the assembly of WCC member churches, a broader Ecumenical Forum will gather representatives of churches, organizations, and groups from around the world.

d. Decade to Overcome Violence (DOV)

Launched in 2001, the WCC’s ten-year focus aims to mobilize churches in opposition to violence and in support of peace. Following the recommendation of the WCC Central Committee, the 2003 annual DOV theme was “Sudan—Healing and Reconciliation.” The DOV worked closely with the Sudan Ecumenical Forum in developing the theme, and in nurturing the peace process and the churches’ contribution to overcoming violence in this war-torn country. The theme country for 2004 is to be the United States of America.

For further information: <http://www2.wcc-coe.org/dov.nsf>

e. Strengthening the Ecumenical Movement: New Configuration

The WCC leadership continued efforts to strengthen the coherence and unity of the worldwide ecumenical movement. A discussion on “The Reconfiguration of the Ecumenical Movement” was initiated by the WCC leadership with the aim of assessing and reinvigorating institutional ecumenism in the 21st century, notably in an initial international consultation at Antelias, Lebanon, in November 2003.

f. Orthodox Participation in the WCC

The Steering Committee of the Special Commission on Orthodox Participation in the WCC met in Neapolis, Greece, in June 2003. The committee continued working on a consensus method of decision-making and membership. It was informed about ongoing work on ecclesiology by the Faith and Order Commission as well as the extent to which this work responds to concerns expressed by the special commission. It reviewed and clarified the sections on worship in the special commission report.

g. Faith and Order

The Faith and Order Commission, incorporating both WCC member churches and nonmembers including the Roman Catholic Church, is the most representative theological forum in the world. Its members and Geneva staff have been preparing for a plenary meeting of the commission in July and August 2004 in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia. The theme of the plenary is “Receive one another—just as Christ has received you, for the glory of God” (Rom. 15:7). Draft texts for the meeting deal with the following “boundary issues” in contemporary dialogue toward Christian unity: ecclesiology; baptism; biblical hermeneutics; theological anthropology; ethnic identity, national identity, and the quest for unity; theological reflection on peace; and worship. The commission also works with the Vatican’s secretariat for the promotion of Christian unity in preparing resources for the Week of Prayer for Christian Unity.

h. WCC Dialogue with Pentecostals

The Joint Consultative Group between the WCC and Pentecostals held its fourth meeting in 2003 on the campus of Lee University in Cleveland, Tennessee. The group is composed of equal numbers of WCC member churches and Pentecostals from churches that are not members, from Africa, Asia, Europe, Latin America, and North America. Following two years of building trust, the group has focused on the theme of “unity” and explored this theme through Bible studies offered by the members. The group will have meetings in 2004 and 2005 before reporting to the Ninth Assembly of the WCC in February 2006.

i. World Mission and Evangelism

From 2003 through 2005, the main focus of the WCC’s program on Mission and Evangelism is to prepare for its 2005 world mission conference in Athens, Greece. The conference theme is: “Come, Holy Spirit, Heal and Reconcile: Called in Christ to be healing and reconciling communities.” In addition to preparatory activities, the program sponsors ongoing work in the areas of evangelism, mission study, mission in solidarity with the poor (particularly through the Urban Rural Mission initiative), and health and healing.

j. Diakonia and Solidarity

The WCC team for Diakonia and Solidarity contributes to the task of building ecumenical fellowship through common service. This program seeks a just sharing of the world’s resources, working in partnership with churches and church-related movements to assist communities in healing broken relationships and meeting their own needs. Creative partnerships with the marginalized and excluded are built in cooperation with member churches, regional groups, Christian confessional communions, and such specialized ecumenical organizations as Action by Churches Together (ACT International), the Ecumenical Church Loan Fund (ECLOF), and the Ecumenical Advocacy Alliance (EAA).

k. Ecumenical Women’s Solidarity Fund

The Ecumenical Women’s Solidarity Fund (EWSF) of the WCC celebrated its tenth anniversary in 2003 with a special event and exhibition at the Central Committee meeting in Geneva. The EWSF is a project fund administered by women, for women, in the countries of the former Yugoslavia. It addresses the needs of those who have suffered from conflict in this region, lending assistance regardless of ethnicity, religion, or origin. Since 1993, the EWSF has initiated and supported hundreds of local projects in aid of restoring peace, hope, and reconciliation. Its goal is to promote human dignity and community renewal.

l. The WCC and the Conflict in Iraq

During 2003, the WCC gave particular attention to enabling and communicating an international church response to the war in Iraq. An international meeting of church leaders co-convened by the WCC, held in Berlin in February 2003, appealed for an alternative to military invasion. Church leaders from several regions stated, “For us it is a spiritual obligation, grounded in God’s love for all humanity, to speak out against war in Iraq. Through this message we send a strong sign of solidarity and support to churches in Iraq, the Middle East and in the USA.” The Executive Committee of the World Council of Churches, meeting in Bossey, Switzerland, February 18–23, 2003, deplored the moves towards war on Iraq and expressed deep concern for the humanitarian situation. Churches were asked to join in a day of prayer for peace in Iraq at the beginning of Lent. In Iraq, the WCC worked through its emergency office ACT International to deliver relief supplies and to alleviate hardship in local communities.

m. Ecumenical Accompaniment Programme in Palestine and Israel (EAPPI)

Elsewhere in the region, the WCC entered the second year of its Ecumenical Accompaniment Programme in Palestine and Israel. The EAPPI monitors and reports violations of human rights and international humanitarian law, support acts of nonviolent resistance alongside local Christian and Muslim Palestinians and Israeli peace activists, offers protection through nonviolent presence, and stands in solidarity with the churches and all those struggling against the occupation. The WCC, with local churches and the Middle East Council of Churches, plans to establish a Jerusalem Ecumenical Center.

n. Inter-religious Dialogue: Christian-Muslim Relations

The WCC carried out a series of activities in the area of inter-religious relations and dialogue in 2003. Most visible of these was the visit of the Iranian president and spiritual leader, Sayyid Mohammad Khatami, to the Ecumenical Center in Geneva on December 11, 2003. The Iranian president appealed for inter-religious dialogue to be seen as an alternative to religious fundamentalism, and as a source of peace and stability. Earlier in the year, the central committee moderator, Aram I, Catholicos of Cilicia, called for “dialogue, relations and collaboration with other religions” to have high priority in the WCC’s ecumenical witness.

o. Economic Globalization: Affirming Alternatives

The first encounter between the WCC and representatives of the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund was held in February 2003 and focused on “Evolution of institutional mandates and related views/concepts of development.” The meeting allowed discussion of the historical progression of institutional mandates as well as the institutions’ different views and operational paradigms of development that are manifested in trade, financial, and other socioeconomic policies.

p. WCC and the Churches in China

The WCC’s Asia Desk organized the visit of a delegation of government religious affairs bureau officials and church leaders from the People’s Republic of China to Norway, Germany, and Switzerland. The visit took place from March 19 to April 4, 2003, as part of a study to understand how churches engage in social development work and how church-state relations are seen and function in these European countries. The delegation visited the WCC in Geneva on March 26. In April, the Asia desk organized a seminar on the “Current Situation of the Church in China” at the Ecumenical Center and also facilitated the visit to the WCC of a seven-member delegation composed of the new leadership of the China Christian Council.

q. The Ecumenical Institute at Bossey, Switzerland

The 55th annual session of the Ecumenical Institute, 2003–2004, takes as its theme “The role of religion for establishing peace in contexts of increasing violence.” In cooperation with the University of Geneva, the institute offers a master’s degree in ecumenical studies. Plans are in place for the inauguration of a PhD program in late 2004.

r. Theological Understanding of Disability: "A Church of All and for All"

The place of disabled people in the life of church and community was explored in an insightful document entitled "A Church of All and for All," prepared by the Ecumenical Disabilities Advocates Network (EDAN) and the WCC's Faith and Order Commission. Urging the inclusion of people with disabilities just as they are, the report says, "Without the full incorporation of persons who can contribute from the experience of disability, the Church falls short of the glory of God, and cannot claim to be in the image of God." The central committee affirmed the WCC's commitment to the work of EDAN.

Item 07-01

[The assembly approved Item 07-01. See p. 49.]

The General Assembly Council, on behalf of the Congregational Ministries Division and the Committee on Theological Education, recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) approve the following changes to the Organization for Mission of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and the General Assembly Council Manual of Operations:

1. That the Organization for Mission of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) be amended as follows:

a. On page 9 of the gray pages of the Manual of the General Assembly, amend the last sentence of “V. The General Assembly Council,” “E. Reporting” to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“The General Assembly Council is responsible for submitting a report to the General Assembly. The Ministries Divisions will report regularly to the council, keeping the council fully informed about the work. Recommendations from Ministries Divisions, including matters that involve an exception or a proposed change in council procedures, a major shift in program emphasis, or a major budget adjustment, require action by the council. Issues of social witness policy, ~~and~~ advocacy for racial ethnic and women’s concerns, and those related to Presbyterian theological institutions are reported to the General Assembly Council and General Assembly.”

b. On page 9 of the gray pages of the Manual of the General Assembly, amend the fourth paragraph under “V. The General Assembly Council,” “F. Elected Leadership,” “1. Organization of the General Assembly Council” as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“The General Assembly Council ensures the continuation of a committee that includes representatives of each Presbyterian theological institution, and that will review the effectiveness and stewardship of the schools on behalf of the church, will exercise the governance responsibilities of the church to the schools, and will encourage and enhance cooperation among the church’s theological schools. The committee will be provided direct access to the General Assembly Council and the General Assembly.”

c. On page 13 of the gray pages of the Manual of the General Assembly, amend the third paragraph under “VI. General Assembly Council and Its Ministries Divisions,” “B. Ministries Divisions,” “1. Congregational Ministries Division” to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“The Congregational Ministries Division accomplishes its work through particular program and resource offices organized in three areas and provides staff support for the Committee on Theological Education:”

d. On page 13 of the gray pages of the Manual of the General Assembly, strike the last paragraph under “VI. General Assembly Council and Its Ministries Divisions,” “B. Ministries Divisions,” “1. Congregational Ministries Division” and insert new text as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

~~“The Office of Theological Education is supervised by the Director of the Congregational Ministries Division. The office provides staff support for the Committee on Theological Education (COTE). The purpose of COTE, and thereby the office, is to provide an effective linkage between the General Assembly and the theological seminaries of the PC(USA). Assigned functions include: to provide a forum through which the church at large can express its concerns to the seminaries; to interpret the mission of the denomination’s theological seminaries to the whole church; to oversee interpretation and administration of the Theological Education Fund (1% Plan); to serve as a means for cooperation among the church’s theological seminaries; to implement suggestions made by the Special Committee to Study Theological Institutions as~~

~~approved by the 205th General Assembly (1993); and to work in partnership with Congregational Ministries Division/General Assembly Council for leadership in local congregations.~~

“Committee on Theological Education: The Committee on Theological Education has direct access to the General Assembly and the General Assembly Council, and their work is coordinated through the Congregational Ministries Division Office of Theological Education with staff accountability to the director of the Congregational Ministries Division. The purpose of the Committee on Theological Education is to provide an effective linkage between the General Assembly and the theological seminaries of the PC(USA) by: providing a forum through which the church-at-large can express its concerns to the seminaries; interpreting the mission of the denomination’s theological seminaries to the whole church; overseeing the interpretation and administration of the Theological Education Fund ( 1% Plan); serving as a means for cooperation among the church’s theological seminaries; implementing suggestions made by the Special Committee to Study Theological Institutions as approved by the 205th General Assembly (1993); serving as an agency of the denomination for relating to theological seminaries other than those of the PC(USA); and working in partnership with middle governing bodies and agencies of the General Assembly to provide for leadership in local congregations, the denomination, and the world.”

2. That the General Assembly Council Manual of Operations be amended as follows:

a. Amend Section “II. Constitutional Mandate and Composition of the Council” (pages 1–2) to add the “Committee on Theological Education” to the list of entities on which elected members of the General Assembly Council serve.

b. Amend the sentence at the top of page 4 in Section “VI. Ministries Divisions A. Congregational Ministries Division” (pages 3–4) to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“The Congregational Ministries Division accomplishes its work through particular program and resource offices organized in three areas and provides staff support for the Committee on Theological Education:”

Rationale

For more than a year representatives of Committee on Theological Education (COTE) have engaged in dialogue with key General Assembly staff—including John Detterick, Clifton Kirkpatrick, and Donald Campbell—related to issues of concern to the committee including the following:

- The Committee on Theological Education, as a committee bringing together institutional representatives and members elected from the church-at-large, is an effective way to maintain the connection between the theological schools and the denomination.
- A more direct relationship between COTE and the General Assembly is needed than is the case in the current structure.
- The Committee on Theological Education and the seminaries desire to be seen as partners of all of the Ministries Divisions (and of the Office of the General Assembly) rather than related only to one Ministries Division—NOT because the relationship with Congregational Ministries Division (CMD) has been ineffective but rather because the work of the theological schools is, and has the potential to be, related to the entire scope of the denomination’s work.

When the Executive Director of the GAC, the Stated Clerk, and the director of CMD met with COTE in November of 2003, agreement was reached regarding what would be proposed to the General Assembly Council and the General Assembly in response to the concerns expressed by COTE.

The proposal suggests amendments to the Organization for Mission of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and to the General Assembly Council Manual of Operations. The most substantive change proposed is that COTE would once again report directly to the General Assembly, as was the case prior to 1993 when the 205th General Assembly (1993) approved a new organizational structure for mission for the denomination. It should be noted that the 205th General Assembly (1993) also voted to approve the Report of the Special Committee to Study Theological Institutions and that report reaffirmed the purpose and assigned functions of COTE including the phrase “to report directly to the General Assembly. ...”

Much of the wording proposed for the new section regarding COTE in the GAC Manual of Operations has been taken directly from the report of the Special Committee on Theological Institutions [approved by the 198th General Assembly (1986)] that established both purpose and functions for COTE as a related body within the original PC(USA) structure for mission.

In November of 2003, the Committee on Theological Education (COTE), after consultation with John Detterick, Clifton Kirkpatrick, and Donald Campbell, voted to propose that changes be made to the Organization for Mission of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and the General Assembly Council Manual of Operations. On January 21, 2004, a proposal to make the changes to those documents was authorized on behalf of COTE by the COTE executive committee.

According to the General Assembly Council Manual of Operations (page 1), “The General Assembly Council may change those appendixes to the Manual of Operations that are within its venue following a first reading at the council’s opening plenary session and adoption at the second plenary session. The General Assembly Executive Committee shall submit a written report of changes to the appendixes to the next General Assembly through its appropriate committee.”

The following changes to Appendix 1 of the General Assembly Council Manual of Operations were approved by the General Assembly Council during its meeting of February 10–14, 2004, and are contingent upon approval of the above recommendations by the 216th General Assembly (2004):

1. Amend “Appendix 1—VII. Election Procedures, D.11., as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“One ~~seminary president~~, institutional representative currently serving on the Committee on Theological Education(COTE) serving on a rotating basis, to represent the Committee on Theological Education.”

2. Add a new section “IX. Committee on Theological Education” as follows and re-number the current Section IX. Other General Assembly Council Committees and Work Groups, as Section X: : [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“IX. Committee on Theological Education

“The Committee on Theological Education (COTE) has direct access to the General Assembly and their work is coordinated through the Congregational Ministries Division of the General Assembly Council.

“As constituted by the 198th General Assembly (1986) and reaffirmed by the 205th General Assembly (1993), the Committee on Theological Education has the following purposes: to further the cause of theological education in the church; to provide a vehicle through which the individual theological seminaries can coordinate their activities and report to the church; to provide for official communication from the church to the seminaries; to preserve the freedom of the seminaries for the benefit of the church; and to assure visible representation of theological education in the national level of the church’s organization.

“1. Committee Membership:

“This committee of the General Assembly will consist of: one representative appointed by each of the ten PC(USA) seminaries; two General Assembly Council members; eleven at-large members for special expertise and geographical diversity who are elected through the General Assembly Nominating Committee process to serve for a four-year term and eligible for reelection for an additional term; corresponding members representing seminar- ies that have renewable covenant relationships with the PC(USA); a corresponding member representing the Omaha Presbyterian Seminary Foundation; and two corresponding members representing non-Presbyterian seminaries as determined by annual vote of the Committee on Theological Education.

“2. Accountability and Lodgement:

“Staff responsible for planning and coordinating work of the committee shall be appointed by the director of the Congregational Ministries Division in consultation with the Committee on Theological Education. The staff shall be lodged within the Congregational Ministries Division and directly accountable to the director of the Congregational Ministries Division.

“3. Budget

“Funding for the work of the Committee on Theological Education, including related staffing costs and allocations to the seminaries on behalf of the denomination, shall be accounted for in the budget of the Congregational Ministries Division.

“4. Access

“The Committee on Theological Education shall have direct access to the General Assembly and the General Assembly Council. Access shall be in the form of resolutions, a yearly narrative report, comments on issues before the assembly, and other appropriate correspondence. The yearly narrative report shall be forwarded to the GAC Executive Committee for possible comment. Institutional representatives serving on the Committee on Theological Education will represent COTE on a rotating basis with corresponding member status at meetings of the General Assembly Council.

“5. Assigned Functions

“a. To develop and maintain a comprehensive overview of theological education from the perspective of the whole church.

“b. To identify, develop, and propose strategies for a systemic approach to theological education within the denomination.

“c. To serve as an advocate before the whole church for theological education and to interpret the mission of the denomination’s seminaries to the whole church.

“d. To provide a way for the church’s needs to be addressed to the denomination’s seminaries.

“g. To relate the governing bodies and agencies of the PC(USA), particularly those which have responsibilities for theology and worship, for education, for candidacy, and for leadership development for pastors and church members.

“h. To maintain appropriate relationships with those responsible for theological education in other branches of the church catholic.

“j. To receive and review reports from the theological seminaries appropriate to the work of the committee.

“k. To identify the issues, needs, and opportunities of the seminaries, individually and corporately, and, where appropriate, address these as requests and recommendations to the church.

“l. To authorize use of Theological Education Fund monies, prepare an appropriate formula for disbursements to the theological seminaries of the PC(USA), and to advocate for financial support of the seminaries.

“m. To maintain relations with educational and ecumenical associations which share common concerns with the committee.

“n. To serve as an agency of the denomination for relating to theological seminaries other than those of the PC(USA).

“o. To recommend to the General Assembly those theological seminaries which shall qualify as members of the Committee on Theological Education.”

c. Amend page 3, Section V. Office of the Executive Director, B. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“Responsibilities include ~~Mission Funding and Development~~ Stewardship and Mission Funding . . .”

Rationale

The General Assembly Council, during their February 10–14, 2004, meeting, approved the following recommendation from the Stewardship Project Team:

*“ . . . Approve the change in name from the Office of Mission Funding and Development to the Office of Stewardship and Mission Funding, and direct the necessary changes in the General Assembly Council’s Manual of Operations.”*

Item 07-02

[The assembly approved Item 07-02. See p. 49.]

The General Assembly Council recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) approve the following changes to Appendix A, Organization for Mission: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“GENERAL ASSEMBLY BUDGET DEVELOPMENT

“A. *Mission Budget Cycle

“The Mission Budget will be developed in budget cycles. Each budget cycle will consist of two consecutive calendar years, where the first year is the year following a biennial General Assembly meeting (e.g., 2004 General Assembly, 2005/2006 budget cycle). A separate budget will be developed for each year within the cycle.

“~~A. B. Basic Mission Direction~~

“1. The GAC Executive Committee will recommend to the General Assembly Council a basic mission direction for the budget year cycle. ~~This will occur at the earliest General Assembly Council meeting two years before the budget year (e.g., March of 1995 for the 1997 budget).~~

“2. The Ministries Divisions will develop mission proposals that will advance the mission direction.

“3. The General Assembly Council will recommend to the General Assembly a basic mission direction for the budget year cycle.

“B. C. The ~~Planning~~ Proposed Budget

“1. ~~At the first General Assembly Council meeting of the year prior to the budget cycle (e.g. February of 2004 for the 2005/2006 budget cycle), the Executive Committee~~ ~~The executive committee, based on previous actions of the executive committee,~~ will present to the ~~council~~ Council, for comment, a basic mission direction. ~~At the second General Assembly Council meeting of the year prior to the budget cycle (e.g. May of 2004 for the 2005/2006 budget cycle), the Executive Committee will present to the Council~~ a budget display that supports the mission direction and church-wide mission goals. ~~This will occur at the earliest General Assembly Council meeting two years before the budget year (e.g., March of 1995 for the 1997 budget).~~

“2. ~~At its second meeting of the year prior to the budget cycle (e.g., May of 2004 for the 2005/2006 budget cycle),~~ ~~The the~~ General Assembly Council will ~~propose~~ review the budget presented by the Executive Committee and recommend to the General Assembly a ~~planning~~ proposed budget for the budget year cycle that embodies the mission direction recommended earlier and describing the work to be added or deleted as part of the recommendation. ~~The Executive Committee will recommend a budget if, for any reason, the General Assembly Council does not make a recommendation.~~

“3. ~~At the General Assembly two years before the budget year~~ one year before the budget cycle (e.g., ~~1995 General Assembly for the 1997 budget year~~ 2004 General Assembly for the 2005/2006 budget cycle), the appropriate assembly committee of the General Assembly will receive the report of the mission direction and the ~~planning~~ proposed budget for review, incorporating its own decisions about programmatic activity.

“4. The appropriate assembly committee of the General Assembly will recommend a balanced budget for each year in the budget cycle, incorporating work from the ~~planning~~ proposed budget and overtures, commissioners’ resolutions, and other actions of the General Assembly, for approval as the outline of work for the budget year cycle. ~~The General Assembly Council will then make appropriate adjustments.~~

“5. The General Assembly may, of course, make independent decisions to add or subtract any element to or from proposed budgets.

“C. D. The ~~Proposed~~ Detailed Budget

“1. Detailed Budget Development

“a. Following the General Assembly and under the leadership of the Executive Committee, detailed implementation for the mission direction as approved by the General Assembly will be outlined, and work responsibility assigned.

“b. Under the management of Mission Support Services and with ~~detailed~~ specific involvement by the Ministries Divisions, a detailed budget proposal ~~will be developed~~ that encompasses the work approved by the General Assembly ~~will be developed~~ for each year in the budget cycle, reflecting both its ~~detailed~~ development by budget unit (office) and its relationship to structural assignments.

“c. ~~At its second meeting of the year prior to the budget year (e.g., 1995 for budget year 1996), the General Assembly Council will review both the detailed budget and the most up-to-date financial information, and will make any recommendations necessary to the General Assembly.~~

“2. Approval of the Detailed Budget

“a. ~~The General Assembly the year prior to the budget year, (e.g., 1995 for the budget year 1996), through its appropriate assembly committee will receive the report of the detailed proposed budget from~~

~~the General Assembly Council, along with any recommendations from the General Assembly Council related to the budget.~~

~~“b. The General Assembly will review the adequacy of the General Assembly Council’s response to the General Assembly directives in the adopted planning budget and, if acceptable, approve the budget with particular expenditures by organizational entity displaying both budget units and relatedness to the basic mission direction.~~

“At its third meeting of the year prior to each budget year (e.g., September 2005 for the 2006 budget year), the General Assembly Council will review both the detailed budget for the following year and the most up-to-date financial information. The General Assembly Council will review the adequacy of the Executive Committee’s response to the General Assembly directives in the adopted budget and, after any necessary changes, approve the detailed budget for the following year with particular expenditures by organizational entity displaying both budget units (offices) and relatedness to the basic mission direction.

~~“D. The Approved Budget~~

~~“1. Detailed Line Item Development~~

~~“Following General Assembly approval, detailed line item budgets will be developed for approval by the General Assembly Council at its final meeting under the leadership of the Executive Committee before the beginning of the budget year.~~

~~“2. Budget Monitoring~~

~~“a. The General Assembly Council will monitor the accomplishment of the mission direction and the appropriate expenditure of funds throughout the budget year.~~

~~“b. The General Assembly Council will report to the next General Assembly (e.g., 1997 for budget year 1996) on the results of the work undertaken during the budget year, including full disclosure of the financial results of the year and other information related to the financial condition of the church.~~

~~“E. Budget Monitoring~~

~~“1. The General Assembly Council will monitor the accomplishment of the mission direction and the appropriate expenditure of funds throughout the budget cycle.~~

~~“2. The General Assembly Council will report to each biennial General Assembly on the results of the work undertaken during the previous two budget years (e.g., 2006 General Assembly for budget years 2004 and 2005), including full disclosure of the financial results of each year and other information related to the financial condition of the church. These two budget years will not be within the same budget cycle.~~

~~“E. F. Roles and Responsibilities in Developing Budgets~~

~~“1. The General Assembly does the following:~~

~~“a. Determines churchwide mission goals upon which budget development will be based.~~

~~“b. Has the authority to institute and terminate programmatic emphases and activity.~~

~~“c. Upon recommendation from the General Assembly Council, approves both the General Assembly Mission Budget and Program and the Per Capita Budget.~~

~~“2. The General Assembly Council does the following:~~

“a. Implements General Assembly decisions regarding (1) mission goals and (2) programmatic activity.

“b. After appropriate consultation (see Appendix A, Churchwide Funding Plan, Item II.C.5.b.) recommends mission direction for each budget year to the General Assembly.

“c. Presents the budget to the General Assembly.

“d. Approves detailed budgets based upon General Assembly Action.

“e. Oversees programmatic activity funded through the General Assembly Mission Budget and Program and General Assembly Council related work from the Per Capita Budget.

“3. The Executive Director is responsible for the following:

“a. Manages the process for budget development.

“b. Prepares budget presentations for both the General Assembly Council and the General Assembly.

“4. Ministries Divisions are responsible for the following:

“a. Prepare descriptions of programmatic activities in appropriate form for budget consideration, reflecting the adopted mission goals.

“b. Develop detailed budgets based on budget allocations made by the General Assembly and as instructed by the General Assembly Council.

“F. G. Per Capita Budget

“The General Assembly Council and the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) jointly have responsibility for developing a per capita budget and apportionment for recommendation to the General Assembly. *The per capita budget will be prepared using timelines similar to those for the General Assembly mission budget.

“MISSION SUPPORT SERVICES

“Mission Support Services is accountable to the Executive Director and carries out the following responsibilities.

“1. To provide accounting and reporting services for

“a. the General Assembly Council, its Ministries Divisions, and certain related bodies and committees;

“b. the Office of the General Assembly;

“c. other entities as requested on a fee-for-service basis; and “d. synod, presbytery, and session finance officers, as appropriate.

“2. To perform and establish policies and procedures for the following functions of

“a. controller/financial accounting controls, general ledger maintenance, general accounting, financial reporting, accounts payable, accounts receivable, church and student loans, payroll, budgeting, fixed asset management, overseas ac-counting, central travel accounting, royalty accounting, inventory control, and project accounting;

“b. treasury/central receiving service, bank relations and services, overseas treasury service (as appropriate), foreign exchange, short-term investments, working capital/cash management, and endowment and revenue accounting;

“c. financial planning, capital planning and economic forecasting, and financial modeling;

“d. property maintenance and management including acquisitions, gifts, leases, and dispositions, purchasing and print services, and mail services;

“e. establishing standards for receiving sites throughout the church in consultation with other parts of the church;

~~“f. computer system development, technical services, operations, and standards;~~

“g.f. distribution management services, including order processing, customer services, warehousing, and shipping.

“3. To ensure that no payment of any expenditure is made in excess of the total budget approved by the General Assembly Council. Ultimately, it is the Ministries Division director’s responsibility to ensure that expenditures are within the approved budget before commitments are made.

“4. To maintain all financial records and prepare monthly reports to the General Assembly Council and the Ministries Divisions.

“5. To prepare and present the annual report of the financial position and operations of the General Assembly that will be audited by a certified public accountant and presented to the General Assembly.”

Rationale

This recommendation is in response to the following referral: 2003 Referral: Item 02-02, Recommendation J.5(c.) That the Remainder of Appendix A, of the Organization for Mission, Be Referred to the General Assembly Council and Mission Support Services to Develop an Appropriate Budget and Monitoring Process and Report Recommendations for Changes to the 216th General Assembly (2004)—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly and the General Assembly Council (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 34, 122).

The recommended amendments to Appendix A of the Organization for Mission reflect the Mission Budget Process approved by the General Assembly Council in September 2003.

The General Assembly Council also recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) approve the following change to the Organization for Mission:

On page 12, first line, Section VI. General Assembly Council and Its Ministries Divisions, insert the words “stewardship and” before “mission funding” so that it reads as follows: [Text to be added is shown as italic.]

“ . . . human resources; strategic planning; stewardship and mission funding, middle . . . ”

Rationale

This recommendation is to incorporate the action taken by the General Assembly Council during their meeting on February 10–14, 2004, to approve a name change for the Office of Mission Funding and Development to Office of Stewardship and Mission Funding into the Organization for Mission.

Item 07-03Recommendation Pertaining to Budgetary and Financial Concerns of the Church*A. Relating to Budgets for General Assembly Mission Program

[The assembly approved Item 07-03, Recommendation 1. See p. 49.]

1. *Presbyterian Mission Program—General Assembly Mission Program Receipts and Expenditures Actual Compared to Budget for 2003

The General Assembly Council recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) incorporate into the Minutes the report of the General Assembly Mission Program Receipts and Expenditures Actual Compared to Budget for 2003.

Rationale

The 202nd General Assembly (1990) adopted policy governing Mission Budgets at the General Assembly Level. That policy provides the following:

B. The General Assembly Council shall:

1. Report to each General Assembly:

a. Actual total financial resources used to support the General Assembly Mission Budget and Program and the expenditures during the most recently completed year[.] (Minutes, 1990, Part I, p. 375)

The display, which is presented below, is the report of actual revenue and expenditures for the year 2003.

[The assembly approved Item 07-03, Recommendation 2. See p. 49.]

2. *Presbyterian Mission Program—Revised General Assembly Mission Budget and Program 2004.

The General Assembly Council recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) receive the report of the 2004 General Assembly Mission Budget and Program in the total amount of $124,812,804.

Rationale

The 202nd General Assembly (1990) adopted policy governing Mission Budgets at the General Assembly level. That policy provides the following:

- B. The General Assembly Council shall ...
  - 1. report to each General Assembly ...
    - b. adjustments, if any approved by the General Assembly Council for the current budget year.
  - 2. adjust if necessary the General Assembly Mission Budget and Program as adopted by the General Assembly ... (Minutes, 1990, Part I, p. 375)

[The assembly approved Item 07-03, Recommendation 3., with amendment. See pp. 93–94.]

3. Presbyterian Mission Program—General Assembly Mission Budget and Program 2005

The General Assembly Council recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) approve the 2005 General Assembly Mission Budget and Program in the amount of $114,891,603 for revenue, and expenditures in the amount of $114,387,431, and the 2006 General Assembly Mission Budget and Program in the total amount of $115,048,841, and direct the General Assembly Council to make the adjustments necessary to incorporate into these budgets the items with financial implications that have been approved by the 216th General Assembly (2004)].

Rationale

The 202nd General Assembly (1990) adopted Policy Governing Mission Budgets at the General Assembly Level. That policy provides the following:

- B. The General Assembly Council shall:
3. Recommend to the General Assembly the General Assembly Mission Budget and Program for the next succeeding budget cycle. Displayed in the recommendation shall be:
    - a. All projected financial sources; and
    - b. Anticipated uses of financial resources in light of mission objectives. (Minutes, 1990, Part I, p. 375)

The General Assembly Council is required by the Constitution to “prepare and submit a comprehensive budget to the General Assembly” (Book of Order, G-13.0202f).

General Assembly Council 2005–2006 Mission Work Plan

General Assembly Council Purpose Statement (adapted from the Book of Order)

The General Assembly Council, led and empowered by the Triune God, provides visionary leadership in the development and implementation of the General Assembly’s mission directives, supports governing bodies in our common mission, and acts on behalf of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) on policy matters when the General Assembly is not in session.

General Assembly Council Vision Statement (adapted from the Organization for Mission)

We envision our congregations, presbyteries, synods, General Assembly, and ecumenical partners, singly and together, being so inspired and nurtured by the gospel of Jesus Christ that ministries are vibrant and inviting. We pray that all will be drawn irresistibly into ministries reflecting the love and justice of Jesus, with immediate neighborhoods and the whole of the world as arenas in which the gospel is to be proclaimed and lived.

General Assembly Council Mission Statement (adapted from the Book of Order)

The mission of the General Assembly Council, with congregations and governing bodies, is to offer the world a visible witness of Jesus Christ through (1) the proclamation of the gospel for the salvation of humankind; (2) the shelter, nurture, and spiritual fellowship of the children of God; (3) the maintenance of divine worship; (4) the preservation of the truth; (5) the promotion of social righteousness; and (6) the exhibition of the Kingdom of Heaven to the world.

General Assembly Council Core Values

The General Assembly Council is a community of believers centered in Jesus Christ and grounded in scripture, prayer, and our confessional heritage. Relying on the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Spirit, the General Assembly Council is guided by these core values:

- Celebration: Embracing our Reformed tradition through Word and Sacrament.
- Proclamation: Listening for and sharing the Good News of Jesus Christ.
- Stewardship: Giving, working, and living faithfully and responsibly.
- Nurture: Supporting and caring for each other.
- Trust: Communicating with integrity.
- Openness: Expecting to be transformed by the God of Justice and Love.
- Partnership: Living in community with the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and people of the world.
- Vision: Serving with joy, living in hope, hearing and responding to diverse voices and obeying God's will.

A. 2005–2006 Mission Work Plan Priority Goals

We are called to forge a vital partnership with one another, marked by mutual respect, openness, and daily repentance and forgiveness.

Evangelism and Witness

We are called to invite all people to faith, repentance, and the abundant life of God in Jesus Christ, to encourage congregations in joyfully sharing the Gospel, and through the power of the Holy Spirit to grow in membership and discipleship.

Justice and Compassion

We are called to address wrongs in every aspect of life and the whole of creation, intentionally working with and on behalf of poor, oppressed, and disadvantaged people as did Jesus Christ, even at risk to our corporate and personal lives.

Spirituality and Discipleship

We are called to deeper discipleship through Scripture, worship, prayer, study, stewardship, and service, and to rely on the Holy Spirit to mold our lives more and more into the likeness of Jesus Christ.

Leadership and Vocation

We are called to lead by Jesus Christ's example, to identify spiritual gifts, and to equip and support Christians of all ages for faithful and effective servant leadership in all parts of the body of Christ.

GAC Role/Identity (to be retitled)

We are called to address opportunities and concerns that clarify the role and responsibilities of the GAC in the life of the PC(USA).

B. 2005–2006 Mission Work Plan Objectives (under each goal, in priority order)

We are called to forge a vital partnership with one another, marked by mutual respect, openness, and daily repentance and forgiveness.

1. Evangelism and Witness (Goal)

We are called to invite all people to faith, repentance, and the abundant life of God in Jesus Christ, to encourage congregations in joyfully sharing the Gospel, and through the power of the Holy Spirit to grow in membership and discipleship.

By the 217th General Assembly (2006), the General Assembly Council will seek to achieve these objectives:

- a. Provide resources, models, and networks for church development and congregational transformation.
- b. Encourage and support new church development that emphasizes racial ethnic and new immigrant groups, through program support and special efforts like the Mission Initiative: Joining Hearts and Hands Campaign.
- c. Engage in witness and evangelism internationally where there is a need to share the gospel for the first time, where witness to the gospel is endangered, and where the church is dealing with dynamic growth.
- d. Create a Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) awareness campaign to make the PC(USA) more visible and attractive to youth, young adults, and racial ethnic persons.
- e. Support and facilitate networks in small church and rural ministries.
- f. Raise awareness of camps and conference centers as contexts for evangelism.

2. Justice and Compassion (Goal)

We are called to address wrongs in every aspect of life and the whole of creation, intentionally working with and on behalf of poor, oppressed, and disadvantaged people as did Jesus Christ, even at risk to our corporate and personal lives.

By the 217th General Assembly (2006), the General Assembly Council will seek to achieve these objectives:

- a. Respond to poverty, disasters, and the impact of economic globalization through compassionate ministries, community health initiatives, and support for the self-help efforts of people who live in poverty.
- b. Advocate for social, environmental, and economic justice in accordance with General Assembly policy and direction and assist other governing bodies in advocacy efforts.
- c. Advocate for peace and nonviolence in accord with General Assembly policy and direction, and aid other governing bodies in peacemaking efforts.

3. Spirituality and Discipleship (Goal)

We are called to deeper discipleship through Scripture, worship, prayer, study, stewardship, and service, and to rely on the Holy Spirit to mold our lives more and more into the likeness of Jesus Christ.

By the 217th General Assembly (2006), the General Assembly Council will seek to achieve these objectives:

- a. Create and provide to the church educational resources and service opportunities for people of all ages that undergird our work together.
- b. Promote experiences of the worldwide church that opens us to God's transforming love for more faithful lives of witness and mission.
- c. Recognize, celebrate, and practice different styles of corporate and individual Christian spirituality within the Reformed tradition.
- d. Provide stewardship resources, models, and training to encourage a spirit of generosity.

4. Leadership and Vocation (Goal)

We are called to lead by Jesus Christ's example, to identify spiritual gifts, and to equip and support people for faithful and effective servant leadership in all parts of the body of Christ.

By the 217th General Assembly (2004), the General Assembly Council will seek to achieve these objectives:

- a. Provide and promote resources for leadership development of ministers of Word and Sacrament, church officers, commissioned lay pastors, and church educators.

- b. Develop, nurture, and empower leaders for mission in international partner churches, especially those that are emerging or that are experiencing dynamic growth.
- c. Provide support for congregations and governing bodies in the identification and placement of pastoral leadership and other church staff.
- d. Encourage Christian vocation, especially among young people.
- e. Develop and maintain an internet clearinghouse for best practices and shared ministries.
- f. Collaborate with other General Assembly entities in providing assistance to congregations and governing bodies finding it difficult to call (obtain) pastoral leadership.
- g. Engage with seminaries in a two-year period of discernment and discussion about strengthening the relationship between the GAC and the PC(USA) seminaries.

5. GAC Role/Identity (Goal)

We are called to address opportunities and concerns that clarify the role and responsibilities of the GAC in the life of the PC(USA).

By the 217th General Assembly (2004), the General Assembly Council will seek to achieve these objectives:

- a. Develop and initiate a communication strategy for the positive presentation of the mission and ministries of the PC(USA).
- b. Develop and propose a conceptual framework for a new mission funding system for the PC(USA).
- c. Evaluate, develop, and propose a structure of the GAC (elected and national staff) that will strengthen connectedness with presbyteries and synods.
- d. Evaluate and assess the 2005–2006 Mission Work Plan, revise it as needed for the 2007–2008 plan, and plan and initiate a long-range planning process for the GAC.

C. 2005–2006 Mission Work Plan Action Steps [to Be Developed After the 216th General Assembly (2004)]

Definitions

Role/Purpose Statement: The role and purpose statement defines the purpose of the General Assembly Council, its responsibilities, and the role it plays in the life of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

Vision Statement: A vision statement describes the organization and its impact in the future. A vision is guided by dreams, not constraints—it is what an organization hopes will happen.

Mission Statement: A mission statement is the expression of the need the organization meets, and a brief summary of what the organization does to meet that need.

Core Values: The core values define the essential and enduring character of a particular organization. Core values are the glue that hold an organization together. They are principles, not practices—beliefs, not ministries—and they are few in number.

Goals: Goals state in broad terms the principal program, development, administrative, or other major accomplishments the organization hopes to achieve to realize its vision and fulfill its mission.

Objectives: Objectives carry out the goals and provide more details, answering the “who will do what by when.” Objectives should be SMART: specific, measurable, attainable, results-oriented, time-determined.

Action Steps: Action steps outline the exact activities necessary to achieve the goal and objectives by answering what, who, how, when, and the resources needed.

Mission: God's saving and reconciling work in the world for which the church is called into being.

Ministries: Modes of presence, service, or work that provide nurture, care, and worship in the name of Christ.

Programs: Named sets of activities and resources designed to further stated goals and objectives authorized by the General Assembly.

Restricted Funds: Restricted funds that are to be used for specific purposes and programs, generally at the direction and wish of the donor.

Unrestricted Funds: Unrestricted funds do not have restrictions on their use and are given to support the mission of the whole church.

Item 07-04

[The assembly approved Item 07-04. See p. 50.]

Recommendation Pertaining to Budgetary and Financial Concerns of the Church

Relating to Reserved or Committed Funds

1. Unrestricted and Committed Funds

The General Assembly Council recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) receive the report of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation regarding unrestricted and committed funds as of December 31, 2003.

Rationale

The report of the unrestricted funds is divided between uncommitted and committed funds. The following display indicates those funds as well as the activity of those funds and the status of the total reserves as of closing December 31, 2003. The 202nd General Assembly (1990) adopted the following policy:

A. Presbyterian Mission Program Fund

1. A fund composed of all unrestricted and uncommitted receipts and assets intended for the support of the General Assembly mission program.

2. Sources to maintain this fund shall include all unified revenue available for the General Assembly Mission Program, including but not limited to:

- a. unified income including receipts from congregations, presbyteries, or individuals;
- b. unrestricted gifts, legacies, bequests;
- c. unrestricted investment income;
- d. gift annuity excess reserves;
- e. such nonrecurring income as the General Assembly Council shall direct by general or specific policy statement; and
- f. under expenditure of the unified portion of the General Assembly Mission Budget.

3. The Uncommitted Funds portion of the Presbyterian Mission Program Fund at year end must be equal to at least 30% of the Unified portion and direct mission support of the General Assembly Mission Budget, which minimum provides for:

- a. Cash flow needed for mission purposes;
- b. Guarantee of the current unrestricted budget. (Minutes, 1990, Part I, p. 377)

2. *Report of Contingent Liabilities, December 31, 2003

The General Assembly Council recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) incorporate into its Minutes the following list of contingent liabilities:

a. Contingent liabilities that have been guaranteed by the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) for educational institutions as of December 31, 2003, $161,561 mortgage for Barber Scotia College.

b. Reserve funds are required to cover self-insurance for General Assembly-owned property. A separate Self-Insurance Fund has been established, the balance of which was $5,554,786 as of December 31, 2003.

Rationale

The 190th General Assembly (1978) of the United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America (UPCUSA) received from the General Assembly Mission Council a financial plan for supporting minority education during 1977–79 and a status report of minority education institutions (Minutes, UPCUSA, 1978, Part I, pp. 189–90).

Item 07-05

[The assembly approved Item 07-05. See p. 50.]

Recommendation Pertaining to Budgetary and Financial Concerns of the Church

Relating to Support for General Assembly Mission

1. *John C. Lord and Edmund P. Dwight Funds

The General Assembly Council recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) allocate the annual income realized in 2003 from the John C. Lord and Edmund P. Dwight Funds in support of the budget for the general mission work of the General Assembly.

Rationale

Current practice is to recommend to each General Assembly the allocation of annual income from these two funds in light of wording in the donors' wills, which requires this annual process.

Portion of the will of Edmund P. Dwight (May 23, 1903):

I will and bequeath to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church of America, to be used for the establishment of the Christian Religion, that the light of the gospel may be made to join more perfectly ...

Portion of the will of John C. Lord (January 2, 1873):

...to the Trustees of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A., for religious and charitable uses, to be called the John C. Lord Fund, the annual interest of which is to be disposed of and distributed by the said General Assembly at each annual meeting for the furtherance of the Gospel of our Blessed Saviour, at home or abroad, as the Assembly may deem best. ...

The applicable provisions of the two wills facilitate the annual income realized from these funds to be used in the General Assembly's General Mission Budget.

It is projected that the income from these funds in 2004 is approximately $33,905.

2. *Special Offerings 2003

The General Assembly Council recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) incorporate into its Minutes the following summary of receipts from Special Offerings for the year 2003.

Rationale

Special offerings enable an important part of the General Assembly Mission Program. In 2003, income from these offerings totaled approximately 14.4 percent of total income for the mission program of the church and 27.88 percent of the mission gifts from congregations. All offerings were down or flat in 2003 due to the economy, except Peacemaking, which is up by 10.38 percent.

[The assembly approved Item 07-06. See p. 50.]

Report of the Special Offerings Review Task Force

The General Assembly Council, on behalf of the Special Offerings Review Task Force, recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) approve the following recommendations:

1. Approve the following pattern for churchwide special offerings for 2006–2009:

a. Christmas Joy Offering: interpreted and received during the Advent season in gratitude for God's gift of Jesus Christ. Causes:

(1) Assistance programs to meet identified and emerging needs for professional church workers and spouses through the Board of Pensions, 50 percent;

(2) Racial ethnic education through the appropriate office of the National Ministries Division, 50 percent.

b. One Great Hour of Sharing Offering, interpreted and received during Lent and on Easter Sunday in response to Christ's call to us to feed the hungry, house the homeless, minister to the suffering, and empower the poor and oppressed. Causes administered through the Worldwide Ministries Division. Causes:

(1) Presbyterian Disaster Assistance, 32 percent (previous 36 percent);

(2) Presbyterian Hunger Program, 36 percent (previous 32 percent);

(3) Self-Development of People, 32 percent.

Rationale

Over the last few years, responsibility for ministries of homelessness and affordable housing shifted from Presbyterian Disaster Assistance to the Presbyterian Hunger Program. Therefore, the 4 percent addressing these ministries will be moved from Presbyterian Disaster Assistance to the Presbyterian Hunger Program, ratifying actual practice.

c. Pentecost Offering, interpreted and received in relation to Pentecost Sunday in support of ministry with youth and young adults and in response to the needs of children-at-risk. Causes:

(1) General Assembly Council Youth and Young Adult Ministries, 50 percent. The General Assembly Council's 50 percent for Youth and Young Adult Ministries will be divided as follows:

(a) Congregational Ministries Division, 25 percent (for youth & young adult ministries);

(b) National Ministries Division, 12.5 percent (for volunteers in shared ministry);

(c) Worldwide Ministries Division, 12.5 percent (for volunteers in shared ministry).

(2) Children at Risk Programs, 50 percent. The 50 percent that supports Children at Risk will be divided as follows:

(a) 40 percent will be retained locally for Children-at-Risk ministries. Distribution of these funds may be negotiated with middle governing bodies. Congregations are encouraged to consider regional, national, and international concerns supported by the PC(USA), as well as local needs when they utilize these resources.

(b) General Assembly Council's Children-at-Risk programs, 10 percent.

d. Peacemaking Offering, interpreted and received in relation to World Communion Sunday, recognizing the call to bring Christ's peace to all creation. Causes:

Holistic peacemaking programs sensitive to the restoration of God's creation and including peacemaking in individuals, families, congregations, communities, the international arena, and the environment through:

- (1) Congregations, 25 percent;
- (2) Synods and Presbyteries, 25 percent;
- (3) General Assembly Council, Congregational Ministries Division, 50 percent.

2. Amend the Criteria for Participation in Special Offerings as follows: (See Appendix G for details.) [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

a. Paragraph l: "On a ~~six~~ four-year cycle, the General Assembly Council (GAC) will provide for review and evaluation of the causes supported by churchwide special offerings and will consider new causes in light of established criteria and current mission priorities. Between reviews, if an offering lacks support, the GAC will provide a process for review."

Rationale

Changing the cycle from six to four years gives the General Assembly greater flexibility and control.

b. Paragraph m: Remove the phrase "Beginning in 2001." This section shall read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

"m. It is important for the continuity of operations that some programs funded by churchwide special offerings maintain operating reserves. However, it is not the purpose of special offerings to develop or augment reserves. ~~Beginning in 2001,~~ Each General Assembly will assign one of its committee to review the appropriateness of reserves accumulated from special offerings."

c. Paragraph n: Strike the current text and insert new text as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

"n. ~~Beginning in 2001, the agencies receiving churchwide special offering funds will report annually the uses of these funds to the General Assembly. The agencies receiving churchwide special offering funds will prepare an annual report concerning the receipt and distribution of those Special Offering funds for review by the General Assembly. This report will be made available to churches and other governing bodies.~~"

Rationale

This clarifies the public accountability of Special Offering recipients.

d. Paragraph o: Strike the text of "o." and re-letter current "p." as "o." as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

~~"o. Special offerings will not be used to supplement funding for programs included in an on-going basic mission support.~~

"~~p.~~ o. Special offerings will not be used to create funding for a cause when a similar program already exists."

Rationale

Inconsistent with criterion b.

3. Direct the Audit Committee of the General Assembly Council to evaluate the recipients of Special Offering funds for adherence to the criteria for participation in Special Offerings. This audit is to be available for review by the Special Offering Review Task Force.

Rationale

This is needed for accountability and assistance for review.

4. Continue development of technology to receive Special Offerings including:

- a. communicating the availability of electronic methods of giving;
- b. verifying sufficient documentation of such gifts as required by the IRS;
- c. tracking gifts for congregational and presbytery affiliation.

5. Recommend against the implementation of a fifth special offering as proposed by Overture 03-5 and Overture 03-11. [For text of these overtures, see Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 399–400.]

Rationale

Data from the Presbyterian Panel and focus groups indicate a lack of support for an additional special offering or for a special offering dedicated to national and international mission. In addition, a new special offering for national and international mission would adversely affect the Mission Initiative: Joining Hearts and Hands. An aim of Mission Initiative: Joining Hearts and Hands is to create a permanent funds development capability for national and international mission.

6. Concur with the Mission Work Plan that the General Assembly Council develops and propose a conceptual framework for a new Mission Funding Strategy for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

Rationale

The Special Offering Review Task Force recognizes that the changes that have taken place in mission giving and funding make the present system unable to meet current and future mission needs. For example, several worthy requests were directed to the Special Offering Review Task Force for which no appropriate funding was available through Special Offerings. This calls for a more comprehensive review of mission funding than is in the charge of any one existing task force or committee.

7. Approve the following recommendations regarding the Christmas Joy Offering:

a. Grant authority to the Board of Pensions to adjust distribution of Christmas Joy Offering funds in order to address emerging needs in its assistance programs between quadrennial reviews.

Rationale

Due to the rapidly changing needs of its assistance program recipients, the Board of Pensions needs greater flexibility in shifting Christmas Joy Offering receipts to fund emerging needs as they are identified. Clearer authority to do so will speed the Board of Pension's response to shifting needs by eliminating lengthy waits for quadrennial General Assembly review.

b. Direct National Ministries Division to reevaluate its limitation of Christmas Joy Offering monies to specific racial ethnic schools and colleges.

Rationale

Presbyterians have historically supported specific racial ethnic schools and colleges. We ask the National Ministries Division to consider whether there are additional ways the modern church might use Christmas Joy Offering offerings to effectively identify, educate, and train racial ethnic students for future leadership.

c. Refer to National Ministries Division a request from Bloomfield College to be considered as a possible recipient of Christmas Joy Offering funds.

Rationale

Decisions regarding individual Christmas Joy Offering recipients are beyond the authority of this task force and are rightly made within the church's standing administrative structure. No recommendation concerning the merit of their request is implied by this referral.

Report and Rationale for All Recommendations

I. History

These recommendations and report are a final response to the following referrals:

- 2003 Referral: Item 06-03. Overture 03-05. On Re-establishing a Witness Season Including a Witness Offering—From the Presbytery of Coastal Carolina (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 43, 399).
- 2003 Referral: Item 06-04. Overture 03-11. On Instituting a New Annual Offering for the Support of Full-time Mission Personnel—From the Presbytery of San Gabriel (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 43, 399–400).

A. Charge and Task

Actions of the 215th General Assembly (2003) include:

The 215th (2003) General Assembly approved the formation of a Special Offerings Review Task Force. Appointed by the General Assembly Council, this task force was charged with reviewing the four churchwide special offerings—Christmas Joy Offering (CJO), One Great Hour of Sharing (OGHS), Pentecost, and Peacemaking. It examined the existing criteria and patterns for special offerings, and now makes recommendations for modifications to them if indicated. The 215th General Assembly (2003) also requested that the task force consider the merits of a Witness offering as proposed by Overture 03-05 (Coastal Carolina) and Overture 03-11 (San Gabriel). The last special offerings review was completed in 2000, and the next scheduled review was slated for 2006. However, because of moving to a biennial assembly schedule and the two Witness offering overtures, the review group was convened.

The General Assembly Council offered the following comment to the 215th General Assembly (2003) on Overtures 03-05 and 03-11:

Comment on Overture 03-05 [and 03-011]—From the General Assembly Council.

The General Assembly Council welcomes the interest of the Presbytery of Coastal Carolina and the Presbytery of San Gabriel in instituting a new offering to support mission. The General Assembly Council suggests that the overtures be answered by convening the Special Offerings Review Task Force, to report back to the 216th General Assembly (2004). This group would consider the merits of instituting a fifth special offering.

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has four special giving opportunities each year: [Christmas] Joy [Offering], One Great Hour of Sharing, Pentecost, and Peacemaking offerings. From time to time, a task force is convened to review the special offerings and how they are used. This group makes recommendations about any needed changes to the offerings, and considers whether or not new special offerings are to be implemented. The Special Offerings Review Task Force currently is scheduled to complete a review in time for a report to the 217th General Assembly (2006). However, because of Overtures 03-05 and 03-11, and because of the move to biennial assemblies, the recommendation is to begin the Special Offerings Task during 2003, so that it can report to the 216th General Assembly (2004).

This group would consider the merits of instituting a new offering for support of mission work, and make a recommendation. The group would also review the existing special offerings, and make recommendations for any needed changes; the changes would not be implemented until the 217th General Assembly (2006). (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 399 and 400)

The 215th General Assembly (2003) took the following actions on the two overtures and the formation of the Special Offerings Review Task Force:

$B. Item 06-04. Overture 03-11. On Instituting a New Annual Offering For the Support of Full-time Mission Personnel—From the Presbytery of San Gabriel. +GAC

That the recommendation is referred, with comment, to the Special Offerings Review Task Force, for report back to the 216th General Assembly (2004).

Comment: That the 215th General Assembly (2003) endorses the offering and encourages the task force to implement the recommendations as soon as possible. (Minutes, 2003, Part I, p. 43)

$A. Item 06-03. Overture 03-5. On Re-establishing a Witness Season Including a Witness Offering—From the Presbytery of Coastal Carolina. +GAC

That the recommendation is referred, with comment, to the Special Offerings Review Task Force, for report back to the 216th General Assembly (2004).

Comment: That the 215th General Assembly (2003) endorses the offering and encourages the task force to implement the recommendation as soon as possible. (Ibid.)

The Special Offerings Review Task Force made its report to the General Assembly Council in February 2004.

B. Membership of the Special Offerings Review Task Force

The Reverend Karl Travis, chair, Grosse Ile, Mich.; Elder Robert Forsythe, Wadsworth, Ohio; the Reverend Gregg Neel, Indianapolis, Ind., and GAC member; Elder Virginia Robertson, Portland, Oreg.; the Reverend Jack Rogers, Pasadena, Calif., and GAC member; the Reverend Allison Seed, Independence, Mo., and GAC member; Elder Lois Stroman, Dublin, Ga.; the Reverend David VanArsdale, Kalamazoo, Mich., and GAC member at-large. Staff support was provided by Alan Krome (Mission Education and Promotion), Margaret Hall Boone (Mission Education and Promotion), Keith Wulff (Research Services), Rebecca Farnham (Research Services), and Kathy Lueckert (GAC Executive Director's Office).

C. Process

In developing recommendations for the special offerings of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) for years 2006–2009, the Special Offerings Review Task Force (SORTF) completed the following process:

- Approached the task with intentional time for prayer and Bible study, seeking to discern God's will.
- Held face-to-face meetings in June 2003 (Chicago), October 2003 (Louisville), and January 2004 (Phoenix), and conducted work through electronic means.
- Publicized the work of the SORTF in the Presbyterian News.
- Held a discussion group at the Presbyterian Women Churchwide Gathering in July in Louisville, Kentucky.
- Invited the input of presbyteries and Presbyterians through an e-mail address.
- Conducted six focus groups in three locations to assess interest in adding a new offering and reviewed results with Research Services' staff.
- Utilized the Presbyterian Panel to assess interest in adding a new offering and reviewed results with Research Services staff.
- Held a discussion group at the 7% pastors meeting in New Orleans, Louisiana.

- Met with the steering committee of Mission Initiative: Joining Hearts and Hands about the proposed Witness Offering and its impact on the Mission Initiative campaign in August 2003.
- Reviewed reports and met with the staff representing programs currently funded by special offerings in October 2003.
- Met with Jan Opdyke, director, Mission Initiative: Joining Hearts and Hands at the January 2004 meeting.
- Developed and presented the report and recommendations to the General Assembly Council Executive Committee and to the General Assembly Council in February 2004.

II. The Background of Special Offerings

Please see the attached chart (Appendix A) that visually describes the history of the special offerings.

III. The Role of Special Offerings

Why do we have special offerings? Are they to fund particular mission priorities, or to encourage discipleship training and understanding? Are they to raise money, or raise consciousness? The answer is all of these as together we bear witness together to the one true God made known to us in Jesus of Nazareth. Yet special offerings are about more than raising money. Special offerings should also sensitize the church to the world's special needs. Special offerings offer everyone a chance to participate, and to learn. In addition, special offerings help us identify with the larger church, whether at the presbytery, synod, denominational, or ecumenical level.

Trends in Special Offering Giving

Please review the following charts of giving trends:

For clearer versions of these charts, see Appendices E and F.

- Shared and directed mission support are down slightly over the seven-year period.
- Giving to each of the Special Offerings has been up over the seven-year period showing a gain of 13.7 percent in receipts.
- Extra Commitment Opportunities were up 43.8 percent over the seven-year period.
- The Pentecost Offering increased 40.2 percent during the first four years of its existence.

These figures suggest several trends:

- Presbyterian giving is moving from general giving to specific needs giving.
- Designated giving is significantly preferred over undesignated general giving.
- Congregations respond positively to special offerings when a “congregational share” is made available.

IV. Issues Relating to Special Offerings

A. Overtures Requesting a New Special Offering

This task force considered two overtures referred to it by the 215th General Assembly (2003). These overtures want to create a new offering to supplement funding for international and national mission. We do not recommend the creation of a special offering for these purposes.

- Data from the Presbyterian Panel and focus groups indicate a lack of support for an additional special offering (see Appendices B, C, and D).
- Data from the Presbyterian Panel and focus groups indicate a lack of support for a special offering dedicated to national and international mission (See appendices B, C, and D).

- A new special offering for national and international mission would adversely affect Mission Initiative: Joining Hearts and Hands. An aim of Mission Initiative: Joining Hearts and Hands is to create an ongoing funds development capability for national and international mission.

B. Requests Regarding the Christmas Joy Offering (CJO)

The Board of Pensions (BOP) requested greater latitude in deciding how to allocate its portion of the offering within the existing guidelines. We recommend approval of this request, and that the BOP keep distinct those programs funded by Christmas Joy Offering gifts and those programs funded by pension dues. We also recommend that the BOP not use Christmas Joy Offering funds for a particular purpose until promotional resources have explained that offering funds will be used for that purpose.

A second issue related to the racial ethnic education portion of the offering was prompted by two developments. First was the closing of Mary Holmes College, one of the eight schools and colleges receiving support from the offering. The second was a request by Bloomfield College in New Jersey to become a recipient. The Special Offering Review Task Force did not affirm the request of Bloomfield College but referred it to the National Ministries Division, which has the authority to make such decisions. These developments have prompted another question, however, about the historical and exclusive link between racial ethnic education and specific educational institutions.

The Special Offerings Review Task Force observed the incoherence of the present practices of funding for the mission of the whole church.

Appendix G

Criteria for Participation in Special Offerings (Revisions noted by underlined and strike-out type)

- a. Churchwide special offerings will provide valuable mission interpretation opportunities.
- b. Churchwide special offerings will enable the church to meet traditional and ongoing needs in relationship to the total mission priorities of the church, always proclaiming the name of Jesus.
- c. Causes included in special offering will have demonstrated potential for churchwide donor support.
- d. Causes included in a special offering will specifically define the needs to be met; plans will be provided for funds' allocation, program implementation, and accountability.
- e. Causes grouped within the same churchwide special offering will have a focused mission purpose.
- f. Special offering promotions within the comprehensive mission funding strategy will occur in a central promotion office rather than within programmatic entities.
- g. Costs of promoting and receiving each churchwide special offering will be paid from receipts of the offering. After deducting each offering's costs from total receipts, restricted and unrestricted, of that offering, all receipts will then be considered permanently restricted, and will be used only for the purposes for which they were given. Each offering's costs will be determined by the GAC through its regular budget process.
- h. Start up costs for new or significantly revised special offerings will be advanced from existing GAC funds and amortized over the succeeding five years.
- i. Promotion materials for a special offering will relate to the liturgical season in which the offering is received.
- j. Any change in the pattern of distribution of a special offering will require an eighteen-month time period before become effective to allow adequate time for development and distribution of promotion materials.
- k. There will be no more than four churchwide special offerings in any calendar year. The General Assembly will identify times for the promotion and receipt of offerings.
- l. On a ~~six-year~~ four-year cycle, the General Assembly will provide for review and evaluation of the causes supported by churchwide special offerings and will consider new causes in light of established criteria and current mission priorities. Between reviews, if an offering lacks support, the GAC will provide a process for review.
- m. It is important for the continuity of operations that some programs funded by churchwide special offerings maintain operating reserves. However, it is not the purpose of special offerings to develop or augment reserves. ~~Beginning in 2001, each~~ Each General Assembly will assign one of its committee to review the appropriateness of reserves accumulated from special offerings.
- n. ~~Beginning in 2001, the agencies receiving churchwide special offering funds will report annually the uses of those funds to the General Assembly. The agencies receiving churchwide special offering funds will prepare an annual report concerning the receipt and distribution of those Special Offering funds for review by the General Assembly. This report will be made available to churches and other governing bodies.~~
- ~~o. Special offerings will not be used to supplement funding for programs included in on-going basic mission support.~~
- ~~p. Special offerings will not be used to create funding for a cause when a similar program already exists.~~

Item 07-07

[The assembly approved Item 07-07 with comment. See p. 53.]

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) and the General Assembly Council (GAC) recommend that the 216th General Assembly (2004) approve the following:

1. Affirm the primacy of our governing bodies in our Presbyterian polity and urge every governing body to celebrate its independence as well as acknowledge its interdependence on all the other governing bodies in the church.
2. Urge every governing body (session through General Assembly) to use the very best of modern electronic and print media in communication with constituents, while at the same time taking special steps for face-to-face communication with persons at other governing body levels.
3. Urge governing bodies to make efforts to strengthen the common mission they have with other governing bodies.
4. Urge the entire church to work to overcome the “disconnects” at every governing body level that result in “I am no part of you” attitudes if left alone.
5. Urge every governing body to find ways to make our polity and Presbyterian processes more flexible while maintaining the values and norms that hold us together as Presbyterians.
6. Urge presbyteries, synods, and General Assembly entities to use the non-assembly biennial years for gatherings to celebrate mission and build community, especially with other governing bodies.
7. Urge presbyteries and synods to find ways to invite staff and elected leaders of all the General Assembly entities to be present around the church to build up the personal relationships with leaders of our presbyteries and synods.
8. Urge presbyteries to meet with their neighboring presbyteries to explore common mission and mutual support of one another.
9. Urge presbyteries and synods to continue processes similar to these consultations in order to build trust, a sense of community, and a common mission among our governing bodies, beginning with the session level.

Rationale

These recommendations are in response to the following referral: 2001 Referral:33.002. Recommendation Instructing the COGA and GAC to Continue the Consultation Process and Bring Progress Reports to the 214th General Assembly (2002), and the 215th General Assembly (2003), and a Final Report to the 216th General Assembly (2004) on the Functions of the Governing Body System—From the Joint Report of the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly and the General Assembly Council (Minutes, 2001, Part I, p. 363).

A. Introduction

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly and the General Assembly Council request that the 216th General Assembly (2004) receive this report on the consultations with synods and presbyteries and approve its recommendations. In making this report to the assembly, the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly and the General Assembly Council want to commend highly the Stated Clerk, the Executive Director of the General Assembly Council, and the coordinator of Governing Body Relations for leading in fulfilling the mandate of a former assembly through this arduous consultation process that has resulted in a significant strengthening of relationships and building community with our middle governing bodies. Moreover, we commend them for the example they have set for the whole church by asking questions that served to strengthen relationships and build community when governing body relationships are at times considerably strained.

B. History

The 208th General Assembly (1996) approved that the Moderator of the 208th General Assembly (1996) appoint a nine-person Committee on Middle Governing Body Relationships charged to: (1) examine the relationships between and among the national office, synods, and presbyteries, (2) develop and review studies of middle governing bodies for effectiveness, and (3) seek new paradigms for prioritizing, evaluating, visioning, resourcing, and partnering.

When the Committee on Middle Governing Bodies reported to the 211th General Assembly (1999), one of its recommendations was that the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly and the General Assembly Council be instructed to hold a series of consultations with the synods and presbyteries on the nature of governing body relationships and to test the following guiding principles (Minutes, 1999, Part I, p. 524):

1. The primary organizational focus of the life and work of the PC(USA) is on developing, encouraging, equipping, and resourcing its congregations and their leaders as the Living Body of Jesus Christ.
2. The primary focus of the life and work of presbyteries is to enhance the effectiveness of congregations.
3. It is essential that simplified, flexible, and more responsive ways be found for the PC(USA) to do its work as it moves into a new millennium in a rapidly changing environment.
4. All governing bodies will be engaged in partnerships for mutual mission and ministry opportunities.
5. No Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) governing body is an island; indeed, none can serve its historic role apart from the others.

A second part of that mandate requested that the consultations consider the advisability of moving to a three governing body level polity. From January 2000 through November 2003, the Stated Clerk and the Executive Director of the General Assembly Council traveled throughout the church, holding consultations with 15 of the 16 synods and 100 presbyteries. In each region, elected personnel from the General Assembly entities were invited to attend, and at least one elected person was present in every consultation. Progress reports were presented to the 213th General Assembly (2001) and the 214th General Assembly (2002). The 215th General Assembly (2003) received a recommendation, based upon responses received in the consultations, that we maintain our four-level governing body polity, thus keeping synods. The 215th General Assembly (2003) approved that recommendation. This report presents the learnings from the consultations and is the final report on the referral from the 211th General Assembly (1999).

C. The Process

At the start of the consultations, the governing bodies were asked to invite us to their synod or presbytery. It was desirable to find a setting and a schedule that fit best for that governing body. The consultations began in 2000 with the synods. The setting of most of the synod consultations was a regular meeting of the synod. Thus, the synod commissioners were the participants on behalf of the synod.

For the presbyteries the settings varied considerably. Some were regular meetings of the presbytery; others were meetings with the presbytery council. In several places the presbyteries clustered together (with two or three presbyteries meeting together) in called meetings of the presbytery. In one case, five presbyteries met together in a “delegated” meeting with the same number of representatives from each of the five presbyteries. In some cases, the presbytery issued a call for “you all come” without calling a special meeting of the presbytery. The usual format included opening worship on the theme, “The New Testament Church in the 21st Century.” Worship was followed by small group and plenary discussion based on four questions:

1. Where is God leading us in the presbytery (or synod in the synod meetings)?
2. What gifts do we have to share with the wider church?
3. What do we need from the wider church to go where God is leading us?
4. What can we do to build trust and a sense of community with other governing bodies?

The Stated Clerk of the General Assembly and the Executive Director of the General Assembly Council presided at the meetings and interacted with the data that surfaced in the small groups. A recorder was appointed to keep notes from each of the small groups. The data from all of these consultations has been compiled and forms the basis of this report. This data was reported back to the governing body in each instance, for subsequent use by that synod or presbytery.

D. General Reflections

The consultations were very positive and successful. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has more health and vitality than is widely recognized. The consultations did not set out to test the general health of the PC(USA), but one cannot come away from the consultations without lifting this up as one of the most important findings. The PC(USA), throughout the church, has vital congregations and mission programs, supported by strong presbyteries. Moreover, a strong passion for mission is present in every corner of the church.

A second major finding, as important as the first, is that relationships, of both individual Presbyterians and governing bodies, are central to the health of our church. Frequently, relationships of our governing bodies are strained. This strain was described in several places as a “disconnect” of one governing body level from all the others. Leaders everywhere are not pleased with this “disconnect” and want to find ways to eliminate it. Every consultation, in one way or another, emphasized the importance of good communication in order to build relationships. The consultations themselves helped a bit in this regard by giving ministers and key lay leaders an opportunity to speak face-to-face with the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly and the Executive Director of the General Assembly Council. Presbyterians everywhere believe that we need to be using the very best of electronic and print communications to provide “real time” exchange of information. At the same time, the consultations stressed that it is equally important to build personal relationships through face-to-face contact.

Governing body connections are important in our church. The presbyteries, because of the fact that they are closest to our sessions and congregations, play a central role. Our presbyteries throughout the church strive diligently to support their congregations and their leaders. The presbyteries need ongoing support from the synods and the General Assembly to aid in this important task. In several parts of the church, synods are a lot more important in this effort than many believed they were when the consultations began.

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) believes that mission is above all else. In every governing body consultation there was strong interest in holding up and strengthening our common mission. An important corollary to this finding is that the strongest governing body relationships seem to be those built upon a shared common mission. Churchwide, several mission themes emerged with greatest urgency:

- evangelism (spread the Good News),
- racial ethnic new church development,
- new church development and redevelopment of existing churches,
- multicultural mission,
- strengthening congregations and their leaders,
- developing a new generation of leaders to lead our congregations,
- mission partnerships of all kinds, both in this country and internationally.

Over and over again, the leaders of our church affirmed our Presbyterian polity, where ministers and elders meet in governing bodies, connected together with other levels of the church, to discern Christ’s mission for our time. These same leaders, throughout the consultations, affirmed a strong desire for more flexibility in our polity so that it facilitates mission rather than becoming regulatory processes that impedes mission.

Throughout the church, Presbyterians seem eager to give major energy toward our common mission rather than focusing on our divisions and conflicts.

Item 07-08

Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) Task Force to Examine GA Entities: Report on Creating a Climate for Change Within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) do the following:

[The assembly approved Item 07-08, Recommendation 1. See p. 51.]

1. Approve the following affirmation:

“God hallows daily life, and daily life provides opportunity for holy living. As Christians honor and serve God in daily life, they worship God. For Christians, work and worship cannot be separated” (Book of Order, W-5.6003).

Rationale

Achieving the vision of fully incorporating all of God’s people in all facets and at all levels of the PC(USA) and its corporate agencies requires deep systemic change. This is an arduous task that requires more than policy statements and goals for numerical representation. It requires a strong organizational commitment with adequate funding and staffing to advise and assist the General Assembly executive staff in providing leadership for change. We have a duty to implement the scriptural message that “faith without works is ... dead” (Jas. 2:26).

[The assembly approved Item 07-08, Recommendation 2. See p. 51.]

2. Approve the “Report on Creating A Climate for Change Within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

3. Approve the following recommendations:

[The assembly referred Item 07-08, Recommendation 3.a., back to the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns. See p. 51.]

a. Encourage all PC(USA) corporate agencies to discontinue utilization of the term “racial ethnic” and replace such reference with “emerging majorities”—a term known by and comparably used by other organizations outside of PC(USA) and that more appropriately describes persons of color within PC(USA) and North America.

Rationale

According to the 2000 U.S. Census, emerging majorities, as a percentage of the United States population, have more than doubled, to 31 percent, since 1960. And, the growth of non-Europeans is expected to continue at an accelerated rate. In just the last twenty years (1980–2000), while non-Hispanic whites in the U.S. population grew about 8 percent, the growth rates of other groups is far larger. During the same period (1980–2000), the African American population grew by nearly 70 percent, the Latino population by 142 percent, and the Asian American population by 182 percent. In absolute numbers, the United States had more than 35 million more people of color in 2000 than it did in 1980.<sup>1</sup>

Within the larger society, references to “emerging majorities” are becoming more prominent. A few examples are offered below.

Previously categorized as “minority and/or ethnic markets,” the rapid and continuous population growth necessitates a new, culturally sensitive categorization of ethnic markets. Many multicultural experts have replaced the term “minorities” with the term “emerging majorities.”<sup>2</sup>

Did you know that in just 30 years from now, 40 percent of Americans will belong to ethnic and cultural groups that are not predominantly European in origin? People who were once considered to be minorities will become emerging majorities.<sup>3</sup>

There are still companies that are not adjusting to the country’s multicultural growth, reports The Atlanta Journal-Constitution. In Atlanta, mainstream advertising and marketing agencies are lacking practices geared toward multiple cultures and many staffs have few emerging majority employees. Companies say they lack employees of color because there aren’t enough people of color studying these fields at the college level, because major corporations are aggressively recruiting potential employees at higher salaries than they can afford, and because other potential hires are turning to minority-owned agencies. Others contend that the lack of emerging majorities at senior levels deters job applicants.<sup>4</sup>

Then there is the other side of the equation. “We are also looking to increase the number of minority nurses.” Malone<sup>5</sup> said. “Most groups addressing managed care reform don’t talk about changing the provider group.” To accomplish this goal, the ANA<sup>6</sup> wants greater effort placed on developing more links between academic institutions and health care settings to bolster recruitment, retention, and promotion of registered nurses from “emerging majorities.”<sup>7</sup>

“Training of the Emerging Majority for the Elimination of Health Disparities: Curricular Issues in the Training of Public Health Professionals”—The Association of Yale Alumni in Public Health (AYAPH) and the Harvard School of Public Health (HSPH) will discuss the relevance of training students from African and Latino descent in the fields of Public Health. The Emerging Majority Affairs Committee (EMAC) of AYAPH has evolved from what was formerly known as the Minority Affairs Committee. The new name has been adapted to reflect the growing change in the demographics of the US.<sup>8</sup>

Building Electoral Power For Community Organizations—People of color and other marginalized communities increasingly find their civil rights put up for a vote through statewide and local ballot initiatives. Anti-affirmative action, anti-immigrant and “English-only” are among the attacks that have recently surfaced in western states. Breaking the traditional barrier between community organizing and electoral work, Californians for Justice has developed a model that seeks to build a permanent electoral infrastructure for California’s “emerging majority” of people of color, poor people and youth.<sup>9</sup>

Today, our population demographics are rapidly changing. It is becoming apparent that older and more ethnically varied minorities will exercise increasing power in shaping public policy. Will an aging clientele threaten wilderness, through demands for more mechanized and air-conditioned access? Will the attitudes of ethnic groups change the values and practices of the National Park Service and its partners? Should we adapt—or should we seek to influence the values of emerging majorities? In this session, we will examine various scenarios in which most Americans are past mid-life and represent differing ethnic groups.<sup>10</sup>

[The assembly answered Item 07-08, Recommendation 3.b., by the action take on Item 07-08, “2. Recommendation 3.a. above. See p. 51.]

b. Direct the General Assembly Council (GAC) to join the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) in changing the name of the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) to “Advocacy Committee for Emerging Majority Concerns (ACEMC).”

[Recommendation 3.c. was withdrawn by the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns prior to the convening of the assembly.]

c. [WITHDRAWN]

[The assembly approved Item 07-08, Recommendation 3.d., with amendment. See p. 51.]

d. Encourage all PC(USA) corporate agencies to adopt for utilization and implementation the tools of Cultural Proficiency or some other comparable approach throughout PC(USA), including its boards, agencies, and institutions, as a means to develop and sustain healthy corporate church cultures for addressing the issues that arise in a diverse environment[; this utilization and implementation is to proceed in light of and according to the confessional and biblical witness of the PC(USA)].

Rationale

Cultural Proficiency is the use of special tools for effectively describing, responding to, and planning for issues that emerge in diverse environments. It is the policy and practices at the organizational level that enable effective cross-cultural interactions among employees, the organizational structure, and systems. It uses the organization’s language, norms, and traditions, while infusing and transforming them with the tools of Cultural Proficiency. Cultural Proficiency is a model for individual and organizational transformation. This approach is proactive and can be used in any setting, rather than utilizing techniques that are applicable in only one environment. The focus of Cultural Proficiency is behavioral, not emotional; and, it can be applied to both organizational practices and individual behavior.

We are pleased to report that four church agencies—General Assembly Council (GAC), Office of the General Assembly (OGA), Presbyterian Investment & Loan Program, Inc. (PILP), and Presbyterian Publishing Corporation, Inc. (PPC)—have chosen to implement the Cultural Proficiency initiative prior to the release of this report. The other agencies—Presbyterian Board of Pensions (BOP) and Presbyterian Foundation (FDN)—are utilizing similar approaches.

[The assembly approved Item 07-08, Recommendation 3.e., with amendment. See p. 51.]

e. Inform all vendors and businesses with which it does business that PC(USA) agencies (or most PC(USA) agencies) subscribe to the principles and practices of “cultural proficiency” (or a similar diversity initiative) and urge vendors and businesses with whom it does business to do likewise. [Said actions would be phased in over a one- to three-year period to minimize expenses to all PC(USA) corporate bodies.]

Rationale

By insisting that the vendors and businesses uphold the same high standards of inclusion, we leverage justice. This practice is consistent with the practices currently employed by the office of Mission Responsibility Through Investment (MRTI), which is responsible for monitoring the investment portfolios of the church to ensure corporations represented adhere to socially responsible conduct with respect to employment, the environment, and non-discrimination policies and practices. Through direct negotiations and the writing of shareholder resolutions, MRTI has been able to successfully impact the culture of corporations represented in the portfolio of the PC(USA). By so requesting adherence by vendors doing business with the church, we will be able to successfully leverage our influence to create environments and cultures of justice within corporations desirous of commercial interaction with the PC(USA).

[The assembly approved Item 07-08, Recommendation 3.f., with amendment. See p. 52.]

f. ~~[Direct]~~ [Encourage] the General Assembly Council to adequately fund~~;~~ [and] staff~~;~~ ~~and re-name]~~ the GAC Office of Equal Employment Opportunity and Affirmative Action (EEO/AA) ~~[to the Office of Cultural Proficiency and Emerging Majority Concerns]~~ to implement PC(USA)'s commitment to becoming a culturally proficient organization by addressing issues of inclusiveness, representation, and systemic misuse of privilege and entitlement.

Rationale

Achieving the vision of fully incorporating all of God’s people in all facets and at all levels of the PC(USA) and its corporate agencies requires deep systemic change. This is an arduous task that requires more than policy statements and goals for numerical representation. It requires a strong organizational commitment with adequate funding and staffing to advise and assist the General Assembly executive staff in providing leadership for change. The suggested name change reflects a commitment to continue to provide the outreach, monitoring, oversight, and compliance functions that have been the traditional purview of EEO/AA programs and a commitment to ensure that deeper infrastructural changes would take place that will enable the PC(USA) and its corporate agencies to live out its vision of an inclusive, compassionate, and just corporate church. The suggested name change also incorporates more readily groups that the church has identified and included within the scope of the current Racial Ethnic Ministries as significant to the life of the church, but are either not included or not specified in current state and federal law, i.e. Middle Easterner, Korean, and New Immigrant ministries.

[The assembly approved Item 07-08, Recommendations 3.g.–i. See p. 51.]

g. Encourage an annual consultation between ACREC [ACEMC] and the CEOs of the General Assembly agencies to celebrate successes related to Equal Employment Opportunity and Affirmative Ac- tion initiatives and Cultural Proficiency. The goal of this annual consultation will be to determine where appropriate enhancements may be needed and to recommit technical assistance for the initiatives undertaken by each agency.

h. Direct all PC(USA) agencies to share their progress annually with the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) [ACEMC] by providing

(1) statistical data reflecting hiring of emerging majorities in the task force-suggested format (see Appendix II);

(2) statistical data reflecting selection and utilization of minority vendors, utilizing the General Assembly Council (GAC) format (see Appendix IV);

(3) a comparative analysis of investment activities, particularly with respect to utilization of emerging majority money managers;

(4) an assessment of the utilization of, as well as successes and challenges relative to, Cultural Proficiency (or other similar approach embraced by the agency); and, i. Direct all PC(USA)-affiliated agencies to utilize or institute a position comparable to the associate for recruitment and selection currently housed within the General Assembly Council.

(5) an assessment of the utilization of the standards of Project Equality within the agency.

Rationale

Despite variances in the responsibilities and functions of various agencies of the PC(USA), all are joined in mission and service direction and commitment. Additionally, in the eyes of those “outside” our corporate structures, we are all the “Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)” To be true to our identity and our claim of oneness in Christ, therefore, uniformity and consistency should be employed in all instances (unless to do so represents a conflict of interest or threatens shareholder or employee privacy issues).

In 2002, the PC(USA) General Assembly Council, at the denomination’s national offices in Louisville, Kentucky (the Center), created the position of associate for recruitment and selection. Prior to creation of this position, the ministry units and departments essentially handled recruiting and staffing functions in the manner each deemed appropriate. Creation of the position of associate for recruitment and selection brought uniformity and conformity, while still allowing for creativity, in recruitment and staffing activities. It was also a way of ensuring that diversity-hiring natives were considered and promoted in all Center hiring.

Because of the Foundation’s location within the same market area as GAC, it would appear practical for the Foundation to share the resources of the associate for recruitment and selection with the GAC. Since the BOP is located in an entirely separate market area, it is likely that BOP would opt to staff such a position within its own structure.

[The assembly approved Item 07-08, Recommendation 3.j., with amendment. See p. 52.]

j. Encourage GAC to expand the Foundation-managed Creative Investment Fund to encompass greater participation with Racial Ethnic Presbyterian Ministries and to gradually increase the Creative Investment Fund [from $8M to $20M over a five-year period;] for the purpose of investing in community economic projects, particularly in areas where there is an established Presbyterian [emerging majorities] [racial ethnic] presence.

Rationale

Community investment is a proactive way for the church to initiate partnerships in disadvantaged communities thus providing much needed capital and capacity building experience. This recommendation is based on the premise that, if given the resources and the opportunity, many churches can become the change agents and empowered to address many of the poverty factors plaguing neighborhood enclaves. Investments in affordable housing projects, day care, and micro-entrepreneurship loans are but a few of the economic development possibilities. Effective use of the Creative Investment Fund can strengthen the Presbyterian presence in communities of need, thus providing greater visibility to the Presbyterian church and enhancing the evangelism efforts.

GAC COMMENT ON ITEM 07-08, RECOMMENDATION 3.j.

Comment on Item 07-08, Recommendation 3.j.—From the General Assembly Council.

The ACREC proposal encourages the GAC to expand the Creative Investment Funds by $12 M (from $8M to $20M). This is a desirable objective. However, needing to come up with the $12M would require taking it from the Spending Formula Funds investment pool that would, in turn, reduce the investments returns to the General Assembly Council. This move would result in less revenue for the GAC mission budget.

Currently, $12M as invested in the Spending Formula Funds is expected to yield revenue by $665,060 in 2005 and $634,443 in 2006 per the Spending Formula Payout by the Foundation that distributes 5 percent of the value of the investments averaged over the previous twenty quarters. On the other hand, the return on funds invested in Creative Investment would be based on actual receipts that were at a net return of 1.93 percent in 2003. Calculations at this rate of 1.93 percent would produce revenue of $231,600 in 2005 and $231,600 in 2006. Therefore, if $12M were moved into Creative Investments, an overall loss of revenue of approximately $433,460 in 2005 and $402,843 in 2006 would occur.

The Creative Investment Program was developed in the mid 1970s to promote direct investment in enterprises that foster the economic development of minority and economically disadvantaged peoples. Currently a pool of $8,000,000 is set aside from the unrestricted endowments of the General Assembly for this program. Over the last ten years, the average amount of the pool invested was $4,670,000; $6,000,000 was invested at the end of 2003.

[The assembly approved Item 07-08, Recommendations 3.k.–m. See p. 51.]

k. Encourage a program of incentives be implemented in all PC(USA) corporate agencies for managers who are in positions to make hiring decisions as a means to reward adherence to and success in implementing cultural proficiency initiatives.

Rationale

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has been faithful in its commitment to the principles of and adherence to set affirmation action goals. While this is certainly laudable, we can do even more. Our observation from the statistics offered by the examined General Assembly agencies indicates that the presence of emerging majorities is considerably lessened in the upper management salary grades and salary ranges. By focusing more on hiring persons of diverse racial and cultural backgrounds, we demonstrate our commitment to racial and gender vocational justice and equity at all levels of the organization and contribute to the shattering of the unfortunate “glass ceiling” reality. The term “The Glass Ceiling” was originally coined by the Wall Street Journal in 1986, highlighting the invisible and artificial barriers blocking women and people of color to advancing up the corporate ladder. The reasons for this are numerous and problematic, however, they are all the result of human design. Senator Robert Dole introduced the Glass Ceiling Act as a part of Title II of the Civil Rights Act of 1991.<sup>11</sup> President George Bush signed the Civil Rights Act, establishing the bipartisan twenty-one member Glass Ceiling Commission. The Glass Ceiling Commission, chaired by secretary of labor, Robert Reich, maintained that “The Glass Ceiling is a concept that betrays America’s most cherished principles. It is the unseen, yet unbreachable barrier that keeps minorities and women from rising to the upper rungs of the corporate ladder, regardless of their qualifications or achievement. (1995).”<sup>12</sup>

Holding hiring managers and decision makers accountable for their hiring decisions via their “bottom line” results (e.g. appropriate incentives) increases the likelihood that such managers would more readily embrace the organization’s commitment to racial and cultural parity in all hiring decisions.

l. Encourage all CEO's, presidents, directors, and boards of directors of General Assembly agencies to demonstrate a renewed commitment to racial and gender diversification within upper management positions and to report successes, on a per agency basis, to the 217th General Assembly (2006) and the 218th General Assembly (2008).

Rationale

An increase in the numbers of emerging majorities and women within upper management further demonstrates the church's commitment to diversity, inclusiveness, and vocational justice. Aggressively implementing the above-mentioned initiative will eliminate the negative effects of the Glass Ceiling or Snow-capped Mountain syndrome. It has been demonstrated in the public and the private sector that all lasting and genuine diversity inclusion must receive support and advocacy at the highest executive level. To change the culture within a company, executive staff must advocate, model, and insist on racial and gender vocational justice being the normative organizational paradigm at all levels.

m. Instruct the General Assembly (GA) agencies to establish a process to train and mentor emerging majorities and women at appropriate intervals during the calendar year, and during regular scheduled work time to educate, train, and prepare employees from the existing staff pool for possible promotion and consideration for upper management positions. Persons selected as mentors will be expected to undergo required training (e.g. management and supervision of persons who differ from them in gender, cultural background, or ethnicity) before being assigned a person to mentor.

Rationale

Both in the private and public sector, mentoring programs and intentional training initiatives for emerging majorities and women have proven to be of immense benefit in providing valuable career exposure and contextual reference relative to affirmative action and inclusion. Women and emerging majorities have been historically denied access to natural or informal networks operating within or beyond the designated occupational ingress. The General Assembly and its corresponding agencies would be well-served if it designated senior executive staff persons to assist as advisors and mentors for those constituency groups presently lacking executive role models.

[The assembly approved Item 07-08, Recommendation 3.n., with amendment. See p. 52.]

n. Encourage the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Board of Pensions (BOP) and the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation (PFN), beginning in fiscal year 2006, to invest a minimum of 10 percent of their respective portfolios with money managers who are women and/or representative of the [emerging majorities] [racial ethnic population] within the United States [to be reported to each agency's respective General Assembly Committee].

[The assembly approved Item 07-08, Recommendation 3.o., with amendment. See p. 52.]

o. Direct the Office of the Stated Clerk (Office of the General Assembly) to acknowledge the profound underrepresentation of [emerging majorities] [racial ethnic persons] and women in upper management positions of General Assembly (GA) corporate agencies and to recommend procedures to remedy this situation. This acknowledgment and the subsequent recommended corrective procedures, along with expression of the PC(USA)'s displeasure with the current situation, should be communicated by the Office of the Stated Clerk through written communication to all PC(USA) constituencies, including but not limited to: Advocacy Committee for [Emerging Majority Concerns (ACEMC)] [Racial Ethnic Concerns], Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC), Presbyterian Women (PW), National Cross-Caucus, the sessions, middle governing bodies and their resource centers, the libraries of the theological seminaries, and PC(USA) congregations.

[The assembly approved Item 07-08, Recommendation 3.p.. See p. 51.]

p. Direct all PC(USA) corporate agencies to share the final report of the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns' Task Force to Examine General Assembly Entities with their employees.

Rationale

This report and recommendations are in response to the following referral: 2001 Referral: 26.001–003. Response to Recommendation to Create a Task Force to Examine the Racial Justice Policies/Programs of the Board of Pensions, Foundation, Presbyterian Investment & Loan Co., Inc., and Presbyterian Publishing Corporation in Relation to the Racial Ethnic Members of the PC(USA); Report Its Findings and Recommendations to the 215th 216th General Assembly (2003) (2004) (Minutes, 2001, Part I, pp. 58, 333).

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) received a recommendation from the 213th General Assembly (2001) directing the ACREC to create a task force to (1) Examine the current racial justice policies and programs of the Board of Pensions, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Investment and Loan Program, Inc., and the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation in relation to the racial ethnic members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.); and, (2) Report its findings and recommendations to the 215th General Assembly (2003) (Minutes, 2001, Part 1, pp. 58, 333).

I. Introduction

Ten years ago, the task force, whose mission was to determine the shape and form of PC(USA), affirmed the call of every Christian to “redress wrongs in every aspect of life and the whole of creation, working with the poor and powerless, whom Jesus loves, even at risk to our corporate and personal lives” (Minutes, 1993, Part I, p. 442, Statement of Vision, Basic Priorities of Our Vision).

In reducing the previous nine ministry units to four in the reorganization of the northern and southern Presbyterian churches, the Task Force on Shape and Form proposed the melding of ministry units and related bodies and charged the General Assembly Council to

- b. . . . institute and coordinate a churchwide plan for equal employment opportunity and affirmative action for members of ...
- c. . . . engage in churchwide planning to propose, for General Assembly determination, the mission directions, goals, objectives, and priorities of the church;
- d. . . . coordinate the work of General Assembly agencies and bodies, synods and presbyteries, in light of these mission directions, goals, objectives, and priorities; and
- e. . . . review the work of General Assembly agencies and bodies in light of General Assembly mission directions, goals, objectives, and priorities; (Book of Order, G-13.0201b–e).

Out of this call to GAC came the impetus for establishing the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns: “... In determining committees that are essential for divisions and areas, the General Assembly Council will ensure the continuation of the monitoring and advocacy functions guaranteed by the Articles of Agreement (5.6) for women and racial ethnic persons by providing for committees in these two areas/functions with direct access to the General Assembly Council and General Assembly. ...” (Minutes, 1993, Part I, p. 448, paragraph 30.142)

Following its August 2000 meeting in Seattle, Washington, ACREC invited each of the five racial ethnic caucuses to send a representative to Louisville to meet with the GAC Executive and Deputy Executive Directors, the associate director of Human Resources, the associate director for Purchasing, and various other Center staff personnel for the purpose of exploring ways in which there might be a more visible presence of racial ethnic persons in the workforce of PC(USA) in upper-level exempt job classifications as well as a more fully implemented purchasing program that utilized “minority” (racial ethnic and female) vendors, in keeping with the church’s Minority Vendor Policy.

At ACREC’s suggestion, the GAC Executive Director, the Deputy Executive Director, the associate for EEO/AA, and the associate director for Property Services (Purchasing) later met with the director of the Metropolitan Sewer District (MSD) to review that company’s “Diverse Works” program, which is a diversity employment model that values racial ethnic and cultural differences as unique business assets.

Being concerned with the dearth of managers, officials, and professional personnel at the Center, and to counter protests that no women or emerging majorities (collectively called “minorities”) could be found to fill such positions, at a subsequent meeting ACREC provided the Executive Director and assembled leadership a data bank containing the names of some 250 qualified persons who could be recruited. The result was that a person of color was hired to recruit and screen “minorities” for exempt-level positions the Center.

After further discussion and subsequent ad hoc subcommittee meetings, in August 2001 the Purchasing Department, together with the Legal Department and the GAC Office of Affirmative Action and Equal Employment Opportunity began training all employees at PC(USA) with purchasing authority in the newly devised procedures for implementing a centralized purchasing program for PC(USA) utilizing a buyers guide that included qualified racial ethnic and female vendors. The new program became effective January 2002.

Thus, the two stated objectives of the racial ethnic caucuses working through ACREC were realized, namely: a resource was put in place to accomplish the goal of increasing racial ethnic leadership and visibility in exempt level positions at PC(USA); and intentional efforts were made to implement the Minority Vendor Policy of PC(USA) and to live up to the church's commitment to let at least 10 percent of its contracts for goods and services to minority vendors. Issues of representation had been addressed, but PC(USA) employees still worked in environments that did not reflect their expectations of a caring, compassionate, inclusive church corporation.

Meeting in San Francisco in February 2001, ACREC voted to send to the 213th General Assembly (2001) three recommendations for the formation of task forces to address the issues of unintentional discrimination and commitment to diversity. Thus the idea of a Task Force to Examine General Assembly Entities was born.

In accordance with ACREC's recommendation, the 213th General Assembly (2001) directed the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns to create a task force to examine the current racial justice policies and programs of the Board of Pensions, the Presbyterian Foundation, the Presbyterian Investment and Loan Program, and the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation, in relation to the experience of racial ethnic employees. The rationale for the formation of the task was in accordance with the General Assembly Council's Manual of Operations, which directs the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns "to monitor the implementation of racial justice policies and programs relative to racial ethnic concerns," and "through advocacy maintain a strong prophetic witness to the church and for the church on existing and emerging issues of racial ethnic concern, A Churchwide Plan for Equal Employment Opportunity and Affirmative Action (1985 as amended, 1994), and the church's long-standing history of commitment to racial and ethnic justice, the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns seeks to examine the named entities regarding their racial justice programs and to determine compliance with regards to existing church policies.

The task force was directed to report its findings and recommendations to the 215th General Assembly (2003). The date for reporting was subsequently changed to the 216th General Assembly (2004). The scope of the task force has included, but has not been limited to examining affirmative action plans, recruitment programs for employees, retention/training programs, and recruitment of board members, purchasing, and investments.

The ACREC formed the task force by selecting its former moderator, Curtis Jones, as its chair. Thereafter, the chair sought candidates from each of the five racial ethnic caucuses of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)—the National Black Presbyterian Caucus (NBPC); the Native American Consulting Committee (NACC); the National Asian Presbyterian Caucus (NAPC); the National Hispanic Presbyterian Caucus (NHPC); and the National Middle Eastern Presbyterian Caucus (NMEPC)—as well as other racial ethnic Presbyterian members at large.

II. Biblical and Theological Basis

And if I have prophetic powers, and understand all mysteries and all knowledge, and if I have all faith, so as to remove mountains, but do not have love, I am nothing. (1 Cor. 13:2)

In sovereign love God created the world good and makes everyone equally in God's image, male and female, of every race and people, to live as one community. (The Book of Confessions, A Brief Statement of Faith, 10.3, Lines 29–32)

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) shall give full expression to the rich diversity within its membership and shall provide means that will assure a greater inclusiveness leading to wholeness in its emerging life. ... (Book of Order, G-4.0403)

The 211th General Assembly (1999), speaking through two policy statements: "Building Community Among Strangers: A Report on Racism, Social Class Division, Sex-Based Injustices, Religious Intolerance and Conflict" (Minutes, 1999, Part I, pp. 29–33, 401–34), and "Facing Racism: A Vision of the Beloved Community" (Minutes, 1999, Part I, pp. 79, 273–87), affirmed the centrality of God's call to the church to embody the diversity of God's Creation in the unity of the community of faith, and the tremendous challenge the church faces in attempting to be faithful to this call in light of historical patterns of racism, sexism, and class division, which continue to divide our society and our church.

In the biblical witness, love and justice are inextricably linked. Love demands justice, especially for the least among us. And justice embodies love. Just as the church in Corinth struggled to be one church in the midst of a diverse community, the church today struggles to create unity in the midst of great diversity. To do so, the church must also overcome a history of racism in our society that perpetuates itself through our social institutions, including the church, recognizing that racism, as a system of oppression, interacts with other systems of oppression, so that to effectively seek justice in community means to transform the entire fabric of our cultural life.

Even in the divine community, distinction is preserved; to be in community does not mean to lose one's identity in the other; it means to affirm one's identity and the identity of the other. (Minutes, 1999, Part I, p. 410, Building Community Among Strangers, paragraph 25.297 )

Love does not demand conformity to one way of thinking, being, or doing. Love does not assume that one way is always best. In a society that has been structured by racism, the unexamined assumptions of the dominant culture that its traditions and worldview are normative for human life, or that all those who would seek to participate fully in the life of the church or society must surrender their own distinctive identity, cultural perspective, traditions, historical heritage, or worldview, is inherently racist. It denies our humanity, for both oppressed and oppressor, by failing to recognize the creative Spirit of God dwelling within each of us.

Love affirms the gifts of diversity as they contribute to the wholeness of our life as the community of faith, seeking always to learn and to be transformed in the image of God through our relationships with one another.

Culture is the product of our daily life in community. Culture encompasses the ways we have created to meet the basic needs of life, to communicate with one another, to educate ourselves, as well as to recreate and to entertain each other. Culture provides a source of identity and expression of our historical understandings of who we are as nations and peoples. Culture is also central to our life in the church as a community of faith. Culture is the lens through which we give meaning to life and interpret the world around us. Culture provides the tools by which we worship God—language, music, art, and architecture. Our interpretation of Scripture and tradition is shaped by our cultural context and our historical location.

As Christians, we must also be critics of our culture, always examining it in light of our faith and our understanding of God's intentions for the human family. Valuing one culture as superior to another is a form of idolatry. Assuming that some must surrender their culture to participate fully in the life of the society or the church is inherently oppressive. Historically, in the U.S., this is part of the systemic nature of racism—that it strips away the culture and identity of marginalized groups, literally dehumanizing and rendering communities of color invisible by denying that which gives us each identity, voice, and a way of being in the world.

... The solidarity of the human family and the social character of all human life indicates that no person can develop fully apart from interaction with others. All persons are mutually linked and meant to live and grow in relationship with each other as we share a common destiny. Therefore, differences of ethnicity and culture are to be viewed as God-given gifts to be celebrated, rather than obstacles to be overcome. (Minutes, 1999, Part I, pp. 276–77, Facing Racism, paragraph 22.138)

As emerging majorities struggle to claim equity within the church, that struggle is not just about being present or being counted. For those who have been on the margins of the church to have a true voice within the church must mean that the particularity of historical experience and cultural perspective is heard in ways that transform the dominant culture and the life of the whole church.

III. A Snowcapped Mountain

Ralph Scissons, a First Nation member of the ACREC Task Force to Examine General Assembly Entities, visually describes the socially engineered employment patterns of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and its corporate entities as a “snow-capped mountain.” He asserts that “on a snowcapped mountain, all the earth colors are at the bottom of the mountain, and the top of the mountain is all white.” Whether by accident or by design, the racial and gender profile of the General Assembly and its corporate entities reflect a predominately white male executive and upper managerial staffing paradigm, one in which the last and final frontier of diversity awaits the advent of justice.

The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and its related corporate entities—Office of the General Assembly (OGA), Presbyterian Foundation (FDN), Presbyterian Investment & Loan Program, Inc. (PLIP), Presbyterian Publishing Corporation, Inc. (PPC), Presbyterian Board of Pensions (BOP)—have all drafted and approved Equal Employment Opportunity policies. Prevention of Sexual Harassment and flexible leave policies have been implemented to make the workplace more welcoming. The GAC has provided staffing for EEO/AA, and created a position in Human Resources to focus on recruitment and staffing. Antiracism training has been implanted for all employees in GAC, OGA, and PILP. Since 1999, beginning with a series of employee roundtable meetings, a race and gender survey, and a series of race and gender focus groups, there has been a concerted effort to discern the joys and frustrations of employees in the Presbyterian Center particularly as it relates to the employment of women and emerging majorities. These efforts have led to the implementation of the Cultural Proficiency Initiative begun in 2003, which focuses on the organizational culture and systemic change.

With these efforts, each of the above-named entities has achieved varying degrees of success and diversity relative to employment of emerging majorities and women. However, the absence of emerging majorities and women in upper echelon positions continues to be a glaring contradiction of faith and a misrepresentation of the Christian vocation. This single disaffirmation of faith is a stark denial of the explicit and implied premise of every doctrinal reference to justice, diversity, reconciliation, and love the General Assembly has made since the Confession of 1967.

Unfortunately, the employment record of the PC(USA), in some respect, mirrors the flawed patterns of corporate America with respect to emerging majorities and women. Emerging majorities and women are relegated disproportionately to nonprofessional and entry-level and middle-management positions, and are forced to confront the perennial “Glass Ceiling” with regards to executive advancement. Sadly, the PC(USA), a branch of the body of Christ designed to reflect the presence of God’s community on earth, in the critical area of inclusion is more a reflection of “the world as it is rather than the world as it should be.” If we are to be the Church of Jesus Christ, then we must have higher standards than the status quo of corporate America.

There are numerous challenges and misconceptions surrounding the snowcapped mountain syndrome. Principle among them is that diversity implies deficiency. The racism, discrimination, “good-ole’ boy” system that created and nurtured structural inequality and racial and gender separation, while weakened by the advancements of the Civil Rights movement, remain formidable foes within the PC(USA). This is most apparent in church culture and the mind-set of many white Americans that have been hardwired and programmed to believe in stereotypes. Entire racial and gender constituencies have been diminished, discredited and vilified in order to preserve the principal of white privilege and gender separation.. Examine the different treatments orchestrated against emerging majorities and women. Whether emerging majorities and women were forcibly brought here, or subjugated through conquest; annexed or enmeshed in the misleading message of “All deliberate speed,” there remains a sordid blemish on the soul of the nation and on the United States ideology of equality. Marcella Benson-Quaziana, in the document “Structural Inequality and Diversity”<sup>13</sup> states:

Contrary to the American ideology of equality, people in the United States who are created equal do not have equal access to power and resources.... And, it bears repeating that difference and inequality are not the same thing.

Difference alone is not the foundation of social inequality. Honoring difference is not the same thing as understanding how inequality is produced and reproduced in society. Inequality is socially constructed. This means that it is the result of system design and is built into the structure and function of social institutions.

The existence of persistent social inequality within the executive and managerial structure of the General Assembly and the General Assembly corporate entities is an awkward and discomfiting phenomenon for Presbyterian emerging majorities and women. The plethora of excuses and apologies used to justify white privilege and white male gender advantage serve only to reinforce a systemic hierarchy of distrust. At the center of the snowcapped mountain syndrome and the glass ceiling reality is the indisputable issue of power and access to it by the emerging majorities and women.

The experience of the PC(USA) and its corporate entities clearly demonstrates the need to go beyond traditional efforts that focus on numbers and policies. It demonstrates the need for deep, systemic change and transformation in the organizational cultures of the corporate entities of the church to create equity. This kind of change requires intentional and focused intervention to move the status quo. By focusing exclusively on representation and the celebration of difference, we may possibly miss the opportunity to highlight the significance of “power-sharing” and the possibilities for change that may come about by truly incorporating the voices of emerging majorities at all levels of the church and its corporate entities. To become subsumed in the dialogue on inclusion and diversity without the concomitant focus on power will serve only to elevate the penultimate over the ultimate equality issues.

We therefore call on the General Assembly and its corporate entities to step outside of the historical and diminishing contradictions of racial and gender stratification and embrace justice as the inevitable consequence of faith and cultural proficiency; and, to build corporate entities marked by true vocational justice in which the glass ceiling is replaced by helping hands and the snowcapped mountain is replaced by the rainbow of a new creation.

IV. Methodology

The task force wrote to the PC(USA) agencies asking for EEO/AA statistics on the employees of each agency. Other materials that were requested included affirmative action plans; recruitment, retention, and training plans; board memberships; and purchasing practices. The statistical data was augmented with telephone conferences and face-to-face interviews with CEO's, human resource directors, and some racial ethnic personnel. Additionally, the task force members examined the programs of other mainline churches in North America and conducted on-site examinations of not-for-profit organizations that have addressed issues of diversity using the tools of cultural proficiency. The question to which the task force sought answers was: How can the agencies of the PC(USA) build a healthier corporate church culture?

The assumptions of the task force were as follows:

- That all agencies and persons affected by the work of the task force have concerns for the issues presented by the task force.
- That there have been some successes within and among the agencies being examined.
- That each agency has areas in which it could improve.
- That all agencies and persons affected will be active participants in their own healing process.

In gathering the data for this report, these terms were used:

- Race is a socially constructed means of social control that serves to perpetuate economic, social, political, psychological, religious, ideological, and legal systems of inequality, without the consent or cooperation of people who benefit from or are oppressed by these systems.
- Culture is the set of practices and beliefs that is shared with members of a particular group and that distinguishes one group from others. Culture involves far more than ethnic or racial differences. One's culture includes all shared characteristics of human description.
- Cultural proficiency is a way of being that enables both individuals and organizations to respond effectively to people who differ from them. Cultural competence is behavior that is aligned with standards that move an organization or an individual toward culturally proficient interactions.
- Diversity implies all of the human categories that reflect our differences, including age, gender, geography, ancestry, language, history, sexual orientation, physical ability, occupation, affiliations, and social class.
- A corporate church culture is an organizational culture of a faith-based organization that acknowledges the values and beliefs of the PC(USA) while using the best business practices in an equitable, inclusive, and compassionate way with all employees.

Drafts of the report and recommendations were periodically shared with the leadership of the respective PC(USA) corporate agencies. We sought, received, and incorporated feedback from the leadership.

V. Cultural Proficiency

Cultural Proficiency is an approach that was developed by Terry Cross<sup>14</sup> in 1989 as an approach for mental health practitioners to provide a Culturally Competent System of Care. The tools presented in the monograph written by Dr. Cross have been developed and expanded upon for use in a variety of organizational settings. Randall B. Lindsey, Kikanza Nuri Robins, and their colleagues have described how these tools can be used in their books Cultural Proficiency<sup>15</sup> and Culturally Proficient Instruction.<sup>16</sup> Cultural proficiency is a mindset, and a way of being. Cultural proficiency is the use of specific tools for effectively describing, responding to, and planning for issues that emerge in diverse environments. It is the policies and practices at the organizational level, and values and behaviors at the individual level that enable effective cross-cultural interactions among employees, clients, and community. When used in an organization, it looks like the organization's core values, organizational structure, and systems. It uses the organization's language, norms, and traditions, while infusing, transforming them with the tools of Cultural Proficiency. Cultural proficiency is a model for individual and organizational transformation. This approach is proactive; it provides tools that can be used in any setting, rather than techniques that are applicable in only one environment; the focus is behavioral, not emotional; and it can be applied to both organizational practices and individual behavior.

As an approach to responding to the issues and values of diversity Cultural proficiency provided four tools:

- The Continuum: Language for describing both healthy and nonproductive policies, practices, and individual behaviors.

- The Essential Elements: Behavioral standards for measuring and planning for growth toward cultural proficiency.
- The Guiding Principles: Underlying values of the approach.
- The Barriers: Caveats that assist in anticipating and responding to resistance to change.

The Continuum

There are six points along the cultural proficiency continuum that indicate unique ways of seeing and responding to difference:

- Cultural destructiveness: See the difference; stomp it out. The elimination of other people's cultures.
- Cultural incapacity: See the difference; make it wrong. Belief in the superiority of one's culture and behavior that disempowers another's culture.
- Cultural blindness: See the difference; act like you don't. Acting as if the cultural differences you see do not matter, or not recognizing that there are differences among and between cultures.
- Cultural pre-competence: See the difference; respond inadequately. Awareness of the limitations of one's skills or an organization's practices when interacting with other cultural groups.
- Cultural competence: See the difference; understand the difference that difference makes. Interacting with other cultural groups using the five essential elements of cultural proficiency as the standard for individual behavior and school practices.
- Cultural proficiency: See the differences; respond positively and affirming in a variety of environments. Esteeming culture, knowing how to learn about individual and organizational culture, and interacting effectively in a variety of cultural environments.

The Essential Elements

The essential elements of cultural proficiency provide the standards for individual behavior and organizational practices.

- Name the differences: Assess culture.
- Claim the differences: Value diversity.
- Reframe the differences: Manage the dynamics of difference.
- Train about differences: Adapt to diversity.
- Change for differences: Institutionalize cultural knowledge.

The Guiding Principles

These are the core values, the foundation on which the approach is built and are most effective when linked to the core values of the organization:

- Culture is a predominant force; you cannot NOT be influenced by culture.
- People are served in varying degrees by the dominant culture.
- It is important to acknowledge the group identity of individuals.
- Diversity within cultures is important; cultural groups are neither homogeneous nor monolithic.
- Respect the unique cultural needs that members of dominated groups may have.

The Barriers

The barriers to cultural proficiency are the impediments that must be addressed. They are also caveats that help to determine appropriate interventions.

- Unawareness of the Need to Adapt. Not recognizing the need to make personal and organizational changes in response to the diversity of the people with whom you and your organization interact. Believing instead, that only the others need to change and adapt to you.

- The Presumption of Entitlement. Not recognizing that members of certain groups receive more privileges because of their position or because of the groups they belong to. Assuming that you accrued all of your personal achievements and societal or organizational benefits because of your competence or your character, and do not need to share or redistribute what you have, or help others to acquire what you have.

- Systems of Oppression. Distributing power and privilege (consciously or unintentionally), only to members of dominant groups, or abusing power accrued through rules and roles within the organization. Throughout most organizations are systems of institutionalized racism, sexism, heterosexism, ageism, and ableism. Moreover these systems are often supported and sustained without the permission of and at times without the knowledge of the people whom they benefit. These systems perpetuate domination and victimization of individuals and groups.

Cultural proficiency supports programs that enhance or transform the culture of an organization rather than programs that only measure numerical goals. It differs from other programs in a number of important ways.

- It can be integrated into all aspects of the organization.
- It can be applied to both organizational practices and individual behavior.
- It can be linked to the core values of your organization.
- It provides tools for sustainable systemic change.
- Most diversity programs explain the nature of diversity or the process of learning about or acquiring new cultures.
- It provides tools for individual transformation.
- Using the tools of cultural proficiency will not supplant, but will supplement and support programs already in place.

To evaluate an organization using the tools of cultural proficiency, examine or look for the following:

1. The process for assessing the current culture of the agency.
2. A statement of core values that include a commitment to inclusiveness and diversity.
3. Programs for providing information and building skills that include but are not limited to
  - a. recognizing and eliminating oppressive systems;
  - b. power, privilege, and entitlement;
  - c. problem solving;
  - d. decision making;
  - e. language differences;
  - f. interpersonal skills;
  - g. culturally competent management.
4. Ongoing analysis and changing of policies and practices that may unintentionally discriminate or that may not be in alignment with the values of the agency and changes to reflect the values.
5. Recruitment, orientation, training, and performance appraisal systems that communicate the core values and hold employees accountable for communication and performance that is in alignment with those values and appropriate cultural competencies.

We are called by God to walk humbly as we do justice and love kindness. We are called by society to model business practices that reflect the values of our faith. We are called by our communities to reinterpret and refocus business models for use in the church. We are called by congregations to help them grow and respond to the call of a diverse world. Cultural proficiency provides us with tools for responding to this call.

VI. Findings

At the request of the task force, the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation, Inc., General Assembly Council, Presbyterian Foundation, Board of Pensions, and Presbyterian Investment & Loan Program, Inc. provided statistical staffing data in a task force-suggested format (see Appendix II). The interpretation that follows is on a per agency basis and is based upon this statistical data, which includes ten salary ranges (since salary grades within agencies are not uniform) and statistics based on gender and emerging majority groupings. For the purpose of this report, we have specifically targeted the top five salary ranges, from $65,000 to greater than $115,000.

A. Office of the General Assembly

The employees of the Office of the General Assembly are predominantly white, representing 78.9 percent of the total employee count. The remaining 21.1 percent of employees are emerging majority groups. There are no First Nation/Alaskans, 2.8 percent Asian/Pacific Islanders, 14.1 percent Black, 4.2 percent Latino, and no Middle Eastern persons. Females make up 77.5 percent of the total employment, outnumbering males about 3 to 1.

The top five salary grades encompass 12.6 percent of the workforce. Of the employees in the highest salary ranges, 9.8 percent are white, or 75 percent. Males comprise 8.4 percent or two thirds of the highest paid ranges. Restated concisely, the top salary grades are 75 percent white and two thirds male.

Within the highest salary grades, 33.3 percent of the Latino employees are represented and 9.9 percent of the total African American employment are in this group.

The lowest three salary grades account for 57.8 percent of the total staff of the Office of the General Assembly. Within the salary grade, whites in this group comprise 49.4 percent of the staff, African Americans are 8.4 percent this salary grade. While African Americans, as a percentage, hold fewer of the lower paying jobs, it should be noted that as a percent of the total employment of African Americans this group represents 59.5 percent of all African American employees in the Office of the General Assembly.

In the lower three salary grades, males comprise 7 percent of these grades or 31 percent of the total male employment is paid in the lower ranges compared to 50.7 percent female or 65 percent of the total female staff is paid and hold positions in the lower paying segments of the General Assembly.

B. General Assembly Council

At the General Assembly Council, 73.6 percent of the employees are white, 26.4 percent are emerging majority persons. Women represent 67.7 percent of the employees, 32.2 percent are men.

In the top five pay grids of the organization, 6.1 percent of the staff is represented. Males are 4.4 percent of this group or 13.6 percent of all males employed by the General Assembly Council are in the top pay grades. This number compares to 3.7 percent female, representing only .5 percent of the female population at the General Assembly Council. With women having a two to one ratio, it's telling that at the highest levels of the church 4.6 percent are male and 3.7 percent are female. The higher paid positions are disproportionately populated by males.

Emerging majority persons make up 26.4 percent of the employees of the General Assembly Council. This is higher than the church's average. At the highest salary levels, the minority representation is 2.1 percent of the employees but that is 34.4 percent of the staff at that level.

The lowest three salary levels contain 59.5 percent of all of the employees of the General Assembly Council. At the lowest salary levels, 17 percent, of a total of 26.4 percent of all staff, are emerging majorities. African Americans are 10.4 percent of the staff at this level compared to 14.4 percent of the overall staff. Seventy-two percent of all African American employees are at the lowest three salary levels. The percentage of all white staff at this level is 42.4 percent.

C. The Board of Pensions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)

The Board of Pensions provided the data to the Presbyterian entities task force in September 2003.

1. Representation

Of the 211 employees at the Board of Pensions of the Presbyterian Church (U. S.A.), 80 are persons of color. This represents 38 percent emerging majority persons.

2. Job Category Representation

There are nine job categories. In the Official and Managers category, which is the highest EEO category, there are two African American males, eight African American females, with one Native American female, one Hispanic female, and one Asian female. The percentage of African American females in this category is 14.8 percent. Analysis of job titles and job descriptions will be necessary to get a better picture of the representation of people of color. Women represent 57.4 percent of the Official and Managers category.

In the Professional category, there are two African American males, one Hispanic male, and one Asian male. There are a total of ten white males. There are ten African American females representing 25.6 percent of the Professional Category. Women comprise 64.1 percent of the category.

In the exempt staff, comprising Officials and Managers and Professional categories, 23.6 percent are African American. However, of those twenty-two persons, only four are male. That is double the number of males from 2001. There is one Hispanic professional male, one Asian professional male, and one Asian female Official and Manager, as well as one Hispanic female Official and Managers, and one First Nation female.

The representation of males of color is strikingly low. Efforts need to be made to increase the representation of men of color in the Official and Managers category, and the Professional category.

Fifty-four percent of the nonexempt staff are people of color. The total includes five African American males, thirty-nine African American females, two Hispanic females, three Asian males, one Asian female, for a total of eight males of color, and forty-two females of color on a nonexempt staff of 93.

A list that includes the position held and the salaries for the fifty-four employees listed as "Officials and Manager" would result in a more in-depth analysis. The salaries provided do not allow one to do an analysis based on race.

3. Employment Policy

The Board of Pensions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) policy is to engage in employment policies and practices that promote equality of opportunity in all aspects of employment.

The Board of Pensions is guided by the Book of Order, the policies of the General Assembly, and the Church-wide Plan for Equal Employment Opportunity and Affirmative Action.

All policies and practices including recruiting, selection, benefits, compensation, performance appraisal, promotion, transfers, discipline, training, and separation will be administered without discrimination based on race, color, national origin, gender, age, marital status, sexual orientation, creed, disability, or religious affiliation (except where a category is determined to be a bona fide occupational qualification).

4. Affirmative Action Policy

The Board of Pensions policy is to act affirmatively to expand employment opportunities that contribute to a diverse workforce.

The Board of Pensions will do the following:

- Adopt plans that take into account past and present inequities of treatment and discrimination.
- Periodically analyze all of employment practices and the results of its actions.
- Review the goals of its plan at least annually.

The Board of Pensions will take affirmative action to recruit women and minority candidates and does not discriminate in any employment action on the basis of race, color, national origin, gender, age, marital status, sexual orientation, creed, disability, or religious affiliation (except where a category is determined to be a bona fide occupational qualification).

This is a standard affirmative action policy. It will be important to learn if the policy is actually reviewed annually.

5. Recruitment

a. Job Posting

Jobs are posted internally, before external recruiting begins.

b. Recruitment Incentive Program

A recruitment incentive of $200 has been established to encourage employees to refer a diverse, qualified group of candidates for employment.

Recruiting Statistics are provided.

6. Retention Programs

a. Tuition Reimbursement

The Board of Pensions has a tuition reimbursement program. In that program, 20 or 59 percent of the 34 participants are people of color.

b. New Hires

New hires must remain in a position for which they were hired for one full year prior to being eligible to post for a promotional or transfer opportunity.

There is a Managing and Valuing Diversity Program.

There is a Preventing Sexual Harassment policy.

The Board of Pensions has utilized Project Equality in purchasing with their suppliers, vendors, and travel providers beginning in October 2001. Their largest provider, Highmark, is not validated by Project Equality.

The reporting of staff by exempt and nonexempt categories does not provide adequate data to determine representation of women and people of color.

7. Recommendations

What are the strategies to achieve goals and is there a succession planning process? What are the minority recruitment strategies?

For 2000 census data, 24.8 percent of the population is people of color.

African American	12.3
Native American	0.9
Asian	3.6
Native Hawaiian or Pacific Islander	0.1
Some other race	5.5
Two or more races	2.4

D. The Presbyterian Foundation

1. Employees

The Presbyterian Foundation has 100 employees.

2. Job Category Representation

There is a possibility of nine job categories. The Presbyterian Foundation has employees in four of the nine categories. The highest category is the Officials and Managers category. Of Officials and Managers, two years ago four of nineteen, or 21.1 percent of the staff were African American, nine were female, and ten male. Currently three of the twenty-four, or 12.5 percent are African American, nine are female, which is 37.5 percent, and fifteen are male. In the Professional category, five of twenty-five, or 20.8 percent of the staff are African American. Twenty of the twenty-four employees are female, which is 83.3 percent.

In the categories Officials and Managers and Professionals, eight of forty-eight or 16.6 percent are African American. They are the only people of color in those categories. African Americans are adequately represented, while other people of color are not. Sixty-one point four percent are women.

Under the Sales Worker category, the actual job is development officers. Of these fifteen positions, only two are persons of color, which represents 13.3 percent. One is African American and one is Hispanic. Seven are female, and eight are male.

Thirty-five point one percent of the nonexempt staff are people of color. There are a total of thirteen emerging majority persons on a nonexempt staff of thirty-seven. Of the thirty-seven employees in the Office and Clerical category, thirty-six are women.

3. Salary Analysis

A salary analysis of the Presbyterian Foundation did not find any red flags to indicate adverse impact.

In the assignment of job grades, the majority of the senior vice presidents are grade 22 or above. However, the senior vice president of marketing, who happens to be a white female, is a grade 21 and the senior vice president of Human Resources, who happens to be African American, is a grade 20. An analysis of descriptions and/or responsibilities will explain why the same titles of senior vice president are different grade levels.

An analysis of most of the salary grades, comparing the salaries of males and females, showed no disparity. For instance, Grade 19 -Development Officers: The women's average salary was $66,730.54. The men's salaries averaged $72,054.19. There is an average difference of $5,323.65 between men and women's salaries for the development officers. Of course, the tenure of the position and region would have a part in the explanation.

The Presbyterian Foundation provided information indicating they follow the Book of Order, G-4.0403.

4. Affirmative Action Program

The implementation of Equal Employment/Affirmative Action Program will ensure what is already established policy for the Foundation—equal employment opportunity for all persons, in all phases of the company's operations without regard to race, color, religion, national origin, age, sex, or disability.

The policy will be communicated internally and externally.

The president/CEO of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation has the ultimate responsibility for the Equal Employment/Affirmative Action Program. All senior staff shares the responsibility.

The Foundation will compile the following information for review on an annual basis:

- Applicant flow data.
- New hires.
- Promotions, transfers, demotions, and terminations.
- Foundation sponsored training.

5. Churchwide Plan for Equal Opportunity and Affirmative Action

The Presbyterian Foundation abides by the Churchwide Plan for Equal Opportunity and Affirmative Action.

The diversity goal is for 20 percent racial ethnic representation in every unit and each job category. The Foundation stated the goal is to be reached by 2010; however, in committee report from the Racial/Ethnic Concerns Subcommittee, the 20 percent representation goal will be reached by 2015.

Three of eleven fund managers are people of color. They manage 10 to 15 percent of the portfolio.

E. Presbyterian Investment and Loan Program

In the year 2001, there were thirteen staff members. Sixty-nine percent were female, 43 percent are female at the exempt level, and 8 percent were people of color.

None of the exempt staff of seven are people of color. Four are male and three female, all are Caucasian.

Salary Grade	Salary	Race/Sex	Status
22	$100,000	WM	Exempt
20	73,520	WM	Exempt
19	70,475	WM	Exempt
19	53,055	WM	Exempt
19	50,340	WF	Exempt
18	49,535	WF	Exempt
16	32,560	WF	Exempt
15	27,865	WF	Non exempt
15	27,865	WF	Non exempt
14	26,316	WF	Non exempt
14	25,867	WF	Non exempt
14	25,550	WF	Non exempt
14	23,788	BF	Non exempt

Women hold all of the nonexempt positions. White men hold the top four exempt positions. There is only one person of color in the workforce. There is a lack of representation of people of color in exempt positions.

The only person of color in the workforce is nonexempt and was hired in February 2002, which may be the reason for having the lowest salary out of all. A review of the salary ranges for each grade is necessary to determine if adverse impact is a factor for females in the organization.

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) provides legal, human resources, information technology, communication, and accounting services.

1. Recruitment

Recruitment sources include the Louisville Courier Journal, the Louisville Defender, and informal contacts.

2. Retention and Training

Retention and training includes a tuition reimbursement plan. The Human Resource Department of the General Assembly Council provides Personal and Job development training courses. Technical development is provided through licenses and credentials for staff, which require them.

The reporting of staff by exempt and nonexempt categories does not provide adequate data to determine representation of women and people of color.

F. Presbyterian Publishing Corporation

1. Representation

Fifteen percent of exempt staff are people of color. The total includes two African American males, four African American females, one Asian female, for a total of seven people of color on an exempt staff of forty-six.

Thirty-three percent of the nonexempt staff are people of color. The total includes three African American females, for a total of three people of color on a nonexempt staff of nine.

There are a total of ten people of color on a staff of fifty-five. The total percentage of people of color is 18 percent.

Production staff has gone from 6 percent people of color in 1998 to 22 percent today. Three people of color have gone from nonexempt to exempt.

The Expanded Executive Staff of eight managers have no people of color.

2. Churchwide Plan for Equal Opportunity and Affirmative Action

The Presbyterian Publishing Corporation (PPC) abides by the Churchwide Plan for Equal Opportunity and Affirmative Action.

3. Equal Employment Opportunity

The Presbyterian Publishing Corporation engages in employment policies and practices that promote equality of opportunity in all aspects of employment.

The Presbyterian Publishing Corporation is ADA compliant. There are forty-five full-time positions and one half-time position. Persons of color comprise more than 20 percent of the nonexempt staff.

There has been one request for reasonable accommodation, a special keyboard and voice-activated recording mechanism for the employee to give verbal instructions to perform computer activities.

4. Recruitment

Advertising includes non-discriminatory EO/AA employer statement.

Networks have been developed to assist PPC in recruitment of qualified personnel from diverse origins.

The Presbyterian Publishing Corporation has a racial ethnic internship.

5. Retention

The Presbyterian Publishing Corporation offers employee development opportunities on the basis of job relevance.

Vacation or unpaid leave is available for development activities deemed to be “personal” in nature. Leave for development opportunities that are business related may be “time worked,” “vacation,” or “unpaid leave.”

There is a salary administration philosophy of market pricing.

There are three employees who are involved in ongoing continuing education. All are women. Racial ethnic staff development is a priority.

6. Reduction In Force

There has been a reduction in staffing of 20 percent in July 2001 and an additional 3–4 percent in October 2001.

Staff has gone from sixty to forty-five positions. The fulfillment and customer service functions have been outsourced. An additional six positions were cut.

VII. Summary

Effective methods and strategies are needed to change entrenched societal attitudes and norms that manifest as racist behavior in PC(USA) and its corporate affiliate’s employee hiring and promotions patterns and practices; retention strategies; minority vendor practices; and board compositions, etc.

Models that aim for change from the inside out, such as the 12-Step Program used by people recovering from addictive behaviors; Weight Watchers and Overeaters Anonymous for overcoming obesity; and Cultural Proficiency for changing organizational culture by valuing differences are indicated.

Internal change that affects the heads and hearts of people in positions of leadership and authority are indicated to change the cultural environment and workplace atmosphere from one of legalistic compliance with secular affirmative action and equal employment opportunity laws to one of genuine caring and valuing of all humanity where relationship building and God's agape love are modeled.

The ACREC Task Force to Examine General Assembly Entities commends the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and its corporate agencies for the following:

- Recognizing that racism and other forms of social oppression are spiritual problems.
- Recognizing that actions lag behind pronouncements in the various Presbyterian agencies.
- Resolving to become a "race conscious" organization.
- Approving a Racial Ethnic/Immigrant Churchwide Growth Strategy with a goal of 10 percent growth in racial ethnic membership by 2005 and 20 percent growth by the year 2010.
- Instituting a mandatory antiracism training program for all General Assembly employees.
- Adopting an antiracism program as a first step in addressing the issues of inclusiveness, entitlement, and privilege.
- Instituting a center-wide purchasing program to accomplish the Minority Vendor Policy's goal of 10 percent minority contracting.
- Authorizing ACREC to carry out the GAC constitutional requirement "to review the work of General Assembly agencies and bodies in light of General Assembly mission directions, goals, objectives, and priorities" through the establishment of this task force.
- Committing to move beyond the counting of racial ethnic categories to determine the health, inclusiveness, compassion, or diversity of a Presbyterian agency.

Item 07-09

[The assembly approved Item 07-09. See p. 52.]

The General Assembly Council recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) express its appreciation to the members and congregations of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) for their faithful financial support of General Assembly Mission causes in 2003 and that the following presbyteries be recognized for their leadership in giving:

Detroit	Kiskiminetas
Whitewater Valley	Alaska

Leading Presbyteries in Giving to Specific Categories

Category of Giving	Total Dollars Given	Per Member Giving
Total Mission Giving	Philadelphia	Alaska
Basic Mission Support	Donegal	Donegal
Churchwide Special Offerings	National Capital	Alaska
Presbyterian Women's Giving	Pittsburgh	Alaska
Other Specific Appeals*	Pittsburgh	Cimarron

*Other Specific Appeals includes gifts to Disaster Assistance, the Theological Education Fund and Extra Commitment Opportunities.

Rationale

Each year the General Assembly Council (GAC) recognizes presbyteries that have demonstrated excellence in giving to General Assembly mission causes. Presbyteries are recognized for total giving and for per member giving. Mission Funding and Development (MF&D) produces a brochure with the names of the top ten presbyteries in each category. These brochures are displayed in the MF&D booth in the Exhibit Hall at the General Assembly meeting and are made available free of charge to presbyteries who use them for presbytery meetings and/or for mailing to congregations. The leading presbytery in each category is presented a certificate of appreciation by an elected member of the GAC at a subsequent presbytery meeting.

This year the General Assembly will be given an opportunity to join the GAC in expressing its appreciation to the members and congregations of the leading presbyteries in gifts to General Assembly Basic Mission Support as they are recognized in a plenary session.

[The assembly disapproved Item 07-10. See p. 50.]

Commissioners' Resolution. On Creation of a Presbyterian Credit Card.

That the 216th General Assembly (2004) refer for study to the General Assembly Council, to report to the 217th General Assembly (2006), the feasibility of contracting with a bank, credit card company, and/or other lending institution to create a “Presbyterian credit card,” which through voluntary, private subscription, issuance, and usage, could generate usage credits that would accrue to and translate into mission dollars directly enhancing the funding of validated Presbyterian mission accounts and causes.

Rationale

We are increasingly becoming a cashless society.

Personal credit cards now routinely earn for their owners such private benefits as video rental dollars (Blockbuster), free gasoline (Shell), and dollars toward the purchase of a new car (General Motors).

Many secular, not-for-profit, and charitable organizations (such as the Nature Conservancy, etc.) are harnessing the electronic spending habits of their constituencies by asking them to voluntarily forego personal remunerations such as those named above to otherwise earn and contribute dollar rewards to directly enhance the funding and thereby the mission of the philanthropic cause to which they belong and in which they believe.

This would also help to educate Presbyterians by helping them to make the theological connection between faith and money as individuals regularly, repeatedly made the choice to link what and how they spend with what they believe in, what they choose to support, and how they choose to give.

This would increase personal connection to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) as individuals take regular, repeating actions to contribute to it.

The potential benefit of a “Presbyterian credit card” for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) could result in significant gains and substantial resources to augment our mission.

It therefore seems prudent to study and explore this possibility so that what we now currently earn for ourselves in terms of video rentals and free gas could instead be shared to bless the mission of the church by directly funding such worthwhile mission causes such as Basic Mission Support, One Great Hour of Sharing, The Fund for Theological Education, racial/ethnic schools—even individually chosen validated mission accounts listed as Extra Commitment Giving Opportunities.

We should check this out. What have we got to lose—except a few Blockbuster rentals!

GAC COMMENT ON ITEM 07-10

Comment on Item 07-10—From the General Assembly Council (GAC)

The General Assembly Council suggests disapproval of this commissioners’ resolution. The General Assembly Council staff have studied the feasibility of issuing a credit card for use by members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and concluded that doing so would not be a feasible undertaking for two reasons:

1. A successful affinity group credit card program requires a large membership list from which credit card companies would solicit new card ownership. The General Assembly Council does not have such a list. Congregations are the owners of their membership lists and many have been very reluctant to share those names for solicitation purposes.

2. Virtually all individuals in the United States already have several credit cards and in many cases have cards that provide them with additional benefits such as airline miles or discount points. A new card without such additional benefits would be a difficult sell.

Item 07-11

[The assembly disapproved Item 07-11. See p. 50.]

Commissioners' Resolution. On Developing a "Conceptual Framework for a New Mission Funding System."

That the 216th General Assembly (2004) do the following:

1. Acknowledge that our declining giving indicates a serious spiritual problem.
2. Recognize that our present funding system has become inadequate and regressive.
3. Encourage the General Assembly Council to refrain from implementation of the 5 percent/1 percent "contribution" on designated giving and require the GAC to inform donors affected by this policy if it is implemented.
4. Commend the General Assembly Council for its commitment to develop a new mission funding system and require that the GAC bring a recommendation for a "conceptual framework for a new mission funding system for the PC(USA)" [John Detterick, 12/19/03] to the 217th General Assembly (2006).

Rationale

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has been in a funding crisis for at least twenty years.

Presbyterians are part of the most affluent Christian denomination in history, but giving a decreasing percent of their income to their church.

Support of Presbyterian mission continues to decline both in total dollars and in inflation-adjusted dollars.

Patterns of mission support have changed from undesignated to designated, resulting in serious cutbacks in mission work and a third major General Assembly budget slashing in recent years.

The General Assembly Council has taken action to begin charging a variable rate "contribution to shared mission" of 5 percent or 1 percent on designated giving.

Jeffrey P. Black—Presbytery of Shenango
David Breckenridge—Presbytery of Western New York

GAC COMMENT ON ITEM 07-11

Comment on Item 07-11—From the General Assembly Council (GAC)

The General Assembly Council affirms Recommendations 1. and 2. in this commissioners' resolution. As to Recommendation 4., the General Assembly Council's Mission Work Plan contains an objective that calls for the development of a conceptual framework for a new mission funding system. This effort will begin during 2004, and the GAC will report on the conceptual framework at the 217th General Assembly (2006).

Relative to Recommendation 3., the General Assembly Council recognized the need for long-term solutions in deciding to work on a conceptual framework for a new mission funding system. The contribution to shared mission support of 5 percent was implemented only as a short-term solution until a satisfactory long-term solution could be developed. The 2005–2006 Proposed Mission Budget assumes that the contribution to shared mission support will recover approximately $1.8 million during the two-year budget period. Refraining from implementing the contribution would require the GAC to cut $1.8 million from other ministry and mission programs.

Item 07-12

[The assembly approved Item 07-12 with amendment. See pp. 50–51.]

Commissioners' Resolution. On Strengthening Hispanic Latino Ministry.

That the 216th General Assembly (2004) do the following:

1. Direct the General Assembly Council (GAC) to host a conversation prior to the September GAC meeting with representatives from GAC staff and elected members of the Hispanic-Latino Presbyterian Caucus, the Hispanic Advisory Committee, and the associate for Hispanic Congregational Enhancement, and others mutually determined, for the purposes of

- a. identifying areas of mutual ministry;
- b. exploring ways in which the Hispanic-Latino Ministry Strategy can be implemented over the next several years in partnership with the GAC, synods, and presbyteries;
- c. identifying opportunities for future conversations that assure open communication and shared commitment to development of materials and strategy;
- d. exploring ways in which the GAC and middle governing bodies can respond to the growing Hispanic-Latino population in the United States.

~~[2. To make the hiring of Hispanic-Latino staff a priority in filling staff positions until the racial ethnic percentages exceed those of the most immediate staff reduction.~~

~~[3. To commit sufficient budget resources to assure the implementation of the Hispanic Strategy Report.]~~

[2. To urge the hiring of racial ethnic staff as a priority in filling exempt staff positions, recognizing the need to hire Spanish-speaking, culturally proficient staff, until the racial ethnic percentages exceed those prior to the most immediate staff reduction.]

[3. To encourage the General Assembly Council to commit additional resources to assure the implementation of the Hispanic Strategy Report and to make this a priority for the 2007–08 budget.]

Rationale

The Racial Ethnic/Immigrant Church Growth Report, approved by the 208th General Assembly (1996), acknowledges the compelling needs for an intentional churchwide strategy for racial ethnic church growth. That General Assembly affirmed the goal of increasing the racial ethnic membership of PC(USA) to 10 percent by 2005 and 20 percent by 2010. Hispanic/Latino Presbyterians are committed to work in partnership with the GAC, synods, and presbyteries.

The most recent GAC budget cuts eliminated two of three Hispanic staff positions working directly with Hispano-Latino congregations, and simultaneously eliminated Presbyterian publishing of adult Spanish-language curriculum. This decision was unfortunately made without direct consultation with either the Hispanic Advisory Committee of the GAC or the National Hispanic-Latino Presbyterian Caucus. It is imperative that adequate support and resources be available in order to nurture and educate all of God's children.

There is no single population in the United States growing more rapidly than that of Hispanics and Latinos, according to the 2000 census. In the last three years alone, Hispanic and Latino Presbyterians have increased in number from 27,000 to 40,000, with every indication that the growth will continue. Resources are urgently needed to support fellowships, leadership development, new church developments, and training of pastors and commissioned lay pastors.

ACREC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 07-12

Advice and Counsel on Item 07-12—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns.

Item 07-12 calls for directing the General Assembly Council (GAC) to host a conversation prior to the September GAC meeting with representatives from GAC staff and elected members of the Hispanic Latino Presbyterian Caucus, the Hispanic Advisory Committee, and the Associate for Hispanic Congregational Enhancement, and others mutually determined.

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) advises that the 216th General Assembly (2004) approve Item 07-12 with amendment by adding the following recommendations:

“4. That there be better communication between the GAC and the racial ethnic constituencies before major decisions are made affecting their ministry.

“5. That there be adequate resources allocated to ensure the implementation of the Racial Ethnic Immigrant and Evangelism and Church Growth Strategy Report.

“6. That serious dialogue and discussion regarding concrete and substantial support for racial ethnic ministry be encouraged among all governing bodies in the denomination.”

Item 07-13

[The assembly approved Item 07-13 with comment. See p. 50.]

Congregational Ministries Division Final Response to Referral

2002 Referral: Item 09-04. Recommendation That the 214th General Assembly (2002) Grant a Two-Year Deferment to Congregational Ministries Division Publishing in Order to Make Available a “Library of Resources” in Addition to the Current General Assembly Action to “Review and Revise” the “God’s Gift of Sexuality” Curriculum [in response to Overture 00-70, 1999 Referral 27.007, Overture 99-46, and 2000 Referral 25.085]—From the General Assembly Council (Minutes, 2002, Part I, pp. 45, 493–94).

Response: (Background—In 2002, Congregational Ministries Division was given a two-year deferment to make available a “Library of Resources” as an alternative to the current General Assembly action to “Review and revise” “God’s Gift of Sexuality” in response to Overture 00-70, 1999 Referral 27.007, Overture 99-46, and 2000 Referral 25.085. This comment accompanied the action, “The Assembly Committee on Christian Education and Publications’ understanding is that the review and revision process will occur as part of customary, timely practices of the ... Congregational Ministries Division’s Congregational Ministries Publishing program area [Minutes, 2002, Part I, p. 45].)

In response to the 2002 General Assembly Item 09-04, Congregational Ministries Publishing has created a library of resources. As directed by the General Assembly, Congregational Ministries Publishing has made available “a ‘library of resources’... comprised of ... study aids; annotated bibliographies; specialized areas of concern related to human sexuality, such as incest, child abuse, and rape ... ; biblical and constitutional references ... ; providing congregations tools to create their own human sexuality learning events” (Ibid).

Item 07-14

Congregational Ministries Division Final Response to Referral

Alternate Resolution to 2003 Referral: Item 06-06. Overture 03-23. On Appointing a Pastoral Group Whose Primary Concern Would Be Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual and Transgendered Members and Their Families in Our Local Churches—From the Presbytery of Greater Atlanta (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 43–44, 401).

Response: (Background: Congregational Ministries Division has been directed to identify and post on the appropriate pages of the Congregational Ministries Division Web site existing resources and models consistent with current General Assembly policies to assist presbyteries, pastors, and sessions in their pastoral ministries to gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgendered members and their families.)

A Directory of Web Sites and Representative Bibliographies has been created and is available on-line at <http://www.pcusa.org/overture2000-38/>. It may also be obtained through Presbyterian Distribution Services at 1.800.524.2612. Ask for Item Number 067821, available at no charge. The directory contains a representative, rather than exhaustive, list of the wide-ranging resources, both secular and religious, for ministering to gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgendered persons.

The directory includes the statement, “The Church, Sexual Healing, and Transformation in Christ,” which was drafted by the 213th General Assembly (2001) in response to differing viewpoints on sexual healing. The statement reads as follows:

The Church, Sexual Healing, and Transformation in Christ

The 213th General Assembly (2001) offers the following words of affirmation and challenge to the individual members, sessions, and congregations of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) as they minister to those who struggle with transformational issues in the area of their sexual lives:

We believe, with Scripture, that “God is able to do far more abundantly than we could ask or think,” and that God wills us all to be a part of the “New Creation” that is possible in Jesus Christ.

We believe that this hope of transformation involves all of life, and we express our concern over divisions within the church that continue to be exacerbated by efforts that focus narrowly upon sexuality as the primary locus for defining purity of life.

We call attention to the action of the 211th General Assembly (1999) regarding “conversion therapies,” an approach related to “transformational ministries,” each of which, in its own way, is designed ... to bring about a reversal of sexual orientation and behavior in those who are self-identified as homosexual, and who express a desire to change:

The 211th General Assembly (1999) [of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)] affirms that the existing policy of inclusiveness welcomes all into membership of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) as we confess our sin and our need for repentance and God’s grace. In order to be consistent with this policy, no church should insist that gay and lesbian people need therapy to change to a heterosexual orientation, nor should it inhibit or discourage those individuals who are unhappy with or confused about their sexual orientation from seeking therapy they believe would be helpful. ... [The 211th General Assembly] affirms that medical treatment, psychological therapy, and pastoral counseling should be in conformity with recognized professional standards. (Minutes, 1999, Part I, p. 80)

Previous General Assemblies have noted that there is still no conclusive evidence clarifying the origin and basis for sexual orientation, or that “transformational/ conversional therapies” or “transformational ministries” are effective in bringing about lasting reversals in sexual orientation.

We should not reject the possibility of such change out of hand, but neither should we be blind to the dangers of offering false hopes. Given the complex realities surrounding the issue of sexual orientation, we join previous General Assemblies in declining to approve as policy a position that would place the General Assembly on only one side of the ambiguities that remain. (Minutes, 2001, Part I, p. 26)

Item 07-Info

A. The Presbyterian Council for Chaplains and Military Personnel Annual Report 2004

The Presbyterian Council for Chaplains and Military Personnel (PCCMP) represents four Presbyterian denominations in matters that relate to their chaplains and church members in the armed forces and the Veterans Affairs Medical Centers: The Cumberland Presbyterian Church in America (CPCA), The Cumberland Presbyterian Church (CPC), The Associate Reformed Presbyterian Church (ARP), and The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). Its twenty members are elected representatives from each denomination with the stated or principal clerks, or their designated representatives, serving ex-officio. Chaplain Edward Brogan is the director; Chaplain Thomas Chadwick is the associate director. The council's office is located at 4124 Van Ness Street, NW Washington D.C. 20016. Phone: (202) 244-4177, Email: chaplain@pccmp.org, Website: www.pccmp.org

The PCCMP has been extraordinarily active in its support of chaplains over the past year. Ever since 9-11, reserves have been mobilized in large numbers. That continues today with thirty-five reserve and National Guard chaplains having been mobilized for at least a part of 2003; a fresh wave of reserve and National Guard chaplains were mobilized in late 2003 and early 2004 as the first wave was demobilized and returned to pulpits around the nation. We have been in near constant contact with most of them from assisting in their entry in the active military to speaking with their families, churches, and presbyteries, to helping explain pension and USERRA rights, to providing support when they returned from the military. With many forces deployed to Afghanistan, Iraq, Bosnia, and Kosovo, the tempo of reserve utilization may remain high for several years. We've enjoyed assisting individuals, churches, presbyteries, and General Assembly offices in supporting deployed military members and chaplains. The PC(USA) Peacemaking office was especially helpful in posting the names of all of our deployed chaplains for prayer on the PC(USA) Website. We've also been gratified to see prayers offered, care packages mailed, and chaplains "adopted" by congregations.

Approximately forty of our active duty chaplains were deployed into Southwest Asia for actions regarding Iraq and Afghanistan. Many are still deployed. The ministry provided by them to military members and families has been remarkable. They have attended to those wounded in combat, have led memorial services and funerals, and have notified family members of loved ones killed or wounded. While performing those tasks, they've drawn close to the men and women in their units, leading many to professions of faith or revitalized faith. Bible studies, worship services in many informal settings, baptisms, and counseling sessions have been the daily work of our chaplains. We made personal visits to more than twenty-five of those active-duty chaplains shortly before they deployed for combat in Iraq. We saw them at Norfolk, Virginia, Fort Hood, Texas, Fort Sam Houston, Texas, Fort Campbell, Kentucky. We held a retreat for chaplains and families attended by thirty-five chaplains and fifty-five of their family members; several families came without their deployed chaplain members. We represented the church at retirement ceremonies for six chaplains. We were at funerals for several retired chaplains. As 2003 gave way to 2004, we found ourselves welcoming back many chaplains and encouraging others who were ready to take up ministry to our military members in a war zone.

The PCCMP has two core functions:

- The ecclesial duty of endorsement of clergy for service in the military and veteran's administration chaplaincies;
- The pastoral function of supporting those same clergy during their time of service.

Over the past year, we approved 15 for military chaplain candidate (seminarian) programs. We endorsed 9 for the Army, Navy, and Air Force; some are in the reserves while others went immediately to active-duty chaplaincy. We also endorsed 6 for the veteran's administration chaplaincy and 7 for the Civil Air Patrol (Air Force Auxiliary). Each approval or endorsement requires a collection of application, transcripts, presbytery approval, and letters of reference. After the documents are gathered, we interview the candidates. We spend a great deal of energy interpreting chaplain ministry to inquirers from our churches and seminaries.

Seminarians have given an increasing level of interest to chaplain ministry. Forty-two of them are serving summers as military chaplain candidates. If they find the ministry meaningful and to be their call, they will move easily into reserve and active duty service as military chaplains. Both Princeton and Pittsburgh seminaries hosted a chaplaincy day in November.

Our current data on chaplains by denomination is below. We provide endorsement and support to 46 seminarians and 335 clergy. Eighteen of the active duty are female as are two of our veteran's administration chaplains. Most of our presbyteries have participants in one or more of the chaplain programs. Among minorities represented are Native Americans, African Americans, Asian Americans, and Latino Americans. The military services are actively seeking to increase the number of women and minority chaplains; we have not even come close to filling their hopes for Presbyterian chaplains.

TOTALS	46	137	122	15	38	33

In 2003, the 30th anniversary year of the PCCMP, we attended General Assemblies or General Synod for all four of our denominations. The chaplain ministry is well-received and supported by each denomination. We also participate in the General Assembly Council (GAC) of the PC(USA) without vote; we do most of that work within the National Ministries Division. We hosted our annual meeting in Arlington, Virginia, in November. That meeting included a reception celebrating thirty years of cooperative ministry to the military by the PCCMP, serving its four member denominations; the Moderators of the PC(USA) and Cumberland Presbyterian Church were in attendance as well as the Principal Clerk of the CPCA and a Past Moderator of the ARPC.

The year 2003 marked a shift in the executive leadership of the PCCMP. Chaplain Tom Chadwick, after five years at the helm, shifted to a half-time associate position. Chaplain Ed Brogan became the new director on 1 July. We will continue to provide support for all facets of the PCCMP ministry but will reduce some portions of it after this loss of ½ of a staff person's year.

The ongoing pastoral care for chaplains is an extension of what presbyteries do through committees on ministry. We expect our chaplains to maintain a sound relationship with the PCCMP and their presbytery. We seek to keep a quarterly written contact with each active-duty chaplain. We augment that contact with email and telephone. We also make personal contact with each chaplain at least every other year with a visit to their duty station or a meeting at a gathering of chaplains. We also respond very quickly when chaplains and families are in crisis. The summer is a very active time for the PCCMP. We work hard to serve chaplains who are changing commands, moving from the U.S.A. overseas or the reverse. Quite a few stop by the office in the District of Columbia while in a move or when in Washington for military duty. The PCCMP also hosts an annual retreat for chaplains and families; this facilitates networking and mutual support for our Presbyterian clergy who are often isolated from other Presbyterian contact.

A secondary function performed solely for PC(USA) chaplains is the management of the Chaplain Deposit Fund. This fund was established by the UP and PCUS churches to provide pension coverage for military chaplains who separate before qualifying for a military pension. The fund is commingled with the PC(USA) Board of Pensions funds. The fund was self-sustaining from the mid 1990s until the stock market decline of 2001–2003. As of this year, approximately $26,000 of our funds are required to bolster the fund to ensure sufficient funds to cover liabilities. This is by agreement between the Board of Pensions (BOP) and the PCCMP.

The PCCMP works to interpret its mission and needs to the church. We had good support from Presbyterians Today and the Presbyterian News Service to explain what chaplains do. We've also been published in several seminary publications, the Outlook, and the Layman. We made visits to seven of our seminaries this year and to many presbyteries to interpret the chaplain story and the PCCMP mission. We were gratified to have our moderator, Susan Andrews, attend our 30th Anniversary reception and take time to visit with chaplains in the field. During the opening worship service of the 215th General Assembly (2003), new active-duty chaplains and retiring active-duty chaplains were recognized.

The PCCMP also maintains sound working relations with the Chiefs of Chaplains offices for each branch of the military and the veterans administration. It also offers leadership in the Military Chaplain Association, the National Conference on Ministry to the Armed Forces (NCMAF), and the Endorsers Council for Veterans Affairs Chaplaincy (ECVAC). The NCMAF is the advisory body to the secretary of defense on religion.

Keeping the ministry vital with adequate funding has been difficult. We have redoubled our development efforts, using a part-time development officer and several regional volunteer assistants. We have also found a new fund source in the Combined Federal Campaign. However, the bedrock of our financial health remains with the PC(USA). We are most appreciative of our restored covenant relationship and the inherent financial support of this ministry and function of the church.

B. Report of the General Assembly Council on Current Task Forces, Work Groups, and Ad Hoc Committees

As instructed by the 204th General Assembly (1992), the General Assembly Council presents to the General Assembly annually, the work of all task forces, work groups, ad hoc committees, and similar bodies established by the General Assembly Council, its Ministries Divisions, or other assembly entities (Minutes, 1992, Part I, pp. 144, 147, 277–78).

All Ministries Divisions and the Executive Director's Office were requested to disclose information on how many task forces, work groups, ad hoc committees, and similar bodies were currently at work in their entity. Of the entities responding, 74 such groups are currently operating; 59 of the groups were reported as having ongoing responsibilities. The other 15 groups have set completion dates with a written report expected by the entity, the General Assembly Council, or the General Assembly itself. Whenever it is possible, the General Assembly Council assigns tasks to an existing part of its structure. All persons serving on a board, committee, task force, or work group with an expected life of more than two years are selected through the General Assembly Nominating Committee process.

C. *Affirmative Action and Equal Employment Opportunity Report of Progress1. Introduction

Out of the various “calls” to mission, justice, equality, affirmation, love, hope, and charity, the partnership of congregations and governing bodies works to achieve the goals of equal employment opportunity and affirmative action.

2. Our Goals

As outlined in the Churchwide Plan for Affirmative Action and Equal Employment Opportunity, approved by the General Assembly in 1985, the church has accepted the EEO goals of 40 percent women and 20 percent racial ethnic as established by the General Assembly Council.

3. How the Information Is Reported

Entities of the General Assembly are reported separately as well as jointly. There are ten reporting categories:

- General Assembly Council (GAC);
- Office of the General Assembly (OGA);
- Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Board of Pensions (BOP);
- Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation (FDN);
- Presbyterian Publishing Corporation (PPC);
- Presbyterian Investment & Loan Program, Inc. (PILP);
- synods;
- presbyteries;
- theological institutions; and,
- conference centers including Ghost Ranch Abiquiu and Santa Fe, Stony Point and Montreat.

4. Our Results

All reporting entities met the 40 percent goal for women. General Assembly Council, Office of the General Assembly, Presbyterian Publishing Corporation, conference centers, theological institutions, Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation, and Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Board of Pensions met the 20 percent goal for racial ethnic persons.

D. Report to the 216th General Assembly (2004) from the General Assembly Council Regarding Changes to Appendix 1 of the General Assembly Council Manual of Operations, During Its Meeting February 10–14, 2004.

The General Assembly Council reports the following changes to Appendix 1 of the General Assembly Council Manual of Operations to the 216th General Assembly (2004): [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

1. Page 9, Section IV., seventh line: “. . . human resources, strategic planning, ~~mission funding~~ stewardship and mission funding . . .”
2. Page 17, 4.a.(1), fifth line: “Young Adult Network; ~~stewardship programs and resources~~”
3. Page 22, 3.d.(4): ~~Mission Funding and Development~~ Stewardship and Mission Funding

Rationale

The changes reflect the action taken by the General Assembly Council (GAC) during their meeting of February 10–14, 2004, to change the name of the Office of Mission Funding and Development to the Office of Stewardship and Mission Funding and to direct the necessary changes to the GAC Manual of Operations.

Changes to the appendixes are reported to the 216th General Assembly (2004) as information in order to comply with the GAC Manual of Operations, page 1: “The General Assembly Council may change those appendixes to the Manual of Operations that are within its venue. . . . The General Assembly Council Executive Committee shall submit a written report of changes to the appendixes to the next General Assembly through its appropriate committee.”

E. Report to the 216th General Assembly (2004) from the General Assembly Council Regarding Changes to Appendix 1 of the General Assembly Council Manual of Operations as Approved at the June 24, 2004, Meeting of the General Assembly Council.

The General Assembly Council reports the following change to Appendix 1 of the General Assembly Council Manual of Operations to the 216th General Assembly (2004): [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“The Executive Committee shall be composed of members of the General Assembly Council, including the General Assembly Council chair, vice chair, chair or designee of each of the three Ministries Divisions Committee, chair or designee of the Mission Support Services Committee, chair or designee of the Audit Committee; Moderator of the Churchwide Coordinating Team of Presbyterian Women, Moderator of the General Assembly and at-large members elected by the General Assembly Council. . . .”

Rationale

During its meeting of June 24, 2004, the General Assembly Council approved adding the moderator of the Churchwide Coordinating Team of Presbyterian Women as an ex-officio member of the General Assembly Council Executive Committee, to be effective July 1, 2004.

1. Transforming Faith into Mission

“The gifts he gave were that some would be apostles, some prophets, some evangelists, some pastors and teachers, to equip the saints for the work of ministry, for building up the body of Christ, until [we all attain] to the unity of the faith and of the knowledge of the Son of God . . .” (Eph. 4:11–13).

The General Assembly Council (GAC) provides leadership for the church’s mission directives, supports governing bodies in our common mission, and acts on behalf of the church on policy matters when the General Assembly is not in session. The General Assembly Council is an elected body of 72 ministers and elders responsible to the General Assembly. The GAC ministries address the needs of a dynamic church in an ever-changing world by focusing on three settings—Congregational, National and Worldwide.

The Office of the Executive Director and Mission Support Services complement that work by managing the day-to-day mission-related and business activities of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). More than 500 staff members in Louisville, Kentucky, and another 160 around the country carry out the council’s work.

In 2003:

- The GAC made significant strides in claiming its leadership and visionary role to clarify its purpose, vision and mission. A first step was to develop a set of core values to guide its work: celebration, proclamation, stewardship, nurture, trust, openness, partnership and vision.
- The council then identified its priorities in carrying out the ministry of the PC(USA) as faithful stewards in a time of limited resources. They are evangelism and witness; justice and compassion; spirituality and discipleship; and leadership and vocation.
- These values and priorities are part of the Mission Work Plan for 2005–2006 and will be presented at the 216th General Assembly in June 2004.
- GAC Executive Director John Detterick called the plan “a new day . . . a new chapter in the life of the General Assembly Council.”
- Using a “decision-by-consensus” model in establishing these priorities, the council demonstrated a new way for Presbyterians to overcome differences and reach decisions representing their collective best judgment while being open to the guidance of the Holy Spirit.
- The GAC also managed a 2003 mission budget of $123.6 million—$4.5 million less than the original spending plan envisioned by the 2002 General Assembly.

Jesus said, “[Now that] I, your Lord and Teacher, have washed your feet, you also [should] wash one another's feet” (John 13:14). General Assembly Council ministries address the needs of the church and the people it serves in three settings—congregational, national, and worldwide.

2. Smash-Hit Curriculum Keys $1 Million Turnaround

Determined cost-cutting and booming sales of the new denominational curriculum, “We Believe: God’s Word for God’s People,” combined to produce a $1 million turnaround in Congregational Ministries Publishing (CMP). The addition of unrestricted mission dollars to the projected income from curriculum sales created a sound financial base for planning. An affordable curriculum for churches with limited resources was delivered on time. Most gratifying was the ability to add $750,000 in excess income to the Presbyterian Mission Program Fund. Instead of drawing funds to meet deficits, contributing was a wonderful turnaround.

CMP also produces other popular materials, including the Mission Yearbook for Prayer and Study and the Presbyterian Program Calendar. A new publication—the Children’s Mission Yearbook for Prayer and Study—was a runaway hit, selling more than 25,000 copies in the first few months after its publication. The book, based on the popular counterpart for adults, offers mission stories, Scriptures and prayers, games and puzzles, recipes and activity ideas. Learn more about “We Believe” at www.pcusa.org/webelieve. Learn more about the mission yearbooks at www.pcusa.org/missionyearbook. Order online at these Web sites or call (800) 524-2612.

3. Congregational Ministries

The goal of the Congregational Ministries Division (CMD) is to equip and inspire Presbyterian congregations to deepen the faith of their members and to witness more powerfully to the gospel of Jesus Christ. CMD also nurtures church leaders and fosters cooperation among PC(USA) congregations, presbyteries, synods, seminaries, and conference centers.

In 2003:

- The Office of Spiritual Formation produced Lord, Teach Us to Pray, a 244-page guide to Reformed spiritual practices and disciplines for children and adults. Learn more about this guide at www.pcusa.org/spiritualformation
- The Office of Theology and Worship spearheaded “Emerging Worship,” an ecumenical, multicultural movement celebrating worship practices that are authentic, faithful to tradition, and tailored to congregations. Learn more about “Emerging Worship” at www.emergingworship.org.
- The Office of Theological Education facilitated two for-credit courses designed to inform seminarians about the structure and mission of the PC(USA). They provided firsthand experience at a meeting of the General Assembly or at the Presbyterian Center in Louisville and were made possible as a result of collaboration involving the Committee on Theological Education, PC(USA) seminaries, the General Assembly Council, and the Office of the General Assembly. Learn more at www.pcusa.org/seminaries.

- The Presbyterian Peacemaking Program sponsored twelve international peacemakers from PC(USA) partner churches around the world who traveled throughout the United States and spoke to more than 65,000 Presbyterians about their churches' peacemaking efforts and their peace and justice concerns.
- The Presbyterian United Nations Office in New York organized a meeting in which an ecumenical group of church leaders spoke with UN Secretary-General Kofi Annan about the importance of getting humanitarian aid to civilians affected by the U.S. war in Iraq. Learn more at www.pcusa.org/peacemaking.
- Youth and Young Adult Ministries sponsored a Youth Connection Assembly, "Shine Like the Stars," where almost 600 young people discussed real-world issues and debated thirty-four resolutions. Learn more at www.pcusa.org/youthministry or www.pcusa.org/youngadult.
- The denomination's three conference centers—Ghost Ranch in New Mexico, Stony Point Center in New York, and Montreat in North Carolina—extended Christian hospitality to more than 65,000 participants in conferences and other events. Learn more at www.pcusa.org/conferenceministries/nationalsites.

4. National Ministries

The National Ministries Division (NMD) addressed a wide range of church concerns, including programs in evangelism, justice, and leadership development. The division provided valuable churchwide services, promoted church policies and actions, and worked cooperatively with governing bodies, networks, and ecumenical associates to advance the mission programs of the denomination.

In 2003:

- Presbyterian Women welcomed more than 4,000 women and men, including 60 global partners from more than 30 countries, to its Gathering 2003 in Louisville.
- The National Network of Presbyterian College Women organized Racial Ethnic Young Women Together to promote leadership opportunities for young women of color.
- Financial Aid for Studies awarded $2.6 million in scholarships, grants, and loans to 1,891 college and seminary students.
- Churchwide Personnel Services supported a National Volunteers Program to inspire young people to be church leaders, assigning thirty-two young adult volunteers and nine young adult interns to ministry sites around the country.
- Church Leadership Connection, the PC(USA)'s system for matching call-seeking ministers and available positions, assisted about 1,100 church professionals and 1,600 search committees. Learn more at www.pcusa.org/clc.
- The Board of Pensions and Churchwide Personnel Services co-sponsored four regional programs for first-call pastors.
- The Office of New Church Development established a coaching network for NCD pastors and added a track for pastors to its annual conference.
- Congregational Transformation staff held a consultation on renewing churches in rural settings and eight training events for rural and small-church congregations.
- The Office of Presbyterian Evangelism assisted in the production of the "Here and Now" national media campaign promoting the PC(USA).
- The Evangelism and Racial/Cultural Diversity office provided start-up grants for multicultural fellowships at Austin Theological Seminary, Louisville Presbyterian Seminary, San Francisco Theological Seminary, and Union Theological Seminary and Presbyterian School of Christian Education.
- The Racial Ethnic Ministries program area sponsored ninety-six Bible Study Fellowships in partnership with presbyteries and constituency groups throughout the country.
- The National Korean Presbyterian Council drew more than 400 participants to its annual training event, bringing first and second-generation Korean-American Presbyterians together for the first time.
- Environmental Justice Office purchased "wind-power credits" to offset the greenhouse gases generated in providing power to the 215th General Assembly (2003).
- The Mission Responsibility Through Investment program (MRTI) provided expert testimony before Congress in hearings on the predatory lending practices of some U.S. banks.
- Health Ministries USA organized a conference, Encircling Care, on congregational care-giving for families facing Alzheimer's disease, and created three related online discussion groups at its Web site, www.pcusa.org/health/usa.

- The Washington Office lobbied for immigration reform; supported increased funding for programs that fight AIDS in Africa; reminded Congress and the Bush Administration that alleviation of poverty is a primary goal of the federal welfare program; and briefed officials on the effects of Israeli and US policy on PC(USA) church partners in the occupied territories. Learn more at www.pcusa.org/washington.

5. Worldwide Ministries

It is through the Worldwide Ministries Division (WMD) that the PC(USA) shares the transforming power of the gospel of Jesus Christ with people and nations all over the Earth. The WMD joins in Christian ministry with about 165 partner churches and institutions around the world; supports mission personnel in more than seventy countries; and responds to human needs through ministries of compassion and justice. Learn more at www.pcusa.org/wmd.

In 2003:

- WMD recruited twenty-eight new international mission workers, who composed the largest orientation class in three years. The newly commissioned missionaries will serve in ministries in evangelism, justice, reconciliation, pastoral care, administration, health, and education—in Brazil, China, Congo, Egypt, Ethiopia, Haiti, India, Korea, Nicaragua, Malawi, Mexico, Pakistan, Spain, South Africa, Thailand, and in an unchurched part of Central Asia. Learn more about mission service opportunities at www.pcusa.org/msr.

- Presbyterian Disaster Assistance helped create a community from scratch on a former chicken ranch in El Salvador, moving 875 survivors of a 2001 earthquake from substandard housing into 210 newly built homes. The project continues in 2004 with the building of thirty more homes, a school, and a community center.

- WMD directed Presbyterians' disaster-relief contributions to Afghanistan, California, Iran, Iraq, Liberia, West Virginia, and many other places, demonstrating Christ's love for survivors of natural and human-made calamities. Learn more about Presbyterian Disaster Assistance at www.pcusa.org/pda.

- WMD increased from four to nine the number of its mission networks—organizations linking U.S. congregations, presbyteries, and synods that share an interest in mission in a particular country or among a particular group. The existing networks focus on Congo, Cuba, Ghana, Guatemala, Kenya, Malawi, Sudan, global education, and the Kurdish people. Eight network start-ups are planned in 2004, for supporters of mission in Cameroon, Colombia, Ethiopia, Egypt, Nicaragua, South Africa, Thailand, and Vietnam. Learn more by calling (888) 728-7228, ext. 8185.

- Through the Presbyterian Hunger Program's collaboration with the Lambi Fund, WMD aided small farmers and landless peasants in Haiti by organizing them into cooperatives and helping them acquire irrigation pumps. Learn more at www.pcusa.org/pcusa/wmd/hunger.

- WMD helped celebrate milestone anniversaries of two partner churches in Brazil—the 100th anniversary of the Independent Presbyterian Church of Brazil and the 25th birthday of the United Presbyterian Church of Brazil.

- Through the NetWorkers Malaria Prevention Program, WMD provided prevention training and insecticide—treated mosquito nets to thousands of people in more than a dozen areas in Africa and Asia, fighting a disease that kills an estimated two million people every year, most of them children under five and pregnant women. Learn more at www.pcusa.org/health/international

- Through the Self Development of People Program, WMD established partnerships with Peruvian craftswomen who have AIDS, mushroom farmers in Cameroon, fishermen in India, tortilla-makers in Costa Rica, a widows' group in India that raises buffaloes, and farmers in Uganda who are replacing a virus-prone variety of the cassava plant with a resistant type. Learn more at www.pcusa.org/pcusa/wmd/sdop

In the 2004–2005 Horizons Bible study “What She Said: Quotable Women in Scripture,” Dale Lindsay, General Assembly Council member and pastor, explores what biblical women said and what their stories mean for us today. To order, call the Presbyterian Distribution Services at (800) 524-2612 or go to www.pcusa.org/marketplace.

Members of the Sinikithemba Choir of South Africa joined others in a celebration of worship at the 2003 Gathering of Presbyterian Woman in Louisville last July. All members of the choir are HIV positive, yet continue to live with joy and purpose in the midst of devastating loss.

a. PresbyTel

Any questions? PresbyTel, the churchwide information service, has all the answers—and here's how you can get them: By phone (toll-free) at (800) UP-2-DATE (872-3283); by fax at (502) 569-8099; by email at presbytel@pcusa.org; over PresbyNet, at Inbox Name: PRESBYTEL; at the Web site: www.pcusa.org/search/search-presbytel.

In 2003, PresbyTel answered questions—some elementary, some obscure, some bizarre—from more than 10,000 Presbyterian callers and 4,000 others who inquired by email. PresbyTel also created and maintains the “Presbyterian 101” documents available at the PC(USA)'s Web site, www.pcusa.org/101/index.htm; collectively, these texts, written to address the questions PresbyTel hears most often.

b. $40 Million Mission Campaign Gets New Name, Logo, Director

The $40 million campaign to raise funds for mission personnel overseas and for church development and transformation in the United States got a new name, a new logo, and a new director last year.

The five-year campaign, originally called the Mission Initiative, became the Mission Initiative—Joining Hearts and Hands, A Campaign to Renew the Church for Mission. Its goals are to expand the church's overseas missionary force and support new and existing churches at home, especially in immigrant and racial ethnic communities.

According to the new director, Jan Opdyke, the initiative has received $675,000 in cash and $5.4 million in pledges so far, and last year began moving from the preparation phase to full-scale campaigning. Pledges and contributions have come from 226 individuals, 70 congregations, and 10 presbyteries. Cash receipts for 2003 totaled $614,670, up from $60,805 the previous year. The 212th General Assembly (2002) approved the campaign in response to an overture to the 200th General Assembly (1998). The 2002 commissioners kicked in $16,000, and members of the GAC have pledged more than $27,000.

To get involved in the campaign or make a contribution, call Becca Snipp at (888) 728-7228. Learn more at www.pcusa.org/joiningheartsandhands.

c. Pakistani President, Alumnus Returns College To PC(USA)

Forman Christian College, the crown jewel of Presbyterian educational mission in Pakistan, was returned to the PC(USA) last year, thirty-one years after it was nationalized by the government. Intensive negotiations with four different governments over nine years involved S. David Stoner, a former GAC executive director, the Church of Pakistan, and the Presbyterian Church of Pakistan. The college is now governed by an independent board composed of Pakistani Christians.

In December, Gen. Pervez Musharraf, Pakistan's president, visited the campus and formally returned the school to the PC(USA). Musharraf, a Forman graduate, commended the PC(USA) for its contributions to his country. Since the college was officially returned to the PC(USA) last year, the denomination has been working with Pakistani churches to restore the physical plant, academic standing, and Presbyterian heritage of the college.

The college was founded by Presbyterian missionaries in 1864.

FCC President Peter Armacost, a former president of Presbyterian-related Eckerd College in Florida, said: "We have the opportunity to be a model of what a Christian College should be in an Islamic republic." Learn more about global education at www.pcusa.org/globaled

d. Liberia

A fourteen-year civil war and the resulting political upheaval forced tens of thousands of Liberian families to flee their homes in search of safety in August 2003. Presbyterian Disaster Assistance helped Liberians plan and respond to the crisis, contributed $270,000 for humanitarian relief from One Great Hour of Sharing funds and designated gifts, and continues to support Liberians as they rebuild their communities.

e. PC(USA) Missionary in Sudan Receives Wallenberg Award

The Reverend Haruun Ruun, a PC(USA) missionary who has worked tirelessly for peace in his native Sudan, was the 2003 recipient of the prestigious Spirit of Raoul Wallenberg Humanitarian Award. He received the prize from Sweden's Crown Princess Victoria in a November ceremony at the American Swedish Historical Museum in Philadelphia.

Ruun, who is also under mission appointment with the Reformed Church of America and the Church of the Brethren, is executive secretary of the New Sudan Council of Churches.

He said he accepted the prize on behalf of the thousands of Sudanese "who have for too long been victims of conflict, war, terrorism, human-rights abuses, injustice, slavery, rape, genocide, oppression, depopulation, forced migration and deprivation of human, social and economic rights."

The PC(USA) has had mission workers in Sudan for more than a century. Learn more about mission workers at www.pcusa.org/missionconnections.

6. GAC Mission Funding

How to Give

If you or your congregation would like to make a Basic Mission Support gift to the PC(USA), go to www.pcusa.org/gift.htm. To give a directed gift you'll need the church's directory of 200 mission projects around the world. To get a copy, call the Presbyterian Distribution Service at (800) 524-2612 and ask for PDS 6870003050.

The General Assembly Council is both the mission agency of the PC(USA) and the elected body that oversees its work. The elected council of 72 ministers and elders advises and serves the General Assembly in setting priorities, managing programs, and devising strategies for ministry and mission. The council meets three times a year.

Item 08-01

[The assembly approved Item 08-01 with amendment. See p. 15.]

The Presbyterian Publishing Corporation (PPC) recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) authorize the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation, the Office of Theology and Worship, and the Presbyterian Association of Musicians to begin research into the feasibility of a new Presbyterian hymnal, [that the feasibility report be given to the 217th General Assembly (2006),] and further that, subject to action of a future General Assembly upon presentation and approval of a comprehensive publication plan, the 216th General Assembly (2004) designate the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation as the prospective publisher of the next Presbyterian hymnal, which would be developed in partnership with the Office of Theology and Worship and the Presbyterian Association of Musicians.

Rationale

The development of the current Presbyterian Hymnal began in 1983 and the hymnal itself was published in 1990. According to the Hymn Society in the United States and Canada, the average lifespan of a denominational hymnal is between fifteen and twenty years because of changing theological understandings, ecumenical, theological, liturgical, and musical research, and consultation. Since our last hymnal was produced, the PC(USA) has witnessed a significant increase in the use of the Revised Common Lectionary, and a renewed and deepened living of the liturgical year.

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) historically has produced a new hymnal every twenty years. There is agreement among liturgical, music, and theological scholars that in the Reformed tradition the hymns that the people sing and come to know have a profound influence on both the individual's and the church's faith formation and developments.

Areas of research that will be undertaken will include the following:

1. A research process to assess the need for a new hymnal, including
  - a. the advantages and disadvantages,
  - b. the growth or increase of multicultural congregations, and
  - c. the effects of the decline of singing in our culture on the worship and faith of the church.
2. Identifying areas of theological and liturgical weakness in previous hymnals.
3. Investigating the effects of electronics and electronic media on the church.
4. Studying the influence of the increasing use of the Revised Common Lectionary on the worship and hymnody of the church.
5. Investigating the influence of the increasingly important place the sacraments have in the worship life of the church, and the effect this has had on recent hymn writing.
6. Trying to determine why 46 percent of our member congregations apparently do not use the 1990 hymnal.
7. Studying a new hymnal's relationship to other PC(USA) worship resources.
8. Beginning planning for: field testing of a potential new hymnal; training events for clergy and musicians; marketing of a new hymnal; potential spin-off resources that could accompany and supplement a new hymnal; and introduction of the new hymnal to the church.

The planning, development, and publication of a new hymnal can be expected to take seven to ten years. The executive director of the Presbyterian Association of Musicians (PAM), by letter dated January 28, 2004, has proposed to the Board of Directors of the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation (PPC) that PPC, the Office of Theology and Worship, PAM, and a representative of the Executive Director's Office of the General Assembly Council begin researching the many aspects of the need for and scope of a new hymnal. The Board of Directors of PPC, by unanimous action on February 6, 2004, supported the PAM proposal and authorized that this recommendation be forwarded to the 216th General Assembly (2004).

The Presbyterian Publishing Corporation (PPC), as the official denominational publisher of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), the Office of Theology and Worship, and the Presbyterian Association of Musicians seek the recommendation of the 216th General Assembly (2004) to work in partnership to begin research on the possibilities for a new Presbyterian hymnal that would include an array of hymns, psalms, and spiritual songs that are gender inclusive, appropriate for use by all PC(USA) congregations, and representative of the multi-ethnic and cultural traditions of the denomination.

Item 08-02

[The assembly approved Item 08-02. See p. 15.]

The Presbyterian Publishing Corporation recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) approve the revised Bylaws (Appendix 1), Articles of Incorporation (Appendix 2), and the Organization for Mission of the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation (Appendix 3).

Rationale

This recommendation is in response to the following referrals:

- 2003 Referral: Item 02-03. Recommendation C. All Corporations Shall Amend, as Necessary, Their Articles of Incorporation, Bylaws, and Other Pertinent Documents to Carry into Effect the Purposes and Intent of this Deliverance and Related Enactments of the General Assembly; Report Such Amendments to the 216th General Assembly (2004) (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 34, 124).

- 2003 Referral: Item 13-03. Recommendation The Curriculum Publishing Change, the Additional Trade Name, and the Original Trade Name Should Be Noted in Appropriate Attachments or Amendments to the Deliverance, the Organization for Mission, and PPC's Articles of Incorporation and Bylaws (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 49, 666, 670).

Item 02-03 (Recommendation C) and Item 13-03 from the 215th General Assembly (2003) require changes to the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation (PPC) Bylaws, Articles of Incorporation, and the Organization for Mission.

In Item 02-03 (Recommendation C), it was approved by the 215th General Assembly (2003) to change the terms for the board of directors to be in compliance with the biennial assembly format.

In Item 13-03, the General Assembly Committee on Review recommended to the 215th General Assembly (2003) that changes be made to the Bylaws, Articles of Incorporation, and the Organization for Mission to more accurately reflect the organization of PPC. The 215th General Assembly (2003) approved this recommendation and requested that PPC report on these changes to the 216th General Assembly (2004).

AMENDED AND RESTATED BYLAWS OF PRESBYTERIAN PUBLISHING CORPORATION

ARTICLE I OFFICES

The principal office of Presbyterian Publishing Corporation (“Corporation”) in the Commonwealth of Kentucky shall be located at 100 Witherspoon Street, Louisville, Kentucky 40202-1396. The Corporation may have such other offices, either within or without the Commonwealth of Kentucky, as may be established by the Board of Directors from time to time.

ARTICLE II RESTRICTIVE PROVISIONS

A. The Corporation shall distribute its income for each taxable year at such time and in such manner so as not to become subject to the tax on undistributed income imposed by Section 4942 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, or corresponding provisions of any subsequent federal tax laws.

B. The Corporation shall not engage in any act or self-dealing, as defined in Section 4941(d) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, or corresponding provisions of any subsequent federal tax laws.

C. The Corporation shall not retain any excess business holdings, as defined in Section 4943(c) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, or corresponding provisions of any subsequent federal tax laws.

D. The Corporation shall not make any investments in such manner as to subject it to tax under Section 4944 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, or corresponding provisions of any subsequent federal tax laws.

E. The Corporation shall not make any taxable expenditures, as defined in Section 4945(d) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, or corresponding provisions of any subsequent federal tax laws. The provisions set out above require the Corporation to distribute its income in such manner as to avoid imposition taxes under Section 4942 of the Code, and prohibit the Corporation from engaging in any acts contrary to Sections 4941, 4943, 4944 and 4945. Accordingly it is intended that the provisions meet the requirements of Section 508(e) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as amended.

ARTICLE III BOARD OF DIRECTORS

A. Members of the Board of Directors. The affairs of the Corporation shall be conducted by a Board of Directors of not less than three (3) ~~nor more than nine (9) persons, one of whom would be~~ and up to twelve (12) members, ~~the Corporation’s President and Publisher, and one of whom would be the Executive Director of the General Assembly Council of the Presbyterian Church (USA), and the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly or their designee shall serve as ex-officio members without vote.~~ The management and disposition of the affairs and property of the Corporation shall be vested in Directors who shall be selected from time-to-time by the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (USA) (“the General Assembly”), in such number, and for such terms, and who may include such a number of ex officio directors, who should be selected in such a manner as the General Assembly may determine. The number of such Directors may be increased or decreased at any time by the General Assembly, and in the case of an increase, the additional Directors shall be selected by or in the manner determined by the General Assembly. All the business and affairs of said Corporation shall be conducted by the Directors under and subject to the direction of the General Assembly or any officer or agency thereunto duly authorized, so far as such direction shall be in accordance with the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), the laws of the Commonwealth of Kentucky and of the United States of America. No material change concerning this provision shall be made in these Bylaws without the prior approval of the General Assembly. The Board shall include Directors with expertise in business management, finance, religious scholarship and theological education, law, ~~and~~ publishing, and congregational pastoral expertise.

B. Rights of Directors. The right of a Director to vote and all of his or her right, title, and interest in or to the Corporation shall cease on the termination of his or her membership as a Director. No Director shall be entitled to share in the distribution of the corporate assets upon the dissolution of the Corporation.

C. Resignation of Directors. Any Director may resign from the Corporation by delivering a written resignation to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) with a copy to the Chairperson or Secretary of the Board.

D. Annual Meeting. The annual meeting of the Directors of the Corporation shall be held at the principal office of the Corporation or any other place so designated for the purpose of transacting such business as may properly come before the meeting.

E. Notice of Annual Meeting. Notice of the time, place, and purpose or purposes of the annual meeting shall be served, either personally or by mail, not less than ten (10) nor more than forty (40) days before the meeting upon each person who appears on the books of the Corporation as a member of the Board of Directors, and if mailed, such notice shall be directed to the Director at his or her address as it appears in the books of the Corporation, unless he or she shall have filed with the Secretary of the Corporation a written request that notices intended for the Director be mailed to some other address, in which case it shall be mailed to the address designated in such request.

F. Special Meetings. Special meetings of the Directors, other than those regulated by statute, may be called at any time by the Chairperson. It shall also be called by the Chairperson or Secretary upon receipt of a written request of one-third (1/3) of the Directors of the Corporation to hold such a meeting. Special meetings may be held by telephone conference call or similar communications equipment provided that all Directors participating in such meeting can speak to and hear one another. Participation in a telephone conference call constitutes presence in person at such meeting. Minutes of special conference call meetings will be taken by the corporate Secretary and become a part of the official minutes of the Board.

G. Notice of Special Meetings. Notice of the special meetings stating the time, place, and purpose or purposes shall be served personally or by mail upon each member residing within the United States, not less than five (5) nor more than forty (40) days before such meeting, and, if mailed, such notice shall be directed to each Director at his or her address as it appears on the books or records of the Corporation unless he or she shall have filed with the Secretary of the Corporation a written request that notices intended for him or her shall be mailed to some other address, in which case it shall be mailed to the address designated in such request. In the case of conference calls, the date and time of such meeting will be determined by advance phone calls to all Directors by the corporate Secretary.

H. Quorum. At any meeting of the Directors of the Corporation the presence of a majority of the Directors in person shall be necessary to constitute a quorum for all purposes except as otherwise provided by law, and the act of the majority of the Directors present at any meeting at which there is a quorum shall be the act of the full Board of Directors except as may otherwise specifically be provided by statute or by these Bylaws. All quorum provisions will apply to telephone conference calls.

I. Voting. Any action required to be taken at a meeting of the Directors may be taken without a meeting if a consent in writing, setting forth the action so taken, shall be signed by all of the Directors.

J. General Assembly Nominating Committee (“Committee”). It is the duty of the Committee to nominate the Board of Directors.

K. Waiver of Notice. Whenever under the provisions of any law, or under the provisions of the Articles of Incorporation or Bylaws of the Corporation, the Corporation or the Board of Directors or any committee that is authorized to take any action after notice to the Directors of the Corporation, such action may be taken without notice, if at any time before or after such action be completed, such requirements be waived in writing by the person or persons entitled to such notice or entitled to participate in the action to be taken.

L. Removal of Directors of the Board. Any Director of the Board may be removed from his or her position as a Director or from office by the affirmative vote of a majority of the full Board of Directors at any regular or special meeting called for that purpose for conduct detrimental to the interest of the Corporation, for lack of sympathy with its objectives, or for refusal to render reasonable assistance in carrying out its purposes. Any such Director proposed to be removed shall be entitled to at least five (5) days notice in writing by mail of the meeting at which such removal is voted upon and shall be entitled to appear before and be heard at such meeting.

M. Vacancies. In the case of a vacancy in the Board of Directors by death, resignation, retirement, disqualification, or any other cause, a majority or the remaining Directors may, subject to the approval of the General Assembly Nominating Committee, appoint a successor Director to serve until the next meeting of the General Assembly or until his or her successor is appointed.

N. Compensation/Expenses. Directors shall not receive any stated salary for their services as such, but by resolution of the Board of Directors, shall be entitled to receive a fixed reasonable sum or expenses of attendance, or both, for attendance at each regular or special meeting. The Board of Directors shall have the power at its discretion to contract for and to pay to Directors rendering unusual or special services to the Corporation, special compensation appropriate to the value of such services.

O. Chairperson of the Board of Directors. The Chairperson of the Board of Directors shall preside at all meetings of the Board of Directors, have general charge and supervision of the affairs of the Board of Directors, and shall perform such other duties as may be assigned to him or her by the Board of Directors. The Chairperson of the Board of Directors shall be elected by a majority of all the Directors from its members. Such Chairperson of the Board of Directors may be removed by a vote of a majority of all Directors.

ARTICLE IV OFFICERS OF THE CORPORATION

A. Number. The Officers of the Corporation shall be the President and Publisher, Vice President, Secretary, Treasurer, and such other officers with such powers and duties not inconsistent with these Bylaws as may be appointed and determined by the Board of Directors. Any two offices, except those of the President and Publisher and Secretary, may be held by the same person, and there may be more than one person holding the same office.

B. Election, Term of Office, and Qualifications. The Officers shall be elected by the Board of Directors from its members and among such other persons as the Board of Directors may see fit, at the annual meeting of the Board of Directors of the Corporation for a term of four years. The Officers will be subject to concurrence of the General Assembly Council.

C. Vacancies. In case any office of the Corporation becomes vacant by death, resignation, retirement, disqualification, or any other cause, the majority of the Directors in office may elect an Officer to fill such vacancy, and the Officer so elected shall hold and serve until the next annual meeting of the Board of Directors or until the election and qualification of his or her successor.

D. President and Publisher. With confirmation of the General Assembly, the Board shall elect a President and Publisher for a term of four years, who is eligible for reelection. The President and Publisher shall be a voting member of the Board and have authority to conduct the Corporation's day-to-day operations including, but not limited to, the following:

1. developing the staff structure and hiring personnel;
2. determining compensation and benefits;
3. setting personnel procedures;
4. overseeing editorial decisions;
5. supervision of product production, marketing, sales, distribution and storage;
6. setting policy norms for contracts and royalties;
7. financial management and accounting; and
8. selection of management information system.

E. Vice- President. At the request of the President and Publisher, or in the event of his or her absence or disability, the Vice President shall perform the duties and possess the powers of the President and Publisher and such other powers as the Board of Directors may determine, and shall perform such duties as may be assigned to him or her by the Board of Directors.

F. Secretary. The Secretary shall have charge of books, documents, and papers as the Board of Directors may determine and shall have the custody of the corporate seal. He or she shall attend and keep the minutes of all of the meetings of the Board of Directors of the Corporation. He or she shall keep a record, containing the names, alphabetically arranged, of all persons who are Directors of the Corporation, showing places of residence, and such books shall be opened for inspection as prescribed by law. He or she may sign with the President and Publisher or Vice President, in the name and on behalf of the Corporation, any contracts or agreements authorized by the Board of Directors, and when so authorized or ordered by the Board of Directors, he or she may have fixed the seal of the Corporation. He or she shall, in general, perform all the duties incident to the office of Secretary, subject to the control of the Board of Directors, and shall do such other duties as may be assigned to him or her by the Board of Directors.

G. Treasurer. The Treasurer shall have the custody of all funds, property, and securities of the Corporation, subject to such regulations as may be imposed by the Board of Directors. He or she may be required to give bond for the faithful performance of his or her duties, in such sum and with such sureties as the Board of Directors may require. When necessary he or she may endorse on behalf of the Corporation for collection checks, notices, and other obligations, and shall deposit the same to the credit of the Corporation at such banks or bank or depository as the Board of Directors may designate. He or she shall sign all receipts and vouchers and, together with such other Officer or Officers, if any, that shall be designated by the Board of Directors. He or she shall sign all checks of the Corporation, all Bills of Exchange or Promissory Notes issued by the Corporation, except in cases where the signing and execution shall be expressly designated by the Board of Directors or by the Bylaws to some other Officer or agent of the Corporation. He or she shall make such payments as may be necessary on behalf of the Corporation. He or she shall enter regularly on the books of the Corporation to be kept by him or her for the purpose of obtaining a full and accurate account of all moneys and obligations received and paid or incurred by him or her for the account of the Corporation, and shall exhibit such books at all reasonable times to any Director on application at the offices of the Corporation. He or she shall, in general, perform all the duties incident to the office of Treasurer, subject to the control of the Board of Directors.

H. Salaries. The salaries of all Officers shall be fixed by the Board of Directors, shall be reasonable in amount and the fact that any Officer is a Director of the Corporation or member of an Advisory committee, shall not preclude the Officer receiving a salary or voting on the resolution providing for the same.

I. Removal. Any Officer may be removed from office by the affirmative vote of a majority of all Directors at any regular or special meeting called for that purpose when in their judgment it is determined to be in the best interests of the Corporation.

ARTICLE V INDEMNIFICATION OF DIRECTORS & OFFICERS

A. Generally. The Corporation shall, to the fullest extent permitted by law, indemnify each of its Directors and/or Officers against expenses (including counsel fees), judgments, taxes, fines, and amounts paid in settlement, incurred by him or her in connection therewith, and shall advance expenses (including counsel fees) incurred by him or her in defending any threatened, pending, or contemplated action, suit, or proceeding (whether civil, criminal, administrative, or investigative) to which he or she is threatened to be made a party by reason of the fact that he or she is or was a Director and/or Officer, or is or was serving at its request as a Director and/or Officer, of another domestic or foreign corporation, partnership, joint venture, trust, or other enterprise.

B. Insurance. The Corporation may purchase and maintain insurance on behalf of any person who is or was entitled to indemnification as described above, whether or not the Corporation would have the power or be obligated to indemnify him or her against such liability under either this Article V or the Act.

C. Repeal or Modification. Any repeal or modification of this Article V by the Board or Directors of the Corporation shall not adversely affect any right or protection of a Director or Officer of the Corporation under this Article V with respect to any act or omission prior to the time of such repeal or modification.

ARTICLE VI COMMITTEES

A. General. The Chairperson of the Board, with the consent of the Board, shall have the authority to create and terminate committees as may be necessary to carryout the functions of the Corporation. The Chairperson of the Board shall also have the authority to create, change, and terminate ad hoc committees as he or she deems necessary.

B. Chairpersons. It shall be the duty of the Chairperson of the Board to appoint Committee chairpersons as soon after his or her election as practicable. The chairpersons of Committee shall serve for a one (1) year term. No chairperson shall serve more than two (2) consecutive one (1) year terms, but may again serve as chairperson after at least one (1) year after he or she has ceased to serve as such. It shall be the duty of the chairpersons to preside over their Committees. The chairpersons shall be responsible to see that full and complete minutes of Committee meetings are maintained.

C. Committee Meetings. Committee members shall be appointed by the chairpersons for one (1) year terms. No Committee member shall serve more than three (3) consecutive one (1) year terms, but may again serve on such Committee after at least one (1) year off such Committee.

ARTICLE VII
AGENTS AND REPRESENTATIVES

The Board of Directors may appoint Agents and Representatives of the Corporation with powers and to perform acts or duties on behalf of the Corporation as the Board of Directors may see fit, so far as may be consistent with these Bylaws, to the extent authorized by law.

ARTICLE VIII
CONTRACTS

The Board of Directors, except as in these Bylaws otherwise provided, may authorize any officer or agent to enter into any contract or execute and deliver any instrument in the name of and on behalf of the Corporation. Such authority may be general or confined to a specific instance; and unless so authorized by the Board of Directors, no officer, agent, or employee shall have any power or authority to bind the Corporation. The President and Publisher shall be delegated authority to take necessary action in circumstances not provided for in Board policy, provided that such action shall be reported to the Board at the next meeting following such action.

ARTICLE IX
FISCAL YEAR

The Fiscal Year of a Corporation shall commence on January 1st and end on December 31st.

ARTICLE X
PROPERTY AND INVESTMENTS

All property, whether real, personal, tangible, or intangible, received by the Corporation by contribution, bequest, devise, gift, grant, or otherwise, shall be held by the Corporation or disposed of by it on such terms and conditions, not inconsistent with the Articles of Incorporation as the Board of Directors shall determine. Unless otherwise specified or limited by the terms of the particular gift, bequest, devise, grant, or instrument, the funds of the Corporation may be invested from time to time and in such manner as the Board of Directors may deem advantageous.

ARTICLE XI
AMENDMENTS

The power to alter, amend, or repeal the Bylaws or adopt new Bylaws, subject to repeal or change by action of the Board of Directors, shall be vested in the Board of Directors. However, any amendments concerning the confirmation of the President and Publisher or changing the constitution of the Board of Directors shall not be amended or repealed without the approval of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (USA) or its delegate. All other amendments or revisions will be reported to the next General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (USA) or its delegate.

November 2003

AMENDED AND RESTATED
ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION OF
PRESBYTERIAN PUBLISHING CORPORATION

The undersigned Incorporator signs these Articles of Incorporation for the purpose of forming a non-profit corporation under chapter 273 of the Kentucky Revised Statutes.

ARTICLE I

The name of the Corporation is the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation. These amendments were adopted on ~~February 28, 2000~~, February 6, 2004 with the Board of Directors casting a unanimous vote. These restated articles of incorporation correctly set forth the provisions of the articles of incorporation as theretofore amended, they have been duly adopted as required by law and they supersede the original articles of incorporation and all amendments thereto.

ARTICLE II

A. The corporation is organized and shall be operated exclusively for charitable and educational purposes as described within Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code (or corresponding provisions of any later federal tax laws) including for such purposes the making of distributions to organizations that qualify as exempt organizations under section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code, or corresponding section of any further federal tax code.

B. The purposes of the corporation shall be more specifically stated as follows:

1. ~~Publishing, promoting, and distributing materials relating to Christian education, nurture, and spiritual growth resources consonant with Reformed tradition for use as congregational resources by the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.);~~
2. ~~enriching the educational environment of congregations by offering expanded curriculum options, seasonal dramas and confirmation materials;~~
3. ~~utilizing creative approaches and electronic media for curriculum development;~~
4. ~~providing subscription services and relevant inserts to Presbyterian churches for weekly bulletins containing appropriate lectionary based scripture selections;~~
5. ~~providing daily devotional guides;~~
6. ~~publishing quarterly magazines relating to the overall Presbyterian ministry;~~
7. ~~2. publishing, produce, and market other materials as appropriate: titles, including software, in theology, biblical studies, ethics, preaching, pastoral area, counseling, Christian education, Christian doctrine, and Judeo/Christian studies;~~
8. ~~3. publishing, marketing, and distributing books and similar materials under the trade name Westminster John Knox Press, Geneva Press, Congregational Resources, or any other trade names adopted by the Corporation;~~
9. ~~publishing curriculum and related materials for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.); and~~
10. ~~4. distribute ing the books and materials published and, under contract, other publications intended for use in the Presbyterian Church (USA), ecumenical audiences, and/or the general religious trade market; and~~
5. ~~engage in and conduct such business as may be permitted under the laws of the Commonwealth of Kentucky and the United States of America and not inconsistent with the directives of the General Assembly.~~

ARTICLE III

The Corporation shall neither have nor exercise any power, nor shall it directly or indirectly engage in any activity, that would:

1. Prevent it from obtaining or maintaining exemption from federal income taxation as a corporation described in Section 501 (c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as amended (the "Code");
2. cause it to lose its exempt status under Section 501 (c)(3) of the Code;
3. cause it to be operated for the primary purpose of carrying on a trade or business for profit;

4. result in a substantial part of its activities consisting of carrying on propaganda or otherwise attempting to influence legislation;
5. involve, participating in, or intervening in (including the publishing or distribution of statements), any political campaign on behalf of any candidate for public office;
6. violate applicable federal, state, or local laws;
7. result in any prohibited transactions described in Section 503 of the Code;
8. cause it to accumulate income, invest income, or divert income, in a manner that would endanger its exempt status by virtue of Section 504 of the Code;
9. accumulate income so as to be subject to corporate tax under Section 4942 of the Code; or
10. result in any act of self-dealing, retaining any excess business holdings, making any investment which would subject it to tax under Section 4944 of the Code, or making any taxable expenditures.
11. If and so long as the Corporation is a private foundation as defined in Section 509(a) of the Internal Revenue Code, or corresponding provisions of any later Federal tax laws:
  - a) The Corporation shall distribute its income for each taxable year at such time and in such manner as not to become subject to the tax on undistributed income imposed by Section 4942 of the Internal Revenue Code, or corresponding provisions of any later Federal tax laws.
  - b) The Corporation shall not engage in any act of self-dealing as defined in Section 4941 (d) of the Internal Revenue code, or corresponding provisions of any later Federal tax laws.
  - c) The Corporation shall not retain any excess business holdings as defined in Section 4943(c) of the Internal Revenue Code, or corresponding provisions of any later Federal tax laws.
  - d) The Corporation shall not make any investments in such manner as to subject it to tax under Section 4944 of the Internal Revenue Code, or corresponding provisions of any later Federal tax laws.
  - e) The Corporation shall not make any taxable expenditures as defined in Section 4945(d) of the Internal Revenue Code, or corresponding provisions of any later Federal tax laws.

ARTICLE IV

The duration of the Corporation is perpetual. Upon dissolution, however, the Board of Directors shall, after paying or making provision for the payment of liabilities of the Corporation, dispose of all the assets of the Corporation exclusively for the purposes of the Corporation in such manner, or to such organizations organized and operated exclusively for charitable, educational, religious, or scientific purposes as shall, at the time, qualify as an exempt organization or organizations under Section 501(c)(3) of the Code.

(g) Reporting—The Board of Directors of the Publishing Corporation shall report ~~annually~~ to the General Assembly.

(h) Executives—As provided by the Form of Government, G-9.0703, of the Book of Order of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), the board of directors of the Publishing Corporation shall elect a CEO, and may elect other executives, for a term of four years, and eligible for reelection with the concurrence of the General Assembly Council. The CEO shall be subject to confirmation by the General Assembly.

(i) Copyright—All agreements between the Publishing Corporation and the other entities of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) shall expressly designate the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, the Publishing Corporation, or another specified corporate body of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), the author or volume editor as owner of the copyright of the material published thereunder.

Item 08-03

[The assembly approved Item 08-03. See p. 15.]

The General Assembly Council, upon recommendation of the Congregational Ministries Division and on behalf of the Committee on Theological Education, recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) grant permission to the following theological institutions to celebrate the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper in 2005 and 2006: Austin Presbyterian Theological Seminary; Columbia Theological Seminary, University of Dubuque Theological Seminary, Louisville Presbyterian Theological Seminary; McCormick Theological Seminary, Pittsburgh Theological Seminary, Princeton Theological Seminary, San Francisco Theological Seminary, Johnson C. Smith Theological Seminary in cooperation with the Inter-denominational Theological Center, and Union Theological Seminary & Presbyterian School of Christian Education.

Rationale

Beginning in 1989, the General Assembly became the governing body that grants permission to celebrate the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper at Presbyterian theological institutions. The 215th General Assembly (2003) granted permission for celebrations in 2004; the 216th General Assembly (2004) is asked to grant permission for calendar years 2005 and 2006.

Item 08-05

[In response to Item 08-05, the assembly approved an alternate statement. See pp. 15–16.]

On Reorganizing and Improving the Presentation of G-2.0300, G-2.0400, and G-2.0500 Without Material Alteration to Its Actual Content—From the Presbytery of John Calvin.

The Presbytery of John Calvin overtures the 216th General Assembly (2004) of the PC(USA) to reorganize and improve the presentation of G-2.0300, G-2.0400, and G-2.0500 without material alteration to its actual content.

Rationale

The constitutional questions require all candidates for ordination to affirm that they “sincerely receive and adopt the essential tenets of the Reformed faith” (G-14.0207c), and the Book of Order does not explicitly identify or describe these “essential tenets,” as such.

The failure to respond adequately to repeated requests for guidance in this regard leaves the impression that we are unwilling or unable to express our faith when asked to do so, contrary to the great tradition of our confessional church, which has always sought to hold forth to the world a clear statement of faith.

The Book of Order (G-2.0300 and G-2.0400) contains an eloquent summarization of the “essence” (or core substance) of our Reformed faith, but it has existed in a presentation that is not easily recognizable for what it is, nor has it been arranged in such a way to draw sufficient and helpful attention to itself.

Current tensions in the church may cause some to suggest that “important” matters of the faith are “essential” (i.e., belonging to its core substance) when, in fact, they are “important” matters that, although susceptible to error in an imperfect church, are unworthy of schism in the Body of Christ.

The Presbytery of John Calvin, seeking to “further the peace, unity, and purity of the church” (G-14.0207g), suggests that G-2.0300, G-2.0400, and G-2.0500 could be reorganized as follows: (The current text is shown with a strike-through; the suggested text is shown as italic.)

~~“G-2.0300 Faith of the Church Catholic~~

~~“In its confessions, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) gives witness to the faith of the Church catholic. The confessions express the faith of the one, holy, catholic, and apostolic Church<sup>b</sup> in the recognition of canonical Scriptures and the formulation and adoption of the ecumenical creeds, notably the Nicene and Apostles’ Creeds with their definitions of the mystery of the triune God and of the incarnation of the eternal Word of God in Jesus Christ.~~

~~“G-2.0400 Faith of the Protestant Reformation~~

~~“In its confessions, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) identifies with the affirmations of the Protestant Reformation. The focus of these affirmations is the rediscovery of God’s grace in Jesus Christ as revealed in the Scriptures. The Protestant watchwords—grace alone,<sup>e</sup> faith alone,<sup>d</sup> Scripture alone<sup>e</sup>—embody principles of understanding which continue to guide and motivate the people of God in the life of faith.~~

~~“G-2.0500 Faith of the Reformed Tradition~~

~~“(1)The election<sup>n</sup> of the people of God for service as well as for salvation;<sup>o</sup>~~

~~“(2)Covenant life marked by a disciplined concern for order in the church according to the Word of God;~~

~~“(3)A faithful stewardship that shuns ostentation and seeks proper use of the gifts of God’s creation;~~

~~“(4)The recognition of the human tendency to idolatry<sup>p</sup> and tyranny,<sup>q</sup> which calls the people of God to work for the transformation of society by seeking justice and living in obedience to the Word of God.~~

~~“Reflect a Particular Stance~~

~~“b. Thus, the creeds and confessions of this church reflect a particular stance within the history of God’s people. They are the result of prayer, thought, and experience within a living tradition. They serve to strengthen personal commitment and the life and witness of the community of believers.”~~

“G-2.0300 The Essential Tenets of the Reformed Faith

“Among the tenets deemed essential to an understanding of the Reformed Faith, as expressed in the confessions of the Presbyterian Church (USA), are:

“a. The faith of the one, holy, catholic, and apostolic Church in the recognition of canonical Scriptures and the formulation and adoption of the ecumenical creeds, notably the Nicene and Apostles’ Creeds with their definitions of the mystery of the triune God and of the incarnation of the eternal Word of God in Jesus Christ.

“b. The affirmations of the Protestant Reformation in the rediscovery of God’s grace in Jesus Christ as revealed in the Scriptures. The Protestant watchwords—grace alone, faith alone, Scripture alone—embody principles of understanding which continue to guide and motivate the people of God in the life of faith.

“c. The central affirmation of the Reformed Tradition expressing faith in the majesty, holiness, and providence of God who creates, sustains, rules, and redeems the world in the freedom of sovereign righteousness and love.

“d. The great themes of the Reformed Tradition which are related to its central affirmation:

“1. The election of the people of God for service as well as for salvation;

“2. Covenant life marked by a disciplined concern for order in the church according to the Word of God;

“3. A faithful stewardship that shuns ostentation and seeks proper use of the gifts of God’s creation;

“4. The recognition of the human tendency to idolatry and tyranny, which calls the people of God to work for the transformation of society by seeking justice and living in obedience to the Word of God.”

“G-2.0400 Reflect a Particular Stance

“Thus, the creeds and confessions of this church reflect a particular stance within the history of God’s people. They are the result of prayer, thought, and experience within a living tradition. They serve to strengthen personal commitment and the life and witness of the community of believers.”

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 08-05

Advice on Item 08-05—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 216th General Assembly (2004) to disapprove the overture.

Rationale

Item 08-05 proposes a reorganized Chapter II of the Form of Government. The ACC believes that the changes requested results in a material alteration of the chapter. The passage in question is a clear explication of our denomination in the context of the apostolic, catholic, confessional faith, and the particularity of our reformed expression of that faith.

The concept “essential tenets” is not included in the section of the Constitution the overture seeks to change. Importing such a concept into Chapter II reduces the clarity of that chapter without adding clarity to the ordination question that refers to the “essential tenets” in an entirely different section of the Constitution (G-14.0207c). The proposed conflation of these paragraphs along with the removal of the current clarifying paragraph titles does materially alter its content. The expressed goal of the overture would, therefore, not be accomplished.

Over many years, the church has chosen not to approve a discrete list of “essential tenets,” or to take a subscriptionist approach to the ordination questions. The overture’s rationale characterizes this as a “failure to respond adequately.” This consistent response of the church to such overtures is not inadequate and does not indicate an unwillingness or inability to express faith, but rather is an unwillingness to minimize the rich content of the extraordinary collection of documents in The Book of Confessions with such an inadequate list.

It is precisely in The Book of Confessions that the tenets of the Christian faith and the Reformed tradition are expressed in meaningful language in documents written and received by the church through many centuries. The prefatory material to The Book of Confessions explains:

... Although some other wording may better express the intent, the phrase “essential tenets” is intended to protect freedom with the limits of general commitment to the confessions. ... Moreover, while Chapter II of the Form of Government lists a number of general theological affirmations to summarize the broad general character of Presbyterian faith and life, it too prescribes no specific understanding of any of these affirmations to test the acceptability of people for ordained office in the church. (Confessional Nature of the Church Report, pp. xxv–xxvi)

Within the church’s polity, presbyteries have the power and responsibility to interpret the confessions of the church and the standards they express. In conversation with those who seek to hold office within their bounds, presbyteries by examination determine a candidate’s or minister’s adequate adherence to those confessional standards. In the case of elders and deacons, this power is exercised by the session. The proposed amendment would appear to preclude presbyteries and sessions from adopting essential tenets different from or more stringent than those proposed here.

The primary effect of this overture is to add a specific interpretation of G-14.0207c by amending G-2.0300–.0500. Such an approach disregards the integrity of the Constitution itself. The results of such amendments, if approved, would be far-reaching and disturbing.

OGA COMMENT ON ITEM 08-05

Comment on Item 08-05—From the Office of the General Assembly.

Chapter II of the Book of Order came to our Constitution by way of the Plan for Reunion. It represents an attempt to describe the theology that united the Presbyterian Church in the United States and the United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America and provided a concise summary of our historic and current theological understandings. The reunion committee surely knew of the church’s destructive history with subscription.

Our predecessor denominations experimented with requiring subscription to a particular list of tenets, which one group of commissioners deemed essential. After painful and divisive experiences with subscription, historically Presbyterians have recognized it diminished the church’s ability to live out its Great Ends (currently found at G-1.0200). Each time Presbyterians have entrusted sessions and presbyteries to determine whether particular candidates for ordained office expressed orthodox reformed faith.

Today, the Book of Order makes this responsibility clear in the ordination vows (G-14.0207c, G-14.0405b[4]) and imposes the duty to examine the faith behind those vows on the ordaining body. The Book of Order provides no simple checklist, but rather requires those ordaining bodies to examine each candidate and each circumstance for adherence to the theology of our confessions. It represents our modern version of this historic Presbyterian compromise.

GAC COMMENT ON ITEM 08-05

Comment on Item 08-05—From the General Assembly Council.

We advise that the overture be answered with the following statement:

The 216th General Assembly (2004) affirms the right and responsibility of presbyteries to determine whether candidates and ministers “sincerely receive and adopt the essential tenets of the Reformed faith as expressed in the confessions of our church,” together with all other matters expressed in ordination and installation vows.

Ordination vows and essential tenets have a long and complex history in the Presbyterian church. The church has worked through the issue of “essential tenets” many times before, so attention to that history is essential.

From the beginning, the church has lived in the space between two tendencies. One stressed the more “objective” aspects of Christian faith such as theological precision, the distinct character of the ministry, and ordered church government. The other placed more emphasis on spontaneity, vital experience, and adaptability. In 1729, division was averted by recognizing the concerns of both groups in the “Adopting Act.” The Adopting Act required:

1. That all ministers and candidates accept the Westminster Confession, together with the Larger and Shorter catechisms . . .
2. . . . but not categorically.
3. That all ministers and candidates must declare “agreement in and approbation of” the confessional standards “as being in all the essential and necessary articles, good forms of sound words and systems of Christian doctrine.”
4. That any minister who did not accept any particular part of the Confession or catechisms should state his scruple concerning that part, and the presbytery should then decide whether or not the scruple involved “essential and necessary articles of faith.”

The Adopting Act regularized confessional standards, but it did not require adherence to every confessional articulation. “Essential and necessary articles” were not identified. The Adopting Act was refined in 1758 at the repair of the Old Side/New Side schism:

1. With respect to any action deemed essential and necessary by the church, “every member shall actively concur . . . or passively submit . . . or peaceably withdraw.”

2. It became a censurable offense irresponsibly to accuse other ministers.
3. Presbyteries were to examine candidates on “religious experience” as well as doctrine.
4. Five questions were to be asked at ordinations and installations, including, “Do you sincerely receive and adopt the confession of faith of this church as contained in the system of doctrine taught in the holy Scriptures?” The “system of doctrine” was interpreted in the spirit of “essential and necessary.”

The 1910 General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America declared that the Adopting Act of 1729 called upon judicatories to determine which articles of faith are “essential and necessary.” The assembly then identified five doctrines as “essential” (although the assembly added, “others are equally so.”) (1) inerrancy of Scripture, (2) virgin birth, (3) sacrificial atonement, (4) bodily resurrection, (5) Christ’s miracles.

Although the 1910 deliverance was challenged repeatedly, it was not repealed. Following the 1923 General Assembly, and in reaction against the 1910/1916/1923 doctrinal deliverance, more than 1,200 ministers signed the “Auburn Affirmation” declaring that the five-point deliverance attempts to commit our church to certain theories concerning the Inspiration of the Bible, and the Incarnation, the Atonement, the Resurrection, and the Continuing Life and Supernatural Power of our Lord Jesus Christ. We all hold most earnestly to these great facts and doctrines. . . . Some of us regard the particular themes contained in the deliverance of the General Assembly of 1923 as satisfactory explanations of these facts and doctrines. But we are united in believing that these are not the only themes allowed by the Scriptures and our standards as explanations of these facts and doctrines of our religion, and that all who hold to these facts and doctrines, whatever theories they may employ to explain them, are worthy of our confidence and fellowship.

The issue was set: narrowly defined confessional subscription or broadly defined confessional subscription. The question was not whether confessional subscription was required, but the specific nature of that confessional subscription.

The matter was referred to a special commission that reported in 1926 and 1927. The upshot of the special commission’s report, adopted by the 1927 General Assembly, was that:

1. The General Assembly does not have the constitutional power to give binding definition to the church’s essential faith. By denying that the assembly has the right to define authoritatively the “essentials” of the church’s faith, the commission eliminated the five points as a source of controversy.

2. While a measure of tolerance was embedded in the church, it was made clear that the church, and not the individual, must decide the limits of tolerated diversity, “either generally, by amendment to the constitution, or particularly, by Presbyterial authority.”

The church has decided limits generally, by amending the constitution to create The Book of Confessions, and particularly, by the continuing examination for ordination of candidates and for reception into membership of ministers. To this end, it must be acknowledged that in ordination the presbytery has historically demonstrated its power and responsibility in determining confirmation with the church’s theology.

Item 08-06

[The assembly referred Item 08-06 to the GAC, Office of Theology and Worship. See p. 17.]

On Amending W-2.4006 and W-2.4011 Concerning Who May Participate—From the Presbytery of Central Washington.

The Presbytery of Central Washington overtures the 216th General Assembly (2004) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendments to the Directory for Worship to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

1. Shall the first paragraph of W-2.4006 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“Around the Table of the Lord, God’s people are in communion with Christ and with all who belong to Christ. Reconciliation with Christ compels reconciliation with one another. ~~All the baptized faithful~~ who acknowledge Jesus Christ as their Lord and Savior are to be welcomed to the Table, and none shall be excluded because of race, sex, age, economic status, social class, handicapping condition, difference of culture or language, or any barrier created by human injustice. Coming to the Lord’s Table the faithful are actively to seek reconciliation in every instance of conflict or division between them and their neighbors. Each time they gather at the Table the believing community”

2. Shall W-2.4011 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“a. The invitation to the Lord’s Supper is extended to all who ~~have been baptized~~ acknowledge Jesus Christ as Lord and Savior, remembering that access to the Table is not a right conferred upon the worthy, but a privilege given to the undeserving who come in faith, repentance, and love. In preparing to receive Christ in this Sacrament, the believer is to confess sin and brokenness, to seek reconciliation with God and neighbor, and to trust in Jesus Christ for cleansing and renewal. Even one who doubts or whose trust is wavering may come to the Table in order to be assured of God’s love and grace in Christ Jesus.

“b. ~~Baptized~~ *e*Children who are being nurtured and instructed in the significance of the invitation to the Table and the meaning of their response are invited to receive the Lord’s Supper, recognizing that their understanding of participation will vary according to their maturity. (W-4.2002)”

Rationale

At our Savior’s command the church of Jesus Christ is to be open and inviting to all who seek after the grace of God.

The Lord’s Supper is one of the central elements of worship where we celebrate the grace of God and our unity as believers, regardless of the historical and denominational lines that have fractured the one catholic holy Christian Church.

In this day and age, the majority of our new members and visitors to our congregations come from many different denominational and spiritual paths as they begin to worship in our congregations and become active in our ministries.

We recognize with the Reformed tradition that the true Church of Jesus Christ is invisible and known only to God.

We recognize that often we have Christians attending our worship services who, for a variety of reasons, have not yet been baptized, but may have a full and vital relationship with Jesus Christ and we understand that current Presbyterian polity forces us to deny participation in the Lord’s Supper to these brothers and sisters.

We should not judge who is fit to participate in the Lord’s Supper based on baptism status alone.

Our Book of Order should reflect what is the current practice of many churches: to invite all who accept Jesus Christ as their Lord and Savior to participate in the Lord’s Supper.

---

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 08-06

Advice on Item 08-06—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 216th General Assembly (2004) to disapprove Item 08-06.

Rationale

The proponents seek to alter the language of the Directory for Worship so that unbaptized persons may participate in the Lord's Supper. The sentiment that Jesus Christ invites all to his holy supper is well meaning. That we not place ourselves in the place of God to determine who may participate in the feast expresses a proper humility.

In ancient times, non-baptized seekers after Jesus were dismissed from the community before the Lord's Supper was observed. In our own Reformed heritage, the Sunday before the sacrament was celebrated a sermon was mandated that outlined its meaning for the community. Only those who claimed a token symbolizing proper preparation were invited to the Table. Such restrictions no longer constrain our invitation. However, the entire context of the Directory for Worship, both in regard to the Lord's Supper and in all its provisions assumes that it is a directory for the community of faith, for those who believe, for those who have joined themselves to the Christian Church. Baptism is the sign and symbol of this joining.

The proponents seek to substitute an "acknowledgement" for the sacrament of baptism. If such an acknowledgement is anything more than a personal and private "feeling"; what would be the meaning of membership in the community? If acknowledgement requires any public evidence, how would such evidence differ from the public profession of faith that now precedes baptism and membership? If access to the Lord's Table is extended to unbaptized children, what would acknowledgement mean if a knowing awareness (seemingly required for a non-member adult) was not possible for a child? In the current understanding, access to the Table is not based on any conscious action on our part, but rather on our having received the blessing of our Lord through baptism, a sacramental act by which God grants what we cannot gain.

Jesus commissioned the church to go into all the world, teaching and baptizing. The church is a community bound together by its Lord through the sacraments we believe Jesus instituted in his earthly ministry. All are invited. For the sake of defining the community of faith, Presbyterians have determined that those who acknowledge that invitation through accepting Christ as Lord and Savior in membership and children whose parents have presented them for baptism and are seeing to their nurture of the church may share this feast of God for the people of God. An "acknowledgement" left exclusively to the determination of the individual conscience denigrates the church's role as the Body of Christ, often broken but still his body.

If the 216th General Assembly (2004) wishes to consider such an alteration in our traditional standard in this matter, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends a deferral of action on this overture until a current study, led by the Department of Theology and Worship, is completed.

GAC COMMENT ON ITEM 08-06

Comment on Item 08-06—From the General Assembly Council.

We advise that Item 08-06 be referred to the work on sacramental study currently being conducted by the Office of Theology and Worship, reporting to the 217th General assembly (2006).

Item 08-06 asks that W-2.4006 be amended to remove the requirement of baptism for admission to the Lord's Table. This matter is currently before the assembly as a result of action taken by the 214th General Assembly (2002):

The General Assembly Council, upon recommendation of its Congregational Ministries Division, recommends that the 214th General Assembly (2002) authorize the General Assembly Council, Office of Theology and Worship, to conduct a comprehensive study of sacramental theology and practice with special attention to the ways in which the catechumenate relates Baptism and the Lord's Supper. A final report will be made to the 217th General Assembly (2005).

The Sacramental Study Group, created by the action, is studying the Reformed and ecumenical understandings of Baptism and the Lord's Supper as well as their relation. This action explicitly takes up the issues included in Item 08-06 as a result of continuing the work on Overture 98-33 that called for amending W.24006 and W-2.4011a to open the table to unbaptized persons.

The Office of Theology and Worship has conducted consultations and research that indicate that the underlying issue is the theological and ecclesial relationship between Baptism and the Lord's Supper. The relationship between the two sacraments is so vital to the church's self-understanding that it would be irresponsible to respond to the overture in isolation from a broader and deeper consideration of our church's ecumenical relationships and the centuries-old catholic and evangelical understanding of Baptism, Eucharist, and the relationship between the two. A full and substantive study is required, exploring the sacraments within the Reformed tradition and in ecumenical context so that the church may discern the history, theology, and ecclesial significance of Baptism and the Lord's Supper as well as their appropriate relationship.

Item 08-07

[The assembly approved Item 08-07. See p. 17.]

The General Assembly Council, upon recommendation of the Congregational Ministries Division and on behalf of the Committee on Theological Education, recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) approve the new trustees elected by Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) theological institutions in 2003:

1. Austin Presbyterian Theological Seminary: George S. Cladis, Jerry M. Hilton, Catherine L. Lowry, Blair R. Monie.
2. Columbia Theological Seminary: George Hauptfuhrer, Elizabeth Soileau.
3. University of Dubuque Theological Seminary: Kimberly M. David.
4. Louisville Presbyterian Theological Seminary: None.
5. McCormick Theological Seminary: Robert Barnes, Jennifer Blandford, David Howard Crawford, Diane Tessmer Hart, Theodore Hiebert, Dianne Shields.
6. Pittsburgh Theological Seminary: Harold Burlingame, Donald Evans, Joseph Guyaux, Sandra McLaughlin, Susan Vande Kappelle, James Walker.
7. Princeton Theological Seminary: Deena Candler.
8. San Francisco Theological Seminary: Christopher N. Grewe, Frank Jackson, Dale Lindsay Morgan, Gary Pinkston, John J. Reynolds, Stephen J. Rhoades, Wanda L. Sawyers, Audrey Yamagata-Noji.
9. Johnson C. Smith Theological Seminary: Richard A. Bigger Jr., Martin Lehfeldt, James C. Pratt, David B. Sanders, Vera Swann, Lawrence Willis.
10. Union Theological Seminary and Presbyterian School of Christian Education: John T. DeBevoise, Steven P. Eason, Donald L. Griggs, Yun-gil Lee, Lillian James Smith, Lamar Williamson Jr.

Rationale

A list of the entire board of trustees of each of the ten seminaries as well as biographical information about trustees to be approved will be made available by COTE for review by the appropriate committee during the 216th General Assembly (2004). Similar information will also be made available about those currently serving on the boards of Auburn Theological Seminary and the Evangelical Seminary of Puerto Rico that are related to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) through covenant agreements.

As required by vote of the 209th General Assembly (1997), the following information is offered in regard to racial ethnic, gender, and clergy/lay representation on the various seminary boards:

Item 08-08

[The assembly approved Item 08-08. See p. 17.]

The General Assembly Council, upon recommendation of the Congregational Ministries Division Committee, recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) approve the following nominees for the Mountain Retreat Association Trustees of Stock/Board of Directors:

Class of 2005

Kathryn McCrary, Synod of Living Waters Representative.

Class of 2007

Melinda B. Hinners, Synod of Lincoln Trails
Katherine Hirt Eggleston, Synod of Lincoln Trails
Mary Scott Cooper, Synod of South Atlantic
Brandon Wert, Synod of Southwest
James Kirk, CMD Representative
David Quattlebaum, South Atlantic
Warner Durnell, Synod of Living Waters
J. Gilmore Lake, Synod of Mid Atlantic
Frances Calderwood, WMD Representative

Class of 2008

Barbara Gauerke Chappell, Synod of Sun
Susan Spivey Penrod, Synod of Sun
Jonyrma Singleton, Synod of Covenant
Manley Olson, National Ministries Division
Kathryn McCrary, Synod of Trinity
Frank Spencer, Synod of Mid Atlantic
Synod of Mid Atlantic Representative
Synod of Living Waters Representative
Susanne Query, Synod of South Atlantic

Rationale

The Montreat bylaws call for approval of nominees by the General Assembly. This happens through an action of the Congregational Ministries Division Committee (CMDC) and the General Assembly Council (GAC) and is included in the GAC report to the General Assembly for approval by General Assembly.

Item 08-09

[The assembly approved Item 08-09. See p. 17.]

The General Assembly Council, upon recommendation of the Congregational Ministries Division, recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) do the following:

- 1. Commend the Trinity Working Group for its labor on behalf of the church.
- 2. Authorize the Office of Theology and Worship, with participation of the Trinity Working Group, to invite response and comment to the current draft of the theological statement on the Doctrine of the Trinity, and to conduct a series of consultations throughout the church to encourage fresh engagement with the fullness of the Doctrine of the Trinity.
- 3. Instruct the Office of Theology and Worship, with participation of the Trinity Working Group, to prepare a final draft of the theological statement on the Doctrine of the Trinity and submit it to the 217th General Assembly (2006) for action.

Rationale

This recommendation is in response to the following referral: 2000 Referral: 21.164. Recommendation G.2. That the 212th General Assembly (2000) Direct the General Assembly Council, Through Its Office of Theology and Worship, to Constitute a Task Force (2001–2003) to Study the Doctrine of the Trinity in Presbyterian Theology and Worship with Particular Attention to the Need to Recover the Terms and Images That Refer to the Being of the Persons of the Trinity, as Stated in “Definitions and Guidelines on Inclusive Language” and Report to the ~~213th~~ 215th General Assembly (~~2001~~) (2003)—From the General Assembly Council (Minutes, 2000, Part I, pp. 34, 176).

Item 08-10

[The assembly approved Item 08-10. See p. 17.]

The Theological Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) encourage every presbytery to create intentional gatherings of Presbyterians of varied theological views to covenant together to discuss the affirmations in the task force’s preliminary re- port, utilizing the resources being developed by the task force; and that sessions be encouraged to do the same.

Rationale

The Theological Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity, whose members were selected to reflect the diversity within the church, would like to share with the whole church a process that has enabled us to build community and deepen our faith. The task force is discovering that the appropriation of Christ's peace, unity, and purity in the church can be realized only as fellow Presbyterians engage in a process of studying together, learning together, and working together toward such a reality. In order to invite the whole church to engage in this process, the task force has developed, and will continue to develop, video and written materials that aim to capture both the content and methodology being employed by the task force. Presbyteries and sessions are encouraged to organize study groups, each of which should reflect a broad diversity of theological perspectives, as well as other categories of diversity (as possible), and that each of the groups study (1) the covenant written and adopted by the task force; (2) the two videos produced; and (3) the preliminary report that has resulted from our work so far. As other materials are produced, the study groups are encouraged to utilize them as well.

Item 08-11

[The assembly approved Item 08-11. See p. 17.]

On Appropriate Language to Describe the Ministry of All Believers—From the Presbytery of New Brunswick.

The Presbytery of New Brunswick overtures the 216th General Assembly (2004) to request the General Assembly Council, through its Office of Theology and Worship, to do the following:

1. Create a study document that would set forth the Reformed-Presbyterian understanding of the relationship between Baptism and the ministry of all church members both ordained and not ordained. Such a study document, field-tested in a number of congregations and then distributed to sessions and presbyteries, would provide a common language for the various ministry activities of those governing bodies.

2. Suggest the language appropriate for expression of these relationships.

Rationale

The words we use and misuse when we speak about the ministry of the people of God need attention and clarification. When we speak, we enjoy the possibility and run the risk that our words will teach and edify. Often, our careless or unknowing choice of words teaches what we do not or should not intend.

As examples: to whom do we refer when we speak of ministers? Who do we believe receives a call to ministry? Are there Christian vocations for ministers of Word and Sacrament, elders, and deacons, and something else for everyone other than an ordained person? Does vocation refer only to work carried on within the corporate body of the church?

It has always been the teaching of the Reformed tradition that all Christians are Christ's ministers in the world. By virtue of the Sacrament of Baptism, all baptized persons have a vocation, a call to make Christ's ministry their own. Baptism acknowledges God's claim upon us as well as our commissioning for ministry in the name and for the sake of Jesus Christ. In baptism we have been enlisted as Christ's own people to minister in the world. Baptism defines the shape of our lives and all that we do as God's children because it defines who we are. As Christians, our primary identity is found in our belonging to the Triune God, not in what we do. Who we are in Christ Jesus—the new life we have been given in our baptismal vocation—is about who we are and not what we do.

In considering our baptismal vocation, we are claiming the Reformed notion that our identity must flow from the knowledge that we are the beloved children of God. We call this our baptismal vocation because it is in our baptism that God brings us into covenant with Godself. From that moment on, we are the redemptively called people of God. But for what have we been called? As Presbyterians, we say we have been redeemed for service in the world; such service is not limited to the ordained but is the property and privilege of all of us who have been baptized into the saving love of the Triune Lord. Therefore, the phrase “a ministering Christian” is as redundant as speaking of a “running jogger.”

Vocation—our God-given calling—is not measured by the particular occupation we choose or by the so-called “productive years” of our lives. Our baptismal vocation encompasses our whole lives for our whole lives.

The New Testament teaches us that gifts are given to each for the common good. Each of us is an important part of God’s mission in the world regardless of whether we are an ordained minister or a nonordained minister. Every Christian is a minister by virtue of his or her baptism into Christ Jesus. A greater awareness of our baptismal vocation of being Christ’s ministers is deeply needed within our church. We need to again contemplate what it means to find our identity in our belonging—in body and soul, in life and in death—to the God revealed in Jesus Christ made known by the Holy Spirit. This would be greatly assisted by a biblically informed and theologically grounded understanding of our baptismal vocation as the basis of our common ministry as Christians. Such a study document would be a gift to the teaching, preaching, missional shaping of the church. [Note: Text is a replacement. This item has been moved from Item 05-12 to Item 08-12. ## Item 08-12

[The assembly answered Item 08-12 by the action taken on Item 08-05 and with a statement added (shown below). See p. 17.]

[The 216th General Assembly (2004) affirms the significant and instructive role of The Book of Confessions as guide to interpreting Scripture in the examination of candidates for ordination as ministers, elders, and deacons, and their reception or transfer into new installed calls, congregations, or appointments to mission service.]

On Examining the Conscience of Candidates—From the Presbytery of Hudson River.

The Presbytery of Hudson River respectfully overtures the 216th General Assembly (2004) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to approve the following guidance for the church:

“That the General Assembly, out of concern for the peace, unity, purity, and progress of the church, and for the integrity of Christian conscience of its ministers, elders, and deacons does the following:

“1. Affirms the primary role of The Book of Confessions as guide to interpreting Scripture in the examination of candidates for ordination as ministers, elders, and deacons, and their reception or transfer into new installed calls, congregations, or appointments to mission service.

“2. Affirms the freedom of Christian conscience of candidates under God in interpreting articles of faith contained in those confessions, both because the confessions point to the need to interpret Scripture in accordance with ‘saving faith,’ and because the church as a whole has resisted legalism and encourages ever-reforming creativity ‘when it bears a present witness to God’s grace in Jesus Christ’ (The Book of Confessions, 9.01).

“3. Recalls that the words ‘essential and necessary’ articles or tenets were used in the Presbyterian church’s 1729 Adopting Act to point to basic elements of Christian faith found in the Westminster Confession, thus allowing candidates to ‘declare scruples’ on nonessential elements in those standards, rather than compel ‘strict subscription’ or absolute conformity to any document, system, or doctrinal words secondary to Scripture.

“4. Affirms the responsibility of presbyteries to safeguard the process of spiritual discernment in search processes, the collegial ethos of mutual respect among presbyters, and the healthy range of congregational vocations, by not elevating the use of particular lists of ‘essentials’ or ‘fundamentals’ over our confessions or Scripture itself.

“5. Encourages committees on preparation for ministry and committees on ministry to help candidates, congregations, and presbyteries resist any ‘politicization’ of the call process that would enforce checklists of doctrinal particulars, while also ensuring a wholeness of Trinitarian faith and understanding of Presbyterian and Reformed tradition in each individual candidate.”

Rationale

“The whole counsel of God” is contained in the Bible, according to the Westminster Confession (The Book of Confessions, 6.006); other confessions and amendments to Westminster stress more the continuing witness of the Holy Spirit in the heart of each believer. In 1729, when the first North American Presbyterian church was formed, it affirmed the right of candidates to declare “scruples” on matters that were to others crucial, such as the fate of unbaptized children. Such disputed matters were deemed “nonessential articles” in “the system of doctrine” that Westminster was purported to contain. After the divisive experience of the church with lists of “fundamentals” in the 1920s, the church chose to develop a Book of Confessions rather than any inevitably limited list of essentials. In a parallel way, 20th century biblical theology lifted up the great themes of Scripture and showed the limits of using “proof texts” in exegesis.

In times of controversy, it may be tempting to simplify the identity of the church on a regional or other basis. The great Reformed themes of “God alone, Scripture alone, Christ alone, grace alone, and faith alone” invite us to unity and mutual encouragement. Our 20th century confessions point us to essential acts of love and justice in the world. This overture encourages us to affirm the wisdom of the whole denomination and the responsibility of presbyteries to care for individual candidates and congregations in light of the truth of the whole Gospel.

GAC COMMENT ON ITEM 08-12

Comment on Item 08-12—From the General Assembly Council.

We advise that the overture be answered with the following statement:

The 216th General Assembly (2004) affirms the right and responsibility of presbyteries to determine whether candidates and ministers “sincerely receive and adopt the essential tenets of the Reformed faith as expressed in the confessions of our church,” together with all other matters expressed in ordination and installation vows.

Ordination vows and essential tenets have a long and complex history in the Presbyterian church. The church has worked through the issue of “essential tenets” many times before, so attention to that history is essential.

From the beginning, the church has lived in the space between two tendencies. One stressed the more “objective” aspects of Christian faith such as theological precision, the distinct character of the ministry, and ordered church government. The other placed more emphasis on spontaneity, vital experience, and adaptability. In 1729, division was averted by recognizing the concerns of both groups in the “Adopting Act.” The Adopting Act required:

1. That all ministers and candidates accept the Westminster Confession, together with the Larger and Shorter catechisms ...
2. . . . but not categorically.
3. That all ministers and candidates must declare “agreement in and approbation of” the confessional standards “as being in all the essential and necessary articles, good forms of sound words and systems of Christian doctrine.”

4. That any minister who did not accept any particular part of the Confession or catechisms should state his scruple concerning that part, and the presbytery should then decide whether or not the scruple involved “essential and necessary articles of faith.”

The Adopting Act regularized confessional standards, but it did not require adherence to every confessional articulation. “Essential and necessary articles” were not identified. The Adopting Act was refined in 1758 at the repair of the Old Side/New Side schism:

1. With respect to any action deemed essential and necessary by the church, “every member shall actively concur . . . or passively submit . . . or peaceably withdraw.”
2. It became a censurable offense irresponsibly to accuse other ministers.
3. Presbyteries were to examine candidates on “religious experience” as well as doctrine.
4. Five questions were to be asked at ordinations and installations, including, “Do you sincerely receive and adopt the confession of faith of this church as contained in the system of doctrine taught in the holy Scriptures?” The “system of doctrine” was interpreted in the spirit of “essential and necessary.”

The 1910 General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America declared that the Adopting Act of 1729 called upon judicatories to determine which articles of faith are “essential and necessary.” The assembly then identified five doctrines as “essential” (although the assembly added, “others are equally so.”) (1) inerrancy of Scripture, (2) virgin birth, (3) sacrificial atonement, (4) bodily resurrection, (5) Christ’s miracles.

Although the 1910 deliverance was challenged repeatedly, it was not repealed. Following the 1923 General Assembly, and in reaction against the 1910/1916/1923 doctrinal deliverance, more than 1,200 ministers signed the “Auburn Affirmation” declaring that the five-point deliverance attempts to commit our church to certain theories concerning the Inspiration of the Bible, and the Incarnation, the Atonement, the Resurrection, and the Continuing Life and Supernatural Power of our Lord Jesus Christ. We all hold most earnestly to these great facts and doctrines. . . . Some of us regard the particular themes contained in the deliverance of the General Assembly of 1923 as satisfactory explanations of these facts and doctrines. But we are united in believing that these are not the only themes allowed by the Scriptures and our standards as explanations of these facts and doctrines of our religion, and that all who hold to these facts and doctrines, whatever theories they may employ to explain them, are worthy of our confidence and fellowship.

The issue was set: narrowly defined confessional subscription or broadly defined confessional subscription. The question was not whether confessional subscription was required, but the specific nature of that confessional subscription.

The matter was referred to a special commission that reported in 1926 and 1927. The upshot of the special commission’s report, adopted by the 1927 General Assembly, was that:

1. The General Assembly does not have the constitutional power to give binding definition to the church’s essential faith. By denying that the assembly has the right to define authoritatively the “essentials” of the church’s faith, the commission eliminated the five points as a source of controversy.
2. While a measure of tolerance was embedded in the church, it was made clear that the church, and not the individual, must decide the limits of tolerated diversity, “either generally, by amendment to the constitution, or particularly, by Presbyterial authority.”

The church has decided limits generally, by amending the constitution to create The Book of Confessions, and particularly, by the continuing examination for ordination of candidates and for reception into membership of ministers. To this end, it must be acknowledged that in ordination the presbytery has historically demonstrated its power and responsibility in determining confirmation with the church’s theology.

Item 08-13

[The assembly approved Item 08-13. See p. 17.]

The General Assembly Council, upon recommendation of the Congregational Ministries Division Committee and on behalf of the Committee on Theological Education, recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) approve Iain R. Torrance as president of Princeton Theological Seminary.

Rationale

Iain R. Torrance comes to Princeton Theological Seminary from Scotland where, until recently, he served as moderator of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, dean of the Faculty of Arts and Divinity at the University of Aberdeen, and master of Christ's College, Aberdeen, where he was professor in patristics and Christian ethics.

Torrance is editor of the Scottish Journal of Theology. In 2001, he was appointed a chaplain-in-ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen of Scotland. Torrance has served as president of the Aberdeen Association of University Teachers and was convener for the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland's Committee on Chaplains to the Forces (1998–2002). He is a member of the international dialogue between the World Alliance of Reformed Churches and the Orthodox Church. As moderator of the Church of Scotland, Torrance has made recent trips to Iraq and China.

Born in Aberdeen, Torrance was educated at Edinburgh Academy and Monkton Combe School in Bath. He received the master of arts degree from the University of Edinburgh, the bachelor of divinity degree from St. Andrews University, and his Ph.D. from Oriel College, Oxford University.

A minister of the Church of Scotland, the mother church of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), Dr. Torrance served the parish of Northmavine in the Shetland Islands for three years prior to becoming lecturer in New Testament and patristics at Queen's Theological College, in 1985.

General Assembly approval of Dr. Torrance's appointment as president of Princeton Theological Seminary is called for in "A Plan for the Governance and Funding of the Theological Institutions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.);" approved by the 198th General Assembly (1986).

Item 08-14

[The assembly approved Item 08-14. See p. 17.]

The General Assembly Council, upon recommendation of the Congregational Ministries Division Committee and on behalf of the Committee on Theological Education, recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) approve Dean K. Thompson as president of Louisville Presbyterian Theological Seminary.

Rationale

Dean K. Thompson was elected by the Board of Trustees of Louisville Presbyterian Theological Seminary (LPTS) on April 22, 2004, and begins his term as president on June 28, 2004. Born in Ironton, Ohio, Thompson grew up in Huntington, West Virginia, and graduated from Marshall University with a degree in history. He holds a Ph.D. in American religious studies and intellectual history from Union Seminary in Virginia (now Union-PSCE), from which he also earned a master of theology in church history and a bachelor of divinity degree.

Dr. Thompson has served more than thirty years in parish ministry in West Virginia, California, and Texas, and most recently served as pastor of First Presbyterian Church in Charleston, West Virginia. He has taught as an adjunct faculty member at San Francisco Theological Seminary (SFTS) and Union-PSCE and as an instructor at Austin Presbyterian Theological Seminary (APTS). He has served on the Supervised Practice of Ministry Board at APTS and the SFTS board of trustees, Faculty and Curriculum Committee. He has been vice president of the Union-PSCE board of trustees serving on the Academic Affairs Committee and as chair of the trustees' committee. Dr. Thompson has also been president of the Union-PSCE Alumni/ae Association and a member of the Board of Directors of the Ancient Biblical Manuscript Center of the School of Theology in Claremont, California.

General Assembly approval of Dr. Thompson's appointment as president of LPTS is required by "A Plan for the Governance and Funding of the Theological Institutions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)" approved by the 198th General Assembly (1986) and by the seminary's current bylaws.

Item 08-15

[The assembly approved Item 08-15. See p. 17.]

The General Assembly Council, upon recommendation of the Congregational Ministries Division and on behalf of the Committee on Theological Education, recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) concur in the amendment and restatement of the Louisville Presbyterian Theological Seminary Articles of Incorporation by action of the seminary board of trustees on April 24, 2004, to delete the requirement for synod and General Assembly concurrence for changes to the seminary's bylaws, substituting instead the requirement that charter changes simply be reported to the General Assembly, as required by "A Plan for the Governance and Funding of the Theological Institutions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)" approved by the 198th General Assembly (1986).

Rationale

As urged by Section 24.026 of "A Plan for the Governance and Funding of the Theological Institutions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)," approved by the 198th General Assembly (1986), the Board of Trustees of Louisville Presbyterian Theological Seminary (LPTS) has undertaken to amend and restate the seminary's Articles of Incorporation in an effort "to make such changes in its charter and governing document as will bring it into conformity with" the 1986 governance plan.

Section 24.026 of the governance plan, adopted by the assembly in 1986, requires that changes in seminary charters be reported to the General Assembly, but does not stipulate that the assembly must concur with changes made. However, assembly concurrence is needed in this instance because the current LPTS Articles of Incorporation, Article X of which states that "any amendments, which change the Articles of Incorporation in any material way, shall require the concurrence of . . . the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)."

The Amended and Restated Articles of Incorporation passed by the LPTS board of trustees on April 24, 2004, do change the Articles of Incorporation in material ways, so under the requirements of the LPTS charter and the laws of the Commonwealth of Kentucky, General Assembly concurrence is required.

Commissioners' Resolution. Regarding the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Developing an Online Commentary to the Bible.

That the 216th General Assembly (2004) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) do the following:

1. Commit the church to develop an online commentary to the Bible that would be accessible for free to anyone seeking to learn more about the Bible in “order to hear the Word of God more clearly and to obey more faithfully.”

2. Request the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation to allow the Layman’s Bible Commentary (out of print) to be made available online as the first step to the development of a new online commentary.

3. Request the General Assembly Council, the Office of Theology and Worship, the Office of Spiritual Formation, the Office of Theological Education, the Office of Youth Ministry, and the Association of Presbyterian Church Educators to create an editorial committee of volunteers with backgrounds in biblical studies, theology, spirituality, Christian education, youth ministry, and Web site design. The editorial committee will encourage pastors, seminary and college professors, educators, youth workers and others will be encouraged to volunteer to write new commentaries to each book of the Bible that will be reviewed by the editorial committee before the commentaries are posted online. This Web site for online commentary to the Bible will include links for PC(USA) Web page for daily reading of the Bible (<http://horeb.pcusa.org/search/dailyreadings.htm> ), ordering commentaries published by Westminster/John Knox Press ( <http://www.pccpub.com/> ), the General Assembly documents on Biblical Authority and Interpretation (<http://www.pcusa.org/oga/publications/scripture-use.pdf> ), and local PCUSA congregations for worship, Bible study, and service (<http://www.pcusa.org/search/churches/default.jsp> ).
