5. The General Assembly is not given the authority to interpret multiple points in the constitution within one action. The procedures are very clear on this point. G-13.0103 r. says, “The most recent interpretation of a provision of the Book of Order shall be binding.” If multiple provisions were interpreted through one omnibus Authoritative Interpretation, the Book of Order would grow so complicated as to be useless as a guide for decisions. In order to avoid hopeless confusion the constitution provides for a singular interpretation of “a provision.” The constitution does not envision a sweeping series of provisions all to be taken up under one omnibus Authoritative Interpretation.

6. Likewise, commissioners to the General Assembly must have clear statement of what provision of the Book of Order is being nullified by any proposed Authoritative Interpretation. Since the Book of Order provides that, “The most recent interpretation of a provision of the Book of Order shall be binding;” (G-13.0103 r.), any General Assembly Authoritatively Interpreting the Book of Order must make clear what previous interpretation is annulled.

7. And finally, Recommendation 5 of the report of the Theological Task Force on the Peace, Unity and Purity of the Church recommends an Authoritative Interpretation that would introduce substantive conflict with multiple decisions of more than one Permanent Judicial Commission of the General Assembly. Perhaps the most dramatic way to illustrate this conflict is to ask, “If the 217th General Assembly were to adopt the Authoritative Interpretation proposed by the Task Force, would the Presbytery of Pittsburgh be in order to proceed with the installation of Walter Wynn Kenyon as a minister of Word and Sacrament?” Since the only impediment to his ordination would be removed, it would seem that the Presbytery of Pittsburgh would be out of order not to immediately ordain Mr. Kenyon. Of course this is an impossible situation. General Assembly simply cannot jettison the body of carefully considered decisions whenever the notion arises. Our ministry requires stable application of considered principles.

ANALYSIS OF THE TASK FORCE ON PEACE, UNITY, AND PURITY REPORT

The task force appears to have made a serious effort to carry out its difficult mission, and its report contains some good recommendations. Certainly the encouragement to avoid division is timely and commendable, and studying the Theological Reflections in the report should be helpful in that regard. The suggestion to consider controversial issues in meetings like a “committee of the whole,” before the governing body acts on them, is good. But the organizers of such events must be careful in selecting speakers and planning the time, location, and format of the events in order to be evidently fair and impartial.

Only Recommendation #5 proposes an action that would immediately impact church law, and it is clearly the most controversial. The task force devoted six pages to its supporting rationale, and it is the focus of this analysis.

The task force recommends that the General Assembly adopt an authoritative interpretation (AI) of Book of Order subsection G-6.0108 relating to the ordination of officers. According to the rationale, the purpose of the AI is to clarify ordination procedures by emphasizing principles believed to be closer to Presbyterian tradition than some of the current practices. (lines 1213-15) This is done, in effect, by interpreting subsection G-6.0108, Freedom of Conscience — Individual and Corporate, so that it supersedes subsection G-6.0106, Gifts and Requirements. This could permit the ordination of persons whose ordination is not now permitted by G- 6.0106. The AI does not mention G-6.0106, but the above conclusions are drawn from the rationale. (lines 1373-81). The fact that the rationale goes further than the AI itself is likely to cause controversy, since only the text of the AI would have status in church law.

Various groups have advanced several reasons why the AI should not be adopted. Of the subjective reasons, the most significant is that its adoption would be a subversion of the PCUSA constitutional process. G-6.0106b was proposed by the 1996 General Assembly and, after approval by the presbyteries by a vote of 97 to 74, became part of the Constitution in 1997. The 1997 and 2001 General Assemblies proposed weakening or removing it, and both proposals were rejected by a majority of the presbyteries. In view of these recent actions, adoption of the AI, which does not require approval by the presbyteries, would clearly be misuse of authority by a General Assembly.

This analysis has also revealed some specific provisions of the Constitution that are in conflict with, or ignored by, the AT. These are given on the following pages. Considering all these concerns and the rancor the proposed AI would create, it is profoundly to be hoped that the 2006 General Assembly will not adopt it.

1. The AI conflicts with the Book of Order, Form of Government.

The Book of Order follows a distinct, orderly pattern in giving responsibilities and powers to the governing bodies. For each governing body there is a subsection that expressly provides for the body to have certain responsibilities and powers. In many cases there are other parts of the Book of Order that limit some of these powers, or prescribe certain conditions that must be met before the powers can be exercised. These will be called “limiting provisions.” Two examples, not related to ordination, are: G-11.0103o empowers a presbytery to dissolve a pastoral relationship, but G-14.0603 requires that, if the pastor does not concur, the presbytery must hear from him or her before acting. G-10.0102d empowers a session to provide for preaching of the Word, but G-14.0501b requires that the congregation must elect the pastor and the presbytery must approve the call before the session can issue it.

With respect to the ordination of a person as minister of the Word and Sacrament, G-11.0103n empowers a presbytery to ordain persons, but there are several limiting provisions, including:

- (1) G-14.0401 requires that the person must have been in covenant relationship with a presbytery for two years, have met the educational requirements of G-14.0310, have a theological degree, and have received an acceptable call.
- (2) G-14.0402 requires that the person successfully complete the Examination for Ordination.
- (3) G-14.0405d requires that the person answer affirmatively the constitutional questions.
- (4) G-6.0106b requires that the person live in accordance with certain specific standards, and states that certain persons shall not be ordained. The verbs used in these sentences “signify practice that is mandated,” according to the preface of the Book of Order.
- (5) G-6.0108 requires that the person “adhere to the essentials of the Reformed faith and polity as expressed in the Book of Confessions and the Form of Government.” It also asserts that, within certain bounds, freedom of conscience with respect to interpretation of scripture is to be maintained, and for that reason it permits the presbytery to decide whether the person meets the stated requirement.

Thus G-6.0108 is only one of at least five limiting provisions that require certain conditions to be met before the presbytery can ordain the person. There is no assertion in G-6.0108 that it supersedes the other four limiting provisions, nor is there any qualifying text in any of the other four such as “except as provided in G-6.0108.” While G-6.0108 permits the presbytery to decide whether the person meets its own requirement, there is simply no basis for an interpretation that G-6.0108 empowers the presbytery to override the clear, unambiguous requirements and prohibitions of the other limiting provisions.

The AI also directly conflicts with G-14.0403, which states: “The presbytery shall not omit any of the requirements for ordination except in the case of extraordinary circumstances as provided in G-14.0313” (emphasis added). The exception does not include the requirements of G-6.01 06b.

2. The AI conflicts with the Book of Order, Rules of Discipline.

An act that is contrary to the Scriptures or the Constitution is an offense; there is no requirement that it be a departure from the essentials of the Reformed faith and polity. (D-2.0203) An officer may be censured for an offense, which could include removal from office. (D-12.0101) Thus if an ordaining body should determine that a candidate, in his or her personal conduct, “has departed from scriptural and constitutional standards for fitness for office” (the wording of (3) a. of the AI), it virtually would have proved that the candidate is guilty of an offense. It would be more appropriate for the body to initiate disciplinary action than to ordain the candidate.

3. The AI conflicts with the ruling of the General Assembly PJC in the Londonderry case.

According to the rationale, the AI permits the ordination of a person whose conduct does not meet the requirements of G-6.0106b. (lines 1373-80) If an ordaining body does that, it has invalidated G-6.0106b with respect to the person being examined, which conflicts with the PJC ruling as follows:

In response to a specification of error that “various other passages of the Form of Government are irreconcilable with the requirements of G-6.0106b,” the PJC ruled: “It is not within the power of any governing body or judicial commission to declare a properly adopted provision of the Constitution to be invalid. The only appropriate avenue to change or remove a provision of the Constitution is through the process for amendment provided within the Constitution itself.”

In response to a specification of error that “G-1.0301a and G-6.0108 affirm freedom of conscience with respect to matters addressed by G-6.0106b,” the PJC ruled: “G-6.0106b presents the qualifications established by the corporate judgment of the whole church for ordination to service as minister of the Word and Sacrament, elder, and deacon. The Historic Principles of Church Order are explicit as to the right of the church to make and enforce these standards.”

4. Efforts to restore a tradition can not take precedence over the Constitution.

The rationale asserts several times that the AI emphasizes principles that are closer to Presbyterian tradition than some current practices are. (lines 1214-5, 1218-20, 1275-6, 1301, 1311-2, 1326-8) The apparent implication is that traditions can take precedence over explicit provisions of the Constitution. This is wrong. It violates the “always reforming” principle; the Church must be governed by the current Constitution. For example, returning to the tradition of ordaining only men is not a valid reason for overriding the explicit provision of G-6.0105 that “women shall be eligible to hold church offices.”

5. The AI ignores an important provision of The Westminster Confession.

The AI ignores a significant, relevant provision of the Westminster Confession, which is part of both the Presbyterian tradition and the current Constitution. Paragraph 6.109 asserts that “God alone is Lord of the conscience,” which is the confessional basis for G-6.0108. The very first sentence of the immediately succeeding paragraph begins, “They who, on pretense of Christian liberty, do practice any sin, or cherish any lust, do thereby destroy the end of Christian liberty.” (6.110) This assertion recognizes the temptation to shape our beliefs to justify our own personal conduct, and should serve as a warning not to misuse our freedom of conscience. The AI could encourage candidates to yield to that temptation by permitting them to “declare a scruple” against a specific prohibition of some aspect of their personal conduct, with hope that the ordaining body will not consider it a failure to adhere to essentials.

Questions for Constitutional Interpretation

In accord with G-13.0112c and d

1. Since the Preface to the Book of Order was amended in 1997–98 by the process required for amending the Book of Order (G-18.0300), does the Preface have the same constitutional status as the rest of the Book of Order? If not, what constitutional standing does the Preface to the Book of Order have?

2. When the Preface to the Book of Order states that “In this Book of Order (1) SHALL and IS TO BE/ARE TO BE signify practice that is mandated,” does that “mandate” permit any exceptions to be granted by any governing body to compliance with the mandated practices except those explicitly provided for in the Book of Order?

3. What is the meaning and effect of the words “mandated,” “required,” “standard” and “essential,” as used in various places in the current Book of Order?

4. What precise provision or provisions in the Constitution require officers to comply with the mandates of the Book of Order in their practice or behavior?

5. Does the Constitution permit a presbytery to ordain a minister who declares his unwillingness to comply with a requirement for ordination in the Book of Order?

6. What effect does the ordination promise to be “governed by our church’s polity and ... abide by its discipline” (G-14.0207e.) have in requiring officers to comply with the requirements set forth in the Book of Order?

7. According to G-9.0103, the act of one governing body is the act of the whole church. Does that statement or any other in the Constitution mandate that every ordination of every minister, elder or deacon, by any one session or presbytery must be accepted as a valid ordination in all the other governing bodies in the PC(USA)? What other specific provisions of the constitution or its authoritative interpretation have an effect on this question? Is there any provision of the Book of Order that would permit a governing body to refuse to accept as valid any particular ordination by any other governing body?

8. Does the present constitution permit the review by a Permanent Judicial Commission to overturn an ordination decision approved by an ordaining governing body on the basis of an incorrect interpretation or application of our ordination requirements – assuming that the correction is sought and delivered prior to ordination?

Request 06-12. Constitutional Questions—Pastor, First Presbyterian Church, Pearland Texas, and Pastor, Grace Presbyterian Church, Houston Texas.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) answer Item 06-17 (ACC Request 06-12) with its action on Item 06-01, Recommendation 5.

Request Received by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

The purpose of this letter is to communicate to you in writing five questions for the General Assembly to be referred to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The clear intent of the Form of Government is that governing bodies and individuals have the right to ask the General Assembly questions about interpretation of the Book of Order and that the ACC must first consider these questions and report its findings to the General Assembly.

G-13.0112c says, “All questions requiring an interpretation by the General Assembly of the Book of Order arising from governing bodies of the church or from individuals shall be communicated in writing to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly no later than 120 days prior to the convening of the next session of the General Assembly” [emphasis added].

G-13.0112d says, “The Stated Clerk shall refer all such questions of interpretation to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, except those pertaining to matters pending before a judicial commission. The Advisory Committee shall report its findings to the General Assembly along with its recommendations. Such recommendations may include proposals for constitutional change. The General Assembly shall vote on the recommendations, and may amend or decline to approve them [emphasis added].

Some might wish to argue that when some of the questions not only refer to what the Book of Order says and requires but also have some relationship to a report coming to the GA from a committee or task force (viz questions 3-5 below), the clerk does not have to pass them on to the ACC, and the ACC does not have to report to the Assembly its findings in response to the questions. However the Constitution is very clear that only when a particular question pertains to a matter under consideration by a judicial commission may the clerk refuse to pass it on to the ACC. Matters under consideration by any other commission, committee, or task force are not exempt from this provision of our Constitution.

Why are we submitting these questions when the GA will be receiving the PUP report?

We are submitting them because although the PUP report consists of many pages, it does not ask these constitutional questions which we believe are important and even crucial and which our Constitution guarantees us the right to ask the Assembly in our own words through the ACC.

QUESTIONS:

1. Is it legal under our Constitution for a General Assembly to decide via authoritative interpretation alone, without proposing an amendment to the Book of Order which is subsequently enacted by affirmative vote of a majority of the presbyteries, that a provision of the Book of Order which describes itself as a “requirement” for officers may be declared by a governing body to be a “non-essential” of polity?

2. Is it constitutional for a General Assembly by itself to do via authoritative interpretation what a majority of presbyteries have twice declined to do—remove G-6.0106(b) as a requirement for all governing bodies--by allowing a governing body to declare it as not essential even though it remains in the Constitution?

3. Should the PUP report in its present form with its proposed authoritative interpretation be approved by a General Assembly, can it be possible constitutionally that governing bodies may legally ordain or install officers who are opposed to the ordination of women by saying that this is a non-essential?

4. Should the PUP report in its present form with its proposed authoritative interpretation be approved by a General Assembly, can it be possible constitutionally without amending the Form of Government for a governing body to decide that one or more of the ordination/installation vows for officers is not essential, or that “non essential” wording in one or more vows may be altered by that governing body?

5. Should the PUP report in its present form with its proposed authoritative interpretation be approved by a General Assembly, can it be possible constitutionally without amending the Form of Government for a governing body to legally ordain or install officers who conscientiously disagree with the requirement in G-5.0103 that persons should not be denied membership because of race or ethnic origin on the basis that this is a “non-essential” of polity?

[The assembly answered Item 06-18 by the action taken on Item 06-01. See pp. 28, 30.]

Request 06-15-- Communication re. Recommendation 5. of the Theological Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church Report—Wm. A. Brafford, Charlotte North Carolina.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) answer Item 06-18 (ACC Request 06-15) with its action on Item 06-01, Recommendation 5.

Rationale

Please refer to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution’s comment on Item 06-8.

Letter as Received by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

The purpose of this letter is to raise a number of constitutional concerns with regard to Recommendation 5 from the [Theological] Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church. I understand that your Committee has already considered the constitutionality of this recommendation and may have reached a conclusion. However, it is also my understanding that you may have done so without the benefit an “adversary process” to sharpen and illuminate the issues. As you probably know, the benefits of our American adversary legal system in this regard are considerable. Therefore, I trust that my arguments will be of help in making the best possible constitutional advice available to the General Assembly. Moreover, if you have already reached a conclusion contrary to my own, I hope you will treat this letter as a “motion to reconsider.” In any event, these issues are clearly of monumental importance to our church, and I therefore request that you respond appropriately to this letter.

SUMMARY

1. Insofar as it proposes an “interpretation” of our Book of Order, Recommendation 5 is wrong in terms of the language and history of the applicable provisions and contrary to relevant case precedents.
2. Despite the historical claim that Recommendation 5 is not an innovation, this proposal would make a fundamental change in Presbyterian polity, one which should be made (if at all) only by the constitutional process for amending the Book of Order.
3. Precisely because it violates our constitution, Recommendation 5 would not promote the unity of the church; it would instead exacerbate existing divisions and create new ones.

PREFACE

I am a lawyer and an elder (not currently serving on the session) at Westminster Church in the Presbytery of Charlotte. While I do not write as a representative of our session or our congregation (or any other group in our denomination), there is a chance that our session may take action seeking a related presbytery overture in the near future. In addition, this letter may be posted on one or more Internet websites, thus making it an “open letter” that may serve to promote discussion and debate throughout the church.

I do not claim to be an expert on Presbyterian history or polity, and I have not researched the cases exhaustively. However, I have read enough to see that legal reasoning is pretty much the same in the church and in our civil courts. In either system, bad interpretations of legal documents, and especially constitutional interpretations that distort basic procedures and allocations of power, can be highly destructive when organizations are simply too large to operate on the basis of an informal “consensus.” In this context, it seems clear that Recommendation 5 is a bad interpretation of our Book of Order and our Presbyterian tradition, despite the hard work and good intentions of the Task Force. If adopted, it would seriously undermine our constitutional order and ultimately our corporate life as a national church.

It should also be noted at the outset that Recommendation 5 is not exactly what it purports to be, that is, an “authoritative interpretation of section G-6.0108 of the Book of Order.” (Lines 1048-1050.) It implicitly relies on new and questionable interpretations of several provisions in the Book of Order, including G-6.0106b and G-9.0103. I will discuss G-6.0106b below. However, consideration of the other problematic constitutional interpretations underlying Recommendation 5 is beyond the scope of this letter.

In the interest of full disclosure, I should mention that I support our Book of Order’s current substantive position on ordination, as reflected in G-6.0106b. However, the burden of this letter is to uphold our well-established constitutional procedures and structural allocations of power rather than to achieve any particular result on the issue of ordination.

FACTS AND LEGAL ARGUMENT

1. Recommendation 5 proposes that the 2006 General Assembly approve an “authoritative interpretation” (“AI”) of section G-6.0108 of the Book of Order. In essence, this AI states that “ordaining and installing bodies” (such as presbyteries) will determine whether candidates have departed from the standards for membership and whether such a departure “constitutes a failure to adhere to the essentials of Reformed faith and polity . . . thus barring the candidate from ordination and/or installation.” It then goes on to describe the review of such determinations by higher governing bodies exclusively in terms of process, i.e., whether “the ordaining/installing body has conducted its examination reasonably, responsibly, prayerfully, and deliberately” In addition, it urges a “presumption of wisdom” for such determinations by ordaining/installing bodies. (Lines 1048–1072.)

2. The AI does not expressly state how it would apply to G-6.0106b, which provides a standard that church officers are required “to live either in fidelity within the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman . . . or chastity in singleness. Persons refusing to repent of any self-acknowledged practice which the confessions call sin shall not be ordained and/or installed” However, the Task Force’s “rationale” following the AI explains that an ordaining/installing body would determine whether a candidate has departed from G-6.0106b and, if so, then proceed to “determine whether this departure violates the essentials of faith or polity.” (Lines 1221–1232.) In other words, the AI adds a “gloss” to G-6.0106b, so that it would mean, “Persons refusing to repent . . . shall not be ordained and/or installed [unless the ordaining/ installing body decides that the refusal in relation to this standard is not an essential matter, in the sole judgment of the ordaining/installing body.]” I say “sole judgment” because the rationale then touches briefly on the principle of review by higher governing bodies and previous AIs regarding standards for ordination and installation, but seeks to insulate the original governing body’s decision from substantive review by asserting that these principles do not “override that body’s power to judge which matters are essential and whether any departure from nonessentials is sufficiently serious that a candidate will not be ordained or installed.” (Lines 1233–1262.) In my view, it is here that the Task Force gets our constitutional order badly wrong. For convenience, I will refer to this aspect of Recommendation 5 as the idea of “autonomy” with regard to ordination decisions by presbyteries and sessions.

3. The Task Force characterizes the relationship between G-6.0108 and G-6.0106b as a “point of confusion” in recent years, claiming that “[s]ome interpreters have insisted that [G-6.0106b] supersede[s] the right of ordaining and installing bodies to determine fitness for ordination in all cases.” (Lines 1113–1125.) The Task Force’s proposed AI, however, relies on G-6.0108 as a basis for governing bodies to nullify the plain meaning and clear intent of G-6.0106b. Such an “interpretation” would be worse than the one the Task Force apparently rejects. A reasonable interpretation of both constitutional provisions would give full effect to both. As stated by the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission in Londonderry v. Presbytery of Northern New England, 12.1044 (2001):

It is not unusual for a document such as our Constitution, written at different periods of time and under different circumstances, to exhibit tensions and ambiguities in its provisions. Nevertheless, it is the task of governing bodies and judicial commissions to resolve them in such a way as to give effect to all provisions.

This principle is axiomatic in our American legal system. State and federal courts follow it routinely in interpreting both our national constitution and the constitutions of organizations involved in civil lawsuits. See, e.g., Tom v. Sutton, 533 F.2d 1101, 1106 (9th Cir. 1976) (“all constitutional provisions are of equal dignity and, if possible, should be construed in harmony with each other”).

4. The Task Force places far too much weight on a distinction between “essentials” and “standards” in G-6.0108 (lines 1096–1112), especially in light of the fact that this provision seems to treat these terms as more or less synonymous. From this distinction, however, the Task Force then draws the inference that ordaining/ installing bodies have the authority to determine that a departure from standards is not “serious” or that it is “nonessential,” subject to review that is defined only in terms of the process followed, as noted above. (Lines 1138–1152.) In other words, sessions and presbyteries are considered autonomous with regard to the substantive conclusions of their ordination decisions. A more faithful constitutional approach, however, would be to affirm that such bodies must initially determine whether there is a serious departure from standards or essentials and whether ordination is clearly prohibited by our Book of Order on any ground, whether or not that ground is considered an “essential,” with all such decisions being subject to review by higher governing bodies for both substantive and procedural error. All “acts” of governing bodies, and not merely the procedures they follow, are subject to review. G-9.0103; see also G-1.0400 and G-4.0301(f). This approach would give full effect to all of the relevant constitutional requirements.

5. When approved in 1996-1997, G-6.0106b was clearly intended as a substantive limitation on the power of governing bodies to ordain and install some candidates they might otherwise approve. Prior to G-6.0106b, several General Assembly AI’s (or statements of “definitive guidance”) rejected ordination of “self-affirming, practicing homosexuals.” These General Assembly actions were alleged to violate certain other fundamental principles in our Book of Order, such as diversity and inclusiveness. Overtures and judicial cases expressly sought to overturn those actions and establish a constitutional rule of presbytery and congregational autonomy regarding ordination.ⁱ These efforts were unsuccessful, but they continued at the 1996 General Assembly,ⁱⁱ where they were specifically answered by the Assembly’s action in approving G-6.0106b and submitting it to the presbyteries. In other words, one question specifically answered by the 1996 General Assembly with G-6.0106b was whether lower governing bodies have inherent autonomous authority regarding ordination, as suggested by Recommendation 5, and the church as a whole answered that question in the negative. Through the process set forth in our Book of Order, a majority of Presbyterians spoke and resolved the question as a constitutional matter.

6. Recommendation 5 is a “local option” measure as a practical matter, despite the Task Force’s disclaimer that standards will continue to be “set” by the church as a whole under the proposed AI. (Lines 1131–1137.) If a session or presbytery can decide in its sole and unreviewable discretion that an express requirement of the Book of Order is “nonessential” and thus need not be followed, then the fact that the whole church set the standard is meaningless. While G-

6.0106b could have been drafted in a way more suited to a constitutional standard, the language in its historical context is clear enough. If such mandatory language (“shall not be ordained and/or installed”) can be treated as nonessential by any governing body, then it is hard to see why the same could not be done with any other requirement in the Book of Order.

7. I have found no historical basis for the suggestion (Lines 716–736) that our polity allows practices (and not merely beliefs or opinions) that are inconsistent with explicit constitutional provisions, at least in the area of polity (i.e., the Form of Government, as distinguished from the Book of Confessions). As stated in Londonderry at 12.1064:

While one is free to hold and decorously to advocate ideas that are contrary to [duly constituted authority], one may not act in contravention of such authority (in this case, a properly enacted provision of the Church’s Constitution).

With reference to our current debate on ordination, for example, it might be entirely proper, as a matter of polity, for a session or presbytery to ordain someone who disagrees with G-6.0106b, but this would not be the case where a candidate states that he or she will refuse to comply. See also G-6.0108b (note 1) and Maxwell v. Pittsburgh Presbytery (UPCUSA 1974) (known as the Kenyon case), discussed below.

8. The Task Force attempts to support Recommendation 5 by several assertions that seem to confuse theological and moral categories. It states, for example, that “[s]tandards are aspirational in character. No one lives up to them perfectly” (Line 1104.) Well, yes and no, but mostly no, at least to the extent that the Task Force applies this idea to the principle of repentance in G-6.0106b. While no one’s manner of life is “perfect” in any area, including sexual morality, repentance is not fundamentally a matter of aspiration. (Imagine someone saying, “I really want to repent about this, but I just can’t do it well enough.”) No, when we do not repent, it is almost always because we don’t believe we have done anything wrong or because we just don’t want to change our behavior. Moreover, repentance does not have to be perfect in order to be genuine and discernible. I submit that presbyteries, for example, are quite capable of determining whether a candidate has repented of an acknowledged departure from the express requirements of G-6.0106b.

9. In appealing to G-6.0108, the Task Force claims that it is proposing nothing new. (Lines 1126-1179.) Their historical argument uses examples involving theological beliefs and matters of polity, but none involving the individual conduct (or “manner of life”) of candidates for ordination. However, the Task Force gradually shifts its terminology from “polity” to “behavior,” treating these very different concepts as virtually identical in order to bring the history of the former to bear on the latter. (Lines 1162-1165.) As a matter of history, however, there is in fact no real precedent for the Task Force’s approach to G-6.0106b, because no similar constitutional provision existed (or was necessary) prior to the 1990s.

10. Judicial precedent also demonstrates the Task Force’s defective understanding of our polity in this area. In Maxwell v. Pittsburgh Presbytery, the 1974 UPCUSA case of Walter Wynn Kenyon, Pittsburgh Presbytery voted to ordain Mr. Kenyon despite his conscientious opposition to the ordination of women. (Kenyon was willing to serve with ordained women but would not personally participate in their ordination process.) Dissenters in Pittsburgh Presbytery appealed to the Synod Judicial Commission, which determined that the ordination was “irregular.” On further appeal, the General Assembly’s Permanent Judicial Commission expressly held that “Presbytery does not have the power to permit the ordination of Mr. Kenyon, who rejects this part of the polity of our church.”ⁱⁱⁱ While the Kenyon opinion touches on several important polity issues, the PJC clearly rejected the idea of autonomous presbytery authority that is proposed by Recommendation 5.

11. In light of the Kenyon case, a decision by the 2006 General Assembly to adopt Recommendation 5 would raise questions of a constitutional double standard. Many Presbyterians would see it as implying that “liberal” scruples can be treated as acceptable departures from our constitutional order, but “conservative” scruples and departures are unacceptable.^{iv} Unless the General Assembly is prepared to repudiate Kenyon, it would be better to avoid this problem altogether. More fundamentally, the existence of Kenyon as a continuing precedent raises serious questions about the consequences of Recommendation 5 over the long run. Although proponents of change often insist that ordination of self-acknowledged practicing homosexuals will not be “mandatory,” that conclusion is the inescapable logic of their arguments. Ideas have consequences. If “discrimination” in this area of sexual behavior is the same kind of thing as discrimination based on status (such as race or sex), then those who oppose ordination will be seen, and treated, as bigots. Ultimately, Presbyterians who are “conservative” in this area will be denied ordination. Exhortations to “forbearance” by the Task Force (see, e.g., lines 623-628) are no substitute for a strong constitutional polity in which the express terms of all provisions in our Book of Order are given their full effect, regardless of how earnestly some Presbyterians may disagree with them.

12. No one wants the General Assembly or its Permanent Judicial Commission to have to get involved in hundreds of individual cases. As a practical matter, there seem to be only two ways to avoid this problem. One is the AI proposed by the Task Force, where session and presbytery decisions on ordination/installation are not subject to review as long as they are made prayerfully and deliberately. The problem with this option, however, is that it effectively nullifies G-6.0106b without seeking approval of the whole church through the constitutional process for amending the Book of Order, which will be seen as a breach of trust by many thousands of individuals and congregations. The other option would be for the whole church to recognize that G-6.0106b is a clear and categorical requirement that can and should be changed only by amending the Book of Order. If these alternatives are really our only two options, it seems to me that the latter will be recognized by most Presbyterians as having far more integrity as a matter of polity.

13. The Task Force apparently believes that Recommendation 5 is a compromise that can be accepted by all sides in our current debates. It is already obvious, however, that many Presbyterians will not see it that way. If Recommendation 5 is adopted, one side will get most of what they wanted. Some presbyteries will routinely determine that departures from G-6.0106b do not involve an “essential” matter. Frankly, I think the Task Force knows this as well as any other realistic observer of our recent struggles, yet their “presumption of wisdom” (lines 1069–1072) seems like an unfair effort to pre-empt and stigmatize any such criticism.

CONCLUSION

I am well aware that many Presbyterian leaders, including seminary presidents and former moderators of the General Assembly, have endorsed the Task Force report, presumably including Recommendation 5. To the best of my knowledge, however, no one has yet publicly and convincingly demonstrated that this proposal is valid under our constitution. Therefore, notwithstanding those influential Presbyterians who apparently believe otherwise, I must reluctantly point out that “the Emperor has no clothes.” Recommendation 5 is wrong in light of our history and our Book of Order. Its adoption in the form of an AI by the General Assembly, without the officially-expressed approval of the church as a whole, would change and seriously undermine the order and government of our church. I urge you to advise the General Assembly to reject it on constitutional grounds.

Faithfully in Christ

iii. Kenyon was a divided ruling; three members of the PJC dissented without opinion.

iv. “Anticipating an attempt to distinguish Kenyon on the ground that it involved an “essential” matter of women’s rights, I would respond by insisting that holiness of life is also an essential principle. See G-1.0304. At this point in our history, G-6.0106b is merely an awkward but necessary means of upholding that principle. However, even if we disagree about what is essential, the polity issue before the PJC in Kenyon was really about the limits of a presbytery’s power to decide. Pittsburgh Presbytery obviously knew that Mr. Kenyon’s position was a “departure” from constitutional standards and decided, at least implicitly, that the departure was not sufficiently serious that he could not be ordained. Contrary to the “rationale” of the Task Force (lines 1260-1262), the PJC clearly stated that a “presbytery’s power is not absolute. It must be exercised in conformity with the Constitution.”

[The assembly answered Item 06-19 by the action taken on Item 06-01. See pp. 28, 30.]

On the Report of the Theological Task Force on the Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church—From the Presbytery of Tropical Florida.

The Presbytery of Tropical Florida overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to do the following:

1. Take the position that the report of the of the Theological Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church, as written, constitutes a blend of truth and error that, if approved, will undermine the PC(USA)’s peace, unity, and purity, furthering the denomination’s disunity and, thereby, promoting deeper schism.

2. Either reject the report of the Theological Task Force on Peace, Unity, Purity of the Church as a whole or delete Recommendation 5. of that report.

Rationale

The General Assembly's Theological Task Force on Peace, Unity and Purity of the Church has issued a report to the denomination that is to be presented to the 217th General Assembly (2006) in Birmingham, Alabama, on June 15–22, 2006.

We appreciate that task force members worked diligently to create an instrument whose purpose is to help the church discern how to live in peace, unity, and purity, with Recommendations 1.–4. providing a sound basis to that end.

However, Recommendation 5. will not promote the peace, unity, and purity of the church because it radically changes, though claiming to make no change, through a de facto local option that will lead to a congregational and not connectional form of government.

Recommendation 5. blurs the explicit authority of the Book of Order by giving ordaining bodies the right to determine what is “essential” in the faith, allowing them to disregard explicit constitutional standards, including, but not limited to the well-debated fidelity/chastity requirement of G-6.0106b, effectively making these and other “standards” optional.

Recommendation 5. subverts the church's constitutional position on God's will in matters of sexual morality for its officers, which have been repeatedly reaffirmed by the PC(USA), guided by careful biblical exegesis, centuries of church tradition, and authoritative interpretations for the past quarter century.

Higher governing bodies reviewing the work of lower ordaining/governing bodies are encouraged in this report to “honor” the work of those who disagree with the Book of Order with a “presumption of wisdom” by them rather than being directed to respect the Presbyterian way of delineating and maintaining appropriate boundaries for our connectional community by honoring the constitution of changing it through constitutionally mandated processes.

The proposed authoritative interpretation will give ordaining bodies and courts latitude to reinterpret the Book of Order provisions that have an unambiguous “shall” into a permissible “may” or “might” in matters they deem nonessential to faith (though the Book of Order may deem those issues essential), even though the Book of Order carefully distinguishes between these distinctions.

Many faithful and conscientious Presbyterian leaders and organizations are voicing disappointment and opposition to the task force's report.

We believe that the approval of the task force's report, as printed, will further strain the peace, purity, and unity of our denomination, not to mention our relationships with the worldwide church where many brothers and sisters find our moral confusion troubling and unscriptural.

On Receiving and Accepting the Report of the Theological Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church, with the Elimination of Recommendation 5—From the Presbytery of San Diego.

The Presbytery of San Diego overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to receive and accept the report of the Theological Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church, with the elimination of Recommendation 5., on page 35, (lines 1048–1072) and its attendant Authoritative Interpretation; in order that we preserve the standards in G-6.0106.

[The assembly answered Item 06-21 by the action taken on Item 06-01. See pp. 28, 30.]

On Deleting Recommendation 5. of the Report of the Theological Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church—From the Presbytery of Sacramento.

The Presbytery of Sacramento overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to strike Recommendation 5 of Item 06-01 (Report of the Theological Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church). The recommendation to be deleted reads as follows:

~~“5. The Task Force on Peace, Unity and Purity of the Church recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) approve the following authoritative interpretation of section G-6.0108 of the Book of Order:~~

~~“a. The Book of Confessions and the Form of Government of the Book of Order set forth the scriptural and constitutional standards for ordination and installation.~~

~~“b. These standards are determined by the whole church, after the careful study of Scripture and theology, solely by the constitutional process of approval by the General Assembly with the approval of the presbyteries. These standards may be interpreted by the General Assembly and its Permanent Judicial Commission.~~

~~“c. Ordaining and installing bodies, acting as corporate expressions of the church, have the responsibility to determine their membership by applying these standards to those elected to the office. These determinations include:~~

~~“(1) Whether a candidate being examined for ordination and/or installation as elder, deacon, or minister of Word and Sacrament has departed from scriptural and constitutional standards for fitness for office.~~

~~“(2) Whether any departure constitutes a failure to adhere to the essentials of Reformed faith and polity under G-6.0108 of the Book of Order, thus barring the candidate from ordination and/or installation.~~

~~“d. Whether the ordaining/installing body has conducted its examination reasonably, responsibly, prayerfully, and deliberately in deciding to ordain a candidate for church office is subject to review by higher governing bodies.~~

~~“e. All parties should endeavor to outdo one another in honoring one another’s decisions, according the presumption of wisdom to ordaining/installing bodies in examining candidates and to the General Assembly, with presbyteries’ approval, in setting standards.”~~

The task force’s Recommendation 5 asks the 217th General Assembly to approve a new authoritative interpretation of the Book of Order, G-6.0108. The Presbytery of Sacramento is proposing the deletion of Recommendation 5 in its entirety because the recommendation under the ruse of clarifying ordination procedures and “reaffirming the wisdom in G-6.0108” instead serves to bring complexity and confusion to G.6.0108, and serves to deleteriously change the way ordination standards are applied by ordaining bodies.

In 1983, Section G-6.0108 was added to the Book of Order requiring that all persons who serve in the church as its officers “shall adhere to the essentials of the Reformed faith and polity as expressed in The Book of Confessions and the Form of Government.” Section G-6.0108 gives governing bodies the responsibility for discerning whether or not the candidates for ordination or the already ordained officers serving in their bodies are adhering to the essentials of Reformed faith and polity. Recommendation 5 seeks to make this standard for holding office the standard above all others, such that the violation of any ordination standard leads to the following question: Does this person’s violation of the church’s ordination standards constitute a violation of the essentials of the Reformed faith and polity? The ordaining body would have the responsibility to answer that question. Therefore, any departure from an ordination standard, including the requirement to live in fidelity in marriage or chastity in singleness expressed in G-6.0106b, could be deemed a nonessential departure from Reformed faith and polity, not barring ordination, at the discretion of the ordaining governing body.

To further illustrate the change resulting from this authoritative interpretation (AI) of Recommendation 5, currently a governing body cannot knowingly ordain a practicing homosexual without violating the Constitution. This AI would change that, because local governing bodies could deem departures from national standards to be nonessential departures from Reformed faith and polity, such that they could ordain a person in violation of G-6.0106b, or another essential ordination standard without violating the Constitution.

The church has chosen not to list the essentials of the Reformed faith, and so implicitly G-6.0108 gives ordaining bodies the responsibility of discerning essentials of the Reformed faith and what constitutes a departure from those essentials of faith. The AI proposed by the task force, however, would allow local governing bodies to determine what are and what are not essentials of Reformed polity, which is a significant change. The result would be inconsistencies from one local governing body to another across the country as each determined what their essentials and nonessentials would be. Ultimately there would be no trust among governing bodies as one body would not know what another had determined to be essential and nonessential ordination standards.

Finally, returning to the history of G-6.0108, this section was added in 1983 with the intent to restrict ordination, particularly to prevent the ordination of those who disagreed with the ordination of women, which the church determined to be an essential of Reformed polity. Therefore, under this proposed AI, local governing bodies could determine that the ordination of women is nonessential, and thus negate the original intent of G-6.0108.

On Affirming a Common Abrahamic Heritage Among the Three Faiths, Christianity, Islam, and Judaism—From the Presbytery of Newton.

The Presbytery of Newton overtures the 217th General Assembly to do the following:

~~[1. Affirm a common Abrahamic heritage among the three faiths—Christianity, Islam, and Judaism—to accept the principle of unity and harmony among them and to encourage all congregations to do the same.~~

~~[2. Accept and proclaim that Muslims, Jews, and Christians worship the same God—the God worshiped by Abraham, Sarah, Hagar, Moses, Mary, Jesus, and Muhammad—and ask the one true God to bless efforts in dialog, building bridges of harmony, and fighting violence and terror.]~~

[3.] [Affirm the current mandate of the Office of Interfaith Relations to] [P][p]romote the common effort of Christians, Muslims, and Jews to work together for peace, justice, and righteousness~~[, which is an equal concern of each of the three faiths].~~

The First Presbyterian Church of Rockaway, N.J., has just completed a mission study that, in part, states, “We are called to work for reconciliation, peace and justice for all God’s children. Members of that congregation have been involved in People for Peace and Justice, an ad hoc group that has participated in interfaith dialog and initiated several incentives¹ for creating understanding. Those involved have gained a better understanding of Christianity, Islam, and Judaism, to wit, that they are all derived from the same Abrahamic roots and that they adhere to many similar tenets, all three religions believing in one true God², professing adherence to the same commandments³ and desiring to live in peace and harmony.

The Presbytery of Newton accepts these principles espoused by one of its churches and wishes to promote them throughout the Presbyterian denomination, calling for similar dialog to open our hearts to those who believe in One God and adhere to the great commandments.⁴

The Book of Confessions, Confession of 1967, 9.42, states, “The Christian finds parallels between other religions and his own and must approach all religions with openness and respect.”

There is a pressing need for dialog among people of the three monotheistic faiths, to affirm common roots, to explore similarities and differences, to overcome stereotypes, and to promote understanding and harmony.

In a world threatened by war and violence, it can have great impact for Christians, Muslims, and Jews to lift up common ethical grounds that enable solidarity for justice, peace and sustainability of creation.

GAC (CMD) COMMENT ON ITEM 07-01

Comment on Item 07-01 from the General Assembly Council (Congregational Ministries Division).

This item calls on the General Assembly to affirm a common Abrahamic heritage among Christianity, Islam, and Judaism, to accept and proclaim that all three religions worship the same God, and to promote common efforts of the three religions to work together for peace, justice, and righteousness.

It is urged to:

1. Take no action on Recommendations 1 and 2 of this item, with the understanding that the church has already spoken adequately about the basis for dialogue and relations with Jews, Muslims, and persons of other faiths; and
2. Affirm Recommendation 3, and the current mandate of the Office of Interfaith Relations, to promote and foster interfaith cooperation for peace, justice, and righteousness.

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has spoken about the relationships between Christians and Muslims and Christians and Jews through the actions of a number of General Assemblies (including actions of 1987, 1993, 1999, 2002, and 2004). It has consistently maintained the significance of the relationships among these faiths for the whole human family. The Confession of 1967, cited in the Rationale, is continued good guidance. We must “approach all religions with openness and respect.”

As a religion that began after the time of Christ, Islam has always presented a theological challenge to Christians. Similarly, the relationship of Christianity to Judaism, within which it originally took shape, and with which it shares Scripture and much else, has been an ongoing matter for the reflection of the church.

The development of these three faiths, and their different appeals to God’s relationship with Abraham in the understanding and articulation of their identities, are certainly intertwined. It is important to look into the interconnections among these faiths with sincerity, and with attention to their historical and theological similarities and differences. However, it is not clear what affirmation of a “principle of unity and harmony” among Christianity, Judaism, and Islam might entail or assert.

Relations among these three communities have sometimes been marked by constructive living together, and sometimes by rivalry or violent conflict. Each of these faiths affirms distinctive elements and challenges to the truth claims of the others, as well as elements that can lead to cooperation and harmony. It is necessary to explore both those aspects of the Scriptures and traditions of all three faiths that lead to exclusivity and disharmony, even violence, as well as those aspects that lead to respectful life together.

We affirm one God, who has created all peoples, and is sovereign over the world. In doing so, we do not set aside our affirmation of a Triune God, nor our worship of Father, Son, and Holy Spirit.

Our search for faithful living must be motivated by a desire to love God, to be obedient to God’s will, and to love neighbors as ourselves. Presbyterians should gladly work together with Muslims and Jews for peace, justice, and righteousness. We should be willing to work with people of all faiths and no faith toward these ends. Where encounters and relations with Jews and Muslims will lead, and how they will bring new understanding or cooperation, rest in the mercy and grace of God.

Request 06-8. Interpretation of Difference Between “Federated” and “Union” Churches as Used in Chapters 15 and 16 of the Form of Government—Manager of Polity Guidance and Training, OGA.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) answer Item 07-02 (ACC Request 06-8) with the following interpretation:

A union church is a congregation formed by the creation of a single congregation from two or more congregations, at least one of which is a congregation of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), and the others are of one or more reformed or Christian churches that recognize Jesus Christ as Lord and Savior, accept the authority of Scripture, and observe the Sacraments of Baptism and the Lord’s Supper (G-16.0101 and .0301). Such congregations shall function under a plan of union as outlined in G-16.0201 (for unions with congregations of other Reformed bodies) or G-16.0401 (for unions with congregations of other Christian bodies not of the Reformed tradition).

A federated church is a congregation formed by the joint witness of two or more congregations, at least one of which is a congregation of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), and the others are of another denomination or denominations (G-15.0204a). Party congregations in the federated congregation retain their separate denominational affiliation. They may form separate corporations by which to hold property or the proceeds from the sale of property held in trust by the antecedent congregations. Persons who were members of the antecedent congregations at the time of federation retain their membership in their original denominations, and persons joining the federated congregation shall be assigned membership in one or another of the antecedent denominations as agreed upon by the plan of federation. The plan of federation governing the life of such a congregation shall follow the outline of the plan of union in G-16.0201 (for federation with congregations of other Reformed bodies) or G-16.0401 (for federation with congregations of denominations other than the Reformed tradition) as clearly as is practicable (G-15.0204b).

Rationale

The request seeks definition and clarification of the terms “federated” and “union” as they apply to particular congregations formed in association with congregations of another denomination or denominations.

Historically in our polity, the terms “federated” and “union” have described two types of relationships between congregations of different denominational membership that desire to make a united witness in their community.

1. Report of the Special Committee on Union and Federated Churches, 1958-9

Shortly before the merger of the United Presbyterian Church of North America (UPCNA) and the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America (PCUSA) in 1958, those two denominations, along with the Presbyterian Church in the United States (PCUS) organized a Special Committee on Union and Federated Churches to define and regularize the relationships developing between Presbyterian congregations of different denominational affiliations but within the same communities. According to the definition offered by the special committee in its reports to the PCUS General Assembly in 1958 and the (now merged) United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America (UPCUSA) General Assembly in 1959,

The Union Church is a union on the local level of a church of the Presbyterian Church in the United States and a church of the former Presbyterian Church in the United States of America or a church of the former United Presbyterian Church of North America (Minutes, UPCUSA, 1959, 182; see the report of this Special Committee also in the Appendix of the Minutes, PCUS, 1958, Part I, pp. 170ff.).

Such union churches were one congregation created from two or more congregations of different Presbyterian origins, with a single session, and with all property of the antecedent congregations being transferred to a corporation that is the legal successor to the antecedents. Members of the antecedent congregations, along with all persons who join the union church after its creation, were members of the union church. The session of the union congregation annually reported one half its membership to the presbytery of each of the antecedent denominations.

The same report defined “federated” churches as ...those churches which neither wish to unite under the provisions of the proposed Chapter XXXVI of the Form of Government, nor to shift from one General Assembly or the other, but still want to make a united witness with a Presbyterian US congregation in their community (Minutes, UPCUSA, 1959, Part I, p. 189. and Minutes, PCUS, 1958, Part I, appendix, pp.173ff.).

Each antecedent group that became part of a federated church maintained its own corporation that continued to own the property, or the proceeds from the sale thereof. The sessions of the antecedent congregations continued to meet in the federated congregation, but were permitted to meet jointly. Members of the antecedent congregations at the time of federation remained members of their antecedent denominations, and all persons who joined the federated congregation were assigned to membership in one or another antecedent denomination.

Put simply, federated congregations maintained their distinct denominational identities for the duration of the federation. Union congregations became one church with relationships to two or more denominations. The language of the 1959 report to the UPCUSA General Assembly assumes that the antecedent denominations of both union and federated congregations are the PCUS and the UPCUSA.

2. Federated Particular Churches, PCUS, 1971

In 1971, in response to an overture from the Presbytery of Norfolk, the PCUS General Assembly sent down to presbyteries for advice and consent an overture creating Chapter 33 in its Book of Church Order, “Of Federated Particular Churches”:

A Presbytery may authorize one or more of its constituent churches to form a federated church with a church or churches of another denomination or denominations or may organize a federated church acting in concert with a comparable judicatory of another denomination or denominations. This shall be done by agreement in writing among the Presbytery and the comparable judicatory of the other denomination or denominations (Minutes, PCUS, Part I, p.53).

At that same General Assembly, the Minutes note a request from the Presbytery of St. Johns asking

Whereas the Book of Church Order, in the recently revised Chapter 31, allows union churches with one or more particular churches of the United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, of the Reformed Church of America, and of other reformed bodies, with the approval of Presbytery;

Therefore be it resolved that the Presbytery of St. Johns overtures the General Assembly to define the phrase “other reformed bodies,” specifically: is the United Church of Christ a “reformed body?” (Minutes, PCUS, 1971, Part I, p. 53).

As these actions make clear, by 1971, the church had begun to define both union and federation in a manner that included denominations other than the UPCUSA.

3. Referral 89-2: The Peoples Church of East Lansing, MI

In 1989, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution of the PC(USA) was asked to render an opinion on the question of whether the Peoples Church of East Lansing, Michigan, was entitled to recognition as a union or federated church and thereby to elder representation in the Presbytery of Lake Michigan. The Peoples Church had been organized in 1923 as a joint work of the American Baptist, Congregational (now UCC), Methodist-Episcopal, and PCUSA churches. At the same time, the Peoples Church had become part of the Interdenominational Evangelical Christian Church. The ACC opinion was that the Peoples Church did not qualify as either a union or a federated church, on the grounds that its polity did not reflect “basic principles of Presbyterian government” (Minutes, PC(USA), 1989, Part I, p. 232).

Of significance in this opinion is the fact that union and federated status was denied not because of the denominational “parentage” of the Peoples Church, but because its polity was not in basic congruence with that of the PC(USA).¹

4. Request 90-12: Circular Church of Charleston, SC

In 1991, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution was asked to render an opinion on the question of whether the Circular Congregational Church of the United Church of Christ (UCC) might be received as a union church by the Presbytery of Charleston-Atlantic. Specifically at issue were questions about conflicting mandatory provisions of the polities of the UCC and PC(USA) regarding congregational autonomy and the congregation’s expressed desire to be free of ecclesiastical control by “any other structure.”

In its opinion, the ACC noted two concerns. The first was that the desire of the Circular Church to be free of ecclesiastical control creates a possible “conflicting mandatory provision” situation. Resolution of these kinds of situations is to be accomplished by complying with G-16.0201v. (Minutes, PC(USA), 1991, Part I, p. 402)

The cited provision provides that such conflicts between denominationally mandated provisions be resolved through petition for authoritative interpretation or amendment to denominational constitutions.

The second, and more germane, concern expressed by the ACC was that, under the terms of G-16.0101, a union church can be formed when a particular church of this church unites with one or more particular churches that are members of other Reformed churches or other Christian bodies. ... (Minutes, PC(USA), 1991, Part I, p. 403) or when two governing bodies are united under the provisions of G-17.0201e. As the ACC had no evidence that there had been any such union, but only that a congregation of the UCC desired to affiliate with the Presbytery of Charleston-Atlantic while maintaining its local autonomy, the ACC advised the presbytery that it might proceed to organize a union church under the terms of G-15.0204; it emphasized that such a union church must be organized “acting in concert with a comparable governing body of another denomination or denominations.”

These two opinions make clear that, by the early 1990s, the discussion of union churches had shifted away from union between two Presbyterian congregations and toward union with congregations of other denominations. At issue were the concerns of theological and polity congruence between the uniting congregations.

5. The Present State of the Question

The Book of Order defines a federated church in G-15.0204a in the following citations:

- G-15.0204a: “A presbytery may authorize a particular church to form a federated or union church with a church or churches of another denomination or denominations, or may organize a federated or union church acting in concert with a comparable governing body of another denomination or denominations. For the formation of a union church see G-16.0000.”
- G-15.0204b: “A federated church shall conduct its life and work under a plan of agreement between the presbytery and the other governing body or bodies. This plan shall follow provisions of G-16.0000 as clearly as is practicable, and it shall be subject to the constitutions (disciplines or other organic documents) of each church involved. Whenever the constitutions differ, the mandatory provisions of one shall apply in all cases when the others are permissive. Whenever there are conflicting mandatory provisions, petition shall be made to the appropriate governing bodies of the denominations to resolve the conflict either by authoritative interpretation or by constitutional amendment.”

One notes that the definition of the federated church in G-15.0204a is essentially unchanged from that provided in Chapter 33 of the PCUS Book of Church Order, noted above.

The Book of Order defines a union church in G-16.0101 as a church formed “with one or more particular churches which are members of other Reformed churches” [emphasis added]. On the basis of this reference, it would appear that union churches may be formed only with other Reformed bodies. However, G-16.0301 broadens the definition of union churches:

With the approval of the presbytery, and the consent of the General Assembly, particular churches of this church may unite to form union churches with one or more particular churches of churches other than those of the Reformed faith but which recognize Jesus Christ as Lord and Savior, accept the authority of Scripture, and observe the Sacraments of Baptism and the Lord’s Supper [emphasis added].

As is clear from the latter citation, the intent of G-16.0301 is to enlarge the universe of potential union partners to include communions in addition to those of the Reformed tradition, but whose theology is broadly Christian. Thus the distinction between union and federated churches does not lie in whether or not the partner congregation is within the Reformed tradition. It cannot therefore be successfully argued that union churches are those formed with congregations of other Reformed bodies, and federated churches are those formed with churches whose denominational affiliation may lie outside the Reformed tradition.

A more helpful distinction between the two is to be found in the differentiation made by the 1958/9 special committee report, which sees the union congregation as one congregation formed from congregations of different denominations, and federated congregations as essentially two congregations joined in common witness but retaining their separate denominational affiliation. The latter may be potentially more difficult to achieve, a fact recognized by the presence of the disclaimer “as clearly as is practicable” in the requirement that the plan of federation follow the provisions of G-16.0000.

Letter of Request as Received by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

This letter is written to ask for an interpretation by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution about the difference between “federated” and “union” churches, specifically as those terms are used in Chapters 15 and 16 of the Book of Order. This request is generated by a number of questions I’ve received from presbyteries across the denomination.

Section G-15.0204 on “Federated or Union Churches” says:

G-15.0204a. A presbytery may authorize a particular church to form a federated or union church with a church or churches of another denomination or denominations, or may organize a federated or union church acting in concert with a comparable governing body of another denomination or denominations. For the formation of a union church see G-16.0000.

G-15.0204b. A federated church shall conduct its life and work under a plan of agreement between the presbytery and the other governing body or bodies. This plan shall follow provisions of G-16.0000 as clearly as is practicable, and it shall be subject to the constitutions (disciplines or other organic documents) of each church involved. Whenever the constitutions differ, the mandatory provisions of one shall apply in all cases when the others are permissive. Whenever there are conflicting mandatory provisions, petition shall be made to the appropriate governing bodies of the denominations to resolve the conflict either by authoritative interpretation or by constitutional amendment.

G-16.0101 seems to offer some clarity when it states:

“A particular church of this church may unite to form a union church with one or more particular churches which are members of other Reformed churches.” So one might believe that union churches are those which include another Reformed congregation.

But then G-16.0301 muddies the waters with the following:

“With the approval of the presbytery, and the consent of the General Assembly, particular churches of this church may unite to form union churches with one or more particular churches of churches other than those of the Reformed faith but which recognize Jesus Christ as Lord and Savior, accept the authority of Scripture, and observe the Sacraments of Baptism and the Lord’s Supper.”

As many of our smaller congregations look at the possibility of merging with other congregations, some from outside the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), it would be useful to have a clear definition of these two terms. Thank you in advance for your help.

Yours in Christ,

Doska D. Ross
 Manager for Polity Guidance and Training
 Department of Constitutional Services

i. The 202nd General Assembly (1990) disapproved the ACC advice and supported the Presbytery of Lake Michigan’s action to receive the Peoples Church as a union church. It did not question the ACC’s interpretation of G-16.0101, but acted “based upon this church’s unique historical relationship to the Presbyterian church” (Minutes, PC(USA), 1990, Part I, paragraph 21.241).

The General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) invite the following churches to send ecumenical advisory delegates to the 218th General Assembly (2008):

Overseas: Communaute Presbyterieene au Congo, The Uniting Presbyterian Church in Southern Africa, Church of Central Africa, Armenian Apostolic Church in Iraq, Presbyterian Church of Chile, United Protestant Church of Curacao, United Church of Christ in the Philippines, United Church of Christ in Japan, Reformed Church of France.

North American: African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, Church of God in Christ, International, Evangelical Lutheran Church in America, International Council of Community Churches, Korean Presbyterian Church in America.

Rationale

The General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations nominates to each General Assembly churches to be invited to send ecumenical advisory delegates to the subsequent assembly (see Standing Rules B.2.f. and M.3.g.(4)k). We recommend ten overseas churches and five churches from within the United States. Of the overseas churches, we recommend at least one church from each area staffed by the Worldwide Ministries Division. Of the churches within the United States, we recommend at least one church from the Formula of Agreement, at least two churches from Churches Uniting in Christ, and at least one church in our conciliar relationships.

[The assembly approved Item 07-04. See p. 16.]

The PC(USA) delegation elected by the 216th General Assembly (2004) to the Ninth Assembly of the World Council of Churches in Porto Alegre, Brazil, February 14–23, 2006, makes the following recommendations to the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.):

1. That the 217th General Assembly (2006) reaffirm the deep commitment of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to the World Council of Churches and encourage all Presbyterians and all governing bodies to give thanks to God for the World Council of Churches (WCC), to share in its ecumenical fellowship, and to support the WCC in our common calling to unity and common mission with the church global and ecumenical.

2. That in response to the invitation in the document, “Called to Be One Church,” adopted by the World Council Assembly, that the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) commit itself to

- Seek the visible unity of Christ’s Church,
- Affirm the integrity of the baptism of believers in all the member churches of the WCC, and
- Welcome at the Lord’s Table all such baptized believers whenever the Eucharist is celebrated in Presbyterian churches.

3. That the assembly express gratitude to the World Council of Churches for effectively pioneering in using consensus procedures to carry out the business of the assembly and seek to learn from this experience in developing forms of decision making in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) that model this concern for unity in the body of Christ.

4. That the “Message of the Ninth Assembly” be received and that its prayer based on the theme, “God in Your Grace, Transform the World,” be approved as our own and commended to our churches for their use in worship.¹

5. That The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) affirm its deep commitment and solidarity with the global church and its priorities as expressed through the commitments of the World Council of Churches for

- The Decade to Overcome Violence,
- The commitment to work for economic justice,
- The call to new patterns of dialogue and cooperation with people of other faiths.

Rationale

*Report to the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)
From the PC(USA) Delegation to the Ninth Assembly of the World Council of Churches (WCC)*

The 216th General Assembly (2004) elected the following persons as delegates to the Ninth Assembly of the World Council of Churches: the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly, the Reverend Dr. Clifton Kirkpatrick; the Associate Stated Clerk and director of the Department of Ecumenical and Agency Relations, the Reverend Robina M. Winbush; the chair of the Worldwide Ministries Division, the Reverend Judy Angleberger; and Vanesa Davila-Luciano. The director of Worldwide Ministries Division, the Reverend Dr. Marian McClure, and Brady Radford were elected as alternates. The Ninth Assembly was held February 13–26, 2006, in Porto Alegre, Brazil. The following is their report to the 217th General Assembly (2006).

1. Context

Warm, sunny days full of cool breeze, accompanied by the sounds of the very soulful and inviting rhythms of samba created the background for BOM DÍA, BEM-VINDOS AO BRASIL! (“Good morning, welcome to Brazil”). This was our welcome to beautiful and interesting Porto Alegre, Brazil. A city with not much to say at first glance but with an undercurrent of culture, warm characters, and societal necessities waiting to be addressed and filled and where, no matter the circumstances, hospitality and friendliness were the order of the day. In 2005, this city turned into the home for the World Social Forum held on the campus of the Pontifical University of Rio Grande do Sul, the same location as our assembly.

This was the first assembly to be held in Latin America, an unprecedented event that created expectations from many perspectives. Latin America has suffered oppression and social injustices that have long been blamed upon the church for not standing up to defend the people and many times even becoming part of the oppression. There was a feel in the air that an assembly in Latin America was long overdue.

Around 3,000 church leaders were present with an additional 2,000 visitors, press, and guests, making the attendance a staggering 5,000 participants. The attendance included with great intentionality members from our churches who live with a variety of disabilities. Their full participation in the assembly was significant and a source of hope. Thousands of Christians from different communions congregated in Porto Alegre to begin a new journey of transformation full of challenges. These challenges ranged from trying to understand others’ point of views to the transportation schedule that took everyone quite some time to understand. Every day was full of cultural experiences as all participants could walk along the corridors or around the plenary halls and encounter folk groups performing typical music from their countries, different organizations promoting their causes, and Brazilian artisans leaving us in awe with their beautiful crafts.

Under the theme, “God in your grace, transform the world” the Ninth Assembly convened with great anticipation. Many observed that this was a “prayerful assembly.” Morning Prayer opened the theme of the day and sent us through the day reflecting on the spiritual implications of the theme. Plenaries started daily with impacting artistic expressions of music and dance to give continuity to the theme presented in Morning Prayer. Bible study and Evening Prayer were a central part of the life of the assembly. The Opening and Closing celebrations of prayer, praise, and proclamation in different languages and images, gave a glimpse of Christians from every corner and every language worshipping the Triune God together and proclaiming the saving and transforming grace of God in Jesus the Christ.

This assembly was also considered to be a “youth assembly” creating expectations of the greatest youth participation in an assembly in the history of the WCC. With more than 150 young stewards and many hundreds more as delegates and part of “mutirão”², the youth voice was present making us all conscious of the realities that they face in our world.

A significant change in the life of the World Council of Churches was the move to consensus decision making as recommended by the Special Commission on Orthodox Participation. It was hoped that this move would help all members of the assembly to be heard and curtail some of the divisiveness that is often experienced in traditional parliamentary procedures. As delegates waved blue, orange, and yellow cards, it was clear to everyone that a transformation was already occurring in the life of the WCC.

Having the assembly in Porto Alegre, Brazil, was a refreshing experience needed to begin a new process of transformation and of real change that is relevant to the issues of our world. The gathering of so much diversity and such a warm and open country gave way to an open forum for these challenges and changes to take place.

2. Issues Addressed by the Ninth Assembly

The Ninth Assembly spent much of its time and energy on five overarching concerns: Christian identity, church unity, Latin America, economic justice, and overcoming violence. The Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Rowan Williams, spoke of Christian identity as a perspective that “depends on being where Jesus is, under his authority, sharing the ‘breath’ of his life, seeing what he sees.” The call for church unity appealed to member churches to accept one Baptism, to find a common date to celebrate Christmas and Easter, and to strive to overcome barriers in communing together at the Lord’s Table. (See <http://www.wcc-assembly.info/en/theme-issues/assembly-documents/1-statements-documents-adopted/christian-unity-and-message-to-the-churches/called-to-be-the-one-church-as-adopted.html>)

The assembly gave much attention to Latin America as a first time host to the WCC assembly. Latin America also represents numerous Pentecostals and Roman Catholics who are partnering with the WCC but are not yet in full membership with it. The President of Brazil, Luiz Inacio Lula da Silva, thanked the WCC for its work in hunger and poverty relief. Plenary speakers addressed economic justice, calling for elimination of poverty and working towards justice in the global markets. Being midway into the Decade to Overcome Violence, efforts continue to reach the goal of reconciliation and peace, especially for the children and youth of the world.

The Public Issues Committee dealt with such global concerns as water for life, UN reform, elimination of nuclear arms, responsibility to protect vulnerable populations, Latin America, trafficking of women, terrorism and human rights, and mutual respect with people of other faiths.

The assembly heard that 1.2 billion people are at risk due to lack of adequate water and sanitation. Therefore, churches are called on to take necessary steps to preserve and protect water resources from over-consumption, pollution, and treating water as a commodity. The WCC reaffirmed the principles and purposes of the UN and supports changes to the permanent membership of the UN Security Council that would make it more geographically, politically, and culturally representative of today’s world. It also encouraged member states to see that the UN is adequately staffed and funded for their work. Each member church is urged to pursue with its own government the unequivocal elimination of nuclear weapons under the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty. They are also called on to support and strengthen the Nuclear Weapons Free Zones. The responsibility to protect vulnerable populations calls for preventive strategies and for the safety of civilians in peril during armed conflicts.

The assembly adopted the statement on Latin America and called on Latin American governments to strengthen their work towards effective policies to overcome poverty, injustice, and the degradation of the environment. (See <http://www.wcc-assembly.info/en/theme-issues/assembly-documents/1-statements-documents-adopted/international-affairs/report-from-the-public-issues-committee/latin-america.html>)

The committee addressed the concern for the trafficking of women at the upcoming World Cup in Football taking place in June 2006 in Germany and called on churches to combat such trafficking and to work with their governments and nongovernmental organizations (NGOs) to closely monitor the situation and to take appropriate actions. The WCC requests the UN to agree on a clear definition of terrorism and urges that terrorist acts and threats be considered as matters of criminal justice. The assembly also affirms that all acts to counter terrorism by the state must remain within the framework of the international rule of law ensuring respect for human rights and humanitarian law. (See <http://www.wcc-assembly.info/en/theme-issues/assembly-documents/1-statements-documents-adopted/international-affairs/report-from-the-public-issues-committee/terrorism.html>)

The assembly asks member churches all over the world to demonstrate solidarity with those experiencing attack on their religion and to join them in defending the integrity of their faith by non-violent means.

3. Future Work of the World Council of Churches

Recognizing that the changing realities of ecumenical agencies and the need to focus the future work of the World Council of Churches, the Ninth Assembly identified four areas of programmatic engagement for the next seven years. They are Unity, Spirituality and Mission; Ecumenical Formation; Global Justice; and Public Voice and Prophetic Witness to the World.

The assembly elected a 150-person central committee, which serves as the main decision-making body of the council between assemblies. The new committee counts 63 women and 22 young adults. The assembly also appointed eight presidents to represent the council in their respective regions. Judy Angleberger and Robina M. Winbush were elected by the assembly to represent the PC(USA) on the central committee.

The central committee elected the Reverend Dr Walter Altmann (Evangelical Lutheran Church of Brazil) as moderator, and elected as vice-moderators Metropolitan Gennadios of Sassima (Ecumenical Patriarchate of Constantinople) and the Reverend Dr. Margaretha M. Hendriks-Ririmasse, Protestant Church in the Moluccas (Indonesia).

1. "God, in your Grace, Transform the World" (Message of the 9th Assembly of the World Council of Churches: An Invitation to Prayer)

Sisters and brothers, we greet you in Christ. As representatives of churches from all the world's regions, we gather in Porto Alegre, Brazil, meeting in the first decade of the third millennium, in the first assembly of the World Council of Churches held in Latin America. We have been invited here to join in afesta da vida, the feast of life. We are praying, reflecting on the scriptures, struggling and rejoicing together in our unity and diversity, and seeking to listen carefully to one another in the spirit of consensus.

Meeting in February 2006, we are made aware by Assembly participants of cries arising daily in their home countries and regions due to disasters, violent conflicts and conditions of oppression and suffering. Yet we are also empowered by God to bear witness to transformation in personal lives, churches, societies and the world as a whole.

Specific challenges and calls to action are being communicated to the churches and the world in the reports and decisions of the Assembly, such as: the quest for Christian unity; our mid-term call to recommitment to the Decade to Overcome Violence (2001-2010); discernment of prophetic and programmatic means to achieve global economic justice; engagement in inter-religious dialogue; full inter-generational participation of all women and men, and common statements addressing the churches and the world on public issues.

The theme of this Ninth Assembly is a prayer, "God, in your grace, transform the world". In prayer our hearts are transformed, and so we offer our message as prayer:

God of grace, together we turn to you in prayer, for it is you who unite us:
you are the one God - Father, Son and Holy Spirit - in whom we believe, you alone empower us for good,
you send us out across the earth in mission and service in the name of Christ.

We confess before you and all people:
We have been unworthy servants.
We have misused and abused the creation.
We have wounded one another by divisions everywhere.
We have often failed to take decisive action against environmental destruction, poverty, racism, caste-ism, war and genocide.
We are not only victims but also perpetrators of violence.
In all this, we have fallen short as disciples of Jesus Christ who in his incarnation came to save us and teach us how to love.
Forgive us, God, and teach us to forgive one another.

God, in your grace, transform the world.

God, hear the cries of all creation, the cries of the waters, the air, the land and all living things;
 the cries of all who are exploited, marginalized, abused and victimized, all who are dispossessed and silenced, their humanity ignored, all who suffer from any form of disease, from war and from the crimes of the arrogant who hide from the truth, distort memory and deny the possibility of reconciliation.
 God, guide all in seats of authority towards decisions of moral integrity.

God, in your grace, transform the world.

We give thanks for your blessings and signs of hope that are already present in the world, in people of all ages and in those who have gone before us in faith; in movements to overcome violence in all its forms, not just for a decade but for always;
 in the deep and open dialogues that have begun both within our own churches and with those of other faiths in the search for mutual understanding and respect; in all those working together for justice and peace - both in exceptional circumstances and every day.
 We thank you for the good news of Jesus Christ, and the assurance of resurrection.

God, in your grace, transform the world.

By the power and guidance of your Holy Spirit, O God, may our prayers never be empty words but an urgent response to your living Word - in nonviolent direct action for positive change, in bold, clear, specific acts of solidarity, liberation, healing and compassion, readily sharing the good news of Jesus Christ.
 Open our hearts to love and to see that all people are made in your image, to care for creation and affirm life in all its wondrous diversity.

Transform us in the offering of ourselves so that we may be your partners in transformation to strive for the full, visible unity of the one Church of Jesus Christ, to become neighbors to all,
 as we await with eager longing the full revelation of your rule in the coming of a new heaven and a new earth.

God, in your grace, transform the world. In the name of the Father, Son and Holy Spirit;
 Amen.

2. Mutirão is a Brazilian term for “coming together.” They were a series of workshops that provided a space for reflection, celebration and presentations to the larger ecumenical family.

[The assembly approved Item 07-05. See p. 16.]

The General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) do the following:

- 1. Authorize the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to become a “provisional participant” in the Christian Churches Together in the U.S.A. (CCT) for the next four years.
- 2. Actively support, as a provisional member, the ecumenical agenda of Christian Churches Together in the U.S.A. and work for greater participation of historic African American churches in CCT.
- 3. Direct the General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations to bring a report and any additional recommendations to the 218th General Assembly (2008).

Rationale

History of Christian Churches Together

In 2001, a number of U.S. churches leaders began discussing the possibility of forming a new organization that would provide a broader-based space than that provided by the National Council of Churches or the National Association of Evangelicals. In the summer of 2001, various American church leaders informally met in Baltimore on September 7 to explore whether or not the time had come to “create a new, more inclusive body.” At the meeting no votes were taken, but there was a strong desire among the participants for a broader structure of some kind that would include all the major groupings of churches.

This conversation continued in Chicago (April 4–6, 2002), in Pasadena (January 27–29, 2003), in Houston (January 7–9, 2004), and in Los Altos, California (May 1–3, 2005), with an ever-expanding and more diverse group of Christian leaders. The participants at these meetings prayed and worshipped together, listened to each other, and experienced an increasing sense of purpose and vision that has resulted in the proposal to form Christian Churches Together in the U.S.A.

Consequently, at the Silicon Valley meeting, which was planned to be the launching meeting, they decided to postpone the launching. The main issue that made them take this decision was the lack of full representation of the church families, especially with regard to the historic African American churches.

The purpose of Christian Churches Together is to enable churches and national Christian organizations to grow closer together in Christ in order to strengthen our Christian witness in the world, especially in relation to a common commitment to overcome poverty in the United States. The unique vision that informs Christian Churches Together is that a hospitable space for growing together must be inclusive of the diversity of Christian families in the United States, including Evangelicals, Orthodox, Roman Catholics, Pentecostals, historic African American churches, and other racial and ethnic churches.

Clifton Kirkpatrick (Stated Clerk) and Robina Winbush (Associate Stated Clerk) represented the PC(USA) in these discussions during the early meetings, and Carlos Malavè (Assistant Stated Clerk) has been representing the PC(USA) since the meeting in Houston. Since that time, Malavè has become a member of the CCT Steering Committee.

[The assembly approved Item 07-06 as amended. See p. 16.]

In response to the work done in Accra and the official report from the 24th WARC General Council, the PC(USA) delegation

1. Makes the following recommendations to the 217th General Assembly (2006):

a. The 217th General Assembly (2006) acknowledges, with gratitude, the election of the Reverend Dr. Cliff Kirkpatrick as president of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches and reaffirms the commitment of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to the World Alliance of Reformed Churches.

b. The 217th General Assembly (2006) affirms as an act of ecumenical solidarity and recommends to our congregations for study, confession, and action the “Confession of Faith in the Face of Economic and Ecological Destruction” adopted at Accra and recommended to all World Alliance of Reformed Churches (WARC) member churches (see attachment A).

c. The 217th General Assembly (2006) commends for study and action the reports on (a) mission (<http://www.warc.ch/24gc/study/12.pdf>), (b) Covenanting for Justice in the Economy and the Earth, (<http://www.warc.ch/24gc/study/13.pdf>) and (c) spirituality (<http://www.warc.ch/24gc/study/14.pdf>) from the 24th General Council of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches.

d. The 217th General Assembly (2006) asks the General Assembly Council’s Office of Theology and Worship to ~~draft~~ consider drafting a report on Reformed theology and economic justice, especially dealing with the theological language appropriate to address social and economic justice.

e. The 217th General Assembly (2006) acknowledges the gifts of women and youth within the life of the church, reaffirms its commitment to ensuring gender equity and inclusion of people of all ages in church leadership, and encourages congregations to use WARC’s resources.

f. The 217th General Assembly (2006) reaffirms its commitment to supporting the work of partner churches in Africa for the prevention of HIV and AIDS.

g. The 217th General Assembly (2006) encourages the church at all levels to hear and interpret the cry for justice from our Reformed partner churches, especially in the southern hemisphere as voices of our own faith family, and seek to integrate those voices into our self understanding as a church.

2. Recommends to the General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations that it do the following:

a. Receive the WARC reports, and refer them to the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy for reference in the development of policy recommendations.

b. Refer the documents on women to the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns for their advocacy work within the PC(USA).

c. Ask the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) to ~~draft~~ [consider drafting] a new document on economic justice based on Hope for a Global Future, addressing specifically the ~~[neo-liberal]~~ [global] economic model, its main policies, how it is implemented and promoted, how our ecumenical partners have responded to this model and why, and alternatives and reforms to the current system.

Rationale

The 24th General Council of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches, held from July 28 to August 13, 2004, in Accra, Ghana, was a most intense time of joyful fellowship for the 390 delegates from 163 Reformed denominations around the world. How beautiful it was to see the diverse crowd walking toward the worship hall early in the morning to the beat of African drums!

As we arrived we were greeted by a host of young woman and men from around the world wearing t-shirts announcing "STEWARDS." Good stewards they were, making sure we did not have to carry our luggage one more step, serving us cold water, and involving themselves in numerous tasks to make our stay comfortable.

The daily routine began with an early breakfast, then collective worship and Bible study organized in small groups (some by language, most in English). After a short coffee break and a ride to the next site, we had assemblies and group discussions. In the evening, after the closing service, some would go for a stroll at the makeshift market place set up by local churches at the campus of the university to facilitate the purchase of African arts, crafts, and cloth.

An occasion that became emblematic of the whole council was the day trip to the slave dungeons of Cape Coast and Elmina, where we learned, among other things, that the slave traders understood their business to be completely consistent with their Christian faith. They were comfortable enough with the practice to build their houses of worship on top of the dungeons where their captives were kept as a commodity waiting to be shipped. This presumption of innocence by Christians involved in the most atrocious forms of human exploitation became a reminder to us, as Reformed Christians, that in this age of globalization of the economy we need to remain vigilant against self-deceptions that justify privilege. At the end of the day trip to the dungeons, we tied colorful strips of cloth around small poles that were taken back to the sanctuary where we held daily worship, as a reminder that the future of the slave traders and the future of the victims of slavery are inevitably wrapped around each other.

Two pre-council conferences were held prior to the opening of the Twenty-fourth General Council: the Women's Pre-Council and the Reformed Youth Forum. Both conferences offered opportunity for extended sharing, worship, and study, specifically centered on gender and young adult issues. Reports from both informed the discussion and discernment of the General Council.

Following directives from previous councils, especially the 1997 meeting in Debrecen, the General Council focused much of its attention on economic justice. The deliberations of the council followed a process involving three steps:

1. For the first days we heard the testimony of people invited to instruct us on certain aspects of the globalization of the economy. This hearing/learning segment culminated with the day trip to the slave dungeons of Cape Coast and Elmina.

2. Then we began to process what we had heard in light of our Reformed faith. Delegates were assigned to committees focused on the topics of Healing, Honoring Diversity, Inclusiveness and Participation, Peace, Gender Justice, Creation, and Economic Justice. Next we were invited to choose one of three sessions addressing overarching issues: (a) Mission; (b) Covenanting for Justice in the Economy and the Earth; and, (c) Spirituality.

3. After all the discussion and initial drafting that took place in the various committees and subcommittees of the three sessions, the last stage of the council was four days of plenary discussion, fine tuning, and voting on the final reports submitted by the three sessions.

The General Council produced statements on Mission, Covenanting for Justice in the Economy and the Earth, and Spirituality.

When reading these and other documents that emerged from the council's work, it is helpful to know the following:

- One of the topics that inspired a great deal of debate at the committees, sessions, and plenary was whether this council was in a position to make a "confession." Various alternative options were suggested, including replacing the expression "A Confession" (in the classical sense of the word) with a "confessing" document.

- Another set of issues that prompted considerable debate was the language to be used to address the current state of economic and political affairs in the world. "Globalization," "Economic Globalization," "Neo-liberal economic model," "Neo-liberal markets," and "Empire" were the main concepts debated. These discussions were prolonged, due in part to the fact that delegates from various regions and diverse denominational affiliations brought to the council a whole range of perspectives. There was a general sense, however, that the World Alliance of Reformed Churches needs to address the rapid expansion of the current global economic model because of the complications and injustices that it generates. At the end of the process, most delegates from most regions were celebrating the fact that the Reformed churches have taken a stance and formulated a theology of mission that responds to the present challenge.

Finally, the PC(USA) delegation celebrates, and invites the General Assembly to join in celebrating, the unanimous election of our own Stated Clerk, the Reverend Cliff Kirkpatrick as the new president of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches (WARC). In an era when most Reformed Christians do not live in North America or Europe, it was especially significant that Cliff Kirkpatrick as a person, and by extension also the PC(USA) as a member of the alliance, were shown this degree of honor.

Attachment A

Confession of Faith in the Face of Economic Injustice and Ecological Destruction

15. Faith commitment may be expressed in various ways according to regional and theological traditions: as confession, as confessing together, as faith stance, as being faithful to the covenant of God. We choose confession, not meaning a classical doctrinal confession, because the World Alliance of Reformed Churches cannot make such a confession, but to show the necessity and urgency of an active response to the challenges of our time and the call of Debrecen. We invite member churches to receive and respond to our common witness.

16. Speaking from our Reformed tradition and having read the signs of the times, the General Council of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches affirms that global economic justice is essential to the integrity of our faith in God and our discipleship as Christians. We believe that the integrity of our faith is at stake if we remain silent or refuse to act in the face of the current system of neoliberal economic globalization and therefore we confess before God and one another.

17. We believe in God, Creator and Sustainer of all life, who calls us as partners in the creation and redemption of the world. We live under the promise that Jesus Christ came so that all might have life in fullness (Jn 10.10). Guided and upheld by the Holy Spirit we open ourselves to the reality of our world.

18. We believe that God is sovereign over all creation. "The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof" (Psalm 24.1).

19. Therefore, we reject the current world economic order imposed by global neoliberal capitalism and any other economic system, including absolute planned economies, which defy God's covenant by excluding the poor, the vulnerable and the whole of creation from the fullness of life. We reject any claim of economic, political, and military empire which subverts God's sovereignty over life and acts contrary to God's just rule.

20. We believe that God has made a covenant with all of creation (Gen 9.8-12). God has brought into being an earth community based on the vision of justice and peace. The covenant is a gift of grace that is not for sale in the market place (Is 55.1). It is an economy of grace for the household of all of creation. Jesus shows that this is an inclusive covenant in which the poor and marginalized are preferential partners, and calls us to put justice for the “least of these” (Mt 25.40) at the centre of the community of life. All creation is blessed and included in this covenant (Hos2.18ff).

21. Therefore we reject the culture of rampant consumerism and the competitive greed and selfishness of the neoliberal global market system, or any other system, which claims there is no alternative.

22. We believe that any economy of the household of life, given to us by God’s covenant to sustain life, is accountable to God. We believe the economy exists to serve the dignity and well being of people in community, within the bounds of the sustainability of creation. We believe that human beings are called to choose God over Mammon and that confessing our faith is an act of obedience.

23. Therefore we reject the unregulated accumulation of wealth and limitless growth that has already cost the lives of millions and destroyed much of God’s creation.

24. We believe that God is a God of justice. In a world of corruption, exploitation, and greed, God is in a special way the God of the destitute, the poor, the exploited, the wronged, and the abused (Psalm 146.7-9). God calls for just relationships with all creation.

25. Therefore we reject any ideology or economic regime that puts profits before people, does not care for all creation, and privatizes those gifts of God meant for all. We reject any teaching which justifies those who support, or fail to resist, such an ideology in the name of the gospel.

26. We believe that God calls us to stand with those who are victims of injustice. We know what the Lord requires of us: to do justice, love kindness, and walk in God’s way (Micah 6.8). We are called to stand against any form of injustice in the economy and the destruction of the environment, “so that justice may roll down like waters, and righteousness like an ever-flowing stream” (Amos 5.24).

27. Therefore we reject any theology that claims that God is only with the rich and that poverty is the fault of the poor. We reject any form of injustice which destroys right relations – gender, race, class, disability, or caste. We reject any theology which affirms that human interests dominate nature.

28. We believe that God calls us to hear the cries of the poor and the groaning of creation and to follow the public mission of Jesus Christ who came so that all may have life and have it in fullness (Jn 10.10). Jesus brings justice to the oppressed and gives bread to the hungry; he frees the prisoner and restores sight to the blind (Lk 4.18); he supports and protects the downtrodden, the stranger, the orphans and the widows.

29. Therefore we reject any church practice or teaching which excludes the poor and care for creation, in its mission; giving comfort to those who come to “steal, kill and destroy” (Jn 10.10) rather than following the “Good Shepherd” who has come for life for all (Jn 10.11).

30. We believe that God calls men, women and children from every place together, rich and poor, to uphold the unity of the church and its mission, so that the reconciliation to which Christ calls can become visible.

31. Therefore we reject any attempt in the life of the church to separate justice and unity.

32. We believe that we are called in the Spirit to account for the hope that is within us through Jesus Christ, and believe that justice shall prevail and peace shall reign.

33. We commit ourselves to seek a global covenant for justice in the economy and the earth in the household of God.

34. We humbly confess this hope, knowing that we, too, stand under the judgement of God’s justice.

We acknowledge the complicity and guilt of those who consciously or unconsciously benefit from the current neoliberal economic global system; we recognize that this includes both churches and members of our own Reformed family and therefore we call for confession of sin.

We acknowledge that we have become captivated by the culture of consumerism, and the competitive greed and selfishness of the current economic system. This has all too often permeated our very spirituality.

We confess our sin in misusing creation and failing to play our role as stewards and companions of nature.

We confess our sin that our disunity within the Reformed family has impaired our ability to serve God's mission in fullness.

35. We believe, in obedience to Jesus Christ, that the church is called to confess, witness and act, even though the authorities and human law might forbid them, and punishment and suffering be the consequence (Acts 4:18ff). Jesus is Lord.

36. We join in praise to God, Creator, Redeemer, Spirit, who has "brought down the mighty from their thrones, lifted up the lowly, filled the hungry with good things and sent the rich away with empty hands" (Lk 1:52f).

[The assembly approved Item 07-07. See p. 16.]

The General Assembly Council, upon recommendation of its Worldwide Ministries Division, recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) approve the following:

1. Affirm current policy on interfaith matters as substantially adequate for the engagement of congregations and individual Presbyterians in interfaith relations;
2. Request the General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations to continue to assess and advise the Interfaith Relations Office on the adequacy of interfaith policy; and
3. Ask the Office of Interfaith Relations to develop, and the General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations to review, an action plan to address particular issues of an interfaith nature, building on existing policy.

Rationale

These recommendations are in response to the following referral: 2004 Referral: Recommendations in Response to Item 06-02. Recommendation 1. That the General Assembly Council's Office of Interfaith Relations Communicate the Strong Policy Statement Opposed to Religious Bigotry and Stereotyping (General Assembly Minutes, 1999, Part I, pp. 79, 663) with Other Appropriate Offices of the General Assembly Council; Recommendation 2. Prepare a Guide for Congregations That Makes Known and Available the Resources Already Available in Regard to Religious Pluralism and Christian Discipleship; and Recommendation 3. With the Office of the General Assembly, Bring a Recommendation on What Further Study or Action Might Be Needed to Better Equip the Church to Live in a Religiously Plural World—From the 216th General Assembly (2004) (Minutes, 2004, Part I, pp. 19–20).

In response to this recommendation, the Office of Interfaith Relations of the Worldwide Ministries Division, and the General Assembly Office of Ecumenical Relations of the Office of the General Assembly, asked the Committee on Interfaith Relations to give their advice about the adequacy of the existing policy base for interfaith relations of the denomination.

The General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations, at its January 2006 meeting, discussed a report on the existing policy for interfaith relations. This report included the plans for making such policy documents easily accessible for Presbyterians on the interfaith Web site of the church. They agreed that the policy base is adequate, and further recommended that the Office of Interfaith Relations, with advice and counsel from the General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations, provide accessible guidance for specific interfaith situations.

The General Assembly Council, upon recommendation of its National Ministries Division, recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) approve the following Common Framework for Mission in the U.S.A. Between the Presbyterian Church of Ghana and the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.):

"Presbyterians from Ghana continue to immigrate to the United States in large numbers and many have shown a desire to maintain ties with their Presbyterian heritage. Because of this fact, Presbyterian churches and fellowships are being established across the nation. The PC(USA) wants to support a model for new church development among Ghanaians that maintains a vital relationship with Presbyterian denominations in both countries. Existing Ghanaian congregations in the U.S.A. with membership in the Presbyterian Church of Ghana are encouraged to develop active relationships with PC(USA) presbyteries while maintaining active support for the Presbyterian Church of Ghana. The PC(USA) welcomes the initiative of the Presbyterian Church of Ghana in mission in the U.S.A. and desires such mission to be done in partnership between the two churches. The common goal is to provide Presbyterian churches for immigrants from Ghana that are positively related to both the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and the Presbyterian Church of Ghana.”

Rationale

The Common Framework for Mission in the U.S.A. Between the Presbyterian Church of Ghana and the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has already been approved by the General Assembly Council of the Presbyterian Church of Ghana.

Item 07-09

Commissioners' Resolution. On the Presbyterian Accompaniment Program in Colombia.

That the 217th General Assembly (2006) do the following:

[The assembly approved Item 07-09, Recommendations 1.–4. See p. 16.]

1. Commend the General Assembly Council, the Worldwide Ministries Division, the Iglesia Presbiteriana de Colombia (Presbyterian Church of Colombia), and the Presbyterian Peace Fellowship for initiating and implementing a program to send U.S. Presbyterian volunteers to accompany church workers engaged in the social ministry of the Presbyterian Church of Colombia and its ecumenical partners with the displaced and in defense of human rights.

2. Add its voice of support for the accompaniment program as it continues to be needed and requested by the Presbyterian Church of Colombia.

3. Commend the nonviolent efforts of the Presbyterian Church of Colombia for answering the call of Christ by joining with partners to bring peace to the nation and to minister to the poor and suffering and to stand for the human and civil rights of all. We especially commend our partners in Colombia for their fidelity to the mission of Christ in the face of constant threats, intimidation, and assassinations.

4. Commend and support the church entities and organizations, including the Washington Office; the Presbyterian News Service; the Worldwide Ministries Division; the Peacemaking Program; the General Assembly Council; the Presbyteries of Miami, Winnebago, and Tres Rios; the Church & Society magazine; the Presbyterian Peace Fellowship; and the Colombia Mission Network, which encourage and equip Presbyterians to work for peace in Colombia and increase their solidarity with Colombian Presbyterians through advocacy, education, delegations, financial support, presbytery partnerships, hosting Colombian visitors, and especially prayer.

[The assembly referred Item 07-09, Recommendation 5. to the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy and the Peacemaking Office to include a report in their next Human Rights Update Report. See pp. 16–17.]

5. Call on the members and congregations of the PC(USA) to study the situation in Colombia, diligently pray for the work of the Presbyterian Church of Colombia, and advocate with senators, representatives, and the president of the United States to lay down the weapons of violence and support the nonviolent struggle of the churches and civil society of Colombia and those in the U.S. who stand beside Colombians to end the violence by

- a. Withdrawing military support to the government of Colombia.
- b. Reorienting U.S. policies toward Colombia in such a way as to encourage a more equitable distribution of that country's immense wealth, and to protect the rights of groups threatened by the interests of large corporations, including indigenous people, Afro-Colombians, labor leaders, human rights workers, and many campesinos.
- c. Ending the aerial fumigation for coca crops and focusing on programs that provide higher levels of support for farmers to convert to alternative crops and that reduce demand for drugs in the United States.
- d. Transferring U.S. support to the growing civil society committed to democracy and nonviolence.
- e. Providing aid to strengthen health care, education, and nutrition, especially among the displaced.

- f. Increasing aid for resettlement of displaced persons in their homelands.
- g. Channeling aid through nongovernmental organizations.
- h. Supporting the commendable work of the United Nations in Colombia, especially the work of the High Commissioner for Refugees with internal refugees, displaced women, and threatened indigenous communities.
- i. Ratifying, and urging Colombia to also ratify, the United Nations Convention Against Corruption.

Rationale

In September 2004, the General Assembly Council, responding to a request from the Colombian Presbyterian Church, approved an accompaniment program to provide a continuous presence with those in the Christian churches of Colombia who have committed to be an objective, nonviolent witness for Christ in the midst of the intense violence that grips Colombia.

Leaders and members of the Presbyterian Church of Colombia and other Christian groups in the Red Ecumenica (Ecumenical Network) have received death threats, been jailed on false charges, and been subjected to government surveillance because of their work to assist persons displaced by violence and their defense of human rights.

In 2006, new death threats against Presbyterian and other church workers have underscored the importance of and the continuing need for the accompaniment program and the many other Presbyterian initiatives for peace in Colombia.

Since the 216th General Assembly (2004), the armed conflict in Colombia has continued to grow, carried out by drug cartels, privately funded paramilitary self-defense forces, rebel groups, and government forces. Many of the armed groups, both left and right wing, fund themselves through the production and sale of cocaine to the U.S. and Europe. The drug enforcement policy of the U.S. has been transformed in the last twenty-six years from a policy of U.S. demand reduction to a focus on the supply, mostly coming from South America. This has led to increased funding for the military institutions of the Andean nations and decreased funding for anti-drug use education and drug addiction treatment in the U.S. The program of aerial spraying carried out by Andean nations and U.S. contractors has failed to reduce the supply of drugs entering the U.S. but has resulted in the mass displacement of tens of thousands of innocent Colombians and the destruction of lives, livelihoods, communities, and the environment.

Fundamental to Colombia's violence are systemic problems, including maldistribution of Colombia's wealth, and pursuit of the interests of large, multinational corporations at the expense of Colombia's indigenous, Afro-Colombian, and campesino populations.

Numerous officials of the government of Colombia and its military and national police are known to collude with the paramilitary forces and the drug cartels, hindering the ability to govern effectively or to be an honest partner with U.S. interests.

The churches and human rights organizations of Colombia and the world have been seeking to end the armed conflict through nonviolent means, to minister to the needs of those who are suffering most because of the conflict, and to support the legal struggles of persons whose lands have been stolen and rights trampled. Such activity of the churches and human rights organizations leads to charges of subversion against them and threats and acts of intimidation against them that have even led to assassination. The growing movement of nonviolent resistance to the armed conflict in Colombia includes the Presbyterian Church of Colombia and the Ecumenical Network of Colombia, along with many faith-based and human rights organizations of women, Afro-Colombians, and indigenous people. Particularly important is the work of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees. This agency responds to the humanitarian crisis by coordinating international efforts to prevent displacement and protect the rights of Colombia's 3.4 million internally displaced people.

A survey carried out by the Colombian Government and the World Bank in 2001 shows that corruption is a problem in the country. Among other conclusions, the survey found that 70 percent of the public officers that were interviewed considered that corruption is one of the main characteristics of the political system in Colombia. The United Nations Convention Against Corruption (UNCAC) creates the opportunity to develop a global language about corruption, a coherent implementation strategy, and a set of benchmarks for effective anti-corruption strategies. The Convention Against Corruption was signed by the governments of Colombia and the United States on December 9, 2003, but has not yet been ratified by either nation.

Numerous examples in the 20th and 21st centuries attest to the success of nonviolent struggle for peace, justice, and transformation of tyrannies to democracies. These examples are found in the histories of Poland, South Africa, The Philippines, Chile, Argentina, the Soviet Union, and other nations.

The Scriptures call the church to work for peace, care for the suffering and dispossessed of the world, and to seek peace and justice through nonviolent means.

Item 07-10

Commissioners' Resolution. On Celebrating and Protecting Cuba Partnership.

That the 217th General Assembly (2006) do the following:

[The assembly approved Item 07-10, Recommendations 1.–2. See pp. 16–17.]

1. In regards to celebrating the partnership between the Presbyterian Reformed Church in Cuba and the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)

a. Request the Stated Clerk to send a formal communication to the Synod Council of the Presbyterian Reformed Church in Cuba expressing the joy of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in the continuing partnership with the autonomous and independent Presbyterian Reformed Church in Cuba; congratulation that church on the forty years of its independent existence and on its significant contributions to the world ecumenical movement through leadership in the World Council of Churches, the Latin American Council of Churches, the Caribbean Council of Churches, and the Cuban Council of Churches; and expressing thanksgiving for the twenty years of joint mission partnership under the terms of the Mutual Mission Agreement which has resulted in the remarkable growth of partnership relationships between the governing bodies and congregations of the two churches.

b. Request the Stated Clerk also to send a formal communication to the president and the Board of Directors of the Ecumenical Theological Seminary in Matanzas, Cuba, congratulating the seminary on its sixty years of significant contribution to the training of pastoral leadership for the Evangelical churches of Cuba and its valiant attempts to meet the challenge of the recent growth experienced by all the Cuban Christian churches.

c. Request the Stated Clerk and the General Assembly Council, through its Worldwide Ministries Division, to seek a way to respond to the request of the Ecumenical Theological Seminary of Matanzas, Cuba, to send an official representative to the 60th Anniversary Celebration in October 2006.

d. Urge the committees and officials of the 217th General Assembly (2006) to make provision for commissioners to the General Assembly to hear directly from the Reverend Hector Mendez, moderator of the Presbyterian Reformed Church in Cuba.

Rationale

There has been a close connection between Presbyterianism in Cuba and the Presbyterian bodies of the U.S.A. since 1890.

The year 2006 marks the 40th anniversary of the action of the Boston General Assembly of the United Presbyterian Church that released the Presbytery of Cuba to form an autonomous and independent Reformed and Presbyterian Church.

The year 2006 marks the 20th anniversary of the adoption by the national assemblies of the Presbyterian Reformed Church in Cuba and the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) of the Mutual Mission Agreement that opened the way to formal relationships after years of separation occasioned by the political conflict between the two nations, and has guided the joint mission endeavors of the two denominations since that time.

The year 2006 also marks the 60th anniversary of the founding of the Evangelical Theological Seminary in Matanzas, Cuba, of which the Cuban Presbyterian Church was a founding partner and in which it continues to play a prominent leadership role.

The Reverend Dr. Hector Mendez, current moderator of the National Synod of the Presbyterian Reformed Church in Cuba, who was also president of the denomination when the 1986 Mutual Mission Agreement was negotiated and signed, is an ecumenical visitor to the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

The Presbyterian Reformed Church in Cuba is the unique product of the mission energy of both U.S. Presbyterian churches that came together in 1983 to form the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). These efforts began in 1890 when the Presbyterian Church in the United States (PCUS) answered the plea of a Cuban layman to send someone to help him with the work he and his wife had begun in Havana. Both U.S. Presbyterian denominations sent mission workers to Cuba after 1899 and mission work was vigorously pursued in parallel until 1918 when the PCUS merged its Cuba mission into the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A. (PCUSA) work. The Presbytery of Cuba of the Synod of New Jersey continued as a cherished part of the church in the U.S. until the 1966 General Assembly authorized it to form an independent and autonomous church, which was constituted in January 1967. Tragically separated for many years by the political conflict between the governments of United States and Cuba, Presbyterians in Cuba and the U.S. have slowly reestablished communication and renewed ties of friendship and support. About fifteen presbyteries of the PC(USA) and more than twenty congregations outside those presbyteries, along with several seminaries and affiliated groups now have official mission covenants with the Cuban church. The Ecumenical Theological Seminary in Matanzas, Cuba, was founded in 1946 with Presbyterian support then and through the years being a major factor in its ministry and is now also a focus of attention for many of the current U.S. partners.

2. In regards to protesting the recent decision of the U.S. Department of the Treasury to deny general travel licenses for visits to Cuba by U.S. denominations and ecumenical bodies

a. Call on the United States government to restore to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and other national religious denominations, to their regional subsidiary bodies, and to the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A. and Church World Service, the general licenses for religious travel to Cuba that they previously held.

b. Urge the governing bodies of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and its individual members to communicate with their representatives in the Congress of the United States to urge the restoration of the general licenses for religious travel to Cuba.

c. Commend the Stated Clerk for his leadership on this important mission issue and request him to communicate the position taken by the General Assembly in approving this overture to the appropriate officials in the United States government.

Rationale

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and other major religious denominations in the U.S., along with the National Council of Churches and Church World Service, had held two-year general licenses to visit co-religionists in Cuba until June of 2005.

At that time the U.S. Treasury Department made an artificial and unwarranted distinction between particular congregations and their related higher governing bodies denying extension of the two-year general licenses to the higher bodies on the grounds that they “were not religious organizations” according to a new interpretation of Treasury Department regulations.

The limited and highly restricted licenses now offered to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and its presbyteries, as well as to the other major denominations and ecumenical bodies, greatly reduce the ability of U.S. churches to be a Christian presence in Cuba and to encourage and assist Cuban churches in their important faith witness.

In accord with policies of the General Assembly, the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly, the Reverend Dr. Clifton Kirkpatrick, joined leaders of the Alliance of Baptists, American Baptist Churches, Christian Church (Disciples of Christ), Episcopal Church, Evangelical Lutheran Church in America, United Methodist Church, National Council of Churches, Church World Service, Progressive National Baptist Convention, and United Church of Christ to address a letter to Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice and Secretary of the Treasury John Snow on March 16, 2006, calling for the restoration of the general licenses to the churches and ecumenical bodies.

Relationships and fellowship are at the heart of our understanding of church life and mission and to hinder these activities is to strike at the heart of our religious identity and freedom. We believe that these principles are protected by the U.S. Constitution as a very important part of our democratic polity and that the U.S. government should not presume to separate religious bodies into parts, some of which qualify as “religious bodies” and some of which do not.

3. In regards to denial of visas to Cuban ecumenical officials to travel to the U.S.

a. Call on the United States government to ~~rescind the unofficial policy of not granting~~ [swiftly grant] visas to leaders of the Cuban Council of Churches to visit the U.S. when invited by Church World Service, the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A., or other U.S. ecumenical bodies, or their sister religious denomination.

b. Request the State Clerk of the General Assembly to communicate this position to appropriate officials of the U.S. government.

Rationale

Officials of the United States government have stated publicly that officials of the Cuban Council of Churches will not be granted visas to visit the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A. or the Church World Service or other ecumenical bodies in the United States.

The Cuban Council of Churches is the ecumenical partner in Cuba for the ministry of Church World Service in responding to routine and emergency needs.

Cuban Presbyterian pastors have been and continue to be prominent leaders in the Cuban Council of Churches and one at least had a visa cancelled after it has been approved when it was learned that he was vice-president of the Cuban Council of Churches.

[The assembly approved Item 07-11. See pp. 16–17.]

Commissioners' Resolution. On the Denial of Human Rights in the Philippines.

That the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) approve the following and request the Office of the Stated Clerk to communicate these concerns to the entities listed below, Items 1–3.

1. Express the deep appreciation and the concern of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) for the United Church of Christ in the Philippines (UCCP), for their witness to Jesus Christ and service to their people, particularly for our brother and sister Christians in the families of the men and women recently murdered by forces opposed to the protection of human rights. These killings have accelerated since 2003. In 2003: Rey Corpin; '04 Isaias Manolo Jr., Joe Baclao, Juancho Sanchez, Vincente Olea; '05 Abe Sungit, Fr. William Todena, Alfredo Davis, the Reverend Edison Lapuz, the Reverend Raul Domingo, Jose Manegdeg, Junico Halem; '06 Mateo Morales, Nestor Arinque, the Reverend Jemias Tinambacan, José Doton, Andy Pawikan, Noel Capulong. These eighteen martyrs range in age from 13 to 71 years.

2. Call upon the Philippine government to

a. bring to justice the killers of these pastors, other church workers, and other Filipinos similarly executed and/or tortured by paramilitary forces; and

b. support the request of our sister church, the UCCP, for a full inquiry into these murders that terrorize local populations and dishonor the reputation of the Philippines.

3. Call upon the Government of the United States, through Ambassador Kristie A. Kenney and other appropriate officials, to communicate to the Philippine government, including President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and the legislature, the grave concern of U.S. citizens for these egregious abuses, and to insist on the maintenance of the rule of law and to provide for an open, civil society in the Philippines. The 217th General Assembly (2006) further asks that the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, John Bolton, request the UN Human Rights Commission to investigate the deteriorating human rights situation and specifically the murders of fifteen church people from April 2003 to the present.

Rationale

The Presbytery of Sacramento for more than five years has had a partnership with the Northeast Southern Tagalog Conference (NESTCon) of the United Church of Christ in the Philippines (UCCP). A delegation from the Presbytery of Sacramento traveled to Manila, Luzon, and Digas City, Mindanao, from May 17 to June 2, 2006, for the purposes of meeting and listening to the needs expressed by the fisher people of Lake Laguna and the villagers recovering from devastating mudslides in the back country of Luzon Province. The second purpose, later in the visit, was to carry greetings to the UCCP Quadrennial General Assembly from the presbytery and from the PC(USA). This greeting was given and received amid warm fellowship and mutual celebration of our common ministry in the name of Jesus Christ.

In devastating contract, the request for this resolution comes in response to the assassination of Noel Capulong, the field trip host and interpreter who was shot on May 27th just five days following his meeting with the Sacramento group. During that same week at the UCCP General Assembly it was reported that fifteen individuals have been murdered similarly over the past three years.

The PC(USA) has historically raised its voice to bring to light the needs of Southeast Asian countries and the obligation of others, particularly the United States of America, to relate to the Republic of the Philippines in a way consistent with respect for human dignity and the value of each individual. We cite as foundation the 1949 General Assembly vote to support the United Nations Declaration of Human Rights and the adoption of The Confession 1967, 9.44, which states in part: "... Christians who exclude, dominate, or patronize their fellowmen, however subtly, resist the Spirit of God and bring contempt on the faith which they profess." Action of the 206th General Assembly (1994), that states "We reaffirm the commitment of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to work with and support its ecumenical partners in the Asia-Pacific region in their ministries, and in those political and economic circumstances that impact their life and witness (Minutes, 1994, Part I, p. 310).

Pertaining particularly to the Republic of the Philippines, we cite:

1997 Statement—PC(USA), pp. 600–601:

Deep concern exists over the "disappeared" people in the Philippines. Since the early 1970s, more than sixteen hundred people, who are known critics of the government, have "disappeared." No serious investigation has ever been conducted regarding this issue.

2001 Statement—PC(USA), p. 310:

Human rights violations, including extrajudicial executions and the torture or ill-treatment of suspected members of armed opposition groups security personnel, were reported (cf. Amnesty International Report 200, p.193).

Since the murder of Benino Aquino, exiled husband of Corazon Aquino, and the end of the dictatorship of Ferdinand Marcos (1986), The Republic of the Philippines was presumed to be making progress as a democracy respecting human rights. Events of the last year have put this process in doubt. Recent murders and a growing atmosphere of fear in the cities, towns, and hinterlands suggest that the Philippines, at least in some areas, is descending into a human rights crisis. Religious leaders and Christian communities are disrespected, if not targeted for "removal," singled out for violence by death squads operating with apparent impunity repeatedly using a "signature" method of assassination with the use of two people on motorcycle driving by and shooting their target then speeding off.

The PC(USA) is an ecumenical partner with the UCCP and stands beside that church and other Christians bravely working for justice, peace, and reconciliation in the Philippines. We share the same tradition that affirms God's work in the world through enlightened conscience, and sees God's blessings in democracy, religious freedom, and other opportunities for human fulfillment.

We have an opportunity today to add the weight of the entire PC(USA) body to the expressed concern of our Stated Clerk in his letter to the president of the Philippines quoted below regarding this impending crisis.

Stated Clerk Addresses Violence in the Philippines
March 8, 2006

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
Malacalang Palace
Manila 1005, The Philippines

Dear Madam President:

On behalf of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), I write to express our alarm and dismay over the recent developments in the Philippines. We are aware that there has been an increase in recent weeks in peaceful protests against the policies of the government and against corruption in official circles. Unfortunately, instead of addressing the people's grievances, your government has dealt with the situation by the use of military force. While the rationale for such a response was the need "to maintain law and order through the country," it led, in fact, to a needless escalation of general violence, the violation of human rights, the curtailment of people's freedom and a trampling of democracy.

The issuing Presidential Proclamation 1017 destabilizing the situation even further, and the fact that the government withdrew the proclamation before a Court of Law could act on its constitutionality appears to be prima facie evidence that the government realized that its violent response to the people was unwise and illegal.

At a time when the country is facing a deepening social, political and economic crisis, the government call ill afford to turn a deaf ear to the legitimate needs and desires of the people. Further, as a signatory to the Universal Declaration of Human Rights your government is bound to respect and abide by the international norms and standards of that declaration.

As a step toward stopping further deterioration, we urge you to release all who have been detained for their participation in nonviolent demonstrations, to meet with leaders of the people who represent the legitimate aspirations of the people for full democracy and economic stability, and to insure that all citizens are accorded the due process and respect for their rights to which the Philippine Constitution entitles them.

Cordially yours,

Clifton Kirkpatrick
Stated Clerk of the General Assembly
Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)

Bruce Ogden, Presbytery of Sacramento

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 07-11

Advice and Counsel on Item 07-11—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy.

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) advises approval of Item 07-11.

Rationale

Item 07-11 is consistent with the Resolution on Violence, Religion, and Terrorism, approved by the 217th General Assembly (2004), which states:

The General Assembly affirms the imperative of international cooperation in developing and carrying out responses to terrorism. (Minutes, 2004, Part I, p. 878)

It is also supported by:

Our faith teaches us that God wants humanity to be transformed and to embrace active and effective peacemaking. At the same time, violent sectarian movements within major faith traditions must be rendered ineffective by reconciliation, dialogue, and, if necessary, the legitimate use of force by the state and the international community. (Ibid., p. 878)

and

The General Assembly proclaims as PC(USA) policy that our moral criteria of both just peacemaking and justifiable war (Helvetic Confession, Westminster Confession) find terrorism whether state, group, or individual as immoral because it wrongfully and deliberately attacks innocent civilians. It also condemns any targeting of civilians by military forces participating in wars that otherwise must be justifiable. (Ibid., p. 878) and 07-01 is consistent with the Resolution on Just Peacemaking and the Call for International Intervention for Humanitarian Rescue, approved by the 210th General Assembly (1998), which states:

... the importance of human rights, religious liberty, and democratic principles as foundational for just peace. (Minutes, 1998, Part I, p. 457).

Item 07-Info

A. General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations (GACER) Agency Summary

1. Purpose

The purpose of the General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations (GACER) is to give a high profile to the vision of the ecumenical involvement and work as central to the gospel and key to the life of the church; plan and coordinate, in consultation with the agencies and governing bodies of the church, the involvement of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in ecumenical relations and work; connect the ecumenical efforts of all governing body levels of the church; provide a common point for all ecumenical efforts connecting us with those outside our church; keep a unity of vision that includes the ecclesiastical, programmatic, ecumenical, and denominational parts of our ministries and commitments; articulate the Reformed and Presbyterian identity in the midst of our ecumenical commitments; promote awareness of the role of the unity of all humankind in the search for the unity of the church; and promote the unity of the church as an exhibition of the kingdom of God to the world.

The committee is composed of sixteen members, elected by the General Assembly, ecumenical members, the Stated Clerk and the Executive Director of the General Assembly Council, and other ex-officio members.

2. Ministry and Accomplishments (2004)

The General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations held its two regular meetings on February 5–7, 2004, and on September 30–October 2, 2004. The following are highlights of these meetings:

a. Winter 2004 Meeting

Jay Rock, coordinator of Interfaith Relations, and Chuck Denison, associate for New Church Development, led a theological reflection on, “Imperatives of Dialogue and Evangelism: A Conversation.” The committee discussed issues raised by the “messianic” new church development, Avodat Yisreal in Philadelphia.

Sara Lisherness introduced the World Council of Churches (WCC), “Decade to Overcome Violence,” with a focus on the United States.

Philip Wickeri gave a report on the plans for the first Global Institute of Theology (GIT) to be held in association with 24th General Council of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches. The GIT was designed to contribute to the formation of a new generation of ecumenical leaders and strengthened the ecumenical commitment of WARC member churches.

The GACER voted to receive and approve the review of the National Council of Churches, to express its appreciation to the members of the review committee, and to forward the review to the 216th General Assembly (2004).

b. Fall 2004 Meeting

The theological reflection was offered by Dr. Damayanthi Niles of Eden Theological Seminary and member of Trinity Presbyterian Church in Giddings-Lovejoy Presbytery, and Angela Cowser, student at the Louisville Presbyterian Theological Seminary, who were participants at the Global Institute of Theology (GIT) in Accra.

The GACER received the document, “Covenanting for Justice in the Economy of the Earth,” from the 24th General Council of WARC and commended it to the National Council of Churches in the United States of America as a contribution for framing a new social creed in the context of economic globalization.

The GACER hosted a reception in honor of the Reverend Dr. Clifton Kirkpatrick on his election as president of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches.

c. Dialogues and Conversation

The General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations continues to review our dialogues with the Moravian Church, the ongoing conversations with the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, the Cumberland Presbyterian Church in America, and the Korean Presbyterian Church in America. The dialogue with the Episcopal Church, initiated in January 2002, entered in its third year, this dialogue is essential for the ongoing work of CUiC. During the month of September, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) participated in two bilateral dialogues: the Lutheran/Reformed Dialogue and the Reformed/Roman Catholic Dialogue. The Reformed/Roman Catholic Dialogue continued their conversations. Dr. Richard Mouw and Dr. Martha Moore-Keish represent the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in the dialogue.

d. Other GACER Related Activities, Reports and Actions

The GACER appointed a committee for the study of Christian Churches Together. The committee members are: Margaret J. Thompson, chair; Eugene Turner; Ricardo Moreno; Philip Wickeri; and Sandy Peirce. The subcommittee was charged with bringing recommendations to GACER concerning PC(USA) participation in Christian Churches Together.

The GACER sponsored a WCC Decade to Overcome Violence, Consultation of International Young Scholars in the United States on the theme: “The Power and Promise of Peace.” The consultation was held at the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Center in Louisville, on April 2–4, 2004.

The GACER reviewed the work of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in maintaining and strengthening our conciliar relationships with the World Alliance of Reformed Churches, the World Council of Churches, and the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A.

The most significant ecumenical event in 2004 was the 24th General Council of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches. Approximately 1,000 delegates, ecumenical observers, and guests came together for the opening of the 24th General Council of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches. Eleven delegates and a larger group of visitors and participants in the Global Institute of Theology (GIT) represented our church. The General Council was hosted by the Presbyterian Church of Ghana and the Evangelical Presbyterian Church, Ghana. Members of the worldwide Reformed church family met under the theme, “That all may have life in fullness” (John 10:10). The World Alliance of Reformed Churches (WARC) links approximately 75 million Christians in more than 200 Congregational, Presbyterian, Reformed, and United churches around the world.

Churches Uniting in Christ: The main activity this year was the consultation, “Eradicating Racism: Liberating Tomorrow’s Children,” sponsored by the CUiC Racial Justice Task Force. More than eighty church leaders, academics, seminary students, and grassroots activists came together to discuss how Churches Uniting in Christ could work for racial justice. All nine CUiC communions were represented. The CUiC ministry task force met in early June. They continued to work on reviewing an update of the draft document, “Mutual Recognition and Mutual Reconciliation of Ministries.”

3. Ministry and Accomplishments (2005)

The General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations held two regular meetings: the winter meeting on January 27–29, 2005, the fall meeting on September 29–October 1, 2005.

a. Winter 2005 Meeting

The meeting was opened with a presentation titled, “Envisioning the Ecumenical Movement for the 21st Century.” A Power Point presentation on, “Ecumenism in the 21st Century,” was shared, which was based on sixty-five interviews with people from around the world asking questions about their own organization, who they relate to, what they consider some of the difficulties in the current configuration of the ecumenical movement, and their own role within the movement.

The following day, the Reverend Dr. Eileen Lindner, deputy secretary for Research and Planning of the National Council of Churches in Christ and editor of the Yearbook of American and Canadian Churches, led the theological reflection on, “The Changing Landscape of the United States Christian Religious Scene.”

Clifton Kirkpatrick and Marian McClure reported on their experiences at the WARC 24th General Council meeting in Accra, Ghana. They reported that the worship services were very moving and powerful; and that the visit to the slave dungeons was an experience that will stay forever with all participants. A report from the PC(USA) delegation was shared along with other documents on spirituality, mission, and covenanting.

b. Other GACER Related Activities, Reports and Actions

The GACER approved the implementation of a programmatic response to the World Alliance of Reformed Churches General Council documents on mission, spirituality, and covenanting.

A brief history of the relationship between the Churches Uniting in Christ and the Episcopal/Presbyterian Bilateral Dialogue was shared with the committee, along with several background documents to be reviewed and discussed in a subcommittee.

The GACER has followed closely the work of the Churches Uniting in Christ Ministry Task Force and has sent communications to them pertaining to the working drafts they have produced. It is expected that a formal draft proposal will come to the GACER at its fall meeting for a formal response.

The committee discussed ways to strengthen interfaith and ecumenical networks within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). It affirmed the staff suggestions of creating a PC(USA) Network for Interfaith and Ecumenical Relations, as a possible way to achieve this goal.

c. Fall 2005 Meeting

The meeting opened with a Power Point presentation with background information on the World Council of Church’s 9th Assembly, in Porto Alegre, Brazil, February 14–23, 2006.

The committee engaged in a theological reflection on the theme, “Seeking Unity in the Family: Report of the Theological Task Force on Peace, Unity and Purity of the Church.” A panel consisting of Jon Chapman, area coordinator for Southern and East Africa; Gradye Parsons, director of Operations in the Office of the General Assembly; Mienda Uriarte, associate for Christian Education for Young Adults; and Tom Ferguson, of the Episcopal Church, shared their reflections on the report.

The committee members had an engaging conversation with the panel and expressed thanks to the panel for their presentation.

The committee discussed the need to give guidance to the search committee responsible for hiring the new Executive Director of the General Assembly. It was approved to advise the search committee to find a candidate who has ecumenical involvement and experience; to ask the finalist to give ecumenical references; and to ask what interfaith experience the person possesses.

d. Dialogues and Conversations

The GACER received reports on the following dialogues and conversations:

(1) Cumberland Presbyterian Church in America and the Cumberland Presbyterian Church: The joint committee met July 19–20, 2005, in Birmingham, Alabama. This was the last meeting prior to the concurrent General Assemblies in June 2006. Particular attention was given to the necessary preparation of our churches to meet one another in Birmingham.

(2) Korean Presbyterian Church in America: The Joint Committee on Cooperation with the Korean Presbyterian Church in America (KPCA) met on March 3–4, 2005, in California. In addition to sharing updates on respective and shared ministries, the joint committee also discussed future directions and the possibilities of new committee members. The KPCA elected a new general secretary at its general assembly in May, the Reverend Jacob Se Il Jang.

(3) Episcopal Church: The Presbyterian/Episcopal bilateral met on July 26–28, 2005, in Cambridge, Massachusetts, at the Episcopal Divinity School. The bilateral group continued to review the CUiC Ministry Task Force (MTF) proposal and prepared a joint statement to the respective ecumenical commissions and committees. Of particular importance is the relationship of reconciling ordained ministries to the mission of the churches in local communities.

(4) Moravian/Reformed: The Moravian/Reformed dialogue met May 6–7, 2005, in Baltimore, Maryland. The meeting focused on issues that divide and unite within each of our traditions. The following common threads were identified: belief that the Church is called into being by Jesus Christ and he alone is Head of the Church; an understanding of always being reformed and/or always reforming; an affirmation of the witness expressed in a number of historic and contemporary creedal and confessional statements while declining to make any one statement definitive or unique to belief; strong commitment to the quest for unity in the Body of Christ; belief that the sacraments are a sign and hope of our unity; commitment to mission; and the ability to exchange ministers. The following threads were identified as particular to our traditions, but not barriers to ecclesial or mission relationships: openness to structural innovation as seen in the distinctiveness of the Moravian model of bishop; the PC(USA) model of ordained elders; and the UCC form of oversight that is rooted in “covenantal” relationship.

The following issues were identified for further exploration: (a) educational requirements for ordination; (b) ordination of PC(USA) elders; (c) authority of Scripture; (d) questions of oversight; (e) concept of covenant oversight; (f) exercise of discipline; (g) Moravian role of bishop as a spiritual resource and an intercessor for the unity of the church.

(5) Reformed/ Catholic: The fourth meeting of the Seventh Round of Catholic (USCCB)/Reformed dialogue met on April 14–15, 2005, in Chicago, Illinois. The dialogue continued to focus on baptism, both, from a historical/theological understanding and a liturgical perspective. It was decided to ask members of the committee to draft two papers that would lead us toward a statement on baptism. The first paper will focus on the theology of sacramentality from both the Catholic and Reformed perspectives. The second paper will focus on the particular beliefs and practices as related to baptism, identifying both convergent and divergent understandings.

e. Other GACER Related Activities, Reports and Actions

(1) Report from the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A. Governing Board

The meeting was held on September 26–27, 2005, in New York City, New York. An item of significant discussion and concern was the withdrawal of the Antiochian Orthodox Christian Archdiocese of North America from the Council. Father Leonid Kishkovsky, ecumenical officer for the Orthodox Church in America and chair of the NCCC Membership and Ecclesial Relations Committee, gave an in-depth overview of the contributing factors and implications of this action. The Reverend John Thomas, president and general minister of the United Church of Christ, also spoke to the concerns that the Antiochian’s resolution and news reports both implicitly and explicitly identified the actions of the United Church of Christ General Synod as a contributing factor. The governing board directed the general secretary and the president to make pastoral visits to the patriarchs of the Antiochians, the Orthodox Church of America, and the Greek Orthodox Archdiocese.

The council is also involved in a strategic planning process. This process has surfaced possible implications for its relationship with Church World Service (CWS). A joint committee has been formed to examine these implications and to feed into the Strategic Planning Process.

(2) Proposal for a Church-wide Ecumenical Consultation

The GACER considered the reconfiguration of the ecumenical movement globally and the changing landscape of Christianity in the United States. Shifts within the PC(USA) and the ecumenical movement create an opportunity to consider anew the meaning and shape of our ecumenical commitments and witness. The PC(USA) held its first and only ecumenical consultation in October 1996. The committee approved a plan for a consultation on the PC(USA) ecumenical stance. The focus of the new consultation will be: to declare an ecumenical stance with a vision statement; to help guide GACER, related staff; to address basic and essential guidelines—what we do, where we go; to address how to envision relationships with groups; to determine what are the principles that guides what we do; to look at current reality within the church and society; to address the way we approach ecumenism, so it reflect current realities.

(3) Worldwide Ministries Division/Church World Service Staff Consultation

On May 2–3, 2005, the senior staff team of Church World Service came to Louisville to meet with staff from the Worldwide Ministries Division. The meeting was held at the request of Church World Service as the first in a series of staff-to-staff consultations with member denominations. The meeting was an occasion for open and frank discussion about the relationship between Church World Service and the work of the PC(USA) in relief, development, and partner relations. The two staff teams brought both affirmations of our work together and concerns about areas of disengagement. Both also expressed hopes for more coordinated and collaborative work in the future.

(4) Churches Uniting in Christ

(a) Ministry Task Force Proposal

At the January 2005 meeting of GACER, a subcommittee was appointed to consider the engagement of the PC(USA) in the CUiC study process of the Ministry Task Force proposal. They met twice by conference call. The substantive questions that the subcommittee posed to putting the document forward for study were related to the role of elder. The CUiC Coordinating Council responded that the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) would be able to “put forth an elder as a bishop for ecumenical purposes. This will include those persons whose ministry for ecumenical purposes designated by their churches as inseparable from corporate expressions of episcopate. Also, an elder would not be expected to be ordained by the church through the bishop as defined by CUiC.” The subcommittee received this response positively and voted to move forward in the study of the document within targeted communities of the PC(USA).

(b) CUiC Racial Justice Task Force

The Racial Justice Task Force of Churches Uniting in Christ developed a curriculum to be used on “Race Sunday”, held the second Sunday in February. It also drafted a statement on the Voting Rights Act, encouraging that the three key provisions that are set to expire in 2007 are made permanent. The heads of communions will be asked to jointly sign this statement.

(c) CUiC Local/Regional Task Force Update

Member churches of CUiC in Denver developed the “Denver Pilot Project”. The purpose of the Denver Pilot project is to model a method of a state council of churches serving as a convener of local CUiC congregations. The purpose is to live out our relationship as CUiC congregations. Seven CUiC denominations are represented by the churches in the project. At the first meeting, it was unanimously agreed that if the congregational relationships were to be long lasting, the pastors needed to establish well-grounded relationships among themselves. The group has met regularly.

4. Ministry and Accomplishments (Winter 2006)

The General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations held its winter meeting on January 19–21, 2006. This report includes only the first meeting of that year; the 2006 fall meeting will be included in the report to the 218th General Assembly (2008). The following provides the highlights of that meeting.

a. Winter 2006 Meeting

Jay Rock, Kathy Reeves, and Ashley Seaman led the committee in discussion of the new Ecumenical and Interfaith Network. The mission of the Ecumenical and Interfaith Network is to become a catalyst within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) for healthy and growing interfaith and ecumenical relationships at the local and regional levels. Some of the ways planned to achieve the goal of the network are: Sharing information and ideas; connecting local, regional, national, and global events and activities; lifting up effective examples at every level; stimulating new ideas and projects; enlisting new participants; and maintaining a website (www.eif-pcusa.org). The leadership team consisted of: David Alger, Sherri Hausser, Paul Masquelier Jr., Ashley Seaman, Landon Whitsett, and H. S. Wilson.

The theme for the Theological Reflection for the meeting was, “New Opportunities and Challenges to the Ecumenical Movement.” The reflection was presented by a panel consisting of: Rev. Dr. Angelique Walker-Smith, Executive Director of Churches Federation of Greater Indianapolis; Dr. Amos Yong, Associate Research Professor of Systematic Theology at the Regent University School of Divinity; and Sister Joan McGuire, Director of the Office of Ecumenical and Inter-Religious Affairs at the Archdiocese of Chicago. Each presenter was asked to reflect on the new opportunities and challenges of the Ecumenical movement within their denominations. Rev. Dr. Walker-Smith, spoke from the historic African American experience. Dr. Amos Yong spoke from the Pentecostal perspective. Sister Joan McGuire, spoke from the Roman Catholic perspective.

The committee held a Focus Group in plenary on Churches Uniting in Christ Mutual Recognition and Mutual Reconciliation of Ministries. The staff is conducting several of these Focus Groups in different areas of the country. The purpose of the focus groups is to gather reactions to the proposed document. The GACER appointed a sub-committee to work on drafting a response to the CUIC “Mutual Recognition and Reconciliation of Ministry” proposal.

b. Dialogues and Conversations

(1) Korean Presbyterian Church in America: The relationship with the Korean Presbyterian Church in America (KPCA) is strained due in large part to the decision of the KPCA Western Presbytery decision to receive a pastor who had renounced jurisdiction of the PC(USA) and dissident members of a PC(USA) congregation in Los Angeles. The outgoing general secretary of the KPCA and new general secretary of KPCA met with staff of the PC(USA) and the National Korean Presbyterian Council in November to address these concerns and the future of the joint committee. Plans for a future meeting are currently on hold until concerns raised in the November meeting are addressed.

(2) Moravian/Reformed: The Moravian/Reformed dialogue met December 9–10 in Bethlehem, Pennsylvania. Of particular attention is the finalization of plans for regional conversations with middle governing bodies to discuss the practice of episcopate/oversight in the four denominations (Moravian, Christian Church/Disciples of Christ, PC(USA), RCA and UCC).

(3) Reformed/U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops: The fifth meeting of the seventh round of Catholic (USCCB)/Reformed dialogue met on October 24 – 26, 2005 in Pasadena, California at Fuller Seminary. Particular attention was given to questions of sacramentality and baptism. It is anticipated that the dialogue will move to consider questions related to the Eucharist at its upcoming meeting.

c. Other GACER Related Activities, Reports, and Actions

The Stated Clerk, Clifton Kirkpatrick, reported on his recent trip to the Vatican with a delegation of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches. They had conversations on ways to move towards a greater unity with the Roman Catholic Church. As part of the trip, he also visited with the Waldensian Evangelical Church in Italy.

The GACER elected its new leadership: Ed Chan, moderator; David Jensen, vice-moderator; Kristine Thompson, chair of Christian Unity and Relations; and Lemuel Garcia-Arroyo, chair of Ministries and Formation.

The committee approved a recommendation to the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly for a recommended change to the Standing Rules of the General Assembly that would allow for the General Assembly to invite representatives of other faiths or religious traditions to participate in the General Assembly as interfaith representatives.

A work group was appointed to prepare recommendations for the General Assembly Council Mission Work Plan, concerning ecumenical opportunities for implementing its objectives. They will bring a report to the next GACER meeting.

The GACER received a report from the Study Group of Christian Churches Together. The executive committee of GACER was instructed to prepare final recommendations to the 217th General Assembly (2006).

The GACER approved an ecumenical conversation with the Seventh-day Adventist Church and authorized the Executive Committee of the GACER to approve the PC(USA) participants in the conversation.

The General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations (GACER) continues to be faithful to its responsibilities of planning and coordinating the involvement of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in ecumenical relations and work; and also to its call to search for diverse patterns of the visible unity of Christ's Church. "It is essential that the PC(USA) maintain and develop our ecumenical relationships, even as we struggle with shrinking budgets."

B. World Council of Churches Annual Report (2004)

The General Secretary's Introduction

The year 2004 proved to be rich in initiative and hope for the World Council of Churches (WCC) and for the wider ecumenical movement. The WCC was able to provide a unique space for the articulation of a common voice and for concerted action of churches in a world characterized by conflict and polarization.

The WCC annual review 2004 offers a glimpse into the wealth of activity carried out by the council together with its member churches and ecumenical partners around the globe. Whether in theological study, mobilization for justice and peace, dialogue with other faiths, humanitarian service, or education and formation, the WCC provided innovative leadership and a global institutional form to the community of churches worldwide. As the largest global organization of churches, the WCC remains a unique and privileged instrument of the ecumenical movement.

This was also my first year as WCC general secretary and I am grateful to our churches, ecumenical partners, and agencies for their generous support and encouragement, which have sustained me and carried the council during this period. In my first months of service, I gave some priority to meeting with and listening to our membership and wider constituency in my visits to several regions of the world. Wherever I went, I witnessed the profound changes affecting the world, and I felt the anxiety and concern of our churches and their societies. Fear, poverty, and illness continue to enslave many millions.

But in all places I also experienced an authentic sense of Christian hope rooted in a profound spirituality and faith in Jesus Christ. This hope emerges joyfully in the continuity of things of the spirit with action for justice and peace. I am convinced that this spiritual yearning of people is something the ecumenical movement needs to rediscover as a source of vitality, a "compass" for our actions and a foundation for renewal.

In 2005 the WCC enters the final year before its ninth assembly in Porto Alegre, Brazil, which takes as its theme "God, in your grace, transform the world." We anticipate that this assembly will be a unique moment of fellowship, prayer, and hope for thousands of Christians from around the world. The year of preparation is certain to be significant for the council, as a rapidly changing world context and new realities require that we discern and adapt our strategies and programmatic focus. The effective and united voice and witness of the churches has rarely been so necessary.

The World Council of Churches is the world's most inclusive ecumenical organization, and aims to promote Christian unity in faith, witness, and service. The WCC defines itself as a fellowship of churches that confess the Lord Jesus Christ as God and Savior according to the Scriptures and seek to fulfill together their common calling to the glory of the one God, Father, Son, and Holy Spirit.

Today, the WCC brings together 347 churches, denominations and church fellowships in more than 100 countries throughout the world, representing more than 550 million Christians and including churches from the diverse traditions of the Protestant Reform, most of the world's Orthodox and Oriental Orthodox churches, as well as many United and Uniting churches.

The modern ecumenical movement began in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries, when Christians began to pray and work together across denominational boundaries. By the 1920s, several pioneering movements had been formed to advance the cause of church unity worldwide. In 1937, church leaders from Protestant and Orthodox traditions agreed to establish a World Council of Churches, and in 1948 representatives of 147 churches gathered in Amsterdam to constitute the WCC. Since that time, a growing number of churches on every continent have joined this search for Christian unity.

Eight WCC assemblies have met since Amsterdam (1948): Evanston (1954), New Delhi (1961), Uppsala (1968), Nairobi (1975), Vancouver (1983), Canberra (1991), and Harare (1998). The ninth assembly will be held in Porto Alegre, Brazil, in 2006.

Each assembly elects a central committee (158 members), which meets every twelve to eighteen months, and an executive committee (25 members), which meets twice a year to oversee the policies and programs of the council.

In 2004, the Reverend Dr Samuel Kobia (from Kenya) succeeded the Reverend Dr Konrad Raiser (from Germany) as the general secretary and heads the 170 staff based at the WCC headquarters in Geneva. The WCC maintains offices in the U.S.A., the Middle East, Eastern Europe, and the Pacific and works with a network of program staff and consultants in all regions.

New WCC General Secretary

The WCC welcomed a new general secretary, the Reverend Dr Samuel Kobia from the Methodist Church in Kenya, who took up office in January 2004. In an interview published after his first 100 days in the position, Kobia emphasized that, as a movement and as an institution, he “would like to see the WCC offer moral guidance on the crucial issues facing the world. I am convinced that the questions confronting the world today are of a fundamentally spiritual nature ... I would like the WCC to be both a bridge-builder and a bridge itself, connecting humanity and allowing people to relate to each other again.”

India: Christian Presence at the World Social Forum

Affirming the spirituality of life and human dignity was the WCC’s central theological message at the World Social Forum in Mumbai, India, in January. The theme underlay the five seminars the WCC ran jointly with the World YWCA, the Lutheran World Federation (LWF), Church World Service, and other ecumenical organizations. A strong interfaith dimension was part of the approach of the ecumenical delegation, the largest Christian participation since the Social Forum started in 2000.

USA: “The Power and Promise of Peace”

“The Power and Promise of Peace” was the compelling theme for the 2004 annual focus of the WCC’s “Decade to Overcome Violence (DOV): Churches Seeking Reconciliation and Peace (2001–10),” this time on the U.S.A. It was also the theme of the 2004 annual meeting of the United States Conference of the WCC, held 5–6 October in Atlanta, Georgia. Among key personalities involved in the event were former U.S. ambassador to the UN, the Reverend Andrew Young, King Center president and CEO, Martin Luther King III, and the WCC president from North America, Dr Bernice Powell Jackson.

Churches and the Rwanda Genocide: The Kigali Covenant

The need for churches to confess their collective failure in addressing the Rwandan genocide when it erupted ten years ago was part of the message that the WCC general secretary brought to Rwanda during his first visit to the country from 16–18 April 2004. A central part of the program was devoted to an international ecumenical workshop on “Lasting Peace in Africa” co-convened by the WCC and the All Africa Conference of Churches, and attended by church and ecumenical leaders from some twenty African countries. The workshop’s conclusions were summarized in a document—the “Kigali Covenant”—which proclaimed “never again should such a degree of violence and crime against humanity be allowed to occur in any of our countries ... the leadership of churches and governments [should] feed the minds and souls of their people with love, peace and reconciliatory messages so that painful experiences in human memory are not exploited.”

Orthodox Church Relations: Meeting with Ecumenical Patriarch

“You are at home here,” were the words used by Orthodox Patriarch Bartholomew I to welcome the WCC general secretary during his first visit to the Ecumenical Patriarchate in Istanbul, Turkey, in May 2004. In his welcome, the Ecumenical Patriarch said that, as one of the founding members of the WCC in 1948, the Ecumenical Patriarchate “has always collaborated fully” and “will continue to work within the WCC towards the unity of the church.” The Ecumenical Patriarchate has given strong support to the work of the Special Commission on Orthodox Participation in the WCC since 1998. Kobia highlighted “the pioneering role of the Ecumenical Patriarchate in the areas of ecology and interreligious relations.”

Kobia Meets with UN Secretary-General

Churches’ concern over the situation in Iraq and Israel/Palestine, the role of religion in conflict, and working relations between the WCC and the United Nations Organization were the focus of the first meeting between the UN secretary-general, Kofi Annan, and the WCC general secretary, Samuel Kobia, on 19 May. Annan welcomed the initiative to invite the council’s member churches to mark the International Day of Peace with prayer services.

Hopes for Peace in Sudan

“Peace is coming” was the hopeful refrain echoed by the international ecumenical women’s delegation to Sudan, which was co-organized by the WCC and the All Africa Conference of Churches (AACC), 29 June–9 July. Earlier in the year, the WCC general secretary welcomed the peace agreement between the warring parties in the Sudanese civil war as “an important step towards national reconciliation and healing” and “a turning point for the people of Sudan.” The WCC has been at the forefront of church efforts for peace in the country for decades.

Faith and Order Commission Meets in Malaysia

The world’s most representative theological forum for Christian unity—the World Council of Churches’ Commission on Faith and Order—met in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, from 28 July to 6 August 2004, under the theme “Receive one another, as Christ has received you, for the glory of God” (Rom. 15:7). The commission’s first meeting in the twenty-first century, it was also the first time it gathered in a Muslim-majority country. In his address to the meeting, the prime minister of Malaysia, H. E. Dato’ Seri Abdullah bin Haji Ahmad Badawi, stated that the large Christian gathering gave him “great hope that, together, we can fight the perception that religions are at war, and that civilizations are colliding.”

Churches Continue the Fight Against HIV/AIDS

The WCC, as part of the Ecumenical Advocacy Alliance, joined other faith-based groups at the 15th international AIDS conference in Bangkok, Thailand, in July to highlight the major role religious communities play in responding to the physical, emotional, and spiritual needs of those living with HIV and AIDS. Participants also debated the challenges involved in combating stigma and preventing the spread of the virus.

WCC Executive Experiences Asian Vitality

The vitality of the churches and of the ecumenical movement in Korea and in the Asia region were at the center of attention during the August WCC executive committee meeting in Seoul. Members of the WCC’s governing body met with South Korean church leaders and President Roh Moo-hyun, who expressed strong appreciation of the WCC for its “fundamental assistance” in support of human rights and democratization in his country. The president also invited a future WCC assembly to a reunited Korea.

21 September: International Day of Prayer for Peace

Within the framework of its Decade to Overcome Violence, the WCC called on its member churches to pray for peace on 21 September. The new WCC initiative was linked to the International Day of Peace declared by the UN general assembly. Church leaders from all regions contributed inspiring video messages for the launch. In his message, WCC Moderator Catholicos Aram I of the Armenian Apostolic Church (Cilicia) emphasized that “peace is an essential dimension of our Christian life and witness. Peace is a gift of God given to humanity through the incarnation of our Lord Jesus Christ. Peace is also a God-given vocation that must be fulfilled in obedient response to the call of God.”

World Bank and International Monetary Fund at the Ecumenical Centre

World Bank (WB) President James D. Wolfensohn and International Monetary Fund (IMF) Deputy Managing Director Agustín Carstens joined WCC General Secretary Samuel Kobia and WCC President for Africa Agnes Abuom for a high-level encounter between the three organizations on 22 October 2004 at the Ecumenical Centre in Geneva. The event was the culmination of a two-year process and resulted in a statement on “Common Ground and Differences of View” on poverty eradication worldwide.

Towards the Ninth Assembly: Kobia in Latin America

Samuel Kobia visited five Latin American countries in twenty-one days on his first visit to the region since he became general secretary. The intensive program in Bolivia, Brazil, Argentina, Uruguay, and Chile included meetings with church and ecumenical organizations, as well as with representatives from civil society and government authorities. In Porto Alegre, Brazil, Kobia participated in the planning committee meeting for the WCC ninth assembly, to be held in this city in February 2006.

Church Advocacy at the United Nations

United Nations reform, economic justice, the crisis in Sudan, and the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty were the focus of the annual World Council of Churches' UN Advocacy Week that took place from 14–19 November in New York at the UN and the WCC's UN liaison office.

Latin America

“On the wings of a dove,” a sixteen-day WCC global campaign to overcome violence against women and children, was launched on 25 November 2004. Churches and church-related organizations worldwide addressed violence against women and children by promoting increased public awareness, and attempting to bring justice and healing to those who have suffered or are still suffering from violence. Worship and prayer vigils, discussions, and exhibitions also characterized the campaign.

Ecumenism in the Twenty-First Century

The future of ecumenism in the twenty-first century was the focus of a major conference convened by the WCC from 30 November–3 December near Geneva. The event gathered representatives from a range of churches and agencies to discuss more effective institutional forms for ecumenical work in a changing global context. The consultation's final statement emphasized the urgency of seeking new forms of ecumenism. It also underlined the WCC's role to provide a forum for “exchange and common advocacy against injustice,” to “foster accountability in the quality of relationships among churches and partners,” and to “provide space for the ecumenical movement to formulate a common ecumenical vision for the twenty-first century.”

Ten Years of Ecumenical News

The WCC cosponsored Ecumenical News International celebrated its 10th anniversary in 2004. Congratulating the agency, the WCC general secretary underlined the commitment “to the vision of an independent, professional, ecumenical news service as an indispensable resource for the witness and mutual understanding of the Christian fellowship worldwide.” Further information on www.eni.ch.

Asian Tsunami: Churches Quick to ACT

The WCC member churches were among the first to respond to the devastating tsunami, which affected several Asian countries at the end of 2004. Working through ACT (Action by Churches Together), churches and related agencies pledged more than $40 million in response to the crisis. The WCC staff also visited the affected region and facilitated collaboration among local churches and aid organizations. The ACT is a global alliance of Orthodox and Protestant churches co-founded by WCC to respond to humanitarian disasters.

Background and further information on these highlights and other WCC actions in 2004 are available on our website: www.wcc-coe.org

“A Call for a Transformation of the Ecumenical Movement from the Narrow Confines of Its Institutions”

The WCC brings together Christian churches from all regions and a broad spectrum of confessional families. Nurturing and deepening the fellowship among churches and ecumenical partners is a central task of the WCC through the work of its general secretary and the Office of Church and Ecumenical Relations.

Church and Ecumenical Relations

Throughout 2004, an intensive program of visits to churches was carried out by the general secretary, the Reverend Dr Samuel Kobia, during his first year of service (15 visits to 6 continents), carefully prepared in cooperation with staff responsible for the programmatic content and the communication aspect. The series of visits included Asia, the Pacific, Europe, North America, Africa and an extensive tour of Latin America, in advance of the WCC's ninth assembly in Brazil in 2006.

Work on the recommendations of the Special Commission on Orthodox Participation in the WCC was pursued, focusing primarily on a review of decision-making procedures, the adoption of a consensus model, a strengthening of WCC membership criteria, and the necessary revision to WCC procedural rules. The steering committee of the Special Commission in the WCC met in Minsk, Belarus, in June 2004. Participants affirmed support for changes in the WCC's decision-making and membership rules, and developed theological reflection on issues of ecclesiology.

In early March, in Lebanon, the WCC general secretary and the moderator Catholicos Aram I met with Cardinal Walter Kasper and representatives of the Vatican's Pontifical Council for Promoting Christian Unity. The Joint Working Group between the WCC and the Roman Catholic Church held its last plenary session in May 2004 and concluded the seven-year mandate of the Group by adopting a detailed report and results of joint studies that will be presented at the ninth assembly. In 2006, the Joint Working Group will celebrate the 40th anniversary of its existence.

The WCC co-organized the fifth annual meeting of the Joint Consultative Group between the WCC and Pentecostals in South Africa in September.

A Reinforced Global Role

In September, the annual meeting of the WCC with leaders of regional ecumenical organizations approved the text of a joint letter to the UN secretary-general expressing support for a strengthened UN role in the world. The group also gave particular attention to a reinforced global role for the WCC and closer collaboration with its regional partners. Earlier in the year, in June, the WCC hosted a meeting of the ecumenical officers of member churches, who explored ways of coordinating ecumenical efforts more effectively, and discussed interfaith relations and new trends in the Christian world.

In May 2004, the Global Christian Forum in Asia was the first of a series of four regional consultations that will lead to a Global Christian Forum planned for 2007.

The Joint Consultative Group of the WCC and Pentecostals held its fifth annual meeting in South Africa in September and prepared a report to be submitted to the ninth assembly.

New Member Churches

In its August meeting the executive committee approved the application of new member churches. It endorsed the proposal that the Protestant Church in the Netherlands be accepted as a member church in continuation of the membership of the former Netherlands Reformed Church, Reformed Churches in the Netherlands, and Evangelical Lutheran Church in the Kingdom of the Netherlands, which have now united.

Ecumenism in the 21st Century

The landmark consultation on ecumenism in the 21st century, organized near Geneva, 30 November–3 December 2004, brought together more than 100 participants from WCC member churches, from Catholic and Pentecostal churches as well as from Christian world communions, regional and national ecumenical organizations, international ecumenical institutions, and church-related agencies.

During the three days of dialogue, participants shared their visions of ecumenism and looked at more effective ways to work together in today's rapidly changing ecclesial, economic and political contexts. The consultation concluded with a call for a transformation of the ecumenical movement from the narrow confines of its institutions. In related discussions, WCC sought to strengthen its policy of partnership with specialized organizations of churches, which have traditionally formed a key network of support for ecumenical work, especially in the areas of advocacy and development. Further steps in the process of institutional "reconfiguration" are anticipated during 2005.

A Common Ecumenical Home

Throughout the year, the Ecumenical Centre, the WCC's Geneva headquarters, remained a space of welcome and diverse activity. Almost 3,000 visitors in organized groups originating from more than thirty countries were welcomed to the centre and participated in presentations and discussion with staff of WCC and partner organizations. The centre provides a unique open space of hospitality in international Geneva, and its facilities are regularly used by other organizations and institutions.

Towards the Ninth Assembly 2006

Preparations for the WCC's ninth assembly in Porto Alegre, Brazil, in February 2006 moved into a new phase. An assembly office was opened in Geneva and a coordinator and other staff were appointed. The Assembly Planning Committee met twice, in Italy and in Brazil, to develop the program and to approve key policies. Staff worked with local churches and partners in Porto Alegre to plan for the event, which will gather more than 3,000 Christians from all traditions and all regions under the theme "God, in your grace, transform the world."

Launched in 2001, the WCC's Decade to Overcome Violence (DOV) remains a priority theme for the fellowship and continues to provide a unique framework for churches around the world to address "the spirit, logic and practice" of violence and to develop creative ways of promoting a culture of peace and reconciliation together.

The Power and Promise of Peace

The DOV annual focus for 2004 was on the U.S.A., organized under the theme “The Power and Promise of Peace.” A national DOV committee and the WCC U.S. office coordinated a calendar of church peace events throughout the year, culminating in October at the WCC U.S. Conference annual and justice through a series of workshops and worship services, and participants were moved by the messages of solidarity brought by a group of eight “living letters” from countries in conflict. In 2005, the DOV annual focus is on Asia, taking the theme “Building Communities of Peace for All,” which is also the theme of the seventh assembly of the Christian Conference of Asia.

International Day of Prayer for Peace

In consultation with the United Nations, the WCC invited churches from around the world to mark 21 September 2004 as the first International Day of Prayer for Peace, to coincide with the UN’s existing day of peace. One of the highlights of this global mobilization was a series of messages from fourteen world Christian leaders and peacemakers from all continents. These were made available on the DOV website, along with other resources for prayer and liturgy.

Throughout the year, the DOV coordinating office developed closer links with the UN Decade for a Culture of Peace and Non-violence for the Children of the World. In this context, the WCC’s DOV program took part in the first international exhibition of peace initiatives in Paris. New DOV educational tools and materials were made available on the DOV website and on CD. Further information: www.overcomingviolence.org.

The WCC coordinates and supports the efforts of churches to study the theological and doctrinal issues affecting their unity and division, primarily through its Commission on Faith and Order. The Roman Catholic Church is a full partner with member churches of the WCC in the work of Faith and Order, and representatives of other non-member churches are involved in the meetings and related study processes.

The Faith and Order Plenary Commission

The year proved to be one of change and steady development for Faith and Order. The milestone event was the Faith and Order Plenary Commission meeting in late July in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, under the theme “Receive one another, as Christ has received you, for the glory of God” (Rom. 15:7). The Plenary Commission, which is held every seven years, concluded that “there are still many questions we need to explore, but we became aware of reaching a moment of hope, having identified a framework which might enable churches to move forward in terms of mutual recognition.” A group of younger theologians made a significant impact on the meeting, through both their interventions and a message to the gathering.

Faith and Order focused on several studies advancing the visible unity of the church.

The study on ecclesiology—developed in light of churches’ responses to the ground-breaking WCC process on baptism, Eucharist, and ministry (BEM)—seeks to express what the churches “can now say together about the nature and purpose of the church” and, from that perspective, to clarify the continuing areas of disagreement.

The work on ecclesiology was complemented by a study of ethnic identity, national identity and the search for the unity of the church. This explores the role of churches in situations of tension and conflict—especially where divisions between churches reinforce ethnic and national cleavages—and how Christian unity can further the churches’ witness to reconciliation and justice. The ongoing Faith and Order study on the nature and mission of the church was also upheld as a major ecumenical tool for the twenty-first century.

Week of Prayer for Christian Unity

The Week of Prayer for Christian Unity 2005, prepared early in the year, marked the beginning of a new era of collaboration between the WCC and the Roman Catholic Church. For the first time, the text was not only jointly prepared but also co-published by the WCC and the Pontifical Council for Promoting Christian Unity.

The year 2004 provided ample reasons for promoting ecumenical advocacy and peaceful resolution of conflicts. The Churches’ Commission on International Affairs is the WCC’s instrument for advocacy and Christian witness in the arena of global political life. In late 2003 and 2004, the International Affairs team analyzed and prepared statements and minutes on conflicts in Sudan, Korea, Zimbabwe, Somalia, Israel/Palestine, India/Pakistan, and on the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty.

Emerging Advocacy Priorities

Recognizing the need for a flexible response to new crises, in 2004 the CCIA Commission also identified the need for a more proactive advocacy approach to four regional priorities during the period leading up to the WCC ninth assembly:

1. Peace with justice in Israel/Palestine, including support for the ecumenical accompaniment program and efforts to establish a Jerusalem Ecumenical Centre in the old city;
2. Promotion of peace and reunification in the Korean peninsula;
3. Close cooperation with the Zimbabwe Council of Churches in support of a sustainable resolution of the political crisis there;
4. Special efforts to accompany Cuban churches in the complex transition on the island.

United Nations Liaison

The strengthened WCC UN Liaison Office in New York serves as a link between the UN and the work and constituency of the WCC and aims to monitor and influence UN policy by bringing the voice of the churches to the forefront of international debate. Among the year's priority areas were monitoring of the UN security council in response to conflicts, disarmament and environment, economic justice, impunity, and the rights of indigenous peoples.

The WCC UN office facilitated the first meeting of the new WCC general secretary with his UN counterpart Kofi Annan. A highlight of the year was the WCC Advocacy Week at the UN, which was organized for the second time in New York in November. Some eighty participants from churches and partners came together for a week of discussion and common strategizing. Four public seminars were held in the UN building on the Millennium Development Goals, nuclear proliferation, UN reform, and the situation in Sudan.

Nuclear Non-Proliferation

The Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty statement was followed-up by a WCC delegation to five foreign ministries of non-nuclear members of NATO, and to the NATO headquarters, focusing on the contradictions between existing state undertakings in the NPT and the language used in the Strategic Doctrine of NATO in which nuclear weapons maintain an essential role. The delegation was well received and in each capital there was strong interest in further dialogue with churches.

Spirituality and Politics

In response to the increasing interaction between religion and politics, a seminar was organized in December on "Spiritual Accompaniment on Political Processes." One conclusion was the need for a clearer and more proactive political role for the churches, in order to strengthen the value of politics by refocusing on issues of principle.

The WCC is increasingly expected to provide analysis, resources, and guidance on interreligious dialogue and cooperation. The WCC Interreligious Relations and Dialogue staff work with a broad network of other faith communities, institutions, and academics to maintain and strengthen interfaith tolerance and mutual understanding, despite an international context that has reinforced prejudice and interreligious tension.

Religious Plurality and Christian Self-Understanding

After a two-year study process involving diverse international networks and WCC staff teams, a study document on a theological approach to Religious Plurality and Christian Self-Understanding was produced and will be presented at the WCC ninth assembly. The theme of hospitality was chosen as the leitmotif of the document, indicating a welcoming attitude to others and echoing the biblical experience of Hebrews 13:2: "Do not neglect to show hospitality to strangers, for by doing that some have entertained angels without knowing it."

Christians and Muslims in the U.S.A.

The WCC helped initiate discussions between diverse Muslim and Christian groups from the U.S.A. and the Middle East on the impact of US-Arab relations on Christian-Muslim mutual perceptions and the so-called clash of civilizations. In 2003 and 2004, a series of conferences was held in Europe and the Middle East. Visits of Middle Eastern Christians and Muslims to the U.S.A. were prepared for 2005 and a set of encounters with Christians of various persuasions was planned.

Teaching for Tolerance

The WCC continued to facilitate contacts and exchange between Christian institutions and centers specializing in the study of Islam and Christian-Muslim relations. A number of meetings have been held over the years with a variety of themes. In 2004, and for the third time since 1995, the WCC cosponsored with the University of Balamand in Lebanon an international consultation on developing teaching programs in interreligious and intercultural studies.

African Religious and Spiritual Life

A major multifaith consultation on the contribution of Africa to religious and spiritual life was jointly prepared by the WCC and the Pontifical Council for Interreligious Dialogue and held in September in Ethiopia.

Imagining the Future

A planning group involving partners from other religions began preparations for a major WCC interreligious conference scheduled for June 2005. Under the theme "A critical moment in interreligious relations and dialogue: thinking together, assessing the present and imagining the future," this global event is expected to signal renewed ecumenical commitment to interreligious dialogue.

Mission and evangelism is one of the central historical streams of the work of the WCC. Mission in an ecumenical perspective is understood as the promotion of common witness and mutual support of churches in their evangelistic and healing role in the world. The WCC mission staff work with churches and mission agencies worldwide to develop collaboration and to deepen reflection on the theology and methods of holistic mission.

Promoting the Ministry of Reconciliation

The theme of reconciliation undergirded the main activities of the program on mission and evangelism in preparation for the conference on world mission and evangelism in Athens in May 2005, under the theme "Come, Holy Spirit, Heal and Reconcile! Called in Christ to Be Reconciling and Healing Communities." Among the most genuinely global mission gatherings, the conference will involve more than 500 participants from virtually all Christian traditions. During 2004, priority was given to the theological, spiritual, and material preparations for this major event.

Several theological and spiritual documents were published in the International Review of Mission and in book form. Two statements were prepared on new insights in theology and mission: one on mission from the perspective of the message of reconciliation, the other on the intrinsic relationship between the healing mandate of the church and its missionary calling.

Mission with the Poor

The Urban and Rural Mission office convened an intercontinental consultation in Ghana in June 2004 under the theme "mission from the perspective of people in struggle." Participants emphasized the need for an understanding and practice of mission with the poor, involving the church and transforming its mission to go beyond the church into diverse religious and social contexts.

Other key moments of reflection during the year included the Zambia conference on mission and development, the annual school for evangelism held in Fiji, and an African-Asian mission consultation in India on healing, reconciliation, and power.

Churches as Healing Communities: HIV/AIDS

To foster churches' reflection and action on their healing ministries, in particular in relation to the HIV/AIDS pandemic, a series of consultations was organized in all regions. Networking and advocacy work was developed in relation to HIV/AIDS in close cooperation with the Ecumenical Advocacy Alliance, co-founded by the WCC, such as support for the code of good practice for HIV/AIDS and an active contribution at the 15th international AIDS conference in Bangkok where the contribution of faith-based organizations was accorded unprecedented recognition.

The WCC works with churches and ecumenical networks to uphold alternative visions of the unity of humankind, a vision characterized by justice, peace and solidarity.

Dialogue with International Financial Institutions

Dialogue with the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund culminated in October with a historic high-level encounter between the leadership of the WCC and the two financial institutions. Their common commitment to overcome poverty was affirmed, despite differing perspectives: priority is given to economic growth by the Bretton Woods institutions, while the WCC's priority is ethical approaches to justice, human rights, and equality. The three organizations agreed to continue joint work on case studies to assess the impact on people's lives of World Bank and IMF programs.

The WCC's AGAPE process (Alternatives to Globalization Addressing People and Earth) culminated with a meeting to harvest the findings of a regional process of consultation, to be presented at the WCC's ninth assembly. The WCC's role in promoting ecumenical coordination at the World Social Forum developed significantly in India and in preparations for Porto Alegre in 2005.

Practical Justice

Russia's signing of the Kyoto Protocol was welcomed by the WCC network on climate change, which significantly contributed to this achievement. The network began to broaden its cooperation with other ecumenical partners, linking its work on climate change with a commitment to ensure clean water for all.

Members of churches and organizations working on racial justice reflected on the theme "Living out the challenges of transformative justice." They developed their responses to exclusive migration policies and increasing xenophobia and racist violence in some countries. A resource guide on Transformative Justice: Being Church and Overcoming Racism was published and widely distributed.

The Indigenous People's program emphasized loss of land and resources and the safeguarding of indigenous languages. Relocating the program to Bolivia allowed greater emphasis on the daily experience of indigenous people and churches in their local context.

On the Wings of a Dove

A global church campaign on violence against women was launched by the WCC on 25 November and lasted until 10 December. Entitled "On the wings of a dove," the campaign focused on efforts made to overcome violence against women and children. Brochures, posters and a website were used to raise awareness of the problem in churches and among the broader public.

Since its inception, the WCC has considered service to those in need as central to the life of the ecumenical movement. The WCC strengthens collaboration in the area of practical solidarity, capacity-building, and development cooperation worldwide, and coordinates ecumenical work with refugees and migrants. During 2004, staff of the Diakonia and Solidarity team coordinated some fifty-four ecumenical roundtable programs focusing on poverty alleviation and social welfare, supported a range of church projects and visits, and conducted training workshops in several regions.

Considerable progress was made in establishing church-based networks working on children's issues in Asia. These networks enable churches to be more aware of the needs of children in their countries, to develop more effective ways of responding to those needs and to learn from—and encourage—one another. An international conference of Orthodox Church social and humanitarian organizations was held in Finland in May, leading to plans for a global Orthodox network on diakonia.

Commission of the Churches on Diakonia and Development

The new WCC Commission of the Churches on Diakonia and Development met in May to consider issues such as the role of religion in development, diakonia and justice, and the rights-based approach to development. The 2005 meeting of the commission will follow-up on these issues, consider a code of conduct for churches and related organizations working in diakonia and development, and discuss interfaith perspectives on development and service.

A study on the relationship between diakonia and justice was carried out in conjunction with the Justice, Peace and Creation team. Contributions were received from approximately 100 partners working in the regions. The results will be published in 2005.

Uprooted People

Work with uprooted people continues to be a high priority, particularly as conditions affecting refugees, migrants, and internally displaced people worsen in most regions of the world. Ecumenical working groups met in most regions, and the annual meeting of the Global Network on Uprooted People took place in September with a particular focus on gender-based violence and HIV/AIDS among refugees and migrants.

Cooperation increased with ACT International, the WCC-related emergency coordination office. At the very end of the year, the destruction caused by the tsunami disaster in Asia led to a massive outpouring of assistance from the international community. The ACT mobilized significant support for church partners in the region. Although rarely highlighted in international media, the support of Asian churches and related organizations in the affected areas was immediate and effective.

The purpose of ecumenical formation in the WCC is to develop anew an ecumenical consciousness in the churches and ecumenical movement, and to enable churches and ecumenical organizations to be effective carriers of the ecumenical vision.

Understanding the Ecumenical Movement

There is increasing recognition of the need for ecumenical formation within the leadership and staff of churches, councils and agencies in the ecumenical movement. In response, two initiatives were taken in 2004. A CD-ROM was produced containing advice, methodologies, presentations and resources to assist ecumenical formation in various contexts. In December, an international ecumenical formation seminar brought together staff from 14 churches and agencies for an intensive program designed to help participants understand the ecumenical movement and to strengthen their active participation.

In some places, ecumenism is regarded with suspicion, but church workers are keen to know more. A workshop was held in November at the International Baptist Theological Seminary in Prague on the theme "Education for unity and unity in education." Church, religious and theological educators came from Orthodox and Protestant churches in Central and Eastern Europe. Although there were significant differences between the countries represented, participants identified common challenges to the role and content of religious education in state education and the need to develop theological education.

Working in the Regions

The strategy of appointing WCC regional consultants for the Asia/Pacific, Central and Eastern Europe, and Latin America/Caribbean regions is proving to be effective for the Ecumenical Theological Education program, which requires contextual approaches. Examples include the development of an HIV/AIDS-responsive theological curriculum for Africa, which is now used as a model for other regions. Work continues to help women gain access to theological education and to encourage churches to engage them.

Future Leaders and Advocates of Ecumenism

The experience of WCC scholars studying in another country has continued to produce leaders and advocates for the ecumenical movement. In 2004, seventy-six scholarships were awarded for individuals and twelve for group training. Regional consultations for Africa and the Pacific were held to assist WCC national correspondents and other stakeholders to understand the program and how it operates, and to ensure that priorities and procedures are responsive to regional needs. There continues to be a low level of funding for scholarships for theological studies. An external evaluation of the WCC scholarships program will take place in 2005.

The WCC's Ecumenical Institute at Bossey, near Geneva, contributes to the formation of ecumenical leadership, both lay and ordained. Founded in 1946, and affiliated with the University of Geneva, Bossey offers a unique ecumenical learning experience to the many students from diverse Christian traditions and origins who attend the Institute's Graduate School. Other institutes and universities continue to seek collaboration with Bossey, confirming that ecumenical commitment and enthusiasm are still alive and at work in many parts of the world.

Expanding Ecumenical Horizons

During 2004, two new elements were integrated into academic programs that substantially changed the dynamics of the student community and the whole ethos and methodology of teaching. The first was the decision to admit in the annual intake of forty places students from non-WCC member churches or from churches and religious communities which are not traditionally part of the ecumenical movement. Bossey is thus endeavouring to enlarge the scope of its ecumenical encounter and stimulate positive engagement with these churches.

Interfaith Learning

The second significant change was the decision to include an interfaith dimension in the curriculum of Bossey. Students argued that cohabitation with people of other faiths has become a reality in many parts of the world, and there is a need to study the nature of Christian identity and witness in these contexts. Scholars from other faith communities have been invited to lecture and interact with the students.

Forming Future Ecumenical Leaders

Bossey continues to attract more and more applications from potential students, with 2–4 applicants for every study place. Bossey's research confirms that many of the institute's alumni are among the top leaders of WCC member churches, governing bodies, and the wider ecumenical movement.

The 55th session of the Graduate School of Ecumenical Studies was held on the theme "The responsibility of religion for peace-making in contexts of increasing violence" and ended in February. The 56th session commenced in October with the theme "For thine is the kingdom and the power and the glory: God's power and human accountability." Alongside the traditional annual graduate program, the Master of Ecumenical Studies and the Ph.D. program in Ecumenical Studies attracted considerable interest.

Ecumenical movement contained in its library and archives is one of the most valuable of the WCC's assets. Beginning in 2003, the WCC received a special grant from the private Swiss bank Pictet et Cie to establish an Ecumenical Research Centre. The purpose of the new centre is to improve the accessibility of WCC library and archive resources to researchers and students as a unique global centre of ecumenical learning and ideas. The completion of this major project will be marked by a series of interfaith events in Geneva in late 2005.

Preserving Ecumenical Memory

Considerable progress was made on the status, cataloging, and recording of the collections of church and ecumenical reviews and periodicals, which are key resources for study and research on ecumenical issues. Significant work was also accomplished in the critical area of the historical archives of the Council by creating new indexes for the entire collection of photographs and paper archives. Efforts were made to increase online availability, and a new computer-based management and archive system was introduced.

The Ecumenical Accompaniment Program in Palestine and Israel (EAPPI) is currently the most comprehensive ecumenical response to any conflict situation. The EAPPI accompanies Palestinians and Israelis in nonviolent action and advocacy to end illegal occupation and support a just and sustainable peace in the region. Since the start of the program, 168 people from more than 30 churches in 12 countries—including for the first time South Africa—have served as "ecumenical accompaniers" with local churches, Palestinian and Israeli NGOs, and local Palestinian communities in various capacities.

Concern for Justice and Peace in the Holy Land

The WCC has a long history of concern for justice and peace in the Holy Land—the biblical land where Jesus Christ walked. In 2001 the worsening political and social situation in Israel and the occupied Palestinian Territories challenged churches to match their strongly worded statements with action. Responding to an appeal by the heads of churches and Christian communities in Jerusalem for presence and solidarity—an appeal supported by other churches and ecumenical agencies—the WCC executive committee recommended in September 2001 the development of an accompaniment program.

In 2004, among multiple initiatives throughout the occupied territories, EAPPI monitors in Jayyous provided valuable accounts of the impact of the Israeli security barrier on local populations. EAPPI reports were used in the Palestinian submission to the International Court of Justice in The Hague, which found the construction of the wall by Israel to be illegal. Accompaniers also assisted the International Committee of the Red Cross with information in a case it has brought against the Israeli military due to its actions in the Jayyous area. EAPPI accompaniers from South Africa and Germany also made a series of presentations about their respective experiences of forced division and separation, and raised the local profile of the program.

Raising Awareness

Accompaniers were encouraged to write and share their experiences, with stories and photos posted daily at www.eappi.org. Upon return to their home country they engaged in further awareness-raising and advocacy through presentations in their parishes and congregations, interviews and articles in the media, and also in meetings with politicians and institutions, in order to influence public opinion about the consequences of occupation.

The EAPPI was coordinated and managed locally at the office in Jerusalem, and internationally in Geneva, by a team of four full-time and two part-time program staff. National coordinators are based in countries sending companions. International meetings with EAPPI staff and national coordinators were organized in Jerusalem in March and October.

A local reference group was appointed in the spring, chaired by Lutheran Bishop Munib Younan and involving WCC member churches and EAPPI local key partners. The group serves in an advisory capacity, in particular in identifying placements and potential activities in Israel and Palestine.

The HIV/AIDS epidemic remains one of the greatest health challenges of our time. AIDS is now by far the leading cause of death in sub-Saharan Africa, and to date over 15 million Africans have died from AIDS. The Ecumenical HIV/AIDS Initiative in Africa (EHAIA) was set up in 2002 as a joint undertaking of African churches, Northern churches and agencies and the WCC, in response to the crisis.

Towards AIDS-Competent Churches

The EHAIA enables churches in Africa to gain access to the information, training, networks and funding they need to help deal with HIV/AIDS in their communities.

The initiative works to help churches in Africa become “AIDS-competent churches” whose teaching and practice indicate clearly that discrimination against people living with HIV/AIDS is against the will of God, and to participate actively in collaborative efforts towards HIV/AIDS prevention.

Since the formation of the EHAIA, four regional offices run by coordinators and guided by regional reference groups have been established (East, West, South and Central Africa). A theological consultant has also consolidated work with theological training institutions and staff. The focus has been on training church leadership and workers, and strengthening policy and program development. More than ten thousand church-related resource persons from all over Africa were directly trained by the EHAIA during this period.

Summit of African Church Leaders

A major EHAIA highlight in 2004 was the summit meeting on HIV/AIDS of African heads of churches and the New Partnership for Africa’s Development (NEPAD), in Nairobi, Kenya, in early June. The meeting reaffirmed the pledge of African church leaders to contribute actively to overcoming AIDS, and decided to dedicate the last Sunday of November each year to fasting and prayer for the rapid end of HIV/AIDS and related stigma. Envisioning their communities as centers of mutual spiritual and material support, and of knowledge, advocacy and resources, leaders committed themselves to promoting the active support of church institutions for health treatment and ensuring access to adequate health facilities.

An Important Catalyst for Change

A mid-term assessment indicated that the EHAIA program “has been an important catalyst for an evolution in the way churches think about and respond to HIV/AIDS. Increasingly, churches are developing the capacity to understand the magnitude of the epidemic.” The report outlined how church communities increasingly seek to prevent HIV transmission and to care for those suffering from AIDS-related illness. Receiving the assessment, the International Reference Group agreed unanimously that EHAIA is “on the right track” and should continue with its important mission.

C. Report of the National Council of Churches General Assembly, November 2004

1. Delegation Report: National Council of Churches of Christ (USA) General Assembly—November 9–11, 2004; St. Louis, Missouri

Just a week after the country had been divided into red and blue by national elections, delegates to the National Council of Churches of Christ (USA) were reminded of the beauty and importance of many colored threads woven together. Under the theme, “Weave Anew: Unity, Peace and Justice, Hope,” the NCCCUSA General Assembly met in St. Louis, Missouri, November 9–11, 2004, amid weavers of cloth, basket, and song: visible metaphors of our vibrant, interconnected church. Throughout the gathering, participants were even encouraged to weave bookmarks with yarn and cardboard looms provided at their tables—a tangible way to stay focused on God’s interwoven world!

During the three-day assembly, delegates attended to many standard business items, including reports from the president and general secretary, the executive board, Church World Service, and the commissions of the NCCCUSA. The council reported solid financial standings for the third year in a row. Even in the everyday matters of the council, the energy and enthusiasm of the participants reflected a rich tapestry of churches committed to seeking God's guidance for the U.S. Christian church.

But parts of the church's tapestry remain frayed, even as the assembly sought new ways to weave unity. There was ongoing concern among delegates about the schisms between Christian groups in the United States, particularly following the election. In one action, the assembly requested a process to "engage the spectrum of Christian churches in our communities in dialogues about Christian values." Said the action, "We believe that what Christians hold in common outweighs their differences, and that all Christians have something to learn from those Christians with whom they disagree, and...we deplore the pitting of Christians against each other."

"We do not view the Christian community in our country as being divided into red and blue," read an open letter accompanying the action. "Our view is that we are a mosaic of God's grace and presence. We need to give up caricatures of one another's positions and avoid treating others as though they were less than faithful."

Unraveled and careworn issues of justice and peace also took center stage at the meetings. For the first time, the General Assembly adopted a comprehensive statement on children; previous statements related to children have been issue-specific, such as public schools or health care. The assembly also approved an executive board action urging intervention to stop violence in Sudan, endorsed a letter sent by NCCC General Secretary Bob Edgar to President Bush in support of a two-state solution to the Israeli/Palestinian conflict, and marked the death of Yasir Arafat with prayers for the people of the Middle East.

Yet throughout the meetings, hope spun anew. The assembly sent letters of greeting and prayer to chaplains serving in the U.S. Armed Forces, and to four historic African American Baptist Conventions holding their first joint board meeting since 1895. Staff and delegates honored recipients of several service awards. "Excellence Awards" were given to civil rights pioneer Dr. Dorothy Height, who received the J. Irwin Miller Award; "Music with a Mission" composer and performer Tim Janis, who received the Hope Award for his support of individuals and institutions battling AIDS; the Reverend Dr. Michael Kinnamon, professor at Eden Theological Seminary, who received the Unity Award; and Baldemar Velasquez of the Farm Labor Organizing Committee, and William Bryan of the Mt. Olive Pickle Company, who both received the Peace and Justice Award after reaching a labor agreement ending a five-and-a-half year consumer boycott on Mt. Olive.

The assembly also gave "Blessed are the Peacemaker" Awards in observation of the World Council of Churches Decade to Overcome Violence, which focused on the United States in 2004. Honorees included Joan Chapin, director of the Women's Division of the United Methodist Church from 1992–2000, for her persistent witness against militarism and hate; the United Methodist Women's Florida Conference for its work to document hate crimes in eight states; the St. Louis Interfaith Partnership for its work to build respect and understanding among people of all faiths: Faith Beyond Walls, which since it was founded in 2001 by a Christian, a Muslim, and a Jew has organized more than 1,000 volunteers to build playgrounds, plant gardens, and deliver meals to the elderly and sick; Lydia's House, a place of healing and hope for women and children affected by domestic violence; and Eden Theological Seminary in St. Louis for their commitment to peace, renewal of the Church, strengthening mission, and the ecumenical movement.

New threads also emerged at the young adult pre-conference, in which young ecumenists gathered and interacted with each other and the council, and added their own vibrant colors to the assembly.

Participants were reminded of their interconnectedness with the global church as they received greetings and presentations from a number of guests, including Orvin Kimbrough from the Interfaith Partnership of Metropolitan St. Louis; Bishop Mvume Dandala, general secretary of the All-Africa Conference of Churches; the Reverend Sheila Mackey, the moderator of the United Reformed Church in the UK; and Aruna Gnanadason, coordinator of the WCC Justice, Peace and Creation Team.

Finally, the joys, prayers, and hopes of all were interlaced in rich worship and music throughout the gathering. Musicians Jim and Jean Strathdee led the gathering in song and prayer, knitting together familiar tunes with music from around the world.

The assembly also enjoyed spirit-filled worship at Christ Church Cathedral, which included the music of the African American St. Louis District CME Mass Choir. Participants prayed together for the interweaving of God's presence in their midst, saying, "Where there is falseness, smother it by your truth; where there is any coldness, kindle the flame of your love; where there is joy and hope, free us to share it together; and make us one, as you are one." Bishop Thomas L. Hoyt Jr., president of the NCCC, preached boldness in pursuit of peace and justice in light of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

At the closing banquet, a "Peace Dinner," delegates and guests were treated to the musical gifts of singers Peter Yarrow (of Peter, Paul and Mary) and the Syrian group Kulna Sawa, which means "All of Us Together." Both presentations inspired dancing and a spirit of joy among those gathered.

2. Delegation Report: National Council of Churches of Christ (USA) General Assembly—November 8–10, 2004; Baltimore, Maryland

A delegation from the PC(USA) attended the General Assembly of the National Council of Churches of Christ and Church World Service in Baltimore in November. The theme of the assembly was “A witness that the world might believe” from Jesus’ prayer in John that all his followers would be one. With representatives from thirty-two denominations (or “member communions” in NCCC lingo) including Coptic Orthodox, Mar Thoma Syrian Orthodox, Quakers, among the list, the unity of the church could be sensed in the air. Forty-five million Christians were represented by this assembly. Baltimore’s Cardinal Keeler talked about his participation in the election of Pope Benedict and the new Pope ecumenical heart.

Worshiping together as an assembly was a highlight. Among others, we were led by the delegation of the Mar Toma Syrian Church of India, and we heard the profound preaching of The Reverend Ann Lightner Fuller. The installation service of the incoming president Michael Livingston was a celebration with Dr. Blount preaching and the Douglas Memorial Community Choir singing their praises to God.

Some powerful statements were made at the assembly. On unity and the Bible, outgoing President Bishop Hoyt said, “We all share the same library, but we focus on different parts of it.” General Secretary Bob Edgar said about poverty, “We are the leaders that we’ve been waiting for.” Assembly statements were made on Solidarity with Christians in Egypt, on putting an end to torture, on corporations using asbestos in products, on supporting Arab Christians and praying for peace between the Israelis and Palestinians both Muslim and Christian, on the Voting Rights Act, and on Civil and Religious Liberties post 9/11.

We heard reports of the work of NCCC. The assembly took an action to accept the draft of Fearfully and Wonderfully Made: A Policy on Human Biotechnologies. This opens up the field for discussion of ethics where there are now no ethics in place, and it also hopes to educate clergy and laity as they care for those who make decisions involving human biotechnology. We saw via slides and reports some of the work of the council against poverty and injustice in the USA.

It was exciting and heartbreaking to hear about all the great work that Church World Service (CWS) has done around the world in disaster relief. It was exciting because of the difference CWS is making, but heartbreaking because of the enormity of the human suffering that happened in one year. Crop Walks really makes a difference in how CWS can respond to disasters and continue ongoing hunger programs; funds from the walk make up 34 percent of the budget. We were reminded that one in six people around the world have no access to water. In its Water for All campaign, CWS is working to bring usable water to all, and focuses much of its efforts on Africa. There is also the Africa Initiative; we were reminded that 6,000 die of AIDS each day in Africa. As delegates to the NCCC assembly, we are grateful for the support that we as church provide to the council and at the same time encourage our church to continue this support.

A couple of interesting websites for more information are www.ncccusa.org, www.churchworldservice.org, and www.buildavillage.org.

D. The State of the National Council of Churches (NCC)—September 2005

Who in these days of disaster is not keenly aware of human fragility? In an instant, violently rushing waters can snuff out lives. And the work of our hands is washed away, leaving poignant reminders—a family photo mired in mud or household items strewn across an eerie landscape.

Like you, I am haunted by images of Katrina’s destruction and by still-fresh memories of the tsunami half a world away. Just as survivors look for salvage in the debris, we look for salvation amidst an uncertain world.

Our faith provides that hope, which stretches between heaven and the here-and-now in one continuous lifeline. When we take hold of it, we also rediscover the strong and elastic bonds of the faith community that withstand the storm and embrace a hurting world.

I believe that as a community of Protestant, Anglican, and Orthodox communions, the National Council of Churches has a special role to play in these days. We are called, as it says in Ephesians 4:3, to make “every effort to maintain the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace,” and we actively seek to answer that call.

Shaping our efforts are common understandings on peace, justice, and unity that we have developed over the course of our fifty-five-year history together and that we recently have reaffirmed. We are well positioned to make a common witness on the scandal of poverty in the richest nation on earth, the desperate need for peace with justice where conflict now reigns, and environmental threats to our planetary home. Let me review some of the ways we are making that witness.

1. The Poverty That Kills

A year ago “Katrina” was simply a lovely name. Today it evokes the poverty, racism, and classism that the storm’s force revealed. While it destroyed indiscriminately, Katrina’s force also stripped away the indifference or ignorance that too often conceal the plight of poor communities—demonstrating to our nation one meaning of “the poverty that kills,” to use the words of Jeffrey Sachs, chief architect of the international Millennium Development Goals.

The ecumenical community cries out with one voice that those who suffer and even die under these conditions are God’s people—sisters and brothers whose poverty we cannot ignore. The NCC has just made available a new text, Love for the Poor, which offers common theological perspectives that may further unite the churches in action and advocacy. Long in the works as part of the NCC’s Poverty Mobilization, Love for the Poor has come to fruition at a moment when it may be most useful for pastors, lay leaders, and anyone who wishes to explore the centrality of love for the poor to the Christian faith. Members of the Faith and Order Commission and the Justice and Advocacy Commission helped bring this text to completion and many of them join me in commending it.

In this crisis, another of the council’s unique resources helped us respond effectively. The Yearbook of American and Canadian Churches, which contains the largest single database of the religious community in North America, became critical to identifying partners nationwide who wished to assist in providing intermediate housing to Katrina survivors. Without such a central registry, many congregations, agencies, and individuals not related to denominational or ecumenical disaster response agencies would have lacked the means to offer their gifts and graces in this terrible moment. We gathered this information without risking the privacy of our database, and we shared the information volunteered with faith-based humanitarian agencies and government agencies assisting those in shelters.

The Yearbook, with its 74th issue now under way, is among our most venerable programs. Among the newest is our e-advocacy service, FaithfulAmerica.org, which is lodged in the Communication Commission. Faithful America creates greater awareness of the ethical and moral dimensions of public policies, and offers people of faith a way to press these issues with government and other officials. Faithful America also has raised tens of thousands of dollars for the humanitarian response of our sister organization, Church World Service, to Katrina and to the tsunami in Asia. Currently we are exploring a national radio component to complement a rapidly growing FaithfulAmerica.org, to which 100,000 people now belong.

As many in our community suggest, Katrina was not simply “an act of God.” The abandonment of poor people—most of them African Americans—at the height of the storm was a human act or, more to the point, human inaction. Needed now are acts of faith. The NCC is redoubling efforts toward a just society that “makes poverty history”—building on work we already have done.

In 2004, our Let Justice Roll campaign collaborated with partners across the country to make poverty an election year issue and to bolster the faith constituency for continuing advocacy on behalf of our poorest citizens. As next steps, Let Justice Roll is campaigning in 2005 for a living wage for working people, so that all can enjoy the fruits of their labor—and it is tackling budget and tax fairness issues.

In March 2005, the NCC and many in the religious community declared that the federal budget does not reflect our moral values. We deplored tax cuts that benefit the wealthy and spending cuts that further weaken the most vulnerable populations. Today we are speaking out strongly against the unseemly but real possibility that the Fiscal Year ’06 federal budget could deal additional blows to poor people in our nation, among them struggling survivors of Katrina.

The NCC also is helping poor families to receive benefits to which they are entitled, but which too often go unclaimed. Nationwide more than $35 billion in appropriated or entitlement income enhancement funds go uncollected annually. Working with Solutions for Progress, a data-management and software development firm, we have developed a dramatically simplified application system for all benefits and tax credits, called the Benefit Bank. This Web-based, counselor-assisted, one-questionnaire system has helped 2,000 families in Pennsylvania, Florida, and Kansas to receive millions of dollars in benefits (an average of $5,000 per family). By January 2006, we expect to extend the Benefit Bank to the District of Columbia, Ohio, and Mississippi. We are searching for ways to bring the Benefit Bank to poor families in every state—including states hit hardest by Katrina, where poor people are owed more than $6 billion per year in unclaimed benefits.

Farm workers are among the nation's most poorly paid workers, but in 2004 and 2005 we celebrated two victories with them. Boycotts against Mt. Olive Pickle products and Taco Bell, which the NCC and several member communions actively supported, ended with historic agreements to improve wages and working conditions. The boycotts put a spotlight on the role that large companies in the food industry play in determining prices for the produce they use, in turn affecting farm worker wages. Moving forward, we are challenging other large corporations to face their responsibility toward farm workers.

2. Ecological Sins

Some call Katrina an "act of humanity" because human-caused global warming incubates extreme weather patterns and most likely contributed to this particular storm's fury. Even granting room for debate on the latter point, we are without a doubt in the midst of a global climate change crisis in which the poor suffer the most. In response, we have taken our climate-change work—the cornerstone of our environmental programs—to a new level. Thanks to the generosity of partners in the National Religious Partnership for the Environment, we have hired an additional staff person to promote the Interfaith Climate and Energy Campaign. With the Coalition on the Environment and Jewish Life, we already have organized campaigns in eighteen states.

Increasingly we see that threats to God's creation point to a theological crisis, not just an environmental one. In 2005, we convened a diverse group of scholars who drafted an open letter calling on Christians to repent of "our social and ecological sins" and to reject false teachings that suggest humans are "called" to exploit the Earth without care for how our behavior impacts the rest of God's creation.

Recent efforts to protect God's creation also have included training events across the country on water resources—engagingly called H₂Oly Water. We are launching a new Western Lands Program to protect our nation's public spaces. And we provide resources via the Web for Earth Day Sunday in April and other materials throughout the year.

3. For the Sake of the World

Katrina has focused attention on the domestic side of the NCC's agenda. But we never forget that we are a national council in a nation whose policies and actions affect lives worldwide. The annual Advocacy Days for Global Peace with Justice held in Washington, D.C., reflect the wide scope of the ecumenical community's domestic and international concerns, drawing faith-based advocates from around the nation for renewal, education and action. The NCC led in organizing the March 2005 Advocacy Days, which registered 833 people—an all-time high.

Participants in Advocacy Days include colleagues in local and state ecumenical and interfaith councils around the country. Just as they are our natural partners here in the U.S., so our peers in councils of churches in other nations expect us to be faithful partners in the challenges they face. Recent efforts to strengthen these relationships have included participation in meetings of the Latin American Council of Churches, and visits to the Conference of European Churches and other European partners.

We renewed contacts with Asian Christians with two trips to the region—one to Sri Lanka and Indonesia following the tsunami and a larger, long-planned delegation visit in March/April, including a visit to the Christian Conference of Asia's General Assembly. The delegation's original goal—to better understand challenges facing Asian Christian minorities—was broadened to include continuing impacts of the tsunami. Among NCC responses to the tsunami is a program pairing U.S. and tsunami-affected congregations.

Priorities related to Africa include an urgent effort to save Darfur, where up to 400,000 people have been killed and 2.5 million displaced from their homes. In July 2004, I was arrested for civil disobedience at the Sudanese Embassy, while protesting the violence. Now, more than a year after the U.S. declared the violence in Darfur to be genocide, we urge our national leaders to back those words with a push for multilateral intervention to stop the killing.

Multiple issues raised by the Iraq War pervade our agenda with the Middle East Council of Churches, with U.S. churches, and with the faith community globally, who look to us for our stand for peace. On July 4, 2005, the NCC issued "A Call to Speak Out on the War." Some 630 religious leaders joined in the call and more than 16,000 persons signed on to this faithful statement. In it, we called for an early fixed timetable to withdraw U.S. troops and for establishment of a multinational peacekeeping force. We seek an end to the violence that has cost 1,900 American and uncounted Iraqi lives and left thousands injured. We deplored other casualties, including our national honor in the wake of prisoner abuse and our national capacity to extend aid to the poorest people at home and internationally.

A delegation to Palestine/Israel in January 2005, which our president, Bishop Thomas L. Hoyt Jr., and I co-led, supported peacemaking in that region and brought a message home in the delegation statement, "Barriers Do Not Bring Freedom." On the NCC's behalf, I also met with Palestinian President Abbas in May to discuss concerns for peace, justice, and security, and we continue to seek a similar meeting with Prime Minister Sharon.

In a not unrelated development, we took part in a historic joint trip of Christian and Jewish leaders to the Holy Land. The September 18–23 visit succeeded in increasing mutual understanding at a tense moment in our long relationship. Participants sought to see the Holy Land “through each other’s eyes” at a time marked by Jewish anger over a nascent movement among mainline churches to selectively divest from companies profiting from the Israeli-Palestinian conflict.

This trip is among the most visible of our efforts for better interfaith relations. In ongoing work, our Interfaith Relations Commission provides resources to train people in local communities for interfaith dialogue and to educate congregations about other faiths.

4. Equipping the Saints for Ministry

The impact of the NCC’s common witness depends greatly on how people in congregations understand the intersection of faith with today’s issues. That is why the NCC devotes a great deal of attention to providing educational resources ecumenically. In addition to Love for the Poor, new products include:

- For the Peace of the World: A Christian Curriculum on International Relations, on benefits of multilateralism;
- A resource on land stewardship, Rooted in God’s Word and Lands;
- To Preserve and Strengthen Social Security, a curriculum highlighting this successful anti-poverty program;
- A forthcoming resource on the international Millennium Development Goals; and
- A study document on human biotechnologies, Fearfully and Wonderfully Made, preparing churches for a vote in our 2006 General Assembly on policy to keep pace with this rapidly developing field.

In 2004–2005, as in every year, our Education and Leadership Ministries Commission (ELMC) took the ecumenical lead in nurturing educators and other leaders in our churches. The ELMC provides resources, forums, and educational opportunities that assist those charged with the fundamentally important task of Christian formation and education. With fourteen program ministries, ELMC attends to the educational needs of all age groups, many ethnic and racial groups, persons with disabilities, and others. In 2004–2005, ELMC worked to fulfill its commission-wide pledge to be an antiracist body. And it has made special contributions to the formation of the next generation of ecumenical leaders by providing an exciting stewards program at General Assembly.

5. Looking Within

As this report indicates, we often succeed in making a common witness for peace, justice, and unity. But maintaining the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace is a great challenge. As we, in all our diversity, seek to be faithful to each other and to the needs of the world, our efforts are tested and retested in each of our program areas. By our very nature, we encompass a membership with gifts, approaches, and ideas that differ. This is a natural feature of genuine ecumenical engagement and, while in the short term we may sometimes feel stretched by our diversity, it ultimately provides the kind of dialogue that keeps us “on track.” Without falling off either end of the spectrum, we manage, with each other’s help and the assistance of the Holy Spirit, to be both reconciling and prophetic, reflective and active, diverse and united.

For the NCC to keep the difficult balance of ecumenical life that I have described, it is necessary to pay attention to the council’s “internal workings.” Council leaders have done so in every era. In this moment, the NCC’s Strategic Planning Committee, under the leadership of our president-elect, the Reverend Michael Livingston, is developing a plan for the next few years that will renew and strengthen our life together.

The strategic planning process builds on the council’s continuing financial stability. Fiscal Year 2004–2005 marks the fourth year in a row that revenues have exceeded expenditures. Contributing to our improved position is additional income realized as a result of Administration and Finance work toward better marketing of the Revised Standard Version of the Bible, to which we hold the copyright. We see the light at the end of the dark financial tunnel through which we entered the new millennium.

This may be the place to add that—knowing how challenging ecumenical life can be—we celebrate the progress of the emerging Christian Churches Together in the USA, which aims for historic inclusivity. We are proud to claim our role in stimulating the growth of CCT and concur in the decision of its participants to delay a formal launch until inclusiveness goals are reached. CCT has revised its timetable for all the right reasons.

Finally, my thanks go to the Executive Committee and the Governing Board for their leadership in helping to make the council more effective, relevant, and faithful. I continue to ask your prayers for a whole and healthy council ever engaged in the healing of the whole world.

CHRISTIAN CHURCHES TOGETHER IN THE U.S.A., INC.
A NOT-FOR-PROFIT CORPORATION

DEFINITIONS

“Annual Meeting” shall mean the yearly meeting of Participants described in Section 7.1 of these Bylaws.

“Association of Churches” shall mean a group of churches that function similarly to denominations.

“Corporation” shall mean Christian Churches Together In The USA, Inc.

“Church Families” shall mean Evangelical/Pentecostal churches, Historic Protestant churches, Historic Racial/Ethnic churches, Orthodox churches and the Catholic Church.

“Participants” shall mean the members of the Corporation.

“Steering Committee” shall mean the Board of Directors of the Corporation.

“Visitors” shall mean attendees who are representing themselves or organizations which are not eligible to become Participants.

ARTICLE ONE

OFFICES

Section 1.1 New York Office. The office and registered agent of this Corporation in the State of New York shall be as determined by the Steering Committee.

Section 1.2 Other Offices. The Corporation may have such other offices either within or without the State of New York, as the Steering Committee may from time to time determine.

ARTICLE TWO

THEOLOGICAL AFFIRMATIONS

We welcome churches, Christian Communities, and National Christian Organizations that:

- Believe in the Lord Jesus Christ as God and Savior according to the Scriptures; (the Steering Committee recommends that we consider changing this wording to: “in accord with,” rather than “according to the”)
- Worship and serve the One God, Father, Son, and Holy Spirit; and
- Seek ways to work together in order to present a more credible Christian witness in and to the world.

ARTICLE THREE

PURPOSE

Section 3.1 Purpose. The Corporation is formed and shall be operated exclusively for the purpose of joining participating churches and National Christian Organizations in an organization (1) to celebrate a common confession of faith in the Triune God, (2) to discern the guidance of the Holy Spirit through prayer and theological dialogue, (3) to provide fellowship and mutual support, (4) to seek better understanding of each other by affirming our commonalities and understanding our differences, (5) to foster evangelism faithful to the proclamation of the gospel, (6) to speak to society with a common voice whenever possible, and (7) to promote the common good of society and engage in other activities consistent with its purposes.

ARTICLE FOUR

MEMBERS/PARTICIPANTS

Section 4.1 Participants. The Corporation’s members (designated as “Participants” for the purposes of these Bylaws) shall include (a) churches, denominations, Communions, fellowships, and other associations of churches that are not subsidiaries of other ecclesial organizations in the United States and (b) National Christian Organizations. Each Participant is entitled to have one representative at the Annual Meeting; provided, however, that each Participant that is a church exceeding five million members shall be entitled to have an additional representative for every five million members or fraction thereof. Each Participant shall designate as their representative(s) an individual who shall have the authority to exercise that Participant’s rights with preference for the Participant’s Chief Executive Officer or other high-ranking official. Participants shall not be limited to their designated number of representatives at meetings of Participants, but may bring additional non-voting representatives. The Steering Committee may limit the numbers of additional representatives at their discretion. The rights and privileges of each Participant shall be equal. The representatives of each Participant shall be entitled to engage in consensus decision-making in every circumstance in which such is required. Participation in the Corporation by Christian organizations that are national in scope shall not at any time exceed twenty percent of the total number of Participants of the Corporation.

Section 4.2 Qualifications. Any national church body, Association of Churches, or national Christian organization shall be eligible to apply to become a Participant in this Corporation if it

- (a) accepts and endorses the theological basis and purposes of the Corporation,
- (b) agrees to advance the purposes of the Corporation,
- (c) agrees to be bound by (i) the certificate of incorporation of the Corporation, (ii) these Bylaws and (iii) such rules and regulations as the Steering Committee and Participants may from time to time adopt,
- (d) agrees to attend all meetings of the Participants, and
- (e) agrees to pay the dues established by the Participants.

Section 4.3 Admission to participation. The Participants, at a regular or special meeting held in accordance with these Bylaws, shall prescribe the exact form and manner in which application may be made for participation. Any application form used by the Corporation shall state clearly and in bold type that the Corporation's decision-making processes require agreement by a consensus of the Participants in accordance with the process described in Bylaws.

Section 4.4 Property rights. No Participant shall have any right, title, or interest in any of the property or assets, including any earnings or investment income of this Corporation, nor shall any of such property or assets be distributed to any Participant upon the Corporation's dissolution or winding up.

Section 4.5 Liability of Participants. No Participant shall be personally liable for any of the Corporation's debts, liabilities, or obligations, nor shall any Participant be subject to any assessment for any purpose, unless agreed to by the Participants at a regular or special meeting held in accordance with these Bylaws.

Section 4.6 Transfer, termination, and reinstatement. Participation in this Corporation is nontransferable. The participation of any Participant shall be terminated

- (a) on the resignation of a Participant, or
- (b) upon a consensus decision of the Participants entitled to participate at a regular or special meeting held in accordance with these Bylaws, or

- (c) by decision of the Steering Committee upon failure of a Participant to pay the dues required by these Bylaws.

A Participant whose participation has terminated or has been terminated may apply for reinstatement in the same manner as application is made for initial participation.

ARTICLE FIVE

CONSENSUS DECISION-MAKING

Section 5.1 Consensus decision-making. Decisions in every setting of the organization's life shall be by consensus. Only when all Participants present either say Yes or agree to Stand Aside will the organization move ahead on any action. One No vote is sufficient to stop any proposed action. For every decision made by the Steering Committee or at the Annual Meeting or at a special meeting, representatives from each of the Five Church Families must be present.

The consensus decision-making process shall emphasize the process of listening and discussion and shall not merely be a matter of saying yes or no. The following responses to any proposed actions shall be possible in a consensus decision:

- (a) Yes – the Participant is supportive of the proposed action and will do nothing to undermine it.
- (b) No – the Participant cannot in good conscience allow the proposed action to go forward.
- (c) Stand Aside – a Participant may have reservations, but they are not sufficient to keep the group from accepting the proposed action, and the Participant will do nothing to undermine the decision.
- (d) The group by consensus can decide to make a particular decision by majority vote.

In any decision-making situation, the Participants may decide by consensus to present majority and minority opinions on a particular topic.

ARTICLE SIX

DUES

Section 6.1 Annual dues. The Participants at a regular or special meeting held in accordance with these Bylaws may determine the amount of annual dues payable to the Corporation by Participants.

Section 6.2 Payment of dues. Dues shall be payable in accordance with Steering Committee direction. Dues of new Participants shall be prorated from the first day of the month in which such new Participant is received into participation for the remainder of the fiscal year of the Corporation.

ARTICLE SEVEN

MEETINGS OF PARTICIPANTS

Section 7.1 Annual Meetings. A meeting of Participants shall be held at least once each year at a place designated by the Steering Committee. At such Annual Meetings the Participants shall choose Steering Committee members (if there are vacancies), receive new Participants, discuss the Corporation's organizational documents, and deal with such other business as may come before the meeting. If Steering Committee vacancies are not filled at the Annual Meeting, or at any adjournment of such meeting, the Steering Committee shall cause an election to fill such vacancies to be held at a special meeting of Participants conducted as soon as may be convenient after the Annual Meeting.

Section 7.2 Special meetings. Special meetings of Participants may be called by the executive committee, the Steering Committee, or by not fewer than ten (10) of the Participants.

Section 7.3 Place of meeting. The Steering Committee may designate any place, either inside or outside the State of New York, as the place of meeting for the Annual Meeting or any special meeting of Participants.

Section 7.4 Notice of meetings. Written or printed notice stating the time and place of any meeting of Participants shall be delivered to each member, no less than thirty (30) days before the date of such meeting. In the case of a special meeting, the purpose or purposes for which such meeting is called shall be stated in the notice. If sent by mail, a notice of meeting shall be deemed delivered when deposited in the United States mail, postage prepaid, addressed to the Participant at the Participant's address as it appears on the records of the Corporation at the time of mailing.

Section 7.5 Quorum. Two thirds of all Participants including at least one Participant from each of the Corporation's Church Families shall constitute a quorum at any Annual Meeting or any other official meeting of the Participants. If a quorum is present initially, but then is lost, at any meeting of the Participants the meeting may continue, but all actions taken must be confirmed by the unanimous written consent of all Participants, whether or not they were in attendance at the meeting, as described in Section 7.8, and a majority of those present may adjourn the meeting without further notice.

Section 7.6 Decision-making rights. Each Participant shall be entitled to participate in the consensus decision-making process at all meetings at which such Participant's attendance is expected or permitted. Each Participant shall have one vote.

Section 7.7 Observers and Visitor. The Steering Committee shall encourage Churches, Associations of Churches, and National Christian Organizations, which are not already Participants, to send Observers to attend meetings of Participants. These organizations may send Observers for as long as they are actively considering participation in the Corporation. Observers shall have voice, but not vote. Visitors may attend and speak at meetings of the Corporation at the discretion of the Steering Committee.

Section 7.8 Action without meeting. No meeting need be held by the Participants to take any action, provided all Participants shall individually or collectively consent in writing to such action, and such written consent or consents are filed with the minutes of the proceedings of the meetings of Participants. Action by written consent shall have the same force and effect as action by a unanimous consensus decision of the Participants. Any certificate or other document filed under any provision of law which relates to action so taken shall state that the action was taken by unanimous written consent of the Participants without a meeting, and that the Bylaws authorize the Participants to so act. Such a statement shall be prima facie evidence of such authority.

ARTICLE EIGHT

STEERING COMMITTEE

Section 8.1 Number. The authorized number of members of the Steering Committee of this Corporation (the term "Steering Committee" being preferred by the Participants over the term "Board of Directors") shall be no fewer than seventeen and no more than twenty-four.

Section 8.2 Qualifications and Election. Steering Committee members must be designated representatives of Participants. Each Church Family shall be entitled to three representatives on the Steering Committee. Their terms shall be staggered. At the Annual Meetings of Participants each of the Church Families shall caucus to elect one representative to the Steering Committee. Additional, At-Large members of the Steering Committee may be nominated by the Steering Committee and elected by the Participants and may include representatives of the National Christian Organizations.

Section 8.3 Term of office. The Steering Committee members named in the certificate of incorporation as the first Steering Committee shall hold office until the first meeting of Participants after the formation of the Corporation, when an election of the Steering Committee members shall be held. Thereafter, the term of office of each Steering Committee member shall be three years with a maximum of two consecutive terms per Steering Committee member.

Section 8.4 Powers. Except as otherwise provided in the certificate of incorporation or these Bylaws or as required by law, the Steering Committee shall implement the decisions of the Participants made at a regular or special meeting and deal with items needing to be handled between meetings of the Participants. The Steering Committee shall be authorized to have and exercise all of the powers necessary to effect any or all of the purposes for which the Corporation was formed, including, but not limited to, the express powers granted by the laws of the State of New York, except as limited by the Certificate of Incorporation, these Bylaws or actions of the Meetings of Participants, provided, however, that nothing in the Certificate of Incorporation, these Bylaws or in any actions of a Meeting of Participants or the Steering Committee shall be deemed to derogate from those particular powers of the Steering Committee which under applicable law are required to be exercised by the Corporation's Board of Directors and may, therefore, not be delegated or otherwise removed from the powers of the Steering Committee. The list of powers of the Steering Committee shall include, but not be limited to, the following: establishing the office and registered agent of the Corporation in the State of New York, raising and disbursing the funds of the Corporation; initiating and defending against lawsuits; establishing a corporate seal; purchasing and selling real and personal property; buying and selling securities; executing contracts and mortgages; investing and reinvesting of the funds of the Corporation; conducting day-to-day business operations; making charitable donations; establishing a pension fund; providing life insurance benefits; establishing committees of the Steering Committee, appointing committee members and committee officers and defining their duties; hiring and terminating employees and agents, defining their duties and fixing their compensation; borrowing and lending; making advances; indemnification against certain liabilities; holding property in a trust account; and any other powers incident to the effective pursuit of the interests of the Corporation. The Steering Committee may delegate the performance of any duties or the exercise of any powers to the Participants as the Steering Committee may, by resolution, designate

Section 8.5 Vacancies. Vacancies in the position of President shall be filled by a consensus of the remaining Steering Committee members representing that Church Family and ratified by the Steering Committee. Vacancies in the position of a Steering Committee member representing a Church Family shall be filled by the President of that Church Family and ratified by the Steering Committee. Vacancies in Church Family positions must be filled with persons who are representatives of Participants in that Church Family. If there are no incumbents representing a particular Church Family on the Steering Committee, the Steering Committee shall fill the three positions after consultation with the Participants in that Church Family and these three shall then choose a President from among them. Vacancies in At-Large positions may be filled by the Steering Committee. Persons chosen to fill vacancies in the manner described above in this section shall serve only until the next Annual or other official meeting of Participants at which time the vacancies shall be filled to complete the unexpired terms by a caucus of the effected Church Families. Persons filling a vacancy for less than one year shall not have that service counted against their eligibility for two full terms as mentioned in 8.3 above. Any Participant may object to the filling of a vacancy in Steering Committee member or President in their Church Family between Participant meetings, as described in this section, by requesting a written ballot of the effected Participants to fill the position. These written ballots shall continue until a consensus is reached, but may be suspended if the objection is withdrawn.

Section 8.6 Compensation. No member of the Steering Committee shall receive any compensation from the Corporation.

Section 8.7 Meetings.

- (a) Meetings shall be held at such places as the Steering Committee may from time to time by resolution designate. Meetings may also be held by electronic means as Steering Committee members may from time to time by resolution designate.
- (b) Regular meetings shall be held as agreed by the Steering Committee. Notice of such meetings shall be mailed to each Steering Committee member at the address last recorded on the books of the Corporation, not fewer than ten, nor more than twenty days before the date of the meeting. This requirement may be waived, however, by resolution of the Steering Committee.
- (c) A special meeting of the Steering Committee may be called if the executive committee deems it necessary. In such event, ten days' written notice to each Steering Committee member shall be deemed sufficient.
- (d) A majority of the Steering Committee members shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business at any meeting of the Steering Committee. At least one person from each of the five designated Church Families must be present.

Section 8.8 Action without meeting. No meeting need be held by the Steering Committee to take any action, provided all members of the Steering Committee shall individually or collectively consent in writing to such action, and such written consent or consents are filed with the minutes of the proceedings of the Steering Committee. Action by written consent shall have the same force and effect as action by a unanimous consensus decision of the Steering Committee. Any certificate or other document filed under any provision of law which relates to action so taken shall state that the action was taken by unanimous written consent of the Steering Committee without a meeting, and that the Bylaws authorize the Steering Committee members to so act. Such a statement shall be prima facie evidence of such authority.

Section 8.9 Liability of Steering Committee members. Neither the Steering Committee members of this Corporation nor the Participants whom they represent shall be personally liable for the debts, liabilities, or other obligations of the Corporation.

ARTICLE NINE

OFFICERS

Section 9.1 Designation of officers. The officers of the Corporation shall be five presidents, one from each of the Church Families, a treasurer, a secretary, and such other officers as may be elected in accordance with the provisions of this article. The Steering Committee may elect or appoint such other officers as it shall deem desirable, such officers to have the authority and to perform the duties prescribed, from time to time, by the Steering Committee. Any two or more offices may be held by the same person, except the offices of moderator and secretary.

Section 9.2 Election and term of office. The officers of this Corporation shall be elected by the Steering Committee, except that the five Presidents shall be elected by caucuses of each of the five Church Families from among that Church Family's members on the Steering Committee and shall continue as President during the term of their membership on the Steering Committee. From among the five presidents, a moderator shall be elected biennially for a term of two years. New offices may be created and filled at any meeting of the Steering Committee. Each officer shall hold office until his or her successor shall have been duly elected and shall have been qualified.

Section 9.3 Removal. Any officer elected or appointed by the Steering Committee may be removed from office whenever in its judgment the interests of the Corporation would be best served. Any such removal from office shall be without prejudice and does not constitute removal from the Steering Committee itself.

Section 9.4 Vacancies. A vacancy in any office other than President, whether due to death, resignation, removal, disqualification, or otherwise shall be filled by the Steering Committee for the unexpired portion of the term. A vacancy in the office of President shall be filled as described in Section 8.5 above.

Section 9.5 Moderator. The moderator of the Corporation:

- (a) shall preside at all meetings of Participants and of the Steering Committee;
- (b) may sign, with the secretary or other officer duly authorized by the Steering Committee, any deeds, mortgages, bonds, contracts, or other instruments the execution of which has been authorized by the members and the Steering Committee, except in cases where the signing and execution of such instruments has been expressly delegated by the Steering Committee, by these Bylaws, or to some other officer or agent of the Corporation by law; and
- (c) shall perform all other duties generally incident to the office of moderator and such other duties as may be prescribed by the Steering Committee.

Section 9.6 Treasurer. The treasurer shall:

- (a) give a bond, if so required by the Steering Committee, for the faithful discharge of the treasurer's duties in such sum and with such surety of sureties as the Steering Committee may deem appropriate;
- (b) have charge and custody of, and be responsible for, all funds and securities of the Corporation;
- (c) receive and give receipts for moneys due and payable to the Corporation from any source and deposit all such moneys in the name of the Corporation in such banks, trust companies, or other depositories as shall be selected by the Steering Committee; and
- (d) perform all duties generally incidental to the office of treasurer and such other duties as may from time to time be assigned to the treasurer by the presiding president or by the Steering Committee.

Section 9.7 Secretary. The secretary shall:

- (a) keep the minutes of meetings of Participants and of the Steering Committee, in one or more books provided for that purpose;
- (b) see that all notices are duly given in accordance with these Bylaws or as required by law;
- (c) be custodian of the corporate records and of the seal of the Corporation;
- (d) keep a membership book containing the names and addresses of all Participants and Steering Committee members of the Corporation, and, with respect to any Participants who have been terminated, record that fact together with the date of termination; and
- (e) exhibit to any Steering Committee member of the Corporation, or to a Steering Committee member's agent or to any person or agency authorized by law to inspect them, at all reasonable times and on demand, these Bylaws the certificate of incorporation, the book of Participants, the minutes of any meeting, and the other records of the Corporation.

ARTICLE TEN

COMMITTEES

Section 10.1 Executive committee. By the consensus decision of the members of the Steering Committee, the Steering Committee may, by resolution duly adopted, establish an executive committee, which shall consist of five members of the Steering Committee, one from each of the Church Families, which committee, to the extent provided by such resolution, shall have and exercise the authority of the Steering Committee in the management of the Corporation; provided, however, that the designation of and delegation of authority to the executive committee shall not relieve the Steering Committee, or any Steering Committee member individually, of any responsibility imposed on the Steering Committee or any individual Steering Committee member by these Bylaws, or by law.

Section 10.2 Committees. Committees not having and exercising the managerial authority of the Steering Committee may be established by resolution duly adopted by a consensus decision of the Steering Committee. Except as may be provided by resolution, members of committees shall be designated representatives of the Participants, and shall be appointed by the Steering Committee. Committees established from time to time by resolution shall possess the authority to recommend to the executive committee or to the Steering Committee but not the authority to make final managerial and policy decisions. Any member of a committee may be removed by a consensus decision of the Steering Committee, whenever in the judgment of a majority of the members of the Steering Committee the interests of the Corporation would be best served by such removal.

Section 10.3 Terms of office. Except as otherwise provided in these Bylaws, each member of a committee shall continue as such until the next annual meeting of Participants of the Corporation and until his or her successor is appointed, unless such committee shall be sooner abolished, or unless such member be removed or cease to qualify as a member of the committee.

Section 10.4 Chairperson. One member of each committee shall be appointed chairperson by the person or persons authorized to appoint the members of the committee.

Section 10.5 Vacancies. Vacancies in the membership of any committee shall be filled by appointments made in the same manner as provided in the case of original appointments.

Section 10.6 Quorum. Unless otherwise provided in a committee's establishing resolution, a majority of the whole committee shall constitute a quorum, and the act of a majority of members of a committee present at a meeting at which a quorum is present shall be an act of the committee.

Section 10.7 Rules. Each committee may adopt such rules and regulations for its meetings and the conduct of its activities as it may deem appropriate; provided, however that such rules and regulations shall be consistent with these Bylaws, and provided further that regular minutes of all proceedings shall be kept.

ARTICLE ELEVEN

CONTRACTS, CHECKS, DEPOSITS, AND FUNDS

Section 11.1 Contracts. The Steering Committee may, by resolution duly adopted, authorize any officer or officers, agent or agents of the Corporation, in addition to the officers so authorized by these Bylaws, to enter into any contract or to execute and deliver any instrument in the name of and on behalf of the Corporation. Such authority may be general, or confined to specific instances.

Section 11.2 Gifts and contributions. The Steering Committee or the executive committee may:

- (a) accept on behalf of the Corporation any contribution, gift, bequest, or devise of any type of property (“donations”), for the general and special charitable purposes of the Corporation, on such terms as the Steering Committee or the executive committee shall approve;
- (b) hold such funds or property in the name of the Corporation of such nominee or nominees as the Steering Committee or executive committee may appoint.
- (c) collect and receive the income from such funds or property;
- (d) devote the principal or income from such donations to such benevolent and charitable purposes as the Steering Committee or executive committee may determine;
- (e) enter into an agreement with any donor to continue to devote the principal or income from the donation to such particular purpose as the donor may designate and after approval of such agreement by the Steering Committee or executive committee devote the principal or income from that donation according to the agreement.

Section 11.3 Deposits. All funds of the Corporation shall be deposited from time to time to the credit of the Corporation in such banks, trust companies, or other depositaries as the Steering Committee may select.

Section 11.4 Checks, drafts, orders for payment. All checks, drafts, or orders for the payment of money, notes, or other evidences of indebtedness issued in the name of the Corporation shall be signed by such officer or officers, agent or agents of the Corporation and in such manner as the Steering Committee shall from time to time by resolution determine. In the absence of such determination, the instruments shall be signed by the treasurer, and countersigned by the moderator of the Corporation or by such other member or officer as shall be designated by the Steering Committee.

ARTICLE TWELVE

MISCELLANEOUS

Section 12.1 Books and records. The Corporation shall prepare and maintain correct and complete books and records of account and shall also keep minutes of the meetings of its Participants, Steering Committee, executive committee, and other committees, and shall keep at the principal office a book of Participants giving the names and addresses of Participants entitled to participate in consensus decision-making. All books and records of the Corporation may be inspected by any Steering Committee member, or Participant, or the agent or attorney of either, or any proper person at any reasonable time.

Section 12.2 Fiscal Year. The fiscal year of the Corporation shall begin on the first day of January and end on the last day of December in each year.

Section 12.3 Corporate Seal. The Steering Committee shall provide a corporate seal.

Section 12.4 Waiver of Notice. Whenever any notice is required to be given under the provisions of the Not-for-Profit Corporation Law of New York or under the provisions of the certificate of incorporation or the Bylaws of this Corporation, a waiver thereof in writing signed by the person or persons entitled to such notice, whether before or after the time stated therein, shall be deemed equivalent to the giving of such notice.

Section 12.5 Roberts' Rules of Order. Roberts' Rules of Order, Newly Revised, shall be the parliamentary authority in all official meetings of this Corporation wherever it is not inconsistent with these Bylaws, the Certificate of Incorporation, actions of the Steering Committee, or actions of the Meetings of Participants.

ARTICLE THIRTEEN

AMENDMENTS

Section 13.1 Power of Participants to amend these Bylaws. The Bylaws of this Corporation may only be amended, by a consensus decision of the Participants entitled to decide at a meeting duly called for the purpose. A copy of the proposed changes to these Bylaws must be mailed to all Participants at least three months prior to the Meeting at which the change is to be considered.

[The assembly approved Item 08-01. See p. 36]

On Clarifying the Practice of Our Theology of Call for Those Serving General Assembly Entities—From the Presbytery of Santa Fe.

The Presbytery of Santa Fe respectfully overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to do the following:

1. Affirm its commitment to our Reformed Theology of Call as expressed in our Book of Order (see especially Chapter XI of the Form of Government) and the Personnel Policies of the General Assembly, so that all ministers of Word and Sacrament employed by the entities of the General Assembly and every chief administrative officer of a General Assembly entity may have a call to that work, with the full privileges and obligations involved in such a call.

2. In order to carry out that affirmation, the 217th General Assembly (2006) approves the following:

a. Instructs the Office of the General Assembly, the General Assembly Council, the Presbyterian Investment and Loan Program, Inc., the Board of Pensions, the Presbyterian Foundation, and the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation to review their policies and practices and to effect any needed changes to bring them into full compliance with the Book of Order (G-11.0410) and General Assembly policies so that every minister of Word and Sacrament employed by them in any relationship shall have a call as defined by the Constitution of the church with full constitutional participation by the appropriate presbytery. Chief administrative officers of a General Assembly entity who are not ministers of Word and Sacrament should be accorded every courtesy in the formation and establishment of their call.

Minimal requirements for ministers of Word and Sacrament employed by assembly entities include: pre-employment consultation between the minister and his/her committee on ministry (COM), approval of the terms of call by the presbytery prior to employment, and timely notice of any changes, timely notification and full information to COM of any circumstance that might occasion disciplinary action along with full cooperation on the part of the agency in any investigation, and proper notice of the call's dissolution.

b. The 217th General Assembly (2006) acknowledges that any financial provisions involved in a termination or settlement agreement concluding the relationship are changes in terms of call and shall be shared with the presbytery of membership for their approval (as are all changes in the terms of call) and the Board of Pensions.

c. The 217th General Assembly (2006), based upon its commitment to a theology of call and its understanding of the role of presbyteries, declares that termination or settlement agreements concluding service with non-disclosure terms may not prevent the presbytery's COM full access to that information.

d. That certification of full compliance with these instructions be presented to the 218th General Assembly (2008) by each entity.

e. That at each assembly, beginning in 2008, the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly shall receive from each entity, report to the assembly, and include in its Minutes, a list of the positions in each entity that are called positions, whether occupied by a minister of Word and Sacrament or a chief administrative officer, along with their full terms of call for the two years prior to the year of the assembly, including bonuses and all other financial provisions.

f. That the Stated Clerk be instructed to prepare and present to the 218th General Assembly (2008) any constitutional or standing rule change required to effect these instructions.

Rationale

Employment situations of ministers of Word and Sacrament, which are considered by national entities as contractual or "at will," disrespects our theology of call to Christ's service on the part of these persons and may actually prevent appropriate disciplinary functions of a presbytery. Such contrivances may prevent national entities from advising presbyteries of circumstances or behaviors that could result in disciplinary procedures. The accountability functions that exist under presbytery supported call processes are severely limited by national personnel practices. Such secrecy in employment practice may make national entities complicit in situations that might be cause for discipline.

While the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) values an understanding that the practice of ministry and the call to vocation are fundamental to the role of ministers of Word and Sacrament in service to the church, the practice of call for ministers of Word and Sacrament among our six national entities is at best uneven, and in some cases seems not to be guided by our Constitution or our written policies. For example: In some cases, ministers of Word and Sacrament are “hired” or “employed” without any usual call processes or even notice to their presbyteries of membership. Some calls, when issued, use nonstandard categories for terms and are difficult to interpret. Some international positions are “appointed,” avoiding the call process altogether and putting some ministers of Word and Sacrament in difficult situations relating to ministerial and sacramental functions on the field. While the Constitution and Personnel Policies provide every expectation that presbyteries will fully participate in the call process, establishing, changing, and dissolving calls for ministers of Word and Sacrament, the call process for those working in national entities is uneven and many cases very confusing to us all.

The Book of Order (G-11.0410) assumes that a formal call is presented to every minister of Word and Sacrament employed by one of the entities of the General Assembly:

An active member engaged in a validated ministry in other service of this church shall serve as a staff member of a presbytery, a synod, or the General Assembly of this church or of an organization related to one of these governing bodies; as a minister serving an organization sponsored by two or more denominations, one of which is this church, such as a federated church, a specialized ministry, an administrative office, or an interdenominational agency; as a partner in mission in connection with a church outside the United States of America. Before entering upon such service, the minister shall request and obtain the approval of the presbytery of membership. Changes in the terms of the call or dissolution of the relationship shall be reported to the presbytery.

The Personnel Policies require formal calls for chief administrative officers and ministers of Word and Sacrament:

3.05 Ministers of the Word and Sacrament

The nature of the relationship between persons ordained to Ministry of the Word and Sacrament and their presbyteries is governed by the Book of Order. They are covered by all Personnel Policies except where specifically excluded by federal, state, or local laws.

3.10 Calls

Written calls to service are required for ministers and certain staff and elected persons. For Ministers of the Word and Sacrament, the Employer will provide a detailed “terms of call” consistent with the Book of Order 11.0410. Before entering upon such service, the minister shall request and obtain the approval of the presbytery of membership. Changes in the terms of the call or dissolution of the relationship shall be reported to the presbytery.

For persons employed in positions where ordination is a minimum qualification, the terms of call must at least meet the presbytery minimums for salary and study leave. For persons employed in positions where ordination is not a minimum qualification, the terms of call and benefits will be established by the Employer and may or may not meet the presbytery minimums but will be comparable to those offered to other exempt and non-exempt staff in similar positions.

Chief Administrative Officers of General Assembly entities, synods, and presbyteries and elected staff shall also be provided with a written call stating the terms of employment.

Advice and Counsel on Item 08-01—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

Item 08-01 from the Presbytery of Santa Fe calls on the General Assembly to affirm its commitment to Reformed Theology of the call to ministry as expressed in the Book of Order and to affirm that all ministers employed by the General Assembly and its entities may have a call with full privileges and obligations. It instructs all six major General Assembly entities to bring their policies into compliance with the Book of Order provisions for called positions.

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) advises that Item 08-01 be approved with the following amendment (and that these measures also constitute answers to Items 08-02 and 08-05):

1. Strike Item “c.”

~~“c. the 217th General Assembly (2006), based upon its commitment to a Theology of Call and its understanding of the role of presbyteries declares that termination or settlement agreements concluding service with non-disclosure terms may not prevent the Presbytery’s COM full access to that information, and further,”~~ and substitute in its place the following (adapted from Item 08-05):

“c. The 217th General Assembly (2006) directs that all its entities bring their policies for the termination of called positions into conformity with the Form of Government (G-9.0705 and G-11.0410) and provide safeguards of due process, written statement of reasons for termination, right of appeal, right to legal counsel; and that the General Assembly mandate that termination benefits or severance pay shall not be contingent upon secrecy or the denial of all rights to appeal.”

2. Add a new “g.”

“g. direct that agreements or covenants on personnel policies reached among agencies and entities of the General Assembly be printed in the operating manuals of the agencies.

Items 08-01, 08-02, and 08-05 all speak to what 08-02 states:

“At the heart of Presbyterian polity there is a cherished conviction that no person’s exercise of office in the church is to be subjected to the control of any other single individual” (Item 08-02). According to the sixth of our Historic Principles of Church Order “. . . the election of the persons [church officers] to the exercise of this authority, in any particular society [or body], is in that society” (Book of Order, G-1.0306). This means that authority to call and dismiss persons for particular ministries of the church resides in duly elected, representative bodies.

The staff of General Assembly agencies do not have the due process provided by the Book of Order to staff of presbyteries and synods, and which presbyteries ensure through committees on ministry to pastors of congregations.

New clause “c.” above is taken primarily from Item 08-05, with due process safeguards based on those already given to presbytery and synod staff in G-9.0705. The right of appeal to an appropriate body is a long-standing mark of Presbyterian polity (see the Book of Discipline for judicial examples). Though it would hold the agencies of the assembly to a higher standard than that of secular governmental and business practice, it is within the capacity of General Assembly entities, in partnership with the presbyteries, to devise administrative procedures that would provide more procedural justice for ordained and lay employees.

Just such efforts have already led to an important joint “covenant and commitment” among the General Assembly entities in response to the overture from the Presbytery of Santa Fe (Item 08-01). The ACSWP affirms the value of this agreement and commends the administrative effort by the six entities and Santa Fe Presbytery staff involved.

It may be that an administrative task force or commission, as suggested by Newton Presbytery in Item 08-02, consulting with appropriate representatives of the presbyteries, could advise the Stated Clerk on measures to provide due process for staff being terminated, beyond the simple after-the-fact notification of termination currently agreed to by the entities. We affirm that there has been movement already in the General Assembly Council’s response to Item 08-05, but right of appeal and status of benefits still seem linked and the role of presbyteries ensuring fairness left unclear.

The personnel policies of the Office of the General Assembly, the General Assembly Council, and the other agencies differ as they reflect significant differences in pay range, degree of specialization, and proportion of ministers employed. It may be that not all elements can be brought into comparative equality, but this should be an underlying principle for all those serving the church—again in contrast to the society around us. The most extensive theologies of compensation adopted by the General Assembly (in 1976 and 1983) provide solid biblical basis for equality among those serving Jesus Christ in the church.

As in the case of presbytery and synod best practice, the changes in policy contained in these overtures would ideally reduce the costs and frequency of litigation and the appearance of arbitrary exercise of authority.

GAC, OGA, Foundation, BOP, PPC, and PILP COMMENT ON ITEM 08-01

Joint Comment on Item 08-01—From the Agencies of the General Assembly (GAC, OGA, Foundation, BOP, PPC, and PILP).

In response to Item 08-01: On Clarifying The Practice Of Our Theology of Call For Those Serving General Assembly Entities – From the Presbytery of Santa Fe, the General Assembly Council (GAC), the Office of the General Assembly (OGA), The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation (Foundation), The Board of Pensions (BOP), The Presbyterian Publishing Corporation (PPC), and The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Investment and Loan Program, Inc. (PILP) would like to affirm our commitment to our Reformed Theology of Call as expressed in the Book of Order and the personnel policies of the entities. Ministers of Word and Sacrament employed by the entities shall receive a call as described in the Book of Order and the personnel policies of the entities.

The entities are committed to the health of the church and all who are called to serve within it. We believe this can best be accomplished through a partnership between the entities and the presbyteries that reflects the covenant and commitment among us.

We affirm the importance of the requirement that all ministers of Word and Sacrament must complete a pre-employment consultation between the minister and the appropriate committee on ministry. To facilitate the employment process, we will assure presbyteries that the entities through their Human Resources Departments will contact the presbytery committee on ministry through the presbytery executive or presbytery stated clerk during the process. This provides an opportunity for the presbytery to communicate any concerns about the potential candidate prior to a position being offered. Further, we will assure the presbyteries that the committee on ministry through the stated clerk will be copied on the letter offering employment, in which the terms of call will be presented (See G-14.0517) and the potential employee will be instructed as to his or her responsibility to contact the committee on ministry, requesting a pre-employment consultation. We request that the presbytery notify the employing entity of the presbytery approval of the call. (See G-11.0410.) The entities will not start an employment relationship without notification of the approval of the call by the presbytery. We view this process as part of the partnership between the General Assembly, the presbytery of membership, and the minister to be called.

We agree to provide timely information (normally within two months) to the presbytery on any changes in the terms of call during the employment. (See G-11.0410.) This will include informing the presbytery of any termination of employment and termination agreement. Termination of employment is considered a change in of the terms of call. Further, the entities agree that if there is a cause for termination that may require disciplinary action on the part of the presbytery, the entities will provide information on the cause for termination to the committee on ministry and will cooperate in any investigation, unless prohibited by applicable law. The directors of human resources of the entities will respond to inquiries from the appropriate officers of the presbytery.

The entities agree that we will include in the minutes of the governing board, which are reviewed by the General Assembly, a statement of compliance with this agreement. Currently the salary, housing allowance, and all other compensation and benefits for all governing body staff are displayed in the minutes of the presbytery and General Assembly. Therefore, we do not believe it is necessary to provide an additional report to the General Assembly from the Stated Clerk listing all called positions and the prior two years terms of call.

[The assembly disapproved Item 08-02. See p. 36.]

On Creating a Commission to Study the Personnel Policies Now Operative as They Affect Members of the National Staff of the Presbyterian Church U.S.A.—From the Presbytery of Newton.

The Presbytery of Newton respectfully overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006), through its Stated Clerk, to create a commission to study the personnel policies now operative as they affect members of the national staff of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and make recommendations for change that will ensure that supervisory oversight is conducted with as much transparency as possible and that all personnel decisions are made corporately.

Such a commission needs to include persons representing a variety of concerns. It might be composed of one member selected by General Assembly Council, one member selected by the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly, one member selected by someone whose ministry has been terminated in a recent action, and one member selected by the Moderator of the General Assembly.

Rationale

Two staff members of the national office of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) were terminated in 2005 by executive action of the Executive Director of General Assembly Council. These terminations appear to have occurred because of displeasure about events that happened under the watch of the employees in question.

These terminations have called attention to the personnel policies that now govern employment of the national leadership staff. It has become apparent that, unlike the personnel policies that govern other levels of employment in the Presbyterian Church U.S.A., members of the national staff can be terminated by executive action. That employee has a choice between accepting a modest termination package or contesting the action.

At the heart of Presbyterian polity there is a cherished conviction that no person's exercise of office in the church is to be subjected to the control of any other single individual.

The conditions that govern employment of the national staff of the church have an impact on the health of the church. The present business model used by the General Assembly Council is not Reformed in nature or concept and may very well contribute to the tense work conditions of those currently employed by the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

COGA COMMENT ON ITEM 08-02

Comment on Item 08-02—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly.

Item 08-02 proposes creating a commission to study personnel policies for national staff.

The Standing Rules of the General Assembly (K.1.a) require that commissions or special committees can only be undertaken if the work cannot be done by an existing corporation or entity under its assigned responsibilities.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) advises that this proposal does not fulfill the requirements of the Standing Rules for the establishment of a commission. Such work is within the purview of the General Assembly Council (GAC) that could be instructed to undertake the work and appoint persons from outside the GAC itself. The COGA further advises that a commission is defined by the Book of Order as being constituted of one person from every synod, which would total sixteen persons (G 9.0504 b.(1)). The total cost for such a commission would be $60,770 over the period 2006–2008.

The COGA is a committee of fifteen persons, elected by the General Assembly from across the church, made up of elders and ministers who supervise the work of the Office of the General Assembly.

ACREC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 08-02

Advice and Counsel on Item 08-02—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC).

Item 08-02 calls for a commission to review national staff personnel policies out of concern for the lack of consistency with the connectional nature of the church. This overture was received from the Presbytery of Newton.

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) advises Item 08-02 be approved.

Rationale

The ACREC concurs with the recommendations of Item 08-02 and would urge any commission appointed to study the personnel policies of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to incorporate as assessment tools, the Shared Values and Behavior Standards for Cultural Proficiency adopted by the four General Assembly entities housed in the Presbyterian Center (General Assembly Council, Office of General Assembly, Presbyterian Publishing Corporation, and Presbyterian Investment and Loan Program, Inc.).

The 216th General Assembly (2004) approved the report of the ACREC Task Force to Examine GA Entities, entitled Creating a Climate for Change Within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). This report encouraged the corporate agencies of the PC(USA) to adopt and utilize the tools of cultural proficiency “as a means to develop and sustain healthy corporate church cultures” that equip the church and its agencies to address issues that arise in a diverse environment.

The tools of Cultural Proficiency call for the development of personnel policies that are consistent with the identity, vision, and shared values of the organization. These shared values of the Presbyterian Center are:

- ❖ We believe our purpose is to glorify and serve God, and that God's grace inspires us to bring God's love, justice, and reconciliation into a diverse world.
- ❖ We believe we provide a living expression of the gospel when we honor God's gift of diversity, respecting and encouraging the good in each of us.
- ❖ We believe seeking God's will is integral to our decision-making process.

- ❖ We believe employing honesty, integrity, and respect in our conversations and interactions with our colleagues and our constituencies create and foster trust.
- ❖ We believe working with competence, in consultation and in partnership with others, is the best way to serve those within and outside the Presbyterian Center.
- ❖ We believe we do our best and most productive work when we are encouraged to use our individual gifts, talents, and creativity in the achievement of our shared goals and objectives.
- ❖ We believe a balanced life, with time for work, leisure, and spiritual nurture, makes us healthier and more productive colleagues at the Presbyterian Center.

Comment on Item 08-02—From the General Assembly Council.

Item 08-02: On Creating a Commission to Study the Personnel Policies Now Operative as They Affect Members of the National Staff of the Presbyterian Church U.S.A. from the Presbytery of Newton, expresses concern about personnel policies and practices of the General Assembly Council (GAC) related to the employment termination of two GAC staff members in the Fall 2004 and the role of the Executive Director of the GAC in those terminations. Item 08-02 seeks to assure that “no person’s exercise of office in the church is to be subjected to the control of any other single individual.”

The General Assembly Council urges disapproval of Item 08-02 based on current GAC policy and practice.

The General Assembly Council personnel policies and procedures are all grounded in the Theology of Employment statement that was approved by the 199th General Assembly (1987). The General Assembly Council affirms that its personnel policies and procedures are fair, equitable, and appropriate for the church.

During both of the employment terminations referenced in Item 08-02, the Executive Director of the General Assembly Council (GAC) followed the current policy and practice by consulting with the Legal Services Office and the Human Resources Office prior to the decision to terminate the employment of these employees as stated in section 11.01d, Termination without Prejudice, of The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) General Assembly Council Employee Handbook. In addition, the Executive Director consulted with the chair of the GAC Executive Committee prior to the decision to terminate. In summary, the GAC already has a policy and practice in place, which provides for the concerns of the Presbytery of Newton.

[The assembly disapproved Item 08-03. See pp. 36–37.]

On Adding a Representative from the Presbyterian Men, with Voice and Vote, to the General Assembly Council—From the Presbytery of Eastern Virginia.

The Presbytery of Eastern Virginia overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to follow the guidelines of “Full Participation and Representation” as listed in the “Book of Order” and approve this overture that guarantees full participation and access to representation in the decision making of the church by adding a representative of the Presbyterian Men with voice and vote to the General Assembly Council.

Rationale

The Book of Order, under G-4.0403, Full Participation, states “Persons of all racial ethnic groups, different ages, both sexes, various disabilities ... shall be guaranteed full participation and access to representation in the decision making of the church. (G-9.0104a)”

The Book of Order, under G-9.0104a, Participation and Representation, states “Governing bodies of the church shall be responsible for implementing the church’s commitment to inclusiveness and participation as stated in G-4.0403.”

There are approximately one million male members of the church without representation on the General Assembly Council.

The two proposed reorganizations of the General Assembly Council presented at the September 2005 meeting failed to include a representative of the Presbyterian Men.

The present organization of the General Assembly Council does not include a representative of the Presbyterian Men.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 08-03

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 217th General Assembly (2006) regarding Item 08-03 with the following comment:

Item 08-03 requests that a constitutional requirement be added mandating the membership of the General Assembly Council to include a representative from Presbyterian Men. If the assembly desires to add such a requirement, it could submit to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative vote, the following proposed amendment:

Shall G-13.0202a be amended by adding the following paragraph (7) [Text to be added is shown as italic.]:

“(7) The moderator of Presbyterian Men.”

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution notes that if the changes to G-13.0202 proposed by the General Assembly Council in Item 08-08 are approved, this proposed amendment would be inconsistent with those changes, and consideration of changes to the membership of the General Assembly Council would properly be referred to the General Assembly Council as part of its inclusion of such provisions in its manual of operations.

On Limiting Staff Participation in Elected Bodies—From the Presbytery of San Joaquin.

The Presbytery of San Joaquin respectfully overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to direct that at all meetings of the PC(USA) elected bodies related to the General Assembly Council, staff, liaisons and other resource persons shall be clearly identified by nametags that include their title and shall be seated separately from but in proximity to the elected committee so that they can be called upon for comment at the committee’s discretion, but they shall not enter freely into the deliberations of the elected body. In addition, the number of staff, liaisons from other bodies, and other resource persons present at meetings of such General Assembly entities shall not exceed 25 percent of the elected membership of the entity present at the meeting.

Rationale

Our form of government is based on a representative process of elected leadership carefully balanced to include women and men, clergy and lay persons, as well as a number of other considerations (Book of Order, G-9.0104; G-4.0403). The objective is to hear from a wide spectrum of voices in the deliberative processes of the church.

Staff are invited or assigned to meetings of elected bodies in order to provide resources and information that may be critical to the effective work of the body. This is appropriately conveyed to the committee in written reports distributed well in advance of the meeting. Only minimal numbers of staff should need to be present at the meeting to answer questions from elected members. Larger numbers of staff can have undue influence over the outcomes of the meetings and interfere with proper functioning of the committees; in addition to increasing the cost of a meeting.

Currently, staff, liaisons, and other resource persons often equal or exceed the number of elected members at meetings of General Assembly Council committees and other General Assembly entities and enter freely into deliberations. Staff, liaisons, and other resource persons sometimes sit at the table with elected committee members, blurring the distinctions between the proper roles of the persons present.

Clear and reasonable limitations on staff participation in meetings of elected bodies are necessary to assure that it is the elected representatives who are making the decisions charged to the committee on which they serve.

Comment on Item 08-04—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly.

Item 08-04 seeks to restrict staff participation in meetings of GAC related committees and GAC entities. The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) advises the assembly to disapprove this overture.

The General Assembly Council (GAC)-related committees and General Assembly entities need the flexibility and already have authority to invite staff (and other resource persons) to participate at meetings and make their own logistical arrangements, to best accomplish the work of the committee. This overture would unnecessarily limit this flexibility and authority. For example, COGA (fifteen elected members), which has oversight of the Stated Clerk and seven departments of the Office of the General Assembly, would be hampered in its work if only three staff persons (25 percent of elected members) could be present at our meetings.

Further, membership of some committees specifically include staff as full voting members of the committee, e.g. General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations.

The COGA is a committee of fifteen persons, elected by the General Assembly from across the church, made up of elders and ministers who supervise the work of the Office of the General Assembly.

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 08-04

Advice and Counsel on Item 08-04—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

Item 08-04 from the Presbytery of San Joaquin is concerned with limiting staff participation.

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) advises disapproval with comment:

General Assembly Council (GAC) staff, liaisons, and resource persons bring essential knowledge, valuable skills, and crucial insight into the work of GAC bodies. Staffing meetings is an important part of their work. They are friends and co-workers with elected members within the body of Christ. Most are elders and ministers of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

The limitations proposed on seating, speech, and number placed on GAC staff, liaisons, and resource persons would be artificially restrictive and likely to detract, inhibit, and disrupt the flow and productivity of working meetings of GAC bodies.

Chairpersons of GAC bodies have authority to regulate the style, flow, participation, agenda, and arrangements for the work of their units. This would seem sufficient for the guidance of the GAC bodies.

ACREC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 08-04

Advice and Counsel on Item 08-04—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns.

Item 08-04 on limiting staff participation in elected bodies was submitted by the Presbytery of San Joaquin.

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) advises that Item 08-04 be disapproved.

Rationale

While this overture is trying to limit the number of staff providing support to committees, the presence of the staff is necessary and helpful in providing valuable information on matters before the committees. Staff are present at the meetings to contribute with their expertise, not to make decisions for the committee.

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 08-04

Advice and Counsel on Item 08-04—From the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC).

Item 08-04 calls for limiting staff participation in elected bodies.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC) advises disapproval.

Rationale

For a committee of twelve elected members, the limitation of non-committee members present to 25 percent adversely impacts the work of the committee.

- If all elected members are present for a meeting, only three non-members may be present at the meeting. In the case of ACWC, those three ‘positions’ presently include the Office of Women’s Advocacy associate and young adult intern, both who do a great deal of work at the committee’s request. Additionally, a senior administrative assistant, who serves as the meeting planner (arranging housing, transportation, meals), prepares budget reports, and records the meeting minutes, is in attendance. If even one elected member cannot attend, one of those staff people must be excluded.

- Many committees work collaboratively with other committees of the General Assembly and the General Assembly Council (GAC) by sending elected committee members as liaisons to their meetings. This collaborative work would made much more difficult, if not impossible, by the severe limitation imposed by the overture.

- The decision-making of committees is greatly enhanced by the availability of specialists and experts at face-to-face meetings. The attendance of these vital people would be made impossible by the overture.

On Directing the General Assembly Council (GAC) to Bring Its Policies for Termination into Conformity with the Form of Government—From the Presbytery of New York City.

The Presbytery of New York City respectfully overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to direct the General Assembly Council to bring its policies for the termination of any of its employees into conformity with the Form of Government (G-9.0705 and G-11.0410) and, with due safeguard of the rights of its executives to recommend terminations, that the assembly mandate that termination benefits should not be contingent upon secrecy and denial of all rights to appeal on the part of terminated employees.

Comment: The concerns are already being addressed by GAC, though the intentions are noble.

Rationale

The present personnel policies of the General Assembly Council allow its executive to terminate employees of the General Assembly Council (GAC) without rights of appeal mandated in the Book of Order for employees of official bodies of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

These policies not only deny rights of appeal, but are currently also sanctioned by the denial of all termination benefits, such as termination pay and health insurance, if and when the employee should resort to such appeal or should in any way communicate to others the causes and terms of his or her dismissal.

Such policies seem clearly to conflict with rights of appeal granted presbytery and synod employees in the Form of Government, G-9.0705.

Section G-11.0410 clearly requires that “... changes in the terms of the call or dissolution of the relationship [of a minister in any valid church calling] shall be reported to the presbytery” of which the minister is a member.

The denial of all termination benefits, in the event of an appeal, amounts to economic intimidation and cutting off of all review, in any level of the church, concerning the justice of the termination, in violation of the Presbyterian principle that “a representation of the whole should govern and determine ... every part” (G-1.0400).

Comment on Item 08-05—From the General Assembly Council.

Item 08-05: On Directing General Assembly Council (GAC) to Bring Its Policies for Termination into Conformity with the Form of Government—From the Presbytery of New York City. This overture expresses concern about the GAC’s personnel policies and practices related to changes in terms of calls and appeal processes related to termination of employment of GAC staff members.

The General Assembly Council urges the General Assembly to disapprove Item 08-05. The GAC's personnel policies do not deny appeal rights to terminated employees. The GAC's personnel policies do not entitle staff to termination benefits. In the event the GAC offers a termination agreement, that offer is made in exchange for the employee agreeing to a full legal release of any claims against the GAC. This release eliminates the need for a separate appeal that is costly and time consuming. If the employee signs the agreement, all appeals and claims are waived by the employee. If the agreement is not signed, the employee is free to pursue an appeal and any other recourse available to the employee.

In the GAC's joint comment on Item 08-01, the GAC has given assurance it will provide timely information (normally within two months) to the presbytery of membership on any changes in the terms of a minister's call during the employment. This will include informing the presbytery of membership of any termination of employment, including if a termination agreement were provided. Further, the GAC has agreed that if there is a cause for termination that may require disciplinary action on the part of the presbytery, the GAC will provide information on the cause for termination to the presbytery's committee on ministry and will cooperate in any investigation, unless prohibited by applicable law.

In the future, the GAC will allow for those internal appeals set out in the GAC Employee Handbook where the staff member is offered a termination agreement under the Termination Without Prejudice or Termination Without Cause provisions. This practice will allow such staff members to use the appeals system set out in the GAC Employee Handbook and still receive whatever benefits are offered in the termination agreement.

On Funding the Fight Against HIV/AIDS and Diseases of Poverty—From the Presbytery of Ohio Valley.

The Presbytery of Ohio Valley overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) of Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to address the world AIDS pandemic by ~~adding that concern to the annual Peacemaking Offering, giving the churches the opportunity to designate a portion of their offering~~ directing the Peacemaking Program to encourage congregations to use their 25 percent of the Peacemaking Offering and presbyteries and synods to use their portions of the Peacemaking Offering, to fight HIV/AIDS in the U.S.A. and globally, where those diseases are decimating whole populations. The funds generated will be utilized for education, prevention, care, and treatment of HIV/AIDS in the most afflicted areas of the world.

Rationale

For twenty years, the Presbyterian General Assembly has spoken with prophetic compassion to the global issue of HIV/AIDS. Our resolutions, however, have not been matched with a resolve to commit significant financial and denominational resources in the struggle for education, prevention, treatment, and cure in the worldwide struggle against HIV/AIDS.

The United Nations has declared the pandemic a “global emergence” of unprecedented proportion with HIV/AIDS incidence rising in the United States and projections by the WHO and UNAIDS that are globally 45 million new infections by 2010 and nearly 70 million deaths by 2020 if the pandemic spread continues at a current rate.

Currently 23 million children have become orphaned, and economies have been severely threatened as well as the social fabric of many nations. The United Nations states the world security is at risk as the planet faces the worst health crisis in 700 years and with 42 million people infected and more than 20 million already deceased and 16,000 new infections daily, the leaders of all the nations of the world unanimously ask faith-based organizations to join them in the battle to save human life.

To date the response of Christians including Presbyterians has been less than satisfactory particularly in comparison to our resources and other global commitments. In the face of a pandemic that threatens an entire generation in Africa and elsewhere, our church partners around the world and here at home must respond with courage and compassion. The PC(USA) contributions to eight AIDS-related ECO accounts have totaled less than $250,000. (Accounts include: AIDS Crisis Overseas, Home-Based Care Kits, Prevention, AIDS Orphans, Mother-to-Child Transmission, and mission consultants.) Staffing in our denomination to address this pandemic is limited to one part-time person. We simply must face up to our responsibility in this worldwide crisis.

Recently, the United Methodist Church established a Global Aids Fund and adopted a goal of raising 8 million dollars over the next four years. Should we not be thinking of a similar response? Should we not be encouraging our presbyteries and our congregations to take initiatives and engage in global partnerships to make the HIV/Aids issue our issue. Moneys sent by our congregations to our national offices for Tsunami Relief and Katrina Relief totaled more than 35 million dollars last year. Surely we have not told the story well enough or often enough that this is a crisis bigger than either of these.

This is a justice issue. We have long decried the plight of the poor in the underdeveloped parts of the world. These are the same people who have been given the task of dealing with the HIV/AIDS pandemic as well. It is entirely appropriate that we open up the Peacemaking Offering as a vehicle to tell this story and challenge Presbyterians to reach into their hearts and respond to all of God's children.

Questions

Q. Why utilize the Peacemaking Offering to raise money for this HIV/AIDS initiative?

A. This pandemic strikes at the very nerve of World Peace. How can we envision a world living in peace when the social fabric of many nations has been torn by the loss of an entire generation of parents and another generation of orphans is living at subsistence levels? Isn't it appropriate that Presbyterians are confronting this international public health crisis threatening global security? As we gather for worldwide communion and take our peacemaking offering, we maximize our attention to the crisis and hold ourselves more accountable for action.

Q. Won't adding this concern to the Peacemaking Offering reduce the amount of money available to programs presently being funded by that offering?

A. It would seem reasonable to expect, if this need is properly presented, the total Peacemaking Offering would be greater than previous offerings. This could mean even more for other peacemaking efforts.

Q. How will these funds be administered?

A. Exactly how the funds raised to address the HIV/AIDS crisis will be administered is a decision staff would need to address. It would seem that International Health Ministries and other area coordinators would have valuable insights to share. It might be advisable to create a Global AIDS Initiative Committee to assist in interpretation and to help in identifying and creating global partnerships for HIV/AIDS ministries.

Q. What are other denominations doing about the HIV/AIDS crisis?

A. It would seem that most of our partners are hoping it will go away. Mention has already been made of the recent decision by the United Methodist Church to establish a Global AIDS Fund in the amount of 8 million dollars. This is an opportunity for PC(USA) to demonstrate vision and leadership to other Christian denominations by recognizing how important this concern is for the future of this planet.

Q. Isn't this crisis a matter that should be addressed by our government?

A. Our government has indicated that it has a significant role to play in this crisis. However, to date the government's response has been largely lip-service. As commitments have not been realized beyond a few meager steps, we need to show our government with our dollars that the AIDS pandemic is important to us. We need to advocate to our government that they must allocate dollars and programs to properly address this crisis.

GAC (CMD) COMMENT ON ITEM 08-06

Comment on Item 08-06—From the General Assembly Council (Congregational Ministries Division).

Worldwide Ministries Division's International Health Ministries Office coordinates a growing PC(USA) response to HIV/AIDS and other diseases of poverty. As part of that response, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) currently has a U.S.-based AIDS initiative facilitator, three mission co-workers in Africa, and one U.S.-based mission co-worker who help support and interpret the efforts of our African partners and provide channels through which U.S. Presbyterians can be involved.

The PC(USA) HIV/AIDS strategy continues to evolve, based on ongoing consultation with overseas partners. The PC(USA) sponsored HIV/AIDS consultations in Africa in 2002 and 2003. Both consultations have involved significant participation by African women. In September 2004, there was a consultation of African church leaders. A “Training for Health” event will be held in the Congo in May 2006.

Through these consultations and other conversations with our partners, a consensus has emerged on culturally appropriate responses within the African church context. The resulting strategy focuses on prevention, community-based care, and behavior change. These responses primarily require educational and capacity-building activities that enhance our partner churches’ ability to respond to the HIV/AIDS pandemic.

Funding for PC(USA) HIV/AIDS initiatives has been provided by several sources. The General Assembly Council gratefully acknowledges the contribution of the Speer Trust, which has underwritten the HIV/AIDS initiative facilitator position. Other support has come through seven Extra Commitment Opportunity giving accounts that focus on areas such as orphan care, prevention, counseling, training, and community-based care.

In 2005, approximately $315,000 for HIV/AIDS ministry was received through these accounts. As the PC(USA) response to HIV/AIDS and other diseases of poverty continues to evolve and grow, we believe they will provide the channels for increased support from across the church.

The Presbyterian Peacemaking Program will highlight the HIV/AIDS pandemic as it promotes the Peacemaking Offering, encouraging congregations to use their share of the Peacemaking Offering (25 percent) to combat HIV/AIDS.

A Recommendation to Study the Status of Women in the PC(USA)

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC) recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) do the following:

1. Request ACWC to assess the status of women, in elected and staff positions, in decision-making and leadership positions in the PC(USA) at all levels through surveys and other data collection and evaluation.
2. Report progress and initial findings to the 218th General Assembly (2008) to measure the extent to which gender justice has been achieved in the church, measuring presence and acceptance of women, to get the facts on the current status of women in leadership positions in an effort to support and further the inclusion of women in leadership positions in the PC(USA), at all levels. The primary areas of this first ever such survey for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) will focus on:
 - a. The extent of women in leadership positions at all levels of the PC(USA) in elected and staff positions, in decision-making and leadership positions.
 - b. Attitudes about women in leadership—including how women in leadership positions are perceived and accepted, by both members and staff.
 - c. Describing how women in leadership positions are treated, including compensation, in comparison with male colleagues, by both members and staff.
3. Prepare a final report to the 219th General Assembly (2010) to include recommendations for action, qualitative and quantitative data describing women in the various decision-making and leadership positions, and identifying patterns of women’s participation in the church and factors influencing positively and/or negatively upon their participation.
4. Direct the GAC to provide sufficient funding and staff support to ensure the research and analysis for a complete measurement of the status of women in the PC(USA).
5. Equip all GAC staff and members to be responsive to the needs of all women as part of their continuing commitment to valuing the gifts that all people bring to the PC(USA). General Assembly Council staff and members should continue to be encouraged to reflect on and incorporate the values articulated in the “Report on Creating a Climate for Change Within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.),” approved by the 216th General Assembly (2004) (Minutes, 2004, Part I, pp. 540ff.).

Rationale

This year marks three significant anniversaries for women in ordained leadership within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). Therefore, the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC) believes this requested study to be particularly timely. There has not been a comprehensive study of the status of women within the denomination. The ACWC is charged with the responsibility of assisting the church to live out its commitment to justice for women by "monitor[ing] and evaluat[ing] policies, procedures, programs, and resources regarding the way in which they impact the status and position of women in the church, ... and advocate[ing] for full inclusiveness and equity in all areas of the life and work of the church in society" (Minutes, 1994, Part I, p. 262)

This survey will be a way for the committee to carry out its mandate, provided on its creation by the 205th General Assembly (1993), to ensure advocacy and monitoring of justice for women throughout the church. Describing the qualitative and quantitative realities of women leaders in all levels of the church, the report will set the context of ACWC's work for years to come.

It is especially important to know the extent to which the church is responding to the following two sections of the Book of Order:

Section G-40403 states that "the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) shall give full expression to the rich diversity within its membership and shall provide means which will assure a greater inclusiveness leading to wholeness in its emerging life. Persons of all racial ethnic groups, different ages, both sexes ... shall be guaranteed full participation and access to representation in the decision making of the church."

Section G-9.0104a states that "governing bodies of the church shall be responsible for implementing the church's commitment to inclusiveness and participation as stated in G-4.0403. All governing bodies shall work to become more open and inclusive and shall pursue affirmative action hiring procedures aiming at correcting patterns of discrimination on the basis of the categories listed in G-4.0403."

This study will reaffirm past General Assemblies' commitments to the inclusion of women in decision-making and leadership in all levels of the church and their equitable treatment. It will also show how far we have come and how far we have left to go in fully realizing and reflecting that "In sovereign love God created the world good and makes everyone equally in God's image, male and female, of every race and people, to live as one community" (The Book of Confessions, A Brief Statement of Faith, 10.3, lines 29–32).

The reports will show areas for celebration. It is also expected to identify specific areas needing more attention, including identifying specific barriers that need to be addressed to bring about the full acceptance and equitable treatment of women in the PC(USA)'s leadership. The final report will contain recommendations for action.

The value of "including the rich diversity of God's people in the leadership" of the PC(USA) at all levels was the subject of (2005) "Open Letter to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) regarding "Creating A Climate for Change Within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)." The signers included the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly and the Executive Director of the General Assembly Council. This survey will further the acceptance and support of women in the decision-making and leadership positions of the PC(USA).

Advice and Counsel on Item 08-07—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns.

A recommendation to study the status of women calls for a comprehensive study on the status of women in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). This recommendation is from the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC).

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns advises that the recommendation to study the status of women in the PC(USA) be approved.

Rationale

A comprehensive study on the status of women that incorporates an examination of the status of women of color will help the church to identify the ways in which women of color are impacted by both systemic racism and gender bias, and will better equip the PC(USA) to respond to the challenge of the Report from the Women of Color Consultation move towards the vision of the PC(USA) to become a truly diverse and inclusive community of faith. (See “Joint Resolution from ACWC and ACREC Regarding the Women of Color Consultation Report and Recommendations,” Item 08-12.)

Report of the Governance Task Force

A Vision for Governance Understanding the Proposed Structure for the General Assembly Council

1. The General Assembly Council recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) approve the following new structure for the General Assembly Council and the enabling changes to the Book of Order, Organization for Mission, and the GAC Manual of Operations, contingent upon approval by the presbyteries of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.):

a. General Assembly Council Structure

Size of General Assembly Council	48 total members 39 voting members: 36 elected voting members 3 ex-officio voting members: current Moderator of the General Assembly immediate past Moderator of the General Assembly current Moderator of the Churchwide Coordinating Team of Presbyterian Women 7 corresponding non-voting members 2 ecumenical advisory non-voting members
Composition of the 36 elected voting members	6 General Assembly commissioners (2 from current assembly, 2 each from the two immediate past assemblies) 4 young adults (ages 18–35) 3 [presbytery executives] [ordained presbytery staff] 2 [synod executives] [synod ordained staff] 21 from recommendations of presbyteries
Corresponding members (non-voting)	7 total: Representative from the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) Mandated by the Book of Order : Stated Clerk of the General Assembly General Assembly Council Executive Director Mandated by the Manual of Operations : Chairperson of Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy Chairperson of Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns Chairperson of Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns Representative from Committee on Theological Education
Ecumenical advisory members (non-voting)	2 total, in accordance with the Book of Order , G-13-0202b(1)
Term of Office	6 years, non-renewable

Nomination process	The General Assembly Nominating Committee (GANC) will place in nomination 21 members from among those recommended by presbyteries, and will place in nomination 4 young adults, 3 executive presbyters, and 2 synod executives from at-large. From among these 31 members, each synod will have at least one GAC member who holds membership within their bounds. The GANC will also place in nomination 6 General Assembly commissioners from the roster of the General Assembly (2 from the current assembly and 2 each from the two immediate past assemblies), giving preference to those who have demonstrated leadership at an assembly and are willing to serve six years on the General Assembly Council.
Diversity provision	Book of Order G-4.0403, G-9.0104, [G-9.0105a (6),] G-13.0111, G-13.0202d: 1/3 ministers of the Word and Sacrament 1/3 laymen 1/3 laywomen 20 percent racial ethnic persons
Committee structure	5 committees total: 4 goal area committees: Justice and Compassion, Evangelism and Witness, Spirituality and Discipleship, Leadership and Vocation 1 support committee: includes such functions as stewardship, budgeting, mission funding, information services, audit, and so forth
Committee assignment	7 elected members on each goal area committee and 8 on the support committee. Corresponding and ecumenical members free to participate in any committee with voice but not vote. Current GA Moderator, GAC chairperson and GAC vice-chairperson will not serve on a committee.
Plenary and committee responsibilities	Emphasis on the vision of the whole church's mission and ministry. Quality time spent in worship, education, and small group discernment to explore urgent concerns facing the larger church. Consent agendas to facilitate efficient decision-making and affirm the programmatic recommendations and priority goal work of the committees.
Frequency of meetings	3 meetings annually during General Assembly years 2 meetings annually during non-assembly years, one of which will be an annual joint meeting with presbytery and synod executives
Size of Executive Committee	10 total: GAC Chairperson GAC Vice Chairperson Chairpersons of goal area committees (4) Chairperson of the support committee 2 at-large members GAC Executive Director (non-voting)
Role of Executive Committee	Responsible for the functions of the personnel committee, oversight of GAC communication strategy, and current duties outlined in the Book of Order and the GAC Manual of Operations (including cultivating and promoting spiritual welfare, planning for meetings, acting on behalf of the council on matters requiring immediate actions between meetings, and nominating voting members of the GAC nominating committee).
Roles and responsibilities of GAC members	To be faithful and accountable in the following ways: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● Active involvement in a congregation and commitment to a personal discipline of spiritual growth ● Knowledge of and commitment to the mission, goals, and policies of the GAC ● Openness to new vision and direction emerging within the life of the church ● Informed and honest participation in all GAC meetings ● Faithful discipleship regarding stewardship, confidentiality, and leadership roles ● Positive interpretation of the work of the GAC

Roles and responsibilities of GAC staff	To support GAC members by: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● providing sufficient information to facilitate the decision-making of the council ● implementing the decisions and actions of the council It is the responsibility of the staff to make recommendations to the council on topics for consideration and on resolution of topics. Once the council has been provided the necessary information and recommendations, the deliberations of the matter-at-hand are the responsibility of the members of the council. Members of the Staff Leadership Team have the right of voice in all committee and plenary meetings of the council.
GAC staff structure	Staff structure will be developed upon the approval of the elected structure with the following proposed schedule: April 2006 council meeting: preliminary structure June 2006 General Assembly: confirmation of new GAC Executive Director Fall 2006: executive director evaluation of structure February 2007 council meeting: final recommendation of structure
Transition plans	The transition to the 36-elected member council can be accomplished by the 218th General Assembly (2008), with provisions allowing current council members to complete all the service for which they are currently eligible.
Financial implications	The proposed structure will result in a net cost increase of less than $25,000 during a biennial period. The meeting costs of a smaller council will result in a savings, which will be slightly more than offset by the cost of an annual meeting with presbytery and synod executives.
Book of Order, Manual of Operations, and Organization for Mission changes	The executive committee will/may recommend Book of Order changes on Saturday of the GAC meeting (Feb. 11, 2006) to implement this proposed new structure. Manual of Operations and Organization for Mission changes will be submitted at a future GAC meeting and for approval by the 218th General Assembly (2008).

Background

Nehemiah was one of the Bible’s great leaders. He exhibited three abilities that every leader needs to develop and demonstrate.

First, a leader needs discernment to assess accurately the current condition of the organization, i.e. “This is where we are now.” When Nehemiah looked at his country, he saw people on the verge of losing their identity. Because Jerusalem was unprotected and vulnerable to attack, its inhabitants sought security in small villages outside the city. Gradually they melted into these foreign cultures, losing their unique language, culture, and religion.

Nehemiah exercised discernment to assess the situation correctly. He saw beyond the obvious—that the Jews were drifting geographically—to the more subtle fact that they were drifting spiritually.

Second, a leader needs the vision and understanding to add, “And this is where we need to go.” Nehemiah realized what Jerusalem needed if it hoped to be the city God intended. Without direction, the situation would inevitably worsen, and the nation would lose its grip on what spiritual identity it could salvage.

Visionary leaders know the status quo won’t last forever; most static organizations are actually in the first stages of decline. So leaders look ahead. They envision change. Nehemiah pictured his nation as it ought to be—strong and sure of its identity.

Third, a good leader knows how to bring together the people and resources needed to move the organization from where it is to where it needs to be. Nehemiah was a master at this mobilization. He gathered together hundreds of workers and inspired them to work “with all their heart” (Neh. 4:6). They would not give up their goal, even in the face of opposition.

Lead is an active verb. A leader is able to say, “Here’s how we get to where we want to go,” and people follow.

The abilities of a leader in Nehemiah’s time are the same for us today. As those of us called to leadership in the church know, how we manage the process of getting things done through other people is an important component of leadership. To accomplish our goals we need to have the ability to bring together the necessary people and resources with an effective structure based on a solid theological foundation.

The vision for governance detailed in the following pages will provide the effective, theologically grounded structure to help us accomplish our goals.

Theological Foundation

So if anyone is in Christ, there is a new creation: everything old has passed away; see, everything has become new (2 Cor. 5:17).

In our reflections together, the Governance Task Force has been inspired by fresh winds of the Spirit that God is sending within our life as a denomination. We believe that a church that is reformed and continually being reformed by the providence of God (Book of Order, G-2.0200) needs to reshape structure and process to respond to the contemporary needs of a changing world. In this third millennium, governance systems have become leaner and more flexible, collegial, and focused on empowering all constituencies. We believe that the part of the body of Christ called the General Assembly Council needs to become a new creation in the ways we implement and interpret the vision of the General Assembly. The proposals in this report reflect our sense of the Spirit's call to reshape our life together.

The task force has been guided in its reflection, discussion, and work by the following affirmations. They are founded on the witness of the Bible and the expositions of our Reformed tradition, including the Book of Order and The Book of Confessions.

We believe Jesus Christ is the head of the church and the Lord of the conscience, and that whenever we gather we are wholly dependent on the mercy of God to guide us as individuals and as a community.

We believe baptism is an act of grace initiated by the community of Christ, and a foundation for a life of Christian discipleship. Baptism is our entrance to the Christian community and our call to service in the church and in the world. By its very nature it obligates the individual to the community.

We believe the connectional polity of our denomination provides witness to the manifestation of the Spirit of Christ that the strong in faith may need to submit individual freedoms to the conscience of the community. In our governance system, the responsibility of the individual and the responsibility of the community are held in tension; neither is elevated. The individual responsibility to discern the will of God is tested in the life of the community.

In a church that is faithful and diverse, we propose a General Assembly Council (GAC) structure that can build up the body of Christ with a unifying vision, helping us to better discern the mind of Christ. We have endeavored to strengthen our relationships within the body of Christ by offering a connecting network between the GAC and the middle governing bodies of the church—all to the glory of God!

Rationale

The BoardSource self-assessment the General Assembly Council (GAC) completed in January 2003 clearly showed the need for the council to be closer to congregations, presbyteries, and synods, and to look for ways to better communicate to them. It also indicated the large size of the council was a concern, and that we needed to look at our size and the relationship between elected and staff roles as together we guide and best support the mission of the church. Taking all of this into consideration, in February 2004 the Mission Work Plan called for us to evaluate, develop, and propose a structure of the GAC (elected and national staff) that will strengthen connectedness with presbyteries and synods.

The current structure of the GAC has served us faithfully and well in an era where General Assemblies met annually, terms of office began and ended each year during an assembly, and the work of the staff was structured within divisions. But the winds of the Spirit are leading us in a new direction:

1. Biennial assemblies have changed terms of office and altered the functions of the GAC over a two-year period.
2. Because the Mission Work Plan has built a new structure around four goal areas that do not fit naturally into the existing GAC structure, it is important to re-envision a GAC governance structure that supports this new reality.
3. Strengthening connectedness with presbyteries and synods requires enhancements to our ability to communicate and our capacity to act quickly as a leaner, more efficient entity.
4. Because presbyteries and synods are in close touch with the mission needs of the church and are creating new governance patterns and structures that are more fluid, flexible, and effective, we believe the GAC can learn from these middle governing bodies. A smaller council and a commitment to meet annually with presbytery and synod executives will encourage communication and mutual learning to happen.

GANC COMMENT ON ITEM 08-08

Comment on Item 08-08—From the General Assembly Nominating Committee.

In anticipation of the General Assembly's approval of the General Assembly Council structural changes, the General Assembly Council is proposing changes to G-13.0107. It is our understanding that the General Assembly Council's purpose for requesting the proposed amended language is solely to eliminate, from its membership, synod positions on the General Assembly Council. However, their specific language of the proposed rewording of G-13.0107 raises several concerns from the perspective of the General Assembly Nominating Committee.

The phrase "Each synod will have a representative, nominated by the synod ..." can be interpreted to mean that synods directly nominate persons to serve on each permanent committee. This is a significant change from the current process of synods proposing several persons from within their bounds who will be nominated by a church-wide process through the General Assembly Nominating Committee. If synods directly nominate one person rather than providing several names to the General Assembly Nominating Committee, the pool of potential nominees is reduced limiting the possibility of ensuring the desired diversity of committee membership as required in G-4.0403. Furthermore, both the language and the implied process suggest that these persons' primary identification is with the synod that nominated them rather than the group to which they are elected.

It is the considered opinion of the General Assembly Nominating Committee that the objective of this proposed amendment would best be met by simply striking the phrase "on the General Assembly Council" from the original language of G-13.0107.

GACOR COMMENT ON ITEM 08-08

Comment on Item 08-08—From the General Assembly Committee on Representation.

The General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR) reviewed the proposed changes to the structure of the General Assembly Council (GAC) during its meeting in May 2006. The GACOR is commenting in its role to "advise the governing bodies with respect to their membership ... in implementing the principles of participation and inclusiveness to ensure fair and effective representation in the decision making of the church" (Book of Order, G-9.0105(b)). The GACOR advises the 217th General Assembly (2006) to approve the proposed structure with two changes.

1. Composition of the thirty-six elected voting members: GACOR advises a change in language from "synod executives" to "ordained synod staff" and from "presbytery executives" to "ordained presbytery staff."

The concern of GACOR is such that using language allowing only synod and presbytery executives to participate on GAC narrows the pool of qualified potential candidates from those categories. In looking at the potential pool of synod executives, one recognizes a limited number of racial ethnic persons that would be eligible for participation on GAC.

2. The GACOR has noted the absence of provisions for persons with disabilities to serve on GAC. The committee would like to draw attention to G-9.0105a(6) and advises that the proposed structure includes provision for representation and full participation of persons with disabilities. By doing so the PC(USA) enhances the opportunity for greater diversity within the composition of the GAC.

2. The General Assembly Council recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) direct the Stated Clerk to send the following amendments to the Book of Order to presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

a. Shall G-9.0703 "General Assembly Agency Staff" be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

~~"General Assembly agencies shall elect, with the concurrence of the General Assembly Council, an executive or executives, subject, however, to confirmation by the General Assembly. Other administrative staff positions for General Assembly agencies may be authorized by those agencies with concurrence of the General Assembly Council."~~

b. Shall G-13.0107 “Synod Participation” be stricken and new text inserted as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

~~“Each synod shall have part in the General Assembly’s mission structure through the membership of at least one elder or minister from each synod, proposed for nomination by the synod after consultation with the General Assembly Nominating Committee, and elected by the General Assembly, on the General Assembly Council, and on each permanent committee of the General Assembly. The General Assembly Nominating Committee shall coordinate this process, keeping in mind the need for synod representatives and members-at-large, and seeing that special attention is given to the principles of participation and representation expressed in G-9.0104, G-13.0111, and G-13.0202.”~~

“Each synod will have a representative, nominated by the synods, on each permanent committee of the General Assembly. The General Assembly Nominating Committee will coordinate this process, keeping in mind the need for synod representatives and members-at-large, and seeing that special attention is given to the principles of participation and representation expressed in G-4.0403, G-9.0104, G-13.0111, and G-13.0202.”

c. Shall G-13.0200 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

~~“G-13.0200 2. General Assembly Council~~

~~“G-13.0201 Responsibilities~~

The General Assembly shall create an Assembly Council which shall have the following responsibilities:

~~“a. to cultivate and promote the spiritual welfare of the whole church;~~

~~“b. to institute and coordinate a churchwide plan for to provide resources to support equal employment opportunity and affirmative action for members of racial ethnic groups, for women, for various age groups, for persons regardless of marital condition (married, single, widowed, or divorced), and for persons with disabilities;~~

~~“c. to develop and engage in churchwide planning to propose, for General Assembly approval determination, the mission directions, goals, objectives, and priorities of the church General Assembly Council, doing so by taking into account the mission work being done by sessions, presbyteries, and synods, and to propose for General Assembly approval an accompanying budget that will implement the mission work plan of the General Assembly Council;~~

~~“d. to coordinate the work of General Assembly agencies and bodies, synods and presbyteries, in light of these mission directions, goals, objectives, and priorities;~~

~~“e. to review the work of General Assembly agencies and bodies in light of General Assembly mission directions, goals, objectives, and priorities;~~

~~“f. to prepare and submit a comprehensive budget to the General Assembly in accordance with the provisions of G-9.0404b;~~

~~“g. to correspond or consult with presbyteries, synods, and their councils in matters relating to churchwide planning, budget development, and the coordination of the work of the church;~~

~~“h. to act, in matters of administrative staff, with synod councils and General Assembly agencies, as provided in G-9.0701, G-9.0702, and G-9.0703;~~

~~“i. to consult with the synods with regard to equitable compensation, personnel policies, and fair employment practices;~~

~~“j. [This section was stricken by action of the 206th General Assembly (1994).]~~

~~“k. d. to act in those specific matters assigned to the General Assembly Council by the General Assembly or this Constitution, acting always according to previously enacted General Assembly policies, reporting fully to each subsequent General Assembly its actions;~~

~~“l e. to perform such additional responsibilities and duties as may be assigned by the General Assembly.”~~

“G.13.0202 Membership

~~“The membership, terms of office, and officers of the General Assembly Council shall be approved by the General Assembly as provided for in the Manual of Operations of the General Assembly Council, governed by Articles 5.1, 5.2, and 5.3 of the Articles of Agreement until the end of the respective applicability periods specified in those Articles, at which times the following provisions shall commence taking effect automatically, in stages or phases consistent with the provisions of such Articles:~~

“Voting Members

~~“a. The General Assembly Council shall consist of the following voting members, each of whom shall be an active member of a congregation, or a continuing member of a presbytery, of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.):~~

~~“(2) One (1) member proposed for nomination by each synod, after consultation with the General Assembly Nominating Committee in order to ensure inclusiveness and needed skills, elected by the General Assembly for a four-year term and eligible for one additional term. No member may serve more than two terms, full or partial.~~

~~“(3) One (1) member proposed for nomination by each of those presbyteries constituting the number of presbyteries established in the Manual of Operations of the General Assembly Council as approved by the General Assembly, after consultation with the General Assembly Nominating Committee in order to ensure inclusiveness and needed skills, elected by the General Assembly for a four-year term and eligible for one additional term. No member may serve more than two terms, full or partial. Presbyteries chosen to propose nominations will be selected on a rotation system to be established by the General Assembly Nominating Committee.~~

~~“(4) The number of members at large constituting the members at large established in the Manual of Operations of the General Assembly Council as approved by the General Assembly nominated by the General Assembly Nominating Committee, elected by the General Assembly for a four-year term, and eligible for one additional term. No member may serve more than two terms, full or partial.~~

~~“(5) Two (2) youth/young adult members, younger than twenty-six years of age when elected, nominated by the General Assembly Nominating Committee for a four-year term and eligible for an additional term. No member may serve more than two terms, full or partial.~~

“Advisory Members

~~“b. In addition to the voting members, the General Assembly Council shall include the following advisory members, who shall have the privilege of the floor but not the right to vote:~~

~~“(1) Four (4) Ecumenical Advisory Members from other churches in the United States and from partner churches in other countries, nominated by the General Assembly Nominating Committee on recommendation of the coordinating body for ecumenical involvement and elected by the General Assembly for a two-year term, with eligibility for one additional two-year term. However, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the General Assembly Council, may, from time to time, increase or decrease the number of Ecumenical Advisory Members.~~

“Corresponding Members

~~“c. The Stated Clerk of the General Assembly and the Executive Director of the General Assembly Council shall be corresponding members of the General Assembly Council and have the right to speak but not vote; and the General Assembly Council may designate other persons to function in the same manner.~~

“Nominating Committee of General Assembly

~~“d. In the nominating process, the General Assembly Nominating Committee shall consult with the General Assembly Council to identify needed skills and shall provide for diversity and inclusiveness in accordance with G-4.0403. It will maintain a goal of at least twenty percent racial ethnic membership for the General Assembly Council.~~

It will also follow the provisions of G-9.0104, G-9.0105, and G-13.0111 and shall ensure that, exclusive of the Moderator and predecessor Moderator(s), one third of the members are ministers of the Word and Sacrament (both women and men), one third laymen, and one third laywomen. The committee will also provide that members be nominated in such a manner as to provide ~~two~~ three classes of approximately equal size. Any vacancy occurring during a term shall be filled pursuant to General Assembly policies.

~~“Chair, Vice Chair, Recording Secretary~~

~~“e. The General Assembly Council shall elect annually its chair and vice chair from among its voting members. The Stated Clerk of the General Assembly shall be the Recording Secretary of the General Assembly Council.~~

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 08-08

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 217th General Assembly (2006) with the following comments regarding Item 08-08.

Rather than address these amendments in the order they are presented in the Book of Order, these comments first address the proposals that would amend the function of the General Assembly Council, and then address those that would amend current provisions regarding its structure and composition, and the composition of other committees of the General Assembly.

1. Proposed amendment to G-13.0201: This proposal would significantly change the role and responsibilities of the General Assembly Council. Specifically, the proposed amendment would remove from the General Assembly Council essentially all oversight and coordination responsibilities, without providing assignment of those responsibilities elsewhere. While the assembly is free to approve these changes, it should consider whether such changes are consistent with G-9.0901 (“Within this Constitution, it has been assumed that the governing bodies beyond the session will delegate particular aspects of their task to councils, commissions, and committees. The references made to such agencies are for clarification of organizing for mission, of establishing offices, and of administering the program of the church. ...”)

2. Proposed amendments to G-9.0703: The proposed revision of this section is consistent with the revisions proposed to G-13.0201, and its consideration should be governed by the same considerations described above with respect to G-13.0201.

3. Proposed amendments to G-13.0202: The proposed revision of this section would remove constitutional requirements that govern the composition of the General Assembly Council, and would move those requirements to the General Assembly Council’s Manual of Operations. This Manual of Operations is approved by the General Assembly, but does not require the concurrence of a majority of presbyteries.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution notes one minor inconsistency in the revised language. While the amendment removes the constitutional requirement that the Moderator and predecessor Moderator(s) would automatically be members of the General Assembly Council (although the manual may, but is not required to preserve that requirement), the remaining paragraph concerning the General Assembly Nominating Committee implies their automatic membership. Accordingly, if the assembly approves the recommend changes, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that the proposed paragraph be amended from the proposal as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“In the nominating process, the General Assembly Nominating Committee shall consult with the General Assembly Council to identify needed skills and shall provide for diversity and inclusiveness in accordance with G-4.0403. It will maintain a goal of at least twenty percent racial ethnic membership for the General Assembly Council. It will also follow the provisions of G-9.0104, G-9.0105, and G-13.0111 and shall ensure that, exclusive of ~~the~~ any Moderator and predecessor Moderator(s), one third of the members are ministers of the Word and Sacrament (both women and men), one third laymen, and one third laywomen. The committee will also provide that members be nominated in such a manner as to provide three classes of approximately equal size. Any vacancy occurring during a term shall be filled pursuant to General Assembly policies.”

4. Proposed amendments to G-13.0107: The proposed revision of this section should be assessed to determine whether all permanent committees of the General Assembly require representation from each synod. The term “permanent committees” is not specifically defined by the provision, but presumably would include all committees whose membership is not otherwise defined by Book of Order. The assembly should consider whether the size of permanent committees should be defined by the mission of the committee rather than a formalistic approach. (Section G-9.0402a: “Mission determines the form of structure and administration. All structures should enable the church to give effective witness to the Lordship of Christ in the contemporary world.”)

If the 217th General Assembly (2006) agrees with the restructuring of membership being proposed and wishes to address these concerns, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution suggests the following alternative resolution be presented to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative vote:

- a. Shall G-13.0107 be stricken.
- b. Shall G-13.0108 be amended as follows: [Text to be added is shown as italic.]

“The General Assembly shall establish a permanent Committee on Representation as required by G-9.0105, which shall advise the General Assembly Nominating Committee of any need for nominations in particular categories needing increased representation. The Committee on Representation shall report to each meeting of the General Assembly (other than special or adjourned meetings) regarding progress toward fair representation of the categories of persons listed in G-4.0403. The committee shall consist of members equal in number to the synods of the church, each member resident in a different synod, and members distributed so that there are one third ministers (both women and men), one third laymen, and one third laywomen.”

- c. Add to the proposed revision to G-13.0202 as proposed by this Item the following text:

“The membership, terms of office, and officers of the General Assembly Council shall be approved by the General Assembly as provided for in the manual of operations of the General Assembly Council. The Council shall include members from each of the synods of the church.” [Remaining text as proposed by Item 08-08.]

3. The General Assembly Council recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) approve the following resolution pertaining to the Organization for Mission:

Resolved*, in order to accomplish the transition to its new governance structure, the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) hereby grants the General Assembly Council of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) the authority to make changes in the following listed provisions of the Organization for Mission of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and to implement those changed provisions during the period from June 23, 2006 (conclusion of the 217th General Assembly) to June 21, 2008 (opening of the 218th General Assembly). All such changes will be subject to review by and the confirmation of the 218th General Assembly (2008) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.):

Appendix A: Financial Issues

Rationale

From 2006 to 2008, the General Assembly Council (GAC) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) anticipates substantial changes in its structure and work. These changes result from the reports of the GAC Governance Task Force, the GAC 2007–08 Mission Work Plan Team Task Force, and the GAC Mission Funding Task Force. In addition, a new GAC Executive Director will begin service in 2006. The above resolution will provide the GAC with the flexibility to live into its new structure and work and still ensure the authority of the General Assembly through its review by the 218th General Assembly (2008).

4. The General Assembly Council recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) approve the following changes to the General Assembly Council Manual of Operations:

“I. Introduction

“A. According to the Book of Order (G-13.0201), the General Assembly Council, as an agent of the General Assembly, implements policies established by the General Assembly, coordinates the work of the Ministries Divisions and other General Assembly agencies in light of General Assembly mission directions, goals, objectives, and priorities; works in partnership with synods and presbyteries; and develops and proposes a comprehensive budget to the General Assembly. Members of the council are elected by the General Assembly and are representatives of synods, presbyteries, and the church at-large. (Organization for Mission, Section I., History of the Structure for Mission of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.))

“The Book of Order also provides that ‘each governing body above the session shall, in consultation with the governing body above and below it, develop a manual of administrative operations’ (G-9.0405), and that

“The council shall develop, in consultation with the synods, a manual of operations that shall include design for administrative staff and provisions for size, and for specific representation of council membership, providing for diversity and inclusiveness. (G-9.0104) The manual shall be approved by the General Assembly. (Book of Order, G-13.0203)

“The Manual of Operations shall be in compliance with the Book of Order, the General Assembly Deliverances, the Organization for Mission, and the Standing Rules of the General Assembly.

“The General Assembly Council may change those appendixes to the Manual of Operations that are within its venue following a first reading at the council’s opening plenary session and adoption at the second plenary session. The General Assembly Council Executive Committee shall submit a written report of changes to the appendixes to the next General Assembly through its appropriate committee. See Appendix __ for the Process and Procedure for Submitting Changes to the GAC Manual of Operations. [Note: New appendix is being submitted in an information report to the General Assembly: Item 08-Info, A. “A. In the nominating process, the General Assembly Nominating Committee shall consult with the General Assembly Council to identify needed skills and shall provide for diversity and inclusiveness in accordance with G-4.0403. It will maintain a goal of at least 20 percent racial ethnic membership for the General Assembly Council. It will also follow the provisions of G-9.0104, G-9.0105, and G-13.0111 and shall ensure that, exclusive of the Moderator and predecessor Moderator(s), one third of the members are ministers of the Word and Sacrament (both women and men), one third laymen, and one third laywomen. The committee will also provide that members be nominated in such a manner as to provide ~~two~~ three classes of approximately equal size. Any vacancy occurring during a term shall be filled pursuant to General Assembly policies. (Book of Order, G-13.0202) Patterns are established to ensure that elected bodies represent the wealth of diverse gifts found in the church and to provide a means to share responsibilities and decision making. The General Assembly Nominating Committee provides for diversity and inclusiveness in the council’s membership. The General Assembly Committee on Representation monitors their work as well as the appointment of committees and task forces by the council.

“B. The General Assembly Council shall consist of the following voting members, each of whom shall be an active member of a congregation or a continuing member of a presbytery of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.):¹

“2. The Moderator of the Churchwide Coordinating Team of Presbyterian Women.

“3. Six (6) General Assembly commissioners, two from the current General Assembly and two each from the two immediate past assemblies. The six (6) General Assembly commissioner members shall be nominated by the General Assembly Nominating Committee and elected by the General Assembly for one six-year term. In its nomination of the six (6) General Assembly commissioner members, the General Assembly Nominating Committee will give preference to those commissioners who have demonstrated leadership at an assembly and who are willing to serve six (6) years on the council. The 218th General Assembly (2008) will begin the process of electing General Assembly commissioner members to the council.² Beginning with the 219th General Assembly (2010), each General Assembly will elect two (2) commissioner members to the council from among that General Assembly’s own members.

“4. Four (4) youth/young adult members (eighteen (18) to thirty-five (35) years of age when elected). The four (4) youth/young adult members shall be nominated by the General Assembly Nominating Committee and elected by the General Assembly for one six-year term.

“5. Three (3) executive presbyters. The three (3) executive presbyters shall be nominated by the General Assembly Nominating Committee and elected by the General Assembly for one six-year term.

“6. Two (2) synod executives. The two (2) synod executives shall be nominated by the General Assembly Nominating Committee and elected by the General Assembly for one six-year term.

“7. Twenty-one (21) members nominated by presbyteries.³ The twenty-one (21) members nominated by presbyteries shall be elected as follows: Presbyteries chosen to propose nominations will be selected on a rotation system established by the General Assembly Nominating Committee. The General Assembly Nominating Committee will place in nomination those proposed members nominated by the twenty-one (21) presbyteries. The General Assembly elects for one six-year term. In the nomination process of the twenty-one (21) members nominated by presbyteries, the General Assembly Nominating Committee shall consult with the presbyteries to provide for diversity and inclusiveness and to note those needed skills as identified by the General Assembly Council.

“From among the twenty-one (21) presbytery-nominated members, the two (2) synod executive members, the three (3) executive presbyter members, and the four (4) youth/young adult members, the General Assembly Nominating Committee shall ensure each synod has at least one council member from within the synod’s bounds.

“C. In addition to the voting members, the General Assembly Council shall include the following members who shall have the right to speak but not the right to vote:

“1. Two (2) ecumenical advisory members shall be corresponding members of the General Assembly Council. The two (2) ecumenical advisory members shall be from other churches in the United States or from partner churches in other countries. The two (2) ecumenical advisory members shall be nominated by the General Assembly Nominating Committee, on recommendation of the coordinating body for ecumenical involvement, and elected by the General Assembly for one six-year term.

“2. The Stated Clerk of the General Assembly and the Executive Director of the General Assembly Council shall be corresponding members of the General Assembly Council.

“3. The chairpersons of the following committees shall be corresponding members of the General Assembly Council:

“a. Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy

“b. Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns

“c. Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns

“4. A representative selected by the Committee on Theological Education from among its members shall be a corresponding member of the General Assembly Council.

Endnotes

1. If the proposed changes to G-13.0202 of the Book of Order are approved by the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and a majority of the presbyteries (June 22, 2007), then the General Assembly Nominating Committee shall, in consultation with the General Assembly Council, design and implement a transition system that brings into effect in a reasonable manner and time the new composition of the General Assembly Council. In doing so, the General Assembly Nominating Committee shall consider the terms of those General Assembly Council members then in service, staggered terms, and the like.

2. The 218th General Assembly (2008) will:

- a. elect two (2) commissioner members from the 216th General Assembly (2004); each of these two (2) commissioner members will be elected to one two-year term on the council.
- b. elect two (2) commissioner members from the 217th General Assembly (2006); each of these two (2) commissioner members will be elected to one four-year term on the council.
- c. elect two (2) commissioner members from the 218th General Assembly (2008); each of these two (2) commissioner members will be elected to one six-year term on the council.

This process will establish staggered terms for the commissioner members elected to the council.

3. The change from fifty (50) presbytery representatives to twenty-one (21) presbytery representatives shall take effect with the approval of the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), whether or not the changes to G-13.0202 of the Book of Order are approved.

~~4. In order to facilitate compliance with the Book of Order, G 4.0403 and G-13.0202d, and for exceptional special needs of the General Assembly Council, up to fifteen new at large slots be created to be filled at the rate of not more than five per year for three years as may be required to ensure such compliance. Item 08-10

On the Elimination of Administration Costs on Restricted Mission Gifts—From the Presbytery of Baltimore.

The Presbytery of Baltimore overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to eliminate the administrative surcharge recently imposed on restricted mission giving so that all moneys submitted to the General Assembly for distribution to specific mission programs are forwarded to the specific mission programs without the withholding of an administrative cost.

In place of the above recommendation, the assembly approved the following alternate resolution:

That the 217th General Assembly

1. instruct the General Assembly Council (GAC) to assist congregations in communicating to their membership the reality of changed patterns in unrestricted giving and the resulting cost implications of administering restricted funds, and

2. implore the GAC and the Mission Funding Task Force earnestly to seek alternative ways of budgeting in order to deal with this changing reality.

[Assembly Action: (2006): $0; (2007): $0; (2008): $0]

Rationale

It is a fundamental doctrine of our denomination that, based on Christ's message, we go and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit. We strive to fulfill this great commission by serving others who are in need or who have not yet received the Word of God.

The mission programs of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) are best served through General Assembly mission giving. The mission funds provided by individual churches to individual mission projects are also dedicated to the fulfillment of Christ's great commission. They allow direct communication between congregations and workers in the mission field, thereby creating a more meaningful association between the congregation and the mission program that is being supported. It is important that we keep faith with donors by forwarding 100 percent of their giving to the intended recipients.

Comment on Item 08-10—From the General Assembly Council.

Item 08-10 calls for the elimination of a recently imposed administrative fee on restricted mission giving.

The General Assembly Council strongly urges disapproval of this overture. The General Assembly Council reluctantly agreed to impose a 5 percent administrative fee due to a continual reduction in shared mission giving and reduced revenue from endowments.

Most of the General Assembly Council administrative costs are paid out of unrestricted funds. This means that mission and ministry supported by restricted funds do not fully carry their own costs. As more and more funding for work at the General Assembly level shifts to designated or restricted form, the mission and ministry covered by unrestricted funds are penalized as their share of unrestricted funds decreases. The General Assembly Council approved the administrative fee to more equitably share the burden of administrative costs.

While the administrative fee system is referred to as a 5 percent fee, the actual impact is less than 5 percent. The calculation of the administrative fee takes into consideration administrative costs already covered by restricted funded mission and ministry, and in the case of Presbyterian Disaster Assistance the maximum amount of potential administrative fees is capped so that an extraordinary high level of disaster assistance giving will not result in a windfall of excess administrative fees.

The proposal to eliminate the administrative fee would reduce unrestricted income to the General Assembly Council by $800,000. The General Assembly Council has already made substantial reductions in costs and has had to reduce the size of the workforce in meaningful ways. The effects of this overture would require additional lay-offs and work stoppage.

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) receive this report and endorse ACREC’s recommendations to the General Assembly entities:

- 1. Commend the General Assembly entities for their participation and cooperation in the consultation process and look forward to continued commitment to the goals of increasing diversity and inclusivity for the PC(USA).
- 2. Recommend the continued development and implementation of cultural proficiency and other strategies for change.
- 3. Recommend the General Assembly entities work together to develop a strong national recruitment network that can assist all of the General Assembly entities to identify persons of color and build viable recruitment pools.
- 4. Recommend that each entity continue to develop strong internal training and mentoring programs for employees with potential for management.
- 5. Recommend training for the committee, council, or board of directors for each General Assembly entity to strengthen their own cultural proficiency posture.

Creating a Climate for Change Within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)

Report to 217th General Assembly (2006)

Submitted by the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC)

I. Introduction and Overview

The 216th General Assembly (2004) approved the task force report of the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC), entitled, “Creating a Climate for Change Within the PC(USA).” The report examines the racial justice policies and programs of the General Assembly Council (GAC), the Office of the General Assembly (OGA), the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Investment and Loan Program, Inc. (PILP), the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation (PPC), the Board of Pensions (BOP), and the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation, in relation to the experience of racial ethnic employees and compliance with existing church policies relating to affirmative action plans, recruitment programs for employees, retention/training programs, and recruitment of board members, purchasing, and investments. The task force made a number of recommendations in the report to strengthen the church’s response to the challenges of diversity and the commitment of its corporate entities to be inclusive, welcoming organizations.

In accordance with the recommendations approved in the “Climate for Change” report, ACREC formed a task force of four members to conduct an annual consultation between the executive leadership of the six General Assembly agencies and the advocacy committee. The goal of the consultations was to assess progress toward implementation of the “Climate for Change” recommendations, increasing the diversity within each agency, celebrate successes, and determine areas where appropriate enhancements or renewed effort may be needed.

The consultations, held in April and May 2005, were an opportunity to begin a constructive dialogue. In preparation for the consultation, each agency was asked to provide a written progress report that included both statistical analysis and a narrative response to the actions outlined in the task force report. The statistical data in this report is derived from the progress reports provided for the consultations. Appendix A provides the end-of-year 2005 statistical updates.

II. Summary of Findings

The consultations between ACREC and agency executives mark a new era of partnership and common cause, creating space for constructive dialogue as the PC(USA) seeks to become a truly inclusive, multiracial, multicultural church.

The implementation of cultural proficiency, or similar initiative was a primary focus of the consultations this year. The ACREC found a high level of commitment to this process for change on the part of the participating agencies, with a growing awareness of the need to institutionalize policies and practices, as well as attitudes and skills to transform the organizational culture. The level of commitment is reflected in the wide range of actions taken to enhance recruitment, retention, and development of employees, and in such efforts as the GAC commitment to hire a full-time associate for cultural proficiency to support the work of the GAC and the other partners in the Cultural Proficiency Initiative at 100 Witherspoon.

One area of concern identified in the original report is the limited representation of people of color in management, especially in the senior management of all six General Assembly entities. This continues to be a primary concern. In ACREC's consultations, the executives cited limited turnover as a significant barrier to change in this area. In some areas, recruitment is further complicated by the unique combinations of expertise and skills required, such as recruiting for people who are ordained clergy and have specific financial skills. Given all of these factors, ACREC recommends the General Assembly entities work together to develop a strong national recruitment network that can assist all of the agencies to identify competitive racial ethnic candidates when opportunities do occur. The ACREC also recommends the development of strong internal programs to develop employees with potential for management in all six agencies, to foster the development of racial ethnic persons with managerial potential from within.

Each of the entities expressed its support for the Minority Vendor Policy, which provides affirmative action guidelines to promote the utilization of minority vendors and the standards of Project Equality, which are used to assess the affirmative action posture of businesses with which the church has contracts. However, there is room for improvement in some areas, and a need for continued monitoring to promote growth in the use of minority vendors. Agency executives also reported that the use of Project Equality standards and the Minority Vendor Policy offers an opportunity for them to exercise a prophetic voice in their industries, thus having an impact beyond that of the PC(USA).

The ACREC also heard from corporate executives about the significant role that their committee, council, or board of directors can play in taking a strong proactive role to encourage diversity in employment and adherence to other related policies. Several of the executives encouraged the incorporation of cultural proficiency as part of the training for their committee, council, or board of directors.

III. Agency Highlights and Areas for Growth

A. Implementation of Cultural Proficiency at 100 Witherspoon

The Cultural Proficiency Initiative at the Presbyterian Center is jointly sponsored by the four agencies located at the Presbyterian Center: General Assembly Council, Office of the General Assembly, Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Investment and Loan Program, Inc., and the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation. The Reverend Kikanza Nuri Robins, consultant, met with the executive leadership, reviewed current staff assessments of the organizational climate based on a series of focus groups and employee surveys, and outlined a process for organizational transformation with the initial Cultural Proficiency Task Force. The ACREC observes that the following actions have been taken to implement the cultural proficiency process:

- A project management team was formed with representation from each of the organizational entities.
- The team developed a statement of shared values and a set of behavior standards that provide the criteria for assessing our progress towards becoming a culturally proficient organization, providing accountability within the organization and defining the direction of implementation efforts (see Appendix A).
- An all-staff colloquium was held September 10, 2004, to provide a forum for acknowledging the need for change and an opportunity for all employees to learn about the Cultural Proficiency Initiative and engage in the process for change. The colloquium also served to demonstrate management commitment to the initiative.
- The consultant worked with Women's Ministries, GAC, as a pocket pilot. She facilitated an activity at their staff retreat in November 2003 and met with them in staff meetings during her onsite visits in 2003 and 2004.
- The new performance review instrument for managers introduced in the 2004 performance review cycle for GAC, OGA, and PILP includes cultural proficiency as one of fifteen performance criteria evaluated.

- New employees are given a copy and are introduced to the cultural proficiency values & behavior standards in their orientation.
- An eight-hour training course on cultural proficiency for managers was offered December 8, 2004. The workshop, with twenty participants, was led by the Reverend Nuri Robins.
- A weeklong “train-the-trainers” workshop was conducted to build a base of people within the Presbyterian Center who have a deeper understanding of cultural proficiency and who are equipped to serve as trainers and facilitators.

B. Agency Highlights

1. General Assembly Council

In addition to the work of the Cultural Proficiency Initiative Team, the General Assembly Council (GAC) reported to ACREC efforts related to the implementation of cultural proficiency. In August 2004, a new human resources director was appointed, following the retirement of Clifford Kraus. Peggie Blenman, as associate director for human resources, brings a strong background as a human resources professional, and experience in implementing a similar initiative to enhance diversity and inclusivity for the United Church of Christ (UCC), where she worked prior to coming to the GAC. As a partner in the Cultural Proficiency Initiative, the Human Resources Department stated its commitment to ACREC to

- expand sources for recruiting people of color,
- assist managers in identifying and interviewing racial ethnic candidates,
- assure that managers utilize the principles of cultural proficiency as they recruit for new staff,
- assure fairness and equity within the recruitment process,
- monitor all recruitment and selection processes to assure diversity in the candidate pools, and
- provide career ladders and skill development for staff.

New employees are given an introduction to cultural proficiency in their orientation. The eight-hour antiracism training required for all employees is part of new employee orientation and linked to the Cultural Proficiency Initiative.

The GAC reported to ACREC that beginning in 2006, there would be an eight-hour “Employee Education Day,” which all employees will take at some time during the year. Half of the agenda will be devoted to cultural proficiency.

The ACREC is encouraged to observe that cultural proficiency is filtering into the work of the GAC staff in other ways. Some examples include:

- The Office of Youth and Young Adults has developed guidelines used by the counselors at the 2004 Youth Triennium to help build an inclusive, welcoming community.
- The Office of Multicultural Ministries introduced the concept of cultural proficiency by providing workshops and plenary sessions at their annual conferences.
- The National Hispanic Consultation included a workshop on cultural proficiency at its October 2005 meeting.
- The associate for racial justice & advocacy has consulted with congregations exploring ways to incorporate the tools of cultural proficiency in their ministries.

a. Minority Vendor Policy and Project Equality

The GAC Office of Purchasing continues to recruit and utilize minority vendors on an on-going basis, while insisting that all the vendors and businesses uphold the same high standards of inclusion of the church while utilizing the standards of Project Equality. The ACREC’s review of the data provided by the minority vendor report shows a steady increase in the dollar and percentage expenditures from 1997 through 2002, but 2003 and 2004 both show a decline in actual dollar and percentage expenditures, from 10.9 percent total expenditures with minority vendors, to 9.4 percent in 2003 and 8.4 percent in 2004. The Office of Purchasing reported that this decline is due in part to the loss of some major contracts. Two noted exceptions to this trend are expenditures with Hispanic/Latino vendors and women.

The Office of Purchasing also noted that data on Middle Eastern vendors is reported for 2003 and 2004, at the request of the ACREC task force. However, since this is not a category recognized by the National Minority Business Council or Project Equality, it is difficult to identify Middle Eastern vendors or guarantee any accuracy in the reporting.

b. GAC Specific Recommendations

The “Climate for Change” paper calls for the GAC “to adequately fund and staff the GAC Office of Equal Employment Opportunity and Affirmative Action (EEO/AA) to implement PC(USA)’s commitment to becoming a culturally proficient organization by addressing issues of inclusiveness, representation, and systemic misuse of privilege and entitlement.” The GAC reported to ACREC its decision to hire an associate for cultural proficiency, rather than an AA/EEO officer. This position would perform the traditional functions of an affirmative action/equal employment officer in the context of a more holistic approach to achieving the cultural change that would assist the GAC in its continued efforts to institutionalize the policies, practices, and vision of cultural proficiency. This position was filled November 7, 2005, and is lodged in the Office of the Executive Director.

The “Climate for Change” paper encourages the GAC “to expand the Foundation-managed Creative Investment Fund to encompass greater participation with Racial Ethnic Presbyterian Ministries and to gradually increase the Creative Investment Fund, for the purpose of investing in community economic projects, particularly in areas where there is an established Presbyterian racial ethnic presence.”

The GAC reported to ACREC that implementing this recommendation at this time would have a negative impact on the GAC mission budget and the implementation of other initiatives recommended by the “Climate for Change” paper. The Creative Investment Program was developed in the mid 1970s to promote direct investment in enterprises that foster the economic development of racial ethnic and economically disadvantaged peoples. Currently a pool of $8,000,000 is set aside from the unrestricted endowments of the General Assembly for this program. Over the last ten years, the average amount of the pool invested was $4,670,000. In 2004, $6,000,000 was invested through this program.

2. Office of the General Assembly

a. Overview

The Office of the General Assembly reported to ACREC that its work is accomplished by staff at the Presbyterian Center in Louisville, Kentucky, and at the Presbyterian Historical Society offices in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and Montreat, North Carolina.

The ACREC notes that the Office of the General Assembly (OGA) is one of the four General Assembly entities participating in the Cultural Proficiency Initiative at the Presbyterian Center. The OGA employees serve on the Cultural Proficiency Initiative Team, which provided leadership for the all-staff colloquium planning team and participate in other activities.

As directed by the 216th General Assembly (2004) upon the recommendation of ACREC, the Office of the Stated Clerk, has sent a letter on a “Climate for Change in the Presbyterian Church (USA)” to all PC(USA) constituencies (see Appendix C).

The OGA reported to ACREC that in 2005 it had thirty-seven full-time employees. Opportunity for new hires is limited. In addition to working with the GAC’s Human Resources Recruitment Office, the OGA consistently sends position descriptions of all openings to various places in an effort to recruit women and racial ethnic persons. These mailings are sent to presbyteries and synods, the leadership of all the caucuses, and both immigrant and non-immigrant pastors. In addition, the Department of History advertises certain positions in national professional publications that reach all the available qualified pool of possible candidates, including women and persons of color.

The OGA reported to ACREC that it has modeled the values and behavior standards of cultural proficiency in other ways. One example is the process used to create the new position on immigration in response to gather General Assembly action.

The OGA reported to ACREC on initiatives related to strengthening the participation of persons of color in the life of the church, including:

- Implementation of “A Diversity in Leadership in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in the 21st Century Program” in response to action of the 214th General Assembly (2002). The manager for the General Assembly Committee on Representation and the coordinator for Middle Governing Bodies Office are the major partners in this effort. Twelve persons have been asked to participate over a three-year period in several conferences, seminars, etc.

- A process of discernment known as the “Common Faith, Common Mission Project.” The goal of the project is to help the PC(USA) to adapt and utilize the Book of Order for new mission challenges that embraces the multicultural reality of our nation, building active links with all the caucuses in order to get their input on this project.
- Producing several of its resources in languages other than English, including: selected General Assembly reports, and the Book of Order in Spanish, Korean, Taiwanese, Vietnamese (in process), Indonesian (Form of Government), Portuguese (selected sections), and Braille. The Book of Confessions is printed in Spanish, Korean, Braille, and selected sections in Portuguese. Presbyterians who are native speakers of these languages are hired to do the work of translating.

b. Minority Vendor Policy and Project Equality

The OGA reported to ACREC that it uses the GAC Purchasing Office, utilizing minority vendors they have identified and applying the Project Equality standards with all vendors. The OGA contracts with local organizations or consultants to conduct audits of the personnel and hospitality policies and procedures of the official assembly hotels. The Project Equality standards are used as the basis for preparing for and conducting the audits. The results are printed in the General Assembly Registration materials. The Office of the General Assembly includes the requirement for such an audit in its contracts with hotels for the assembly and other meetings.

3. Presbyterian Publishing Corporation

The ACREC notes that the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation (PPC) is one of the four General Assembly entities participating in the Cultural Proficiency Initiative of the Presbyterian Center. The PPC employees participated in the all-staff Colloquium and other building-wide activities, and are represented in the Cultural Proficiency Initiative Team.

The PPC reported to ACREC that its recruitment and hiring policies are consistent with the church-wide plan for equal opportunity and affirmative action, promoting equality of opportunity and prohibiting discrimination on the basis of race, ethnicity, sex, age, marital status, or disabilities. Employment policies and practices promote equality of opportunity and equity in all aspects of employment, including recruitment, selection, benefits, compensation, performance appraisals, promotion, transfers, discipline, separation, and training. Recruitment and hiring goals are reviewed annually by its board, which takes an active role in monitoring the hiring posture and representation of women and people of color of the agency. The PPC staff work to maintain networks to assist in the recruitment of a diverse pool of qualified applicants for all positions. The ACREC observes that PPC administers its own search and hiring processes.

The Presbyterian Publishing Corporation reported that it has a strong retention program, which includes maintaining salaries at rates comparable to other employers in similar industries, supporting continuing education for employees, and rotating staff participation in the annual Protestant Church-Owned Publishing Association, a key opportunity for work-related training. Employees may also receive tuition assistance for degrees in work-related fields. The PPC reported in 2005 there were two employees participating in this program—both women, one person of color.

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns noted the PPC Robert Bohl Racial Ethnic Internship program supports racial ethnic students enrolled in religious or theological studies and who are open to considering publishing as a professional option. This summer internship has been in existence for six years. Candidates are recruited from PC(USA) and other seminaries. The 2005 intern was an Asian woman from Union/Presbyterian School of Christian Education.

The PPC also provided a listing of their publications by racial ethnic authors. The ACREC noted the strong representation of racial ethnic authors and publications aimed at racial ethnic audiences as a positive contribution to the work of the church.

One concern noted in the consultation was the need for PPC to improve its usage of minority vendors. While the staff noted some of the challenges to meeting this goal, they also stated their commitment to continue to work to improve their posture in this area.

4. Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Investment and Loan Program, Inc. (PILP)

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns notes that the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Investment and Loan Program, Inc., is one of the four General Assembly entities participating in the Cultural Proficiency Initiative of the Presbyterian Center. The PILP employees participated in the all-staff Colloquium and other building-wide activities, and are represented in the Cultural Proficiency Initiative Team. The PILP contracts with the GAC for human resource services and most of their purchasing is done through the GAC Office of Purchasing. Its employees participate in the GAC antiracism and cultural proficiency training provided for employees and is covered by the same human resources policy initiatives.

The PILP reported to ACREC it has a staff of fourteen people. It noted that there have been no openings in upper management since the hiring of the current president and CEO in July 2003. In the report for the 2005 consultations, PILP reported that four of the last five people hired were women of color. Two of those new hires subsequently moved to job opportunities with increased responsibility with other agencies in the Presbyterian Center.

The PILP noted that it has its own tuition assistance program for its employees. All employees are encouraged to use the continuing education benefits for course work related to current or future jobs within PILP. Nonexempt administrative staff is encouraged to attend meetings with boards and committees and participate in denominational conferences with the marketing staff for professional development. Although a formal mentoring program is not in place, all of the management team is expected to assist employees in learning new skills.

The ACREC commended PILP in its high rate of minority lending and its efforts to reach racial ethnic constituents. The PILP has had exhibits at the annual National Black Presbyterian Caucus annual conference and was encouraged to pursue similar opportunities with other racial ethnic caucuses.

Given the limited turnover in top management, the role of the board in shaping the policies of the agency and the voice of racial ethnic people within the board is critical. The ACREC recommends training for the board to strengthen its own cultural proficiency posture.

5. Board of Pensions

a. Overview

The Board of Pensions, located in Philadelphia, reported to ACREC that in 2002 it began implementation of an initiative similar to cultural proficiency. It contracted with a consultant firm to conduct a web-based survey on questions related to overall job satisfaction, pay and benefits, coworker cooperation, career advancement, supervision, communication, human resources policies, concern for employees, productivity, training and development, physical working conditions, and job stress. A series of supplemental questions were designed to measure perceptions about the diversity of the organization and the degree to which diverse employees were treated fairly in terms of evaluations and promotions.

Six teams were formed at the senior management level. Each team focused on a different area of the survey and developed action plans to address specific issues in their area. A follow-up survey was conducted in 2004 that showed an overall increase in favorable responses of 10 percent and a 15 percent increase in response to questions about the recruitment, hiring, and treatment of racial ethnic people.

The Board of Pensions reported that it has developed a range of training and development opportunities for its employees that include in-house education for management and staff, technical training, external seminars and workshops, tuition reimbursement, and an in-house degree program sponsored by Drexel University. In 2004, it reported twenty employees participated in a management development program designed for first-time supervisors and staff aspiring to become supervisors. Forty-five percent of the participants were persons of color and 60 percent were women. A mentoring program for managers is in its fifth year. Those being mentored are either nominated by managers or self-nominated with supervisory support. Mentors are solicited from the management and senior management group. Beyond the immediate benefits to those being mentored and mentors, the Board of Pensions reports that this program has helped improve communication and understanding across the organization between management and staff.

In addition to in-house technical training and opportunities for professional development, the Board of Pensions offers a tuition-reimbursement program for bachelor's and graduate degrees in work related courses. Seventy-five percent of the participants have been women and 60 percent have been persons of color. There has been a similar level of participation in the in-house degree program.

The Board of Pensions reported to ACREC that the implementation of management training programs and a focus on career development opportunities for employees, along with activities designed to help employees get better acquainted across organizational lines, has significantly increased employee morale and reduced tensions within the organization. It has also increased client satisfaction.

b. Minority Vendor Policy and Project Equality

The Board of Pensions reported to ACREC that it does not maintain minority vendor data in the same format used by the GAC. The Board of Pensions reported that it utilizes the Project Equality database to identify new vendors. Project Equality is an important aspect of the purchasing for the Board of Pensions. All vendors are sent a letter identifying the Board of Pensions as a proponent of Equal Employment Opportunity, inviting them to participate in Project Equality. In 2004, the Board of Pensions spent $2,013,000 in operating expenses with vendors listed on the Project Equality website and $4,749,000 in benefit payments with vendors listed with Project Equality.

6. The Presbyterian Foundation

The Foundation reported to ACREC that it began working in Fall 2004 on implementation of an initiative similar to cultural proficiency. An employee committee was formed and took a lead role in designing a workforce culture survey, with guidance from an outside consultant. The committee consisted of representatives from all operating units of the Foundation and included appropriate representation by race, gender, and organizational responsibility. The survey was designed to measure employee awareness and participation in existing educational and career development opportunities, the adequacy of training and education opportunities, and whether employees perceived the Foundation offered an inclusive environment where all employees experience equity of opportunity.

The Foundation reported that the survey results created a baseline for it to address and improve management practices and behaviors in support of a diverse workforce and inclusive working environment. The survey looked at both human and organizational factors that impact the workplace climate. Actions taken in response to the survey include the following:

- Senior management spent a day with the consultant who provided cultural feedback to understand the survey results, identify the organization's strengths, and assess areas needing improvement to continue to build and maintain a healthy work culture in a diverse work environment.
- Senior management held subsequent meetings to identify actions that could be taken to enhance the organization in
 - communications,
 - leadership, and
 - personal & professional development.
- Management met with all employees in small groups to share the survey results, validate the survey results, and evaluate the effectiveness of proposed actions.
- The proposed actions were modified based on employee input.
- Management formed three subcommittees to develop plans to implement the proposed actions.

The ACREC observes that the Foundation has limited representation of persons of color in two key areas—senior management and development field staff positions. The representation of women and persons of color in other areas is close to population statistics or has sufficient resources in feeder job groups encouraging future job promotion for groups currently under-represented. The Foundation's goals for recruiting and hiring in the corporate headquarters are based on the five county metropolitan area surrounding Louisville, Kentucky, where they are located. Their budget does not include funds for relocation costs if new employees are moving from somewhere else. The ACREC observes that while the diversity of the Louisville population is increasing, relying on a local recruitment area for professional and managerial positions limits the representation of some racial ethnic groups. The Foundation indicated an interest in partnering with other PC(USA) agencies to develop a national recruitment strategy for both staff and board positions.

There are nineteen development officers located in U.S. metropolitan areas with significant concentrations of Presbyterians. The racial ethnic representation in this category includes a full-time development officer in Puerto Rico and a minister for specialized interpretation who works with African American congregations. Development officers are required to be active Presbyterians, so the available workforce for development positions consists of fundraising professionals who are also Presbyterian. When recruiting for racial ethnic development officers, the Foundation feels this greatly restricts the available pool of applicants since the racial ethnic membership of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is less than 10 percent.

Given the limitations to recruitment outlined by the Foundation, ACREC was encouraged to see an emphasis on upward mobility and career development and other strategies to encourage employee retention and professional development in their current plans and urges the Foundation to continue to work creatively to promote a diverse and inclusive organizational culture, implementing the strategies that it has outlined.

IV. Statistical Assessment

One of the more critical findings of the "Climate for Change" paper is the persistent absence of people of color in the top management levels of the six General Assembly entities it reviewed. In the consultations with the executives, the General Assembly entities all reported that one of the barriers to change at this level is the relative slow rate of turnover. In light of this, ACREC recommends the agencies work together to develop a strong national recruitment network that can assist all of the agencies to identify competitive racial ethnic candidates when opportunities do occur. The ACREC also recommends the development of strong internal programs to develop employees with potential for management in all six agencies, to foster the development of racial ethnic persons with managerial potential from within.

A. General Assembly Council

As of December 31, 2004, the GAC reported a total of 592 employees, 151 or 25.5 percent were persons of color and 69.3 percent (410) were women. In the category of officials/managers, there were 104 total employees, 18.3 percent (19) were racial ethnic people and 47.1 percent (49) were women. Professionals were 21.4 percent (43) persons of color and 63 percent women. Support staff (technicians, office/clerical and operatives) were 28.7 percent (82) racial ethnic people and 81.2 percent women (234). In the highest salary bracket ($95,001 and above) the number of racial ethnic people 0.4 percent of the total employment at the GAC, compared with 1.1 percent whites and 0.6 percent women.

B. Office of General Assembly (OGA)/Department of History

The OGA currently has 37 full-time employees: 31 employees are women (84 percent) and 11 are persons of color (30 percent). The Department of History (Philadelphia/Montreat) has 20 full-time employees: 11 (55 percent) employees are women and 4 (20 percent) are persons of color. There is one woman of color in the category of senior management. The OGA recognizes that its main challenge is in improving representation of racial ethnic persons and women in senior and middle management both in OGA and the Department of History.

C. Presbyterian Publishing Corporation

As of December 31, 2004, there were 38 full-time positions and 1 part-time position within the PPC staff rationale. The PPC maintains a racial ethnic balance of 20 percent or more, as directed by the General Assembly and supported by the PPC Board of Directors. The percentage representation of people of color in the total employment is 24 percent.

D. Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Investment and Loan Program, Inc. (PILP)

The PILP has a staff of fourteen people, 14.2 percent are persons of color and 71 percent are women. The highest paid person of color is in the $45,000–$55,000 category.

E. Board of Pensions

The Board of Pensions has a total of 205 employees with a total racial ethnic representation of 37 percent, including 31 percent African American, 2 percent Hispanic/Latino, 3 percent Asian, and 0.5 percent Native American. There are a total of 12 people in the highest salary bracket, ($115,000 and above), including 1 (8 percent) African American women and 4 (33 percent) white women.

F. The Presbyterian Foundation

In February 2005, the Foundation had 103 employees, including part-time staff. A significant number (33) are field staff, located in regional offices around the country, with 70 employees located in the headquarters office in Jeffersonville, Indiana. The total number also reflects a significant decrease from a high of 149 employees at the end of calendar year 2000. The representation of persons of color in senior management is 11 percent (1) and 22 percent (2) women. For middle managers there are 20 percent (2) persons of color and 70 percent (7) women. Development officers are 10 percent persons of color and 43 percent women. Professionals are 17 percent persons of color and 64 percent women. The administrative staff is 39 percent persons of color and 96 percent women.

V. Observations

The focus of the first consultations between ACREC and the participating General Assembly entities was to review the implementation of cultural proficiency or similar initiative. The ACREC appreciates the energy that each entity gave to the implementation of “Climate for Change” recommendations and urges the General Assembly entities to continue to work creatively to promote a diverse and inclusive organizational culture.

The ACREC presents the following observations relating to specific entities. They reflect issues raised in the particular conversations with each entity in the consultation process.

A. General Assembly Council

The ACREC's review of the data provided by the Minority Vendor report shows a steady increase in the dollar and percentage expenditures from 1997 through 2002, but 2003 and 2004 both show a decline in actual dollar and percentage expenditures, from 10.9 percent total expenditures with minority vendors, to 9.4 percent in 2003 and 8.4 percent in 2004.

The GAC reported to ACREC that implementing this recommendation at this time would have a negative impact on the GAC mission budget and the implementation of other initiatives recommended by the "Climate for Change" paper. The Creative Investment Program was developed in the mid 1970s to promote direct investment in enterprises that foster the economic development of racial ethnic and economically disadvantaged peoples. Currently a pool of $8,000,000 is set aside from the unrestricted endowments of the General Assembly for this program. Over the last ten years, the average amount of the pool invested was $4,670,000. In 2004, $6,000,000 was invested through this program.

B. The Office of the General Assembly

As directed by the 216th General Assembly (2004) upon the recommendation of ACREC, the Office of the Stated Clerk has sent a letter on a "Climate for Change in the Presbyterian Church (USA)" to all PC(USA) constituencies (see Appendix C).

The OGA consulted with a wide spectrum of people in OGA and GAC. They also gathered referrals from the racial ethnic caucuses, middle governing bodies, immigrant pastors, and other key pastors in order to expand our pool of applicants. The position, which has been filled, will work closely with the associate for immigrant ministries in the GAC to create structures/polities that will allow immigrant churches to prosper in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

C. Presbyterian Publishing Corporation

The ACREC noted the strong representation of racial ethnic authors and publications aimed at racial ethnic audiences as a positive contribution to the work of the church.

The ACREC agreed with PPC on the need to improve its usage of minority vendors. While the staff noted some of the challenges to meeting this goal, they also stated their commitment to continue to work to improve their posture in this area.

D. Presbyterian Investment and Loan Program

The PILP noted that there have been no openings in upper management since the hiring of the current president and CEO in July 2003. In the report for the 2005 consultations, it reported that four of the last five people hired were women of color. Two of those new hires subsequently moved to job opportunities with increased responsibility with other agencies in the Presbyterian Center.

The ACREC commended PILP in its high rate of minority lending and its efforts to reach racial ethnic constituents. The PILP has had exhibits at the annual National Black Presbyterian Caucus annual conference and was encouraged to pursue similar opportunities with other racial ethnic caucuses.

The Board of Pensions reported to ACREC that the implementation of management training programs and a focus on career development opportunities for employees, along with activities designed to help employees get better acquainted across organizational lines, has significantly increased employee morale and reduced tensions within the organization. It has also increased client satisfaction.

The Board of Pensions reported to ACREC that it does not maintain minority vendor data in the same format used by the GAC. The Board of Pensions reported that it utilizes the Project Equality database to identify new vendors. Project Equality is an important aspect of the purchasing for the Board of Pensions. All vendors are sent a letter identifying the Board of Pensions as a proponent of Equal Employment Opportunity, inviting them to participate in Project Equality. In 2004, the Board of Pensions spent $2,013,000 in operating expenses with vendors listed on the Project Equality website and $4,749,000 in benefit payments with vendors listed with Project Equality.

F. The Presbyterian Foundation

The ACREC observes that the Foundation has limited representation of persons of color in two key areas—senior management and development field staff positions. The ACREC observes that while the diversity of the Louisville population is increasing, relying on a local recruitment area for professional and managerial positions limits the representation of some racial ethnic groups. The Foundation indicated an interest in partnering with other PC(USA) agencies to develop a national recruitment strategy for both staff and board positions.

APPENDIX A
The Presbyterian Center
Shared Values
Toward a Healthy Church Corporation

The Presbyterian Center is a caring, compassionate, and inclusive community called by God to fulfill the mandates of the PC(USA) Constitution, serving and leading the people of God through resources, programs, and initiatives, and the church of Jesus Christ through partnerships with our colleagues, congregations, governing bodies, and ecumenical partners.

Our vision to become a culturally proficient organization is based on these shared values:

- ❖ We believe our purpose is to glorify and serve God, and that God's grace inspires us to bring God's love, justice, and reconciliation into a diverse world.
- ❖ We believe we provide a living expression of the gospel when we honor God's gift of diversity, respecting and encouraging the good in each of us.
- ❖ We believe seeking God's will is integral to our decision-making process.
- ❖ We believe employing honesty, integrity, and respect in our conversations and interactions with our colleagues and our constituencies create and foster trust.
- ❖ We believe working with competence, in consultation and in partnership with others, is the best way to serve those within and outside the Presbyterian Center.
- ❖ We believe we do our best and most productive work when we are encouraged to use our individual gifts, talents, and creativity in the achievement of our shared goals and objectives.
- ❖ We believe a balanced life, with time for work, leisure, and spiritual nurture, makes us healthier and more productive colleagues at the Presbyterian Center.

Standards of Behavior

To create a culturally proficient, healthy church corporation, the employees at the Presbyterian Center will strive to work in a manner consistent with our shared values and the Standards of Ethical Conduct. We will keep our values before us and integrate them into our daily lives. Guided by the following Standards of Behavior, we will:

JUSTICE

- listen for the voices of people long silenced;
- work with and on behalf of poor, oppressed, and disadvantaged people for justice, freedom, and peace;
- deal justly and equitably with one another and our constituents;
- apply policies and practices in a transparent and consistent manner; and
- develop and implement policies and processes to address racism, sexism, classism, and other related forms of discrimination.

VALUING DIVERSITY

- acknowledge our God-given differences;
- value and celebrate our God-given differences;
- recognize our cultural diversity;
- provide opportunities to express our cultures;
- learn about cultures other than our own; and
- participate in training that addresses racism, sexism, classism, and other related forms of discrimination.

INTERPERSONAL SKILLS

- treat each other with respect;
- affirm each other's dignity;
- practice compassion and courtesy with each other;
- honor our different work styles and personality types;
- relate to one another honestly and fairly; and
- create a collegial environment.

PARTNERSHIP

- create opportunities to work across functional lines;
- encourage collaboration with middle governing bodies, congregations, and other partners;
- incorporate diverse gifts, talents, skills, and perspectives in the planning and implementation of our work.

COMMUNICATION

- develop skills for intercultural communication;
- practice respectful communication that values each person;
- foster clear and honest communication; and
- create and maintain open, accessible, and multidirectional systems of communication.

LEARNING ENVIRONMENT

- increase and deepen knowledge and gain new skills;
- develop and improve existing skills;
- treat mistakes first as opportunities for growth and learning;
- encourage innovation and creativity; and
- nurture initiative and risk-taking.

CONFLICT RESOLUTION AND MANAGEMENT

- foster healthy relationships with one another;
- pursue equitable resolutions to conflict;
- seek to mend broken relationships as soon as possible;
- develop and encourage the use of informal processes for discussing concerns; and
- utilize formal processes for conflict management, as needed.

SPIRITUALITY

- develop our spiritual well-being through prayer, worship, and other appropriate expressions; and
- respect the diversity of individual beliefs and faith traditions.

WHOLENESS

- recognize that we are whole human beings with multifaceted lives;
- nurture a healthy balance in our lives; and
- maintain appropriate intrapersonal and interpersonal boundaries.

ACCOUNTABILITY

- work with integrity and professionalism to fulfill our commitments to the ministry of the PC(USA);
- establish and communicate clear goals that help us understand how our work fits into the overall picture of the ministry;
- identify clear, reasonable performance expectations in cooperation with supervisors;
- assess performance and adjust expectations as needed; and
- celebrate our accomplishments together.

APPENDIX B: 2005 STATISTICAL DATA

The following statistical information on employment by job category and salary range, is provided by the six General Assembly entities in response to ACREC's request for an annual statistical update. This data is presented here without analysis. It will be assessed by ACREC as part of its ongoing consultation process with the executives of the General Assembly entities.

APPENDIX C

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH U.S.A. REGARDING “CREATING A CLIMATE FOR CHANGE WITHIN THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH (U.S.A.)”

Dear Brothers and Sisters in Christ:

We greet you in this Easter season in the name of our risen Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ!

As the executives of the six General Assembly agencies, we write to assure you of our commitment to including the rich diversity of God’s people in the leadership of all of our General Assembly agencies and to ask for your assistance in this process. The Apostle Paul reminds us in 1st Corinthians 12 that we in the church are “the body of Christ.” In this body leadership of a wide diversity of people is honored so that we may more faithfully discern the will of Christ, who is the head of the body, and more effectively carry out Christ’s mission in the world.

We recognize that in the church and in our agencies we are far from where God intends us to be in honoring the gifts of women, racial ethnic persons, and people with disabilities in leadership. However, we are strongly committed to change and are grateful for the action of the 216th General Assembly (2004) in approving the report, “Creating a Climate for Change within the PCUSA,” which calls for a new churchwide commitment to inclusiveness in leadership, especially related to staff in senior positions.

We have or are in the process of taking a number of important initiatives to promote opportunities for leadership for those who have often been excluded. Among those initiatives are:

- Special mentoring programs for women and racial ethnic persons currently employed to develop skills for advancement.
- Tuition assistance grants especially focused on women, racial ethnic persons and persons with disabilities.
- Launching of cultural competence/proficiency programs in most of our agencies to create work environment that values and honors diversity.
- Targeted recruitment of women and racial ethnic persons for senior level positions.
- Rigorous monitoring and implementation of the General Assembly goals of at least 20 percent racial ethnic persons and 40 percent women in both exempt and non-exempt staff positions in our agencies.
- Special internships for racial ethnic persons.
- “Diversity in leadership programs” to give more racial ethnic persons opportunities to experience leadership at the General Assembly level.
- Partnership with the caucuses and racial ethnic colleges and seminaries in seeking leadership.
- An interagency colloquium for all staff to foster a culturally proficient workplace.
- Anti-racism programs for all of our employees.

We believe these initiatives are making a positive contribution for developing a workplace free of discrimination and in which the gifts of a wide variety of persons are honored. However, we also believe that further steps are needed both in our agencies and throughout the church. We are particularly concerned about lack of women and racial ethnic persons in the top leadership positions in our agencies and would urge the church to give priority to seeking greater diversity as it elects chief executives for the major boards and agencies of the church.

We hope this commitment to diversity in leadership will not only be one held at the General Assembly level but will also be a priority throughout our denomination. We are committed to working closely with sessions, presbyteries, and synods to build up the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) as a faithful reflection of the body of Christ. We welcome a partnership with all of you in this endeavor.

Yours in Christ Service,

Robert W. Maggs, President of the Board of Pensions

Robert Leech, President of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation

John Detterick, Executive Director, General Assembly Council

James Hudson, President, Presbyterian Investment and Loan Program

Davis Perkins, President and Publisher of Presbyterian Publishing Corporation

Clifton Kirkpatrick, Stated Clerk of the General Assembly

[The assembly approved Item 08-12 as amended. See pp. 36–37.]

Joint Resolution from ACWC and ACREC Regarding the Women of Color Consultation Report and Recommendations

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) and the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC) recommend that the 217th General Assembly do the following:

1. Create a task force to respond to the recommendations in the Women of Color Consultation (WoCC) report (see Appendix A). This task force should include representation from ACREC and ACWC, as well as members identified from Presbyterian Women and the National Cross Caucus. As part of the response to the recommendations, the task force will design a mechanism to monitor the implementation of the recommendations in the WoCC report. This task force will report to the 218th (2008) [General Assembly] [~~and 219th (2010) General Assemblies~~].

2. Direct the General Assembly Council (GAC) to provide sufficient funding and staff support for the ACREC/ACWC joint task force.

3. Direct the GAC to provide sufficient funding and staff support to ensure a regularly recurring Women of Color Consultation.

4. Equip all GAC staff to be responsive to the needs of women of color as part of their continuing commitment to valuing the gifts that all people bring to the PC(USA). GAC staff should continue to be encouraged to reflect on and incorporate the values articulated in the Report on Creating a Climate for Change Within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) approved by the 216th General Assembly (2004).

5. Encourage all members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to read, study, and respond to the WoCC report and recommendations.

[Financial Implications: (2006): $9,000; (2007): $35,965; (2008): 28,965 (Per Capita—GAC)]

Rationale

The Women of Color Consultation occurred in October 2004 in Atlanta, Georgia. Nearly 200 women of all ages and many racial ethnic backgrounds gathered to share their experiences in the PC(USA) and in society. The report and recommendations from those gathered at the Women of Color Consultation highlight the ways in which the PC(USA) has failed to give “full expression to the rich diversity within its membership” and has not provided the “means which [would] assure a greater inclusiveness” (Book of Order, G-4.0403) for women of color.

In particular, they found that women of color lack structural support at all levels of the PC(USA)—congregation, presbytery, synod, and General Assembly—and have yet to be included in decision-making bodies beyond mere token representation. Some support exists (albeit at a bare minimum) for people of color, and for women, but within the institutional structure of the PC(USA) there is no built-in mechanism that can respond to the complex intersection of “race, gender, class, and other identities” that merge in the experience of women of color.¹ As such, the PC(USA) remains ineffective in creating an environment in which racial ethnic women feel welcome to participate as full partners in the ministry of Christ in and through the PC(USA).

Through this report, the women gathered at the consultation have voiced their yearning to see the PC(USA) become the church it has committed to become, one in which women of color are seen as equal children of God and partners in Christ. The ACREC and the ACWC honor the contribution that women of color are to the PC(USA), and exhort the Church to give ear to the concerns and dreams they have voiced in the Report and Recommendations from the Women of Color Consultation (see Appendix A).

The report examines every aspect of the life of the church in order to present ways in which the PC(USA) can strengthen its work in Evangelism and Witness, Justice and Compassion, Leadership and Vocation, and Spirituality and Discipleship. As these touch on all the programs of the GAC, it is essential that GAC staff remain proactive in developing their own ability to hear and adequately respond to the needs of women of color. Taking full advantage of the training for cultural proficiency that has been provided through the recommendation of the previous General Assembly is a valuable beginning in this process.

The recommended joint task force would ensure that all the concerns voiced in the report, in particular the ones directed to the above committees, would be given full consideration. As the recommendations also involve the cooperation of bodies beyond the two committees, the task force would design mechanisms to accurately evaluate and hold accountable other bodies within the PC(USA) with regards to the needs of women of color.

The ACREC and the ACWC also call on the General Assembly to support a regularly recurring Women of Color Consultation to strengthen our sisters in Christ in the life of the church. The relationships, insights, mission, and vision that emerge from these consultations would be essential in assessing the effectiveness of the PC(USA)’s ministry to our sisters, and for envisioning ways in which the witness and ministry of women of color could be given fuller expression in the PC(USA).

Women of Color Consultation

Come! Be Refreshed by the Waters of Life

October 15-17, 2004

Atlanta, GA

Recommendations to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)

Consultation Overview

On October 15-17, 2004, approximately 180 women of color of all ages and from many racial ethnic backgrounds met in Atlanta, GA, with about 40 staff and elected consulting partners for a national consultation. This event was the result of a two-year planning process by elected representatives of Women of Color constituencies and consulting partners in the PCUSA.

The theme – Come! Be Refreshed by the Waters of Life: A Gathering of Women of Color to Rejuvenate Our Ministry – was celebrated throughout the three days. At the front of the hall hung beautiful hand-painted fabric panels that expressed the imagination and symbolism contained in Revelation 22: 1-2, namely, the river of the water of life and the tree of life with its 12 kinds of fruit for the healing of the nations.

Plenary sessions focused on immigration issues and the history of organizing by Women of Color in the church. Every participant then engaged in one of 10 mini-consultations designed to deepen discussion on topics such as “Sexism and Racial Ethnic Women in the Church” and “Culture, Gender and Age in the PCUSA” in a small group setting, and to make recommendations for follow-up work. Many of the reports issued during the consultation were published in the March/April 2005 issue of Church and Society magazine titled Come! Be Refreshed! (PDS 72-431-05-602)

The view through the “gender lens”

Several overarching themes surfaced during the consultation. First and foremost, there is a clear need to educate many church groups and agencies on what it means to view current issues through a “gender lens,” and with an appreciation for the “intersectionality” of multiple identities such as race, class, and other identities and how this contributes to unique experiences of oppression and privilege. By this we mean that current ministries, goals, and projects of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) will be most helpful to women of color in the PCUSA if these themes were an integral part of planning and strategizing for implementation.

By looking through a “gender lens,” we mean putting on spectacles that help us see gender-specific needs and realities, and in our case, we are referring to the needs and realities of women that are different from those of men. When we use program models that are meant to be “universal” that do not distinguish between the needs and realities of women and men, we unintentionally create gender inequity in our programming because, so very often, these “universal” programs are male oriented. By putting on a “gender lens,” we can create gender conscious programming that addresses, supports and responds to the unique needs of women and girls as well as those of men and boys.

As racial ethnic women, however, our lives are not only gendered but also racialized. We live the intersection of gender and race. The Association of Women’s Rights in Development defines intersectionality as “an analytical tool for studying, understanding and responding to the ways in which gender intersects with other identities and how these intersections contribute to unique experiences of oppression and privilege.”¹

As a church that is built on the undergirding principle of inclusivity and fairness to all of God’s children, we call the church to recognize that “people live multiple, layered identities derived from social relations, history and the operation of structures of power”² and that everyone, especially the marginalized women of color live through unique experiences “resulting from the coming together of different types of identity.”³ The challenge for the church, then, is to create and support ministry programs and initiatives that take the reality of intersectionality seriously.

Recommendations for the future

To help the church take on this challenge, the gathered community of the Women of Color Consultation generated recommendations for future action. These recommendations were directed at all levels of the Church, including individual participants.

In order to ensure follow-up on the recommendations, a small team consisting of planning team members and consulting partners was formed in early 2005. The team realized that it would be important to organize these recommendations into requests directed to the newly created project teams under the General Assembly Council’s Mission Work Plan 2005- 2006. The team then extracted recommendations that pertained to each of the nine project teams under the Mission Work Plan 05-06 and drafted the attached requests.

The team also drafted requests to PCUSA offices, and other entities, such as the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns, the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns, responsible for addressing the issue specific to the recommendation. Regional governing bodies and event participants also are receiving recommendations.

The team also sought endorsement of the document from some PCUSA groups. As of November 15, 2005, it has been either affirmed in principle or endorsed by the Racial Ethnic Cross-Caucus, Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns, the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns, and the leadership of Presbyterian Women.

We believe that follow up on these recommendations will benefit both women of color and the entire PCUSA, especially as it strives to strengthen its work in Evangelism and Witness, Justice and Compassion, Leadership and Vocation, and Spirituality and Discipleship.

Additionally, all of the recommendations should be viewed with the overall need to share power, create mechanisms of accountability, and adopt new ways of doing ministry at all levels of the church. With these thoughts and hopes in mind, we present the following recommendations for consideration, deliberation and implementation.

Women of Color Consultation

To the Mission Work Plan (05-06) project team working to coordinate education around Middle East peace and justice issues:

Recommendations

1. The gender lens is applied throughout the work of the project team.
2. A special attention is given to the needs, experiences and perspectives of women as the project team considers the issues in the Middle East.
3. The project team incorporate women's organizations and their communication vehicles and networks in its planning, being mindful of the diversity of women in the church.

Women of Color Consultation

To the Mission Work Plan (05-06) project team that is working to plan and implement promotion of Extra Commitment Opportunities to increase grant making and partnership with overseas churches focusing on HIV/AIDS to reach $1million within 2 years:

Recommendations

1. The work of the project team reflect the needs, experiences and perspectives of women in its work with our overseas partner churches to ensure gender equity.
2. Women's organizations and their communication vehicles and networks are incorporated in the project team's planning and implementation of the plan, being mindful that women are diverse, and many women's organizations already have existing partnerships that just need strengthening.
3. Programs are developed with a gender lens and that they be educational and advocacy oriented.

Women of Color Consultation

To the Mission Work Plan project team (05-06) working to develop a concrete, comprehensive strategic plan for implementing recommendations of Facing Racism that focus on theological education:

Recommendations

1. The project team approach the issue of race through a gender lens as men and women of color experience racism differently.
2. The project team, in partnership with the Committee on Theological Education (COTE) and the seminaries, work to create opportunities for women and men to learn about the intersection of gender and race and encourage dialogue that leads to transformational change in consciousness that leads to the recognition of racism, sexism and white privilege in all aspects of our lives.
3. The project team encourage seminaries to utilize multiple strategies to equip students for ministry in multicultural context, including the following:
 - require cross-cultural field education experience (minimum of one semester), for all candidates for ministry
 - incorporate theologies emerging from diverse perspectives and backgrounds, especially those that take gender and race seriously, in the core curriculum
 - require training in cross-cultural competence and antiracism for graduation
 - require training in the use of inclusive language and gender issues
 - require training in domestic violence and clergy sexual misconduct
4. In the development and implementation of the Facing Racism strategy, resources and educational opportunities should:
 - use many languages to ensure full participation of the church,
 - educate people on the meaning of ‘racial ethnic,’ ‘intersectionality,’⁴ and ‘gender lens’
 - value diverse styles of leadership, nurturing the full participation of women of color at all levels of the church

⁴ Intersectionality is “an analytical tool for studying, understanding and responding to the ways in which gender intersects with other identities and how these intersections contribute to unique experiences of oppression and privilege. From Facts & Issues, no. 9, August 2004, p.1.

Women of Color Consultation

To the Mission Work Plan (05-06) project team working to identify, assess, focus, and coordinate initiatives on vocational discernment of young adults through resources, conferences, and direct mission involvement with intentional multi-cultural inclusion:

Recommendations

1. The project team create mechanisms to hold people to their commitments to inclusivity and encourage further learning about intersectionality⁵ and multiple identities by:

- Using many languages other than English to ensure full participation;
- Educating people on the meaning of “racial ethnic” and “intersectionality”⁶ and “gender lens”;
- Introducing new styles of leadership at all levels as women of color come from different cultures and classes;
- Identifying and preserving those structures that have proven to be effective in promoting inclusivity*;
- Reclaim popular language, such as evangelism, in our work to help people understand the importance of the concept of intersectionality for our faith praxis.

* Some of these structures are the Committees of Women of Color in some middle governing bodies, the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns, the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns, the Racial Ethnic Young Women Together, the National Network of Presbyterian College Women, and the PW Racial Ethnic Dialog group.

2. The project team help all levels of the church embrace the Racial Ethnic/Immigrant Evangelism Church Growth Strategy www.pcusa.org/nmd/pdf/growth-strategy.pdf by promoting and educating the church about it, with a view towards development of leadership, through

- Creative expression (i.e. songs, storytelling, etc)
- Resources, including financial support, and dialogue
- Conferences and community outreach

⁵ Intersectionality is “an analytical tool for studying, understanding and responding to the ways in which gender intersects with other identities and how these intersections contribute to unique experiences of oppression and privilege. From Facts & Issues, no. 9, August 2004, p.1.

- Continuing education
 - Bible study and worship
3. The project team develop ways to support clergywomen, particularly of color, in the call process and equip the congregations and the wider church to appreciate their gifts in ministry.
 4. The project team develop strategies to encourage younger generations to participate. Offer mentorship, training and compliments so that young women might be encouraged to introduce new ways of doing things, rather than being forced into a mold.
 5. The project team encourage seminaries to give special attention to the needs of racial ethnic students regarding the ordination examination process and work closely with the PCCE in this regard.
 6. In partnership with COTE, the project team encourage seminaries to utilize multiple strategies to equip students for ministry in multicultural context, including the following:
 - incorporate theologies emerging from diverse perspectives and backgrounds, especially those that take gender and race seriously, in the core curriculum
 - require training in cross-cultural competence and antiracism for graduation
 - require training in the use of inclusive language and gender issues
 - require training in domestic violence and clergy sexual misconduct
 7. In partnership with COTE, the project team develop strategies to educate racial ethnic seminarians about available funds through targeted advertisement and make the funds easily accessible.
 - Seminaries need to better inform racial ethnic students of these resources
 - Increase funds from local presbyteries and the financial aid office
 8. The project team provide curriculum that will help educate people in the church cross barriers and boundaries in order to form solidarity and understanding.

Women of Color Consultation

To the Mission Work Plan (05-06) project team working to explore challenges of providing pastoral leadership to small churches in “hard to call” contexts and develop a strategy to help congregations and presbyteries address the complex issues:

Recommendations

1. Executive presbyters and others in middle governing bodies responsible for working with pastoral call process should be trained in cross-cultural competence and antiracism as it relates to the call process. Such training could take place at meetings of the executive presbyters, gatherings at General Assembly, Fall Polity conference, etc.
2. Presbyteries be encouraged to require cross-cultural field education experience for all candidates for ministry.
3. Presbyteries be encouraged to require training for candidates and ordained pastors in the following areas: cross-cultural competence, antiracism, inclusive language, gender issues, domestic violence and clergy sexual misconduct.
4. Support clergywomen, particularly of color, in the call process and by equipping the congregations and the wider church to appreciate their gifts in ministry.
5. Help all levels of the church embrace the Racial Ethnic/Immigrant Evangelism and Church Growth Strategy www.pcusa.org/nmd/pdf/growth-strategy.pdf by promoting and educating the Church about it, with a view towards development of leadership.

Women of Color Consultation

To the Mission Work Plan (05-06) project team working to provide adequate resources to racial ethnic/immigrant groups and make these resources accessible:

Recommendations

1. Encourage congregations without a high immigrant membership to support those with a high concentration of new immigrants.
2. Educate all levels of the church about the Racial Ethnic/Immigrant Evangelism and Church Growth Strategy.
3. Make a concerted effort to provide financial planning tools and training to new immigrant congregations in order for those congregations to become self-sufficient.
4. Establish a procedure for determining when material is needed in additional languages and commit the necessary funds to accomplish the translations. Include other language groups in all marketing plans.
5. Ask that your work reflect the needs, experience and perspectives of women as you develop the grant criteria. Each applicant should incorporate women's organizations and communication vehicles and networks on the plan.
6. Ensure that immigrant women are involved in the grant decision-making process.

Women of Color Consultation

To the Mission Work Plan (05-06) project team working to evaluate and coordinate ways to engage systematic educational strategy for life-long growth in discipleship:

Recommendations

1. Create mechanisms to hold people accountable to their commitments to inclusivity and encourage further learning about intersectionality and identity by:
 - Using many languages other than English to ensure full participation;
 - Educating people on the meaning of “racial ethnic” and “intersectionality”;
 - Introducing new styles of leadership at all levels as women of color from different cultures and classes;
 - Preserving those structures that have proven to be effective in promoting inclusivity; and
 - Reclaiming language, such as evangelism, in our work to help people understand the concept of intersectionality for faithful living.
2. Engage in dialogue with men, particularly white men, at events about the issue of white and male privilege. Expect of them a transformational change in consciousness so that they can consistently recognize racism and sexism without being reminded. Make a recommendation to Presbyterian Men and other racial ethnic men’s organizations in the church for educational transformation.
3. Identify resources that help Presbyterians find ways to interact with people, cultures and congregations across difference. Encourage use of mutual invitation as a method for leveling the playing field for dialogue.
4. Develop intergenerational programs that will facilitate learning about each other’s past and present activities.
5. Develop a communication strategy that would allow the church to share information—resources, education, and training—with people at all levels and make sure that access is offered equally. Consider that not everyone has computer access.

6. Develop an educational video with a study guide on the life experiences and faith journeys of women of color.
7. Include leadership resources that pay particular attention to sharing power, creating mechanisms of accountability, and adopting new ways of doing ministry at all levels of the church such as but not limited to congregations, PW and other women's organizations, presbyteries, synods, racial ethnic caucuses, immigrant councils, and the General Assembly.
8. Ensure full and inclusive participation of women of color in leadership by identifying resources that
 - a. Equip and empower women of color to attain access to so that they can work effectively in the PCUSA governing structure
 - b. Ensure women of color have access to leadership training
9. Provide curriculum that will help educate to cross barriers and boundaries in order to form solidarity and understanding.

Women of Color Consultation

To the Mission Work Plan (05-06) project team working to review of the PCUSA Website:

Recommendations

1. The PCUSA website be formatted in such a way that the users can access the information they are seeking even when they do not know the PCUSA structure.
2. The PCUSA website be more intuitive and topic oriented, i.e. easy access to multicultural and multilingual resources.

Women of Color Consultation

To the Mission Work Plan (05-06) project team working to develop a communication strategy for the positive presentation of the mission and ministry of the PC(USA):

Recommendations

A communication strategy should be designed with an awareness of gender, race and culture that moves beyond numbers and into a consciousness about the real impact of these realities and intersections.

When looking at the way PCUSA designs and communicates its messages, it should be common practice for that work to reflect the needs, experiences and perspectives of all women. We especially ask that the distinctive cultural perspectives of women from different racial ethnic backgrounds be reflected in the church's overall communication strategy.

1. The church shall share information – resources, education, and training – with people at all levels and make sure access is offered equally. Consider that not everyone has computer access.
2. The project team help all levels of the church embrace the Racial Ethnic/Immigrant Evangelism and Church Growth Strategy www.pcusa.org/nmd/pdf/growth-strategy.pdf by promoting and educating the church about it, with a view towards development of leadership, through
 - Creative expression (i.e. songs, storytelling, etc)
 - Resources, including financial support, and dialogue
 - Conferences and community outreach
 - Continuing education
 - Bible study and worship
3. Translate materials into more languages. (Do not assume that translation always means from English to other languages such as Spanish. Produce resources originated from the women of color in languages other than English. They could then be translated into the English language for English speakers.)
4. Communicate to synods, presbyteries, denomination and our partner churches about the work of this consultation through
 - Magazines, such as Horizons, Church & Society, Presbyterians Today, the Torch

- Presbytery and synod newsletters
- Sharing of materials (verbal and written) from this consultation
- TORCH and other Racial Ethnic Caucus newsletters
- InfoPak
- Bulletin inserts
- Listserv

Women of Color Consultation

Report to the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) and the Advocacy Committee on Women's Concerns (ACWC) July 2005

The 2004 Women of Color Consultation drafting team recommends forming a task force including members of ACWC, ACREC, and event planning team members (to be invited by the two advocacy committees) to review the following referrals, determine strategy, and report and make requests of the 217th General Assembly (2006).

The following referrals were compiled from reports of all mini-consultations at the Women of Color Consultation, held in Atlanta, Georgia, October 15-17, 2004. These referrals are being directed to the advocacy committees as they address systemic issues in the church, or have specific implications that would require General Assembly action.

General recommendations referred to ACWC and ACREC:

- Demand structural support for women of color from church entities at all levels: congregation, presbytery, synod, and national.
- Ensure involvement of women of color in decision-making bodies at all levels; this must be beyond tokenism, such that we speak up and others truly listen to what we have to say. Monitor and call out decision-making entities that conduct business behind the scenes, without full participation of all members.
- Mainstream advocacy, such that the church realizes these are our concerns as a whole, not just concerns for women or people of color.
- Actively monitor the outcome of GA mandates to ensure more accountability.
- Call for education that recognizes internalized oppression, where women perpetuate patriarchal systems of power, enabling sexism. If women's resistance to change is part of the problem, then women's support of each other is the solution.
- Call for commitment and recognition by church leadership of the need for cross-cultural and anti-racism training at all levels.

- Monitor and revise PCUSA forms that include racial ethnic and gender categories to see if they perpetuate racial ethnic biases, with the goal of recommending changes toward consistency. We recommend considering racial ethnic categories used by the US Census Bureau.
- Introduce more “forward thinking” theological and sociological analysis on gender and culture to the church.
- Request the Racial Ethnic Caucuses, Racial Ethnic Ministries, and Women’s Ministries to develop a strategy with short term and long term goals to address issues of sexism and gender equity within our communities, and the full participation of women of color in the life of the church.

Recommendations implying General Assembly action:

- Request the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) and the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC) to work together with Racial Ethnic Young Women Together (REYWT) to prepare a report to General Assembly on the issues, concerns, and goals of women of color.
- Request the General Assembly, synods and presbyteries to release funds for education—from Sunday school classes to sessions—on the “isms”: sexism, racism, classism, ageism, ablism, and heterosexism. Not as a pamphlet but as real resources and staff trainers. Make this training a requirement in ALL presbyteries, particularly for personnel committees.
- Hold this consultation as a regular event, and request money from the General Assembly to fund the event.
- Reinstate staff in the synods to work with racial ethnic women as part of their job descriptions.
- Call on seminaries to:
 - Incorporate theologies from different cultural perspectives in the core curriculum
 - Require training in cross-cultural competence and antiracism for graduation
 - Require training in the use of inclusive language and gender issues
 - Require training in domestic violence and clergy sexual misconduct
- Amend the Book of Order to require the same competencies (multicultural theologies, cross-cultural competence, antiracism, inclusive language, gender issues, domestic violence, clergy sexual misconduct) for ordained clergy, with a process for re-certification for those who complete training.

- Written recommendations to the office of the General Assembly to amend the Book of Order to recognize/affirm/empower multi-cultural leadership.
- The Presbyterian committee that deals with ordination exams (PCC) needs to be trained on cross cultural awareness and sensitivity
 - Need to review process for recruitment of readers, including need to intentionally recruit more racial ethnic elders and pastors
 - Need to review cross cultural bias of ordination exams
 - Need to examine need for ordination exams given in other languages.
- Committee on Ministry (COM) and Committee on Preparation for Ministry (CPM) members need to be trained on cross-cultural awareness and sensitivity Need resources developed from the national office that can be easily used in training local presbytery committees. This includes, but is not limited to:
 - empowerment of racial ethnic members on those committees
 - sensitivity to cross cultural differences both within and outside the committee
 - effective enforcement of Equal Employment Opportunity policies
 - mentoring roles
 - training of session liaisons for candidates and inquirers

Women of Color Consultation

Recommends the following to other PCUSA offices and entities:

Office of the General Assembly, Office of Communication, Immigrant Group Ministries office

1. PCUSA should also create a Web site with a databank that immigrants can have access to affordable services on immigration issues.

Office of Theology and Worship

1. Provide resources that recognize and use a variety of forms of worship that reflect worship in the immigrant population.
2. Highlight Women's History Month each March in the planning calendar. Ensure that Celebrate the Gifts of Women Sunday falls on the Sunday nearest March 8.
3. Hire a woman of color in the Office of Theology and Worship to an exempt staff position

Leadership and Vocation goal area (NMD)

1. Provide resources and training for Committees on Ministries to better support clergywomen, particularly women of color, in the call process.
2. Provide resources and training to better prepare Pastor Nominating Committees to recognize and accept the gifts women of color bring to their ministries.
3. Work with racial ethnic caucuses in the process.

GA Committee on Representation (GACOR)

1. Support the work of the Committees on Representation to ensure that there is diversity on all decision-making bodies.
2. Provide training in cultural proficiency and antiracism for its members and encourage the same training for presbytery and synod committees.
3. Work with appropriate entities to identify a pool of available leaders that are women of color in the presbyteries. Provide those names to the appropriate nominating and appointive bodies in order to involve the women in leadership.

Middle Governing Bodies (Presbyteries, Synods)

1. Provide training in cultural proficiency and antiracism for executive presbyters, nominating committees others involved in the call process, committees on ministry and committees on preparation.

Presbyteries' Cooperative Committee on Examinations (PCCE)

1. Provide cross-cultural training for PCCE to awareness and sensitivity.
2. Review process for recruiting readers, including the need to recruit more racial ethnic elders and pastors.
3. Review cross-culture bias in ordination exams.
4. Examine the need for exams in other languages.
 - Link CPMs to PCCE so they share awareness of cross cultural differences as those differences impact taking ordination exams

General Assembly Nominating Committee (GANC)

1. Provide training in cultural proficiency and antiracism for executive presbyters, nominating committees others involved in the call process, committees on ministry and committees on preparation.

Presbyterian Women (PW)

1. Examine our creation stories—both how we are taught from Genesis and with stories from other cultures.
2. Engage women of color in ways that would help move PW and women of color towards deeper collaborative work that can impact the Presbyterian church structure as a whole.
3. Request that the Racial/Ethnic Dialogue group study and make recommendations to PW regarding the racial ethnic member at large category for a leadership position on the coordinating team.
4. Hold synod-wide leadership training that specifically invites women of color, to develop leadership potential.
5. Establish uniformity among synod programming so that exchanges can occur and leadership potential can be more evenly developed. Within allotted time period.
6. Identify 5-10 racial ethnic women leaders in their presbyteries and intentionally involve them in leadership and programming.
7. Women serving in PW leadership positions should read the article titled “On the Invisibility of Privilege” and take anti-racism training. People of color should take a workshop on internalized oppression. For a full discussion of the article “On the Invisibility of Privilege,” order Working Paper #189, White Privilege and Male Privilege, Publications Dept., Wellesley, MA 02181.
8. Give feedback (both by group and by facilitator) on the curriculum used to help raise awareness. Many curriculum books already provide evaluation forms; they should be included in all curriculum books.
9. Help the publishers understand how to reach out to congregations—provide Bible study seminars to educate how to use resources.
10. Provide a support network and training for those who are currently using PC(USA) material.

11. We request Presbyterian Women provide leadership training opportunities to women to equip them to serve on decision making bodies at the higher levels of the national church.
12. We request PW to create training modules on theology of money.
13. We request PW at the 2006 Gathering to include Workshops such as:
 - a. Theology of Money (See Church and Society, March/April 2005 issue, pp. 116-120)
 - b. How to be involved in Presbytery, Synod, and at the National Church level
 - c. Small Church Support
14. Encourage racial ethnic churches to submit names for curriculum writers, artists, etc. to Presbyterian Women and to Women's Ministries.
15. Ask each women's group to devise and implement leadership training models that teach positive shared power.
16. Build relationships as women of color for increased partnership with one another.
 - a. Ensure full and inclusive participation in planning events, etc.
 - b. Teach women of color how to participate effectively in meetings and on committees.
 - c. Ensure women of color get to leadership training.
 - d. Volunteer and encourage others to volunteer in leadership roles.
17. Leader training programs for girls and young women in collaboration with Racial Ethnic Young Women Together (REYWT). www.pcusa.org/reywt

Women of Color Consultation

Recommends the following to event participants:

1. Organize a weekend when all women of faith (ecumenically or interfaith) stay home from worship. Some men still preach that women shall remain silent. By keeping silent in this way, they will hear us through our absence and feel the power of our numbers and the work that we do.
2. Invite white women to your church for meals and programs, and also move toward deeper collaborative work that can impact the Presbyterian church structure as a whole.
3. Continue to build multi-cultural relationships on a regular basis.
4. Interact more with unfamiliar people, cultures and congregations by practicing mutual invitation with churches, one another, and going the extra mile to extend hospitality to the underrepresented
5. Recognize that as women internalize oppression, we perpetuate patriarchal systems of power, enabling sexism. And if women's resistance to change is part of the problem, then women's support of each other is the solution.
6. Demand structural support for women of color from church entities at all levels: congregation, presbytery, synod, and national.
7. GA could have someone write a bill and have it sponsored requesting that there is a government bill for no immigrant left behind – that will increase literacy among immigrant population
8. Congregations should identify bi-lingual persons willing to assist in translating documents
9. Encourage racial ethnic churches to submit names to PW and Women's Ministries for curriculum writers, artists, etc.
10. Connect with Presbyterian Writers Guild – curriculum writers, poets, reporters, fiction and non-fiction, etc.
11. Join forces among various groups and be in solidarity in order to make demands.
12. Have a working list of people willing to serve and provide names. At the same time, we need to expand the leadership base – be willing to bring in new names and people with potential.

13. Build a network of women to permeate the systems.
14. Volunteer to serve on pastor nominating committees.
15. Contact the editor of Presbyterians Today magazine with suggested topics and writers, submit articles, etc.

- Possible overture

- 1) Request the General Assembly, synods and presbyteries to increase funds for resources and staff trainers on the 'isms' – sexism, racism, classism, ageism, and heterosexism.
- 2) Require all presbyteries to implement a training program.
- 3) Request the Racial Ethnic Caucuses, Racial Ethnic Ministries, and Women's Ministries to develop a strategy with short term and long term goals to address issues of sexism and gender equity within our communities, and the full participation of women of color in the life of the church.

Women of Color Consultation

Follow-up Team recommends the following:

1. ACWC and ACREC will co-sponsor an event on the Consultation at the 217th General Assembly (2006), June 15-22. Referred to: the joint work group of ACWC and ACREC
2. We will try to highlight the Consultation at the 2006 Presbyterian Women's Gathering, July 7-11.
3. We will organize an event at the 2007 Racial Ethnic Convocation. We want to see a plenary on the intersection of race and gender.
4. The next Consultation will take place in 2008.
5. We will request creation of another project team.

Then the angel showed me the river of the water of life, bright as crystal, flowing from the throne of God and of the Lamb through the middle of the street of the city. On either side of the river is the tree of life with its twelve kinds of fruit, producing its fruit each month; and the leaves of the tree are for the healing of the nations.

[The assembly approved Item 08-13, Recommendations A.1.–A.2. See pp. 36–37.]

Recommendation Pertaining to Budgetary and Financial Concerns of the Church

A. Relating to Budgets for General Assembly Mission Program

1. Presbyterian Mission Program—General Assembly Mission Program Receipts and Expenditures Actual Compared to Budget for 2004 and 2005

The General Assembly Council recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) incorporate into the Minutes the report of the General Assembly Mission Program Receipts and Expenditures Actual Compared to Budget for 2004 and 2005.

Rationale

The 202nd General Assembly (1990) adopted policy governing Mission Budgets at the General Assembly Level. That policy provides the following:

B. The General Assembly Council shall:

1. Report to each General Assembly:

a. Actual total financial resources used to support the General Assembly Mission Budget and Program and the expenditures during the most recently completed year[.] (Minutes, 1990, Part I, p. 375)

The display, which is presented below, is the report of actual revenue and expenditures for the years 2004 and 2005.

2. Presbyterian Mission Program—Revised General Assembly Mission Budget and Program 2006

[The assembly approved Item 08-13, Recommendations A.1.–A.2. See pp. 36–37.]

The General Assembly Council recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) receive the report of the 2006 General Assembly Mission Budget and Program in the total amount of $113,901,646.

Rationale

The 202nd General Assembly (1990) adopted policy governing Mission Budgets at the General Assembly level. That policy provides that:

- B. The General Assembly Council shall:
 - 1. Report to each General Assembly: ...
 - 2.
 - b. Adjustments, if any approved by the General Assembly Council for the current budget year.

Item 08-13

3. Presbyterian Mission Program—General Assembly Mission Budget and Program 2007 and 2008.

The General Assembly Council recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) approve the 2007 General Assembly Mission Budget and Program in the total amount of $97,612,768 and the 2008 General Assembly Mission Budget and Program in the total amount of $96,298,454, and direct the General Assembly Council to make the adjustments necessary to incorporate into these budgets the items with financial implications that have been approved by the 217th General Assembly (2006).

Rationale

The 202nd General Assembly (1990) adopted Policy Governing Mission Budgets at the General Assembly Level. That policy provides that:

B. The General Assembly Council shall: ...

3. Recommend to the General Assembly the General Assembly Mission Budget and Program for the next succeeding budget cycle. Displayed in the recommendation shall be:

- a. All projected financial sources; and
- b. Anticipated uses of financial resources in light of mission objectives.

The General Assembly Council is required by the Constitution to “prepare and submit a comprehensive budget to the General Assembly” (Book of Order, G-13.0202f).

A New Thing

Mission Work Plan: 07-08

*Do not remember the former things, or consider the things of old.
I am about to do a new thing; now it springs forth, do you not perceive it? Isaiah 43: 18-19a*

The only constant, it is said, is change. And the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) certainly continues to experience more than its share of change. One of our challenges, as a denomination trying to be faithful in a time when many consider denominations irrelevant, is to figure out how to work in that context.¹

The Mission Work Plan Team for 2007–2008² adopted guiding principles saying in part, “While being grounded in history and tradition, Presbyterians are also open to God’s new things in the world.”³

So, building on the work done for 2005–2006, the team came to the conclusion after lots of discussion, study, and consultation with selected middle governing body executives and various staff members that a new way of approaching the work of the General Assembly Council was needed. Instead of the pointed directions of the past, of telling the GAC staff exactly what and how to spend time and resources, a more excellent way was to set direction for what the Council believes to be the most crucial and obtainable objectives within the priority goal areas approved by the General Assembly⁴ and to instruct the professional staff to propose specific programs and budgets to reach these objectives.

Accordingly, the proposed Mission Work Plan consists of eight objectives—two each under the four previously adopted goal areas. It is the team’s hope that the elected GAC members will adopt these objectives, sending them to the staff with instructions to return in April with specific plans (including a proposed budget) that advance these objectives. Indeed, it is the team’s expectation that every ministry activity that occurs at 100 Witherspoon St. from this point forward will contribute to achieving one or more of the objectives (once they’re approved by the General Assembly).

We also hope you will notice two particular themes throughout the objectives: emphases on partnerships and strengthening congregations.

One underlying assumption is contained in the principles the team adopted at the outset to guide its work: “Presbyterian mission is centered in justice and evangelism and is supported by abundant resources. Based on our belief in the strength of being connected with one another, this mission is done in partnership with other denominations, other cultures and other faiths.”⁵

[The assembly approved Item 08-13, Recommendations B.1.–B.2. and C.1.–C.2. See pp. 36–37.]

B. Relating to Reserved or Committed Funds

1. Unrestricted and Committed Funds

The General Assembly Council recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) receive the report of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, regarding unrestricted and committed funds as of December 31, 2005.

Rationale

The report of the unrestricted funds is divided between uncommitted and committed funds. The following display indicates those funds as well as the activity of those funds and the status of the total reserves as of closing December 31, 2005. The 202nd General Assembly (1990) adopted the following policy:

A. Presbyterian Mission Program Fund

1. A fund composed of all unrestricted and uncommitted receipts and assets intended for the support of the General Assembly mission program.
2. Sources to maintain this fund shall include all unified revenue available for the General Assembly Mission Program, including but not limited to:
 - a. unified income including receipts from congregations, presbyteries, or individuals;
 - b. unrestricted gifts, legacies, bequests;
 - c. unrestricted investment income;
 - d. gift annuity excess reserves;
 - e. such nonrecurring income as the General Assembly Council shall direct by general or specific policy statement; and
 - f. under expenditure of the unified portion of the General Assembly Mission Budget.
3. The Uncommitted Funds portion of the Presbyterian Mission Program Fund at year end must be equal to at least 30% of the Unified portion and direct mission support of the General Assembly Mission Budget, which minimum provides for:
 - a. Cash flow needed for mission purposes;
 - b. Guarantee of the current unrestricted budget. (Minutes, 1990, Part I, p. 377)

Item 08-13

[The assembly approved Item 08-13, Recommendations B.1.–B.2. and C.1.–C.2. See pp. 36–37.]

2. Report of Contingent Liabilities, December 31, 2005

The General Assembly Council recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) incorporate into its Minutes the following list of contingent liabilities: Reserve funds are required to cover self-insurance for General Assembly owned property. A separate Self-Insurance Fund has been established, the balance of which was $5,946,472.49 as of December 31, 2005.

Rationale

The 190th (UPCUSA) General Assembly (1978) received from the General Assembly Mission Council a financial plan for supporting minority education during 1977–1979 and a status report of minority education institutions (Minutes, UPCUSA, 1978, Part I, pp. 189–90).

C. Relating to Support for General Assembly Mission

1. John C. Lord and Edmund P. Dwight Funds

The General Assembly Council recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) allocate the annual income realized in 2005 from the John C. Lord and Edmund P. Dwight Funds in support of the budget for the general mission work of the General Assembly.

Rationale

Current practice is to recommend to each General Assembly the allocation of annual income from these two funds in light of wording in the donors' wills, which requires this annual process.

Portion of the will of Edmund P. Dwight (May 23, 1903):

I will and bequeath to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church of America, to be used for the establishment of the Christian Religion, that the light of the gospel may be made to join more perfectly ...

Portion of the will of John C. Lord (January 2, 1873):

...to the Trustees of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A., for religious and charitable uses, to be called the John C. Lord Fund, the annual interest of which is to be disposed of and distributed by the said General Assembly at each annual meeting for the furtherance of the Gospel of our Blessed Saviour, at home or abroad, as the Assembly may deem best. ...

The applicable provisions of the two wills facilitate the annual income realized from these funds to be used in the General Assembly's General Mission Budget.

It is projected that the income from these funds in 2006 is approximately $33,104.

2. Special Offerings 2005

The General Assembly Council recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) incorporate into its Minutes the following summary of receipts from Special Offerings for the year 2005.

Rationale

Special Offerings enable an important part of the General Assembly Mission Program. In 2005, income from these offerings totaled approximately 14.2 percent of total income for the mission program of the church and 19.3 percent of the mission gifts from congregations. All offerings were down or flat in 2005 due to the economy, except Pentecost, which is up by 35.84 percent.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly and the General Assembly Council recommend that the 217th General Assembly (2006) make the following amendments to the Organization for Mission as proposed below: [Text to be added is shown as italic.]

1. Retitle Section IV to read: General Assembly Officers and Committees and the Office of the General Assembly.

2. Strike current language in Section IV (Attached p. 6-7) and insert as Section IV the attached Standing Rules of the General Assembly (section M) that relate to the officers and committees of the General Assembly and the Office of the General Assembly.

3. Add the following paragraph as 5. of revised Section IV:

“Proposed amendments to this Section IV of the Organization for Mission from related bodies or from within the Office of the General Assembly, shall be submitted to the Committee on the General Assembly (COGA). The COGA shall review these proposed changes and forward those it approves as part of its report to the General Assembly.”

4. Amend the second paragraph of Section IX. in the Organization for Mission as follows:

“Except as provided in section IV., paragraph 5, pProposed amendments to this Section IV of the Organization for Mission from related bodies or from within the General Assembly Council and its Ministries Divisions, shall be submitted to the General Assembly Council. The General Assembly Council shall review these proposed changes and forward those it approves as part of its report to the General Assembly.”

Rationale

The COGA has recently reorganized the Standing Rules of the General Assembly to focus on rules relating to the meetings of the General Assembly. Standing Rules relating to the officers (Moderator and Stated Clerk), as well those rules related to functions and responsibilities aside from General Assembly meetings have been combined (See Section M attached). The Organization for Mission is a more appropriate place for these rules as it already relates to General Assembly organization.

Attachment: Current Section IV (Pages 6 – 7)

IV. Office of the General Assembly

The Office of the General Assembly, which provides the structure and the system by which the Stated Clerk carries out the responsibilities of the position, will be guided by all policies adopted by the General Assembly for its entities. All policies and procedures for the Office of the General Assembly shall continue to be governed by the Standing Rules of the General Assembly and the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly is responsible for reviewing the work of the Office of the General Assembly in consultation with the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

The ecumenical responsibilities of the Stated Clerk are fulfilled in consultation with appropriate colleagues and bodies lodged within the Worldwide Ministries Division or other entities that may be established for ecumenical relations.

The Department of History is lodged in the Office of the General Assembly and managed by a director accountable to the Stated Clerk.

The following groups, which, like the Stated Clerk, are accountable directly to the General Assembly, are related to the Office of the General Assembly for staffing and budgeting purposes:

- Advisory Committee on the Constitution;
- Committee on the Office of the General Assembly;
- General Assembly Committee on Representation;
- General Assembly Nominating Committee; and
- Permanent Judicial Commission.

1. Moderator of the General Assembly

The Moderator of the General Assembly is an ecclesiastical officer, along with the Stated Clerk, of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). The ministry of the Moderator is grounded in the ministry of baptized persons and in the particular ordained ministry of elders and ministers of the Word and Sacrament.

Title a. The title of the Moderator is “The Moderator of the (number) General Assembly (year) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).”

Function b. The Moderator of the General Assembly is a commissioner of the General Assembly.

When the Moderator presides at the assembly, it is to be a sign of the bond of unity, community, and mission in the life of the church. During the period between assemblies, the Moderator serves as an ambassador of the unity of the Spirit in the bonds of peace, telling the story of the church’s life and upholding the people of God through prayer.

When the Moderator travels throughout the church, it is for the purpose of strengthening the mission of congregations and governing bodies, encouraging officers and members, and their work. The Moderator listens for the joys and concerns of the church and ascertains the needs of the world and the gifts of the church’s mission program.

When the Moderator serves as an ecumenical representative, s/he expresses the concern of Reformed churches for the visible unity of Christ’s body and fuller communion among churches.

When the Moderator visits national and international mission sites, s/he encourages mission personnel, brings the prayerful concern of Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to sister churches, and helps to proclaim the gospel of Christ to the world.

When the Moderator addresses the church and the society, s/he speaks pastorally and prophetically from within the standards of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), preserving the rights and responsibilities outlined in G-6.0108.

(1) The Moderator shall preside over the General Assembly that elects him or her, and over the meetings of the next General Assembly until a successor is elected. “The Moderator possesses the authority necessary for preserving order and for conducting efficiently the business of the governing body” (Book of Order, G-9.0202).

Revised Section IV.Attachment: Section M

(2) The Moderator of the General Assembly is a voting member of the General Assembly Council and the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly. The Moderator of the General Assembly may attend and participate without vote in the meetings of all other entities of the General Assembly.

(3) The Moderator shall be the official representative of the church at gatherings and functions, both civic and ecclesiastical, at which the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is invited or expected to be represented, unless otherwise provided by the General Assembly. In the event that the Moderator is unable to attend, the Vice Moderator, or some other person designated by the Moderator in consultation with the Stated Clerk, may represent the church.

(4) The Moderator and the Vice Moderator shall submit a written report of their work to the session of the General Assembly at which their successors are installed.

Enabling Service c. Enabling the Moderator and Vice Moderator to Serve

(1) It is incumbent upon the church to understand, respect, and remain accountable for the balance of the stewardship of time between the ministry of the Moderator and Vice Moderator and the larger vocation of the ones serving in these roles. That balance includes a commitment to respect the need for Sabbath by the Moderator and Vice Moderator of the General Assembly.

The church should expect the Moderator to ordinarily spend no more than half of her/his work time responding to invitations in attending meetings of General Assembly entities, in participating in other opportunities, and attending to constitutional functions. In assisting the Moderator in these activities, the church should expect the Vice Moderator to ordinarily spend no more than a third of her/his work time.

(2) The Moderator, the Vice Moderator, and the Office of the General Assembly shall jointly develop a comprehensive plan for their travel based upon the mission of the church and the needs of agencies, governing bodies, institutions, ecumenical partners, and other constituencies.

Each synod, in consultation with its presbyteries, will be invited to develop a plan for itineration of the Moderator or Vice Moderator. Ordinarily, a single invitation for a visit within a presbytery will be accepted during each term.

(3) The Stated Clerk shall request the congregation or employer of the Moderator and Vice Moderator to grant a leave of absence for time appropriate to their commitments to permit the Moderator and Vice Moderator to fulfill the functions of their offices.

No later than three months following the election, the Stated Clerk, in consultation with the Moderator and Vice Moderator and representatives of the congregation or employer they serve, shall conduct an appropriate service of dedication and covenant between these leaders and their faith and/or vocational community, recognizing the unique demands and responsibilities placed upon these officers.

(4) To prevent financial sacrifice to these leaders personally, or undue adverse effect upon the work in which they are engaged, the Stated Clerk, in consultation with the Moderator and Vice Moderator, shall propose appropriate financial arrangements to the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly.

(5) The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly shall budget for the official travel of the Moderator and Vice Moderator and their spouses, and other expenses incurred in the performance of official duties.

(6) An office for the use of the Moderator and Vice Moderator shall be provided within the office suite of the Office of the General Assembly.

Vice Moderator d. Vice Moderator

(1) The Vice Moderator represents the assembly at the request of the Moderator. When the Vice Moderator serves in this capacity, all those duties incumbent on the Moderator shall be expected of him/her.

(2) The Vice Moderator shall serve as a corresponding member without vote on the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly and the General Assembly Council.

(3) Should there be a Moderator's Conference, the Vice Moderator participates with the Moderator in planning the Moderator's Conference.

(4) The Vice Moderator is expected to itinerate at the request of the Moderator.

(5) The Vice Moderator shall consult with the Moderator and the Office of the General Assembly about the special emphasis for the Vice Moderator's iteration.

(6) The Moderator may request the Vice Moderator to preside and to assist in the performance of other functions of the Moderator during and following the General Assembly.

Accountability

e. Regular Reporting: Accountability of the Moderator and Vice Moderator

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) and the General Assembly Council (GAC) shall assist the General Assembly in ensuring the accountability of the Moderator and Vice Moderator of the General Assembly by receiving and reviewing, at each of their stated meetings, a written report from the Moderator and Vice Moderator.

2. Stated Clerk of the General Assembly

Title

a. The title of the Stated Clerk is "The Stated Clerk of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.);" and may be used by the incumbent until a successor is elected and takes office.

Functions

b. Functions of the Stated Clerk [For functions related to General Assembly meetings, see Standing Rule H.2.)

(1) The Stated Clerk shall conduct the general correspondence of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). In this connection, all items of correspondence directed to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), or to the General Assembly, shall be routed to the Stated Clerk.

(2) As an officer of the General Assembly, the Stated Clerk shall preserve and defend the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), and support the decisions, actions, and programs of the General Assembly. The Stated Clerk shall give advisory opinions concerning the meaning of the provisions of the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), and shall give advisory opinions on the meaning of the actions of the General Assembly. When the Stated Clerk deems it necessary, after consulting with appropriate persons or bodies, the Stated Clerk may retain legal counsel and institute or participate in legal proceedings in civil and criminal courts.

(3) The Stated Clerk shall publish the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), and other materials as may be necessary to help the church understand and be guided by the Constitution. The Stated Clerk shall prepare editorial changes in the Book of Order, which should be reviewed by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, provided the changes do not alter the substance of the text approved by vote of the presbyteries. The Stated Clerk shall be a member ex officio of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, without vote.

(4) On receipt of the certified record and final decision in a case of judicial process from the clerk of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the General Assembly, the Stated Clerk shall report the decision to the General Assembly if it is in session, or to its first session thereafter if it is not. When a decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission contains an order directed to another governing body, the Stated Clerk shall obtain from the governing body a statement of its compliance and make a full report to the next General Assembly.

(5) The Stated Clerk shall provide staff services to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution and any other committees established to draft, consider, or amend The Book of Confessions or any of the documents it includes.

(6) As the continuing ecclesial officer of the General Assembly, the Stated Clerk shall be a member of each committee that may be established to undertake discussion regarding organic union with another church or churches.

(7) The Stated Clerk is the permanent ecumenical representative of the General Assembly and shall be a member of each delegation representing the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in ecumenical or interchurch bodies or councils, and in faith and order bodies, including bilateral conversations and dialogues.

(8) The Stated Clerk shall be a corresponding member of the General Assembly Council, and a nonvoting member of its Worldwide Ministries Division. He or she shall be a member of any other body responsible for coordinating, formulating, or implementing the ecumenical and interfaith policies and programs of the General Assembly.

(9) The Stated Clerk is the chief executive officer of the Office of the General Assembly. The Stated Clerk shall have available personnel to assist in performing the assigned functions.

(10) The Stated Clerk, with the concurrence of the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly, may nominate to the General Assembly one or more persons to serve as Associate Stated Clerks of the assembly (Standing Rule H.2.d.).

(11) The Stated Clerk, after consultation with the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly, may appoint one or more Assistant Stated Clerks. The term of the appointment shall be four years, subject to reappointment by the Stated Clerk, after consultation with the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly.

(12) The Stated Clerk shall submit to the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly, for its action and recommendation to the General Assembly, a proposed budget. This budget shall provide for the funding of the sessions of the General Assembly, the Office of the General Assembly and all bodies related to it, the funding of the participation of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in ecumenical bodies, and other expenses deemed necessary.

(13) The Stated Clerk is responsible for maintaining the archives and records management facilities of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), for the supervision of an agency for the preservation of the history of American Presbyterianism, and for the promotion of the study of Presbyterian history. The Stated Clerk shall assure the implementation of a records management program.

(14) The Stated Clerk shall promote the harmony and efficiency of the General Assembly and its agencies in cooperation with the General Assembly Council and its Executive Director, with special attention to relationships between General Assembly entities, and with synods, presbyteries, and sessions. The Stated Clerk shall have membership on or relationship to appropriate committees, commissions, and agencies of the General Assembly as it shall determine from time to time.

(15) The Stated Clerk shall receive all resignations from service on General Assembly entities and shall declare the positions vacant in accordance with Paragraph IV.C.1. below entitled "Serving on Assembly Entities."

Office of the General Assembly

c. The Office of the General Assembly

(1) The Stated Clerk shall employ and supervise the personnel necessary to do the work of the Office of the General Assembly, and provide oversight of the personnel of all bodies related to the Office of the General Assembly who shall be accountable to the Stated Clerk unless other provisions have been made. Staff vacancies within the Office of the General Assembly (other than the appointment of Assistant Stated Clerks) may be filled by the appropriate supervisor (with the concurrence of the Stated Clerk).

(2) All equal employment opportunity and other uniform policies relating to employment and compensation of the personnel of General Assembly agencies shall apply also to personnel of the Office of the General Assembly and all bodies related thereto. All personnel appointments shall be in accordance with the personnel policies of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and the requirements of Book of Order, G-9.0104.

(3) The Stated Clerk may designate a member of the staff of the Stated Clerk to be the budget officer of the Office of the General Assembly.

The following will be related to the Office of the General Assembly for staffing and budgeting purposes: Committee on the Office of the General Assembly, Permanent Judicial Commission, Board of Directors of the Presbyterian Historical Society, Committee on Representation, Advisory Committee on the Constitution, Advisory Committee on Litigation, General Assembly Nominating Committee, Presbyteries' Cooperative Committee on Examinations for Candidates, and commissions and special committees of the General Assembly (see Standing Rule K.I.).

(4) All income received by the Office of the General Assembly from sales, bequests, gifts, or from any other source, shall be transmitted to the treasurer of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation. These funds shall be separately accounted for by the treasurer. All payments related to the Office of the General Assembly shall be made by the treasurer upon the receipt of regular vouchered requests, or other adequate documentation, bearing the authorization of the Stated Clerk or a person designated by the Stated Clerk.

(5) The Department of History in the Office of the General Assembly shall be under the direction of a person appointed by the Stated Clerk. The general administration of the Department of History shall be carried out from Philadelphia, which will be the location of the office of the director of the department. The director, with the concurrence of the Stated Clerk, shall determine which functions shall be carried out in Philadelphia and in the department's study center in Montreat, North Carolina. All restricted and other funds contributed to the endowment of the former Department of History of the United Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A. or the former Historical Foundations of the Presbyterian Church in the United States are held by the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), Foundation, and the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation. Funds secured after 1983 resulting from development efforts are also placed in accounts with the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), Foundation, and the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation. Funds originally designated for the maintenance of the archival facility at Montreat and the records and memorabilia contained therein will continue to be used for that facility alone. Should that archival function cease at the Montreat facility, all restricted and other funds contributed for that purpose will be held by the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), Foundation, and the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, and used for the support of the archival facility and program of the Office of the General Assembly by the Department of History.

3. Committees of the General Assembly

Serving

a. Serving on Assembly Entities

(1) Each person nominated shall be an active member of a congregation, or a continuing member of a presbytery, of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) with the exception of nominees for election to the National Committee on the Fund for the Self-Development of People and the Women Employed by the Church Committee.

(2) A person may serve as a member-at-large of only one General Assembly entity at a time. Ordinarily, no more than one member-at-large from any one presbytery may serve on the same General Assembly entity at the same time. Members serving by virtue of office, or elected to membership on a second entity to fulfill the requirements of the Organization for Mission or other General Assembly actions, are not affected by this provision.

(3) Persons nominated for election by the General Assembly shall ordinarily be eligible to serve a four-year term, and be eligible for election to one additional term. No person may serve more than two terms, full or partial. After serving as a member of a General Assembly entity for two terms, full or partial, a person shall not be eligible for nomination or renomination to a General Assembly entity until two years have elapsed.

(4) Consideration shall be given to the full requirements of full participation expressed in Book of Order, G-4.0403, in considering nomination and election to entity service, and also to the nomination of one-third ministers of the Word and Sacrament, one-third laymen, and one-third laywomen (see Book of Order, G-9.0801b).

(5) A member of a General Assembly entity who finds it necessary to resign shall send his or her resignation to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly, who shall notify the entity and the nominating committee or other body that originated the person's nomination or election. When any member of an entity of the General Assembly (council, commission, unit, division, committee, task force, or any other body) shall resign, or becomes unable to serve because of chronic or permanent physical or mental illness or disability, the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly shall declare the position vacant.

(6) When any member of the board of an entity of the General Assembly, a council, commission, unit, division, committee, task force, or any other body authorized by the General Assembly does not attend two successive sessions of that body and such absence is unexcused, the membership of that person shall be automatically vacated, and that person shall be notified by the Stated Clerk. The Stated Clerk of the General Assembly shall be notified of the vacancy by the chairperson of the entity, and the Stated Clerk shall announce the vacancy and shall notify the General Assembly Nominating Committee or other body that originated the nomination or election of the person who has been absent without excuse, in order that the vacancy may be filled in the manner by which the same position had been filled originally.

(7) If a minister of the Word and Sacrament serving as a member of a General Assembly entity representing a synod or presbytery shall transfer his or her presbytery membership and thereby cease to be under the jurisdiction of the presbytery or synod that nominated her or him to serve on the assembly entity, the position shall be declared vacant by the Stated Clerk. If a member of a particular church serving as a member of a General Assembly entity representing a presbytery or synod shall transfer her or his membership to a particular church that is not under jurisdiction of the presbytery or synod that nominated him or her, the position shall be declared vacant by the Stated Clerk.

(8) The Stated Clerk shall also notify appropriate entities and governing bodies upon being advised of the death of any person holding membership on an assembly entity or who is unable to serve for any other reason. The Stated Clerk shall also declare vacant a position on any such entity held by a minister of the Word and Sacrament who ceases to be a minister member of a presbytery of this denomination, or a position held by a member of a particular church who ceases to be a member of a congregation of this denomination.

All such vacancies shall be filled by the same process under which the former incumbent was elected. If a vacancy shall occur during the first term of service of an incumbent, then the original source of the nomination shall propose a nominee for election to complete the unexpired term, and such nominee shall be eligible for renomination and election to an additional full term. If a vacancy shall occur during the second term of service of an incumbent, and the position vacated is one designated for a representative of a presbytery or synod, then the privilege of proposing a nominee for the unexpired term shall pass to the next appropriate presbytery or synod under any rotation system that may be in use, and the nominee so proposed shall be eligible for nomination and reelection to an additional full term. Any vacancy in a position for which the General Assembly Nominating Committee makes nominations may be filled until the next succeeding General Assembly by appointment of the Moderator of the General Assembly upon advice by the nominating committee that the committee has decided to present the name of the appointee to the next session of the General Assembly as its nominee for the position.

Office of the General

b. Committee on the Office of the General Assembly

(1) The General Assembly shall elect a Committee on the Office of the General Assembly composed of fifteen persons. This committee shall be empowered to carry out the assembly's oversight of the Stated Clerk and the Office of the General Assembly; to assure the accountability of the Stated Clerk to the General Assembly during the interim between sessions of the assembly; and to provide linkage with the General Assembly Council. The members of the committee shall serve a four-year term, and be eligible for election to one additional term. No member may serve more than two terms, full or partial.

The Moderator of the General Assembly will serve as a member of the committee with vote during his or her moderatorial service. The Stated Clerk of the General Assembly, the Executive Director of the General Assembly Council, and the vice chair of the General Assembly Council will serve as corresponding members of the committee without vote.

(2) The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly shall elect its own officers and determine its structure, including any subcommittees (see Standing Rule I.4.a. for exception).

(3) The committee shall be funded from the per capita apportionment and its financial activity shall be reported through a separate line in the General Assembly Commission and Committee Schedule. The proposed budgets of the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly shall be submitted to the General Assembly.

(4) The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly shall have the responsibility to do the following:

(a) Assist the General Assembly in assuring the accountability of the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly and of the Office of the General Assembly by reporting to each session of the General Assembly, including a report or summary of any evaluation of the work of the Stated Clerk and of the Office of the General Assembly that has been completed since the last session of the assembly.

(b) Review annually the work of the Stated Clerk and be responsible for an end-of-term evaluation (see Standing Rule H.2.b.(3)(f)) or exit interview.

(c) Review the budget requests submitted by the Stated Clerk for that portion of the per capita budget administered by the Stated Clerk, and to forward the requests to Mission Support Services with the comments of the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly. The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly will also be responsible for approving proposed changes in the staffing design of the Office of the General Assembly presented by the Stated Clerk.

(d) Consult with the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly regarding any proposals to the General Assembly concerning persons being recommended for election to the office of Associate Stated Clerk of the General Assembly, and any proposals concerning the appointment of persons to the office of Assistant Stated Clerk (see Standing Rule H.2.d.).

(e) Meet annually with the Executive Committee of the General Assembly Council to discuss items of concern and common interest.

(f) Be available to the Stated Clerk for consultation on all proposed amendments to the Standing Rules of the General Assembly and that such consultation shall occur prior to the Stated Clerk proposing any amendments to the Standing Rules of the General Assembly (see Standing Rule L.1.).

(g) Review the work of special committees and report to each session of the General Assembly a summary of the work being carried out by special committees, including recommendations to transfer the work assigned to a special committee elsewhere or to dismiss the committee (see Standing Rule K.1.e.).

(h) Review the evaluation of each General Assembly session secured by the Stated Clerk.

(i) Outline the programs for future General Assemblies sufficiently in advance to ensure an orderly progression of themes and emphases and to ensure the appointment of significant speakers and other program participants.

(j) Review and present to the Assembly Committee on Business Referral a recommendation regarding the Stated Clerk's proposed docket for the next session of the General Assembly (see Standing Rule C.4.a.).

(k) Review and present to the Assembly Committee on Business Referral a recommendation regarding the Stated Clerk's proposed referral of each item of business to an appropriate assembly committee (see Standing Rule C.3.).

(l) Assist the Moderator regarding the appointment of a commissioner to be the moderator of each assembly committee and a commissioner to serve as vice moderator of each assembly committee (see Standing Rule C.1.c.).

(m) Consult with the Moderator regarding the planning of all worship at the General Assembly (see Standing Rule G.a.).

(n) Coordinate the programmatic aspects of each General Assembly session, ensuring that adequate time is provided for the business that must be transacted.

(o) Review requests from entities of the General Assembly, governing bodies, other entities related to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in any way, or coalitions in which this denomination or any of its entities participate to schedule meetings, briefings, hearings, or other events of any kind during those hours when the General Assembly or its committees are in session.

Revised Section IV.Attachment: Section M

(p) Prepare a report, including recommendations on the docket and the referral of assembly business, to be printed and distributed with other materials provided to commissioners.

(q) Review and present to the General Assembly for its action the date and place of meeting six years hence and any changes in dates and places of meetings previously set (see Standing Rule I.1.a.).

(r) Review the recommendation of the Stated Clerk and set the amount of per diem for sessions of the General Assembly (see Standing Rule I.3.).

Advisory Committee on the Constitutionc. Advisory Committee on the Constitution

(1) The members of this committee shall be composed as provided for in Book of Order, G-13.0112a.

(2) Except as otherwise specified in the Book of Order, the committee shall be funded through the per capita budget of the Office of the General Assembly and receive staff services as provided by the Stated Clerk.

Advisory Committee on
Litigationd. Advisory Committee on Litigation

(1) The Advisory Committee on Litigation shall advise the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly in connection with instituting or participating in legal proceedings (see Functions of the Stated Clerk earlier in this section).

(2) The members of the committee shall ordinarily be attorneys, and the members shall be experienced in fields related to issues that may be the subject of legal proceedings in which the church is, or may become, interested. The committee shall be composed of six persons, elected by the General Assembly upon nomination by the General Assembly Nominating Committee. The advisory committee may invite other persons with special competency related to particular cases or situations to participate in the consideration of particular cases or issues. The members shall be evenly divided into three classes, shall serve six-year terms, and shall be eligible for election to one additional term. No member may serve more than two terms, full or partial. Members of this committee are exempted from the prohibition against service on more than one entity of the assembly set forth in Section M.3.a.(3) above.

(3) The committee shall elect its own moderator and ordinarily shall meet at the call of the Stated Clerk. The committee may carry on its work by correspondence, telephone consultation (including conference telephone calls), or meetings.

(4) The committee shall advise the Stated Clerk regarding participation in litigation related to matters of civil and religious liberty, relations between church and state, and any other matters related to the mission and interest of the church. The Advisory Committee on Litigation shall advise the Stated Clerk regarding the establishment and maintenance of a resource file of legal documents as a means of assisting the governing bodies and agencies of the church in initiating or participating in litigation in the areas within the concerns of the committee.

(5) The committee shall be funded through the per capita budget of the Office of the General Assembly, receive staff services as provided by the Stated Clerk, and designate a representative to the annual session of the General Assembly (see Standing Rule B.3.).

(6) The committee shall report to each session of the General Assembly.

General Assembly Nominating Committeee. General Assembly Nominating Committee

The General Assembly Nominating Committee shall be composed as provided for in Book of Order, G-13.0111.

Board of Directors, Presbyterian
Historical Societyf. Board of Directors for the Presbyterian Historical Society

(1) The board of directors exists to assure that the mission of the Presbyterian Historical Society—to collect, preserve, and share our history—is achieved in the most effective and efficient manner, in faithfulness to God's call and in support of the mission of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

(2) The board of directors shall be composed of a minimum of eight and a maximum of twelve persons. The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly shall elect and the General Assembly shall confirm the board. The members of the board of directors shall serve a four-year term and shall be eligible to serve one additional full or partial term.

(3) The budget for the Presbyterian Historical Society shall be submitted as part of the Office of the General Assembly's regular budget process.

(4) The responsibilities of the board of directors shall include:

(a) Establishing the strategic direction for the Presbyterian Historical Society with the concurrence of the Stated Clerk.

(b) Providing oversight of and accountability for the Presbyterian Historical Society to the church at large.

(c) Ensuring the financial stability of the Presbyterian Historical Society.

(d) Advocating for and promoting the work of the Presbyterian Historical Society.

Committee on Ecumenical Relations

g. Committee on Ecumenical Relations

(1) The Committee on Ecumenical Relations shall function to give a high profile to the vision of the ecumenical involvement and work as central to the gospel and key to the life of the church; plan and coordinate, in consultation with the agencies and governing bodies of the church, the involvement of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in ecumenical relations and work; connect the ecumenical efforts of all governing body levels of the church; provide a common point for all ecumenical efforts connecting us with those outside our church; keep a unity of vision that includes the ecclesiastical, programmatic, ecumenical, and denominational (organizational) parts of our ministries and commitments; articulate the Reformed and Presbyterian identity in the midst of our ecumenical commitments; and promote awareness of the role of the unity of all humankind in the search for the unity of the church; and promote the unity of the church as an exhibition of the kingdom to the world.

(2) The Committee on Ecumenical Relations shall be composed of twenty members. Twelve shall be members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) nominated for at-large positions by the General Assembly Nominating Committee (GANC) and elected by the General Assembly in as nearly equal classes as possible. Four shall be members of four churches invited by the Stated Clerk to appoint one member each from their communion to serve as voting members of the committee. One of the four churches shall be one of our ecumenical church partners. The other three shall be our full communion partners. One member shall be appointed by the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly. One member shall be appointed by the General Assembly Council. The other members of the committee shall be the Stated Clerk or the Associate Stated Clerk for Ecumenical Relations and the Executive Director of the General Assembly Council or the Associate Director of Ecumenical Partnerships of the Worldwide Ministries Division, both serving ex officio with vote.

In addition, the directors of the three divisions of the General Assembly Council shall be corresponding members without vote.

(3) Elected members of the committee shall be elected to a four-year term, and be eligible for election to one additional term. No member may serve more than two terms, full or partial. Appointed members from ecumenical church partners shall serve for four years and be eligible for appointment to one additional term.

(4) The Committee on Ecumenical Relations will meet twice annually and shall have the responsibility to do the following:

(a) Envision, under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, how the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) leads and participates in the search for the unity of Christ's Church within this nation and worldwide, and propose appropriate strategies to the General Assembly, its agencies, and other governing bodies;

(b) Provide oversight to the implementation of the responsibilities given to the General Assembly in Book of Order, Form of Government, Chapter XV. Relationships, G-15.0000–.0302;

(c) Act on and process recommendations and proposals addressing ecclesiastical ecumenical work of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.);

(d) Propose to the General Assembly, for election, Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) members to serve on ecumenical delegations to the National Council of Churches of Christ

Revised Section IV.Attachment: Section M

(USA), the World Council of Churches, the World Alliance of Reformed Churches, and the Caribbean and North American Area Council assemblies;

(e) Represent the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in negotiation and coordination of the search for Christian unity with other communions as authorized by the General Assembly;

(f) Select Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) representatives to serve on ecumenical dialogues, ecumenical negotiations on church unions, multilateral and bilateral dialogues, and representatives from the PC(USA) serving as PC(USA) ecumenical representatives to other church assemblies;

(g) Oversee the implementation of “A Formula of Agreement” (Full Communion) with the Evangelical Lutheran Church of America, the Reformed Church in America, and the United Churches of Christ, and represent the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in planning and coordinating structures to carry this out;

(h) Give guidance to the nurturing of unity among Presbyterian and Reformed churches in the U.S.A., with one another and with the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.);

(i) Empower all agencies of the General Assembly and governing bodies to carry out their mission program with an ecumenical consciousness and in close coordination with one another and to model this consciousness in their own work;

(j) Propose and advocate to appropriate bodies of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) that they share in funding ecumenical and conciliar ministry;

(k) Propose to the General Assembly names of churches to be invited to send ecumenical advisory delegates to the General Assembly meeting (see Standing Rule B.2.g.);

(l) Give guidance to the Stated Clerk and General Assembly agencies on ecclesial (church-to-church) ecumenical relations, helping to carry out the General Assembly’s G-13.0103s and t responsibilities;

(m) Give guidance to General Assembly agencies on new opportunities to strengthen the relationships with other faith communities and on strategies for fulfilling the General Assembly mandates on interfaith relationships;

(n) Give guidance to the Mission Agency on ecumenical mission opportunities in partnership with churches in the United States and around the world; and

(o) Give guidance to program entities on ecumenical formation of Presbyterians, both ministers and lay members.

(5) The committee shall be funded through the per capita budget of the Office of the General Assembly. The co-chairs of the Ecumenical Staff Team will have primary staffing responsibilities. The Ecumenical Staff Team shall be a staff resource to the committee.

4. Review of Agencies and Committees

a. Based on a six-year schedule, the agencies of the General Assembly will be reviewed to evaluate the relationship of their individual ministry with the mission of the whole Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). On nomination of the General Assembly Nominating Committee, the General Assembly will elect two committees, each to review the work of one of the agencies of the General Assembly. Each committee will be composed of twelve members: four commissioners from the previous three General Assemblies, four who have served on the board of a General Assembly entity other than the one being reviewed, and four at large. The at-large members may include ecumenical partners. The committee will use the Standards for Review of General Assembly Agencies in the Guidelines and Policies of the General Assembly. The committee will report to the next General Assembly following its election the results of the review and make recommendations based on its findings.

b. The permanent, advocacy, and advisory committees and commissions of the General Assembly will be reviewed to evaluate their processes to fulfill the mandates given to them by the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). The General Assembly will review the work of the permanent, advocacy, and advisory committees and commissions based on a six-year schedule. A committee at the General Assembly will be assigned the review. The assembly committee will use the Standards for Review of General Assembly Permanent, Advocacy, and Advisory Committees and Commissions in the Guidelines and Policies of the General Assembly. The assembly committee will report to the General Assembly the results of the review and make recommendations based on its findings.

5. Proposed amendments to this Section IV of the Organization for Mission from related bodies or from within the Office of the General Assembly, shall be submitted to the Committee on the General Assembly (COGA). COGA shall review these proposed changes and forward those it approves as part of its report to the General Assembly.

[The assembly approved Item 08-15. See pp. 19, 37.]

The General Assembly Council recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) confirm the General Assembly Council's election of Linda Bryant Valentine to a four-year team as General Assembly Council Executive Director, effective July 1, 2006.

Rationale

Linda Valentine is an elder at the Fourth Presbyterian Church in Chicago, Illinois. If confirmed by the 217th General Assembly (2006), she will begin her new job July 1, 2006. Under the terms of her call, her salary will be $160,000 per year.

Valentine is a senior executive attorney with more than thirty years of business and not-for-profit experience. As senior vice president of Motorola, she was one of the two highest ranked women in the company of more than 130,000 employees and served as general counsel for Motorola's communications businesses, which had sales of $29 billion in 2000. She has held leadership and managerial positions in law, business, and professional and nonprofit organizations.

She is currently fund manager and general counsel for Opportunity International, one of the world's largest microfinance networks providing loans and financial services to poor persons in twenty-eight developing countries.

In a statement presented to the General Assembly Council, Valentine writes:

I am motivated by the parable of the talents. God has bestowed on me energy, health, intelligence, compassion, and opportunity. My responsibility—and my joy—is to use and multiply my talents and the talents of others to bring wholeness and welfare to others. I have chosen to work at Opportunity International, an organization motivated by Christ's call to serve the poor. After twenty-five years in corporate life, I describe my work now as working at the intersection of heart and mind. It is professionally complex and challenging—doing large, complex financial transactions and alliances so that we can provide $50, $100, and $1,000 loans to give poor people resources, dignity, and opportunity to transform their lives spiritually, economically and socially. . .

Prior to joining Motorola in 1984, Valentine was an associate in a large Philadelphia law firm, and attorney for Atlantic Richfield Company and United Airlines. Before joining the staff of Opportunity International, she was a member of the board of directors and was a senior vice president of the software company TenFold.

Those who have worked with Linda Valentine describe her style as setting direction and empowering others to fill in the details. She enjoys complex, multipart projects, particularly orchestrating how best to go about a project, and enjoys working with people. We would describe Valentine as a management-oriented visionary. She demonstrates strong public speaking skills. The committee was impressed with her calm, non-anxious demeanor. Her experience includes effectively managing cultural change within an organization, downsizing and budget decline, which makes her sensitive to similar issues within the church.

The General Assembly Council Executive Director Search Committee found Valentine to be a very good listener who asks insightful questions. She presents herself modestly and confidently. She is a "quick study" who is direct and clear. Her love and passion for the church is obvious, as is her caring nature.

Also from the statement of faith she presented to the General Assembly Council:

I believe in Jesus as God incarnate in human form, sent by God to earth to help us better know the sovereign will of God and that we are called to emulate the actions and teachings of Jesus. I search to understand the will of God, as revealed in Christ, and that guides my personal, family, and professional life, my views on public issues, and my active participation in my church. I aspire to live in hope and not in fear, to love neighbor and welcome stranger. My love for my children is unconditional and immeasurable, and the love of my family provides me foundation and strength and reminds me what love of neighbor can mean.

Linda Valentine received her JD degree from Georgetown University Law Center and a Bachelor of Arts degree with distinction in economics and political science from the University of Michigan. She studied business in the MBA program at the University of Southern California. She and her husband, Chris, are the parents of three children.

I Believe

God the creator, who came to earth in human form in Jesus Christ to reconcile us to God and redeem us from sin, is with us always, calling us to love God and one another. In baptism we are invited to remember that each of us is a child of God, and that “you belong to Jesus Christ forever.”

Quiet, gentle tears come easily to me: at acts of human kindness, a stranger reaching out to help another; at little children walking down the aisle on Palm Sunday, for all the hope and potential they represent; at goodbyes, for the separation it means from loved ones. This happens to me quietly in private and sometimes noticeably in public. I have come to treasure these moments of social inconvenience (although they still embarrass my teenage children).

I treasure these moments because they remind me of God’s own revelation in Jesus. I’ve come to see them as gifts that call my attention to God’s word lived and spoken through Jesus: “I was a stranger and you welcomed me.” Mt 25:35; “Let the little children come to me, and do not stop them; for it is to such as these that the kingdom of God belongs.” Lk 18:16; “This is my commandment, that you love one another as I have loved you.” Jn 15:12.

I have been blessed with abundance in my life - a strong and loving family, good health and opportunity. Jesus describes in the parable of the talents the response that is God’s will, to use our gifts productively. “Well done, good and trustworthy servant; you have been trustworthy in a few things, I will put you in charge of many things; enter into the joy of your master.” Mt 25.23 Not only is this a command to use those gifts with which I have been entrusted, it is the source of great joy for me.

We are called to use our talents and the gracious gifts of God individually as in this parable and collectively in the Church: to love, to serve, to feed, to shelter, to share in the life of Christ with grace and compassion and work for God’s kingdom on earth.

“See what love God has for us that we are called children of God,” our pastor says, walking a child up the aisle as the congregation smiles softly, some (including me) with moist eyes, “and so we are.”

[The assembly approved Item 08-16. See pp. 19, 37.]

The General Assembly Council recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006), in conjunction with approving Item 08-08, grant the General Assembly Nominating Committee latitude with regard to the composition of the General Assembly Council as the General Assembly Council adjusts to the changes called for pursuant to Item 08-08.

Rationale

The 215th General Assembly (2003) approved Standing Rule and Book of Order changes to the terms of persons serving on the boards of agencies of the General Assembly. During that transition, the General Assembly Nominating Committee (GANC) was given latitude with the board composition as the agencies adjusted to the new four-year terms. The General Assembly Council (GAC) asks the 217th General Assembly (2006) to grant the GANC similar latitude as it determines the GAC’s composition requirements in G-13.0202, all with the goal of being in full compliance after the 218th General Assembly (2008).

Commissioners’ Resolution. On the Moderator Convening a Meeting Regarding Worldwide Mission Work of the PC(USA).

In order to continue the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)’s long tradition in worldwide mission and the evolution of our relationships with partner churches overseas, that the 217th General Assembly (2006) direct the Moderator to convene a meeting with the Executive Director of the General Assembly Council (GAC) and the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly, with representation of the GAC and staff, [the Outreach Foundation, Presbyterian Frontier Fellowship, Medical Benevolence Foundation,] PC(USA) organizations, and other persons concerned about the future of the worldwide mission work of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) for the 21st century. The purpose of this meeting is [to ensure the continuity of our commitments to ecumenical responsiveness, holism in mission, and respect for the responsibilities given to the General Assembly by meeting:]

1. To confer on an understanding of a theology of mission to share the Good News of Jesus Christ as a part of the whole church of God.
2. To confer on an understanding of how that theology of mission fits within the framework of Reformed theology of the church.
3. To develop an understanding based in G-13.0103 of the General Assembly's coordination and ministration of worldwide mission for the PC(USA).
4. To consult with some of the partner churches in preparation of ~~the~~ a report to the 218th General Assembly (2008).

Item 08-18

Commissioners' Resolution. On Theological Diversity and the Women's Ministries Program Area.

That the 217th General Assembly (2006) instruct the Women's Ministries program area and the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC), always to include a diverse, yet Reformed, range of theological viewpoints in their job requirements consistent with the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

Rationale

On March 31, 2005, the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns posted a job opportunity, (No5-03-35), which among other job descriptions states that the employee "advocates on behalf of the work being done by women theologians and of the theology offered from the experiential perspective."

Since not all Reformed women or women theologians embrace theology from an experiential perspective, the job description keeps a diverse collective of women from applying for the position.

All women are unique. Therefore, there is not one normative theological or experiential perspective.

The Book of Order requires that "[p]ersons of ... different theological positions consistent with the Reformed tradition ... shall be guaranteed full participation ... in the decision making of the church" (G-4.0403).

The Book of Order further requires that "[g]overning bodies of the church shall be responsible for implementing the church's commitment to inclusiveness and participation ..." (G-9.0104a).

The Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC) website states that its "primary responsibilities include ... [a]dvocating for full inclusiveness and equality in the church and in society." Therefore, it hardly seems likely that they would condone such a limitation on the hiring of staff.

The Women's Ministries program area as an entity of the General Assembly Council is subject also to the Personnel Policies of the General Assembly Council.

*Item 08-C. Audit

[The Assembly Committee on Mission Coordination approved a recommendation, below, regarding Item 08-C. See pp. 36, 38.]

That the 217th General Assembly (2006) assign the review of the audit for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, for December 31, 2004–2005 to the General Assembly Committee for the Review of the General Assembly Council due to the delay in the completion of those statements.

Background

The audits for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, and the Presbyterian Foundation's audits were delayed this year. The Foundation is the fiduciary for certain loan funds for which PC(USA), A Corporation, provides administration and disbursement services to congregations throughout the country. All loans are properly recorded and all assets are confirmed. The delay was due to how to best reflect these loan funds on each corporation's financial statements.

Item 08-Info

1. Assigned functions

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) works to fulfill its General Assembly mandate to provide advocacy and monitoring on issues of concern to people of color in both church and society. The committee evaluates social trends in church and society, and provides advice and counsel to the General Assembly (GA) and General Assembly Council (GAC). The committee addresses issues, including civil rights, racial justice, environmental justice, economic justice, public education, law enforcement, health care, employment, and housing, as they impact communities of color. The committee also monitors the implementation of programs and policies approved by the church that impact the participation and quality of life for people of color within the church. The committee works in close cooperation with other agencies and entities within the church, including the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC) and the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP), to fulfill its responsibilities. The ACREC's assigned functions, as stated in the GAC Manual of Operations are:

- a. Prepare policy statements, resolutions, recommendations, reports, and advice and counsel memoranda on racial ethnic concerns to the General Assembly at the request of the General Assembly, the General Assembly Council, or on its own initiative.
- b. Advise the General Assembly Council on matters of racial ethnic concerns including statements concerning pressing issues that the council may wish to consider between meetings of the General Assembly.
- c. Provide advice and counsel to the General Assembly and its committees on overtures, commissioners resolutions, reports, and actions before the General Assembly that impact issues of racial ethnic concern.
- d. Assist the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy in maintaining an up-to-date and accurate compilation of General Assembly policy on racial ethnic concerns and provide information to the church as requested.
- e. Provide the Stated Clerk, the Moderator of the General Assembly, and the Executive Director of the General Assembly Council with information as they fulfill their responsibilities to communicate and interpret General Assembly policies on racial ethnic concerns.
- f. Monitor the implementation of racial justice policies and programs relative to racial ethnic concerns.
- g. Through advocacy maintain a strong prophetic witness to the church and for the church on existing and emerging issues of racial ethnic concern.

The work of the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) is coordinated through the Office of the General Assembly Council by the Deputy Executive Director of the General Assembly Council. The committee has direct access to the General Assembly and its chair has corresponding member status with the General Assembly Council and with the General Assembly.

The committee is composed of twelve regular members representing African Americans, Native Americans, Latina/o Americans, Asian Americans, Middle Eastern Americans, and European Americans.

The current membership of the committee is as follows: Judith Armour-Pingel, chairperson and at-large Native American member; Evelyn Kelly, vice chairperson, at-large African American member, and liaison to Mission Responsibility Through Investments (MRTI); Ralph Scissons, secretary/treasurer and Native American Consulting Committee member; Eugene Turner, chair of the Resource and Referral Subcommittee and National Black Presbyterian Caucus member; John Spangler, at-large European American member, chair of the Study and Comment subcommittee; Arlene Esparza, liaison to the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC) and at-large Latina member; Mauricio Chacón, liaison to the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) and National Hispanic/Latino Caucus member; Carolin Graise, at-large Middle Eastern member; Patricia Lee, National Asian Caucus member; Adel Malek, National Middle Eastern Caucus member; Sung-Kook Shin, at-large Asian member; and Jim Rigsby, General Assembly Council (GAC) Executive Committee member. Charles Easley was appointed GAC Executive Committee representative to ACREC in September 2005.

Liaisons to ACREC are: Esperanza Guajardo, liaison from the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP); and R. Ann (Ani) Lelea, liaison from the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC).

2. Accomplishments

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns prepared advice and council memoranda on overtures to the assembly having significant implications for people of color. Immediately prior to the convening of the 216th General Assembly (2004), the ACREC provided a briefing session for commissioners to the General Assembly highlighting those overtures for which the committee prepared advice and counsel memoranda.

The ACREC held three regular meetings in 2004: January 29–31, in Louisville, Ky.; August 12–15, in Albuquerque, N.Mex.; and November 12–13, in Atlanta, Ga.. There were also three regular meetings in 2005: January 20–22, in San Francisco, Calif.; June 2–4, in Louisville, Ky.; and October 20–22, in Phoenix, Ariz.

The January 2005 meeting in San Francisco was a joint meeting with the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns and the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy. The three committees participated in a full-day training session facilitated by a cultural proficiency consultant, Kikanza Nuri Robins. The ACREC met with ACWC in a joint session to identify areas of common interest where the two committees could work collaboratively.

The committee has designed a new logo, a brochure that provides an introduction and overview of the work of ACREC, and a website at www.pcusa.org/acrec. The website provides information about the mission and purpose of ACREC, identifies issues that ACREC is working on, post reports and other material relating to the General Assembly, and provides links to additional resources and partners. Presbyterians are urged to utilize the website as a tool, linking them with resources for advocacy on issues of racial justice.

The ACREC appointed a task force to conduct consultations in 2005 with the executive officers of the six corporate entities of the PC(USA), as called for in the ACREC report, Creating a Climate for Change Within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), approved by the 216th General Assembly (2004). The findings, analysis, and recommendations of the ACREC are reported to the assembly in our report: Creating a Climate for Change Within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), submitted to the 217th General Assembly (2006).

The ACREC observes that patterns of immigration and birthrates are contributing to rapidly changing demographics that are challenging the church on many fronts. New immigrant communities are expanding the diversity within conventionally designated categories of race and ethnicity. The ACREC is mindful that as the church pursues its vision of becoming a truly inclusive, multiracial/multicultural community of faith, it continues to confront the patterns of systemic racism and barriers to change. As the church embraces and welcomes diversity, it is absolutely essential that the church be diligent in its efforts to combat racism, deconstructing the structures of privilege that impede the church's capacity for effective ministry and mission in communities of color and commends the tools of cultural proficiency for use at all levels of the church.

In response to a recommendation in the ACREC report to the 216th General Assembly (2004) on the Church's Effort to Combat Racism and Live Out Its Antiracism Commitments, ACREC is working with the planning team for the 2007 National Racial Ethnic convocation, to host a pre-conference event at the convocation that would provide a forum for dialogue on this issue.

The committee received the report from the Women of Color Consultation and formed a joint working group with the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC) to review the recommendations of the consultation. The ACREC and the ACWC have submitted a joint resolution to the 217th General Assembly (2006) to create a joint task force to respond to the recommendations of the report and monitor its implementation throughout the church. The full report is included at Appendix A: Report and Recommendations from the Women of Color Consultation, of Item 08-12. The report is also available online at: <http://www.pcusa.org/women/resources/index.htm>.

B. Presbyterian Council for Chaplains and Military Personnel—From the National Ministries Division

The Presbyterian Council for Chaplains and Military Personnel (PCCMP) has been extraordinarily active in its support of chaplains since the 216th General Assembly (2004). Ever since 9-11, reserves and National Guard have been mobilized in large numbers. That continues today with sixty-seven reserve and National Guard chaplains mobilized from 2004 to 2006.

We have been in near constant contact with most of them—assisting in their entry in the active military; speaking with their families, churches, and presbyteries; helping explain pension and USERRA rights; providing support when they returned from the military. With many forces deployed to Afghanistan, Iraq, Kuwait, Djibouti, and the region, the tempo of reserve component utilization may remain high for years. We've enjoyed assisting individuals, churches, presbyteries, and General Assembly offices in supporting deployed military members and chaplains. The PC(USA) was especially helpful in posting the names of all of our deployed chaplains for prayer on the PC(USA) Website. We've also been gratified to see prayers offered, care packages mailed, and chaplains "adopted" by congregations.

Approximately forty-five of our active duty chaplains were deployed into Southwest Asia for actions regarding Iraq and Afghanistan from 2004 to 2006. Many are still deployed. Our military chaplains suffer the same hardships as other military; their ministry is often in harm's way. Some of them are quite exhausted after a war tour; some have symptoms of post-traumatic stress. We seek to be with them and find appropriate support. We held a retreat for chaplains attended by 115 chaplains and family members. We represented the church at retirement ceremonies for twelve chaplains. We were at funerals for several retired chaplains. We look forward to contacts after chaplains redeploy and are reunited with their families.

The PCCMP has two core functions:

- The ecclesial duty of endorsement of clergy for service in the military and Veterans Administration (VA) chaplaincies,
- The pastoral function of supporting those same clergy during their time of service.

Over the past two years, we approved fifteen for military chaplain candidate (seminarian) programs. We endorsed nineteen for the Army, Navy, and Air Force; some are in the reserves while others went immediately to active duty chaplaincy. We endorsed ten for the VA chaplaincy and 9 for the Civil Air Patrol (Air Force Auxiliary). Each approval or endorsement requires a collection of application, transcripts, presbytery approval, and letters of reference. After the documents are gathered, we interview the candidates. A seminarian seeking approval for a military chaplain candidate program receives one-on-one treatment.

Our current data on chaplains by denomination is below. We provide endorsement and support to 47 seminarians and 341 clergy. Eighteen of the active duty are female as are two of our VA chaplains. Most of our presbyteries have participants in one or more of the chaplaincy programs.

	Chaplain Candidate	Reserve/ Guard*	Active Military	Full Time VA	Part Time VA	Civil Air Patrol
PC(USA)	44	121	98	16	44	27
Associate Reformed	2	2	11	1		2
Cumberland	1	2	8	1	2	4
Cumberland in America		1	1

*Of these Reserve/Guard, 37 are currently mobilized

We attended General Assemblies or General Synod for all of our denominations. The chaplain ministry is well received and supported by each denomination. We also participate in the GAC of the PC(USA) without vote because of our covenant relationship; we do most of that work within the National Ministries Division. The PC(USA) General Assembly Council honored chaplains at their April meeting. We will host our annual meeting in Nashville, Tennessee, from 25–27 October 2006.

The ongoing pastoral care for chaplains is an extension of what presbyteries do through committees on ministry. We expect our chaplains to maintain a sound relationship with the PCCMP and their presbytery. We seek to keep a quarterly written contact with each active duty chaplain. We augment that contact with email and telephone. We also make personal contact with each chaplain at least every other year with a visit to their duty station or a meeting at a gathering of chaplains. We also respond very quickly when chaplains and families are in crisis. We work hard to serve chaplains who are changing commands, moving from the U.S.A. overseas or the reverse. Quite a few stop by the office in the District of Columbia while in a move or when in Washington for military duty. The PCCMP also hosts an annual retreat for chaplains and families; this facilitates networking and mutual support for our Presbyterian clergy who are often isolated from other Presbyterian contact.

The PCCMP works to interpret its mission and needs to the church. We had good support from Presbyterians Today, Horizons, and the Presbyterian News Service to explain what chaplains do. We've also been published in several seminary publications, the Outlook, and the Layman. We made visits to eight seminaries this year and to many presbyteries to interpret the chaplain story and PCCMP mission.

The PCCMP also maintains sound working relations with the chiefs of chaplains offices for each branch of the military and the VA. It offers leadership in the Military Chaplain Association, the National Conference on Ministry to the Armed Forces (NCMAF), and the Endorsers Council for Veterans Affairs Chaplaincy (ECVAC). The NCMAF is the advisory body to the secretary of defense on religion.

Keeping the ministry vital with adequate funding has been difficult. We have redoubled our development efforts, using a part-time development officer and several regional volunteer assistants. We have also found a new fund source in the Combined Federal Campaign. However, the bedrock of our financial health remains with the PC(USA). We are most appreciative of our restored covenant relationship (renewed in 2005) and the inherent financial support of this ministry and function of the church.

Yours in Christ's Service,

Edward T. Brogan, Director
Chaplain, Colonel, USAF (Ret)

C. Report of the General Assembly Council on Current Task Forces, Work Groups, and Ad Hoc Committees

As instructed by the 204th General Assembly (1992), the General Assembly Council presents to the General Assembly annually, the work of all task forces, work groups, ad hoc committees, and similar bodies established by the General Assembly Council, its divisions, or other assembly entities (Minutes, 1992, Part I, pp. 144, 147, 277–78).

All Ministries Divisions and the Executive Director's Office were requested to disclose information on how many task forces, work groups, ad hoc committees, and similar bodies were currently at work in their entity. Of the entities responding, sixty-five such groups are currently operating. Fifty-five of the groups were reported as having ongoing responsibilities. The other ten groups have set completion dates with a written report expected by the entity, the General Assembly Council, or the General Assembly itself. Whenever it is possible, the General Assembly Council assigns tasks to an existing part of its structure. All persons serving on a board, committee, task force, or work group with an expected life of more than two years are selected through the General Assembly Nominating Committee process.

D. Affirmative Action and Equal Employment Opportunity Report of Progress

1. Introduction

Out of the various “calls” to mission, justice, equality, affirmation, love, hope, and charity, the partnership of congregations and governing bodies works to achieve the goals of equal employment opportunity and affirmative action.

2. Our Goals

As outlined in the Churchwide Plan for Affirmative Action and Equal Employment Opportunity, approved by the General Assembly in 1985, the church has “accepted the EEO goals of 40 percent women and 20 percent racial ethnic as established by the General Assembly Council.

3. How the Information Is Reported

Entities of the General Assembly are reported separately as well as jointly. The following categories are reported:

- General Assembly Council (PCUSA);
- Office of the General Assembly (OGA);
- Presbyterian Church (USA) Board of Pensions (BOP);
- Presbyterian Church (USA) Foundation (FDN);
- Presbyterian Publishing Corporation (PPC);
- Presbyterian Investment & Loan Program (PILP);
- synods;
- presbyteries;
- theological institutions; and
- Conference Centers including Ghost Ranch Abiquiu & Santa Fe, Plaza Resalano, Stony Point, and Montreat
- Jarvie Commonweal Service
- Hubbard Press

4. Our Results

For 2004 and 2005, all reporting entities met the 40 percent goal for women. General Assembly Council, Office of the General Assembly, conference centers, theological institutions, Presbyterian Publishing Corporation, Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Board of Pensions, Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation, and Jarvie Commonweal Service met the 20 percent goal for racial ethnic persons. Churchwide totals met the 40 percent goal for women and the 20 percent goal for racial ethnic persons.

E. General Assembly Council Information Report for Changes to Appendixes of GAC Manual of Operations

According to the General Assembly Council Manual of Operations, page 1, “The General Assembly Council may change those appendixes to the Manual of Operations that are within its venue following a first reading at the council’s opening plenary session and adoption at the second plenary session. The General Assembly Executive Committee shall submit a written report of changes to the appendixes to the next General Assembly through its appropriate committee.”

The General Assembly Council reports, for information, the following changes to the appendixes of the General Assembly Council Manual of Operations: (Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.)

1. Changes to Appendix 1:

a. Revision to paragraph V.C.1 captioned “Membership”:

“The Audit Committee shall be composed of five (5) General Assembly Council voting members, nominated by the General Assembly Council Nominating Committee, and elected by the General Assembly Council for a four-year term, eligible for an additional term (Section V.B.2.a), and two (2) at-large members for special expertise, nominated by the General Assembly Nominating Committee for a four-year term and elected by the General Assembly, eligible for an additional term. At-large members shall have voice and vote. The General Assembly Nominating Committee shall consult with Mission Support Services and Audit Committee for expertise needed on the committee. (Section VII.F.2b) In addition, one (1) member from COGA will serve with voice and vote. The COGA member will be appointed by COGA for a four-year term, eligible for an additional term, not to exceed the expiration or termination of the COGA member’s term on COGA.”

b. Revision to Paragraph V.C.3. captioned “Responsibilities” at subparagraph V.C.3.i.:

“i. Report directly to the General Assembly Council on their activities as frequently as the Council deems necessary and to both the General Assembly Council and Committee on the Office of the General Assembly with regard to the results of the external audit.”

c. Revision to Section VI.E. Mission Support Services, 2. Committee Membership:

“Mission Support Services Committee is composed of voting members from the General Assembly Council nominated by the General Assembly Nominating Committee. One of the elected members shall serve as chair. ~~Three~~ One at-large members with voice and vote (in committee) shall be nominated by the General Assembly Nominating Committee and elected by the General Assembly. (For elected member liaisons, see VII.D.9.) GAC Manual of Operations.”

Background

The GAC’s Governance Task Force has made various recommendations to reduce the size of the General Assembly Council. Currently the GAC Manual of Operations requires the Mission Support Services (MSS) Committee to have three at-large members. It is consistent with the Governance Task Force’s recommendations to reduce the number of at-large members on the MSS Committee. As of the June General Assembly meeting, there will be two vacancies among the three at-large MSS Committee members. So, this is an ideal time to implement this change because it will not affect the terms of any current at-large MSS Committee members and the 217th General Assembly (2006) will not be required to elect two new at-large members to the MSS Committee.

Appendix 13
Guidelines On The Joint Meetings Of The Committee On The Office Of The General Assembly
And The Executive Committee Of The General Assembly Council

Scheduling and Format

1. The joint meeting shall be comprised of the members of the full Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) and the Executive Committee of the General Assembly Council (GAC).
2. The responsibility to schedule the date and prepare the agenda will be determined together by the two chairs (Committee on the Office of the General Assembly [COGA] and the General Assembly Council [GAC]) and the Executive Director of the GAC and the Stated Clerk. They shall also determine which staff will be present.
3. ~~The responsibility to moderate the meeting will alternate annually. On even years (1994, 1996 ...) the chair of the GAC will be the primary moderator; odd years (1995, 1997 ...) the chair of the COGA will be the primary moderator. The chair of the COGA and the chair of the GAC will co-moderate the meeting. The primary moderator will see that~~ The COGA will ensure that administrative notes are taken and distributed in a timely manner. ~~The GAC staff related to the primary moderator shall be responsible for logistical details.~~
4. The meeting shall, if possible, be scheduled in the ~~Fall~~ Winter, when it would be very appropriate to review together the previous General Assembly and to begin looking at the next year’s General Assembly. ~~Additionally, if deemed necessary, a Spring meeting shall be scheduled to review the plans for the upcoming General Assembly.~~
- ~~5.5.~~ The need for additional meetings shall be determined and called as agreed upon by the General Assembly Council Chair and the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly Moderator.

- 6.5- The joint meetings should be primarily a time of dialogue about mutual concerns. ~~and input to the deliberate process. We strongly urge that for several years there be no action items on the agenda.~~
- 7.6- Each meeting should begin with a time of “getting to know you” and community building and, at least, include some time in a setting where people are NOT seated at tables.

Topics for Discussion

- Emerging issues in the church and General Assembly.
- Time of sharing of significant work for the coming twelve months.
- Reflection and evaluation of the last General Assembly and early planning or brainstorming (if Fall meeting) for the next General Assembly.
- Discuss future themes for General Assembly.
- Hear progress reports and give input to the work of any joint work groups.

Approval

Once the guidelines have been approved by both the executive committees (at separate meetings), they shall be in effect until modified or rescinded. These guidelines shall be reported to the full GAC and COGA and shall be placed in their respective manuals.

[APPROVED COGA EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE 4 JAN. 1995 ♦ GAC EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE 6 JAN. 1995.]

Revised: April 2006

GENERAL ASSEMBLY PER CAPITA APPORTIONMENT

Description of Per Capita

“In order to give meaning to the interdependent nature of Presbyterian polity” (Book of Order, G-9.0404), per capita is the responsible way of sharing the costs that equitably belong to the whole Presbyterian Church community expressing the essential unity of the church. The payment of per capita apportionment can be seen as a sign of healthy relationships within the church, giving tangible witness to the unity and wholeness promised to us in Jesus Christ.

The General Assembly per capita apportionment can be historically documented in the Presbyterian Church since the mid-1800s when a plan of mileage was adopted by the General Assembly in order to defray the expenses of commissioners attending meetings of the General Assembly. Over the ensuing years, per capita has been defined in various documents and reports as being used to fund ecclesiastical and administrative functions. The costs of these functions are appropriately shared by the whole church.

The chronology of per capita development in the twentieth century shows that General Assemblies took action to expand the spectrum of functions that the General Assembly per capita finances. Beginning in the early 1920s, the General Assembly voted to enlarge the office of the General Assembly to include various program departments that served the whole church. In the process, the General Assembly agreed to finance related administrative expenses through the General Assembly per capita apportionment. The planning, coordination, and review of mission were included in the former United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America in 1973, and this has been assembly policy for the reunited church since 1983.

Definition

Per capita is an opportunity for all communicant members of the Presbyterian Church through the governing bodies to participate equally, responsibly, and interdependently by sharing the cost of coordination and evaluation of mission; of performing ecclesiastical, legislative, and judicial functions that identify a Reformed church, while at the same time strengthening the sense of community among all Presbyterians.

Per Capita Budget Funding:

Office of the General Assembly

- General Assembly meetings
- Office of the General Assembly
- Ecumenical participation
- Department of History
- Fair share of Mission Support Services expenses

General Assembly Council

- General Assembly Council meeting
- Administration, planning, coordination of GAC
- Communications
- Fair share of Mission Support Services expenses

Procedures for Per Capita Budget

1. General Assembly Per Capita Budget

- a. The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) and the General Assembly Council (GAC) have joint responsibility for submitting a budget to be supported by per capita funds to the General Assembly. They will also submit an analysis of income which will support the budget and will recommend a per capita apportionment rate. The analysis will include anticipated receipts from per capita apportionment, an itemized estimate of all revenues anticipated from other sources, and the type and amount of funds on hand. (Note: the above statements were moved from 4.a.) ~~This responsibility will be facilitated by a Joint Budget Table (Team) with equal representation from COGA and GAC, and co-conveners.~~
- b. ~~The~~ A Joint Budget Table will be convened on the call of either COGA or GAC to ~~receive proposed budgets from COGA and the GAC to be funded by the per capita apportionment~~ make recommendations on unresolved matters.

~~2. The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly~~

- ~~a. The Stated Clerk, in consultation with the Executive Director of GAC, will submit to COGA a line item budget to be funded from the per capita apportionment of the General Assembly.~~
- ~~b. COGA will submit to the Joint Budget Table the COGA proposed budget to be funded from the per capita apportionment of the General Assembly.~~

~~3. The General Assembly Council~~

- ~~a. The Executive Director, in consultation with the Stated Clerk, will submit to the General Assembly Council a line item budget to be funded from the per capita apportionment of the General Assembly.~~
- ~~b. The General Assembly Council will submit to the Joint Budget Table the GAC proposed budget to be funded from the per capita apportionment of the General Assembly.~~

4. ~~The Provision for a~~ Joint Budget Table

- a. The Joint Budget Table, consisting of equal representation from the General Assembly Council (GAC) and the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA), will consider unresolved matters related to the Per Capita budgets ~~the proposed budgets submitted by COGA and GAC~~ and will recommend resolution to their respective bodies. ~~, a line item budget to be presented to the General Assembly. It will also submit an analysis of income which will support the budget and will recommend a per capita apportionment rate. The analysis will include anticipated receipts from per capita apportionment, an itemized estimate of all revenues anticipated from other sources, and the type and amount of funds on hand.~~
- ~~b. Either COGA or GAC may refer the proposed budget and or proposed per capita rate back to the Joint Budget Table for reconsideration.~~
- b. When COGA and GAC approve the budget and the per capita rate as recommended by the Joint Budget Table, COGA and GAC will jointly submit the budget and apportionment rate to the General Assembly. If agreement is not reached on particular issues, the report to the General Assembly will articulate the respective position of the two bodies.

- c. ~~The Joint Budget Table will also receive and consider proposed adjustments authorized by the General Assembly to the currently approved budget. The Joint Budget Table will report same through COGA and GAC back to the General Assembly for its information.~~
- c. When necessary, the Joint Budget Table may ~~make~~ recommend revisions ~~within~~ to the total approved per capita budget. ~~These Revisions will~~ must be reported to approved by both bodies.
- f. Any revisions that would increase the total budget funded by the per capita apportionment will be recommended by the Joint Budget Table to COGA and GAC for approval. This increase cannot exceed three (3) percent.

F. Report of the General Assembly Council Regarding More Changes to the Appendixes of the General Assembly Council Manual of Operations

According to the General Assembly Council Manual of Operations, Section I., page 1, “The General Assembly Council may change those appendixes to the Manual of Operations that are within its venue following a first reading at the council’s opening plenary session and adoption at the second plenary session. The General Assembly Executive Committee shall submit a written report of changes to the appendixes to the next General Assembly through its appropriate committee.”

The General Assembly Council approved changes to various appendixes to the GAC Manual of Operations and added a new appendix, “Policy and Procedure for Submitting Changes to the GAC Manual of Operations,” during its meetings of September 2004, September 2005, and February 2006. The General Assembly Council Executive Committee reports the changes:

1. New Appendix: Policy and Procedure for Submitting Changes to the GAC Manual of Operations

“SUBJECT: Providing a means whereby the General Assembly Council’s Procedures Subcommittee would fulfill responsibility (e) of the General Assembly Council Manual of Operations (V., A., 6., b., [3]), thereby ensuring that all substantial¹ proposed changes to the manuals of operations of all Ministries Division committees and other committees accountable to the General Assembly Council (GAC) fulfill the Purpose/Rationale described below.

“I. PURPOSE/RATIONALE

“To ensure that changes to the named manuals of operations are consistent with the General Assembly Council Manual of Operations and the Organization for Mission of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), plus any other pertinent documents.

“II. THOSE COVERED

“A. Congregational Ministries Division (CMD), Mission Support Services (MSS), National Ministries Division (NMD), Worldwide Ministries Division (WMD), GAC Executive Committee (GACX), Audit Committee

“B. Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC), Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP), Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC)

“C. Individual GAC members

“D. Committee of the Office of the General Assembly (COGA)

“E. General Assembly (GA)

“III. RESPONSIBILITY FOR ADMINISTERING

“Executive Committees of Ministries Division committees and the other named committees or any subcommittees established therein for the purpose of reviewing/revising manuals of operations.

“It is the policy of the General Assembly Council that

“A. Those named in section II. A, B, who are accountable to the GAC shall submit substantial¹ proposed changes to their manuals of operation to the GAC, through the Procedures Subcommittee of the General Assembly Council Executive Committee, following customary procedures, for adoption or rejection.

“B. Those named in section II. C. shall submit their proposed changes to the Procedures Subcommittee, as noted on section IV.

¹ “Substantial” changes are defined as non-editorial changes that alter the organization or functioning of the named entity.

“V. PROCEDURE

“A. Those noted in sections II. 2. A., B., shall submit substantial proposed changes to their manuals of operations to the GAC Executive Committee’s Procedures Subcommittee for review and possible recommendation, a minimum of one (1) month prior to GAC meeting.

“B. Those noted in section II. C., shall submit proposed changes to the GAC Manual of Operations in writing to the GAC Executive Committee’s Procedures Subcommittee chair a minimum of one (1) month prior to a GAC meeting.

“C. The Procedures Subcommittee shall respond, and may recommend, to submitting entities alterations to be made to their proposed changes to ensure consistency with existing GAC documents a minimum of two (2) weeks prior to a GAC meeting.

“V. ANTICIPATED OUTCOME

“Consistency among manuals of operation of all Ministries Division committees and other committees accountable to the GAC and consistency of all manuals of operation with the current General Assembly Council Manual of Operations, the Organization for Mission of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), plus any other pertinent documents.”

2. Appendix 1 Changes (deletions are shown with a strike-through and additions are in italic):

a. Section II.C. Development of the Agenda, insert the words “the Executive Director in conjunction with the GAC Chair” following the word “by” and strike the rest of the sentence so that it reads:

“The agenda for meetings of the council shall be developed by the Executive Director in conjunction with the GAC Chair ~~its Executive Committee.~~”

b. Delete II. F. Task Force Reports to the General Assembly:

~~“General Assembly Council shall transmit to General Assembly commissioners all recommendations of task forces established by General Assembly along with the council’s recommendations so that the General Assembly may be fully informed as it performs the business of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). (Minutes, 1992, Part I, pp. 149, 866)”~~

c. Section III. A.1. Chair, d., strike the sentence and add a new “d.” and a new “e.” and re-letter “e-i,” as “f-j” as follows:

d. Section III. A. 2. Vice Chair, c., insert the words “GAC Executive Committee’s” between the words, “be” and “personnel” so that the sentence reads:

“serve as chair of the GAC Executive Committee’s Personnel Subcommittee,”

e. Section III.B. Terms of Office, 1. Chair, Add the words, “or in non-assembly years with the Executive Committee Retreat” so that the section reads:

“The General Assembly Council shall elect annually its chair from among its voting members [Book of Order, G - 13.0202(e)]. The chair shall be elected at the first General Assembly Council meeting of the calendar year and shall serve as a corresponding member of the General Assembly Council Executive Committee (voice and without vote) until assuming office upon the adjournment of the assembly or in non-assembly years with the Executive Committee Retreat. The term shall be for one year renewable for an additional one-year term. The chair may continue to hold offices requiring election by the GAC, with the exception of chair or vice chair of any committee or board, if he or she was already serving in such positions upon his or her election. The chair may not be elected to an additional office by the GAC during the term of office, but is eligible to serve in appointed positions and will serve in ex-officio positions as mandated by the GAC Manual of Operations.”

f. Section III.B. Terms of Office, 2. Vice Chair, Add the words, “or in non-assembly years with the Executive Committee Retreat” so that the section reads:

“The General Assembly Council shall elect annually its vice chair from among its voting members [Book of Order, G-13.0202(e)]. The vice chair shall be elected at the first General Assembly Council meeting of the calendar year and shall serve as a corresponding member of the General Assembly Council Executive Committee (voice and without vote) until assuming office upon the adjournment of the assembly or in non-assembly years with the Executive Committee Retreat. The term shall be for one year renewable for an additional one-year term. The vice chair may continue to hold offices requiring election by the GAC, with the exception of chair or vice chair of any committee or board, if he or she was already serving in such positions upon his or her election. The vice chair may not be elected to an additional office by the GAC during the term of office, but is eligible to serve in appointed positions and will serve in ex-officio positions as mandated by the GAC Manual of Operations.”

g. Section V. Committees, A. Executive Committee, 4.j., strike “a” and add the words, “an annual” and delete the last three words of the sentence so that it reads:

“j. provide the council with ~~a~~ an annual report of its “Conflict of Interest Policy” and interpretation as necessary ~~at its Fall meeting~~ (See Appendix 7).”

h. Section V. Committees, A. Executive Committee, delete item 4.l. and renumber remaining items:

~~“recommend to the General Assembly Council at the meeting that precedes General Assembly the number of elected General Assembly Council members available for each assignment.”~~

i. Section V. Committees, A. Executive Committee, 4.p., strike the words, “Executive Committee of the” so that the sentence reads:

“p. meet with the ~~Executive Committee of the~~ Committee on the Office of the General Assembly at least biennially regarding mutual concerns, issues, and input to the deliberative process. (See Appendix 13 for Guidelines)”

j. Section V. A. 6. b. Procedures Subcommittee, Delete “(2) Function” and replace it with a new paragraph as follows:

~~“Through the Executive Committee, provide timely, preliminary, readiness review of reports coming to council for its consideration and action; develop recommendations to the Executive Committee of perceived, most helpful approaches for processing and considering each of those reports by the whole council. Procedures Subcommittee shall report at each meeting of the Executive Committee on all its work.”~~

“Review and report to the GAC Executive Committee on GAC materials and other agency reports being forwarded to the General Assembly. Review and report to the GAC Executive Committee on the GAC Manual of Operations, Organization for Mission, ministries division, Audit, advocacy and advisory committees’ manuals of operations for consistency with the GAC Manual of Operations and relevance within the current context.”

k. Section V. A.6. b. Procedures Subcommittee, 3. Responsibilities, delete the letter “(a)” and reletter “(b)–(e)” as “(a)–(d)”;

“(3) Responsibilities:

~~“(a) Work of the subcommittee shall include but not necessarily be limited to:~~

“(a) ~~(b)~~ Review of reports to General Assembly prepared by General Assembly Council in the course of its regular work.

“(b) ~~(e)~~ Review of reports to General Assembly prepared by another General Assembly entity, task force or committee requiring joint action, concurrence, and or comment by General Assembly Council. Such review shall ordinarily be in consultation with the appropriate Ministries Division and/or Mission Support Services.

“(c) ~~(d)~~ Recommend as needed, revisions and amendments to the Organization for Mission and General Assembly Council Manual of Operations.

~~“(d) (e) Review the manuals of operations of all Ministries Divisions committees and other committees sub-groups accountable to council, whenever there are changes, for consistency with the current General Assembly Council Manual of Operations. (Refer to VI.A.2. Appendix __)”~~

~~“(f) Coordinate, while in development, the components of the General Assembly Council’s biennial report to General Assembly to ensure completeness, uniformity, accuracy, and consistency.”~~

~~“(e) Review the minutes of the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns and Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns annually for consistency with established guidelines and report findings to the Advocacy Committees and the GAC Executive Committee.”~~

1. Section V. B., General Assembly Nominating Committee, 2. Responsibilities, c., add words as follow:

~~“(c) submit to the General Assembly Council for endorsement names of voting members of the council, for nomination by the General Assembly Nominating Committee and election by the General Assembly, to serve a four-year term as members of the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (3). Members are eligible for renomination. Those so elected shall assume their responsibilities upon the adjournment of the assembly or in non-assembly years with the Executive Committee retreat. (See Section VII. Election Procedures, D. General Assembly Council Members Assignment by Election or Appointment, 3.)”~~

- m. Section VI. Ministries Division Committees and the Mission Support Services Committee, change A.2. to read as follows:

~~“A manual of operations, conforming to the General Assembly Council Manual of Operations, shall be developed and regularly reviewed by each Ministries Division committee or Mission Support Services (MSS) committee and, after its approval by the General Assembly Council, shall be available from the Ministries Divisions Director’s office and the Deputy for MSS office. Changes to the manuals of Ministries Division Committees shall be reviewed by the Procedures Subcommittee for conformity and consistency with the GAC Manual of Operations, Organization for Mission, and Book of Order (See Appendix __). Groups accountable to the Executive Committee, Ministries Divisions or MSS shall have their structural and procedural guidelines approved by the appropriate Ministries Division committee, MSS committee, or GAC Executive Committee. [Refer to V.6.b.3.(d)]”~~

- n. Section VI. Ministries Division Committees and the Mission Support Services Committee, delete A. 3.:

~~“3. A staffing rationale shall be developed annually for each Ministries Division and Mission Support Services and submitted to the General Assembly Council for approval.~~

~~“a. Any staff deployed regionally must be a part of this staff rationale.~~

~~“b. Mission personnel are approved by the Worldwide Ministries Division.~~

~~“c. For programmatic coordination, the coordinator of Social Witness Policy is a member of the National Ministries Staff Leadership Team.~~

- o. Section VI. B. Congregational Ministries Division, 1. Purpose, add the following statement at the end of the paragraph so that it reads:

~~“The purpose of the Congregational Ministries Division is to equip, empower, resource, and inspire congregations, in order to strengthen their ministry of witness to Jesus Christ; working in cooperation with presbyteries, synods, theological seminaries, and conference centers, and in covenant with related organizations and networks. (See Organization for Mission, Section VI. General Assembly Council and Its Ministries Divisions, B. Ministries Divisions, 1.) By providing nurture and resources to congregations, the Division enables and inspires church leaders and members in their ministries.”~~

- p. Section VI. B. Congregational Ministries Division, delete 4. Program Areas and 5. Resource Area and replace it with the following:

~~“(1) Goal: The Congregational Ministries Publishing and Christian Education develops, produces and markets educational, practical, and interpretive resources for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and its congregations, including~~

Bible study and other resources for children, youth and adults. The publishing area assists in the publication of resources developed by other areas of the Congregational Ministries Division and others of the General Assembly Council. The division's publishing area produces educational and interpretive and promotional resources in English, Korean and Spanish languages, in print, audio and video cassette, CD Rom and on-line formats. Staff of the area provide leadership in training and equipping educators, primarily through workshops developed in partnership with middle-governing bodies. In addition, the area provides resources and conferences for older adults.

“(2) Program Teams: Curriculum Development and Christian Education; Mission Education and Promotion; Production and Marketing.

“b. Presbyterian Peacemaking Program

“Goal: The Presbyterian Peacemaking Program supports congregational life and nurtures Presbyterians of all ages through peacemaking conferences and the International Peacemakers program.

“c. Theology and Worship

“(1) Goal: Theology and Worship encourages, supports, and resources congregations and governing bodies in fostering sustained engagement with Christian belief, common worship, and spiritual discipline. This program area also bears responsibility for Faith and Order ecumenical work. Theology and Worship works with ministers, church officers and members as they interpret and live the gospel in the Reformed tradition in the North American context. The Office of Congregational Leadership provides linkage to the three national conference centers: Ghost Ranch in Abiquiu and in Santa Fe, Montreat Conference Center, and Stony Point Center, as well as resources for the African-American and Asian-American Leader Development Offices. The Office of Theological Education and Seminary Relations provides staff support for the Committee on Theological Education (COTE), while COTE provides an effective linkage between the General Assembly and the theological seminaries of the Presbyterian Church (USA).

“Program Teams: Theology and Worship; Spiritual Formation, Congregational Leadership, and Theological Education and Seminary Relations.”

“a. Evangelism and Witness

“Purpose: To follow Jesus' call to love God and our neighbors, and to make disciples within our neighborhoods and throughout the world.

“Included are these offices: Congregational Transformation; Evangelism and Racial and Cultural Diversity; Mission Program Grants; National Health Ministries; New Church Development; Presbyterian Evangelism; Rural Ministry Network; Small Church Ministry Network; Urban Ministries

“b. Justice and Compassion

“Purpose: To help Presbyterians address a broad range of justice issues and provide services that help presbyteries develop and strengthen racial ethnic and immigrant congregations.

“Included are these offices: Child Advocacy; Church & Society; Criminal Justice; Corporate Witness; Environmental Justice/Mission Responsibility Through Investment; New Immigrant Groups Ministries; Racial Ethnic Congregational Enhancement Offices—Asian, Black, Hispanic, Korean, Middle Eastern, Native American; Racial Justice and Advocacy; Racial Ethnic Schools and Colleges; Social Welfare Organizations (PHEWA).

“c. Leadership and Vocation

“Purpose: To equip, support, and refer Presbyterian Church (USA) leadership serving in the United States in partnership with middle governing bodies, congregations, colleges, seminaries, and professional organizations.

“Included are these offices: Certification and Support of Educators; Church Leadership Connection; Collegiate Ministries; Financial Aid for Studies; Ministry Support/COM; National Volunteers; Preparation for Ministry.

“d. Ministries of Enrichment

“Purpose: To encourage a broad and encompassing outreach through all ministries of the church.

“2. Directors Office

“Purpose: To oversee and be responsible for the healthy functioning of the division in the fulfillment of its responsibilities, as well as for the support of the wider organizational health of the General Assembly Council and the Presbyterian Church (USA).”

r. Section VI. D. Worldwide Ministries Division, 3. Responsibilities, 4. Strategies for Carrying Out Mission, and 5. Program Areas, Delete and replace with the following:

“3. Responsibilities

“The Worldwide Ministries Division’s responsibilities include rising to these four crucial challenges of mission today as a church and incarnationally through mission personnel:

“We are challenged to respond to particular needs and opportunities in worldwide mission, especially where there is a need to share the gospel for the first time, where witness to the gospel is endangered, and where the church is dealing with explosive growth.

“b. Equipping the Church for Transforming Mission

“We are challenged to be transformed by, and to engage in transforming mission, and to live out the call we receive in baptism to be part of the universal church of Jesus Christ.

“c. Engaging in Ministries of Reconciliation, Justice, Healing and Grace

“We are challenged to accept a ministry of reconciliation through the One who breaks down walls. This challenge calls Presbyterians to join with fellow Christians to seek the mind of Christ, and to join with fellow Christians and people of other faiths to work together for peace and wholeness for all people.

“d. Living the Good News of Jesus Christ in Community with People Who Are Poor

“We are challenged to live the Good News of Jesus Christ in community with people who are poor, oppressed and disadvantaged. We are called to learn and grow in the gospel by living it with these brothers and sisters.

“4. Strategies for Carrying Out Mission

“The following core commitments will guide Presbyterian mission through Worldwide Ministries:

“a. Joining in Partnership

“b. Working Ecumenically

“c. Developing Leaders

“d. Connecting Mission Near and Far

“e. Sharing People and Resources

“5. Program Areas:

“a. Ecumenical Partnership

“(1) Goal: To support the PC(USA) at all levels in:

“—engaging in partnership in mission internationally

“—honoring the lead of partner churches

“—connecting with internal and external networks, ecumenical bodies, interfaith organizations, and select agencies

“—bearing witness to the unity of our faith in Jesus Christ

“—proclaiming the gospel in word and holistic service

“—receiving and giving in humility, love and mutual encouragement

“(2) Related Programs: Partnership Coordination with Area Coordinators, Ecumenical and Mission Partnerships, Interfaith Relations, International Evangelism and Church Development, Global Education and Leadership Development, Mission Events, Mission to the USA, Mission Partner in Residence.

“b. Global Service and Witness

“(1) Goal: To engage Presbyterians in witnessing to the love of Christ by helping to alleviate suffering, strengthening communities, supporting the empowerment of persons through training and development, and seeking wholeness and justice in fuller measure for all people.

“(2) Related Programs—[no changes]

“(c) People in Mutual Mission

“(1) Goal: To provide opportunity for people called to do God’s Mission in the world to work and learn in partnership with local Christians in areas such as evangelism, sustainable development, justice, advocacy, health care and services, agricultural missions, education and leadership development.

“(2) Related Programs: PIMM staff achieve this through recruitment, orientation, placement, support and care of mission personnel, both fully compensated and volunteers through the program offices of Mission Connections, Mission Service Recruitment, and Mission Personnel Offices (fully compensated and volunteers).

“(d) Director’s Office

“(1) Goal: To lead and coordinate the staffing of processes of discernment, visioning, policy development, oversight, budgeting and personnel operations, as well as collaboration with other parts of God’s Church, so that our mission endeavors will glorify God.

“(2) Related Programs: [no changes]

s. Section VII. Election Procedures, A., revise 4. and 5. as follows:

“4. In ~~even-numbered~~ assembly years, the chair and vice chair shall be ~~inducted~~ installed into office during the General Assembly Council meeting immediately preceding the General Assembly and their service shall begin at the end of the assembly. In ~~odd-numbered~~ years non-assembly years, the chair and vice chair shall be installed into office during the fall General Assembly Council meeting and their service shall begin at the summer retreat meeting of the Executive Committee.

“5. Should the General Assembly fail to reelect the person, the position shall be declared vacant. In that event, the vice chair shall become acting chair and shall serve until a new chair is elected and installed. Another election for chair shall be held on the first day of the first General Assembly Council meeting following General Assembly in ~~even-numbered~~ years using the procedures set forth in Section VII. A. 2. In ~~odd-numbered~~ years, an election for chair shall be held on the first day of the fall General Assembly Council meeting using the procedures set forth in Section VII.A.2. The vice chair shall be eligible for election as chair. The new chair shall be installed and begin service immediately following election. If the chair and vice chair are unable to serve, the Executive Committee shall meet and elect an interim chair to serve until the next meeting of the General Assembly Council when an election shall be held.”

t. Section VII. Election Procedures, B., Election Procedures for General Assembly Nominating Committee Members, delete 4. and renumber remaining items:

“4. ~~Election shall be by written ballot.~~”

u. Section VII. Election Procedures, C. Election Procedures for Ministries Divisions, Mission Support Services (MSS) and Audit Committee Chairs, revise 2. as follows:

“2. The chairs shall begin their services at the end of the assembly or in non-assembly years with the Executive Committee Retreat.”

v. Section VIII. General Assembly Advocacy and Advisory Committees, add a new paragraph between the paragraph beginning, “The funding ...” and before A. as follows:

“The funding for the meetings of these advocacy committees and advisory committee comes from the per capita budget and is the responsibility of the General Assembly Council.

“Staff responsible for the planning and coordination work of the committee shall be accountable to the Office of the Executive Director of the General Assembly Council in consultation with the appropriate Advisory or Advocacy committee.”

w. Section VIII. General Assembly Advocacy and Advisory Committees, A. Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns, change the beginning with (*) to reflect four-year terms:

“() Members of the five racial ethnic caucuses (African American, Asian American, Hispanic, Middle Eastern and Native American) shall select one member from each caucus to be elected through the General Assembly Nominating process to serve a ~~three~~ four year term with eligibility for one additional term.”*

x. Section VIII. General Assembly Advocacy and Advisory Committees,

(1) B. Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns, change the title of the Presbyterian Women Churchwide Coordinating Team Vice Moderator to:

“1. Presbyterian Women Churchwide Coordinating Team Vice Moderator for ~~Issues~~ Justice and Peace”

(2) Section VIII. General Assembly Advocacy and Advisory Committees, C. Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy, amend as follows: Delete 1. Accountability, items a. – c. and replacing it with the following:

“a. The committee shall be accountable to the processes and procedures, and for the identification of financial implications, generally required by all entities for presentation of material to the General Assembly. However, it is understood that the nature of the committee’s work occasionally may create difficulties for all concerned in these areas.

“b. The committee shall be accountable for the content of its work to the General Assembly in accordance with the Manual of the General Assembly, Part I, Standing Rule B-12.b.(1): “The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy will be responsible for the process of developing and recommending social witness policy to the General Assembly. If any other entity is involved in processes of developing and recommending social witness policy, then appropriate consultation and linkage with the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy shall be undertaken.”

“c. Staff responsible for the planning and coordination work of the committee shall be accountable to the Office of the Executive Director of the General Assembly Council in consultation with the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy.

“d. During the employee review process of the Coordinator, input will be requested from the Committee.”

(3) Add a new 2. Search Procedures as follows, and renumber current items “2.–9.” as “3.–10.”:

“A. Search Procedures

“a. When the coordinator position becomes vacant, a search committee of seven members shall be appointed by the Executive Director, with membership as follows:

“(1) In consultation with the chair of ACSWP, three shall be appointed from the Committee, one of whom shall be the chair of the search committee.

“(2) In consultation with the chair of GAC, three shall be appointed from the elected members of the Council

“(3) The Deputy Executive Director shall provide staff services to the Search Committee and shall have voice but not vote.

“(4) The chair of the search committee shall communicate the search committee’s recommendation to the Executive Director

“b. The GAC Executive Director shall appoint and have supervision of the coordinator for the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy.

“c. The search and appointment shall be guided by, and in accordance with, the Presbyterian Church (USA) General Assembly Council Employee Handbook.”

y. Section IX. Committee on Theological Education, 1. Committee Membership, revise to reflect the following:

“This committee of the General Assembly will consist of: one representative appointed by each of the ten PC(USA) seminaries; two General Assembly Council members nominated by the Congregational Ministries Division Committee; eleven at-large members for special expertise and geographical diversity who are elected through the General Assembly Nominating Committee process to serve for a four-year term and eligible for reelection for an additional term; corresponding members representing seminaries that have renewable covenant relationships with the PC(USA); a corresponding member representing the Omaha Presbyterian Seminary Foundation; and two corresponding members representing non-Presbyterian seminaries as determined by annual vote of the Committee on Theological Education.”

z. Section X. Other General Assembly Council Committees and Work Groups, delete A. The Advisory Committee on the News and reletter remaining items:

~~“A. The Advisory Committee for News~~

~~“The General Assembly Council at its March 1993 meeting approved the creation of an advisory committee for the news function of the Office of Communication to ensure the independence of the news.~~

~~“1. Membership~~

~~“The Advisory Committee for News shall consist of five members nominated by the General Assembly Nominating Committee for communication expertise to serve four year terms, eligible for reelection for an additional term.~~

~~“Ex officio members: (voice and without vote):~~

~~“• General Assembly Council Executive Director or designee~~

~~“• Associate Director for Communication~~

~~“• General Assembly Council Executive Committee member nominated by the Executive Committee and elected by the General Assembly Council to serve a two year term so long as such person continues to serve as a member of the General Assembly Council Executive Committee.~~

~~“The Committee shall report to the Executive Committee of the General Assembly Council.”~~

3. Appendix 2, Process for Action by the General Assembly Council on Matters Related to Work of More than One Ministries Division or Entity. In item 6. delete the word, “mailed” and insert the words, “communicated in writing”, so that the item 6 reads as follows: (deletions are shown with a strike-through and additions are in italic):

~~“6. The proposed recommendation shall be sent, ordinarily, to all General Assembly Council members before a General Assembly Council meeting. If the proposal is not ~~mailed~~ communicated in writing in advance of the meeting, it shall be available to the General Assembly Council fifteen hours before decision is required. A background or rationale statement shall be included with the recommendation.”~~

4. Appendix 3, Policies Regarding Public Statements by the Council. Move the first paragraph under section II. Other Statements by the General Assembly Council, to section I., B. as item 1., and renumber the current “1.-7.” as “2. – 8.”, as follows: (deletions are shown with a strike-through and additions are in italic):

~~“I. Statements on Public Issues by Entities of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)~~

~~“A. It is understood that duly constituted entities, boards, and councils may address statements or resolutions to the church or public officials, based on specified General Assembly actions, concerning matters clearly related to their assigned responsibilities. Such statements or resolutions may also be released to church and public news media.~~

~~“B. The General Assembly Council has been assigned a particular responsibility by the General Assembly to act on behalf of the General Assembly “according to previously enacted General Assembly policies [between meetings of the General Assembly], reporting fully to each subsequent General Assembly its actions” (Book of Order, G-13.0201k). Since the General Assembly Council shall, in effect, be acting on behalf of the General Assembly, clear procedure defining the occasions and process for preparing and approving interim statements addressed to the church or the public order on issues and events in the society are essential. While the procedure outlined below focuses on such interim statements, the interim actions of the General Assembly Council shall, of course, encompass a wider scope.~~

~~“1. The General Assembly Council policy on interim statements governs those occasions when the council speaks to members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), to public officials, or to other audiences on behalf of the Gen-~~ eral Assembly (Book of Order, G-13.0201k.). When the intent is to facilitate the church's understanding of a General Assembly policy or to encourage general support of that policy, an interim statement shall be prepared.

“II. Other Statements by the General Assembly Council

~~“The above General Assembly Council policy on interim statements governs those occasions when the council speaks to members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), to public officials, or to other audiences on behalf of the General Assembly (Book of Order, G-13.0201k.). When the intent is to facilitate the church's understanding of a General Assembly policy or to encourage general support of that policy, an interim statement shall be prepared.~~

“On other occasions, when the General Assembly Council is invited to endorse the statement of another recognized Presbyterian group or ecumenical partner, or when the council identifies an occasion when it wishes to speak on its own behalf, it may do so upon recommendation of the General Assembly Council Executive Committee. In no case shall such a statement be made in contradiction of General Assembly action.”

5. Appendix 9, Procedures to Follow When a General Assembly Council Executive Director or Director Vacancy Occurs, Section II. Ministries Division Directors: (deletions are shown with a strike-through and additions are in italic):

a. Current item B., Unexpected Vacancy, delete, chair of the Personnel Subcommittee, so that the paragraph reads:

~~“The Executive Director of the General Assembly Council contacts the chair of the council, chair of the Personnel Subcommittee, and chair of the appropriate Ministries Division committee and together they take all steps deemed necessary in regard to temporary leadership of the Ministries Division. These actions shall be binding until the next meeting of General Assembly Council. (Refer to Book of Order, G-9.0706)”~~

b. Add a new item C, and renumber the current “C.” and “D.” as items “D.” and “E.”:

“C. Accountability

“Ministries Division Directors are accountable to the General Assembly Council through the General Assembly Council Executive Director.”

c. Current item D. Search Procedures, 2., Strike the word, “may” and insert the word, “shall” so that this item reads:

“1. . . .Discussions of the qualifications of individual candidates and interviews of candidates ~~may~~ shall be closed to members of the committee on representation unless invited as provided in section 3.(a & c) of the Open Meeting Policy (refer to Appendix 4).”

6. Delete Appendix 16, Staff Cabinets and Staff Teams.

G. General Assembly Council Agency Summary

The General Assembly Council (GAC) is an elected body of 72 elders and ministers responsible to the General Assembly, providing leadership for the church's mission directives. More than 600 staff persons in this country and over 400 mission personnel around the world carry out the Council's work. GAC ministry involves addressing the needs of a dynamic church in an ever-changing world. In 2005, this work was viewed through the eyes of the Mission Work Plan (MWP), which was ratified at the 216th General Assembly (2004).

There are five goal areas of the MWP: Evangelism & Witness, Justice and Compassion, Spirituality & Discipleship, Leadership & Vocation, and GAC Role & Identity. All of the work done to achieve these goals is carried out in three major settings—Congregational Ministries, National Ministries and, Worldwide Ministries.

Congregational Ministries focuses its work on providing resources, programs, support, and education that are primarily used at the local, or congregational level. National Ministries centers the majority of its work on programs, education, and tools that are implemented across the entire denomination, from coast to coast and border to border. The work of Worldwide Ministries reaches beyond this country to all parts of the world through the work of mission co-workers and partnerships.

The following pages share stories of the GAC as they faithfully work to fulfill the goals of the MWP and the commitment to share God's love and glory.

The GAC Role & Identity goal was well served in 2005 with reports and recommendations from both the Mission Funding Task Force (MFTF) and the Governance Task Force (GTF). The GTF is preparing to recommend a smaller General Assembly Council: 47 members (elected and staff), down from the previous structure of 75 members. This will allow the council to be more efficient and connectional with presbyteries and synods. The MFTF is basing its recommendations on three components: Sustaining Relationship Funding, Connectional Funding, and Diversified Funding. Both recommendations will be received at the 2006 General Assembly.

We begin to look at the remaining four goals with an update on Joining Hearts & Hands. This campaign, while best suited in Evangelism & Witness, is a good example of how so much of the GAC work transcends the entire Mission Work Plan's goals.

1. Joining Hearts & Hands Campaign Tops the Halfway Point

The Mission Initiative: Joining Hearts & Hands is focused on the very heart of who we are as Presbyterians—evangelism and mission. Because of this initiative, the PC(USA) will have resources for national church growth and the expansion of mission work abroad.

Launched in 2002 with a goal of $40 million, the campaign is now at $22 million, because of the generosity of individual Presbyterians and strong partnerships with congregations and presbyteries.

Through this effort, each of us can have a profound impact on spreading the Good News. United in our response to Christ's call, just imagine what we can accomplish together.

2. Evangelism & Witness

a. Presbyterians Support Frontier Mission

In 2005, Presbyterians continued their longstanding heritage of sharing Christ's good news with people who have never before heard it, as is witnessed by a total of 36 PC(USA) mission workers serving in frontier mission among 24 people groups in 15 countries.

The PC(USA)'s support of frontier mission, spearheaded within the Worldwide Ministries Division, is carried out through grants to partner organizations, which extends the denomination's frontier work even further—into a total of 66 people groups in 40 countries.

A large number of PC(USA) mission workers involved in frontier mission serve in the former Soviet republics of Central Asia. Many Presbyterians are unaware of this effort in Central Asia because security concerns necessitate that these efforts be kept low-key. But PC(USA) mission workers serve with the blessings of the government officials who welcome the technical skills they bring to the region. They work in education, health care, economic development, and other fields, but in their free time they support the indigenous congregations that are beginning to take root.

PC(USA) frontier mission personnel are also at work in other regions of Asia and in Africa.

Presbyterian Frontier Fellowship, founded in 1981, "nurtured the renaissance of this kind of mission work" in the PC(USA), says Marian McClure, director of the Worldwide Ministries Division.

Around the world, numerous thriving churches trace their origins to seeds planted by PC(USA) mission personnel. Similarly, today's PC(USA) frontier mission workers hope their efforts will result in churches that are culturally relevant and self-governing.

b. An Afro-centric Emphasis

Worship services at The Village Church in Nashville, Tennessee, are a little different from most taking place in Presbyterian congregations on Sunday mornings.

There's African drumming and dancing. Along with "Amen," the members say "Ashe" (pronounced "ah-shay"), which is Swahili for "it is so."

Members dance to the front of the church to drop their offering in a basket. If they remain at their seats, they are praising God through dance.

This Presbyterian congregation, supported and nurtured with help from the National Ministries Division, is probably the most Afro-centric church in Nashville.

“The Village Church is an African-centered Christian witness to the gospel of Jesus Christ. We affirm that Christianity is a world religion with deep African roots. It is not the property of any one nation but meant to be embraced, acculturated, and expressed in forms that are authentic to the cultural context of a given worshiping community,” said the Rev. Andrew Stephens.

But there is more to The Village Church than Sunday worship. Proclaiming a gospel of love is inextricably linked with a gospel of justice.

“We understand our love of God to be intimately involved with action, with change,” Stephens said.

Early in the church’s history, the congregation took an unusual approach to the biblical story of Jesus’ washing of the disciples’ feet. The story, they decided, was about humility.

So Stephens and about a dozen members went to a housing complex with a mop and a bucket, offering to clean residents’ bathrooms. While one person went into the bathroom and scrubbed, the others sat on the floor and listened as the resident talked about their life.

The Village Church began in the James A. Cayce Homes, Nashville’s largest public housing development, in 1998 with no members. Today the congregation has about 200 members, with a regular attendance of more than 100, consisting of poor public-housing residents as well as college students, doctors, and lawyers.

This is a congregation that is working to change the city.

3. Justice & Compassion

a. Pentecost Offering Continues Giving Hope

The Pentecost Offering, less than ten years old and supported by staff in the Congregational Ministries Division, provides funding for ministries on behalf of children at risk in addition to providing support to ministries with youth and young adults. Forty per-cent of the Offering is kept by participating congregations so they can directly support ministries with children at risk in their own communities. This not only creates new ties in the community and benefits children at risk directly, but it often gives congregations a new mission vision. We partner, work and also walk together to see that justice comes especially to those Jesus termed, “the least of these.”

b. PUNO Hosts 107

The Presbyterian United Nations Office (PUNO), part of Congregational Ministries Division, hosted 107 people (many under the age of 17) in July 2005. Whether focusing on global racism, the international community, or numerous other topics, these young leaders helped advance PUNO’s mission to proclaim Christ’s call and equip disciples in the UN community. Click here to learn about PUNO’s ministry.

A group from the Transformation and Multicultural Conference worked on ideas for involving faith based communities in supporting the Millennium Development Goals.

c. Out of Chaos, Hope

Following Hurricanes Katrina, Rita, and Wilma, Presbyterian Disaster Assistance, located in the Worldwide Ministries Division, chose to respond in close connection, cooperation, and relationship with the survivors and local congregations that live and serve in these communities.

Volunteer Villages have enabled PDA to provide opportunities for volunteer groups to serve alongside communities on the Gulf Coast for the next 2 to 5 years thus enabling a long-term partnership, presence, and commitment to the rehabilitation and reconstruction of those communities.

Through working together, listening to one another, and sharing our stories with one another, we begin to weave ourselves into a collective story of hope and reconstruction for the Gulf Coast.

d. Tsunami

Just over a year after the Tsunami, communities in Indonesia are continuing to rebuild their lives with a strong sense of solidarity and hope.

The road through the process of rehabilitation will be long, but when we take time to give survivors an opportunity to make meaning from their experience and collectively weave their own story, purpose can be drawn out of tragedy.

e. MRTI Enjoys Success in Environmental Justice

The Mission Responsibility Through Investment (MRTI), a group that monitors corporations whose stock is owned by denominational entities and who are supported via the National Ministries Division, met in 2005 with Cinergy officials to outline steps Cinergy has taken in response to mounting regulatory, competitive, and public pressures to reduce emissions of carbon dioxide and other harmful emissions from its facilities.

“We appreciate Cinergy’s willingness to discuss and collaborate on these issues that are of great importance to society and to investors,” said the Rev. William Somplatsky-Jarman, the PC(USA) associate for MRTI. “As a result of this dialogue, we will withdraw a proposed shareholder resolution that we had requested to be included in the company’s annual meeting proxy.”

MRTI also assesses companies’ compliance with General Assembly policies on matters such as environmental protection and safe labor practices. It combines Assembly-approved standards and shareholder engagement through proxy voting, dialogues with executives, and shareholder resolutions.

In its 2004 annual report, the Cincinnati, OH-based company outlined its plans to address the warming problem. It also interviewed a host of stakeholders—among them the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)—about finding common ground on the issue. The church, a long-term investor in Cinergy, has expressed concern about global climate change since 1987 and has been working with Cinergy on the issue for almost three years.

Cinergy collaborated with MRTI this past year in creating the company’s Air Issues Report to Stakeholders. It also has taken steps to reduce its dependence on coal, including the conversion of one of its oldest coal-powered plants to natural gas, and has co-sponsored a national summit on the future of coal.

f. PC(USA) Launches Effort to Combat HIV/AIDS

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in 2005 launched It’s a Matter of Faith, a clarion call for Presbyterians to step up their efforts in the worldwide fight against HIV/AIDS.

The first phase of the effort is focusing on sub-Saharan Africa, the region of the world where the AIDS crisis is most severe. African churches are confronting the crisis with compassion and courage. They are spreading the message of prevention, caring for the sick, and tending to orphans.

More than 25 million people in sub-Saharan Africa are infected with the virus, and AIDS killed more than 2.3 million residents of the region in 2004. But church leaders are encouraged by prevention efforts that are making a difference.

For several years, the PC(USA) and the Worldwide Ministries Division, responding to requests from its African church partners, have contributed resources and people to help combat AIDS on the continent. In 2004, the Assembly directed the Worldwide Ministries Division to “make a concerted effort to lift up and publicize” giving opportunities that address the HIV/AIDS issue around the world. That mandate resulted in last year’s creation of It’s a Matter of Faith.

It’s a Matter of Faith focuses attention on prevention, home-based care and care for children. Additional information and giving opportunities related to It’s a Matter of Faith are available from the PC(USA) International AIDS Web site. A resource packet for congregations, PDS #7433005002, can be ordered at www.pcusa.org/marketplace.

4. *Spirituality and Discipleship*Mission Yearbooks for Prayer & Study Embrace Our Heritage

As the Congregational Ministries Division prepared to celebrate 300 years of Presbyterian mission in America and around the world, the Mission Yearbook and its “offspring,” the Children’s Mission Yearbook for Prayer & Study, embrace a rich heritage in their telling of our mission story. The Children's Mission Yearbook for Prayer & Study has been a wildly popular resource since its first publication in 2003. More than 80,000 copies of the book have been purchased by eager Presbyterian parents, educators, and others.

Like the 2005 Mission Yearbook for Prayer & Study with the theme "Sing to the Lord a new song" (Psalms 96:1), the 2005 Children's Yearbook invites young readers to explore how we are Christ's disciples in the greater story of God's redemption song.

The Children's Mission Yearbook can be used as a handy reference for church school, children's worship, and midweek gatherings. The 2005 edition was available as the take-home piece for the All Church Summer We Believe materials. It is also designed to be a personal devotional resource geared toward third- through sixth-graders. Readers learn more about being Presbyterian and the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)'s mission in the United States and internationally, and they are invited to engage in prayer for that mission. Material is adapted and collected using child-friendly language and child-appropriate stories of mission from across the church.

5. Leadership & Vocation

a. Forman Christian College Makes strides toward excellence

Forman Christian College, supported with various resources from the Worldwide Ministries Division, is making significant strides in its quest to reclaim its former reputation as one of the finest colleges in Pakistan.

The school was returned to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in 2003 after 30 years of government control. While under the government's charge, the school's academic quality deteriorated, its buildings fell into disrepair, and its Christian legacy was all but extinguished. But major steps have been taken to address all these issues. Signs of progress in 2005 include:

- The establishment of a four-year bachelor's degree in 2005 that is based on the U.S. semester system, an innovative move for a Pakistani college.
- The arrival of three PC(USA) mission workers on campus in 2005, the first PC(USA)-appointed mission personnel at the school since its return to the denomination. They are David Francis, chief financial officer; Marianne Vermeer, executive assistant to President Peter Armacost; and Robert Johnson, a professor. The mission personnel joined a host of Presbyterians who are serving the school in volunteer roles.
- The establishment of two new academic departments, computer science and business and management.
- The broadening of the religious studies curriculum by changing the Department of Islamic Studies to the Department of Religious Studies and adding courses in Bible and Christian ethics.
- The enrollment of 297 Christian students among the 3,570 students in 2005–06. At the time of denationalization, the school had only 20 Christian students.
- A faculty of 182 that includes 68 Christian professors. Before the school's return to the PC(USA), only four faculty members were Christian.

The increased presence of Christian students and faculty is making an impact on the school's spiritual life. Worship and Bible studies are now regular campus activities.

Gifts from individual Presbyterians, Presbyterian Women, and Presbyterian congregations have helped Forman achieve its progress.

b. Stony Point Center Enhances International Vocation

Stony Point Center, a 32-acre place of renewal that welcomes all who seek its hospitality is nestled in the Lower Hudson River Valley, between New York City and West Point.

At Stony Point, operated with guidance from the Congregational Ministries Division, guests continue to share their stories of the changes in their lives. They speak about the ways they have turned to a deeper faith; they have asked questions about being better stewards and, they tell us how their vocations are taking on a depth of meaning never anticipated. In addition, the international flavor is inspiring as it provides yet another opportunity to bring about intentional cultural understandings and relationships. Read what some of our guests have told us.

The leader of a North American gathering of Ghanaian Presbyterian laity and clergy recently exclaimed, “Bill, what a great time we’re having here! In fact, we are going to double the number in our reservation for next year. Your staff and this place are so supportive—we have found a new home with you.”

No sooner had the Ghanaian guest spoken, when the coordinator for Focus Institute International (52 therapists and educators from 13 countries) stopped by the director’s office to say, “There’s something so inspiring about doing our training work surrounded by a community from a completely different culture. Our work experience is going so well, and your staff and the sweet spirit of this place embrace us!”

6. Funds

“The earth is the Lord’s and all that is in it, the world, and those who live in it.” Psalm 24:1

How do you know that the funds you graciously give will be spent wisely on the purpose you designate?

It’s a valid question—one that shows potential donors care about a particular ministry of the church and want to assure that their gifts are used wisely. Beneath this question lies a deeper concern—how can you trust that church leaders will spend the money appropriately? There are several possible answers: our laws are very specific on how income from restricted gifts may be used; you can request an annual account of how your money was used; and you can learn more about leadership and become involved in the church.

But is this enough? For most truly gracious and generous givers trust is the critical element—trust that God has provided responsible leadership in your church—leaders who will be good stewards of that which has been entrusted to them.

Whether you have chosen to make all Presbyterian mission possible through an undesignated gift or have chosen to honor a specific ministry, you can learn more about GAC mission funding and your giving options at www.pcusa.org/give. View detailed audited information at www.pcusa.org/financials.

8. Who We Are

The General Assembly Council (GAC) is both the mission agency of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and the elected body that oversees its work. The elected council advises and responds to the General Assembly on priorities, programs, and strategies for the national and international ministry and mission of the PC(USA). GAC staff complement that work by managing the day-to-day mission-related and business activities.

Petitions Against Torture—From the Presbytery of San Francisco.

The Presbytery of San Francisco overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to approve the following petitions to the Attorney General and to the Congress of the United States and instruction to the Stated Clerk:

1. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) petitions the Congress of the United States to convene an investigative body with the independence, stature, and broad investigative powers of the September 11th Commission to inquire into whether any official or officer of the United States government bears direct or command responsibility for having ordered or participated in violations of law in the mistreatment of persons detained by the government of the United States at Guantanamo Bay, Abu Ghraib Prison, or elsewhere or in transporting persons into detention in nations with known records of brutality and torture; to publish its findings and, if appropriate, to recommend the appointment of a special prosecutor if one has not been previously appointed.

2. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) petitions the attorney general of the United States to obtain the appointment of a special counsel with full authority to investigate and prosecute any official or officer of the United States government who bears direct or command responsibility for having ordered or participated in violations of law in the mistreatment of persons detained by the government of the United States at Guantanamo Bay, Abu Ghraib Prison, or elsewhere, or in transporting persons into detention in nations that have known records of brutality and torture.

3. The 217th General Assembly (2006) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) directs the Stated Clerk to petition the Congress and the attorney general of the United States to undertake the remedial actions described in this overture; to inform the congregations of this church of the approval of this overture, and to coordinate the efforts of our congregations in furtherance of the overture; to cooperate with other denominations and groups as appropriate to realize the goals advanced by this overture; to make its contents public, and to persist in urging the Congress and attorney general of the United States to respond to its call for action.

Rationale

As members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), we declare that the following acts shock the Christian conscience and are a cause for Christian repentance:

1. torture and related violations of law by military and civilian agents of the government of the United States in the maltreatment of persons detained at Guantanamo Bay, Abu Ghraib Prison, and elsewhere;
2. forcible transportation of persons into the custody of nations with known records of brutality and torture. (See Minutes, 2004 Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) General Assembly, Part I, pp. 902, 903.)

As citizens of the United States, members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), we openly admit our shame at allegations and disclosures of these acts and condemn such acts as a repudiation of the high standards of decency and morality to which our nation has historically held itself, its officials, officers, and armed forces.

Justice, fidelity to the rule of law, affirmation of the moral authority and honor of the United States and of its armed forces, and the preservation of an open democratic society demand the following:

1. That an independent inquiry be conducted into whether any official or officer of the United States government bears direct or command responsibility for having ordered or participated in violations of law in the mistreatment of persons detained by the government of the United States at Guantanamo Bay, Abu Ghraib Prison, or elsewhere, or in transporting persons into detention in nations with known records of brutality and torture, and that the findings of such inquiry be entered into the public record.

2. That violations of law in the mistreatment of persons detained by the government of the United States or transported by it for detention in nations with known records of brutality and torture cease, and be prosecuted and punished regardless of the rank or station of the offender.

Concurrences to Item 09-01 from the Presbyteries of Carlisle, Milwaukee, the Redwoods, and Seattle.Concurrence to Item 09-01 from the Presbytery of Detroit (with Additional Rationale).

Faced with the growing painful and horrifying evidence of the use of torture and execution by individuals, groups, and governments across the world, we respectfully call on our nation to take a renewed stand against all forms of torture, and in particular to pay increased attention to the conduct of all authorities for whom we as Americans are responsible. To this end, as members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), we declare that the following acts shock the Christian conscience and are a cause for Christian repentance:

[The remainder of the rationale is identical to the original overture.]

1. Torture and related violations of law by military and civilian agents of the government of the United States in the maltreatment of persons detained at Guantanamo Bay, Abu Ghraib Prison, and elsewhere;
2. Forcible transportation of persons into the custody of nations with known records of brutality and torture. (See Minutes, 2004, Part I, pp. 902, 903.)

As citizens of the United States, members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), we openly admit our shame at allegations and disclosures of these acts and condemn such acts as a repudiation of the high standards of decency and morality to which our nation has historically held itself, its officials, officers, and armed forces.

Justice, fidelity to the rule of law, affirmation of the moral authority and honor of the United States and of its armed forces, and the preservation of an open democratic society demand the following:

1. That an independent inquiry be conducted into whether any official or officer of the United States government bears direct or command responsibility for having ordered or participated in violations of law in the mistreatment of persons detained by the government of the United States at Guantanamo Bay, Abu Ghraib Prison, or elsewhere, or in transporting persons into detention in nations with known records of brutality and torture, and that the findings of such inquiry be entered into the public record.
2. That violations of law in the mistreatment of persons detained by the government of the United States or transported by it for detention in nations with known records of brutality and torture cease, and be prosecuted and punished regardless of the rank or station of the offender.

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 09-01

Advice and Counsel on Item 09-01—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

Item 09-01, overture from the Presbytery of San Francisco, requests petitioning the U. S. Congress and the attorney general of the United States to investigate allegations of torture by U.S. officials in the Iraq War and to take remedial action.

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) advises that Item 09-01 be answered by Item 09-11, “Resolution on Human Rights in a Time of Terrorism and Torture.” The ACSWP commends the Presbytery of San Francisco and other bodies, including No2Torture.org, for their dedicated work.

Item 09-02

[The assembly referred Item 09-02 to the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy. See pp. 50, 51.]

Resolution on Smithfield Packing, Inc.—From the Presbytery of New Hope.

The Presbytery of New Hope overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to do the following:

1. Support justice for workers at Smithfield Packing by requesting that Smithfield Packing
 - a. obey the law;

- b. stop the use of threats, intimidation, and violence against workers;
 - c. implement the National Labor Relations Board (NLRB) orders to respect workers rights and assure safety in the workplace.
2. Direct that the Office of the General Assembly communicate this call for justice to
 - a. the North Carolina attorney general, the North Carolina Department of Labor, the U.S. attorney general, and the U.S. Department of Labor;
 - b. the major food chains—Harris-Teeter, Food Lion, Bi-Lo, Lowes Foods, Piggly-Wiggly, Walmart, Winn Dixie, Target; and
 - c. Joseph Luter III, CEO, Smithfield Foods, Inc, 200 Commerce St, Smithfield, VA 23430.

Rationale

Smithfield Packing Inc. is the largest pork producer and processor in the world, and the Smithfield Packing plant in Tar Heel, North Carolina, is the largest pork processing facility in the world, employing more than 5,000 workers and slaughtering more than 32,000 hogs a day.

Human Rights Watch, documented in “Blood, Sweat and Fear” (copyright 2004; available at <http://hrw.org/reports/2005/usa0105/>) that Smithfield Packing has violated internationally recognized human rights standards by using intimidation, threats, and violence against workers and still continues to do so.

Human Rights Watch, in the same document, reported evidence showing that Smithfield Packing discourages workers from reporting workplace injuries; and seeking medical care from their family physician.

Evidence show that Smithfield Packing has a history of intimidating, threatening, and harassing workers who engage in organized activity to defend their labor rights, to improve their working conditions, and to ensure their well-being in the workplace.

A federal court in North Carolina ruled that Chief of Security Danny Priest violated the Ku Klux Klan Act for physically assaulting a pro-union worker and a union organizer after a union election in 1997.

The National Labor Relations Board (NLRB) found Smithfield Packing guilty of violating workers rights to organize a union and ordered Smithfield to obey the law and allow workers to exercise their legal rights and as a means to promote workplace safety without fear of retaliation or threats.

Smithfield Packing has repeatedly delayed and denied justice for Smithfield workers.

Smithfield Packing Inc. and Smithfield sub-contractor QSI Inc, were found guilty of using the company police to physically assault workers, cause the false arrest of a worker, and threaten bodily harm in retaliation for legal activities to protest working conditions, in violation of federal labor law.

The PC(USA) has a long historical record of being aligned with the poor and oppressed around the world and in our own country and of supporting worker rights and workplace safety.

Advice and Counsel on Item 09-02—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

Item 09-02 from the Presbytery of New Hope calls for the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to support justice for workers at Smithfield Packing, Inc. by requesting that this organization obey the law; stop the use of threats, intimidation, and violence against workers; implement the National Labor Relations Board (NLRB) orders to respect workers’ rights; and otherwise assure safety in the workplace. In addition, Item 09-02 requests that the Office of the General Assembly communicate this call for justice to the appropriate parties.

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) advises that Item 09-02 be approved.

Rationale

It has been reported that the Smithfield Packing Bladen County plant in Tar Heel, North Carolina, has “created an environment of intimidation, racial tension, fear, and sometimes violence, for workers who desperately want a voice on the job” (see “Justice @ Smithfield” at http://www.ufcw.org/issues_and_actions/justice_at_smithfield/index.cfm). These reports appear to be confirmed by the independent Human Rights Watch (See “Blood, Sweat, and Fear: Workers’ Rights in U.S. Meat and Poultry Plants,” pp. 88–89 at <http://www.hrw.org/reports/2005/usa0105/usa0105.pdf>, and “Unfair Advantage: Workers’ Freedom of Association in the United States Under International Human Rights Standards,” pp. 94–104 at <http://www.ufcw.org/docUploads/humanrightswatchcasestudies%2Epdf?CFID=1221496&CFTOKEN=10549315> and the National Labor Relations Board (NLRB) (See Smithfield Packing Company, Inc., NLRB Case No. 11-CA-15522 et al. (ALJ Dec. 15, 2000)). Such behavior is inconsistent with positions taken by the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and its predecessor bodies in relation to the poor and oppressed and workers’ rights. These positions include:

1. The 98th General Assembly (1958) encouraged business and labor leaders to recognize “. . . their responsibility for the well being of persons in such matters as sufficient wages, health, housing and other living conditions . . .” and “to deal realistically and forthrightly with injustice and corruption of any kind . . .” (Minutes, Presbyterian Church in the United States, 1958, Part I, p. 226).

2. The 183rd General Assembly (1977) “. . . Reaffirm(ed) the actions of previous General Assemblies supporting the right of every employable person to a job, decent and safe working conditions, and a salary adequate to meet at least his or her basic needs” (Minutes, United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, Part I, p. 126).

3. The 120th General Assembly (1980) said: “. . . In view of our theological understanding of economic and social justice we affirm for all persons the right to be paid adequately and treated with fairness and dignity. . . In view of our theological understanding of liberation, justice, community, and the reality of sin, we affirm the right of all workers, except those on whom national or community security depends, to join labor organizations and participate in collective bargaining” (Minutes, Presbyterian Church in the United States, 1980, Part I, pp. 229–30).

4. The 214th General Assembly (2002) “. . . encourage(d) members of the PC (USA) to contact legislators urging support of the family farmer/ranchers, farm and processing plant workers, and equitable world trade policy” (Minutes, 2002, Part I, pp. 23, 535).

The Book of Order of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) states: “The Church is called to be Christ’s faithful evangelist . . . participating in God’s activity in the world through its life for others by . . . engaging in the struggle to free people from sin, fear, oppression, hunger, and injustice” (Book of Order, G-3.0300c.(3)(c)). Moreover, the policy statement on God’s Work in Our Hands: Employment, Community, and Christian Vocation affirms that:

Inequalities in compensation and working conditions demand the strictest scrutiny. As our workforce becomes increasingly diverse, these concerns become even more urgent. Employment for persons who have suffered the injustices of prejudice and bias is the object of laws requiring affirmative action. A political, economic, and social system that translates unalterable human differences—race, ethnicity, gender, age, and physical ability—into occasion for oppression, exploitation, is incompatible with Reformed theology. . . . All conditions of paid employment, including compensation and working conditions, should sustain and nurture the dignity of individuals, the well-being of households and families, the social cohesiveness of communities, and the integrity of the global environment. Justice demands that social institutions guarantee all persons the opportunity to participate actively in economic decision making that affects them. All workers—including undocumented, migrant, and farm workers—have the right to choose to organize for the purposes of collective bargaining (Minutes, 1995, Part I, pp. 59, 426).

As stated in the first Rationale paragraph of Item 09-02, Smithfield Foods, Inc. is the largest hog producer and pork processor in the world. The Smithfield Packing Bladen County plant in Tar Heel, North Carolina, employs almost 6,000 men and women. It is estimated that Hispanic immigrants make up half of this plant’s workforce. The remainder is composed primarily of African Americans. (See Human Rights Watch, “Blood, Sweat, and Fear: Workers’ Rights in U.S. Meat and Poultry Plants,” p.8 at <http://www.hrw.org/reports/2005/usa0105/usa0105.pdf>). Given this composition of the workforce, the company’s active opposition to workers organizing is especially disturbing, since these racial ethnic groups have frequently been silenced in society. Furthermore, Human Rights Watch reports that the turnover rate at meat and poultry processing plants is rapid (See Human Rights Watch, “Blood, Sweat, and Fear: Workers’ Rights in U.S. Meat and Poultry Plants,” p.108 at <http://www.hrw.org/reports/2005/usa0105/usa0105.pdf>). (Note: According to the most recent unemployment statistics for Tar Heel, this region’s unemployment rate is 8.20 percent, which is 3.20 percent more than the national 5.00 percent average (See Neighborhood Profiles, “Tar Heel, at <http://www.bestplaces.net/zip-code/default.aspx?cat=ECONOMY&zip=28392>). A high turnover rate in a region of high unemployment tends to indicate unacceptable working conditions. This situation appears to qualify for the type of action envisioned by The Confession of 1967, when it says:

In each time and place, there are particular problems and crises through which God calls the Church to act. The church, guided by the Spirit, humbled by its own complicity and instructed by all attainable knowledge, seeks to discern the will of God and learn how to obey in these concrete situations. . . . (Inclusive Language Text, 9.43).

The concerns addressed in Item 09-02 warrant action by the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) at the present time.

Advice and Counsel on Item 09-02—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC).

Item 09-02 calls for the PC(USA) to support the workers of Smithfield Packing, and call on the said company to stop threats, intimidation, and violence against workers, and observe the National Labor Relations Board orders to respect workers rights and assure safety in the workplace. This overture was received from the Presbytery of New Hope.

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) advises Item 09-02 be approved.

Rationale

The ACREC concurs with the item's call to the PC(USA) to continue its historical stance against oppression in any form, and its support of "worker rights and workplace safety." To this, ACREC calls attention to the racially discriminatory nature of Smithfield Packing's abuses.

The majority of the workers at the Tar Heel, North Carolina, plant are people of color. Efforts to unionize have been met with violence and intimidation, including severe racial slurs and harassment. A New York Times reporter found that the workers were often segregated by race, and that the company often exploited racial divisions. Former supervisors have testified that African Americans were told that they would be replaced by Hispanics, and Latinos were told they would be "sent back to Mexico."¹ Furthermore, interviews with Latino immigrant workers have revealed that the workers were threatened with termination and deportation when they reported injuries or abuse.²

In documents such as Facing Racism: A Vision of the Beloved Community, approved by the 211th General Assembly (1999), and the Confession of 1967, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has committed to speaking out against racism in all its forms as sin. As such, ACREC urges the PC(USA) to uphold its commitment with regard to the racism exhibited by Smithfield Packing against its workers at the Tar Heel, North Carolina, plant.

On Medical Use of Marijuana—From the Presbytery of Homestead.

The Presbytery of Homestead overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to do the following:

1. Reaffirm the PCUS statement of the 111th General Assembly (1971) that "marijuana is not properly classified" (Minutes, PCUS, 1971, Part I, p. 147).
2. Affirm the use of cannabis sativa or marijuana for legitimate medical purposes as recommended by a physician.
3. Instruct the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly to inform the office of the president of United States, urging Federal legislation that allows for its use and that provides for the production and distribution of the plant for those purposes.
4. Seek Federal protection for patients, caregivers, and their physicians from prosecution by local and state authorities, and physicians from negative repercussions by their licensing bodies.

Rationale

This resolution declares support for the medicinal use of cannabis sativa (also known as marijuana), and directs the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to actively urge the Federal government to amend and adopt such laws as will allow the benefits of marijuana treatment for such diseases as cancer, AIDS, and muscular dystrophy.

Some of those who suffer from such diseases as cancer, AIDS, and muscular dystrophy claim that they have found benefit in the medical use of cannabis sativa, or marijuana. Ten states have legalized such medical treatment; however, Federal law prohibits possession of marijuana even with a physician's recommendation or prescription.

Jesus said, "I was hungry and you gave me food, I was thirsty and you gave me something to drink..." (Matt. 25:35). When we see the suffering of others, we are called to stand up and take a look.

Those who suffer believe that their use of cannabis or marijuana helps to relieve pain associated with cancer, spinal cord injury, nerve damage, neuropathy, and fibromyalgia. Marijuana reduces nausea caused by chemotherapy, radiation, and other cancer treatments. It treats the loss of appetite and wasting disorders such as AIDS or Crohn's disease. Marijuana also relaxes muscle spasms due to epilepsy, multiple sclerosis, muscular dystrophy, cerebral palsy, and brain injury.

The statement of the 111th General Assembly (1971) recognizes issues of dependency and abuse of various chemical substances. Nevertheless, the statement clarifies that "... marijuana is not properly classified with the other 'narcotics' and conclusive evidence is lacking that it produces permanent physiological effects or automatically leads to the use of more serious, addictive drugs..." (Minutes, PCUS, 1971, Part I, p. 147).

Current research suggests benefits to marijuana use as medicine, but that research is limited because the use of marijuana offers no profit to pharmaceutical companies. As a result, patients may be suffering needless pain and debilitating consequences due to the use of synthetic drugs that are ineffective or cause significant side effects, rather than using well-established treatment with historic cannabis formulas.

Several Christian denominations have passed resolutions supporting access to medicinal marijuana. These include: the United Church of Christ, the United Methodist Church, the Episcopal Church, and the Evangelical Lutheran Church. Others are currently considering the issues.

Professional organizations have also supported the compassionate use of marijuana including: the American Association of Family Physicians, the American Nurses Association, the American Bar Association, and the National Association of Attorneys General.

Considering support for the medical use of marijuana will open a dialog and bring us closer to a path that would alleviate the pain and suffering of many.

Monitoring Report on the Implementation of Turn Mourning Into Dancing! A Policy Statement on Healing Domestic Violence with Recommendations

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) reaffirm the action taken by the 213th General Assembly (2001) calling on "the whole church to affirm God's gift of abundant life in Jesus Christ to all" (Minutes, 2001, Part I, p. 242) and do the following:

- 1. Approve the "Monitoring Report on the Implementation of 'Turn Mourning Into Dancing! A Policy Statement on Healing Domestic Violence.'"
- 2. Commend the entities listed in this report for their efforts to implement the actions included in "Turn Mourning Into Dancing! A Policy Statement on Healing Domestic Violence."
- 3. Urge the entities of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to report their ongoing efforts to implement the actions included in "Turn Mourning Into Dancing! A Policy Statement on Healing Domestic Violence" to future General Assemblies.

4. Encourage the members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to become advocates of God’s restorative justice for all of God’s people in our daily lives and work; and to bring healing to those abused.

5. Encourage the members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to consider prayerfully contributing their human and financial resources toward the work of the Presbyterians Against Domestic Violence Network (PADVN), a network of the Presbyterian Health, Education and Welfare Association (PHEWA).

6. Call on the members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to support local, state, national, and international legislation that is consistent with the General Assembly’s policy on “Turn Mourning Into Dancing! A Policy Statement on Healing Domestic Violence.”

7. Reaffirm the call of previous General Assemblies urging the United States Senate to ratify the United Nations Conventions on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women and on the Rights of the Child.

Rationale

This report and its recommendations are in response to the following referral: 25.172. Response to Recommendation Calling Upon the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy to Monitor the Implementation of the Policy and Recommendations on Domestic Violence Periodically with a Final Report to the 219th General Assembly (2007) (Minutes, 2001, Part I, pp. 61, 243).

I. Introduction

The 213th General Assembly (2001) approved “Turn Mourning Into Dancing! A Policy Statement on Healing Domestic Violence” (Minutes, 2001, Part I, pp. 60–61, 233–74). That assembly affirmed:

The church promotes the respect and human dignity of all persons and through God’s love and grace, their right to safety, nurture, care and freedom from abuse and violence. The church commits itself to listen and to seek accountability. The church further commits itself and its resources to provide leadership in creating a just and compassionate society. (Minutes, 2001, Part I, p. 242)

The assembly also “call[ed] upon the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy to monitor the implementation of the policy and recommendations on domestic violence with a final report to the 219th General Assembly (2007)” (Minutes, 2001, Part I, p. 243).

In the spring of 2005, the ACSWP requested a report from the entities of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) regarding the actions they had taken to implement the recommendations included in “Turn Mourning Into Dancing! A Policy Statement on Healing Domestic Violence” The ACSWP submits its findings to the 217th General Assembly (2006) in this healing domestic violence monitoring report with recommendations.

II. Review of the Entities’ Efforts to Implement the Policy

A. Board of Pensions (BOP)

The Board of Pensions (BOP) responded to the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP)’s request for a report on its efforts to implement the General Assembly’s “Turn Mourning Into Dancing! A Policy Statement on Healing Domestic Violence.” This data was analyzed and a summary of it is presented below.

Recommendation E., Paragraphs 25.159–.162

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy recommends that the 213th General Assembly (2001) urge the Board of Pensions to do the following:

1. Periodically encourage its clergy members to monitor health concerns such as self care, stress management, attention to family relationships, reasonable workload, and collegial consultation and supervision.
2. Study how family members of clergy and of church members who are in the plan receive care and how that impacts where families go for help.
3. Continue and expand mental health coverage. (Minutes, 2001, Part I, p. 241)

Findings: The Board of Pensions (BOP) reported to the ACSWP that it has consistently supported its Plan members and their families by providing comprehensive coverage for care needed to address emotional or stress-related conditions, mental illness, and/or substance abuse through its Medical Plan. Although the benefits themselves have changed over time, the coverage has always been comprehensive and focused on the care needs of the patient.

Through studies of claim experience and conversations with Plan members, middle governing bodies, and other interested parties, the BOP learns about the needs of the members it serves and tries to respond with target programs that can address their concerns. For example:

- The BOP added an employee assistance plan to its Medical Plan to encourage early use of appropriate services to respond to issues affecting mental health.
- The BOP initiated and participated with presbyteries and synods in implementing programs targeted to first call pastors.
- The BOP developed the Seminary Debt Program, with up to $10,000 of educational debt relief available over four years for an eligible first call pastor, from seminary, serving a church with a budget of $150,000 or less. The guidelines were amended in 2005 to increase the eligible church budget from $250,000 and to remove the Presbyterian seminary requirement.

In 2004, the minister members of the directors of the BOP formed a task force to examine clergy recruitment and retention. Their report, “Report on Clergy Recruitment and Retention,” to the 216th General Assembly (2004) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) continues to provide guidance for the BOP’s work. Since this report, the BOP has done the following:

- Begun a scholarship program to help ministers participate in continuing education opportunities, focusing on practical skills like conflict management.
- Initiated three new lifestyle management programs focused on tobacco cessation, weight management, and stress management.
- Improved its disease management programs to better assist patients with chronic conditions like diabetes and cardiac problems, manage their health, and avoid depression.

Visit <http://www.pensions.org> for more information on the BOP.

B. General Assembly Council (GAC)

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) received responses from the following entities of the General Assembly Council (GAC) on their efforts to implement the General Assembly’s “Turn Mourning Into Dancing! A Policy Statement on Domestic Violence.” This data was analyzed and a summary of the ACSWP’s findings is presented below.

Visit <http://www.pcusa.org/gac> for more information on the GAC.

Recommendation A.1., Paragraphs 25.093–.101

Direct the General Assembly Council to establish a cross-divisional staff team with responsibilities related to domestic violence, including representatives of the Child Advocacy Office; Health Ministries; Older Adult Ministries; Presbyterian Health, Education, and Welfare Association; Presbyterian Peacemaking Program; Women’s Ministries; National Network of Presbyterian College Women; Curriculum Publishing; and the Criminal Justice Program, charged with the responsibility to devise a plan for implementing the concerns of this policy and report to the 214th General Assembly (2002) to be taken into consideration in the planning for the 2003 Mission Budget and giving consideration to the following strategies:

- a. Provide a listing of services, both in print and Web accessible, for each manifestation of domestic violence (spouse/partner, child, sibling, elder, date violence) with user-friendly guides for recognizing the symptoms of each form of abuse and its prevention, and a sample listing of appropriate possible referral agencies for a community coordinated response that can be adapted to include local community agencies.
- b. Facilitate, with the middle governing bodies, a strategy to educate, train, research, and provide advocacy for healing domestic violence in church and society by assisting them in developing guidelines and training procedures for use by church leaders in local congregations.
- c. Work with middle governing bodies and other appropriate entities to establish funding for and facilitate, with a middle governing body planning team, each year for four consecutive years, a national conference (or regional conferences) to train presbytery representatives as facilitator/trainers in domestic violence and in nurturing a responsive church community. The initial conference will introduce domestic violence and offer a vision for a responsive and nurturing church environment, sharing available resources, and seeking feedback on ways to meet the needs of the congregations. The remaining three conferences, one each year, will focus on a different theme, allowing the church to gradually introduce a new emphasis in ministry, such as child abuse and sibling rivalry, spouse/partner abuse and dating violence, and elder abuse.
- d. Foster awareness and participation in the congregations for the observance of Domestic Violence Awareness Month (October), Sexual Assault Awareness Month (May), and Child Abuse Prevention Month (April). Also make available special liturgies relating to domestic violence (child abuse, sibling rivalry, spouse/partner abuse, dating violence, and elder abuse) and suggestions for programs.
- e. Consider an office for dealing with the issues of domestic violence with a full-time staff position with support staff and a guarantee of funding (new moneys) for a four-year period.
- f. Direct the development and expansion of its ministry and resources on sibling abuse and elder abuse, and evaluate the need for and availability of resources on child abuse, spouse/partner abuse, and dating violence, and produce resources as needed by the congregations.

09 ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON SOCIAL JUSTICE ISSUES

- g. Through the office on domestic violence, incorporate sex abuse prevention training in child and teen education programs and curricula.
- h. Report this implementation plan to the 214th General Assembly (2002) and take it into consideration when planning for the 2003 Mission Budget. (Minutes, 2001, Part I, p. 238)

Findings: A cross-divisional staff team was established to implement the “Turn Mourning Into Dancing! A Policy Statement on Healing Domestic Violence.” It included staff members from the following offices:

- Child Advocacy Office
- Criminal Justice Program
- Congregational Ministries
- Curriculum Publishing
- Executive Director’s Office of the General Assembly Council (GAC)
- National Health Ministries
- Older Adult Ministries
- Presbyterian Peacemaking Program
- Women’s Ministries
- Social Welfare Ministries/Presbyterian Health, Education and Welfare Association (PHEWA)

Anguished Hearts: A Study Guide to Accompany Turn Mourning Into Dancing! (PDS # 70-270-03-025) was published in partnership by the Presbyterian Peacemaking Program (PPP), the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP), and the Presbyterian Health, Education and Welfare Association (PHEWA). The General Assembly’s “Turn Mourning Into Dancing! A Policy Statement on Healing Domestic Violence” is included with this resource on a DVD (PDS # 70-270-03-026).

The Office of Family and Intergenerational Ministries of the Presbyterian Peacemaking Program (PPP) published a resource on elder abuse and dating violence.

The Presbyterian Health, Education and Welfare Association (PHEWA) has worked to implement the “Turn Mourning Into Dancing! A Policy Statement on Healing Domestic Violence” by:

- Establishing the Presbyterians Against Domestic Violence Network (PADVN). The PADVN provides advocacy and resources for the prevention of and healing from societal and domestic violence.
- Publishing a PADVN newsletter.
- Publishing PADVN Congregational Resource Packets in 2002, 2003, 2004, and 2005.
- Creating a domestic violence ribbon via the PADVN to honor victims who have escaped abuse (white ribbon) and those who are still living with abuse (purple ribbon).
- Distributing a clothesline pin to bear witness to violence against women. This pin was inspired by The Clothesline Project. For more information on this project visit <http://www.clotheslineproject.org>.
- Developing domestic violence awareness resources to promote the Domestic Violence Month events held in October.
- Partnering with the FaithTrust Institute to publish resources and hold training events on sexual and domestic violence. For more information on the FaithTrust Institute visit <http://www.faithtrustinstitute.org>.
- Staff of the Women Ministries and Social Welfare Ministries have served on advisory boards of FaithTrust.
- Staff of the Social Welfare Ministries serve on a national interfaith summit planning committee. This group is encouraging the heads of communions to sign a national declaration condemning all forms of violence against women.
- The Social Justice Biennial Conferences of the PHEWA, held in 2003 and 2005, included workshops on this topic.

For more information on the PADVN visit <http://www.pcusa.org/phewa/padvn>.

C. Presbyterian Washington Office (PWO)

Recommendation A.2., Paragraphs 25.102–.106

Direct the Presbyterian Washington Office to do the following:

- a. Monitor legislation involving domestic violence and related federal initiatives and advocate the church's policy.
- b. Advocate support for daycare, shelters, social services, etc. that counteract the rise of violence and abuse in society.
- c. Reaffirm the General Assembly's call to urge the United States Senate to ratify the United Nations Convention on the Elimination of all Forms of Discrimination Against Women and on the Rights of the Child.
- d. Support policies, programs, and services that protect victims, hold offenders accountable for their offenses, provide incarceration of and treatment for offenders of domestic violence and advocate for support for family members. (Minutes, 2001, Part I, pp.238-239)

Findings: The Presbyterian Washington Office (PWO) has advocated for the reauthorization of the "Violence Against Women Act (VAWA). The February 14, 2005, Stewardship of Public Life 's Women & Families publication focused on the VAWA. In addition to this publication, the PWO has consistently sent email "Action Alerts" on the VAWA to members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

Visit <http://www.pcusa.org/washington> for more information on the PWO.

D. Theological Education/Committee on Theological Education (COTE)

Recommendation D.1.–5., Paragraphs 25.153–.158

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy recommends that the 213th General Assembly (2001) urge the theological seminaries to do the following:

- a. Include domestic violence issues and strategies for detection, treatment, and prevention in their curricula and field education training programs.
- b. Encourage faculties to engage in research on the causes of domestic violence and its physical, psychological, and spiritual impact on the individual and family.
- c. Encourage faculties to engage in a cross-disciplinary study of domestic violence and to analyze the church's role in perpetuating and ending it.
- d. Encourage faculties, students, and alumni to work across disciplines for societal change in areas related to domestic violence.
- e. Continue to include sexual misconduct issues and strategies for detection, treatment, and prevention in their curricula and field education training programs. (Minutes, 2001, Part I, p. 241)

Findings: The Congregational Ministries Division (CMD) reported that issues related to domestic violence and sexual misconduct was reported to the Committee on Theological Education (COTE). Each seminary is well aware of these issues and is responding to them in various ways (e.g., domestic violence workshops, pastoral care and ethics courses, and student counseling services, etc.).

Visit <http://www.pcusa.org/seminaries/cote.htm> for more information on the COTE.

E. Office of the General Assembly (OGA)

The information for this section was submitted to the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) by the Office of the General Assembly (OGA).

Recommendation F.4., Paragraph 25.170

Direct the Office of the General Assembly to publish the entire report "Turn Mourning Into Dancing! A Policy Statement on Healing Domestic Violence" with background, bibliography, appendixes, and with a related study/action guide; and, direct the Stated Clerk to distribute it in published form to sessions, middle governing bodies and their resource centers, and libraries of the theological seminaries, making additional copies available for sale to aid study and implementation efforts in the church, and to place the document as a whole on the Web. (Minutes, 2001, Part I, p. 242)

Recommendation F.5., Paragraph 25.171

Direct the Stated Clerk to encourage the middle governing bodies, sessions, and individual members to give prayerful attention to this report as a help in responding to domestic violence within intimate relationships in their own homes, congregations, and in the communities where they live and work. (Minutes, 2001, Part I, p. 243)

Findings: The Office of the General Assembly (OGA) complied with the action of the 213th General Assembly (2001) by publishing the entire report and encouraging middle governing bodies, sessions, and individual members to give prayerful attention to the report. The report was mailed in September 2001 to stated clerks of the middle governing bodies, resource centers, clerks of sessions, and the libraries of the theological seminaries. Additional copies of the report are available from the Presbyterian Distributions Services (PDS #OGA-01-018). The report can also be downloaded from the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)'s Web site at <http://www.pcusa.org/oga/publications/dancing.pdf>.

III. Conclusion

The entities included in this report are to be commended for their efforts to implement the General Assembly's "Turn Mourning Into Dancing! A Policy Statement on Healing Domestic Violence." The resources they have produced will enhance the efforts of individual members, sessions, and other groups of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to respond effectively to violence against women and children concerns at the local, state, national, and international levels of government.

In December 2005, the United States Senate and House of Representatives passed the bill renewing the Violence Against Women Act (VAWA) 2005. On January 5, 2006, the president of the United States signed VAWA 2005 Reauthorization into law. This bill includes the following areas as a part of its focus:

- developing prevention strategies to stop the violence before its starts;
- developing culturally and linguistically specific services for communities; and
- broadening VAWA service provisions to include children and teens.

Finally, by supporting bills such as the VAWA 2005, this will enhance the efforts of this branch of the one holy catholic church to end all forms of violence against women and children. Visit <http://www.govtrack.us/congress/bill.xpd?bill=h109-3402> for more information on the VAWA 2005.

Monitoring Report on the Implementation of the Resolution Calling for the Abolition of For-Profit Private Prisons with Recommendations

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) reaffirm the action taken by the 215th General Assembly (2003) calling for the abolition of for-profit private prisons and do the following:

1. Approve the "Monitoring Report on the Implementation of the Resolution Calling for the Abolition of For-Profit Private Prisons."
2. Commend the entities listed in this report for their efforts to implement the recommendations included in the "Resolution Calling for the Abolition of For-Profit Private Prisons," and related efforts to reform prison conditions, making sentencing fairer, and ministering with prisoners.
3. Urge the entities of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to report their ongoing efforts to implement the actions included in the "Resolution Calling for the Abolition of For-Profit Private Prisons" to future General Assemblies.
4. Encourage the members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A) to become advocates of God's restorative justice for all God's people in our daily lives and work.

Rationale

This report and its recommendations are in response to the following referral: Item 07-01. Resolution Calling for the Abolition of For-Profit Private Prisons, Recommendation F.12. That the General Assembly Call Upon the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) to Monitor the Actions Listed Above and Report to the 217th General Assembly (2006) (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 56, 441).

I. Introduction

The 215th General Assembly (2003) approved the “Resolution Calling for the Abolition of For-Profit Private Prisons” (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 56, 439–58). That assembly reaffirmed the position taken by previous assemblies that the ultimate goal of the criminal justice system should be restorative justice. In addition, the assembly raised important ethical issues about for-profit private prisons. For example, the assembly stated that:

... Even if for-profit private prisons could achieve significant cost savings to the taxpayers, which in fact they have not been able to do, they would still be morally unacceptable. Private prisons are not an economic but a deep religious and ethical issue, a cornerstone of our collective work to put justice back into the so-called “criminal justice system. ...” (Minutes, 2003, Part I, p. 439)

The 215th General Assembly (2003) also approved a plan for monitoring the implementation of the actions included in the “Resolution Calling for the Abolition of For-Profit Private Prisons.” It called upon the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) to monitor the actions approved in this resolution and to report its findings to the 217th General Assembly (2006) (Minutes, 2003, Part I, p. 441).

In the spring of 2005, ACSWP requested data from the appropriate entities of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) regarding their efforts to implement the recommendations included in the “Resolution Calling for the Abolition of For-Profit Private Prisons.” Through this process, the ACSWP learned that the restructuring processes that occurred at the General Assembly Council (GAC) in 2002, 2003, and 2004 had limited the implementation of many of the recommendations included in the resolution. The ACSWP acknowledges the good work of the staff serving with the General Assembly Council (GAC) and the Office of the General Assembly (OGA) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) during a period of ongoing change and uncertainty. The ACSWP submits its findings to the 217th General Assembly (2006) in this abolition of for-profit private prisons monitoring report and recommendations.

II. Review of the Entities’ Efforts to Implement the Policy

A. General Assembly Council (GAC)

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) received responses from the following entities of the General Assembly (GAC) on their efforts to implement the recommendations included in the “Resolution Calling for the Abolition of For-Profit Private Prisons.” This data was analyzed and a summary of the ACSWP’s findings is presented below.

Visit <http://www.pcusa.org/gac> for more information on the GAC.

1. Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC)

Recommendation: F. 6.

Urge the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) and the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC) to work to ensure that for-profit private prisons are held absolutely accountable to all existing laws and to stringent provisions relating to prisons and the protection of prisoners and that, in the case of failure to show this accountability, contracts with them be terminated. (Minutes, 2003, Part I, p. 440)

Findings: The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) reported that on its web site in the “Issues” category, the following statement is included in the criminal justice section.

The 215th General Assembly (2003) approved a resolution “calling for the abolition of for-profit private prisons.” Part of the resolution calls us to work to ensure that for-profit private prisons are held absolutely accountable to all existing laws and to stringent provisions relating to prisons and the protection of prisoners.

The ACREC’s web site also includes a link to the entire “Resolution Calling for the Abolition of For-Profit Private Prisons.” That report can be downloaded at: <http://www.pcusa.org/oga/publications/private-prisons.pdf>. More information on this issue and other criminal justice concerns is included in the Criminal Justice section of the Justice and Compassion’s web page of the National Ministries Division (NMD) at <http://www.pcusa.org/criminaljustice>.

Visit <http://www.pcusa.org/acrec> for more information on the ACREC.

2. Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC)

Findings: In response to the above recommendation F. 6., the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC) reported that it works with the Presbyterian Washington Office (PWO) and has included e-alerts on its web site highlighting this issue and may do so again when the committee receives PWO updates.

Visit <http://www.pcusa.org/womensadvocacy/acwc> for more information on ACWC.

3. Office of Communication (OC)

Recommendation: F. 8

Urge all publications and other communications vehicles of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to develop articles, reports, and other educational materials designed to educate, motivate, and activate Presbyterians to participate in the campaign to abolish for-profit private prisons and in particular in the Lehman Campaign. (Minutes, 2003, Part I, p. 440)

Findings: On January 26, 2004, the Presbyterian News Service of the Office of Communication (OC) published an article on “ACSWP hails private-prison resolution.”

The PresbyTel area of the Office of Communication has included information on the resolution in its database to inform its staff as they respond to questions received via the telephone, email, and the PC(USA)’s web site on this topic.

Visit <http://www.pcusa.org/pcnews> and <http://www.pcusa.org/presbytel> for more information on the Presbyterian News Service and PresbyTel.

4. Presbyterian Peacemaking Program (PPP)

Findings: In response to the above Recommendation F. 8., the Presbyterian Peacemaking Program (PPP) reported that it would include information on the “Resolution Calling for the Abolition of For-Profit Private Prisons” in the Spring 2006 issues of Peace Notes and Leadership Memo.

Visit <http://www.pcusa.org/peacemaking/#about> for more information on the PPP.

5. Presbyterian Washington Office (PWO)

Recommendation: F. 1.

Direct the Presbyterian Washington Office (PWO), in partnership with the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) and the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC) to

- a. work towards comprehensive Federal legislation to completely and permanently ban all for-profit private prisons, jails and detention centers from the United States;
- b. provide, when requested, information on possible resources and expertise so that congregations or middle governing bodies can intervene to prevent the renewal of current federal government contracts with for-profit private prison corporations;
- c. consult and coordinate with other denominations, as well as with ecumenical and interfaith groups, to advocate for the permanent abolition of for-profit private prisons; and
- d. provide information to other levels of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to educate them on the issue and to encourage their participation in the campaign to abolish for-profit private prisons. (Minutes, 2003, Part I, p. 440)

Findings: In the January/February 2004 Washington Report to Presbyterians, the Presbyterian Washington Office (PWO) included an article on the “Privatization of Prisons.”

On May 5, 2004, the PWO sent a letter to the United States senators informing them the 215th General Assembly (2003) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) passed a resolution against the continuation of for-profit private prisons in the United States.

Visit <http://www.pcusa.org/washington> for more information on the PWO.

6. Justice and Compassion Program Area

Recommendation: F.9. “Encourage the General Assembly Council, through its National Ministries Division, Social Justice program area, to focus Criminal Justice Sunday in 2004 on the campaign to abolish for-profit private prisons” (Minutes, 2003, Part I, p. 440).

Findings: The recommendation was implemented. The Social Justice program area sent copies of the resolution with worship resources to all those who requested them for Criminal Justice Sunday February 2004. The resolution was also available for downloading via the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)’s web site in time for the February 2004 Criminal Justice Sunday.

7. Women's Ministries Program Area

Recommendation F.10. "Urge Presbyterian Women (PW) to make the campaign to abolish for-profit private prisons a focus of their ongoing work" (Minutes, 2003, Part I, p. 441).

Findings: Women's Ministries published articles on prison issues in Horizons, the magazine for Presbyterian Women. In the November/December 2004 issue, an article was published on "Prison Witness: Called to Bold Action for Peace." The November/December 2003 issue of Horizons addressed prison concerns in two articles: "Surprised by God" and "What It Means to Wait." Although these articles did not specifically address the for-profit private prison issue, in the 2003 document the readers were directed to the criminal justice program office for information on the Criminal Justice Sunday 2004. As was stated elsewhere in this report, the Criminal Justice Sunday 2004 materials focused on the "Resolution Calling for the Abolition of For-Profit Private Prisons."

Visit <http://www.pcusa.org/women> and <http://www.pcusa.org/pcusa/horizons> for more information on Women's Ministries and Horizons.

B. Office of the General Assembly (OGA)

The information for this section was submitted to the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) by the Office of the General Assembly (OGA).

Recommendation: D.

Direct the Office of the General Assembly to publish the entire report, Resolution Calling for the Abolition of For-Profit Private Prisons, with background, appendixes, and with a related study/action guide and place the document as a whole on the PC(USA)'s Web site, making available a copy for each requesting session or middle governing body; and, direct the Stated Clerk to notify the entire church it is available on the Web site. (Minutes, 2003, Part I, p. 439)

Recommendation: E.

Direct the Stated Clerk to encourage individual members, sessions and middle governing bodies to give prayerful attention to the report as help in study and advocating for the abolition of for-profit private prisons in the communities where they live and work and nationally. (Minutes, 2003, Part I, p. 440)

Findings: The recommendations were implemented. The Office of the General Assembly (OGA) published the entire report and placed it on the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)'s web site. The OGA makes available copies of the report for each requesting session and/or middle governing body. The inside cover of the printed report indicates that the resolution can be found at <http://www.pcusa.org/oga/publications/private-prisons.pdf>.

In his cover letter for the "Resolution Calling for the Abolition of For-Profit Private Prisons," the Stated Clerk stated that this report and study "is commended for the free Christian conscience of all congregations and the members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) for prayerful study, dialogue, and action."

III. Conclusion

In the executive summary of a report jointly published by the Coalition Against Private Prisons (CAPP) and Grassroots Leadership (see http://www.grassrootsleadership.org/downloads/GL_Shelby_Alternatives.pdf, the authors write:

While our public jails and prisons have faced budgetary pressures, and continue to need reform, we cannot afford to divest ourselves of the government role in providing highly trained public employees, with higher standards for community accountability than the private for-profit corporations that cater to the needs of highly paid executives and major stockholders. To do so is financially, civically, and morally irresponsible and dangerous. (Kaplan, Dana, and Bob Libal, "Progress or Profit? Positive Alternatives to Privatization and Incarceration in Shelby County," Tennessee, Coalition Against Private Prisons and Grassroots Leadership (2006), p. 3)

This statement provides support in favor of the action taken by the 215th General Assembly (2003) on the "Resolution Calling for the Abolition of For-Profit Private Prisons." That assembly affirmed that the government must play a role in matters related to incarceration. The assembly stated: "We have, along with other citizens, [en]trusted the oversight of this responsibility to our governmental leaders. This must continue to be their responsibility; it cannot be delegated from the public to the private sector" (Minutes, 2003, Part I, p. 439).

The entities listed in this report have responded faithfully to the 215th General Assembly (2003)'s directive to implement the "Resolution Calling for the Abolition of For-Profit Private Prisons." They have done so in the midst of a period of decreasing resources for rehabilitation in both the church and society, while many communities compete for prisons to provide employment. Federal, state, and county prisons/jails hold almost two million American citizens in any give year, by far the highest incarceration rate in the developed world. The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) encourages the whole church to support the efforts of the entities listed in this report (and other appropriate organizations) to abolish all for-profit private prisons.

Monitoring Report on the Progress of the Implementation of the Transforming Families Policy with Recommendations

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) reaffirm the action taken by the 216th General Assembly (2004) on the “Transforming Families” policy (Minutes, 2004, Part I, pp. 57, 747–95) and do the following:

1. Approve the “Monitoring Report on the Implementation of the “Transforming” Families” policy.
2. Commend the entities listed in this report for their efforts to implement the actions included in the “Transforming Families” policy.
3. Urge the entities of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to report their ongoing efforts to implement the actions included in “Transforming Families” to future General Assemblies.
4. Encourage the whole church to advocate for the passage of local, state, national, and international legislation that affirms the well-being of all families and single adults, and is consistent with the policies of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

Rationale

This report and its recommendations are in response to the following referral: Item 10-06. Transforming Families, Recommendation 3.q., That the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy Report on Progress It Has Made Implementing These Recommendations to the 217th General Assembly (2006) (Minutes, 2004, Part I, pp. 51, 760).

I. Introduction

The 216th General Assembly (2004) approved the policy statement on “Transforming Families” (Minutes, 2004, Part I, pp. 57, 747–95). This report addressed a variety of contemporary family and single-adults issues (e.g., consumerism, the dramatic rise in single-parent families, transitions in gender role expectations, etc.). In approving this report, the commissioners to the 216th General Assembly (2004) acknowledged the complex challenges that were ahead of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), at every level, in implementing this policy. Nevertheless, in the section of the report on “A Vision of Transforming Families” the commissioners declared:

... We call on the whole church to transform its own life in relation to the well-being of families and to renew its ministries to families and single adults. When Christian vocation is understood to encompass our lives together in families and our concern for the well-being of all families, it follows that the church must look to other social institutions to play important roles as well. This challenge of strengthening and transforming families will require wide collaboration and a multitude of co-laborers. The task is daunting, but the power of God can make more of our imperfect efforts than we could ask or think. (Minutes, 2004, Part I, p. 758)

The 216th General Assembly (2004) also directed the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy to report on progress it has made implementing these recommendation to the 217th General Assembly (2006) (Minutes, 2004, Part I, pp. 51, 760). In the spring of 2005, the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) requested data from the entities of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) regarding their efforts to implement the recommendations included in the “Transforming Families” policy. The ACSWP submits its findings to the 217th General Assembly (2006) in this monitoring report and recommendations.

II. Review of the Entities’ Efforts to Implement the Policy

A. Board of Pensions (BOP)

The Board of Pensions (BOP) responded to the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy’s request for a report on its efforts to implement the policy statement on “Transforming Families. This data was analyzed and a summary is presented below.

Recommendation: 3.l.: “That the Board of Pensions make presbyteries, sessions, and plan members more aware of the assistance to facilitate adoptions by pensions plan members” (Minutes, 2004, Part I, p. 760).

Findings: The Board of Pensions (BOP) reported that it is addressing this issue through its assistance programs in the following ways:

- The BOP currently provides a $500 dollar grant from its Relief of Conscience Fund to the parents of every adopted infant child (under one year of age). These payments are automatically made to plan members upon notification to the BOP of the legal adoption of a child. The purpose of the grant is to offset medical costs for a new child.
- In October 2005, the directors of the BOP voted to add an adoption assistance program to its assistance programs. The BOP affirms that an adoption assistance benefit should be made available to Plan members and that it should be based on the cost normally associated with childbirth that is covered under the Medical Plan. The new adoption assistance program went into effective on January 1, 2006.

Visit <http://www.pensions.org> for more information on the BOP.

B. General Assembly Council (GAC)

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) received responses from the following entities of the General Assembly Council (GAC) on their efforts to implement the policy statement on “Transforming Families.”

Go to <http://www.pcusa.org/gac> for more information on the GAC.

1. Family and Single Adult Ministries

Recommendation: 3.f.

That the General Assembly Council, through Congregational Ministries Division’s Family and Single Adult Ministries Office, recommend, on CMD’s Website and in its publications, useful resources relating to singles ministries, premarital counseling and premarital inventories, marriage and parenting education, marriage and family enrichment, marital and family counseling, domestic violence ministry, divorce recovery, Christian Families Week, adoption, and other family-extending relationships. [Where resources appropriate to Presbyterian churches are lacking, the Congregational Ministries Division shall consider publishing such resources.] (Minutes, 2004, Part I, p. 759)

Findings: The Family and Single Adult Ministries office published an article on “Single-Parent Households and the Church” in Ideas Magazine, Vol. 4, No. 3 (Spring 2005). This article can be downloaded at <http://www.pcusa.org/ideas/05spring/singlehousehold.htm>. It also includes information on other single-parent resources congregations may find useful.

The Family and Single Adult Ministries office also published a “Selected Resources for Family Ministries.” This resource can be downloaded from the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)’s Web site at <http://www.pcusa.org/family/resources.htm>. A “Selected Print and Web Resources for Those in Ministries with Families” is linked to this resource and can be downloaded at <http://www.pcusa.org/family/guidance/bibliography.pdf>. The Family and Single Adult Ministries office noted that the document does not include a comprehensive list of resources. Instead, it is based on the topics included in the “Transforming Families” policy.

Recommendation: 3.k.

That the Presbyterian Washington Office (and other appropriate General Assembly offices) convey these policy concerns to political leaders and church members; and that they monitor legislation addressing these concerns, reporting to Presbyterians when they have an opportunity to influence such legislation. (Minutes, 2004, Part I, p. 760)

Findings: The Presbyterian Washington Office (PWO) has complied with the recommendation above. In 2004 and 2005, the PWO published the following articles and distributed them to its Stewardship of Public Life network (and others as requested). These resources addressed concerns raised in the “Transforming Families” policy:

- “Washington Report: January/February 2004”
- “Washington Report: September/October 2004”
- “Outlook 2005: Congress to Focus on Deficit, as Budget Cutters Target Domestic Programs”

- “Outlook 2005: Budget Deficit Inhibits Possibilities for Health Care Reform”
- “TANF Stalls Over Child Care Funding, While Congress Proposes Deep Cuts in Domestic Programs and Waits for Hearings on Social Security”
- “Congress Stalls on Social Security Overhaul and TANF Reauthorization” [Note: TANF stands for Temporary Assistance for Needy Families.]
- “The Family Medical Leave Act—Family Friendly Workplaces”
- “Medicaid and the 2006 Budget”
- President’s Budget Plan for 2006 Reduces Social Programs, While Pushing More Tax Cuts for the Affluent”

Go to <http://www.pcusa.org/washington> for more information on the PWO.

3. Theological Education/Committee on Theological Education (COTE)

Recommendation: 3.e.

That the church’s theological seminaries be urged to address family issues in their own communities, as well as family ministries issues and strategies in their curricula, field education training, research projects, and clinical pastoral education. (Minutes, 2004, Part I, p. 759)

Findings: The Congregational Ministries Division (CMD) reported that this referral had been referred to the Committee on Theological Education (COTE). Moreover, a search of the theological institutions’ web sites confirmed that the seminaries are addressing family issues in their communities in many ways (e.g., Christian ethics, pastoral care and preaching courses, continuing education seminars, community events, etc.).

Go to <http://www.pcusa.org/seminaries/cote.htm> for more information on the COTE.

C. Office of the General Assembly (OGA)

The information for this section was submitted to the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) by the Office of the General Assembly (OGA). It includes the actions taken by the OGA, as of this writing, on the “Transforming Families” policy.

Recommendation: 3.o.

That the Stated Clerk be directed to publish the entire report “Transforming Families” in the Minutes; and that the Office of the General Assembly be directed to place the report “Transforming Families” with study/action guide on the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)’s Website, to distribute it to the middle governing bodies and their resource centers, to sessions, and to the libraries of the theological seminaries, making additional copies available for sale to aid study and implementation efforts in the church. (Minutes, 2004, Part I, p. 760)

Findings: The Stated Clerk complied with the directive of the 216th General Assembly (2004) listed above. The entire report “Transforming Families” can be downloaded from the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)’s web site at www.pcusa.org/oga/publications/transformingfamilies.pdf.

III. Conclusion

The entities included in this report are to be commended for their efforts to implement the General Assembly’s policy on “Transforming Families” during a period of ongoing change and uncertainty both in the church and society. Currently, in light of social service budget cuts at the local, state, and national levels of governments, the well-being of families and single adults does indeed present many moral and ethical challenges for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to grapple with. Therefore, the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) calls on the whole church to faithfully work together to implement the “Transforming Families” policy. Through this process, each member of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) will be doing her or his part to make this world a better place for families and single adults, and to help them experience the Good News of the Gospel.

Interim Report and Invitation to Study and Celebrate the Centennial of the “Social Creed of the Churches” of 1908

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006):

1. Receive this interim report of the Social Creed Resolution Team of the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy;

2. Direct the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy, the General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations, and the Department of Theology and Worship, as designated by the 216th General Assembly (2004), to continue work through that team on educational, liturgical, and ecumenical resources, including the updating of a social creed for the twenty-first century, especially involving church history and Christian ethics departments in colleges and seminaries related to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), coordinating efforts with those of ecumenical partners whenever feasible; and

3. Invite congregations, presbyteries, synods, and educational institutions to study the Social Creed of 1908 with resources prepared in anticipation of the appropriate observance of that influential document’s centennial at the 2008 General Assemblies of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), the National Council of Churches of Christ, the United Methodist Church, and other communions involved.

Comment: The source of the following statement, from paragraph 3 of section title “A Positive Statement of What the Churches Stand For” be cited: “Socialism, in Marxist and non-Marxian forms, is now largely gone, but most developed nations have many more social protections and social equality than the United States, with almost a fifth of its population in poverty and without health insurance.”

Rationale

Introduction

This interim report and recommendations are in response to the following referral: 2004 Referral: Item 08-18. 2004 Referral: Item 08-18. Commissioners’ Resolution. On Celebrating the “Social Creed” of the Churches and Considering a 21st Century Social Creed, Recommendation 3. That the Office of the General Assembly, Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy, and Other Appropriate Agencies of Our Denomination, Develop Recommendations for the 217th General Assembly (2006) Concerning the Possible Goals, Basic Commitments, and Effectiveness of an Updated Social Creed for the 21st Century—(Minutes, 2004, Part I, pp. 18, 627–29).

The 216th General Assembly (2004) considered and unanimously approved by voice vote, with amendment, a commissioners’ resolution on celebrating the centennial of the “Social Creed of the Churches” adopted in 1908 at the founding of the Federal Council of Churches, and considering the preparation of a new social creed for the twenty-first century (Minutes, 2004, Part I, pp. 18, 627–28). A final report was envisioned for the 218th General Assembly (2008), but a proposal for broader participation and educational and liturgical resources was requested for the 217th General Assembly (2006). This is in answer to that request.

The action of the 2004 General Assembly was in three parts, consistent with the ecumenical, ethical, and educational nature of the original social creed (reprinted following this brief narrative).

1. The Office of the General Assembly was directed to consult with ecumenical partners and the National Council of Churches and other appropriate bodies to find ways to honor the role of the churches in advocating an end to child labor, a six-day week, occupational safety, retirement security, a living wage, and other concerns that “a Christ-like God” was believed to want for all Americans.

2. The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy was directed to initiate a survey of key Christian principles to guide twenty-first-century Presbyterians and others in addressing major concerns such as the lack of health insurance, the outsourcing of jobs to countries without human rights or environmental safeguards, and the impact of growing economic inequality on our democracy. It was urged, in doing this, to utilize the Presbyterian Panel, literature surveys, volunteer experts, and past General Assembly statements.

3. Both bodies were directed, in cooperation with the Office of Theology and Worship, to develop recommendations to the 217th General Assembly (2006) concerning ways to celebrate the centennial and to consider the possible goals, basic commitments, and value of an updated social creed for the twenty-first century.

The Social Creed Resolution Team

The ACSWP appointed a Social Creed Resolution Team, which first met October 11–13, 2005. Membership included the following: Gary Dorrien, Nile Harper, Carrie L. Harris, Elizabeth Hinson-Hasty, Ann Rhee Menzie, Richard Poethig, Ronald Stone, Lidia Serrata-Ledesma (chair), with Eugene TeSelle as a consultant historian.

The members of the team represent a broad base of experience and insight, with several experts on church life and witness at the turn of that earlier century and others unfamiliar with what was once a very influential stance of the church (updated four times!). The team reviewed a collection of the previous social creeds and two extensive commentaries on these materials prepared by Presbyterian historians, with response from an Episcopalian deeply familiar with Presbyterian church life and broader theological developments. The relation of the “social creed” as a form of theologically grounded social witness was contrasted with the short foundational ecumenical creeds of the early church, including the Nicene and Apostles’ Creed in The Book of Confessions.

The Reformation Era and twentieth century confessions in The Book of Confessions themselves contain much ethical instruction on work and commerce drawn from Scripture: any twenty-first century update of the social creed would need to be consistent with that base and more recent General Assembly policy studies. There was clear agreement that the team should continue to ask for suggestions from the church at large, and from specific segments of it, as it does its work. In doing this it will not only publicize what it is doing and make it more persuasive; it will also gain insights that had not occurred to any of the members of the team.

The resolution team also approved a Presbyterian Panel questionnaire circulated in November of 2005, asking for the views of that balanced sample of ministers and elders on the kinds of topics considered in 1908 and in subsequent work of the church, including the 1983 study of the church’s relations with transnational corporations (by which many more Presbyterians are employed than were a century ago). The team, after both study and discussion, was convinced that it is definitely worthwhile to envision preparing a new social creed for the twenty-first century in conjunction with the celebration of its predecessor.

While this conviction was developing among Presbyterians, the United Methodist Church also determined that the centennial of the 1908 creed was worth commemorating and, through its Board of Church and Society, appointed a task force chaired by Bishop Susan Morrison to coordinate that work. Similarly, within the Justice and Compassion Unit of the National Council of Churches, a task force was put together, chaired by Dean Michael Kinnamon of Eden Theological Seminary (a Disciples of Christ minister), including members from the Coptic Orthodox, Methodist, Reformed, United Church of Christ, and (lay) Roman Catholic Churches, staffed by a National Baptist.

Acknowledging the different ways these and other communions may lay claim to the social creed tradition and formulate its relevance for today, the Presbyterian team invited the others to schedule their meetings with some overlap at a common location in March of 2006. The Methodists in particular have retained the tradition of writing a new social creed every four years, and printing the original as well with their current social witness policy statements.

The Presbyterian Heritage

The team recognized that it is not undertaking this task alone or for the first time, and that it should have a practical as well as historical dimension. While we and the other denominations can take pride in having spoken clearly on matters of great social importance years before our constructive proposals were enacted into law, the centennial is not simply to celebrate our being “right” or “ahead of our time.” The 1908 Social Creed was part of a Social Gospel creativity that continued in Christian Realist form after World War I, providing Christian vision of a fairer, more stable economy even during the “Great Depression.”

The Presbyterian church was the first denomination to set up a national-level ministry to workers and immigrants in 1903, which was praised and imitated by other denominations. That office was directed by Charles Stelzle who also developed the Labor Temple for ministry and outreach to workers. General Assemblies of the PCUSA approved adaptations of the social creed in 1910, 1914, 1920, and 1932. Then after World War II, the church both grew and spoke prophetically on justice issues, including racial equality. Marshal Scott, following a mandate from the 1944 General Assembly, established the Presbyterian Institute of Industrial Relations (PIIR) initially at the Labor Temple and then at McCormick Theological Seminary in 1952. Directed by Scott and later by Richard Poethig, it trained a diverse body of ministers and some laypersons committed to research and action for social justice, particularly in industrial and urban areas. Scott and Henry Jones also extended this work internationally through the urban-industrial mission of the Council on Ecumenical Mission and Relations (COEMAR). The PIIR and the international dimension were then united in the Institute on the Church in Urban Industrial Society (ICUIS), linked to the World Council of Churches and also based at McCormick Seminary. This is not to minimize the sincere spiritual struggle of Christians on all sides of the social changes of the twentieth century.

General Assemblies of all three predecessor churches now reunited made many strong statements during the last century, brought together in the current Social Witness Policy Compilation. Few statements have had the impact of the original social creed, widely affirmed by presidential candidates in 1912, for example, and pre-figuring much important legislation protecting workers, persons with disabilities, and retired persons. Subsequent church witness, however, has not only influenced legislation but included the development of creative programs, such as Hunger, Peacemaking, and Self-Development of People. Newer church efforts encourage investments in ecologically safe development enterprises and purchases of “sweat-free” and “fair-trade” products.

General Assemblies (and many congregations and members) have also endorsed campaigns for economic and social justice that have been both controversial and effective: the Taco Bell boycott, protest against Talisman Oil in Sudan, corporate responsibility efforts including selective divestment from South Africa to help end apartheid, and support for Truth and Reconciliation Commissions in South Africa and several countries in Central America. The social creed concept is not a specific campaign like these, but an expression of core Christian values and goals for how we treat each other in economic and social life. The advocacy and social service efforts by this denomination and others suggest that our members appreciate both strategic and “hands-on” ways to promote justice; the updated social creed envisioned would help affirm these concerns in a concise set of clear Christian commitments.

Many self-described evangelicals in the Presbyterian church and others are equally concerned with issues of economic justice. Jim Wallis of the Sojourners Community is filling churches or auditoriums wherever he speaks. The National Association of Evangelicals adopted, on October 7, 2004, a statement entitled “For the Health of the Nation: An Evangelical Call to Civic Responsibility,” and recently sponsored a book edited by Ronald J. Sider and Diane Knippers, entitled Toward an Evangelical Public Policy (BakerBooks, 381 pp., $24.99 paperback).

Finally, the resolution team noted that in the twenty-first century we are increasingly aware of what is being said by Roman Catholics, Jews, Muslims, and secular movements, and are intentionally more inclusive than was the 1908 Social Creed itself. Yet, in this pluralistic and globalizing environment, the resolution team believes it is the more important to see any revised social creed as an expression of Christian conviction, reflective of Christ’s Good News to all people.

A Positive Statement of What the Churches Stand For

The Social Creed of 1908 was not perfect, and reflected the limits of our church leadership of the time. While it dealt sympathetically with the problems faced by labor, including women and children and immigrants, its perspective was white, Protestant, and middle-class. Our predecessors not only wanted to help lift up those less fortunate, but to give them Sabbath time for worship and family life, free from desperation and degradation. This spirituality was part of its effectiveness, despite its not mentioning other big issues such as lynchings in the South, the Prohibition cause, or support for women’s suffrage. Resolution team members, and all of those engaged in study and reflection across the church, need to remember A Brief Statement of Faith’s word that we “hear the voices of [those] long silenced” as we seek to address effectively the mainstream of our culture (itself increasingly diverse and less Christian) (The Book of Confessions, 10.4, line 70).

Allowing for—and seeking to minister to—a very changed context, the resolution team is inclined to follow the example of the 1908 Social Creed in its positive phrasing of what the churches stand “for.” The team has also seen the statements of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches, meeting at Accra, Ghana, in 2004, and the World Council of Churches, affirming the “AGAPE” document at its February 2006 assembly in Porto Alegre, Brazil. These are passionate statements of Christian solidarity in the face of economic globalization pressures and enormous suffering among the poor in many countries. Those affirmations illuminate our understanding of discipleship in world perspective, but they are not the relatively short statement of Christian goals and principles that is a social creed.

For the sake of those who will join in exploring what a social creed would include today, we suggest several major differences, starting with the globalization identified by our ecumenical partners. The 1908 Social Creed dealt with industrialization; much of the U.S. economy is now post-industrial, based on information and seeking maximum flexibility in trading relationships. Back then transportation advances added to the productivity of new inventions; today technological advance is still crucial, but the cyber-mobility of capital has vastly overshadowed the influence of labor. Socialism, in Marxist and non-Marxian forms, is now largely gone, but most developed nations have many more social protections and social equality than the United States, with almost one-eighth of its population in poverty and one-sixth without health insurance. Then the task of reformers was to deal with national problems and gain laws and regulations at the national level; now it is also to deal with transnational problems and seek transnational solutions.

The place of the “mainline” Protestant church has also changed, though the resolution team does not disparage either the potential impact or the concern for integrity that “our” voice still carries. We know many are discouraged about the future, torn between self-doubt and ideological denial of the suffering of others. It is certainly not possible in any one statement by one or more churches to recapture the courageous optimism of the Social Gospel movement, some of whose leaders had as much utopian hope as egalitarian outrage. United States citizens today, in comparison to citizens of most other countries, feel greater insecurity about terrorism and the economic impact of trade and budget deficits. Corruption and cronyism also seem pervasive at the top levels of corporations and government, which leads to a moral cynicism at unshared sacrifices, especially by those involved in the Iraq war. Illegal immigrants, totaling as many as twelve million, though resented by some, also bear large burdens in the low wage sector of the economy. All of these topics are complex: the challenge in a social creed is to focus on the moral issues and affirm constructive directions that reflect the hope of the Gospel.

The Social Creed of 1908 came relatively late in what is called The Progressive Era so that it built consensus on some matters that had been struggled over since the 1880s. It did not give full expression to the sense of outrage and moral demands that had given rise to the era; neither did it say all that could have been said about Jesus’ teachings and the transforming work of the Holy Spirit. Focused as it was, however, the social creed influenced the way Christians and others saw the world of work. Some of the churches’ stands seemed reasonable and decent and were enacted into law—in some cases after being struck down at first by a very conservative Supreme Court. Other elements in that 1908 statement still await fulfillment. Times do change, and expectations of government and corporations and individuals and churches and climates change.

A centennial offers an opportunity to reflect on the process of change, perhaps to count the blessings of some progress, and perhaps also to count the cost of new efforts. The invitation of the commissioners of this 217th General Assembly (2006), should the recommendations above be approved, is that we remember an insightful and encouraging act of witness, and that we try to offer a similar statement of conviction and hope to our time, and to our God.

The Social Creed of 1908
Federal Council of Churches
(Now, National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A.)

We deem it the duty of all Christian people to concern themselves directly with certain practical industrial problems. To us it seems that the Churches must stand—

For equal rights and complete justice for all men in all stations of life.

For the right of all men to the opportunity for self-maintenance, a right ever to be wisely and strongly safe-guarded against encroachments of every kind.

For the right of workers to some protection against the hardships often resulting from the swift crisis of industrial change.

For the principle of conciliation and arbitration in industrial dissensions.

For the protection of the worker from dangerous machinery, occupational disease, injuries and mortality.

For the abolition of child labor.

For such regulation of the conditions of toil for women as shall safeguard the physical and moral health of the community.

For the suppression of the “sweating system.”

For the gradual and reasonable reduction of the hours of labor to the lowest practical point, and for that degree of leisure for all which is a condition of the highest human life.

For a release from employment one day in seven.

For a living wage as a minimum in every industry, and for the highest wage that each industry can afford.

For the most equitable division of the products of industry that can ultimately be devised.

For suitable provision for the old age of the workers and for those incapacitated by injury.

For the abatement of poverty.

To the toilers of America and to those who by organized effort are seeking to lift the crushing burdens of the poor, and to reduce the hardships and uphold the dignity of labor, this council sends the greeting of human brotherhood and the pledge of sympathy and of help in a cause which belongs to all who follow Christ.

Item 09-08

[The assembly approved Item 09-08. See pp. 50, 51.]

A Report on "A Reformed Understanding of Usury for the Twenty-First Century"

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) approve the following:

That entities of the General Assembly, advocacy committees, governing bodies, congregations, and individual members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.):

1. Support efforts to provide more effective and less costly financial services to people who are now forced to utilize high-cost alternative financial resources by:

a. partnering with and supporting legitimate, ethical nonprofit organizations that provide both educational and financial services to those not eligible for mainstream services, including participation in the development of community credit unions;

b. partnering with local community organizations that serve the poor to help them learn about resources in the community that will provide them better opportunities for both saving and borrowing;

c. supporting faith-based investor groups as they seek to change discriminatory lending practices; and

d. becoming knowledgeable about policy recommendations that may help those without lower-cost banking services achieve them.

2. Support and implement education for financial literacy by:

a. learning what organizations, educational materials, and resources are available in their community and on the web;

b. developing or securing appropriate educational materials (with respect to age, culture, and language) and/or educational sessions for children, teenagers, college students, young adults, adults, and seniors that demystify the world of savings, credit, and lending and encourage savings and frugal use of credit cards and loans;

c. urging local and state boards of education to make financial literacy a part of the middle and high school curriculum;

d. encouraging Presbyterian-related colleges, universities, and seminaries to continue to offer education in financial management and to discourage credit card promotion on campus; and

e. encouraging Presbyterian publications to include articles on financial literacy as part of total stewardship of God-given resources.

3. Support and implement church-wide education on the ethics of lending by:

a. utilizing this resolution, including its rationale, as a resource to help congregational members consider how Christian faith and ethics provide guidance in the area of banking and lending;

b. inviting members of communities and congregations knowledgeable about banking and lending to help congregational members understand the facts of predatory lending in their communities;

c. encouraging the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation and the General Assembly Council (Congregational Ministries Division) to develop curricular resources to help members understand their Christian responsibilities with respect to lending practices;

d. learning about state and federal laws, public policy recommendations, and pending legislation related to usury through web sites such as the Washington Office of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) (<http://www.pcusa.org/washington>) and the Center for Responsible Lending (www.responsiblelending.org); and

e. becoming a part of a presbytery's or congregation's public policy advocacy group to learn how to impact legislative changes.

4. Advocate for the change of state and federal policies and legislation that allow lenders to take advantage of either the naïveté or financial plight of borrowers by developing local study/action groups (Presbyterian and ecumenical) with a focus on questionable lending practices.

5. Advocate for federal and state policies

a. that offer incentives to mainstream financial institutions to make their services available to the population typically underserved and forced into exorbitantly expensive alternative financial services; and

b. that regulate the consumer credit counseling industry.

6. Communicate this policy to others by

a. directing the Stated Clerk to publish this "A Reformed Understanding of Usury for the Twenty-First Century" in its entirety on the PC(USA) website, making available a copy for each presbytery, synod, and requesting session, and further notifying the church of its availability online;

b. directing the Stated Clerk to write to federal and state legislatures sharing the principles of this report; and

c. sharing this report with ecumenical partners and other faith groups.

Rationale

I. Introduction

This report and its recommendations are in response to the following referral: 2004 Referral: Item 10-09. On Preparing a Policy Statement on Usury in the United States—From the Presbytery of Utah (Minutes, 2004, Part I, pp. 60, 798–99).

The 216th General Assembly (2004)'s referred Item 10-09, an overture from the Presbytery of Utah as amended (Minutes, 2004, Part I, pp. 60, 798–99), to the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy to investigate the question of usury in the United States and to prepare a resolution for the 217th General Assembly (2006) that would achieve the following:

1. More clearly define the sin of usury for the 21st century.
2. Suggest parameters (for example, a certain APR or a quadrupling of the amount of the original loan within a short period of time) beyond which Presbyterians could agree that the sin of usury was taking place.
3. Encourage Presbyterians to become aware of usury laws in their states and to advocate for stricter limits and enforcement when necessary to protect the poor.
4. Develop ethical criteria consistent with the Reformed Tradition for evaluating usury laws and other legislation to address various forms of lending such as payday loans, sub-prime loans, predatory lending, and cash-back tax preparation arrangements. (Minutes, 2004, Part I, p. 798)

A resolution group was formed from across the church representing the church in age, sex, race, and geography. It included persons with backgrounds in administration, banking, biblical studies, theology, ethics, business practices, education, and finance. The Reverend Dr. Cam Murchison served as consultant. It examined the understandings of usury in Scripture, in church history generally, and in The Book of Confessions particularly, as well as in the recent history of the United States. It also identified ethical criteria consistent with this Reformed tradition for assessing laws and practices in relation to usury.

II. A Reformed Understanding of Usury for the Twenty-First Century

At the beginning of the twenty-first century, some of the core principles the church has tried to uphold in relation to money lending are the victims of a perverse reversal of moral logic. In too many contemporary lending practices, not only are the poor charged interest (against the theological and ethical wisdom of the church), but they are also charged more interest than those who live in more favorable economic circumstances. The Reformed tradition yields three primary questions that should be asked in evaluating the “usury quotient” of lending practices and legislation:

1. Does a practice or a law promote financial relationships that take advantage of the financial distress of those economically disadvantaged?
2. Is a practice or a law structured in a manner that balances the economic benefit for both the lender and the borrower?
3. Does a practice or a law lead to the conduct of financial transactions in a fair and just manner, e.g. characterized by truthfulness; nondiscrimination to the borrower; full (and understandable) disclosure; and the absence of coercion?

All three criteria are summed up in the rule of charity, the love of God and neighbor, which the reformers and the confessions judged should govern the question of usury.

III. Biblical/Theological Background

A. Biblical Considerations

Several Old Testament texts and one New Testament text have furnished the biblical focus for the church’s concern with usury. Exodus 22:25 is likely the earliest when it focuses the concern in reference to the poor.

If you lend money to my people, to the poor among you, you shall not deal with them as a creditor; you shall not exact interest from them. (NRSV)

A similar concern with charging interest that focuses on the condition of the one needing the loan is found in Leviticus 25:35–36:

If any of your kin fall into difficulty and become dependent on you, you shall support them; they shall live with you as though resident aliens. Do not take interest in advance or otherwise make a profit from them, but fear your God; let them live with you. (NRSV)

Both of these prohibitions against charging interest on loans have in view the distressed economic plight of the borrower, and both make the same judgment that God’s demands of covenant community preclude the practice of charging interest.

Another passage in Deuteronomy 23:19–20 distinguishes between charging interest on loans to fellow Israelites and foreigners:

You shall not charge interest on loans to another Israelite, interest on money, interest on provisions, interest on anything that is lent. On loans to a foreigner you may charge interest, but on loans to another Israelite you may not charge interest, so that the LORD your God may bless you in all your undertakings in the land that you are about to enter and possess. (NRSV)

Even though the prohibition against charging interest on loans was limited to fellow Israelites, a universalizing tendency in Christian theology eventually extended the protection against charging interest to all with whom one had financial dealings.¹ The New Testament provided an explicit warrant for such a broadening of the claim in Luke 6:35:

But love your enemies, do good, and lend, expecting nothing in return. Your reward will be great, and you will be children of the Most High; for he is kind to the ungrateful and the wicked. (NRSV)

Articulated in the context of loving enemies, the widening of the scope of Deuteronomy’s restriction on charging interest was virtually inevitable in Christian consideration of the matter.²

Gradually, however, the church had to wrestle with the changing view of what can be accomplished with money on loan and began to modify the strict prohibition against all interest. From the time of Aristotle, whose influence on Christian thinking was great in this area as well as in many others, money was regarded as sterile and unproductive, so that it seemed a perversion of the natural order of things to charge for its use. With the early developments of capitalist economies, money came to be seen as highly productive and thus the charging of interest seemed less out of accord with the nature of things.

B. Reformation Developments

Working in this changing economic context, John Calvin came to believe that usury (charging interest on loans) was acceptable among the rich, but was explicitly constrained when it came to burdening and oppressing debtors. “Hence it follows that usury is not now unlawful, except insofar as it contravenes equity and brotherly union.”³ Albert Hyma adds that for Calvin (and Luther as well), it was always prohibited to charge interest to a poor person, always enjoined by Christ to do unto others as one wanted done to oneself, and always urged that “the desire for personal gain must . . . remain subordinate to that

Christian spirit of brotherly love which seeks to aid the poor and the outcasts, for they are to receive all the property and profit which exceed one's moderate needs."⁴

Thus there appear to have been two limits on usury that continued once the charging of interest had become acceptable. One limit had to do with appropriate ceilings on the amount of interest charged, likely in accordance with some version of the golden rule and the spirit of equity and solidarity. The other limit had to do with the continuation of the prohibition of charging interest to the poor. Those who experienced the greatest amount of economic distress were to be afforded the greatest amount of protection in economic transactions. Loans were becoming categorized in two ways, those that were a matter of economic necessity for the poor and financially stressed (for which charging interest was not appropriate) and those that were a matter of mutual economic opportunity by which transaction both the borrower and lender might improve their economic circumstances (for which charging reasonable rates of interest was appropriate).

C. The Book of Confessions

The authoritative expression of the Reformed tradition for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is found in The Book of Confessions. It manifests this development in the understanding of usury at two particular places where the eighth commandment ("Thou shall not steal") is discussed. The Heidelberg Catechism includes in its listing of what God forbids in this commandment "... all wicked tricks and schemes by which we seek to get for ourselves our neighbor's goods, whether by force or under the pretext of right, such as false weights and measures, deceptive advertising or merchandising, counterfeit money, exorbitant interest, and any other means forbidden by God. He also forbids all greed and misuse and waste of his gifts" (4.110).

Typical of Reformed dealing with the commandments, the Heidelberg Catechism goes on to summarize not only what God forbids but also what God requires in this commandment. "That I work for the good of my neighbor wherever I can and may, deal with him as I would have others deal with me, and do my work well so that I may be able to help the poor in their need" (4.111).

The transition from the prohibition of all interest to the prohibition of exorbitant interest had thus been made in the Reformed theological community by 1562 when the Heidelberg Catechism was completed.⁵ Such "exorbitant interest" was considered an unfair scheme by which a lender tried to extract a neighbor's goods for another's own use. So stealing is at issue even when one operates under the "pretext of right," as when one takes advantage of civil law that allows for one to charge interest at an excessive rate.

The other mention of usury in The Book of Confessions occurs in the Westminster Larger Catechism. Adopted in 1647, this catechism opens its consideration of the eighth commandment by reversing Heidelberg's sequence and naming first the "duties required" by the admonition not to steal. These duties include: "faithfulness, and justice in contracts and commerce ... giving and lending freely, according to our abilities, and the necessities of others; moderation of our judgments, wills, and affections, concerning worldly goods; ... frugality; and an endeavor by all just and lawful means to procure, preserve, and further the wealth and outward estate of others, as well as our own" (7.251).

Having stated the positive duties involved, the catechism turns in its next question to the sins that are forbidden by the same commandment. In addition to the explicit citation of "usury," these include: "fraudulent dealing ... injustice and unfaithfulness in contracts ... inordinate prizing and affecting worldly goods; distrustful and distracting cares and studies in getting, keeping, and using them; envying at the prosperity of others ..." (7.252). While the Larger Catechism does not itself define what it means by "usury," the English parliament passed an act in 1571 that outlawed loans earning more than 10 percent interest (while still frowning on all loans charging interest) and another law in 1624 that simultaneously lowered the interest rate to a range of 5 to 9 percent on various kinds of loans (while explicitly legitimating these legal interest charges).⁶ It is reasonable to conclude that the framers of the Westminster standards were fully cognizant of these laws. For Westminster "usury" meant excessive interest and what was excessive had been quantified with relative clarity by legal statutes.

The umbrella of moral concerns under which this exorbitant interest is discussed in both catechisms further suggests that the ethical permission to charge interest does not mean that any charges whatever are acceptable. Both catechisms make explicit reference to concern for the economic well-being of others, and Heidelberg explicitly mentions obligations to the poor. All of this recapitulates Scripture's tendency to prohibit any interest on loans with reference to the plight of the poor. It also echoes Calvin's own insistence that "God has joined and united us together so that we might have a community, for men should not be separate. ... It is too great a cruelty on our part if we see a poor and afflicted man and do not try to help him but rather turn away from him."⁷

Whether charging interest was acceptable depended upon whether it harmed the borrower. In the case of the poor, it seemed obvious that interest on a loan took advantage of their economic distress and thus caused harm. In the case of the loans to provide capital for productive enterprises with promise of return to the borrower (as well as to the lender), no advantage was taken, and thus no harm was caused. Three overlapping distinctions came to be made in dialogue with the scriptural sources pertaining to usury: Gifts to those in need where even the money given was not expected in return; loans to those in economic distress where the money given was to be repaid but without interest; and loans to those undertaking business enterprises in pursuit of economic gain where appropriate levels of interest may justly be charged.

IV. A Brief History of Small-Loan Lending in the United States

To understand the story of “usury” in the American context, it is important to be cognizant of a particular part of lending history in the United States.⁸ It is the history of small-loan lending designed for various domestic financial emergencies as contrasted with large-loan lending designed for both agricultural and home mortgage purposes. In the latter part of the 19th century in the United States, these large loans had a settled place in the lending system, with typical interest limits in the range of 6 percent. However, because of a variety of factors—including Victorian ideas of proper money management—small-loans were often viewed as evidence of financial irresponsibility. Thus large loans were productive, but small ones were stigmatized as evidence that the loan seeker was a spendthrift.

A. The Development of Illegal Lending

Since no concession was brooked for legally extending the allowable interest for smaller loans, the economics of the matter made almost inevitable the development of an unofficial, illegal lending system. Two factors collided: the need for workers in the emerging industrial economy to seek small loans in periods of temporary lay-offs (or other emergencies of household finance); and the relatively higher cost of providing such small loans by lending entities that did not have access to cheap capital but had to bear higher risks of default and had higher administrative costs per loan. This forced the lending activity underground and resulted in the almost mythological image of the “loan shark.”

B. Reform Efforts

During the early decades of the 20th century, various reform efforts were undertaken to seek to redress the injustices that inevitably flowed from such unregulated and illegal practices. By 1932 a Uniform Small Loan Law had been adopted by twenty-five states that differentiated between allowable interest rates for larger and smaller loans. The fact that regulation rested with the states was an important part of the picture, since states tended to be cautious about allowing interest rates to rise too dramatically, even for the smaller loans that were more costly to administer and service. However, a 1978 Supreme Court decision effectively removed control of interest rates from the states by allowing banks doing business in a state with a higher rate of interest to issue loans to residents of another state (that might have a much lower legal interest rate limit) and collect the higher rate.⁹

C. Legal and Regulatory Developments

Although banks had not been associated with small-loan lending for most of the 20th century, focusing instead on the traditional, longer term loans, partnerships between the small-loan lenders and banking institutions made the bank’s exemption available to these lending entities as well. For example, even though a number of states have caps on fees that check cashers may charge, some check cashers formed partnerships with national banks that are permitted to set non-interest charges according to “sound banking judgment.”¹⁰ Because the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency (OCC) takes the point of view that any state laws prohibiting such charges are preempted by the authority of these banks to do business, these partnerships meant that check cashers were able to avoid the state caps on fees. As in the 1978 Supreme Court ruling, this arrangement makes a privilege granted to banks available to the providers of alternative financial services (AFS), the small-loan lenders of yesteryear.

The transference of exemption from interest rate limits from the banks to AFS entities is even more transparent in the case of payday lending. The provisions of the National Bank Act have made it possible for a payday lender to arrange a loan between a bank and a borrower with the applicable interest rate ceiling (if there is one) being that of the home state of the bank—not the ceiling of the state in which the payday lender and the borrower are located. Often, however, the entire loan is immediately purchased from the bank by the payday lender with most risk removed from the bank. “In effect, the lender has ‘rented’ the bank’s name for purposes of making a legal loan.”¹¹

Since the turn of the 21st century these “exporting” practices have been constrained in some important ways. While banking regulators first undertook to provide guidance that explained the risks involved in payday lending, their increasing concern about these risks led the OCC, the Office of Thrift Supervision (OTC), and Federal Reserve Board to terminate these partnerships. However, these decisions were not based so much on a determination to protect consumers but upon a concern for safe and sound business practices. Moreover, FDIC regulated depositories still are free to engage in these partnerships, so the opportunity continues to exist for payday lenders to “rent” exemption from their state’s usury laws.¹²

V. An Understanding of Usury for the 21st Century

The earlier discussion of the biblical and theological background has yielded two features of the church's wrestling with the topic of usury that clearly have continuing relevance. In the first place, even as the church came to terms with the appropriateness of interest charges on loans for commerce, it continued to argue against charging interest to the poor. In the second place, where it did judge that interest on loans was justifiable, it still applied the principles of fairness and justice to the transactions with the result that maximum rates of interest were delineated and the character of the relationship between borrower and lender was defined. As we reconstitute an understanding of usury for the 21st century, we need to keep both things in view.

A. Questionable Lending Practices

Ironically, as shown by both the brief history of small-loan lending summarized above and the lending practices that have given rise to the General Assembly's call for this resolution, the picture we confront in the U.S. economy at the beginning of the 21st century should give us pause. The picture includes the following.¹³

- Payday lending that easily entraps people into continuing loans that are very difficult to retire. In some states these lenders have avoided limits imposed by standard usury laws by charging "fees" that are technically distinguished from "interest." In some states the communities surrounding military bases are the special target of these lenders. However, even on very small sums of money, say $300 carried for a full year, the fees can amount to $1,365 with the loan balance of $300 still unpaid at year's end. This is equivalent to an annual rate of 456 percent. Typically the loans are for a period extending to the next paycheck, two to four weeks. But frequently the borrower can only pay off the loan on payday by taking yet another loan until the next payday. The potential for an endless cycle is self-evident. By contrast, the same amount of money borrowed on a 15.5 percent credit card rate for the same period of time would cost a borrower something closer to $56.

- Check cashing. For many years, check cashers have been used by low-income individuals without bank accounts seeking to conduct basic financial transactions such as cashing checks, paying bills, and wiring funds. While check cashers offer essential services, the fees involved in converting paper checks into cash are high relative to an alternative world in which low-income households would be able to rely more on direct deposit into bank accounts. The industry reports that it processes 180 million checks totaling $55 billion annually, generating $1.5 billion in fees. Most of these checks are low-risk payroll or government benefit checks: 80 percent of checks cashed at surveyed check cashers in the 2000 Treasury study were payroll checks, while 16 percent were government benefit checks.

- Predatory mortgage lending typically takes place in the subprime market, targeting people with weak or blemished credit records. A typical predatory mortgage is a refinance of an existing loan with the difference that the new loan is packed with excessive or unnecessary fees and provides no tangible benefit to the borrower. A related problem is the inappropriate utilization of interest only or negative amortization loans. Unfortunately, many of these loans are perfectly legal, and too often they are targeted at the most vulnerable citizens. Often elderly homeowners have been enticed into sub-prime mortgages as a way of dealing with other financial needs, only to end by losing a home that they had owned for years. Predatory mortgage lending drains wealth from families, destroys the benefits of homeownership, and often leads to foreclosure. The Center for Responsible Lending estimates that predatory mortgage lending costs Americans more than $9.1 billion each year.

- Rent to Own enterprises may sell a $325 bed for $1,740 on an installment plan. Such businesses operate by blurring the lines between leasing a bed and buying one on credit, thus avoiding usury laws that cap interest rates and require businesses to disclose what they're charging. The store does not have to report how much it is charging in interest. If a borrower is late with a payment, there is no legal limit to how much interest the store can charge in finance charges, although the company usually repossesses the rental property. Under a typical rent-to-own contract, a consumer may pay as much as $2,200 over two years to purchase a $500 TV.

- Refund Anticipation Loans, (RALs) are short-term loans secured by taxpayers' expected tax refunds. Instead of waiting to receive tax refunds, RAL customers borrow against part or all of their expected tax refunds. Consumers pay three fees to get a RAL: a fee for commercial tax preparation, typically $120; a fee to the commercial preparer to process the RAL, sometimes called a "system administration," "application," or "document preparation" fee, with the average fee being about $30; and a loan fee to the lender, ranging from approximately $30 to more than $100 in 2004. The total amount of these fees can range from $180 to more than $250, and eat away at about 10 percent of the consumer's refund. The effective interest rate for RALs ranges from about 70 percent to more than 700 percent, or 94 percent to 1,837 percent if administrative fees are included. Commercial preparer and RAL lenders have been reporting lower annual percentage rates (APRs) by "unbundling" charges from the loan fees.

- Car Title Loans A typical car title loan has a triple-digit annual interest rate, requires repayment within one month, and is made for much less than the value of the car. Title loans are typically made without regard to borrowers' ability to repay. Because the loans are structured to be repaid as a single balloon payment after a very short term, borrowers frequently cannot pay the full amount due on the maturity date and instead find themselves extending or “rolling over” the loan repeatedly. In this way, many borrowers pay fees well in excess of the amount they originally borrowed. If the borrower fails to keep up with these recurring payments, the lender may summarily repossess the car, often stripping borrowers of their most valuable possession and only means of transportation.

- Credit Card Abuses are evident in an economy where credit cards have become a common form of currency for millions of Americans. It has been estimated that between 1989 and 2001 credit card debt in the U.S. almost tripled from $238 billion to $692 billion. While some cardholders use their credit for occasional purchases, working families of limited means have come to rely on “plastic” to weather economic downturns or to simply make ends meet. College students and other minors have also become attractive targets for the marketing of cards that contain hidden transfer charges, exorbitant late fees and exploding interest rates. In effect, the credit card industry has identified its ideal customers as those who no longer pay off their balances, but instead grow increasingly indebted to their creditors by making minimum monthly payments that are inadequate to reduce the credit balance. This has become a particular threat to middle class persons as well.

- Overdraft Loans (also called “bounce protection” plans) are offered by banks to low-income consumers. In exchange for covering account overdrafts up to a set dollar limit, banks charge bounced check fees, ranging from about $20 to $35 for each transaction. Some banks also charge a per day fee of $2 to $5 until the consumer's account has a positive balance. In addition to writing checks, customers can borrow against their bounce protection limit using their debit cards and by making ATM withdrawals. Through a loophole in Federal Reserve rules, institutions do not have to call these bounced check programs extensions of credit, and therefore don't disclose that they are charging people 1,000 percent interest on the loans.

Indeed, practices like these should cause us to wonder if the principles the church has tried to uphold are in danger. In a perverse reversal of moral logic, it appears that not only are the poor charged interest (against the earlier theological and ethical wisdom of the church), but they are also charged more interest than those who live in more favorable economic circumstances. Moreover, the people who experience the sharp edge of this reversal are disproportionately members of nondominant racial ethnic groups as well as of relatively less powerful social classes. The concerns usury raises in the twenty-first century cannot be separated from race and class.

B. Social Policy of the Presbyterian Church

There can be little doubt that concern with “usury” belongs squarely in the larger framework of the social policy of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) as it has expressed concern for the poor. The principal small-loans that have focused concern on usury transpire in the domain of alternative financial services, services that by definition have been developed for those who do not participate in the financial mainstream. Whether all the participants in this system technically qualify as “poor,” they do live closer to the margin of financial survival than most in the U.S. economy. Hope for a Global Future: Toward Just and Sustainable Human Development, approved by the 208th General Assembly (1996), and Building Community Among Strangers, approved by the 211th General Assembly (1999), provide an ample policy base for taking up the concern with usury, inasmuch as they both direct the attention of the church to the way in which debt affects the poor.

With respect to predatory lending, this policy concern has been pursued through the Mission Responsibility Through Investment Committee (MRTI) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), along with other faith-based investors at the Interfaith Center on Corporate Responsibility (ICCR) and Corporate Analytics. These agencies have sought dialogue with financial institutions on issues sub-prime loans, predatory lending practices, and other business practices that may be discriminatory such as pay day lending, cash advances, and pawn shop lending. Voluntary changes and/or stronger internal policies are sought. If unsuccessful, shareholder resolutions may be filed seeking the support of other investors. The MRTI also monitors regulations and legislation on usury and discriminatory financial practices.

Whether we look at Scripture and its understanding in the Reformed tradition, or at recent Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) social policy and practice, we find the same consistent ethical appeal: that the economy ought not to be structured in a way that gives all the advantage to those already well situated financially. An adequate understanding of usury for the 21st century will not only focus narrowly on interest rates, but will also look broadly at the integrity of business practices surrounding lending. Both the Heidelberg Catechism and the Westminster Larger Catechism situated the topic of usury in what we would today call business practices. Speaking negatively of “wicked tricks and schemes” and positively of “justice in contracts and commerce” they suggest that a proper understanding of usury for this (or any other century) will attend to the business practices surrounding lending.

C. Ethical Criteria from the Reformed Tradition

Three interrelated criteria for evaluating the “usury quotient” of lending practices and legislation emerge in the form of questions that should be asked:

1. Does a practice or a law promote financial relationships that take advantage of the financial distress of those economically disadvantaged?
2. Is a practice or a law structured in a manner that balances the economic benefit of both the lender and the borrower?
3. Does a practice or a law lead to the conduct of financial transactions in a fair and just manner, e.g., characterized by truthfulness; nondiscrimination to the borrower; full (and understandable) disclosure; noncoerciveness?

All three criteria are summed up in the rule of charity, the love of God and neighbor, which the reformers and the confessions judged should govern the question of usury.

D. Protection

The first criterion of protecting the poor obviously runs headlong into the fact that poorer people inevitably participate in the more expensive interest rate structure of the alternative financial services industry. The lessons of lending history amply show that attempts to limit the interest rate structure solely by legislation drive the practice underground but do not effectively constrain it. While there clearly need to be legal limits, it is unlikely that such limits will ever be low enough to satisfy this criterion that aims to protect the financially distressed. A more promising way to implement this ethical criterion is not to concentrate solely on legislating interest rates for the alternative financial services industry, but to develop and support efforts that enable the poor to participate in mainstream banking services.

For example, the variety of options that electronic technology may provide for enabling banking opportunities for the “unbanked” are discussed by Michael S. Barr in “Banking the Poor” in Yale Journal on Regulation, (Vol. 21:121, 2004).¹⁴ Among the options are avoidance of check cashing costs by providing incentives for banks and businesses to use debit cards coupled with direct deposit. In addition, the possibilities for mainstream banking alternatives to payday loans, e.g. overdraft protection that is not predatory are detailed in Sheila Bair, “Low-Cost Payday Loan: Opportunities and Obstacles” in a report for the Annie E. Casey Foundation.¹⁵ That same foundation also recounts the partnership between Northside Community Federal Credit Union and Northern Trust Bank in Chicago in providing a lower-cost payday alternative loan (PAL) to low-income borrowers that includes incentives to participate in financial literacy classes. The program is much friendlier financially to the borrowers with a loan ceiling of $500, a $10 application fee, and an APR of 16.5 percent, resulting in interest payments of about $25 over six months.¹⁶

E. Balance

The second criterion of balanced attention to the opportunities of borrowers and lenders focuses attention on transactions that are transparent about who is getting what from the lending arrangement. The goal is for the borrower to be as clear as the lender about the financial benefit received from the transaction. Here the focus is not simply on the poor, but upon all who participate in the lending arrangement, including the middle class. Obviously many forms of disclosure seek to implement this criterion. Still, there are ample illustrations of lenders finding ways to conceal information relevant to the borrower’s interest. Many subprime loans fail to provide borrowers with full information in a way that can be understood. Because consumers may not be aware of all options available to them, even middle class borrowers sometimes end up with subprime loans though qualified for better ones. “Several researchers have shown that minority families are far more likely than white families to get stuck with subprime mortgages, even when the data are controlled for income and credit rating.”¹⁷

The abuses associated with credit cards also bear scrutiny in light of this criterion. The fact that college students and other minors have also become attractive targets for the marketing of cards that contain hidden transfer charges, exorbitant late fees, and exploding interest rates raises questions about how balanced these transactions are with reference to the interests of the borrower as well as the lender. In effect, the credit card industry has identified its ideal customers as those who no longer pay off their balances, but instead grow increasingly indebted to their creditors by making inadequate minimum monthly payments, scarcely a lending practice that is balanced in its attention to the economic interests of the borrower.

F. Justice and Fairness

Finally, the “fair and just” criterion focuses on truthfulness, nondiscrimination, full (and understandable) disclosure, and noncoerciveness. An example of a practice that deserves special examination in the light of this criterion is binding mandatory arbitration (BMA). The BMA is a provision frequently inserted in subprime loans that requires a borrower to waive the right to the legal system to resolve any dispute with the lender that may arise after the loan is closed. The terms of the loan thus require the borrower to agree to an arbitration procedure that lacks the public scrutiny and procedural safeguards that the legal system is designed to guarantee. Such requirements may easily fail the tests of full disclosure and noncoerciveness. Borrowers naturally focus on the interest rates involved and are likely not to be made aware of a BMA provision until the loan is virtually closed. At that point in the process a vulnerable subprime borrower may assume she has no recourse but to hope for the best. Yet she may have been the coerced victim of nondisclosure. Fortunately government chartered investors have now acknowledged the coercion involved. Freddie Mac officially stopped purchasing loans that included mandatory arbitration provisions in August 2004, and Fannie Mae followed with a similar ban effective October 31, 2004.¹⁸

A particularly egregious example of a practice that hides fees is found in the case of overdraft protection programs. The predatory form of the practice is described by the Center for Responsible Lending:

Institutions that operate fee-based overdraft loan programs extend credit by paying customers' checks, debit card transactions, or ATM withdrawals when customers have insufficient funds in their accounts. The institution pays the amount of the overdraft, often without the consent of the customer, and charges the customer a fee that ranges from $20 to $35. When the customer is overdrawing her account through an ATM withdrawal or debit purchase, generally the institution will neither notify the customer of this fact nor give her the option to cancel the transaction. When the customer's next deposit is made to her account, the institution debits the amount of the overdraft, plus the fee. As a result of the high fees and short repayment time, borrowers pay triple- and even quadruple-digit interest rates. For example, if the overdraft loan fee was calculated as an APR, a $22.50 fee for an $80 overdraft loan translates into a 1,467% APR for a loan paid back in a week and a 733% APR if the loan is repaid in two weeks.¹⁹

The third criterion with its tests of truthfulness, full disclosure, and noncoercion obliges heirs of the Reformed tradition to raise questions about such practices and to support legislation that will remedy them.

G. Economic Habits of Borrowers

There is one more way in which the understanding of "usury" needs to be re-engaged for the 21st century. The Book of Confessions not only links usury to the business practices of the lender but also to the economic habits of the borrower, indeed of the whole society of which the borrower is a part. Thus the Westminster Larger Catechism not only states the positive duty for "faithfulness and justice in contracts," but also the positive duty for "moderation of our judgments, wills, and affections, concerning worldly goods" and for "frugality" (7.251). Stating this latter concern in terms of what is forbidden by the eighth commandment, the catechism specifies "inordinate prizing and affecting worldly goods; distrustful and distracting cares and studies in getting, keeping, and using them; envying at the prosperity of others" (7.252). A proper concern with usury in the 21st century cannot rest content with the practices of lenders, but as in the 16th and 17th centuries, must reckon with the habits and behaviors of borrowers.

Throughout the history of reforming the small-loan industry in the U.S. recounted earlier, various efforts were made to provide not only relief from excessive interest but also to provide financial counseling that would make the resort to small loans for financial emergencies less frequent. Although such approaches may have been characterized as having "equal measures of sympathy and paternalism,"²⁰ the fact was that borrower behavior was also considered. Although a borrower's financial habits are decisively limited by the macroeconomic conditions in which they are exercised, they are not irrelevant to the borrower's financial well-being. Indeed, it might be that the emphasis that the personal finance industry developed in the first half of the 20th century on personal financial planning,²¹ was a proper effort by lenders to take into account "procuring and preserving the outward estate" of the borrower.

In any event, some of those who have wrestled more recently with the dilemmas of the relatively poor who are forced to avail themselves of alternative financial services, have continued to see a role at least for encouraging savings that might obviate the need for recourse to payday lenders when financial emergencies arise. In addition to the incentives for financial literacy classes cited in the case of the Northside Community Federal Credit Union's PAL program, Michael S. Barr also argues that strategies to bring low-income persons into the financial services mainstream need to include initiatives designed to increase savings for short-term financial stability and to improve access to less expensive forms of credit where appropriate—"for example, with overdraft protection, account-secured loans, credit cards or loans with automatic withdrawals from pay directly deposited into accounts, but with significantly longer terms than payday loans."²² He also describes America Saves, a program sponsored by the Consumer Federation of America, which combines financial education with low-income savings plans building on self-identified savings goals that could serve as a model for increasing savings among low- to moderate-income families. Barr also believes that nonprofit and faith-based organizations can play important roles in partnering with financial institutions to expand financial education to low-income households.²³

As the church addresses this dimension of the usury question, it may have special theological and spiritual gifts to offer on this side of the equation. The very definition of what constitutes lives of true abundance is the native tongue of the church. To the extent that inordinate appetites contribute to some of the financial dilemmas people experience, there may be a special contribution for the church to make to defining (and resisting) usury in the 21st century.

A Report on Economic Security for Older Adults

Christians are called to focus first on the common good, not on what is good for only themselves. Both Old and New Testaments enjoin believers to care for their neighbors, especially the less fortunate, but increasingly today’s society finds it acceptable to base decisions on what’s in it for me. From a Christian perspective, this radical individualism is worrisome.

Emphasizing the common good has clear implications for improving the economic security of older Americans. For example, Social Security is not a personal retirement plan but a social insurance program—a compact with other people, other generations, and the United States government. The essence of social insurance is community, that is, we are all in this together as God's children. It also affirms the responsibility to make health insurance available to all Americans, not just to one's own family.

In this spirit, the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) makes the following recommendations to the 217th General Assembly (2006), to middle governing bodies, congregations, state and federal legislators, various national divisions of this church and ecumenical partners.

1. Reaffirm the principles and recommendations of the prior General Assemblies of the PC(USA) including to:

a. Support and maintain the fundamental structure and intent of Social Security including: that it continue to be universal, compulsory, an earned right, contributory self financed, wage related rather than means tested, protected against inflation, and backed by the full faith and credit of the United States (Minutes, 2004, Part I, p. 800).

b. Reaffirm the church's commitment to advocacy for a national medical plan (Minutes, 1991, Part I, pp. 810–11)

c. Encourage the church to be diligent in its covenant responsibility to its older members and their caregivers advocating for living wages for all in this important ministry (Minutes, 2001, Part I, pp. 49, 280–82).

d. Reaffirm the language of the 1983 paper on the Economic Security of Older Adults, calling for the establishment of a Mandatory Universal Pension System (MUPS). (Minutes, 1983, Part I, p. 346)

e. Direct the Stated Clerk to publish this "Report on Economic Security for Older Adults" in its entirety on the PC(USA) website, making available a copy for each presbytery, synod, and requesting session, and further notifying the church of its availability online.

To Individuals:

2. Develop friendships that foster sharing and appreciation of unique qualities and experiences of older adults.
3. Seek to understand and to support elimination of barriers for older adults in achieving economic security.
4. Advocate on behalf of older adults through work and community activities.
5. Take steps toward improving one's own personal retirement security, and to maintain healthy lifestyles.

To Congregations:

6. Encourage congregations to support programs such as: Congregational Health Ministries, Faith Community Nursing, Congregational Care Teams and other caregiver support such as home delivered meals, intergenerational activities, and, to develop knowledge of programs within their communities that can be a resource for aging parishioners.

7. Provide and promote information for and about the needs of older adults, as well as legislation that affects their well-being, economic viability, and access to health care, such as Social Security, Medicare, and Medicaid.

8. Encourage all members to promote social justice through public policy on behalf of older adults and to inform elected officials of their concerns.

9. Promote recognition of the growing shortage of health professionals who work with older adults in assisted living, nursing homes, clinics, and other senior facilities and to support required training in geriatrics for all who work in these settings.

10. Take full advantage of the opportunity to enroll all full- and part-time employees in the pensions plans of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

To General Assembly units:

11. Encourage the General Assembly Council (through Congregational Ministries Publishing), and the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation to develop study guides to assist Presbyterians of all ages to better understand the aging process and ways to achieve a long, healthy, and secure life.

12. Encourage the General Assembly Council (through Racial Ethnic, Women's and Older Adult ministry units) to educate their constituencies about Social Security, Medicare, and Medicaid.

13. Call on the Presbyterian Washington Office to keep abreast of pending legislation affecting Social Security, Medicare, Medicaid, and health insurance, and to alert elected officials and church members about these policies and recommendations.

14. Call on the Office of National Health Ministries to provide information through its website, publications, and workshops, and training on congregational care, healthful living, and health care access for all people.

15. Call on the Stated Clerk to write the president and Congress:

a. Regarding Social Security, Medicare, and Medicaid and long-term care to:

(1) allay needless anxiety about the future of Social Security by acting to restore the program to long-run financial balance, which aims to strengthen the universal, contributory nature of Social Security;

(2) provide adequate funding for the continuation of Medicare Parts A & B and the implementation of the Medicare prescription drug benefit—Part D, and to carefully monitor this program to assure that costs are contained and that enrollees have access to needed prescription drugs;

(3) preserve the Medicaid program as a safety-net for those who are economically vulnerable, who require assistance to purchase long-term care, and to strongly limit the ability of states to obtain waivers that reduce the population eligible for Medicaid supported services;

(4) take steps to develop a long-term care system that is adequate to meet current and future individual needs, preserves the autonomy of people receiving services, and shares costs equitably among individuals, families, and society, and that is available and affordable regardless of the state in which a person lives;

(5) provide workers in the formal, long-term care system decent wages, benefits, and working conditions;

(6) provide family and other unpaid caregivers assistance needed to carry out their vital role; and

(7) avoid reductions in needs-tested programs, and seek to increase income and asset ceiling limits on programs designed for persons with low income.

b. Regarding pensions and income gaps to:

(1) enable employers to automatically enroll employees in contributory pension plans enabling them to better use these plans to achieve their retirement security needs;

(2) prohibit employers from “freezing” existing defined benefit (DB) pension plans and shifting responsibility for future retirement income to defined contribution (DC) plans that would severely disrupt the ability of many workers to achieve retirement security;

(3) improve the benefits of low-wage workers and widowed and divorced women; and

(4) increase incentives to encourage personal savings.

Abstract

Psalm 71:9 "Do not cast me off in the time of old age; do not forsake me when my strength is spent."

Our society has something never before seen in human history, aging on a mass scale. The prayer by the Psalmist is no longer the hope and the plea and the searching of merely a handful of lucky men and women whose struggles brought them to advanced age. Now we have millions of people who live into their 70s, 80s, 90s, and beyond. We in the United States will have multitudes for whom Psalm 71:9 speaks to the heart.

Millions of people have the luxury and opportunity to continue their quests, personal, social, and spiritual into advanced ages. They must have the material base to do so, the economic resources to have a decent life, and the health to enjoy the extra years granted to them beyond the biblical threescore and ten.

The economic foundations, the pillars supporting older people in the United States, are Social Security, Medicare, savings, and pensions. They are the foundations and the foundations must be strong for millions more to enjoy. Today, there are thirty-five million Americans over the age of sixty-five, about 13 percent of the total population. It is a growing number, bolstered by members of the largest generation in American history, the baby boomers born in the years from 1946 through 1964. By 2030, when even the youngest of the boomers reaches age sixty-five, there will be seventy-five million Americans over the age of sixty-five, or 20 percent of the entire population.

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has long been on record in support of policies to assure the economic security of older adults. It is time to reaffirm that support, and provide even a broader vision of a just society with prosperity and security for people of all ages.

This document sets out in detail the history of the modern quest for economic security, and its many ramifications in the complex society we now inhabit.

With Social Security, only 10 percent of those over sixty-five live in poverty. The vast majority can live independent lives, not having to depend on their children or other relatives, or to throw themselves at the mercy of charities or the government. They have the dignity that comes with the monthly Social Security check, a payment in retirement they have earned through a lifetime of work. Less than half of workers have a pension on the job. But 96 percent of Americans are covered by Social Security, a tree with a broad network of sheltering branches. They can receive benefits as a retired worker, a spouse or child of a retired worker, a survivor of a retired worker, a disabled worker, or a spouse or child of a disabled worker.

This edifice of social protection must endure. It should be strengthened and supported for the generations to come. For many low paid workers, for many members of minority groups, for many women, the benefits can be relatively meager because their earnings were relatively low in their working years.

We should consider ways to bolster the benefits, so that all retirees of all ethnic groups can enjoy years free of poverty after they are no longer working, so that all women who may have left the paid workforce to raise children, or care for their own aging parents will not suffer an economic penalty for the choices they have made.

Even with the Social Security check as a protection against indigence, there are still too many people struggling. For the frail elderly, many of whom live alone, we should make available affordable housing and extra help when needed to enable them to stay in their own homes.

Medicare, like Social Security, must be protected and sustained to assure that its benefits can be provided to future generations. A chance to visit the doctor when needed, coverage for procedures, surgeries, and hospital stays must continue to be provided. Modern medicine is a wonderful process and blessing, but it is a very expensive one. Costs are ever rising, and society must make efforts to slow the explosion in costs to assure that everyone can enjoy the benefits. The new prescription drug coverage is welcome, especially for those of low and moderate income who have struggled to pay for their medications. The benefit must be implemented carefully and effectively.

The vision of a just society cannot be satisfied simply with good health coverage for older adults. Justice in the distribution of health care should not simply start at age sixty-five, or when someone is deemed disabled. It should be available to all age groups. Therefore, the reality of forty-five million uninsured Americans is a disturbing reminder of a task still undone. Health security should be available to Americans of all ages.

Introduction

Proverbs 31.9 “Speak out, judge righteously, defend the rights of the poor and needy.”

As early as 1910, a social creed supported “suitable provision for the old age of workers and those incapacitated by injury.” More than thirty years ago, predating the paper on economic justice, the UPCUSA, developed “The Rights and Responsibilities of Older Persons: The Basis for Christian Concern and Action.” The language used in the 1973 document challenges the contemporary church to take action to work for those rights that some thirty years later, are not yet fully attained.

1. The right of older persons to live in community with dignity and self-worth regardless of racial or ethnic background.
2. The right to have financial and material resources to provide for their physical and social well-being, free from harassment, stigma and enforced pauperization.
3. The right to employment without discrimination on the basis of age.
4. The right to the benefits of an adequate health program, and with comprehensive health care.
5. The right to expanded educational and recreational opportunities.
6. The right to die with dignity and with a sense of life fulfillment. (Minutes, UPCUSA, 1973, pp. 548, 551–55)

In response to the request of the 193rd General Assembly (1981) of the United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, the Advisory Council on Church and Society submitted in 1983 a paper on issues related to the Economic Security of Older Adults. When preparing that paper, they found that “the social policy implications of its findings [of economic justice for older adults] were inextricably tied to those of a much larger study of economic policy.”

The 216th General Assembly (2004) revisited the topic of economic security for older adults. The assembly approved a resolution reaffirming the importance of a national health plan. They reaffirmed support for Social Security and Medicare, which were enacted to promote the general welfare, and to assure a guaranteed income and health care for the workers of the United States or their survivors when they reach retirement age, die, or become disabled. In addition, the resolution called for review and update of the 1983 position paper.

In 2005, a resolution group of ACSWP was assigned the responsibility to carry out that review. It quickly saw that policies on (1) Social Security, (2) pensions, and (3) savings were insufficient to fully assure economic security for older adults. Affordable, quality health care had become so essential and so costly that it had to be considered as a fourth “pillar” for a secure retirement.

The financing issues that confront both Medicare and Medicaid are just a part of the larger problem of the soaring cost of health care in this country and the increasing numbers of people who are uninsured. While this paper does not undertake a comprehensive analysis of our health care system, it must conclude that affordable and accessible health care and a sound economy with opportunities for all Americans must be part of the vision and goal for our society.

This paper also does not fully describe those older adults who are on the margins of society, and often outside our mainstream institutions. These persons may be immigrants, whose language or cultural differences create barriers, or the impoverished persons who have had few opportunities for nurture, education, training, and health care, or individuals with health and mental health problems that have robbed them of a future. They may be grandparents caring and sharing fixed incomes with their grandchildren, or rural older adults isolated from community health services. For all these older adults, economic security may depend upon the charity and grace of the church and reviving the covenant between a government and the people.

Theological Perspective

Expression of our love for God through the love and care of others is deeply rooted in our faith. Again and again, beginning in Genesis, by admonition and example, God’s people are reminded to care for those in need: especially the sick, the older adults, the widowed, and the orphaned.

Prophets like Isaiah, Micah, and Amos continued to warn the people when they strayed from God’s purpose for them. “Remove the evil of your doings from before my eyes; cease to do evil, learn to do good; seek justice, rescue the oppressed, defend the orphan, plead for the widow” (Isa. 1:16–17).

Christ himself in Matthew 25:35 calls those who would inherit the kingdom blessed when they minister to the hungry, thirsty, the stranger, the naked and those in prison. “... Truly I tell you, just as you did it to one of the least of these who are members of my family, you did it to me” (Matt. 25:40).

The extended family of biblical times changed with industrialization and the movement of many to cities. John Calvin, recognizing this in the seventeenth century, called for governments, which had authority over these new communities, along with churches and individuals, to participate in providing social and health services for those in need.

Our own Book of Order supports this tradition, listing services through which the church and its members participate in God’s activity:

- (a) healing and reconciling and binding up wounds,
- (b) ministering to the ... poor, the sick, the lonely, and the powerless,
- (c) engaging in the struggle to free people from sin, fear, oppression, hunger, and injustice,
- (d) giving itself and its substance to ... those who suffer,
- (e) sharing with Christ in the establishing of his just, peaceable, and loving rule of the world. (Book of Order, G-3:300c(3)(a)–(e).)

Within this context we consider our Christian calling to provide economic security for our elderly population.

1. Early Steps in Establishing Retirement Security

Social justice for older adults first became a major public concern in the early part of the twentieth century. With the depression of the 1930s, unemployment, homelessness, and poverty were rampant. Older workers, who were frequently destitute, were particularly vulnerable. Private charities and public homes for the poor were often their only resource.

These acute public problems prompted civic and political leaders to call for governments to respond. Newly elected President Franklin Delano Roosevelt proposed Social Security, a national social insurance program to reduce poverty, encourage the retirement of older workers, and achieve family income security.

In his 1932 nomination address, President Roosevelt said, “What do the people of America want more than anything else? To my mind, they want two things: work, with all the moral and spiritual values that go with it; and with work, a reasonable measure of security—security for themselves and for their wives and children. ... These are the spiritual values, the true goal toward which our efforts of reconstruction should lead.”

The enactment and subsequent development of Social Security became a cornerstone in the covenant between the federal government and citizens and became the foundation for economic security for older adults. Private pensions, Medicare and Medicaid were added in the following decades.

The economy is changing again. Thanks to modern medicine, people are living longer. Birth rates have also dropped and the average age of the population is increasing. Jobs are less secure and many employers are paring back employee benefits including defined benefit pensions (DB) and health insurance. Medicaid funding is being cut by federal and state governments. The Medicare Hospital Insurance Trust fund is facing financial shortfalls in 2020 as will Social Security in 2041.

Once again, the social policy implications of economic justice for older adults are inextricably tied to national economic policies. Because of these developments, the role of the church at both the congregational and the national policy level needs to be reassessed.

2. The Graying of America

During the twentieth century, the older population grew from three million to thirty-five million and, with the retirement of the baby boom generation, is projected to grow to almost eighty-seven million by 2050. In 2003, nearly thirty-six million people aged sixty-five and over accounted for just over 12 percent of the total population (Older Americans 2004, Key Indicators of Well Being, Federal Interagency Forum on Aging-Related Statistics, www.agingstats.gov/chartbook2004/default.htm, p. xiv).

A major reason has been the increased life expectancy at both age sixty-five and age eighty-five. “Under current mortality conditions, people who survive to age 65 can expect to live an average of nearly 18 more years, more than 6 years longer than people age 65 in 1900. The life expectancy of people who survive to age 85 today is about 7 years for women and 6 years for men”(Ibid., p. 22).

As the older population grows larger, it will also grow more diverse, reflecting the demographic changes in the U.S. population as a whole over the last several decades ... In 2003, non-Hispanic whites accounted for nearly 83 percent of the U.S. older populations. Blacks made up just over 8 percent, Asians made up nearly 3 percent, and Hispanics (of any race) accounted for nearly 6 percent of the older population. By 2050, non-Hispanic whites are projected to represent only 61 percent of older adult population. (Older Americans 2004: Key Indicators of Well-Being, p. 4)

3. Economic Security in Retirement

This long-expected aging phenomenon will test the priorities and capacities of our nation and its citizens. To achieve retirement security, four pillars are essential for retirement security: Social Security, pensions and savings, earnings, and health insurance. These “must be strong enough to support the overall weight of expenditure needs in retirement and balanced enough that the structure doesn’t collapse” (Beyond 50, Auditing the 50+ Ledger, p. 22; and http://assets.aarp.org/rgcenter/econ/beyond_50_econ.pdf).

For most retirees, the predominant source of income in retirement will continue to be Social Security. It will very likely provide 40 percent of retirement income, on average ... [Social Security] is thus the chief bulwark against poverty for a majority of persons over age 65. Without it, the poverty rate would soar to nearly 50 percent. (Ibid. p.17)

Pension coverage has not increased much among retirees, but the dollar amount of pensions has increased substantially for those who have them, reflecting the significant growth in wages that has occurred among the advantaged workers who have pension coverage. However, pensions provide retirement income to fewer than half of high or middle-income retirees at any given time, and to a small percentage of low-income retirees. (Ibid., p. 17)

For some retirees, “personal savings and net worth have grown robustly in the past several years ... this also underscores the increased risk individuals have to bear for their own well-being in retirement, as they become more dependent on their own skill or luck in investing” (Ibid., p. 17).

On the other hand, neither pensions nor personal savings for retirement is likely among some moderate and low-wage workers. The median income among the working-age population has continued to drop during the past three years, and the minimum wage remains unchanged for the 8th straight year (Center on Budget and Policy Priorities, August 30, Sept. 1, 2005; also online at www.cbpp.org/9-1-05mw.htm).

Economic insecurity due to lack of health insurance grew among pre-retirees in all income groups, especially the lowest income population (Beyond 50, Auditing the 50+ Ledger, p. 70).

4. Poverty and Near Poor

In 1999, poverty among persons over age sixty-five reached an all-time low of 9.7 percent. However, according to the latest Census Bureau estimates, certain subgroups among older population continue to suffer extraordinarily high rates of poverty, especially women, minorities, and persons living alone. Furthermore, “there are a higher percentage of near-poor and low-income elderly persons—just barely above the poverty line—than there are among younger age groups”(AARP, May 2005, Beyond 50, Auditing the 50+ Ledger, p. 28).

a. Minorities

The status and resources of many minority older persons reflect social and economic discrimination experienced earlier in life. Many, especially those who have migrated to the U.S., face cultural and language differences as well. Consequently, [these] minority groups ... have increased risks of poor education, substandard housing, poverty, malnutrition and generally poor health. (AARP, A Portrait of Older Minorities Research Report, AARP Minority Affairs, November 1995, p.2; and online at <http://www.aarp.org/research/reference/minorities/aresearch-import-509.html>)

For more than a century blacks have experienced income disparities that result in their lower lifetime earnings. ... African Americans had a real median income of $29,600 compared to $47,800 for whites in 2003. The unemployment rate was 10.5 percent [for African-Americans] in 2004 compared to only 4.3 percent for whites. (Maya Rockey Moore, Congressional Black Caucus Foundation, Inc., Center for Policy Analysis and Research, “The Social Security Privatization Crisis: Assessing the Impact on African American Families, January 19, 2005, p. 7; or <http://www.house.gov/mcdermott/pdf/SSPrivatizationonAfrican%20American.pdf> and <http://www.census.gov/prod/2004pubs/p60-226.pdf>)

b. Women

Three out of four poor older adults are women. Surveys show that the United States has the highest poverty rate of older women in the rich western nations in the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, (OECD) (T.M. Smeeding, and S. Sandstrom, 2005. Poverty and Income Maintenance in Old Age: A Cross National View of Low Income Older Women, Feminist Economics 11(2) (July): pp. 163–97, 2005).

Caregiving for children and aging relatives that require reduced time in the labor force, pay inequities, lack of pensions and savings, and higher out-of-pocket medical expenses, all contribute to impoverishment of women in older years. Divorced or separated, and the very old are among the poorest of older women. “Of these, minority women are likely to experience even greater economic hardship.” Four out of ten widowed, divorced, or women who never married rely on Social Security for 90 percent of their income. Without Social Security’s monthly benefits guaranteed throughout their lives, more than half of older women would fall into poverty (Social Security in the 21st Century, Gerontological Society of America, T. Smeeding, C. Estes, L. Glasse, 2000).

c. Supplemental Security Income

Supplemental Security Income (SSI) was intended to be a safety net for poor, aged, blind, and disabled persons. The asset eligibility test has not, however, kept pace with inflation. The average, monthly benefit for persons sixty-five years and older is $360. The SSI primarily serves persons with low education, high likelihood of disability, and limited earnings capacity. Beneficiaries are among the poorest in the country (Social Security Administration, 2006 Schedule Payments).

5. Social Security

Today, Social Security insures 96 percent of all workers, plus their dependents and survivors, against life’s adversities.

More than 48 million Americans are now receiving Social Security benefits: 33 million retired workers and dependents, 8 million disabled workers and dependents, and 7 million survivors of deceased workers. Almost 34 million beneficiaries (70 percent) are age 65 or older, 11 million are adults age 18–64, and 3 million (7 percent) are children under the age of 18 (Social Security Administration, Monthly Statistical Snapshot and OASDI Monthly Statistics, August 2005).

Social Security is the major source of income for two-thirds of elderly beneficiaries. It contributes 90 percent or more of income for one-third of beneficiaries, and it is the only source of income for 21 percent of them (Social Security Administration, Fast Facts and Figures About Social Security, 2005, p. 7).

The Social Security program has always given special consideration to low-wage earners by providing a weighted benefit formula. ... the benefit should be essentially wage-related, paying higher benefits to those who earn more and pay more, nevertheless the replacement of earnings should be on a higher percentage basis for low earners than for middle and high earners. ... the program would not serve the interest of the low-wage earner unless it paid him benefits that were at least enough to make it unnecessary for him to turn to assistance for help. [Bob Ball, Insuring the Essentials, Bob Ball on Social Security, (a Century Foundation Book, p 145)]

Without Social Security, half of current beneficiaries would be impoverished.

a. Milestones in Social Security

As the Social Security system matured, Congress enacted improvements to protect beneficiaries from inflation and to credit their work at and beyond the full retirement age. Other modifications were aimed at increasing the Social Security Trust Fund. These changes include the following:

- (1) Making early retirement available at age 62 with reduced benefits (enacted in 1956 for women and 1961 for men).
- (2) Adding automatic cost-of-living increases to protect beneficiaries from inflation (1972).
- (3) Adding automatic increases in earnings subject to the payroll taxes (1972).
- (4) Increasing benefits for workers who delay retirement beyond the full retirement age (originally enacted in 1972 and liberalized in 1977 and 1983).
- (5) Gradually raising the full retirement age from 65 years to 67 years (1983). There is some discussion of speeding up this change to encourage people to work longer.
- (6) Eliminating the retirement earnings test above the full retirement age (2000).

In 1983, amendments were recommended, for the most part, by a commission chaired by Alan Greenspan. The number one recommendation of the Greenspan Commission was as follows:

The members of the National Commission believe that the Congress, in its deliberations on financing proposals, should not alter the fundamental structure of the Social Security program or undermine its fundamental principles. The National Commission considered, but rejected, proposals to make the Social Security program a voluntary one, or to transform it into a program under which benefits are a product exclusively of the contributions paid, or to convert it into a fully funded program, or to change it to a program under which benefits are conditioned on the showing of financial need. [Bob Ball, Insuring the Essentials, Bob Ball on Social Security, (New York: A Century Foundation Book, 2000), p 170.]

b. The Future of Social Security

At present, Social Security is collecting more in taxes than it pays in benefits. The excess is borrowed by the U.S. Treasury, which issues Treasury bonds to Social Security. These bonds totaled $1.7 trillion at the beginning of 2005, and Social Security receives more than $90 billion annually in interest from them. Social Security is still basically a pay-as-you-go system, however, as the $1.7 trillion is a small percentage of total benefit payments (Board of Trustees of the Federal Old-Age and Survivors and Disability Insurance Trust Funds, 2005 Annual Report, p. 37; also available at http://www.ssa.gov/OACT/TR/TR05/I_intro.html).

In the longer run, demographic changes will strain Social Security financing. Americans are living longer and healthier lives than ever before. When Social Security was created in 1935, a sixty-five-year old had an average life expectancy of 12-1/2 more years; today, it is 17-1/2 years and rising. In addition, seventy-nine million baby boomers will begin retiring in 2008, and in about thirty years there will be nearly twice as many older Americans as there are today. At the same time, the number of workers paying into Social Security will drop from 3.3 per beneficiary today to about 2.1 in 2035 (Ibid. pp. 47, 77, and 80).

Social Security's Trustees project that by 2017 Social Security tax income will begin to fall short of outlays, and Social Security will need to begin tapping the trust fund to pay benefits. (Ibid. p.8)

Even if Congress did nothing, all benefits promised under current law could be paid until 2041 according to the Social Security actuaries, and about a decade longer according to the Congressional Budget Office. After that time 70-80 percent of benefits could be paid. This is not a crisis, but Social Security does... face a projected long-term deficit. (Henry Aaron, Church & Society, May/June 2005, p. 111)

While a number of options have been proposed to deal with the long-term short fall, the 2005 Annual Report of the Social Security Board of Trustees concludes, "The projected trust fund deficits should be addressed in a timely way to allow for a gradual phasing in of the necessary changes and to provide advance notice to workers. The sooner adjustments are made the smaller and less abrupt they will have to be" (Paul Van de Water, Church & Society, May/June, 2005, p. 33).

The Social Security actuaries put the deficit at 0.7 percent of GDP averaged over the next 75 years. Congressional Budget Office analysts put the deficit at only .04 percent of GDP. Either estimate could be right. Both are probably wrong. Recent tax cuts will reduce revenues by 2 percent of GDP over the same period, three to five times as much as the projected long-term deficit in Social Security. (Henry Aaron, Brookings Institute, Church & Society, May/June, 2005. p.111)

As in the 1983 amendments, a compromise of revenue enhancement and reductions in benefits may be necessary to bring solvency to the Social Security Trust Fund. A number of options have been proposed including:

(1) Raise the maximum wage base for taxation of earnings above the current $90,000. Currently, 6 percent of all workers earn more than this cap.

(2) Extend coverage to all state and local employees under Social Security, including the approximate 25 percent of state and local government employees whose employers chose not to provide Social Security.

(3) Earmark future proceeds of a revised estate tax above $3.5 million (per individual, $7 million per couple) for Social Security.

(4) Raise Social Security taxes.

(5) Raise the age for full retirement benefits. (A fuller discussion of options for Social Security Trust Fund solvency by Virginia Reno and Joni Lavery, National Academy of Social Insurance, can be found in Church & Society, May/June, 2005.)

Proposals to set up individual private or personal accounts as part of Social Security would shift money away from the Trust Fund. This diversion of funds would make the income shortfall come sooner and make it even more severe.

6. Pensions

Social Security's guaranteed, inflation-protected benefit provides the foundation for retirement income for most Americans. However Social Security, alone, is seldom sufficient to maintain a pre-retirement standard of living. To secure that, pensions and personal savings are essential.

Employer-sponsored pension plans expanded during World War II and continued in the post-war period. These plans were generally of the defined-benefit (DB) type, in which pension benefits are based on a worker's salary and years of service. By the early 1970s almost half of full-time private sector employees had such pension coverage. From 1972–2003, this level of coverage has fluctuated between 43 and 50 percent (Social Security, Private Pensions, and Retirement: Life Course Flexibility in the United States, NASI, p. 8). In contrast, 90 percent of full-time public sector employees are in DB plans" (U.S. Department of Labor, Bureau of Labor Statistics, Employee Benefits in State and Local Governments, 1998 [Washington D.C., U. S. Government Printing Office), p. 5]).

Since 1983, when the General Assembly last considered economic security of older adults, the majority of the nation's pension plans have changed dramatically. The number of employers offering DB plans has dropped significantly. Instead, many profit-making employers are offering defined contributions (DC) pension, usually in the form of 401(K) plans. Similar not-for-profit pension programs are 403(B) plans. The DC plans are voluntary contributions by the employee and any contributions made by the employer. In the worker's DC plans the benefit level depends on accumulated contributions and earnings on investments (Beyond 50, AARP, p. 35).

The replacement of DB pension plans by DC pension plans is significant for our understanding of pension coverage of retirees. The DB plans have provided retirees with greater certainty about retirement income throughout their lifetime. Furthermore, the employer was responsible for the investment management of the funds. According to one researcher the shift away from the traditional DB plans "has left many families unprepared to meet challenges of retirement. Despite the hype, switchover from DB to DC has not benefited the average family—it has hurt the average family instead" (Edward N. Wolff, The Devolution of the American Pension System: Who Gained and Who Lost? The National Academy of Social Insurance, Jan. 2004, p. 19).

In recent years, there have been highly publicized instances of some large companies, such as Bethlehem Steel, U. S. Airways, and United Airways, defaulting on their pension promises. In these cases the Federal Pension Benefit Guarantee Corporation (PBGC) has usually provided some safeguard against total loss of DB pensions to retirees in the event of a default of the employer. However, PBGC has not been able to pay, in full, the companies promised pensions. Funding for PBGC, itself, may be inadequate to cover the number of troubled pension plans. Congressional action would be required to address this problem.

Contrary to DB plans, participation in DC plans is portable (can be rolled into an individual retirement account (IRA) or into the new employer's pension plan. However, 60 percent of 401(K) participants when changing jobs currently take cash payments rather than transfer their account into an IRA, the new employers pension plan, or converting their accounts into an annuity. Furthermore, workers are responsible for choosing their own investments. Thus, the responsibility of financial success or failure is shifted to the employee (Beyond 50, AARP, p. 40).

Thirty-one percent of pre-retirees in 1995 reported having a 401(K) plan. Low-wage or part-time employees are much less likely to participate in such plans. "Only about 13 percent of part-time employees in the private sector have pension coverage. In firms with fewer than 10 employees, slightly less than 20 percent of full-time workers are covered" (Social Security, Private Pensions, and Retirement: Life Course Flexibility in the United States, NASI, p. 9).

7. Savings

"The distribution of wealth is highly skewed in the U.S., with the top fifth of the population consistently holding more than 80 percent of the total wealth, and the top one percent holding more than 30 percent of aggregate wealth. [Furthermore,] the booming economy of the latter half of the 1990s tended to benefit those who were better off to begin with" (Beyond 50, AARP, p. 45). Persons who were low or moderate income workers or who were retirees were less likely to benefit from the improved economy through savings accounts.

"There are also large disparities in net worth between whites and minorities with the net worth of minorities a fraction of that held by whites" (Beyond 50, AARP p. 46). As a result, whites are much more likely than black or Hispanics to have income from assets. In 2002, 59 percent of whites age 65 or older had income from assets, compared with about 25 percent of blacks and Hispanics. Aged whites receive 14 percent of their income from assets, while blacks and Hispanics receive only 5 percent from this source (Social Security Administration, Income of the Population 55 or Older, 2002, pp. 30, 136).

a. Housing

Decent and appropriate housing is essential to sustaining the health, security, and dignity of all Americans. "Home equity is the largest net worth component for most families except the very wealthiest ... 80 percent of persons 50 and over own their own home. However, 30 percent of low-income retirees have rental housing" (Beyond 50, Auditing the 50+ Ledger, AARP, pp. 47, 68). Less than half of Asian Pacific, African Americans, and Hispanic older adults own their own home. For African Americans, the percentage of home ownership was 47.4 percent and for Hispanics 45.7 percent (2004 U.S. Census).

But many older adults, including those who long ago paid off their mortgage, discover that rising property tax rates are becoming unmanageable. State and local programs of tax abatement or deferral are sometimes an option, although resistance to them is growing (Ray Smith, The Wall Street Journal Online). In addition, as many persons “age-in-place” they need to make structural adaptations in their home such as ramps, widening doorways, and safety bars in bathrooms. Local services that provide chore or maintenance for persons who have disabilities may sometimes address this need.

The percentage of the population living alone increases as people grow older and widowhood rates rise. However, appropriate, affordable, and subsidized housing for frail older persons, particularly those who live alone and who have impairments, is still too limited.

b. Retirement Pattern Changing

“In 1950, 72 percent of all 65-year-old men were in the labor force. That percentage fell steadily over the next three and half decades,” as employer policies required or encouraged retirement, and Social Security benefits and early retirement became available (Social Security, Private Pensions, and Retirement: Life Course Flexibility in the United States, NASI, p. 2). Disability or ill health has also been cited as reasons that some workers leave the labor force.

Mandatory retirement law was first adopted to encourage older workers to retire so that younger workers would be better able to find work opportunities. However, when resistance to this restriction developed, mandatory retirement was eliminated in 1986. Some other policies that were disincentives to employment of older workers have been eliminated also.

Whether because of need for greater income or for personal satisfaction, labor force participation rates of older men stopped declining in the mid 1980s, and has increased a bit in recent years. Today, half of men aged 62–64 and a third of men aged 65–69 are still in the labor force.

The challenge to the continued employment of older women is that fewer women than men work---at all ages. Many women spend a number of years out of the labor force taking care of children. In addition, more women than men work part time. Even when women work full time, they earn less than their male counterparts. . . . Since only a third of women are entitled to benefits based solely on their own earnings record, fewer women than men are able to increase their Social Security benefit by continued work.... However, as more women approach older ages, they are participating in the labor force at higher rates than previous generationsThis trend means that [in the future] women are more likely to earn Social Security benefits on their own. . . .This may help keep women in the labor force. [A. H. Munnell, N. Jivan, What Makes Older Women Work, Center of Retirement Research at Boston College, Work Opportunities for Older Americans, Sept. 2005, pp.5–6]

The coming retirement of the baby boomers may generate greater opportunities for the employment of older workers. Some researchers think that their retirement will cause a shortage of workers and propose that employers try to retain their more experienced employees by designing options that permit phasing into retirement. Flexible work schedules or bridge jobs have served as incentives for some workers to stay within the labor force.

8. Health Care

Health care in America continues to be expensive, administratively complex, and confusing to consumers. The Census Bureau has announced that the number of persons without health insurance has continued to rise so that 45.8 million Americans were uninsured in 2004. Private employment-based health insurance coverage fell again in 2004, for the fifth successive year (The Center for Budget and Policy Priorities, August 30, 2005). The working poor and persons with low and fixed incomes make up the largest numbers of persons without health insurance. As insurance costs continue to soar and employer-based health coverage falls, some persons of all income levels lose their insurance coverage. Among the uninsured are workers who suffer from untreated health conditions before they become eligible for Medicare. In some cases, medical care then becomes more complicated and costlier.

The 214th General Assembly (2002) approved the Resolution on Advocacy on Behalf of the Uninsured. This resolution describes more fully the problems experienced by persons of all ages who are uninsured and who do not have access to good health care.

a. Medicare and Medicaid

The rising cost of health care threatens Medicare, Medicaid, and their beneficiaries. Federal and state support for Medicaid has been reduced, and premiums and deductibles for Medicare have been increased. With the retirement of baby boomers, the numbers of Medicare beneficiaries will dramatically increase. “In 2025, the Medicare Part A, (Hospital Insurance) Trust Fund is expected to become insolvent, according to the latest estimates from the 2000 Trustees Reports” (S. Maxwell,

M. Moon, M Segal, Growth in Medicare and Out-of-Pocket Spending: Impact on Vulnerable Beneficiaries, Urban Institute, 2001, p. vi.).

Medicare and Medicaid provide greater economic security, have reduced morbidity, and improved the quality of life for beneficiaries. Although the ratio of persons with disabilities has declined, “the numbers of older persons with chronic disabilities has increased from 6.2 million in 1984 to 6.8 million in 1999. Older women report more problems with [disabling] physical functioning than do older men” (Older Americans 2004, Federal Interagency Forum on Aging-Related Statistics, pp. 28–29).

Medicare covers thirty-five million Americans age sixty-five and older and more than five million persons of all ages who are disabled. “The income of [Medicare] beneficiaries has lagged behind the growth in health care spending in the past, and will continue that pattern over the next 25 years. Out-of-pocket spending for health care will rise from 21.7 percent of income in 2000 to an estimated 29.9 percent of income in 2025. Elderly beneficiaries in poor health without additional insurance will see a rise in their [out-of-pocket] share from about 44.0 percent in 2000 to an estimated 63.3 percent in 2025” (S. Maxwell, M. Moon, M Segal, Growth in Medicare and Out-of-Pocket Spending: Impact on Vulnerable Beneficiaries, The Urban Institute, 2001, p. ix).

Medicaid pays for nursing care, and for elderly people who cannot afford Medicare co-payments and deductibles. In some states, it also provides personal care for the chronically ill, older persons who are poor. Even though the majority of beneficiaries are low-income children and adults, the majority of Medicaid spending is on older adults and people who are disabled.

b. Medicare Prescription Drug Program

Medicare began providing coverage for outpatient prescription drugs beginning January 2006 under a new Part D of the program. Beneficiaries may obtain prescription drug coverage either from stand-alone insurance policies or through Medicare managed care plans. Subsidies are available to beneficiaries who qualify based on low incomes and limited assets. However, beneficiaries who are among the lowest income seniors and disabled people are required to pay more for their drugs than they previously did under Medicaid.

Kaiser Family Foundation reports that an estimated 2.4 million Medicare beneficiaries with incomes low enough to qualify for additional subsidies under the new drug benefit are expected to be ineligible for these subsidies because they do not meet the asset test required by law. To qualify for the extra assistance, beneficiaries must have incomes below 150 percent of the federal poverty level ($14,355 for an individual in 2005) and must have no more than $10,000 in assets for an individual and $20,000 in assets for a couple. The value of a home, automobiles, and household furnishings and possessions do not count toward this asset limit. Nearly half of those excluded because of the asset test are widows or widowers (<http://www.kff.org/medicare/upload/Low-Income-Subsidies-for-the-Medicare-Prescription-Drug-Benefit-The-Impact-of-the-Asset-Test-Report.pdf>).

c. Long-Term Care

Medicare covers acute care hospitalization and illness. “It covers long-term-care only under limited circumstances—in a skilled nursing facility up to 100 days after a hospitalization or at home for those requiring part-time skilled nursing or therapy services.”

Medicaid finances care only for people with very limited income and resources or those who have exhausted their resources paying for care, and it requires that they contribute virtually all their income and assets toward the costs of care.

...the spousal impoverishment provisions allow community-dwelling spouses of Medicaid beneficiaries residing in long-term care facilities to keep a certain amount of income and resources so that they can provide for themselves. States may recover some of the cost of long-term care and other Medicaid services from the estate of a beneficiary or that of the beneficiary’s surviving spouse. [Sheila P. Burke, Judith Feder, and Paul N. Van de Water (eds.)]. Developing a Better Long-Term Care Policy: A Vision and Strategy for America’s Future. Washington: National Academy of Social Insurance, Nov. 2005]

Although neither the home, nor car is counted, this requirement can be very harsh. The community spouse may be left with very limited funds to last over a lifetime.

Informal caregivers (family and friends) remain the backbone of the long-term supportive services system in the United States. They provide the majority of care for older people who need help with activities of daily living. While this care is unpaid, its value has been estimated at approximately $100 billion. (U. S. Department of Health and Human Services/ASPE, 1998). Although family caregiving is usually preferred by both the family and the beneficiary, out-of-pocket spending by the caregiver can become costly.

The Family and Medical Leave Act (FMLA) is the first U.S. national policy designed to assist working caregivers in meeting their work and caregiving responsibilities. The FMLA allows employees to take up to twelve weeks of unpaid leave to care for an ill family member or newborn child. Since its enactment in 1993, more than fifty million Americans have taken leave under this law (National Partnership for Women and Families, <http://www.nationalpartnership.org/portals/p3/library/FamilyMedicalLeave/FMLAWhatWhoHow.pdf>).

Nonetheless, caregivers often must juggle work with caregiving responsibilities. Some find that they must quit their jobs or reduce their hours of work to provide care. In those circumstances, the caregiver may pay for her generosity with lower retirement income. Low wages and minimal benefits are a major problem for workers in skilled nursing facilities, home care aides, and other paraprofessional staff who work with frail or demented older adults. This problem contributes to the high turnover of staff.

9. The Board of Pensions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)

The Board of Pensions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is charged with responsibility to provide a comprehensive package of benefits for participating church workers and to offer financial and retirement housing assistance in time of need to those workers and their families. This Pension Plan is fully funded, with sufficient assets to satisfy all accrued liabilities, which includes commitments to pay pension benefits to active members when they retire and all current retirees and their survivors. Their defined benefit plan is designed to supplement Social Security. The plan provides higher replacement rates for low-wage workers at age sixty-five and offers an early retirement option with reduced benefits.

Its health policy, which supplements Medicare, covers the worker and family and includes a prescription drug plan. In recent years, the rising costs of prescription drugs have forced the Board of Pensions to increase “dues” that are paid by the participants. The Board of Pensions is working with the federal office responsible for the Medicare Prescription Drug program to “make sure we can continue to offer the Medicare Supplement, including its drug benefit, to our participants, and qualify for the plan sponsor reimbursement provided for in the legislation. Those federal dollars will be applied to help offset the subscription dues requirements.” The plan also offers death and disability coverage.

We wish to acknowledge the progressive, comprehensive benefit that the Board of Pensions has designed and manages.

10. Challenge to Presbyterians to Work for Economic and Health Justice

For more than thirty years, Presbyterians have lifted up the needs of older adults, especially those who are poor and infirm. As their numbers increase, now and in the future, we are challenged by the words of Proverbs 31:9, “Speak out, judge righteously, defend the rights of the poor and needy.”

For a fuller description of useful steps in advocating for economic and health justice, see Patricia K. Gleich, “Advocacy: The Continuous Circle of Faith to Action,” Church & Society, May/June, 2005, pp 135–41.

Resolution on Just Globalization: Justice, Ownership, and Accountability

Globalization and international trade are realities of today’s world. In this report, globalization is defined as the process by which people, nations, and economies throughout the world become ever more connected and integrated. Although often driven by economics, globalization includes spiritual, cultural, political, and human welfare dimensions. This report and the recommendations are to provide ethical insight for individual Christians and a set of responses for churches and the larger church through its agencies.

As Christians, we understand that what happens to people in the process of being “integrated” is a key criterion by which globalization must be measured. We seek a kind of globalization that reflects justice, community, and the sustainability of creation. Thus we approve measures to (A) strengthen our own discipleship in an international context, and support measures by the community of nations and our own government that will (B) improve international governance, (C) manage technology for the common good, (D) support fair exchange in trade policy, (E) make development assistance more effective, (F) protect workers and vulnerable groups, and (G) encourage congregational, governing body, and missional responses.

From this perspective, the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) submits this report to the 217th General Assembly (2006) and recommends that the assembly approve the report, “Resolution on Just Globalization: Justice, Ownership and Accountability,” for study and with it the following recommendations:

A. In order to join Presbyterian congregations with Reformed and ecumenical Christians worldwide:

1. Receive in fellowship [~~and shared affirmation~~] the paper, “Covenanting for Justice in the Economy of the Earth” of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches (WARC) and the “Alternative Globalization Addressing Peoples and Earth” (AGAPE) paper of the World Council of Churches (WCC) as a way to help members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) understand how other Christians see us and how we may participate in common works of justice and compassion.

2. Direct the Stated Clerk to publish this report in its entirety on the PC(USA) website, making available a copy for each presbytery, synod, and requesting session, and further notifying the church of its availability online.

3. Direct the Office of the Stated Clerk to transmit this document to our ecumenical partners and appropriate interfaith bodies and to pursue with them a continuing process of dialogue and action on ways to encourage forms of globalization that contribute to justice, peace, and the sustainability of creation.

[4. Direct ACSWP to prepare an accompanying study guide, which would include diverse responses on the issues presented in the paper.]

B. In order to support improved governance in a shared world, through the Office of the General Assembly, the United Nations Office, and other appropriate PC(USA) agencies:

1. Call upon the governments of the G8 countries (the summit group of those with the largest economies) to initiate in all official international trade and development organizations a process by which greater participation in decision-making will be extended to less-developed countries, through adjustments in proportional representation in voting and other measures.

2. Reaffirm the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)’s commitment to the rule of international law and objectively high standards for health and safety, security with justice, and environmental protection, specifically by urging the United States Congress and the President to:

a. re-engage the Kyoto Protocol on Greenhouse Gas Emissions as a significant step in protecting the environment and moving towards sustainable development by measuring and reducing carbon dioxide, methane, and other greenhouse gas emissions of the United States, the world’s top emissions producer;

b. support international regulation designed to protect native peoples from cultural and resource exploitation by transnational interests and to protect shared international resources from misappropriation by private interests;

[c. sign and implement the U.N. Convention for the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women (CEDAW) treaty;]

[e-] [d.] lead international efforts to establish a small tax on international capital transactions (the so-called Tobin Tax) as a way to discourage currency speculation and stabilize global financial systems; and

[d-] [e.] cooperate more closely with other countries [and] international organizations in creating guidelines and mechanisms to help balance appropriately the interests of transnational corporations and of host or trading nations with weakened internal governance structures.

3. Call upon the Stated Clerk to support a role for U.S. courts as an important venue to seek enforcement of international law and human rights in cases involving transnational corporations.

C. In order to manage technology for the common good, through the offices of the Stated Clerk, the Washington and U.N. Offices, and other appropriate agencies:

1. Concerning Public Domain Intellectual Property:

a. Call upon the United States government and transnational corporations to cooperate internationally to ensure that a much larger portion of medical research and development funds be devoted to diseases prevalent in less-developed countries and that resulting drugs and treatments be made available to even the poorest persons. The United States should refrain from dissuading other countries from producing drugs needed to fight HIV-AIDS or other epidemics.

b. Support the concept of “public domain intellectual property” through legal research, conferences, and corporate social responsibility efforts by church agencies and advocate similar development of appropriate legislation by Congress, the Executive Branch, and the United Nations; such legislation to protect donations of shareware, open source technology, and other intellectual products for use by disadvantaged peoples and nations.

2. Concerning Agricultural Technology

a. Call upon governments, including our own, to enforce restraints on commercial activity in genetically modified foods until these crops are certified as safe by appropriate international, science-based organizations and in the United States, to include such “GM” food products under the Food and Drug Administration’s jurisdiction for testing and approval.

b. Call upon governments, including our own, to ban the development and marketing of “terminator seeds” because of the genetic and economic risk they entail for the food production system and the livelihoods of farmers.

3. Concerning the Internet:

Direct the Stated Clerk to call upon the Internet Corporation for Assigned Names and Numbers (ICANN) of the United States Department of Commerce to continue its work in increased cooperation with other countries under the aegis of the United Nations.

D. In Order to Support Fair Exchange in International Trade:

1. Call upon the United States and other developed country governments to abandon the use of tariffs and other trade barriers that favor the exports of advanced economies and discriminate against those of poor countries, and to participate in systematic debt relief for poorer nations without requiring massive privatization and other export-platform policies, while seeking to prevent the accumulation of crushing debt by repressive governments.

2. Reaffirm the request of the 215th General Assembly (2003) for the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy to continue the monitoring of trade agreements and support for efforts that strive toward international cooperation on fair trade, respect for diversity and common concerns for a peaceful, just, and sustainable world.

E. In support of more effective and substantial development assistance, noting that President George W. Bush offered U. S. support for the eight Millennium Goals for development of the United Nations, September 14, 2005, (see Appendix C and www.millenniumcampaign.org);

1. Urge the U.S. Administration and Congress to commit to full support of the call for developed countries to provide annually seven-tenths of 1 percent (.7 percent) of gross domestic product in economic assistance to less developed countries rather than its current 0.16 percent of gross national product (well below that of all other developed nations), and to appropriate annually such funds beginning by Fiscal Year 2008, without requiring that these aid funds be used to purchase U.S. products (de facto subsidies to U.S. producers).

2. Reaffirm the General Assembly’s 1996 policy encouraging “governmental, nongovernmental, and multilateral development assistance agencies, together with the governments of developing countries, to give high priority to extending and improving educational programs and systems ... such as literacy programs; schools and facilities at all levels; extension programs in sustainable agriculture; training in technologies for energy efficiency, resource conservation, and environmental protection; and adequate preparation and compensation for teachers, specialists, and community-based trainers” (Hope for a Global Future, p. 111, Resolution 5).

F. In order to protect workers and financial systems at home and abroad, again through the appropriate agencies of the church:

1. Urge United States government agencies and authorities to increase the minimum wage toward a living wage and enforce minimum wage laws, worker safety regulations, and rights of workers to organize and bargain collectively, in accordance with longtime General Assembly support for such measures, and support the inclusion of similar worker safeguards within all of U.S. bilateral and multilateral trade agreements, as is already the case in European Union trade agreements.

2. Urge U.S. agencies and representatives, as well as individuals and congregations, to engage in efforts to end the sinful exploitation of people, especially children and women throughout the world by forced labor, inhumane working conditions, drug trafficking, prostitution, and other forms of involuntary servitude and degradation.

3. Express continuing concern for social inequities in the current U.S. income tax system and support for equity-based reforms, consistent with previous General Assembly policies (1977, etc.).

~~[4. Call upon the ACSWP to conduct an ethical analysis of present U.S. tax policies and regulations in the global context and in light of prior General Assembly positions, updating the General Assembly's 1977 policy, drawing on a representative group of experts on taxation and government policy, and recommending appropriate remedies in a study paper for the 219th General Assembly (2010).]~~

~~[5.]~~ [4.] Urge U.S. government agencies and authorities to enforce provisions of the Sarbanes-Oxley accounting standards and to develop additional transparency for offshore financial transactions possibly designed to launder illegitimate enterprise profits and/or exploit tax havens and tax shelters for corporations and individuals of great wealth.

~~[6.]~~ [5.] Challenge congregations, presbyteries, and synods to:

a. Study this report in conjunction with parallel statements by our ecumenical partners in WARC and WCC (printed elsewhere in assembly materials) as a basis of understanding globalization from a world Christian perspective.

b. Develop study sessions that encourage dialogue among members representing business, labor, and community groups to understand better how globalization impacts their own community and lives.

c. Undertake cross-cultural dialogue within their communities as well as through partnerships arranged by the Worldwide Ministries Division with churches and indigenous groups in other countries, in order to understand other cultures and assist them in their struggle for survival.

d. Prayerfully consider their own lifestyle and consumption patterns and the impact of advertising and consumerism on themselves and their children.

e. Become actively engaged in learning about and supporting fair trade and sweat-free products. Advocate in their communities and businesses for vendor contracts that support fair labor practices from suppliers.

f. Become informed about practices of companies in which they hold stock as well as the practices of the U.S. government that shape globalization, using PC(USA) program materials on Mission Responsibility Through Investment (MRTI) and environmental justice among other resources. Plan worship and pray for a just and sustainable world with enough for everyone.

g. Encourage Presbyterians engaged in global production and trade to utilize codes of business ethics for themselves and their subcontractors that protect workers, the environment and host communities and cultures, working with local nonprofit organizations such as ~~[COVERCO]~~ [the Commission for the Verification of Codes of Conduct (COVERCO)] in Central America to monitor workplace conditions and safety~~[, intentionally looking for partner organizations that uphold human rights principles].~~

h. Encourage the following [General Assembly committees and] offices and agencies of the General Assembly Council, as resources allow, to be guided by relevant sections of this report in their work:

(1) The Advocacy Committee~~[s-on]~~ [for] Women's [Concerns,] ~~[and]~~ [the Advocacy Committee for] Racial Ethnic Concerns~~[,]~~ and offices of Justice and Compassion goal area to monitor and advocate against the exploitation of women and children in the work place, unsafe working conditions, drug trafficking and prostitution.

(2) The Office of the General Assembly, the General Assembly Council, and other agencies of the assembly to review their procurement policies to assure vendor compliance with church policy.

(3) Worldwide Ministries Division and its Hunger Program continuing to educate Presbyterians on fair trade, Enough for Everyone, sweat-free and fair trade products, and the plight of Christians worldwide.

(4) Curriculum Development and Presbyterian Publishing Corporation cooperate with ACSWP in the preparation of study and advocacy materials for all ages on the issues of globalization and trade highlighted in this paper.

I. Introduction

It is the responsibility of the Christian church to be a critical participant in every political and economic system. We are not cheerleaders of any status quo, nor are we believers that every social change is good. We do not believe in globalization; we support a particular kind of globalization that reflects justice, community, and sustainability for all creation. This is the vision, rooted in Christian faith, that we urge members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to advocate in every social, economic, and political arena.

Almost everyone now is familiar with the power of the world market system; yet the Christian tradition speaks of the whole earth as God's household—the oikoumène—from the same New Testament Greek word from which we get economics, ecology, and ecumenical. Along with the many wonders of the microchip and instant communication, globalization also brings intensifying economic, technological, educational, and political division among and within countries, including our own United States. Finance capital flows in and out of industries and countries far faster than we can assess the impacts of these shifts; democratic governments can hardly keep up; the diversity of peoples and cultures is threatened; and the spiritual consequences of time pressure and human inequality grow immense.

The biblical vision begins with the picture of one God creating one humanity, and includes God's redeeming work in Christ reconciling across divisions: between us and God, and among human beings. Martin Luther King Jr.'s image of a "world house" was his version of the Bible's vision of a world made new and at peace. We believe that the vision and values of the "world house" are more encompassing than those of the "world market," and we also remember Jesus' warning that "no city or house divided against itself will stand" (Matt.12:25). Hence this study and its recommendations propose ways to overcome the divisions that otherwise mean more economic and environmental vulnerability for generations to come.

The General Assembly's specific assignment was to look at accelerating economic and environmental trends in light of the 1996 policy statement, Hope for A Global Future, which anticipated much of what is now commonly called "globalization." The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) appointed a knowledgeable and diverse study team to review past policies, to study recent economic data, and to reflect on the challenges and opportunities they present for Christian faith. Additionally, the General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations asked the advisory committee to help our church respond to statements on globalization produced by the World Alliance of Reformed Churches and the World Council of Churches.

The study team included a program manager in the high tech field, an immigrant director of urban mission programs, two ethicists (one seminary, one college), a senior World Bank human development specialist, an expert in ecumenical theology, the director of an interfaith institute on labor justice, a retired corporate chief executive officer (CEO) who also edited a major business magazine. Support was given by ACSWP staff, with assistance in drafting the document provided by an international development specialist and former missionary (proper names and offices in Appendix B). As is our church's tradition, all but the consultant and staff were volunteers, themselves drafting sections of the study and meeting face-to-face and by conference call five times over an nine-month period. United in faith, these Presbyterians also share broad experience in a globalized world through travel, work, and family connections. Their joint effort in producing this document was also enriched by a range of studies and by previous General Assembly policy statements responding in Christian conscience to various economic, environmental, and political realities.

The theological core of this work is Christian realism about sin, a particular gift of the Reformed tradition to the worldwide Christian community's witness. Because no nation or people or king or pope or company or economic system is without sin, all need accountability. The recipe for this is still in our theological ethos as a church whose polity is rooted in democracy and representation. Democratic accountability is what all power needs, lest it overreach in selfishness or pride. The values of sharing, sufficiency, and sustainability make for a stewardship society more than an ownership society; the image of covenant still reflects both our accountability to God and, by God's grace, the redeeming energy of the Holy Spirit that responds to our needs, giving hope, imagination, new life—and even new institutions.

Globalization describes an all-encompassing and hard-to-define fabric of interconnections. This study understands the term this way:

Globalization is the process by which people, nations, and economies throughout the world become ever more connected and integrated. Although often driven by economics, globalization includes cultural, political, and human welfare dimensions.

In this document, we address globalization's spiritual dimensions from the point of view of our understanding of the scriptural framework of covenantal accountability. We are deeply indebted to the world Christian community, that oikoumène that is both the mystical body of Christ and a fragile international network of churches. We offer our work to be part of the study and action called for in recent statements on global economic issues by both the World Council of Churches and the World Alliance of Reformed Churches. We affirm the spiritual solidarity that we have with ecumenical partners and recommend further study of their documents. (See Recommendation A.1.)

This work is guided by fourteen principles drawn from Hope for a Global Future: Toward Just and Sustainable Human Development, an extensive policy statement by the 208th General Assembly (1996) (see Appendix A). It is also informed by the larger body of General Assembly reflection on economic life. Particularly relevant to our task were: the Report on the Church and Transnational Corporations (1982); Towards A Just, Dynamic and Caring Political Economy (1985); God's

Work in Our Hands (1995); We Are What We Eat (2002); and a set of research papers by ACSWP, (The Globalization of Economic Life, The Employment Effects of Free Trade and Globalization, Globalization and the Environment, and Globalization and Culture); Debt, Jubilee and Two Thirds World, edited by Peter Sulyok; Voices from Korea, USA, and Brazil: The Reformed Faith and the Global Economy, edited by Jean S. Stoner.

Following recommendations for General Assembly action, this report highlights the profound and dynamic moral challenges of the rising global income gap among and within nations, starting with the United States. Assessing and responding to that reality must begin with understanding a complex, interdependent reality that resists ideological simplification. The paper describes the economic framework of globalization focusing on international trade, investment and finance, contrasting new developments with earlier periods. Particular aspects and challenges of globalization are considered before turning to key proposals for improving the framework and governance of global institutions. The role of the church and individual Christians is lifted up, both near the beginning and at the end, pointing to specific recommendations and acknowledging the perspectives of our international ecumenical partners. This report offers a significant challenge to our members and congregations. Responding to God's call is rarely easy but it is always rewarding. United with our ecumenical partners and people of faith around the world, it is possible to shape globalization in ways that reflect justice, community, and sustainability for all creation.

II. Rationale

A. Theological Prologue on Globalization

The church has no choice but to be concerned about and involved in contemporary issues of globalization if we are to be faithful to our biblical roots and theological traditions. The Bible knows nothing of a spiritual life distinct from earth, history and human relationships. The opening chapters of Genesis portray a unity in all that God has made. The creation is to be tended, protected and nurtured by its human participants who have unique responsibilities because they bear their Creator's image.

Stewardship, therefore, is the starting point of a biblically inspired understanding of economic issues. A globally organized system of production and consumption cannot be embraced apart from the overriding human responsibility for transmitting the creation as God's gift to successive generations.

Nothing is more characteristic of globalization than the need to facilitate exchanges among peoples and nations with formal agreements. That modern reality is prefigured in the Scriptures by the dominant theme of the covenant. Whether between God and humankind or between family members or near strangers, a covenant involved mutual promises, responsibilities, and commitments. God's covenant with Abraham was not to show favoritism for one person, family, or nation; it embodied a promise for all people.

Now the Lord said to Abram, "Go from your country and your kindred and your father's house to the land that I will show you. I will make of you a great nation, and I will bless you, and make your name great, so that you will be a blessing." (Gen. 12:1,2)

Christians see in Jesus the personification of God's intent to break the bounds of nationality, race, ethnicity, and geography, to include all peoples and nations in the covenant of justice. Covenant theology reminds us that while faith is personal it is never merely individual. We are called to the community of faithfulness that is engaged in doing justice and in seeing that justice is done.

The Greek word oikos is the common root of our words economy, ecology, and ecumenical and points to the inseparability of God and God's people from the goal of just social and economic relationships among peoples and nations. If we are to have a global community, it must be based on global justice.

... God, who made heaven and earth, ... who keeps faith forever; ... executes justice for the oppressed; [and] ... gives food to the hungry. (Ps.146:5-7)

... what does the Lord require of you but to do justice, and to love kindness, and to walk humbly with your God? (Micah 6:8)

Economic justice in the human community begins with sufficiency. Biblical faith is not at its heart ascetic. Israel endured the harsh privations of forty years in the desert while forging its understanding of God and community, but the vision was always of a land flowing with milk and honey. Fasting is practiced as a spiritual discipline, but hunger and destitution were never idealized. Poverty was not regarded as a divine blessing but the result of human oppression and unfairness.

Those who oppress the poor insult their Maker, but those who are kind to the needy honor God. The wicked are overthrown by their evil-doing, but the righteous find a refuge in their integrity. (Prov.14:31-32)

Gustavo Gutierrez, John Cardinal O'Hara Professor of Theology at Notre Dame, summarized the biblical tradition's challenge to modernity: "Poverty is an evil, a scandalous condition which in our times has taken on enormous proportions.

To eliminate it is to bring closer the movement of seeing God face to face in union with other humans” (A Theology of Liberation, Maryknoll: Orbis, 1973, pp.295–96).

On the other hand, there is no biblical encouragement for unrestrained acquisition. That was one lesson of the dramatic account of manna in the wilderness. Everyone was to have enough, but hoarding turned that which was good, putrid. Money, the modern store of value, does not rot, but it can distort life.

Jesus said, “You cannot serve both God and money” (Matt. 6:24 TEV).

Sin separates us from God. In the biblical witness, this is seldom an abstraction. We do not know God face-to-face, by intuition or by our own initiative. God is revealed to us. God’s own self-revelation in and through history. Separation from God almost always involves separation from other people, from the community. Growing economic disparity between the world’s wealthy few and the impoverished majority is a reality of the present global system. Whether that breach of community is sin or happenstance is a crucial theological question that greatly determines how the church engages the global economic order.

Theologian Reinhold Niebuhr noted that the heart of sin is pride and the lust for power. This will-to-power is the inclination, if not the ability, to insulate oneself from the vicissitudes of life, and ultimately from God, by making all relevant events and persons subject to one’s own will. When vast difference in economic power leads to the ability of the few to “play God” with the lives of others, sin has entered in. That, of course, has been and is the tendency of nations as well as individuals.

Thus says the Lord: “For three transgressions of Israel, and for four, I will not revoke the punishment; because they sell the righteous for silver, and the needy for a pair of sandals...” (Amos 2:6)

Sin makes freedom problematic in the social order. Liberation is a persistent theme of the biblical narrative, whether from the bondage of slavery in Egypt or from the powers of sin and death in the New Testament. Biblical freedom is not about rugged individualism or the unrestrained right of consumption and accumulation. It is about life in community where all can be delivered from the social, economic, political, and spiritual powers that keep life from being everything God intends.

The struggle for freedom from economic oppression is a way of life. Rosemary Ruether, a theologian teaching at Garrett Theological Seminary, put it: “Within the bounds of present life, the struggle itself is its own reward. It is in the process of struggle against debased existence, with the attendant demands for moral sensitizing, self-discipline, and constant resetting of one’s sights upon the vision of salvation that one is closest to the secret of human life” (The Radical Kingdom: New York: Harper & Row, 1972, p. 288).

Those who call today for trade and investment free of controls seek a world that is a far cry from the biblical vision of community that provides hope for a just society encompassing the whole inhabited earth. A global economy of biblical dimensions would be a community of shared values and commitments that transcend geographic, political, ethnic, and cultural divisions.

Thus, the church has never accepted a marketplace stripped of moral considerations. The classic economic model of competing self-interests determining most efficiently the price, quantity and quality of goods was still imbued with “moral sentiments” (Adam Smith). But increasingly there is an insistence by some that markets should also be trusted to make all relevant decisions about what is produced, whose needs are met, and how the benefits and burdens of society are shared. Some of the market’s most vigorous advocates thus demand that it be unencumbered political or moral structures and rules.

To imagine a sphere of life from which moral scrutiny is excluded, however, is to abridge God’s sovereignty and create an absolute that rivals God. Biblical faith acknowledges no such rival. An unfettered world market is not a biblical vision. The biblical goal is not maximization of the freedom to seek individual benefit, corporate profit, or national advantage in a global society. As Theologian Emil Brunner reminded us:

The primary purpose of economics willed by God is to minister to human needs, service to life. This implies that the economic order is a means and not an end... (I)t is the duty of each individual...and of the community as such, to see to it that the economic order is not allowed to make itself absolute, or to lose its purpose of service to humanity. (The Divine Imperative, London: Lutterworth, 1937, p. 402)

The moral test of today’s globalizing economy is whether it serves the human enterprise and the larger creation. Undoubtedly, international exchange made life easier, more pleasant and more interesting for those with resources to participate. But huge segments of the world’s population do not have such resources. Worse yet, many are further impoverished by the ordinary functioning of the globalizing economy.

That does not necessarily result from mal-intent. The competing demands of a high-consumption society and the constant pressure of stockholders for increased profits in effect commission business activity that will deliver goods at lower prices, without having to know or divulge the economic, social, and environmental consequences. At the level of theory, capitalism is allowed simply to ignore immediate inequities by positing that unfettered competition will resolve them in the long run.

Biblical faith grants no dispensation for the delay of justice. The Jubilee year of forgiven debts (Lev. 25; Luke 4:18–19) illustrates the principle that no economic arrangement is to be allowed to impoverish permanently; the future must not be made hopeless. In that fiftieth year of Jubilee, when land is to be restored to the dispossessed, and seeks to satisfy the promised trend toward inequality. On this model, every system of exchange must be subject to moral critique and intentional transformation. Periodic corrections are to be made to reestablish economic relationships that restore freedom, opportunity, and hope.

Christian hope is not wishful thinking. Simply positing that all will work out well is not prudent when human welfare and the fate of the earth are at stake. Christian hope is in God and God's purposes, not in unalterable and supposedly automatic systems. Christian hope is about God's preferred future, a vision of life glimpsed in the Bible's final chapter:

[Then he] showed me the river of the water of life . . . On either side of the river, is the tree of life with its twelve kinds of fruit, producing its fruit each month; and the leaves of the tree are for the healing of the nations. (Rev. 22:1,2b)

Abundance and variety, shared in equity and peace, is our global vision. It comes from the One in whom we place our hope. Nothing short of that is acceptable.

In March 2005, the World Council of Churches released a powerful and probing background paper titled "Alternative Globalization Addressing Peoples and Earth." Known widely as "the AGAPE Document," the acronym results in the New Testament word for selfless love. It reminds us that God's unbounded love or grace is ultimately the basis of Christian involvement in economic affairs. In God's love, the beauty and treasure of the earth are given to each generation in trust for God's chosen future. All who share the stewardship, i.e., all 6.5 billion of us, are placed in one another's care. It can truly be said that the Christian economic ethic is one of love not law, yet love is always in danger of becoming the instrument of cheap grace—feeling righteous without doing justice. Thus, we are always goaded by agape, the call to selfless concern, but in global affairs, we must at least as Christians demand well-crafted laws that provide greater fairness as an interim measure, because love never falls short of justice.

When the church addresses economic realities, it does not claim the technical competence of specialized institutions, though it gains insight from members in those organizations. The church as a body can and should, however, engage in an ethical analysis of economic laws, customs, and proposals; denounce morally unacceptable economic outcomes; name the sin that is causing pain; and insist that more fair and humane policies be sought and implemented. That is an authentically biblical task for the community of faith in the economic arena—whether the market is local, national, or global. (Hence, this effort, to analyze the real world, as a part of our faith seeking understanding.)

B. Globalization in Context

One of the first acts of humankind in the Genesis creation narrative was to name the other creatures that shared the Edenic economy of the garden. There is a power and even stewardship in naming things. Thus, while all economic orders are human and not divine creations, we face similar issues in naming and defining "globalization." Accepting a common name for a dynamic social reality gives an illusion of consensus that does not exist. "Globalization" has become an international catch phrase to sum up the happenings of the decade of the 1990s and a term to launch an outlook for the twenty-first century. It is more an awareness than a movement or a program. Yet, because it clearly points to a major social phenomenon, we understand the term in this way: "Globalization is the process by which people, nations, and economies throughout the world become ever more connected and integrated. Although often driven by economics, globalization includes cultural, political, and human welfare dimensions."

That last phrase is significant. When the church reflects upon complex social realities our interest is neither academic nor ideological. Where others may regard globalization as an inescapable force of history or technology, we by faith are called to participate in forming the structures of both the present and the future. What happens to people and communities in the process of being "integrated" is the key criterion by which this, or any, social phenomenon should be judged. One need not be an economic determinist to understand that economic forces drive almost all re-castings of social relationships. What we currently call globalization is no exception. Economic decisions, institutions, and power are paramount in creating and manipulating international flows of information, technology, money, people, and expressions of popular culture. That is nothing new. What is new is the speed with which these decisions and actions reverberate around the world and the consequent immediacy of their impact on human life and behavior. This narrows the gap between cause and effect, thereby reducing humanity's scope for thoughtful assessment of these matters and increasing the chances of inadequately informed actions as the pace of change accelerates.

The period from 1870 to 1914 was, even by today's standards, an era of globalization. Harvard historian Niall Ferguson writes,

The mobility of commodities, capital and labor reached record levels; the sea-lanes and telegraphs across the Atlantic had never been busier, as capital and migrants traveled west and raw materials and manufactures traveled east. In relation to output, exports of both merchandise and capital reached volumes not seen again until the 1980s. Total emigration from Europe between 1880 and 1910 was in excess of 25 million. People spoke euphorically of 'the annihilation of distance....'

The last age of globalization resembled the current one in numerous ways. It was characterized by relatively free trade, limited restrictions on migration, and hardly any regulation of capital flows. Inflation was low. A wave of technological innovation was revolutionizing the communications and energy sectors; the world first discovered the joys of the telephone, the radio, the internal combustion engine, and paved roads. The U.S. economy was the biggest in the world, and the development of its massive internal market had become the principal source of business innovation. China was opening up, raising all kinds of expectations in the West, and Russia was growing rapidly. (Niall Ferguson, "Sinking Globalization," Foreign Affairs, March/April 2005, pp. 64, 66)

Still, we sense that there is something new in contemporary globalization that goes beyond previous expressions of international business, international travel, and international politics. That newness consists of the potential, if not yet the capability, of individuals, organizations, and business entities to engage one another without the cultural constraints of community or the institutional restraints of the state, and with little regard for geography, history, faith, and culture. The ultimate logic of such globalization would transform the world experience from being an interaction of the peoples of 193 countries and perhaps as many cultures, to that of the interaction of six billion plus individuals. It is a dazzling vision fraught with an immense challenge of social reorganization.

What are we as a faith family to make of this challenge? By its nature, the gospel breaks the bonds between faith and nationhood, and instead perceives the whole world as the arena of God's glory and of human accountability. We, therefore, tend to be internationalist in our outlook and in our hope. On the other hand, our understanding of the biblical vision is that human life cannot be reduced to the sum of individual actions; God calls us to life together, life in community. Does that make us opponents of change and thus enemies of a new age of globalization? Not at all, but it does mean that we insist that globalization, this new way of thinking and acting, as with all previous and present systems, must be measured against our understanding of God's intent in creation and God's pursuit of that intent in history.

The advent of globalization is not the first time the Church and the Reformed tradition have faced what seemed a cataclysmic restructuring of societies. When feudalism was in the process of being replaced by an incipient capitalism, the social structures of a thousand years were being undone. That was the world in which our theological progenitor, John Calvin, lived. He was able to make an uneasy peace with the emerging capitalist order in a way that other reformers were not. The difference lies in Calvin's fundamental, unshakable confidence in the sovereignty of God. Because God is sovereign, Calvin felt no need to defend the old order of feudalism or lament its passing. Because God was sovereign over the emerging order, Calvin could see in it potentially positive values and legitimate opportunities for the exercise of the Christian calling. Peace could be made with market forces, although only a cautious peace.

Calvin's approach to economic life and thought is the principle that no economic system is to be regarded as permanent, absolute, or inevitable. His twenty-first century heirs are not those who insist that laissez-faire principles are above criticism or that a particular kind of globalization is our unalterable future. His true heirs are those who are pragmatic in their insistence that new opportunities and new dilemmas require new approaches to guiding human participation through the chaos of change. But the goal is always the same: to use the economy and all human tools to glorify God through the achievement of God's purpose for all of life and all of creation.

Shortly before he was assassinated, Martin Luther King Jr. called for a global war against the unjust poverty of the world. He asked for a sustained, thoughtful, non-paternalistic program of aid utilizing 2 percent of GNP of the major industrialized nations for ten to twenty years to overcome the poverty that kills. All were interdependent and the poor could be helped without rendering them puppets of the rich. He noted that, "The first step in the world-wide war against poverty is passionate commitment" (Where Do We Go From Here; Chaos or Community?, Boston: Beacon Press, 1967, p.178).

That perspective was embraced in 1996 by the 208th General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in its statement, Hope for a Global Future: Toward a Just and Sustainable Human Development. It called for just and sustainable human development defined as "the comprehensive enhancement of the quality of life for all, present and future; it necessarily involves the integration of economic, social, political, cultural, ecological, and spiritual dimensions of being" (p.95). Here we focus on a number of current issues of globalization that have economic, social, and political dimensions because it is in such arenas that an authentic biblical and reformed faith must be lived: income gaps within and among nations; international trade, aid, and investment; employment and workplace concerns; migration of peoples; technology and the ownership of information and ideas; the environment; the politics of ruling, governing, and guiding a global economy.

C. The Global Income Gap

Jesus responded to Satan's temptation to turn stones into bread saying, "You shall not live by bread alone...." What he did not say is that humankind can or should live without bread. It is no mystery that "bread" is a modern English slang term for money. In our world, most people cannot live without it either. Who receives how much is more than a matter of score-keeping; it defines the kind of life available and becomes a proxy-measure of human worth in national and global society.

1. A Nation Divided

The distribution of wealth and income is not just an economic issue; it is a moral concern even in a country like ours. The nation is rich, but its bounty is shared so unevenly as to make it hard to cling to our historical pride of belief in the basic fairness of our economic system. The U.S. Census Bureau annually reports on how the national income is shared among five equal population segments called quintiles. A report by the Congressional Budget Office for the years 1979-1997 summarized its findings in this way:

Average household income before taxes grew in real terms by nearly one-third between 1979 and 1997, but that growth was shared unevenly across the income distribution. The average income for households in the top fifth of the distribution rose by more than half. In contrast, average income for the middle quintile climbed by 10% and that of the lowest fifth dropped slightly. Furthermore, income growth at the very top of the distribution was greater yet: average income in 1997 dollars for the top one percent of households more than doubled, rising from $420,000 in 1979 to more than $1 million in 1997. ("Effective Federal Tax Rates, 1979-1997", Chapter One, Commentary on Figure 1-5)

The Census Bureau makes clear the human impact of all this: In 2003 the number of people living in poverty rose by 1.3 million from the year before to 35.9 million persons. This represents one in every eight of us (12.5 percent). The plight of children under 18 years is worse; 17.6 percent live below the official poverty lines. That is the second highest child poverty rate among the twenty-six nations ranked by The Economist magazine; only Mexico is worse (March 5, 2005, p. 104). That cannot be dismissed as merely the effect of several years of a bad economy. While child poverty grew, the heads of America's five hundred biggest companies received an aggregate 54 percent increase in their average total compensation. That brought the figure to just over $10 million per CEO for the year (Forbes.com). By contrast, a job at the national minimum wage for a forty-hour workweek produced just $10,712 for the entire year. This vast difference in compensation results from both long-term structural imbalances in the U.S. economy and a value system that seldom challenges them.

There has not been such a concentration of wealth and income in America since the days of the robber barons of the late 19th and early 20th centuries. According to economist Peter Drucker, the disparity between top and bottom incomes has changed from forty-two times to more than five hundred times (Jeffrey Sachs, An End of Poverty, Penguin Press, New York, 2005). Sachs further suggests that an increase of just 5 percent for those in the top tax brackets could generate billions of annual tax revenue. By most assessments of the economic data, the gap between the rich and the poor in U.S. society is widening. Some readers, desiring to justify our economic system, point out that America's poor are at least better off than the poor in most countries. If life as a nation were only about survival, that might be enough. But nationhood is not about separate existences, it is about life together.

That sense of wholeness cannot be achieved and maintained in the face of an economic structure that is inured to increasingly separate and different life experiences of those at the top and at the bottom. We in the United States must begin to ask whether we are willing to see forty-seven million of our number continue to have no assured access to medical care and treatment, or 20 percent of our children who are poorly nourished. Can those of us doing well live at peace knowing that vast numbers of others among us are just a paycheck or two away from family or personal disaster?

2. Consumerism and Personal Responsibility

When most Americans ask, "How much is enough?" they envision neither mere subsistence nor barebones living. They mean, "How much is enough to live comfortably, or securely, or to be proverbially middle-class?" To that question society has no fixed answer. When sufficiency is reached, more becomes the dream. Enough calories to survive will satisfy only for a while before visions of dinner out at a nice restaurant come to mind. For most people, owning a basic automobile for getting around will not long satisfy when the dream of an SUV seems obtainable. When a better job comes along, the comfortable bungalow quickly gives way to the mini-mansion. A good public school education, once the uniting force of American society, is yielding to more costly private education where personal choice in school-mates or religious ideas can be guaranteed and where gaining an advantage in getting into a "better" university can be presumed.

Such is the quest of "enough" unless it becomes a moral, rather than an economic, quest. In today's rich countries, that requires living against the tide of culture. Consider the moral implications of the following chart.

	$U.S. Billions
Basic education for everyone in the world	6
Cosmetics in the United States	8
Water and sanitation for everyone in the world	9
Ice cream in Europe	11
Reproductive health for all women in the world	12
Perfumes in Europe and the United States	12
Basic health and nutrition for everyone in the world	13
Pet foods in Europe and the United States	17
Business entertainment in Japan	35
Cigarettes in Europe	50
Alcoholic drinks in Europe	105

Military spending in the world	780

Causes of Poverty (<http://www.globalissues.org/TradeRelated/Facts.asp>), June 11, 2005

The actual spending of nations is in large measure the product of the consumption habits and political preferences of individuals and families. Those habits and preferences are not in our nature; we learn, indeed we are taught, to consume in some ways rather than other ways. The media advertising bill in the United States is now more than $234 billion per year—more than $800 per person. (www.admedia.org—an on-line resource) More than $2 billion is spent annually just targeting children. The intent of advertising is not merely to differentiate one product from another but continually to stimulate total consumption. We are taught to want more and need more, to define worth by doing, having, using, and owning. We have moved from the idea that being requires consumption to the notion that consumption defines being. That is a moral leap that changes our relationship to all things and all people.

Few people would likely make a moral argument that it is better or right for people in rich countries to spend more on ice cream or pet food or alcohol or armaments than on pure water, sanitation, basic health, and basic education for the whole world. Nor would most people affirm the rightness of supplying the demand for ever larger homes in the United States while there is a growing deficit of affordable housing for the poor and even the middle class. Yet, that is the consequence of our spending. The market system is not designed to meet human need; it is designed to serve those with needs or desires and the money to act upon them.

a. Private Consumption and Public Consequences

The way and the amount we Americans consume make clear that consumption is not just about need or adequacy for life and health. Consumption is also about how we define ourselves and the class to which we aspire. It unites us with some and divides us from others. That is as true of the nation as it is of families and individuals. America is perceived as rich because so many people can and do consume at extraordinary levels as compared to those in most other countries.

The drive to consume more and more is having adverse personal effects. Nearly two-thirds of American adults are overweight or obese due in no small measure to the “super-size me” phenomenon expressed at both fast-food restaurants and home tables. This is fueled by increased incomes and diminished self-control.

The desire or pressure to have more has been a major factor requiring two-income families and longer working hours to finance higher lifestyles at the loss of time to enjoy what one has. The average American worker now spends 350 hours a year more on the job than do their European counterparts (“Culture of Consumption,” Christian Science Monitor, June 12, 2003). A more stressful life seems to be a price we are willing to pay for a higher consumption lifestyle.

Private consumption levels also have important implications for the economy as a whole. We have become a society that lives for today and thinks less about tomorrow. Personal savings in America dropped from 10 percent of earnings in 1980 to just 3.7 percent in 2002, mainly to finance increased consumption. Worse yet, most Americans not only spend what they have, they spend what they do not have and may never get. Consumers on average owe almost $9,000 in credit card debt alone, up by more than half since 1995 (“Culture of Consumption,” Christian Science Monitor, June 12, 2003). Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan noted, “the debt-to-income ratio in the United States has been rising for a least a half century” (<http://www.federalreserve.gov/boarddocs/speeches/2004/20040223/default.htm>) It should be noted that in some cases bankruptcy and credit card debt is caused by lack of adequate health care insurance to cover expensive illness. While that worries many economists, policy makers are afraid to move seriously to curtail debt-driven consumption for fear the entire economy will collapse.

The drive of individual Americans and families to have more and more also has an impact on the global environment, on the way business is done, and ultimately on workers both domestically and in other countries. Consumers want lower prices.

That pushes companies to produce goods more cheaply. In order to do that while defending their market share and profit line, firms seek ways to trim costs—cutting wages, reducing or eliminating health benefits, and increasingly moving production abroad. When competitors do the same, firms are not always careful about the safety of their workplaces or their care of the environment in less developed countries where unions are often weak and national laws often poorly enforced. Thus the insatiable demand of the world's wealthier consumers for more products and services at ever lower prices, coupled with an appetite of corporations and their stockholders for profits, too often creates a downward spiral in the quality of life of the weakest participants in globalization.

b. Personal Responsibility for Closing the Consumption Gap: Charity and Its Limits

The reality is that under our present economic system, meeting human need depends heavily on the decision making of those who have more than they need. Until those with more than enough adopt a different set of spending priorities, those at the bottom of rich-country economies and the majority of people around the world will have little hope of meeting minimal human standards of water, food, health care, and education.

The deception in that statement is that it makes it seem that closing the economic gap between classes and nations can be accomplished by the voluntary transfer of funds from those of plenty to those of need. The principle of private philanthropy is powerful in our country. In 2004, charitable giving reached a record of almost $250 billion, and 70–80 percent of Americans contributed to at least one charity. The nonprofit organizations that are the beneficiaries of that largesse employ 10 percent of the country's labor force; that is twice the number of federal employees. This American commitment to private charity is far greater than in other industrialized countries and is based in part on the assumption that nonprofit organizations undertake some of the functions that are the responsibility of governments in other societies (Giving USA Foundation, <http://www.aafrc.org/gusa/index.cfm>).

It is not surprising, therefore, that charitable organizations have been accorded a special place in the U.S. tax code by making contributions tax deductible to the giver. About 35 percent of American charity dollars go to religious organizations, 14 percent to education, and 1.8 percent to international affairs and development. The remaining 49 percent goes to others of the more than 600,000 entities recognized by the Internal Revenue Service as tax exempt (Giving USA Foundation, <http://www.aafrc.org/gusa/index.cfm>).

The opportunity of a tax deduction for “doing good” has been a boon to nonprofit organizations of all sorts. Churches have joined others in loud protest when, occasionally, it has been suggested that the charity tax-break be rescinded. While many socially useful things are done with tax-subsidized charitable donations, in the aggregate only a small part goes directly to benefit the poor or to help close the nation's income gap.

A major weakness of our tax-supported system of private charity is that individuals are allowed and encouraged to establish their own priorities of need for society. Gifts to elite universities, to ideologically oriented think-tanks, and to churches that never look beyond their front doors are accorded equal tax-break status with disaster relief, food pantries, and job training programs.

People of faith are obliged to invest their personal philanthropy responsibly by seeking opportunities that adhere to recognized ethical standards and deliver maximum funding for good work being done. Effective charities typically have low administrative costs, enabling more of the contribution to reach its intended recipient. They will also typically include recipients in the design process to ensure a good fit between the solution and the problem.

Contributing to charity is certainly one way for persons of faith and conscience to help those in need, but the business of charity may also be oriented toward other less noble goals. The exhortation to help the poor has always been tolerable to the privileged, those who have money to give, because it is left to them individually to decide how much should be given and how that is to be done. The essential relationship between wealth and poverty is left intact.

Thus, people of faith and conscience have another duty to the poor. Charity alone has rarely corrected broad-based social and economic inequity. Where individual effort falls short, good government ought to enter in. That is the second front of the faithful: to urge government efforts to help meet human needs that markets cannot or will not address; to advocate for adequate government budgets, including adequate taxation, to accomplish that task.

Closing the economic gap in the nation and in the world is a moral challenge. As ethicist George Thomas put it over a half-century ago: “Christians must supplement the individualistic ideal of equality of opportunity with the more humane ideal of equality of consideration. This is the principle that everyone should be genuinely taken into account in the distribution of social benefit and should be helped by the state to develop his capacities and fulfill his needs as far as possible” (George Thomas, Christian Ethics and Moral Philosophy, NY, Scribner's, 1955, pp. 317–18).

3. Living in Different Worlds

Looking beyond our own national situation hardly increases the sense of well-being. The economic divide between more and less developed countries and the gap in the life circumstances of their peoples is even more stark and of greater concern than that within our own country.

A globally integrated economy makes assessment of these inequities more complex. In many cases, encouraging macro-economic news at national levels masks growing inequality among social groups. The total income of the fifty-two countries representing 90 percent of the world's gross domestic product is on the rise. China and India are becoming more powerful international economic actors. Average per capita income in middle-income countries has risen modestly over several years. Even many African economies are showing signs of life. But studies dealing with how the increased national income is being shared are less publicized. There are more cars on city streets, and urban dwellers seem to be consuming more of the things that we in the West assume are good, but what is happening in rural areas where most people eke out a living often remains outside our view.

Clearly hundreds of millions of people are being left behind even with the modest progress reported in national data. The differences between the richest and poorest individuals around the world are growing. Recent data show that the richest 5 percent of people receive one-third of total global income, as much as the poorest 80 percent (Branko Milanovic, Worlds Apart: Measuring International and Global Inequality, Princeton University Press, 2005). Per capita income has risen sharply in Asia and the Pacific since 1975 but has actually fallen by about 20 percent in Africa. Over the same period, life expectancy in Africa has returned to the average 45 years characteristic three decades ago. Despite India's new and profitable role in technology outsourcing, more than 40 percent of its people are undernourished. The United Nations Food and Agricultural Organization estimates that 852 million people worldwide share that reality, and more than 5 million children die each year from hunger-related causes. Another eleven million children in developing countries die annually before the age of five, most from diseases medical science knows how to prevent. More than one hundred million children remain out of primary school, 60 percent of them girls, though primary education is widely recognized as one of the most dramatic development solutions available. Although the number of persons living in extreme poverty dropped by more than 20 percent between 1981 and 2001, 1.2 billion people still live on less than $1 per day, and their average daily income has actually fallen from 64 to 60 cents (World Bank, World Development Indicators, 2005.). Even in less poor countries like South Africa, most people struggle. There, almost half the Black majority population is unemployed and more than 55 percent live in poverty (Data from the South African Institute of Race Relations).

As summed up by The Economist magazine:

Hundreds of millions of people in the world are forced to endure lives of abject poverty—poverty so acute that those fortunate enough to live in the United States, or Europe or the rich industrialized parts of Asia can scarcely comprehend its meaning. Surely there is no more commanding moral imperative for people in the West than to urge each other, and their governments, to bring relief to the world's poorest. (March 13, 2004)

This is not just a matter of benevolence for rich countries; it is in our own self-interest that the global economic gap be closed. No amount of tax money spent on the military or homeland security can insulate us from a world of desperate and angry people. Assuming that the world can be intimidated indefinitely into accepting an unfair sharing of the earth's resources and humanity's ingenuity is both moral bankruptcy and political shortsightedness.

It is not enough to soften poverty's edge in our own country. Jesus' teaching that the neighbor is beyond, as well as within, the community of faith and nation transforms the way we think about the world. We shall not fully experience God's shalom, and the world cannot be at peace, until the economic order(s) under which we live contribute to a sense of wholeness and well being among peoples and nations. There may be legitimate debates about how that can best be done, but there can be no debate about the need for addressing the human desperation present in the world's economic divide.

D. Economic Tools of Globalization

National economies are being integrated into something resembling an increasingly seamless network for the exchange of money, products, services, and to a lesser extent people. This results mainly from the economic interests of governments, the profit-seeking drive of corporations and, to some degree, the acquisitiveness of ordinary people. Whether the traditional international economic tools of trade, investment, and aid can be bent to serve the end of a just and sustainable economy that bridges the divides of geography, politics, cultures, and generations is the issue before both church and world. The faithful proclamation and living out of the biblical demands of justice, compassion, and the stewardship of creation can be a powerful contribution to the debate about globalization.

1. International Trade

Trade has expanded at rates almost double the increase in global income. Between 1979 and 1988, world output grew at an average annual rate of 3.4 percent while trade grew 4.3 percent. In the following decade, income growth fell back slightly while the value of trade grew even faster at a 6.2 percent rate (Data from U.N. and World Bank sources cited by Gordon Douglass, The Globalization of Economic Life, ACSWP, 2001, p.3). Breakthroughs in technologies of transportation and communications have created the opportunity for genuine global thinking, marketing, and managing. Whether it is good or sustainable for global trade to continue increasing more than global income is a question that cannot be ignored.

a. Developing Country Concerns

Global trade figures include both imports and exports. When looked at from that perspective, the so-called developing countries have seen their share of world trade rise from about a quarter in the 1970s to about a third today. That seems encouraging, but looking only at total trade distorts the economic reality. What a poor country sells is the more crucial element in measuring the benefit being derived. Of the world's exports of goods and services, the advanced industrial countries account for 72 percent, with 28 percent coming from developing countries (International Monetary Fund data cited in The Economist, June 4, 2005, p. 98). But, in 2004, China alone accounted for more than 21 percent of the developing world's total. While India has begun to increase sharply its share of global trade, mainly in technology and services, other developing countries are struggling just to maintain their position, and African countries as a whole continue to lose ground.

For developing countries, the drive of current trade agreements for specialization of exports creates additional security risks as these countries lose their ability to be self-sufficient in some core areas such as feeding their own citizens. This results in making nations dependent on dynamics beyond their control. Trade agreements tend to favor larger countries that can more quickly adapt to changing global conditions such as new technologies or new international suppliers. The resulting changes by trading partners often leave developing countries vulnerable to an oversupply of their traditional export products and to a shortfall of export earnings. Consider the case of Madagascar. In this southern Africa country of fourteen million people, 70 percent live in poverty. Eighty-eight percent of the labor force is involved in agriculture and depends on a few traditional crops. Natural vanilla has been the largest export earner. The world market price of $180 per kilo in 2004 dropped to $50 per kilo in 2005 despite a good harvest and high expectations of increased export earnings ("Madagascar: Economy continues to grow," IRINNews.org, a publication of the United Nations Office for Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, http://www.irinnews.org/report.asp?ReportID=47538&SelectRegion=Southern_Africa&SelectCountry=MADAGASCAR.) Instead, the nation was devastated by a surge of sales of imitation vanilla, a technology against which it could not compete and over which it had no control. Rich country consumers benefited from lower prices while poor country farmers and national budgets were crushed.

Developing countries hoped that the July 2005 meeting of the G8 industrialized nations would make significant breakthroughs on several fronts that affect them. There was some encouraging news on debt reduction and aid, but on trade, the most important issue of all, nothing has changed. Poor and developing countries are left with many concerns about the current state of international trade. Key among them are these:

- ◆ Despite all the talk about "free" trade in the U.S. and other developed countries, their trade barriers still remain high to many of the products of developing countries. The mechanisms vary from discriminatory tariffs against processed and manufactured goods from developing countries to subsidies for domestic agriculture that make similar products from abroad noncompetitive. A World Bank release ("Global Economic Perspective," September, 2003) notes, "Industrial countries charge on an average 1.0 percent on their sales to other industrial countries while exporters from South Asia pay 8.0 percent." Meanwhile, developed country governments channel nearly $1 billion per day into subsidizing their farmers. Such barriers are no small matter. The World Bank concludes that "a trade deal that addresses the concerns of developing countries could spur growth and reduce the number of people living in poverty by as much as 144 million by 2015."

- ◆ Many poor countries are still disproportionately dependent on the export of foods and basic commodities whose prices continue to lag in world markets. Oil is the major exception, but most developing countries are importers, not exporters of oil. The real price of agricultural commodities has declined over the past forty years, and several other commodities exported by developing countries fell in the late 1990s to their lowest levels since the Great Depression (Food and Agriculture Organization, "Commodity markets: global trends, local impacts," 2005). World commodity prices have recovered from post-2000 lows, but it remains to be seen whether that will be a permanent improvement or merely another temporary rise in the global trade rollercoaster. The long-term reality is that farm subsidies by developed countries and their control of the processing of agricultural commodities has kept prices paid to farmers in less developed countries artificially low and prevented them from sharing fairly in international trade.

- ◆ Recent decades have brought a dramatic change in the very nature of international trade as an exchange which governments control to a system increasingly managed by large corporations to benefit their own profitability. This "signals a transfer of power and control away from national governments which, for all their failures, can be influenced by the general public” (op.cit., Douglass, p.4).

♦ Poor countries, especially in Africa, continue to fall behind in education; that bodes ill for their gaining a larger place in a global trading system increasingly driven by developments in technology.

At the December 2005 World Trade Organization (WTO) meeting in Hong Kong there was an agreement that “substantial” cuts would be made in export subsidies by the end of 2013. Rich countries are to eliminate tariffs and quotas by 2008 on 97 percent of their import categories for goods from the world’s fifty poorest countries and on cotton as well. Additionally, rich countries are to provide aid to poor countries to help them adjust to international competition. At this writing, it is unknown whether the United States Congress will agree to these proposals or if it will be implemented worldwide.

When looking at the trade concerns of developing countries, it seems clear that Hope for a Global Future was and still is right in its conclusion, “Trade rules that enable affluent nations to profit at the expense of poor nations or that do not contribute substantially to the reduction of poverty in all nations cannot be accepted ethically” (p.26).

b. U.S. Perspectives on International Trade

The plural in “perspectives” is important because there is no single, national viewpoint. In recent decades, both Democratic and Republican administrations have been leaders in efforts to liberalize the global trade environment to allow a freer flow of goods, services, and investments. That has not been a hard position to take given the general advantages that trade brings to the U.S. national economy. Not all those affected, however, share in that general economic benefit. Congress, being more sensitive to local economic concerns, has been more divided.

Much of the national debate about trade in recent years has focused on ratification of hemispheric agreements negotiated by the White House. The NAFTA (North American Free Trade Agreement) was finally approved by Congress in 1993 after a long and fractious political struggle and became the model for creating special trade ties with other countries in the hemisphere and beyond. The goal was to eliminate tariffs and other trade barriers, establishing a common set of rules that could not be superseded by the laws or actions of any one country. Proponents insisted that NAFTA would have dramatic, positive effects for the Mexican economy and for consumers in all three countries without adversely affecting U.S. agriculture and manufacturing. Critics in the United States insisted that NAFTA, as negotiated, would greatly increase the mobility and flexibility of U.S. corporations, undercut environmental standards, provide an incentive for moving production jobs from the U.S. to Mexico, weaken U.S. commitments to good working conditions and workplace safety by creating competition with sweatshop conditions abroad, and force down wages in U.S. manufacturing by facilitating trade with unequal partners.

After ten years of NAFTA, there is still no resolution to these conflicting perspectives, but the following data are significant: (Data from official U.S. and Mexican sources cited in Sarah Anderson and John Cavanagh, “Rethinking the NAFTA Record,” Institute for Policy Studies, Washington D.C., October 2004)

- Total trade among the three countries has more than doubled;
- Net direct foreign investment in Mexico has increased fivefold;
- The value of Mexican exports to the United States has increased almost threefold;
- Mexican manufacturing wages declined by 9 percent while productivity rose by nearly 50 percent;
- The small United States trade surplus with Mexico in 1994 fell to a $40.6 billion deficit in 2004. (U.S. exports grew slightly, but those of Mexico grew far more);
- Wages in the United States have increased only slightly despite low unemployment and high corporate profits;
- More than 400,000 U.S. workers have qualified for NAFTA trade adjustment benefits;
- Mexican immigration to the United States has remained high with funds sent back to their families a major stimulus to the Mexican economy.

None of this is to indicate that NAFTA is the sole cause of such realities. There are undoubtedly many factors involved. But such data indicates that NAFTA has fallen far short of its promised benefits to the three countries that are signatories.

Despite this mixed record, the United States government has not slowed its attempt to expand NAFTA-like arrangements to other areas. After contentious debate, the U.S. Senate narrowly approved the Central America Free Trade Agreement (CAFTA) as one step further south. The Andean-FTA negotiations are following the same lines, and the logic would be fulfilled by the Free Trade Area of the Americas (FTAA), which would make the whole hemisphere (minus Cuba) a single trade zone. Discussions began in 2003 for the United States-South Africa Customs Union free trade area (U.S.-SACU FTA) to extend the bilateral and multilateral agreement strategy to other areas of the world.

With each extension, the resistance to ratification has stiffened. Large-scale U.S. agriculture interests argue for protection of such crops as sugar, soybeans, and cotton from cheaper production areas. Workers continue to fear that wages and jobs are threatened by unfair labor practices in some countries, and that gets a political hearing in states and congressional districts that are doing poorly in the globalizing economy. Textile manufacturers want their U.S. markets protected. Many environmentalists are concerned that hard-won standards will be lost if adequate safeguards are not included in the trade agreements. Economists of almost all stripes worry increasingly about the effect on the national economy of a growing trade and balance of payments deficit, an issue dominated currently far more by concerns about trade with China than with other countries.

The General Assembly of the PC(USA) opposed NAFTA and CAFTA as originally negotiated. Hope for a Global Future captured the underlying concern in a single sentence, “The goal is not free trade, but just and sustainable trade” (p.26). In the end, most criticisms and fears about the push for liberalizing trade come down to the question of whether the sharing of potential benefits needs to be shaped and directed or whether we can simply trust the workings of an unfettered market alone to serve fairly the interests of all. Various General Assemblies have shown little confidence that unguided economic mechanisms will shape a just society. That spirit was captured in the 2003 assembly’s statement on the Free Trade Area of the Americas:

[The assembly] demand[s] that all trade agreements incorporate workers rights, human rights, food safety, and environmental standards, and that they allow governments and sovereign indigenous peoples to regulate corporations to protect the common good. (Minutes, Part I, 2003, p. 618)

Optimal exchange occurs between societies that share similar social and economic goals and institutions. Critics of the U.S. strategy of merely expanding the number of bilateral and multilateral trade relationships maintain that it fails precisely because the focus is solely on moving goods, services, and money. Many point to the approach of the European Union (EU) as a more sound strategy because it is based upon the assumption of a much broader social commitment. European Union states are to comply with high standards on labor rights, gender equity, racial discrimination, health, safety, and environmental issues. By setting a floor of expectation for the region’s social and environmental policies, the EU has tried to encourage a high-road path to development instead of facilitating competition based on exploiting conflicting and weak standards in individual states. Though not yet legally binding, these standards are invoked in EU directives and regulations that are to be reflected in national legislation (Sarah Anderson and John Cavanagh, “After the FTAA: Lessons from Europe for the Americas,” Foreign Policy in Focus, June 23, 2005, International Relations Center and Institute for Policy Studies, Washington, D.C.).

The position of the faith community regarding trade agreements and other economic issues is rooted in lifting up the vision of a just, compassionate, and environmentally sustainable society as the model of global community that should be pursued in all types of international relationships.

2. Private International Investment

The step from international trade to foreign corporate investment is natural and unavoidable in our global economy. More than one-third of all U.S. imports and exports, for example, occur between divisions and subsidiaries of the same company. That creates a circumstance where “trade” is less an exchange between countries than an exercise in the internal logic of enterprise about how goods should be priced and where profits will be allowed to accumulate to reduce tax liability. Often that means taking advantage of weak governments, poor legislation, and desperate or venal public officials. When governments offer extraordinary tax incentives or exemption from environmental regulations to attract foreign corporations, their citizens and communities risk betrayal by greed, corruption, or misleading counsel in the guise of development advice or even economic theory.

Along with trade, private investment represents the other major factor in international economic relationships. On any given day, $1.2 trillion crosses national borders. Only a percent or so relates to long-term business investment. This small share is nevertheless a powerful force in the global economy. By far, most of these productive investments are made by a few hundred corporations.

In 1970, there were seven thousand transnational corporations (TNCs). Now there are 64,000 with 870,000 affiliates around the world. Most of those firms are relatively small, but the aggregate sales of the largest two hundred alone equals more than a quarter of the value of the world’s total output of goods and services. Comparing the national income of countries and the sales of large corporations, fifty-two of the world's one hundred largest economic actors are corporations; only forty-eight are countries (op. cit., Anderson and Cavanagh, p.38). Although national income figures and corporate sales figures are not totally comparable, such comparisons still give a sense of the importance of transnational corporations in the global economy.

Most of this foreign investment results from the companies of one rich country operating in another rich country. France, Germany, Japan, the United Kingdom, and the United States account for almost two-thirds of the assets of transnational corporations abroad. Even so, almost one-third of these investments are made in less developed countries. Foreign investment flows fell sharply after the stock bubble burst in 2000 but picked up again in 2004. The so-called emerging economies received $279 billion, an increase of 32 percent from the year before and the highest level since 1997. That amount far exceeds the $47.8 billion in development aid of all sorts and from all sources (The World Factbook, CIA, Washington, DC, March 2005).

Not surprisingly, investment by transnational corporations has been highly sought by developing countries desperately seeking ways to create jobs, gain access to modern technology, and garner a larger share of money to be made from the sale of products in the world market. A handful of countries, mostly in Asia, have captured most of that investment over the years. Currently China and India rank number one and two as the location of foreign investment in manufacturing (The Economist, January 22, 2005, p. 106).

But transnational corporations are not development organizations. Their decisions about where and how much to invest are driven by determinations about how to profit from the location of raw materials, the cost of labor, gaining access to developing country markets, and utilizing favorable tax structures. Thus, the corporate interests can be antithetical to the espoused goals of countries involved. Developing nations may want jobs, but wherever TNCs produce they tend to use the same labor-saving technologies developed for their home markets. Developing countries may seek a toehold in the world of modern technology, but corporations have a vested interest in preserving proprietary knowledge. Developing countries seek tax revenues while corporations want to minimize tax liability and may facilitate that by using third-country tax havens to shelter earnings from realistic taxation anywhere.

The issue in all this is not illegality or corporate mal-intent but the mismatch of goals. This creates opportunities for transnational corporations to root themselves in the cracks between nation states where mechanisms to safeguard the public good do not exist. More than thirty years ago, Richard Barnet and Ronald Muller argued that TNCs represent the first serious attempt to rationalize the world economy (Global Reach, Simon & Schuster, NY, 1974). Changes since then have done nothing to undermine that assertion. One noteworthy shift is that no longer do all transnational firms hale from rich countries. The World Bank estimates that companies from developing countries made $40 billion of foreign direct investment in 2004. Following the pattern of older transnational corporations, about two-thirds of those investments are in advanced industrial countries and one-third in less developed countries like themselves. Many of these new transnationals, like the old, use global tax minimization strategies to enlarge and shelter their profits. A report by the United Nations Commission on Trade and Development (UNCTAD), for example, notes that about two-thirds of Brazil's $53 billion of overseas investments in 2002 was to be found in bank havens like the Cayman Islands, the Bahamas, and the British Virgin Islands. Economic development is occurring, but the quest for corporate profitability clearly takes precedence over the needs of poor countries and peoples.

The global vision of many transnational firms is one that makes company interests paramount and seeks to build a world to accommodate itself. If we choose a world where the effects of this kind of self-interested activity are minimized, the power of moral suasion may have some effect, but changing and enforcing the allowed standards of performance will likely be greater. In the end, the issue is that corporations, as in all human institutions, are driven by interests larger than those of individuals who manage them and therefore need to be governed by appropriate principles and structures. More about this in our discussion of governance.

3. International Finance

Nothing so exemplifies economic globalization as the huge growth of international financial markets. As noted previously, on average, $1.2 trillion moves across national borders every day, literally at the speed of light. That is a new reality of recent years that has had a variety of economic and social consequences—some unsettling, some perverse.

a. Capital Flows and Financial Stability

The idea and practice of the free flow of capital is not new. Indeed, a century ago it was the norm. The great worldwide depression of the 1930s ended that, and most countries placed limits on the purchase of foreign securities and how much their citizens could invest abroad. By the 1970s, the depression seemed a dim memory, and the vast amount of newly generated petrodollars that had to be recycled into the economy created pressures for a more liberal attitude toward global capital movements. Economic expansion was occurring in several countries, particularly in Asia, and American financial institutions wanted a larger share of the action and the profits. United States politicians were more than willing to accommodate. In 1985, President Reagan declared, “Our task is to knock down barriers to trade and foreign investment and the free movement of capital.” President George H.W. Bush built on that spirit in pressing Latin America for free and open capital markets as “crucial to achieving economic growth and lasting prosperity.” The Clinton Administration took that agenda and made it a worldwide goal, the universal economic solution, and the necessary standard for all countries of all sizes and of all circumstances (Nicholas D. Kristof with David E. Sanger, “How U.S. Wooded Asia to Let Cash Flow In,” February 16, 1999—Second of a four part New York Times series on “Global Contagion”).

Thus, the new economic world of the free movement of capital was born. Developing countries were encouraged by aid agencies and international institutions to finance long-term projects with international, hard currency loans, leaving governments vulnerable to a freefall in local currency devaluations. Hundreds of billions of dollars flowed into developing countries in just a few years with little concern about the need for them to reform, strengthen, or modernize their banking structures or increase government oversight. Without those changes, billions of dollars were just as free to flow out when property, stock, and export growth bubbles burst because they were built more on hopes akin to pyramiding schemes than on analysis. Foreign speculators registered huge profits and sought to protect them by pulling out of vulnerable countries like Indonesia, Thailand, and South Korea even at a huge financial and human cost to their people. That saved some of the speculators’ investments but it fueled an economic disaster for people and governments. Disillusioned by the experience in Asia, speculators soon began pulling finance capital out of most developing countries, including all of Latin America, even though conditions were quite different and on the whole more economically sound.

Calls for liberalization of international markets remain at the heart of U.S. foreign policy and few countries dare to venture into debate about increasing governmental controls over capital flows. The general explanation is that the markets have learned their lesson; governmental regulation is not necessary; investors are now more cautious. The same argument has been made before only to be followed by other market excesses when memory dims or the hunger for profit overwhelms sound judgment. Unless “learning our lesson” is accompanied by changes in the way markets are allowed to function, human greed will find ways to subvert their supposed self-correcting mechanisms.

It has often been suggested that market adjustments are needed to act as disincentives to speculative capital movements that threaten both economic development and banking institutions. One of the proposals much debated by economists and policy makers was made more than two decades ago by Nobel Laureate James Tobin. He posited that speculative investments would be far less attractive if a small transaction tax were placed on all international capital movements. (He suggested a tax of one-half to one percent.) Accumulated funds would be used to offset sudden capital outflows like the Asian contagion of the late 1990s and thus strengthen the international banking system. Others have suggested that an accumulation of funds beyond that need might be used to promote economic development in poor countries that are left undercapitalized by both private investment and multilateral aid.

Others insist that beyond such market-administered corrections, there is a need to take a step back from the principle of international trade liberalization and reassert the legitimacy of national or regional regulation, particularly of capital movements. A larger measure of stability in international finance will serve both more- and less-developed countries. Many observers worry greatly that even the United States is not sufficiently protected from the results of sudden capital movements. Two decades ago, the United States was the world’s largest creditor. Now it is the world’s largest debtor. The growing trade and balance of payments deficits are being financed heavily by foreign government holdings of U.S. government securities. Should any of the large foreign holders, such as China, decide to pull their money out, it might well precipitate a panic akin to that faced by Asia in the late 1990s. Economic globalization has a downside even for today’s apparent winners.

All this recalls the wisdom of the moral framework adopted by Hope for a Global Future: “No nation should responsibly tolerate totally free trade for it would permit economic enterprises to act independent of the social matrix of accountability... Governments, as the social instruments of order and justice, have the responsibility to establish rules that protect the common good from abuse” (op.cit., p.26).

b. Debt and Development Assistance

It has long been recognized that market structures alone will not end poverty and foster economic development in the poorest countries. As a result, for decades, governments, private banks, and multilateral financial institutions encouraged scores of poor countries to try to jumpstart their economies on borrowed money. The lenders paid scant attention when unsound economic advice, misdirected investment, and blatant corruption by bureaucrats, dictators, and their cronies made repayment of loans impossible without taking a devastating toll on the lives and hopes of ordinary people. Instead of recognizing the moral bankruptcy in that logic, new loans were made to pay interest on old loans to keep alive the fiction that the debts could be repaid. The price of denial has been incalculable human damage and the delaying of sound development in the countries most in need of it.

Many of the effects of the debt crisis have had a disproportionate effect on women. For instance, the promotion of export-oriented crops has privileged male farmers who engage in larger scale farming at the disadvantage of female farmers who tend to farm smaller plots of land for food for their families. Also, given the fact that women worldwide are disproportionately responsible for caregiving, government cutbacks on social service (prompted by structural adjustment loan requirements) such as healthcare, childcare, and maternity benefits significantly impacted women's workload and responsibilities.

Some critics—including our ecumenical partners, as noted in the 2004 document of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches—have argued that creating an un-payable debt-load for poor countries was not just bad judgment but a conscious strategy to strengthen domination of the global economy by powerful interests and institutions of the industrialized countries. This has been documented by John Perkins, business school graduate, covert operative for the U.S. National Security Council and overt employee of an international consulting firm. He promoted development projects in developing countries on borrowed money, most of which ended up as payments to large U.S. construction companies. That, he maintains, was the real purpose and result of massive loans to poor countries in the 1970s, '80s and '90s (Confessions of an Economic Hit Man, Berrett-Koehler, NY, 2004).

By 1997 more than forty American churches and development organizations joined the global Jubilee 2000 movement calling for outright cancellation of the debt of the poorest countries by the new millennium. That was unthinkable according to most officials in government treasury offices and at the International Monetary Fund (IMF) and World Bank. Their mantra was, "A debt is a debt, and it must be paid." It has taken almost a decade, but finally the denial is ending. There is a growing consensus that the debts cannot be repaid.

It is not enough, however, to end the burden of past debt. New financial resources must be made available to give hope and opportunity to the poorest countries. That, according to British Prime Minister Tony Blair, "is the fundamental moral challenge of our time." There is some encouraging evidence that message is reaching other policymakers and may be translated into programs that can make a difference.

The United Nations Millennium Development Goals to end extreme poverty and its program for their implementation are inspiring. But in the end, the U.N. must convince the governments of wealthy countries to commit the necessary funds to make it happen. Last year's G8 summit of industrialized countries made rhetorical commitments that will be meaningful if carried out. The promises add up to an additional $50 billion per year in aid (beyond the $79 billion provided in 2004 by the twenty-two largest donor nations). President Bush has said that the United States will provide $25 billion in additional aid to Africa, though he has registered doubts that the poorest countries can usefully spend such dramatic increases. Such ambivalence reflects a gap in commitment to do whatever is necessary to reduce poverty.

Despite these encouraging announcements, foreign development assistance provided by most of the rich countries still falls far below the long-standing U.N. target of 0.7 percent of gross domestic product. This is the level estimated to be necessary to alleviate poverty and launch genuine economic development with broad-based social benefits. The current average is 0.2 to 0.4 percent of GDP, representing a shortfall of about $100 billion per year below the modest U.N. target. Of twenty-two donor nations, only the five Scandinavian countries and Luxembourg are meeting the U.N. challenge. While the U.S. gives the largest amount of aid, it remains last as a percentage of national income, giving only 0.16 percent (less than one-sixth of one percent). President Bush has made verbal commitments that would improve that, but nothing becomes real until Congress appropriates the funds and the administration actually spends them. That may prove politically difficult when hurricane relief efforts, security concerns, and other domestic programs are pitted against international aid in the context of a growing federal budget deficit. The budget becomes a moral battleground between declared intention and actual performance as well as between powerful private interests and the common good.

For decades, some critics have maintained that the main reason the U.S. has a foreign assistance program is that it is a vehicle for promoting the sale of U.S. weapons, food, construction equipment, and technical services. A U.N. study (July 2005) confirms that most countries, including the United States, require that a major portion of aid funds be spent on purchases from the "donor" country. That results in poor countries having to pay 25 to 40 percent more for goods and services than if they were free to shop the world market ("Tied Aid Strangling Nations," Inter Press Service News Agency, July 6, 2005). Without these restrictions, the same level of aid would increase the amount of goods and services that can be acquired.

Clearly, if Americans agree with Prime Minister Tony Blair that ending extreme poverty in the world is "the fundamental moral challenge of our time," we need a great awakening.

c. A Footnote on Getting Capital to the Very Poor

It is right to lament the small amount of money rich countries share with poor countries when measured as a percentage of average income or of government revenues. But dispensing a $100 billion or so per year is no small task even when shared by agencies of a score of governments, the IMF, the World Bank, and numerous regional development banks. One of the dilemmas is that it takes about as much work on the part of lenders to process a million dollar loan as for a $1,000 loan. With the responsibility of moving hundreds of millions of dollars, loan officers in traditional banking institutions have a vested interest in dealing with fewer customers and larger loans. That means that it is difficult to get money into the hands of small businesses that have the best record of lifting families out of poverty.

That was the reality grasped by Professor Muhammad Yunus in Bangladesh three decades ago. First as an experiment and then as a formal institution, the Grameen Bank began lending small sums to the very poor who had no collateral and qualified for no help from ordinary banks, much less were they known to international lending institutions. Through 2004, the Grameen Bank has disbursed almost $500 million in loans to 3.8 million borrowers at little or no interest to establish small businesses. This model of micro-credit has been particularly helpful for addressing women's poverty with 96 percent of Grameen's small businesses owned by women. These loans are often offered to individual women or women's collectives to support the purchase of sewing machines or other supplies that enable women in poverty to create a small surplus of baked goods or clothing that helps to support her family. There has been a 99 percent repayment rate over the years and a small profit has been earned for the bank's depositors. Professor Yunus is quoted as saying, "There are 1.3 billion people on this planet who go through the extreme misery of poverty. If we could somehow bring credit to them, they would take charge of their own lives. They would take responsibility and change their own lives. Why don't we do it?" (Noted at a Brigham Young University website for a conference on micro-credit.)

The World Council of Churches embraced that vision and founded the Ecumenical Development Cooperative Society in 1975 to facilitate micro-credit lending. Today, under its new name, Oikocredit provides more than $1 million a year in small loans through four hundred project partners. This translates into capital for the very poor who would have no chance of obtaining a loan through commercial banks and would be thought to be poor risks at best. Nevertheless, Oikocredit experiences a 91- to 92-percent rate of payback. The loan funds come from investors, individuals, and churches, who make capital available at a sub-market rate of return. In twenty-eight years, every investor has recovered both principal and interest. But the best advertisement for micro-lending is the endless stream of stories of lives, families, and communities that have been changed for the better by having access to small amounts of credit.

Such stories are inspiring, but they should not be misapplied. Extending micro-credit from private sources to poor individuals is not a substitute for making large amounts of capital available to poor countries for projects of health, education, agricultural, and infrastructure development that serve the common good. Supporting productive international assistance involves both efforts to see that funds are properly used and that sufficient funds are provided by rich countries to make the transformation of economic life possible for entire nations.

E. Globalization—Issues in Transformation

It is beyond dispute that globalization is having a transformative effect on national economies, human societies, individual persons, and the creation itself. But transformation does not imply assured progress, nor do its benefits fall evenly upon all people and nations.

1. Economic Migration

Migration is older than history. It is so important in our faith history, from Abraham's journey out of Ur, to the prophets of the exile, to the Holy Family's flight to Egypt, that one writer speaks of "The Bible: The Ultimate Migration Handbook" (Joan M. Maruskin, Church & Society, July/August 2005). Under duress in one place, people, sometimes in vast numbers, have sought refuge elsewhere. Some have fled slavery, political persecution, or starvation. More have felt that life must surely be better somewhere else and made their way there.

One of the great asymmetries of economic reality is that even policymakers who vehemently insist on the unqualified benefits of free trade almost always limit it to the movement of goods and capital. The logic seldom extends to the free movement of labor. No country allows unrestricted entry to all. Still it is estimated that 175 million people, about 3 percent of the world's current population, have moved across country borders and stayed longer than twelve months. That number would likely increase if governments opened their borders and if the cost of travel did not keep millions more from trying their luck abroad. Even so, present numbers do not compare with the 10 percent of the world's population estimated to have emigrated in the 19th century (Jagdish Bhagwati, In Defense of Globalization, Oxford, NY, 2004, p. 209). The great bulk of these movements represent economic migration—the search for a better life, for work, for income. But the economic benefits are not limited to the workers themselves. Immigrants living in the United States in 2003 sent $41.1 billion back to families in their home countries. Worldwide such remittances amount to some $80 billion a year. That is an economic contribution to poor countries far greater than all forms of official development aid (World Bank, Global Development Finance 2003, Washington, 2004, p. 198).

There are more than fifteen million foreign workers in the United States, approximately 12 percent of the country's labor force (Mary M. Kritz and Douglas T. Gurak, "Immigration and a Changing America," Russell Sage Foundation, 2005, p.1). About one-third are here without official documentation. Some come with a plan to work and save for a few years and then return home with an economic stake to begin a new kind of life. Some actually fulfill that aspiration, but many others who came to make money find that they have made a life here. Somewhere else may still in some sense be the home of memory and of the heart, but self-identification has become entwined with their new homeland. Many take extraordinary risks to come here to work. The news media and our own churches and ministries in the Southwest remind us regularly of the hundreds who die each year in deserts or cargo containers trying to make their way to a job and surer future. Half of the undocumented persons in this country, however, did not sneak across our borders; they came in as perfectly legal tourists or students or workers who simply overstayed their visas and disappeared into U.S. society.

When we Americans think of economic migrants, the vision that most often comes to mind is that of laborers stooping in fields, mowing lawns, cleaning houses and offices, waiting tables, doing construction. But many immigrants, legal and otherwise, do endure great hardships without legal recourse. That is only part of the migration story. Doctors, nurses, medical technicians, engineers, computer specialists, and other highly skilled workers have become an increasingly important part of the immigrant labor force. Like many other countries, the United States has made it much easier for the highly skilled to gain legal entry to work than for the poor and untrained. Emma Lazarus' sentiment on the pedestal of the Statue of Liberty, "...Give me your tired, your poor, your huddled masses yearning to breathe free..." is no longer the message of U.S. immigration, nor of any other rich industrial country for that matter. There is a strong preference for those who bring skills that can boost the national advantage in today's global economy.

In light of these comments, it is tempting to argue that economic migration is generally a win-win scenario: American employers get the help they need, often at a much lower price; foreign workers gain a better wage; families "back home" gain spending power; home country governments gain a larger tax base; willing skilled workers from abroad strengthen the U.S. economy by filling in deficiencies in the labor pool; immigrant workers even pay U.S. taxes of various sorts. The problem, of course, is that nothing has been said about American workers.

Employers often argue that immigrant labor only takes jobs Americans do not want or where there are not enough persons with the requisite skills to fill the available positions. To that American workers, or their unions, might respond, "Pay a living wage for those jobs and many of them would be filled. Stop employers from using a worker's illegal status as a weapon; protect immigrant workers from exploitation, and they too will insist on better wages and working conditions. American workers ought not to be forced to compete against workers from countries so poor or unjust that any U.S. wage above mere subsistence is a bonanza."

The L-1 visa program is another example of immigration law undercutting American labor. It allows companies abroad to transfer employees from overseas to branches or subsidiaries in the United States where they may legally be contracted out to other American companies. Critics note that in many instances they are actually replacements for more demanding U.S. workers (Becky Gillette, "Foreign Workers, U.S. jobs a complicated mix," Mississippi Business Journal, November 10-16, 2003, p.1). More commonly, the magnet of American higher education brings highly skilled, foreign-born persons into the U.S. labor market. More than 70 percent of international students who earn a Ph.D. here remain in the United States. This may be a boon to American productivity, but the home countries see it from the other side as a brain drain that takes away highly skilled persons, undercuts the national development of their homeland, and delays the country's repositioning in the global economy.

In 1980 the Presbyterian Church in the United States (PCUS) General Assembly adopted a statement on "Labor Relations" with these among its principles: for all persons the opportunity and responsibility for productive work; for all persons the right to be paid adequately and treated with fairness and dignity; the right of all workers, except those on whom national or community security depends, to join labor organizations and participate in collective bargaining; and the necessity for the church to view economic issues from the side of the lowly and oppressed. Those principles are still valid and should not be abandoned in the face of a surge of labor from abroad.

2. American Jobs

The greater transformation that globalization has brought to the labor market relates to production abroad of goods for the U.S. market and the outsourcing of service functions and jobs to other countries.

The production of goods internationally by American companies for import into the United States is not new. United States firms establishing export platforms in countries with low cost labor like Mexico, South Korea, or Indonesia goes back for more than thirty years and now accounts for more than 40 percent of U.S. imports. Newer is the highly successful business model of major U.S. merchandisers contracting with companies abroad to produce virtually their entire line of in-house brands. The rapid growth of such relationships has depended on highly developed technologies of communication and transportation that did not exist previously. The result of these developments has been an erosion of U.S. jobs in manufacturing, information services, and high-tech design and science-related sectors.

Globalization is forcing a restructuring of the American labor market to accommodate this transformation of the American economy. It has been and still is a painful process. For decades manufacturing plants have anchored the economies of neighborhoods, small towns, and cities. When a plant moves, entire communities are devastated. Lacking employment alternatives, workers often depart, causing local businesses to lose customers and towns to lose their tax base. This wrenching adjustment process began in the 1980s and continues today.

The manufacturing sector, especially in the north, was highly unionized. Thus, the loss of industrial jobs has contributed to the decline in the percentage of workers organized in unions. As the power of unions has decreased, their ability to voice worker interests and to influence national policies on income distribution, social safety nets, and workplace standards has been weakened. In the process, the lower socioeconomic population in our society has lost an important platform for participating in the give and take of democratic debate on issues of national interest.

Some companies that have thus far maintained their plants in the United States have used the threat of moving production overseas as leverage to reduce wages and benefits while resisting labor organization. When workers consider establishing a local union, more than 70 percent of employers in the manufacturing sector respond by threatening to close the plant (Kate Bronfanbrennar, "Uneasy Terrain: The Impact of Capital Mobility on Workers, Wages and Union Organizing." Report for the U.S. Trade Deficit Review Commission, Washington, D.C., September 6, 2000).

The withering of the manufacturing sector and decline of workers' bargaining power are important factors in explaining why the number of good jobs in the United States continues to fall in spite of the country's growing economy, higher levels of education among American workers, and increasing labor productivity. An October 2005 study found that only 25 percent of jobs in this country can be considered "good jobs," defined as paying at least $32,000 a year and offering health care and pension benefits. Poverty rates in America are rising in large part because 75 percent of the jobs generated by our strong economy are not good jobs (John Schmitt, "How Good Is the Economy at Creating Good Jobs?" Center for Economic Policy Research, Washington, D.C., 2005, p. 3).

Job loss and income erosion are not just a phenomenon of the manufacturing sector. In the past decade, new information technologies have enabled a rapid rise in outsourcing of services by U.S. businesses. We have grown accustomed to the interesting accents of person on the telephone, as airline reservations are as likely to be handled by someone in India or Jamaica as in a U.S. hub city. Medical and legal recordkeeping is on a similar path. Elderly patients in New York City may now be reminded to take their medicines by someone using a beeper system from half a world away. Computer data entry is being shifted via the Internet from rich countries to poor countries where labor is cheap for people who do not speak English well but who can type the letters of its alphabet rapidly and accurately. Sophisticated software design can now be done in India for a fraction of the cost of similar work in the U.S.

Most of us marvel at the technology that makes such things possible and enjoy the cost saving it brings but seldom think about Americans whose jobs have been lost in the transition. When only manufacturing jobs were at stake, the conventional wisdom was that displaced workers would be employed elsewhere in the vibrant U.S. economy. Most do find work but often at lower pay, reduced pension benefits, or less medical coverage. Millions of workers, especially older ones, never recover from this experience. Studies by the Institute for International Economics (IIE) conclude that the lifetime cost to a worker affected by trade-related job loss is about $240,000 (Gary Clyde Hufbauer and Paul L.E. Grieco, "The Payoff from Globalization," Op-Ed, Washington Post, June 7, 2005). Now that globalization is displacing a broader range of service, technical, and professional personnel, we can soon expect to see the same human scenario of loss played out at higher income levels.

These studies conclude with this moral and policy challenge to the American public: "The past three decades of trade liberalization and economic integration have proceeded without much government involvement... In a democratic society, the winners may well need to compensate the losers..." (Job Loss from Imports: Measuring the Costs," IIE, Washington, D.C.). Compensating losers in the creative destruction of globalization is good and necessary, but it is not enough. What is required is a new vision for the whole society in which jobs for all and rising incomes at the bottom become priorities of the national economy, the U.S. government and the American people.

Labor, corporate America, and government must leave behind the old model of assuming that a fair sharing of economic benefits will emerge most efficiently from an unending struggle among them. Instead, workers, employers, investors, and government must think together about how best to shape a future that will bring a more just distribution of benefits to our society. Job re-training, lifelong learning incentives, and trade adjustment assistance should be part of this discussion. Unions and government may need to reframe their objectives, and consequently their roles, in response to the human welfare challenges of globalization. Progress in this area would enable our country to become a more creative and compassionate participant in the emerging global society that no single set of interests and no one country can be allowed to dominate.

3. Workers and Workplaces in Poor Countries

a. Corporations and Sweatshops

Corporations have long engaged in a global search for lower labor costs that will translate into lower prices, improved profit performance and bigger markets. Export platforms in low wage areas have resulted in lost manufacturing jobs in the U.S. and new work opportunities in some countries abroad. More than a few companies have made it part of their business model to resist raising wages by moving to wherever they can produce equally well and less expensively. Mass merchandisers, who do not want to risk public disgrace by being involved directly in sweatshop production, may count on contracting with local owners or third-country suppliers who will drive even harder bargains with labor than they might themselves. Not all production for the global market comes from sweatshops, but the wages and working conditions in many situations can only be described as draconian. Are they worse than other options in those countries? Probably not, and often export platforms become a magnet for workers because they are considered a better opportunity than the next best alternative in that country. However, if we are to have a global system of production, that is not enough. It should be based upon the progress of workers over the last hundred years in the most progressive countries and not upon an attempt to retreat from those improvements. As rich country consumers, we have the moral right to be assured that our lifestyle and the profits of companies in our society will not be subsidized by unfair wages and unsafe or inhumane working conditions.

Some companies have sought to disassociate themselves from the sweatshop image by adopting corporate codes of conduct that pledge more enlightened ways. That may be progress, but whether and how such codes are actually enforced in workplaces abroad is a crucial issue. Some firms have accepted the challenge that outside groups, including some church-related organizations, must be given full workplace access to verify compliance not only with the law but with the company's professed code.

For example, in Central America, a nonprofit organization called COVERCO (Commission for the Verification of Codes of Conduct) works with clothing company GAP and audits its subcontractors, reporting violations and suggesting remedies. According to a GAP executive interviewed for this report, the result is improving their "bottom line" because when the workers are more satisfied with working conditions, their productivity and quality of work rises.

b. Child Labor

It is hard to know whether the situation of child labor is better or worse than revealed in an International Labor Organization (ILO) study of a decade ago. In reporting it, the Wall Street Journal (November 12, 1996) title alone is staggering, "Estimate of Child-Labor Levels Triples" over previous assumptions. Some 250 million children between the ages of 5 and 14 are at work in developing countries, almost half working full-time. Globalization didn't create this situation, but clearly it has not diminished it either. Most children work in agriculture, not in family gardens but producing for markets including export from the cane fields of El Salvador, the cotton fields of Egypt, and the cacao plantations of Africa. Others labor in mines and seldom see the light of day. Tens of thousands more children are involved in sewing rugs, soccer balls, clothing, and countless other items for international markets. Darkest of all, tens of thousands more each year are abducted or sold into the virtual slavery of bonded labor and end up tied to machines, sent abroad as household servants, subcontracted out as street beggars, or channeled into prostitution.

In some parts of the world, children may be sent into bonded labor for as little as a $15 upfront payment to parents; many never accumulate enough to buy their children back. Wages for these child workers are often eaten up by withholdings for room and board and fines for slow work or production errors. What begins as scandalously low-wage labor too often ends as life indistinguishable from slavery.

How can this happen? And how can it be changed? Most experts agree that the cycle begins with the destitution of parents who have no land, no marketable skills, and no reliable job. They are so poverty stricken that the small income stream from children at work often seems the only way to stave off deprivation of the entire family or even starvation. Many assume that, as promised by contractors, children sent to far away cities or abroad are receiving a better opportunity than if they had stayed with families. Employers sometimes claim that a child's small size and nimble fingers qualify them for work adults could not do as well. But as the ILO's expert on child labor says, "Employers are willing to hire children not only because they are cheaper but because they are more docile" (Wall Street Journal, November 12, 1996). That is, children do not know enough to protest their exploitation—the pittance paid, the wages withheld, the dangerous working conditions, and being cast aside when no longer of use.

Most experts agree that the world's scandal of child labor will be resolved only when poverty stricken families have better options. Attempts to purge child labor from the global market by sanctions alone will not suffice. There is an equal need for incentives that are at least as great as those that child employers promise.

c. Women in the Global Workforce

Economic globalization's impact on women has been both extraordinary and troubling. Our global production and marketing system has brought with it a vast expansion of women working outside the home for pay. In many countries that is nothing short of a cultural revolution that, at the personal level, millions of women have found profoundly liberating.

Personal income not only allows personal consumption; it also confers new prestige for daughters in traditional societies that have usually regarded sons as the best hope for economic security. That millions more women are now earning paychecks is not just a personal matter. In most developing countries, family cohesiveness regards an income for any family member as a benefit to all. Typically, daughters who work are more dutiful than sons in sending money home.

Women now make up 1.1 billion of the world's 2.8 billion paid workforce, and their number has increased by more than 18 percent in the past ten years. Growth has been especially strong among young women in developing countries. That is not mere happenstance. Like child workers, women can be hired for less and counted on to be more docile than men. With fewer economic options, young women may value their jobs more than most men and thus do what they must to keep them. For many that has meant enduring sexual harassment from male supervisors, lower wages than men, and a firmly fixed glass ceiling that allows little room for advancement.

The prevalence of economic, sexual, and physical abuse of women workers is far greater when they enter domestic service. That is particularly so if it involves going to another country where being foreign only adds to a woman's vulnerability to abuse of all sorts. In the extreme, recruitment for work abroad is too often a ruse for placing young women into brothels. The growth of sex tourism as a part of the dark side of globalization has made trafficking in women for prostitution a growth industry.

Globalization is not directly responsible for creating these conditions that affect women so significantly and so negatively. But business firms have too often allowed and profited from them, and governments have too often been indifferent. It is fair to say that neither public nor private entities have done enough to change the reality. Crafting ways to minimize globalization's negative impact on women and to maximize its potential benefits is the work of our time. Not to do so will continue to deprive the whole world of the industry and creativity of half the human society being shunted aside in many countries. But that cannot be the work of the western or economically dominant peoples or nations alone. It must be an effort that reaches across cultural divides.

4. Cultural Diversity vs. Homogenization

The expansion of global production models and global markets has long been paralleled by fear that it comes only at the price of people embracing the culture of the dominant countries. An example of the dilemma is the impact of globalization on indigenous peoples. Critics charge that the constant search for land and resources by firms producing for export has pushed indigenous peoples further and further into forests to preserve their traditional ways, or forced them to "modernize," perhaps even taking jobs with the companies and making them partners in despoliation. Either way, their culture is forever changed and perhaps disappears entirely. How one feels about that depends on whether either modernity or culture preservation is regarded as a universal value. Some scholars and activists who worry about the genocide of cultures insist that economic interests must not have free reign in restructuring societies.

This is the extreme example, but in some sense, every country has traditions, mores and institutions that are threatened by the rules and homogenizing potential of globalization.

- The emergence of mega-malls in poor as well as rich countries does not mean that the world is one but that those who have the buying power to participate may have created class bonds stronger than those of nation, language, religion, or history.

- English is the common parlance of global commerce from trade agreements to computer software, and its adoption affects most of the world. Many of those who must adapt see the introduction of English for commercial convenience as a devaluation of their own culture.

- Media giants package news for sale to global markets and in the process determine what people in vastly different circumstances will focus on as important and often shapes their perspective as well.

- The American-dominated TV and film industry provides engaging entertainment that often embodies moral and cultural values at odds with those espoused in much of the world—individuality over community and family, indulgent sexuality over restraint, nudity over modesty, and violence as both problem and solution in modern society. Domestic producers in many countries fear being snuffed out by the sheer power of Hollywood. Some countries have reacted strongly to preserve a place for their own industries. France established a 10 percent cinema surtax to use as a subsidy for French filmmaking. South Korea went to a quota system that required movie houses to screen Korean films at least 146 days per year (Bhagwati, p.177). Such actions are technically against World Trade Organization (WTO) rules, and U.S. officials have made threats against countries that fail to open their movie and TV screens fully to American productions.

- Singapore is the quintessentially ordered society. A few years ago, it outlawed chewing gum as a public nuisance only to be forced by the WTO to rescind the ban on grounds that it was an illegal restraint of trade.
- Food and culture purists everywhere deride McDonalds, yet it leaps cultural barriers in a single bound in establishing itself as a business icon in virtually every part of the world.

Such examples might seem merely quaint if they were not symbols of deep underlying concerns.

- Will western production styles change the nature of religion in Muslim countries by making the obligatory five-times-per-day prayer ritual difficult if not impossible to observe?
- Will trade rules ultimately compel countries to accept irradiated or genetically modified foods as the price of membership in the WTO even if there are cultural, economic, and environmental and health reasons to oppose them?
- Is it inescapable that the western ideal of individualism will ultimately replace extended family loyalties and communitarian models of ownership and use?
- Will the pressure of economic privatization and capital requirements disallow state ownership in the development of key industries like oil, mining, and utilities?
- Will “democratization” demand the embracing of minimalist government with little or no official role for social and economic planning?
- Must participating in globalization mean trusting in free markets to mediate effectively and fairly all human concerns that have an economic dimension?

Those are not only questions of today’s developing countries. In many ways they embody concerns of the churches about the allocation of power in society and about how much confidence to place in powerful institutions, whether economic or political. That is an issue taken up more fully in a later section of this statement on governance. A study on Globalization and Culture prepared for the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) begins with this sentence: “The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) affirms cultural diversity as a matter of conviction and modesty” (Ruy O. Costa, 2003, p.1). The notion of modesty is important. It is a reminder that we have a theological bias against giving absolute status to institutions or social theories—even our own. Compelling cultural conformity or closing out options are risks to be avoided. Cultural diversity is a gift that should not be bartered away in the name of globalization.

5. Stewardship of the Environment

No topic is more germane to globalization than the stewardship of the natural environment. The earth’s regenerative capacity and its ability to sustain life as we know it is called into question more and more each day. General Assemblies have frequently addressed environmental themes. Of particular note are the 1990 statement, “On Restoring Creation for Ecology and Justice” and the 1996 document Hope for a Global Future. The range and gravity of the issues has not diminished, and our Reformed faith has not altered its commitment to just human relationships within a sustainable environment.

a. Population and Consumption

Global population did not rise to one billion people until about 1800. There are now 6.5 billion people in the world. That is projected to rise to 8.8 billion in twenty years and to more than 10 billion by 2037 (World Population Clock). And, from now until the year 2030, virtually all that growth will be in the so-called less developed countries. Scholars and activists have worried for decades about how many people the earth can sustain. What regularly escapes notice is that consumption in countries like ours is having an even greater impact on the environment than added numbers of people. The 1.3 billion of the world’s population who live in the developed nations account for 86 percent of total private consumption expenditures while the remaining 5.3 billion people make do with the other 14 percent. Strikingly, the poorest 20 percent of the world’s population gets only 1.3 percent of total consumption expenditures (U.N. Human Development Report 1998).

What this all means is that the world can’t afford many more people like us. The math is eye-opening. It takes six hectares of land per person (approximately fifteen acres) to maintain a U.S.-European consumption style. The problem is that there are only 1.7 hectares of productive land for each person now living (Richard Robbins, Global Problems and the Culture of Capitalism, Allyn and Bacon, 1999). Furthermore, lumping American consumers together with others is deceptive. For instance, if we look only at energy consumption, one of the most crucial factors in economic development, the average American not only uses 309 times what the average Ethiopian uses, or twenty-six times the average Indian, or thirteen times the average Colombian, but twice as much as the average German—one of the world's richest countries (Measured by per capita Btu use in 2003 as reported by the Energy Information Administration, U.S. Department of Energy, www.eia.doe.gov).

What is truly alarming is that the amount and style of American consumption is being exported as part of the model of globalization. People are learning to consume differently. Our example and advertising are taking hold almost everywhere. While imitation may be the sincerest form of flattery, it is in this case also a threat to the ecosystem. The Worldwatch Institute estimates that there are now 1.7 billion members of “the consumer class,” i.e., people who can afford to buy regularly in the global shopping mall. Half of those live in the developing world. India and China are the new wonders of the economic age, and only a small percentage of that third of humanity have made the transition to life defined by consumption. What will it mean when the majority joins in and when other countries do likewise? Yet development as we know it depends precisely on that happening.

A quarter century or so ago, issues like these were prominent on the agenda of the church and the larger society. A decade of extraordinary economic growth and half a decade of national security turmoil and war have diverted our attention. Perhaps it is time again to find our voice about the ethics of population and consumption in the stewardship of a sustainable earth. That is the challenge to our denomination by the World Alliance of Reformed Churches: “We invite member churches to receive and respond to our common witness...[which declares in part] We reject the culture of rampant consumerism and the competitive greed and selfishness of the neoliberal global market system, or any other system, which claims there is no alternative” (“Covenanting for Justice in the Economy and the Earth,” Accra, Ghana, July 3–August 13, 2004).

b. Pollution and Resources

Around the world and throughout history, economic enterprise has regarded the environment as a free-good, an inexhaustible source of supplies with an unlimited capacity to absorb waste and toxicity. Each day makes it more evident that it is not true. The 1996 General Assembly policy statement Hope for a Global Future expressed the deep concern of the church about the degradation of the environment resulting from massive failures to handle the problem of pollution as a truly global reality. It laid down the principle that “If all people on this planet are moral equals, responsibilities cannot stop at the water’s edge.” Good national policies are not sufficient if our economic activity elsewhere fouls the earth from some other place and puts the lives of poor people in poor countries disproportionately at risk because no one is watching or insisting on higher performance. One suggestion made in the 1996 statement was that firms should be required to do full-cost pricing. “The true costs of production should be measured to include not only the usually reported costs of a business or governmental entity, but also the costs of externalities that damage the environment and may lead to countervailing public expenditures for, say, health-care and clean-up costs” (p.49). Ten years later, it is important to note that there has been no evident progress toward that goal.

It may also be time to consider a corollary of full-cost pricing. We are accustomed to a market system that rewards countries for the rapid exploitation of resources. We have not yet grasped the need for designing economic mechanisms to support decisions not to exploit especially crucial areas. For example, the Brazilian rainforest may possess up to half of all life species thought to exist. Through its varied and abundant vegetation it also produces a vast amount of the earth’s oxygen supply. Yet, there is no serious international effort to find ways to entice Brazil into nondestructive uses of this area. From a moral perspective, it would be ideal for the Brazilian government to undertake the sacrifice as an offering of love to God and the human family. But that will not happen. No one people can be expected to bear such economic and political costs alone. If the nonuse or controlled-use of resources in such regions is important to global well-being, there must be mechanisms designed to help share the burden among the human population best able to bear it. Hope for a Global Future put the issue aptly, “A new strategy must be found to engage the developing world in a full and trusting partnership to ensure the protection and rejuvenation of biological diversity”(p.55). We are a long way from making globalization a trusting partnership of peoples and their governments.

c. Climate Change

The most politically visible attempt to take a global approach to a major environmental issue was the U.N. protocol on Climate Change initiated in Kyoto, Japan, in 1997. Eventually signed by 141 countries, it entered into force in 2005 and commits the industrial nations of the world to a 5.2 percent reduction of greenhouse gas emissions by 2012. Each of those countries agreed to specific targets and dates of compliance. The United States, which contributes more than a quarter of all greenhouse gases to the atmosphere, and Australia were not among the signers. One of the first acts of the Bush administration upon entering office in 2001 was to withdraw from the Kyoto process. (An earlier Senate vote had failed to ratify U. S. signing of the protocol.) President Bush said at the time: “I will not accept a plan that will harm our economy and hurt American workers.” Later elaboration made clear the administration’s rejection of the idea that developing countries should be even temporarily exempted from making reductions in their polluting activities. In other words, we reserve the right to exempt ourselves even as we insist that others be held accountable.

Less than six months after Kyoto entered into force without the United States, the Bush Administration, in July 2005, announced a separate agreement among six countries—the U.S., Australia, China, India, South Korea, and Japan—to combat global warming through promotion of clean energy technologies. This is regarded by most of the world’s environmental community and many political observers as only a gesture designed more to counter international criticism of the U.S. and Australia than to contribute to clean air. Two factors make it hard to take the action seriously. First, there are no specific commitments; no targets, no benchmarks, no timetables. In other words, each country is free to act or not act as its short-term economic and political interests are best served. (Japan, however, as a signer of Kyoto is committed to a 6 percent reduction of greenhouse gases.) That is not an approach that inspires confidence given the poor record of voluntary compliance for the sake of the world when there are sacrifices to be made.

Second, the six-nation agreement is based on cooperating to invent, develop, and sell technologies that will reduce air pollutants. Clearly, such technologies will be needed as a part of long-term transformation. But that need not undercut immediate results that can be had from changes in consumer lifestyle and widespread adoption of cleaner production technologies that already exist. Particularly unnerving is that nuclear power facilities are considered along with wind, solar, hydropower, and geothermal power as desirable technologies. Given the still unresolved dilemmas about the centuries-long, absolutely secure storage required for nuclear waste and growing anxieties about nuclear proliferation, that seems an unsafe and unwise decision. Furthermore, this approach ultimately depends on commercial markets as the best and most reliable arbiter of the most far-reaching social decision humanity is called upon to make. General Assemblies of the church have often acknowledged the important role markets can play in allocating resources efficiently, but that has not been assumed to mean that buyers and sellers can be expected to take into full account the interests of all humanity, all generations, and all creation.

F. Technology and the Ownership of Ideas

Globalization is not an alternative word for international activity. It is not just about trade across national boundaries or the availability of goods from far away. Nor does globalization mean cosmopolitanism—feeling comfortable with people from other places, the ability to speak other languages, experiencing international travel, and enjoying various ethnic cuisines. Such realities have long existed, at least for some. Globalization is a new way of thinking about the world and relating to it; technology is its nervous system. It is what allows and promotes the first realistic attempt to engage in global, real-time management of money, production systems, and marketing strategies, as well as the daily experience of news, entertainment, and cross-cultural expression. That does not mean that we all consciously choose that kind of globalization; nevertheless, it is the reality that in many ways affects the lives of almost everyone everywhere.

It is more than symbolic that globalization as a new way of thinking about the world began less than fifty years ago with the invention of the semiconductor chip whose etched electronic pathways are consciously brain-like. The microchip is both the hardware and symbol of the technology that is creating globalization. As with other transforming technologies of the past, however, the impacts are uneven and often unfair. Much of globalization is about ideas and information, who has access to them, and who owns them. This is essentially the debate over intellectual property rights, an already contentious issue destined to be even more so until resolved by international agreement.

Here we reflect on three technology-related globalization issues with social and moral significance.

1. Food and Agriculture

General Assemblies have frequently expressed deep concern about the need to develop and protect an agricultural system that provides an adequate, safe, and locally acceptable food supply for all of the world’s people, and to do so in ways that are environmentally sustainable. Those statements have contained measured criticisms of: the growing domination of the food sector by huge agribusiness corporations and trading companies; a push for cash crops over production for local consumption; large scale agriculture that squeezes out small farm operators and makes rural communities unviable; chemically destructive approaches to cultivation; pesticide usage with poisonous effects on human beings and the ecosystem; water-intensive agriculture that endangers water tables and imposes shortages on the rest of society. We acknowledge and affirm those criticisms while focusing on other issues that are particularly relevant to the present globalization debate and that have received less attention from other assemblies.

Genetically modified (GM) foods have become a great divide in economic globalization. Genetic modification is achieved by combining genes from different plants, animals, or bacteria to attain an organism with a set of desired characteristics. The potential benefits touted by some scientists and corporate developers are of staggering significance: the quick improvement of crop yields, pest resistance, or herbicide tolerance to a degree not attainable by traditional methods. Even more far reaching are claims that GM crops can be manipulated to produce synthetic substances. For Africa, that could mean sweet potatoes bred resistant to a virus threatening to decimate this basic food of the poor. Rice might be genetically engineered to carry increased iron and vitamins helping to end chronic malnutrition in many Asian countries. “On the horizon are bananas that produce human vaccines against infectious diseases such as hepatitis B; fish that mature more quickly; fruit and nut trees that yield years earlier; and plants that produce new plastics with unique properties” (Human Genome Project Information, August 4, 2005).

However, GM techniques may also threaten human health, the environment, and the economy. New substances from combining the DNA of different organisms may create new and dangerous allergic responses to the genetically new foods and products. Plants bred to be resistant to pests or herbicides may see those characteristics transferred to wild plants with disastrous consequences for the delicate balance of local and regional ecosystems. There is also the risk that the complex science and expensive technology involved will increase the control that a small number of biotechnology corporations already have over the world’s agriculture.

The development and growth of GM crops has been largely a Western Hemisphere phenomenon with 63 percent of world plantings in the U.S., 7 percent in Canada, and 25 percent in Argentina and Brazil together. In Europe there has been a huge public outcry opposing “Frankenfoods” and the European Union has created high bureaucratic hurdles to receiving approval for member countries to grow and market such crops. Corporate developers and their political backers hoped that a large British field test of GM rape seed would convince the public not only that GM food is safe for human consumption but that it would also benefit wildlife in the growing area because of a lower utilization of herbicides. The final report issued in early 2005 proved just the opposite, concluding that both birds and plants would suffer if the new seeds were grown widely in the United Kingdom (UK) (The Guardian Unlimited, June 14, 2005).

Still, even in Europe GM foods are making inroads. More significantly, China, which currently plants only 4 percent of the world’s GM crops, may be ready to set a new course. A member of the Chinese Academy of Science says that half of the country’s agricultural produce will be genetically modified by 2015 (Ibid.).

A related issue of great concern is the development of so-called “terminator seeds.” By a number of technologies, seeds can be produced that grow plants to maturity but whose seeds will not germinate when replanted. The result will be to end the centuries-old practice of saving a portion of a crop as seed for next year’s planting. Farmers who intentionally or accidentally plant such seeds would become annually dependent on the purchase of seeds from suppliers. No convincing arguments have been made that such a system will result in more or better food. Its sole purpose appears to be increased profits to the seed industry. While “terminator technology” has not yet been commercialized, and some companies have disavowed the intent, firms continue to obtain patents for the technology.

Internationally, the 1995 Trade-Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights Agreement (TRIPs) requires that all inventions be patentable. The World Trade Organization (WTO) does allow member states to exempt animals and plants from patenting, but this exemption does not extend to new plant varieties—including those produced using GM technologies (Genetically Modified Food—General Principles: Approved by the 38th General Council of the United Church of Canada—August 2003).

2. Pharmaceuticals and the Health of the Poor

Poor countries bear 90 percent of the burden of the world’s diseases. Yet the pharmaceutical industry devotes only 3 percent of its research and development budget to those ailments. The rest goes to meeting health needs in wealthier countries (The Economist, April 16, 2005, p.69). This mismatch is not accidental; it is the direct result of the legal right of companies to allocate their energies and resources according to their perception of where there will be the greatest profit. The health, and in many cases the survival, of hundreds of millions of people ultimately depends upon redirecting the world’s medical research and development efforts. There is some progress being made through international organizations and private foundations, which firms seem quite willing to encourage while devoting themselves almost entirely to drugs that can be marketed at a larger profit.

An even more scandalous situation revolves around the pharmaceutical industry’s determination to exercise patent and intellectual property rights to deny the trading of generic drugs that are of immediate use to poor countries. The most dramatic example concerns drugs known to be effective in treating HIV/AIDS. The disease has reached pandemic proportions in Africa with twenty-seven million sufferers including 80 percent of the world’s children with the disease. Given their vulnerability in many societies, women are fast on their way to becoming the majority of people infected with HIV. Indeed, already globally women make up 60 percent of 15-24-year olds who are HIV+. Virtually all infected persons will die without lifetime treatment. In addition, fifteen million children are AIDS orphans—about half of all orphans in southern Africa. Several countries in Asia seem to be on a similar track and only a few years behind.

The same drugs that have proven effective in controlling AIDS in the U.S. at a cost of $10,000 to $15,000 per year were also available in Africa. But for countries that spend an annual average of only $10 per person on all health care, the availability was meaningless. Under immense public pressure, firms agreed to cut prices in Africa. But even “slashing the cost” to $350 per person per year remained irrelevant in countries where the common wage may be only a dollar or two a day. Clearly a cheaper supply was the only hope. But when the South African government planned to undertake the production of generic AIDS drugs, then-U.S. Vice-President Gore actually threatened trade sanctions to prevent the action. That was likely a political response to the intense lobbying efforts of pharmaceutical firms in the United States. In South Africa itself, thirty-nine drug firms went to court to challenge legislation that would have authorized ignoring patents on life-saving drugs. In the end, the firms withdrew the action in the face of a global public relations disaster that regarded them as more interested in preserving profits than in saving human life.

Most countries in southern Africa do not have the technical capacity or the capital to undertake a major generic drug production program. But India does, and it has been supplying effective and inexpensive generic copies of AIDS cocktails to Africa. Pharmaceutical companies have fought such exports quite simply because they effectively put a cap on their profits. For the moment, they seem to have won. In 2005 the Indian legislature passed a bill that prohibits domestic firms from making low-cost generic drugs that are under patent abroad. That action is widely seen as an attempt to ensure that India does not run afoul of World Trade Organization (WTO) rules.

It is noteworthy that pharmaceutical firms are now cooperating in cutting their prices on antiretroviral drugs in poor countries—to as low as $150 per person per year in some cases (The Economist, July 2, 2005, p.70). Given the huge number of victims and the fact that the drug regime will have to continue for a lifetime, that still represents a profitable opportunity for products whose development costs have long since been covered by the high prices in rich countries. Thus, the major social issue remains unresolved. How long and to what level of profitability should the possessors of knowledge and patents be able to extend their “rights” in the face of human desperation? And who gets to decide?

3. Intellectual Property in the Computer World

A similar, though less dramatic, situation exists in the computer world. Microsoft has long been involved with legal disputes over its dominance in the personal computer world. For a majority of computer manufacturers, Windows is the only operating system that can be offered to consumers when they purchase a new system. This can be attributed to Windows’ user-friendly interface. But Microsoft’s use of bundled software (several programs sold together) has created a monopoly by not allowing competitors to incorporate their software with Windows. Microsoft does not allow manufacturers to remove any programs in its bundled software and substitute it with a competitors equal.

Like the pharmaceutical industry, Microsoft has been successful in lobbying the U.S. government to press its own understanding of intellectual property protection into international trade through the WTO. That means that any violation of U.S. intellectual property rights can be punished by internationally imposed trade sanctions. It is such actions that have caused noted Columbia University economist Jagdish Bhagwati to condemn some corporations and the U.S. government for transforming the WTO into “a royalty collection agency” (In Defense of Globalization, Oxford, NY, 2004, p. 182).

In recent years, “open source” software has become more accessible to the general public (Mozilla’s Firefox browser, for example). Several governments, such as Brazil and Venezuela, have recently made the decision to move all government computer systems to “open source” technology. This could be costly for Microsoft, as it depends on a large amount of government sales. What makes this “open source” movement worthy of note here is that it embodies an alternative way of thinking about the ownership and sharing of ideas.

Society is struggling with conflicts between the Internet’s extraordinary ability to distribute information almost without cost and the need to offer some measure of respect and compensation to artists, inventors, and the holders of copyrights and patents. That is not at issue for this paper. Open source technology relies on individual, voluntary contributions by thousands of programmers. Each one’s work builds on and is reviewed and corrected by others and made available without cost to anyone who cares to use it. Living as we do in a culture of the privatization and commercialization of almost everything, it is reasonable to ask, “Why would people give away what might be sold?” The answers surely are as varied as the persons involved. But the reality leads to hopeful new thoughts about the economic enterprise. In an article dealing with the exchange of the tools of technology, Yochai Benkler suggests that there is here the “outline of the contours of social sharing as a third mode of organizing economic production, alongside markets and the state” (“Sharing Nicely: On Shareable Goods and the Emergence of Sharing as a Modality of Economic Production,” Yale Law Journal, November 2004, p. 357).

Much of globalization is about ideas and information, who has access to them and who owns them. It concerns intellectual property (IP) rights, the extent to which ideas and information (as opposed to inventions) can be patented and then marketed, legal recourse, and the conditions under which these ideas can be sold to or shared with others. At the international level, this decision-making process takes place mainly in discussions on the General Agreements on Trade in Services (GATS) conducted under the auspices of the World Trade Organization (WTO).

In the area of intellectual property, we lack a legal categorization equivalent to “public domain” that would permit critical ideas or knowledge to be universally accessible for the advancement of the general welfare of all peoples and nations. Dire public health issues such as AIDS, vaccines, or global pandemics illustrate the ethical need for this legal status. Establishing such a new legal category would create an “open source” repository for the publicly funded research results of all nations, for folk knowledge or products of indigenous culture generated by communities, for discoveries in global resources such as the oceans, for patented knowledge of vital benefit to the universal common good, and for private discoveries that may be charitably donated for the good of humankind.

If new technologies of communication and access to information can lead the emerging global society to think more in terms of sharing ideas than of owning them for private profit, we may be on a corrective path of economic activity. According to economist Jeffrey Sachs, “The beauty of ideas is that they can be used over and over again without being depleted” (Jeffrey Sachs, An End of Poverty, Penguin Press, New York, 2005, p. 41). That would be far more in keeping with the church’s ethic of community and stewardship than an economic model based on an endless competition of all against all for private gain.

4. Globalization and Education

Broad-based education in poor countries is the key to their people gaining access to the new world of information technology. Education is also being reshaped by globalization. Around the world, the content and structure of primary, secondary, and higher education are being recast to boost the productivity of domestic workforces in the quest to achieve international competitiveness. As this occurs, the goals of education inch away from broad knowledge and understanding towards skills competency and performance. Whether it is “No Child Left Behind” in the United States or the “Bologna Process” in European higher education, the strategy is the same: To mold strategically a nation’s human resources as the most critical single variable for improving performance within a globally competitive, knowledge-based economy.

Higher education is where the impacts of globalization are the most pronounced. In the past, knowledge was considered a universal public good that was made readily available in book form to scholars engaged in a collective search for “truth.” Today, knowledge is becoming a tradable commodity as universities stake out their intellectual property rights in response to pressures for ever greater cost-effectiveness. The quest for knowledge evolves away from a collective human undertaking towards a more competitive and individual pursuit. In addition, as knowledge expands exponentially, books become an inefficient means of communicating it. In their place, the Internet has emerged as a global repository of knowledge that can only be accessed through the much more expensive means of information and communications technologies. Although some developing countries have benefited from the Internet and telecommunications, many poor countries are struggling to enter the digital age. Those that make progress may find it to be temporary as their equipment becomes outdated. In short, competitively productive nations forge an ever-widening gap in knowledge, research, and technology between themselves and less competitive countries that translates into an expanding divide in wealth, opportunity, welfare, and lifestyle.

Among developed nations such as Australia, the United Kingdom, and the United States, higher education has become big business. The export of educational services through distance education and the recruitment of fee-paying foreign students seeking a first-world education have created a global “trade” in higher education that constitutes a $4 billion market. More importantly, globalizing higher education enables countries with quality educational programs to identify the “best and the brightest” of other nations and recruit them into their own economies. Such competition in human capital development creates a vicious cycle in which the intellectual resources of poorer countries are skimmed off to the advantage of wealthier societies. Promotion of trade in higher education figures on the agenda of the current round of WTO negotiations on the General Agreement on Trade in Services (GATS).

Implications for worldwide education emerge from the current dynamics of globalization. One is that English is becoming the language of education, particularly at the higher levels. University classes taught in English are offered in such diverse places as Chile, Mexico, the Netherlands, and Sweden. Another is that the brain drain is accelerating as the competition for human talent heats up. An estimated 30 percent of all university graduates in Africa have left the continent, creating an almost insurmountable shortfall in local leadership, management, and professional skills. Third, as knowledge becomes a commodity, research becomes a business activity. Research priorities reflect perceived business opportunities rather than societal needs. New consumer goods for the rich arrive in a bountiful stream even as the needs of the poor, such as malaria eradication, struggle to find research funding. Fourth, the current form of globalization supports the private provision of education, particularly at the higher educational levels. In many African countries, enrollments in private universities are growing faster than those in public institutions. But cost-efficient behavior usually leads private universities to concentrate on inexpensive disciplinary areas in high demand. These commonly include accounting, business administration, computer science, economics, law, and social sciences. One result is that developing countries regularly confront skills deficits in engineering, medicine, natural sciences, nursing, and areas of applied technology essential for economic and social advancement. In these and other ways, even seemingly local activities such as education are impacted.

G. Controlling, Governing or Guiding Globalization

The corollary questions to “Who can participate in a global society and how?” are “Who is benefiting?” and “Who is in charge?” The suspicion exists broadly that globalization is being managed to benefit the few, not the many, and certainly not the environment or future generations.

1. Counting on Corporations as Global Managers

The hallmarks of globalization in the post-Cold War period have been the virtual disappearance of planned economies, the expansion of a free trade philosophy, and the continued growth of transnational corporations that root themselves in the cracks between governments. Such companies have positioned themselves in the post-Cold War world, even more than before, to be the chief actors in a global economy. They have the legal rights of persons and despite their size and social influence, generally speaking have no assigned duties in society beyond complying with the laws of the countries where they operate. Many believe that unattended market forces will inevitably benefit everyone. Others, including many in the churches, believe that corporations should have a positive social effect beyond profitability.

Where corporations are small, there is little distinction between what is expected of moral individuals and what is expected of the businesses they own. But difficulties mount in the world of huge international enterprises. When there are thousands of “owners” and when even millions of dollars in shares may amount to a fraction of a percent of a firm’s worth, even the best-intentioned investor will have little impact on company policy.

Churches realized early on that if there were to be a change in the policies of large corporations it would have to come through management, not through owners. The hope was that socially sensitive individuals high in the corporate system could be convinced to impress their values on the organization. But that is seldom an effective strategy for changing complex organizations or society as a whole. It fails to take into account the fact that social responsibility carries an economic cost. If one company assumes that cost and others do not, that firm will be placed at a competitive disadvantage and may not survive.

It is nevertheless important for the church to urge its members to live their business lives at the highest moral level and to do their best to steer corporations in that same direction. But to do nothing more is to abandon good people and even good companies to amoral market structures and immoral competition. The greatest help that the church can give in support of more socially sound corporate activity is to combine moral suasion with determined effort to establish a legal framework that will require all corporations, whether or not they are headed by morally sensitive persons, to act in ways that contribute to the common good.

The Economist concluded a 2005 special section on “The Good Company” with these words:

The proper guardians of the public interest are governments, which are accountable to all citizens. It is the job of elected politicians to set goals for regulators, to deal with externalities, to mediate among different interests, to attend to the demands of social justice, to provide the public goods and collect the taxes to pay for them, to establish collective priorities where that is necessary and appropriate, and to organize resources accordingly.

The proper business of business is business. No apology required. (p. 22)

One might almost applaud, or at least accept, such logic if it had gone one step further. What we have a right to expect from corporations, and the people made wealthy by them, is that they will abstain from using their money and power to dictate or undermine the very activities said to be the responsibilities of government. It is not acceptable for corporations or groups they finance to write legislation or regulations favorable to them, or to distort the political process to the detriment of individuals, communities, the environment and the sustainable existence of future generations with the vast amount of money now going into campaigns and lobbying. Indeed, it is justifiable to fear that American democracy as we have known it is in peril.

Human life and dignity are also sometimes imperiled by corporate actions. Some companies engage in activities that exploit or violate the human rights of their workers and of those whose land they seek to possess. The Alien Tort Claims Act (ATCA) of 1789 grants jurisdiction to U.S. Federal courts over any dispute where it is alleged that the “law of nations” or norms of international law are broken. This is significant because it allows foreign victims of serious human rights abuse abroad to sue the perpetrators in U.S. courts whenever the perpetrator is properly served within the borders of the United States. In a handful of cases, the ATCA has been used in lawsuits against U.S. corporations that are accused of knowingly benefiting from serious human rights abuse. If these suits are allowed to proceed, then ATCA could become a powerful tool to increase corporate accountability. Under this law, the Presbyterian Church of Sudan, founded by the PC(USA) more than one hundred years ago, is suing the Talisman Energy Corporation for allegedly engaging in a campaign with the Sudanese government that included torture, death squads, and other human rights violations against Sudanese nationals.

In interpreting the definition of “law of nations” under the ATCA, courts have looked to current universally accepted norms of international human rights law. In 1979, the U.S. Supreme Court acknowledged that deliberate torture perpetrated with “official authority” violated a norm of international law. The Court has more recently acknowledged that the ATCA reaches conduct of private parties (such as corporations or individuals) provided that the conduct is taken under “the color of state authority,” i.e., with apparent governmental or official approval, or that it violates a norm of international law that is recognized as extending to the conduct of private parties.

It follows that violation of certain basic human rights intrinsically violates the norm of international law. Corporate entities that directly engage in genocide, systematic killing, enslavement for profit, religious persecution, death squads, racism, or torture clearly violate the norm of international law. In addition, corporate entities that knowingly engage in trade with powers or parties that carry out such atrocities may also violate the norm of international law. Such corporations should be held accountable for their actions.

2. Nations Amid Empire—Country Governments as Global Managers

There are some 193 countries in the world; most have almost no influence over the forces of globalization that shape and sometimes misshape their reality. This is the situation that moved the World Alliance of Reformed Churches to state:

...we see that the current world [dis]order is rooted in an extremely complex and immoral economic system defended by empire. In using the term “empire” we mean the coming together of economic, cultural, political and military power that constitutes a system of domination led by powerful nations to protect and defend their own interests. (“Covenanting for Justice in the Economy and the Earth,” 24th General Council, July 30–August 13, 2004)

One suspects that the WARC statement was being polite in its use of the plural “nations.” Most of the world clearly regards the United States as the current imperial power. We may wince at that and say it isn’t true, or that we never intended it that way, or that we only want to do good in the world. But since the end of the Cold War, Americans have reveled in the fact that we are “the sole surviving superpower.” President Clinton referred to this country as “the indispensable nation” (Second Inaugural Address, January 20, 1997). And his Secretary of State Madeleine Albright made it very clear that the phrase was not to be understood only economically and culturally: “If we have to use force, it is because we are America. We are the indispensable nation.” Conservative patriarch Irving Kristol summed it up neatly, “What’s the point of being the greatest, most powerful nation in the world and not having an imperial role?” (From an interview by Corey Robin, “Grand Designs,” Washington Post Op-Ed., May 2, 2004). President George W. Bush’s administration has made clear that while the U.S. values the support of allies, it will not hesitate to act alone in the nation’s self-defined “security” interest. The preemptive war in Iraq is one example of that logic; so too is the U.S. withdrawal from the Kyoto treaty on climate change because it wasn’t good for the American economy. Likewise, American exceptionalism was boldly asserted in the threat to withdraw peacekeepers from Bosnia unless the U.S. was granted an exemption from jurisdiction of the International Criminal Court.

It is not surprising that U.S. globalization strategies based on a combination of American exceptionalism and unilateralism continue to alienate other countries large and small, rich and poor, allies and rivals. A 2005 poll by the Pew Global Attitudes Project—the most respected of international opinion surveys—is indicative of America’s sagging reputation and the increase of anti-Americanism abroad. Pew asked respondents in sixteen countries to give favorability ratings to five nations: the U.S., France, Germany, Japan, and China. America was at the bottom of everyone’s list except India, Poland, and China. More than half of respondents from ten of the fifteen countries surveyed (excluding the U.S. itself) viewed the U.S. unfavorably—in many cases by wide margins. Throughout Europe, China was more popular than the United States. Half or more of all respondents (except those from the U.S.) wanted Europe to be more independent of the United States, and huge majorities thought the world would be better off if America had a military rival (The Economist, June 25, 2005, p.35). It is sobering to realize that so many people in so many countries prefer the risk of warfare among nations to what they regard as a world under American hegemony. These sentiments are clearly shared by our Christian brothers and sisters as seen in the documents on the global economic order by the World Alliance of Reformed Churches and the World Council of Churches.

Amid the dark attitudes expressed in the Pew poll were also some clues about what might change world opinion about our country. People in all sixteen countries surveyed indicated that U.S. action in helping victims of the Asian tsunami impressed them favorably, and most also supported the call by President Bush for democracy in the Middle East (Ibid.). Clearly, the world recognizes the value of American ideals and the potential for the positive use of America’s economic power. There is, however, a longing for those traits to be harnessed to a truly internationalist vision rather than an imperialist vision.

For example, in 2005, the New Mexico-based International Relations Center and the Washington-based Institute for Policy Studies jointly initiated a project aimed at setting a better course for American participation in the global community. It was launched with a document titled, “A Global Good Neighbor Ethic for International Relations.” The introduction includes these words:

Global Good Neighbor principles are easily understood, because they are not drawn from foreign policy journals or ideological tracts. These principles reflect our basic values, our golden rules, our personal responsibility, our common sense, and our human decency. They are principles based on everyday practice of good neighbors. (p.2)

The fourth of seven principles states, “As the world’s foremost power, the United States will be best served by responsible global leadership and partnership rather than seeking global dominance” (p.11). One of the authors of the document said to the press:

Adopting a Global Good Neighbor ethic doesn’t mean joining or leaving the conservative, liberal, progressive, left, or right political camps. All that it means is that you believe, as [Franklin D.] Roosevelt did, that everyday good neighbor practices—self-respect, mutual respect, and a spirit of cooperation—are the proper starting points for mutually beneficial international relations.” (Tom Barry, IRC Policy Director, Media Advisory, May 16, 2005)

The alternative to empire is not the renunciation of power but a change in the way power engages the world. The U.S. role should be that of a large and important participant in a global reality that is greater than any one government, country, or people. Its size and wealth may, for the time being, grant the United States the position of “first among equals,” but that does not convey the right of being the global rule maker or the right to live above the rules. The admonition of the Old Testament sage is as apt for nations as for individuals, “...humility goes before honor” (Prov. 15:33b).

3. The Existing International Institutions—Ordering a Global Economy

The narrow interests of business may not necessarily encompass the common good. Individual governments have proven no match for the extraordinary mobility of capital in a global economy. Small and weak states have no leverage; large and powerful ones are so wedded to the economic interests of business that they become its international facilitators. Thus, if some measure of restraint, control, and guidance of the global economy is to be established, it must be through international institutions.

Recognition of the need for multilateralism is not new. More than sixty years ago, as World War II neared its end, representatives of the Allies met in Bretton Woods, New Hampshire, to craft actions to keep the world from returning to the “beggar-thy-neighbor” trade and currency policies that led the world into the Great Depression and war and left whole countries in shambles. It was clear that nations would have to act collaboratively.

Bretton Woods established two international institutions to help shape and stabilize the envisioned global economy—the International Monetary Fund (IMF) and the World Bank. The General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT), was an addition to the Bretton Woods framework.

Since the Bretton Woods Allies regarded finance as the key issue of the post-war world, it is not surprising that they preserved for themselves control of the IMF and the World Bank through a weighted voting mechanism related to the size of national economies and the amount of contributed capital. For example, France, Germany, United Kingdom, and the U.S.A. each have their own representative and independent votes, whereas fifty African nations share a single representative and cast a single vote.

The IMF was given two principal tasks: monitoring currency exchange rates so as to prevent countries from seeking a trade advantage by devaluing their currencies; and stabilizing the global economy by making emergency loans to countries with short-term balance-of-payments difficulties. Together these actions served to create and maintain a better climate for business development and the integration of the world on that basis.

The World Bank was tasked with provision of low-cost financing for large-scale national investment projects. It initially focused on post-World War II reconstruction in Europe but subsequently expanded to engage the developing countries.

Those institutions may have been admirably suited to the needs of developed countries left devastated by war. But as international focus shifted to countries that were historically poor and economically ill-equipped to participate in an increasingly global economy, the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank took on new functions.

In the 1970s and 1980s, the IMF became the economic disciplinarian of poor countries. Arguing that economic restructuring was necessary for growth, it began to insist that those governments adopt a more or less standard set of policies: reduced government subsidies of social welfare programs; export promotion (including a devalued currency and lowered wages); encouraging a favorable business climate (including privatization of state-owned firms); and liberalized financial markets (including the free convertibility of currency and foreign participation in the banking sector).

If the intent of these policies was really to help countries repay international loans through more rapid economic growth, they were a spectacular failure. The IMF loans were of small consequence, but IMF approval soon became the condition for loans from the World Bank, private lenders, and some governments as well. Structural adjustment lending to poor countries became a kind of pyramid scheme with new loans used to pay interest on old loans without retiring them or admitting that the debts were un-payable at any morally acceptable level of human sacrifice. Whatever the declared intent, the result of World Bank and International Monetary Fund actions has been to reshape poor countries to make them a better fit for the ideology of dominant countries that promotes the business environment, foreign trade, and smaller government.

The professed goal of GATT was to remove trade barriers established by individual countries. From the beginning, it sought to establish the principle that all countries must treat products from all participating countries equally. The original concern about the exchange of goods was expanded to include trade in services and intellectual property when the organization was transformed into the World Trade Organization (WTO) in 1995. The WTO has been relentless in pressing smaller and poorer countries to open their markets to the industrialized world. It has been much less attentive to pressing rich countries to abandon agricultural subsidies (e.g., sugar) and industrial protectionism (e.g., textiles) that would open those markets more fully to less developed countries. Effectively, the WTO's ability to enforce economic sanctions on noncompliant states has become a tool of the economically and politically powerful in maintaining an asymmetrical and unfair global economic system.

Bretton Woods was right in assuming that the world has changed, that individual nation states cannot cope with the new reality, and that there must be new mechanisms to bring order to the chaos of globalization. But order defined by the self-interest of powerful actors is not enough. We of biblical faith insist that a global economic system must serve justice and compassion as well as order.

4. Reshaping International Institutions—Managing Together

Justice is not a static term; it cannot be defined once and for all but must be made to live amid constantly changing historical realities. Karen Lebacqz makes the innovative suggestion that we begin by considering injustice. “A mirror held up to our world reflects the rupture of justice and reigning injustice. That is why injustice must be the beginning point” (Justice in an Unjust World, Minneapolis: Augsburg, 1987, p.11). A major dimension of economic justice that must concern us today is the extraordinary mobility of capital in the narrow service of a small percentage of the world's population, among states individually incapable of countering it, and assisted by inadequate international institutions.

In light of the fact that fifty-two of the world's one hundred largest economic actors are corporations—the others are nation states—David Korten's harsh judgment is too painfully relevant to be ignored:

The triumph of global capitalism means that more than half the world's one hundred largest economies are centrally planned for the primary benefit of the wealthiest one percent of the world's people! It is a triumph of privatized central planning over markets and democracy. Even more, it is the triumph of the extremely wealthy over the remainder of humanity. (Cited in William D. Heffernan and Mary K. Hendrickson, “Multi-National Concentrated Food Processing and Marketing Systems and the Farm Crisis,” American Association for the Advancement of Science Symposium, Boston, February 14–19, 2002—David Korten holds both an M.B.A. and Ph.D. from the Stanford University School of Business.)

Globalization as we are experiencing it is undoing some of the most positive developments of capitalism during the past century. In our own country income and wealth are becoming more concentrated; the number of people is increasing who work full-time but still live below the poverty line; health and pension benefits are being bargained away or taken away; even persons employed full-time are among the homeless. But such losses in countries like ours are dwarfed by the human condition of the vast majority of the poor in scores of countries who are simply being left behind by globalization as we know it. Gustavo Gutierrez put it plainly: “In the Bible poverty is a scandalous condition inimical to human dignity and therefore contrary to the will of God” (A Theology of Liberation, Orbis: Maryknoll, N.Y., 1973, p.291).

Professor Ethan Kapstein notes that the problems of both rich and poor countries can and should be addressed by the international community simultaneously (Ethan B. Kapstein, “A Global Third Way: Social Justice and the World Economy,” World Policy Journal, Winter 1998–99). They are related by the fact that under the present system, capital enters and leaves countries with little accountability. In the process, capital is not paying a fair share of the costs of governments from which it benefits. Multinational firms learned long ago to use transfer pricing to move profits to where they will be taxed the least. Banks and financiers took note and have made use of offshore accounts for the same purpose. What is needed is an internationally coordinated tax policy that would diminish the ability of corporations and financiers to play one government off against another to avoid paying their fair share of social costs. Reserves generated in this way could be employed to reduce the social and environmental costs of globalization. Beyond some agreed upon minimum tax shared by the global community, countries would be free to tax more for purely national purposes. That parallels the situation in the U.S. where states regularly tax corporations independently of their federal tax liability.

The idea of international taxation for international activities is not new. Nobel laureate economist James Tobin has suggested a small transaction tax on global capital movements to reduce speculation that threatens currencies and governments. Environmentalists have frequently called for an emissions tax as an incentive for corporations to pollute less. Chile already requires foreign investors to pay a heavy penalty if they withdraw their funds from the country in less than a year. And Vito Tanzi, an IMF economist, has favored an international tax policy that would help minimize corporate tax avoidance.

Others favor establishing a valued added tax (VAT) on all international trade in goods and services. A substantial portion of the revenues could be channeled to developing countries for investment in human development. The portion reaching more developed countries could be used for retraining of workers displaced by globalization.

To achieve such core social goals, Professor Kapstein proposes asking each country to define an acceptable social minimum within its borders and then agree to have an international agency perform an annual review of progress. Results might affect the use of the revenues from international taxation of capital as well as the amount and type of international aid Kapstein suggests that the IMF undertake the responsibility of taxing capital movements and that the World Bank assume the oversight of distributing them for social benefit. It may be possible to re-task the Bretton Woods institutions in such a way, but given the broad criticism they have received, it may be better to begin anew with institutions poor countries help devise and run. Clearly, controlling graft and corruption would be a major challenge in any plan for the massive transfer of economic resources internationally.

Our purpose here is not to advocate for a particular design but to raise our voice insisting that the time is long past to find ways to have international capital movements become a major source of revenues to be used mainly if not exclusively in poor countries for ending poverty, preserving life, strengthening social safety nets, and protecting the environment.

Money is certainly not the only factor in globalization that needs a new direction and more thoughtful international management for the public good. But we are mindful of the saying of Jesus that “where your treasure is, there your heart will be also” (Matt. 6:21). In a society that has made money the measure of almost everything, lamenting massive human misery and the economic poverty that maintains it is mere platitude unless accompanied by an effective way to collect and use large amounts of money to improve the human condition.

That is not a task that can be accomplished by traditional models of aid. When profits are channeled to offshore accounts or become taxable by some one government it becomes almost impossible politically to re-aggregate and reapply those funds in large enough amounts to undertake the serious but achievable work of ending massive human misery and poverty. When rich nations accede to a plan of assessing a small international tax on internationally generated revenues, other joint commitments for managing the global commons more effectively will follow more easily. Where human treasure is, the policies of nations will surely follow.

H. What's in a Name—Neoliberalism

This statement began by recalling the Genesis narrative about naming the creatures and noting the almost mystical power that naming conveys. Similarly, though unrelated to God's creative activity, naming our economic system has been a problem for at least the last half century. Many Americans have flinched at the formal designation “capitalism” because that term has been used pejoratively by the system's critics. So, in the common mind, ours is simply “the economic system” as though there is not and cannot be any other.

The foregoing pages describe elements of the present circumstance of globalization, but they do not give a name to the political-economic system that drives it. Neoliberalism is the term widely used in the rest of the world, but seldom heard in economic conversations in the United States. Again, this is because it is a name used by critics as shorthand for international economic relationships seen to favor rich nations and powerful economic actors in the absolute faith that benefits will inevitably trickle down to all. Lacking a better alternative, neoliberalism is the name that we too shall use.

1. The Practice of Neoliberalism

At the intellectual level, neoliberalism is a political-economic philosophy that seeks to establish in the global context the underlying values of classical economics and liberal political ideas crafted for a time when the borders of nations largely defined the sphere of human activity.

From the beginning, the theory of capitalism has been based on the idealized freedom of the individual to seek his or her own benefit without having to consider the welfare of others. It was assumed that competing self-interests would limit the power of all and, without any planning or intervention of the state, create the common good. No advanced industrial society has found that to be the case in the real world. Vast differences in power and ability among individuals undermined economic theory and threatened political stability. The rise of Keynesian economics following the Great Depression and World War II marked the formal recognition that modern governments had to intervene to smooth out the problems of capitalism.

Neoliberalism has risen as a philosophy or policy since the 1970s, which seeks to rescind that consensus. Its goal is to limit state intervention in the economy and to use the surviving powers of governments to promote free trade, free markets, and the free movement of capital without reference to the size of the economic actors, the social results of enterprise, or the impact on individuals in any of the countries involved. Under the neoliberal philosophy, economic actors are relieved of any concern about fairness in the distribution of wealth and income or other social consequences of their actions. It is simply posited that free and open markets, coupled with unrelenting competition, will guarantee that everyone everywhere—workers, investors, corporations, and nations—will ultimately be appropriately compensated for their economic contribution. Note, however, that “appropriate” does not necessarily mean equal, adequate, fair, or proportional compensation.

Proponents of neoliberalism are convinced that applying laissez-faire economic principles at the international level will lead to economic development by creating close ties between rich and poor countries through trade and investment. Transnational corporations, it is assumed, will become the channels for the transfer of both money and technology that are requisites for the poor to become rich. Neoliberalism also assumes that governments are incompetent in the sphere of business and should therefore privatize their resource base and production operations. Furthermore, it is expected that governments will minimize social welfare expenditures to promote fiscal responsibility, repay international debt, develop economic infrastructure, allow the free entry and exit of capital, and provide a labor pool at wages that will attract foreign investment.

The principles of neoliberalism can be found in the policies of the so-called Washington Consensus, which is shorthand for the International Monetary Fund, the World Bank, and the United States Treasury, the prime actors in defining the terms of economic globalization. They have exercised their powers so confidently in the past quarter century as to give the impression that there can be no debate about the essentials of economic development or the rightness of their policy prescriptions.

That is far from true. None of the economic success stories of recent years can be traced to the implementation of neoliberal principles. Neither Japan, China, India, the Asian Tigers, nor even Chile made their economic leaps by adhering to the passive government, market-friendly, free capital movement, and open-door trade policies counseled by the Washington Consensus. These countries have indeed integrated themselves into the global economy, but they followed different formulas often involving such elements as state intervention, export subsidies, protection of infant industries, control of capital convertibility, guided foreign investment, and even government ownership of key industries.

Global economic problems of recent years and the constraints of international debt have caused some of these countries to accede increasingly to the Washington Consensus one-size-fits-all requirements. However, that hardly constitutes an endorsement of the wisdom of those policies. It only attests to the power of those institutions and their willingness to exploit the weakness of individual developing countries facing complex and dehumanizing economic choices.

2. Neoliberalism—An Ideology Rejected

Over a decade ago, Japan’s Overseas Economic Cooperation Fund issued a white paper questioning the structural adjustment policies of the IMF and World Bank that required a dramatic opening up of the economies of poor countries and imposed harsh conditions on their people and institutions. The claimed goal of those policies was to speed development through global integration, a presumed necessary step in attaining a more efficient economy. In part, the Japanese white paper stated, “In the 1980’s, economic theory as well as economic policy were heavily oriented toward the pursuit of efficiency... What is now needed is a policy well balanced between efficiency and fairness, in order to improve the welfare of the entire society” (Quoted in William Greider, One World, Ready or Not, Simon & Schuster, NY, 1997, p. 278.).

Neoliberalism, what we commonly call “the economic system,” seeks to make the whole world an integrated mechanism of production and consumption where the self-interest of economic actors is granted free rein in the assumption that competition will make everything work out well in the end. The real intention is to make a world freely accessible to those who already have the most power—a handful of countries, a few hundred thousand wealthy individuals, and the few hundred large corporations and financial institutions they control. The result of more than a quarter century of neoliberalism has been to increase the economic disparity between rich and poor within countries and between them. The poorest are simply being left behind at an increasing rate. Continuing in the same path will or can produce a different result. If fairness is the goal, a different economic model will be required.

But looking for alternatives, or even acknowledging the possibility of such, is not within the makeup of neoliberalism. In commenting, the World Alliance of Reformed Churches made this judgment:

This is an ideology that claims to be without alternative, demanding an endless flow of sacrifices from the poor and creation. It makes the false promise that it can save the world through the creation of wealth and prosperity, claiming sovereignty over life and demanding total allegiance, which amounts to idolatry. (“Covenanting for Justice in the Economy and the Earth,” Accra, Ghana, July 30–August 13, 2004, p. 2)

Any system that makes absolute demands and that places itself beyond question, adjustment, or replacement has assumed a status that Christians accord only to God.

I. An American Church and the American Nation in a Global Society

The 217th General Assembly (2006) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) acknowledges that we are enthusiastically part of the global Christian community. We are thankful for the witness of our ecumenical partners in matters of faith and economic justice. We receive with gratitude the strong statement of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches, “Covenanting for Justice in the Economy and the Earth” (Accra, Ghana, 2004) (<http://warc.jalb.de>). That and the World Council of Churches 2005 background document “Alternative Globalization Addressing Peoples and Earth” (AGAPE) have challenged and guided this assembly in making our own statement on seeking justice amid the complexities of globalization.

As a participant in the global community of faith and the world ecumenical community, we recognize both our bias and the peculiar responsibility we have as an American church for speaking faithfully within the social, economic, and political context of the United States. It is that reality that we primarily seek to address and help reshape.

It has become commonplace in this country and abroad to recognize the uniquely powerful position of the United States in the global community—economically, militarily, and culturally. In a 2004 book, former Secretary of State Zbigniew Brzezinski argued that America can choose to lead the world or dominate it, but it cannot do both. There is an almost biblical ring to the author’s image that America must choose between being a city on a hill or a fortress on a hill. The United States should, therefore, treat globalization not as a doctrinal issue but as an opportunity to elevate human existence through multi-lateral commitments. “To do otherwise,” Secretary Brzezinski says, “risks isolating America in the face of growing hostility to its economic agenda” (The Choice, Basic Books, N.Y., 2004).

The globalization movement creates a historical moment when the moral vision of economic justice and practical politics can converge if we have the faith and the imagination to make it so. But there is nothing foreordained about that. Globalization left uncorrected could as well become the battlefield of predatory capitalism and the ultimate expression of social Darwinism.

The United States government can play a huge role in moving the world toward the positive vision if its present hegemonic moment is seen as an opportunity to set aside the protection of narrow economic interests and unilateral politics backed by unchallengeable military power, in favor of a commitment to uncompromising multilateralism. That does not mean abandoning to others the basic decisions about global society. It merely means having confidence that the best in the American experience is attractive and compelling enough to be persuasive in the competition of ideas in international forums and institutions.

It is the responsibility of the biblical faith community to be critical participants in every political and economic system in which it finds itself. We are not cheerleaders of the status quo, nor are we believers that every social change is good. We do not believe in globalization; we believe in a particular kind of globalization that reflects justice, community, and the sustainability of creation. That is the vision that we urge members of this church to advocate in every social, economic, and political arena.

Globalization is a reality that cannot be repealed even if that were our preference. The political issue before us is how to manage globalization in order to generate benefits for the common good. Can the nations craft a system that works for all? The moral question, and therefore the theological issue, is whether globalization can be made to serve the poor first rather than last or not at all.

APPENDIX A

Hope for a Global Future: Toward Just and Sustainable Human Development

Approved by the 208th General Assembly (1996)

Published by the Office of the General Assembly (Louisville, Ky.), 1996 (OGA-96-013)

Principles

PRINCIPLE: The satisfaction of basic needs is indispensable for human development. Sufficiency for all requires that poverty be eradicated and that the affluent live more frugally (p. 96).

PRINCIPLE: Human rights are essential to the expression of human dignity and are fundamental to the quest for human development. These rights include satisfaction of basic biophysical needs, physical security, moral and spiritual autonomy, mental and cultural development, social participation in defining and shaping the common good, due process, environmental protections, and the common good itself (p. 100).

09 ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON SOCIAL JUSTICE ISSUES

PRINCIPLE: Women's rights—to a secure livelihood, to freedom from oppressive domination, to education, and to safe contraception within broadly available health care—are an essential component of just and sustainable human development (p. 102).

PRINCIPLE: Public participation of all persons in the decisions that affect their lives and well-being is a fundamental human right (p. 104).

PRINCIPLE: Commitment to human development requires a commitment to effective governance capable of encouraging order, assuring justice, and promoting the common good (p. 106).

PRINCIPLE: Education is a basic human right and is essential to human development, because it enhances human capacities, improves opportunities, and widens the range of choices (p. 109).

PRINCIPLE: Overpopulation is neither just nor sustainable. Procreation is a deeply felt human right that must be balanced with the responsibility to preserve environmental quality and long-term sustainability and to make sufficient sustenance available to all (pp. 111–12).

PRINCIPLE: Human life and well-being depend upon the flourishing of other life and the integrity of the life-supporting processes that God has ordained (p. 115).

PRINCIPLE: Environmental sustainability requires agricultural sustainability, which is necessary for human survival and well-being, now and for the long-term future (p. 117).

PRINCIPLE: Authentic human development does not come in a single, fixed pattern. There are differences in cultural and worship practices that express the same universal values of justice, integrity of the person, solidarity, and sustainability (p. 120).

PRINCIPLE: Peacemaking is essential for human development and for the church's faithfulness to Christ. It requires actions to reduce militarization and to address the unmet needs that aggravate tensions (p. 124).

PRINCIPLE: The repayment of debts and interest at the expense of the basics of life raises serious questions of justice. The burden of debts must be shared equitably in ways that reduce poverty, protect the environment, and avoid perverse incentives in the future (p. 128).

PRINCIPLE: In an interdependent world, no nation can be fully independent of other nations, and no nation should be overly dependent on other nations. This means that the international trading system must incorporate the basic norms of social justice and environmental sustainability, rather than depend solely on the norms and outcomes of free trade (p. 131).

PRINCIPLE: The purpose of development assistance is to equip people and communities through financial and technical means to implement their own plans for just and sustainable development (p. 137).

APPENDIX B Members of the Resolution Team on Trade Monitoring

Kim Bobo, executive director, Interfaith Committee for Worker Justice, Chicago, Illinois
Elder. Founder and executive director of the National Interfaith Committee for Worker Justice, the leading national organization that mobilizes religious support for low-wage workers and rebuilds partnerships with the labor movement. Coauthor of Organizing for Social Change, Bobo previously worked for Bread for the World and the Midwest Academy.

Ruy O. Costa, executive director, Episcopal City Mission, Boston, Massachusetts
Elder. Born in Brazil, with theological study at the Presbyterian Seminary at Campinas and his Ph.D. from Boston University. Dr. Costa has been a teacher and ecumenical administrator, most recently of nonprofit housing facilities and advocacy programs, and of community economic development programs. He also works with the Brazilian immigrant community in Boston.

Clifford Grum, president (retired), Temple-Inland, Inc., Diboll, Texas
Elder. Retired chairman and chief executive officer of Temple-Inland Inc. For three years he was publisher of Fortune magazine and then served as executive vice president of Time Inc. until Temple-Inland was spun-off in 1983. In 1991, he was elected chairman of the board of Temple-Inland Inc. He served as Temple-Inland's CEO until his retirement in January 2000. Grum is a past director for the Texas Association of Business & Chambers of Commerce and has served on the board of trustees for Austin College. He sits on the boards of directors of Tupperware Corporation and Trinity Industries, Inc.

Ayn Lavagnino, manager of Environmental Programs, Camas, Washington
Elder. Lead for Missions at East Woods Presbyterian Church, a new church development in Vancouver, Washington. In her role as manager of environmental programs for Hewlett-Packard's Imaging & Printing products, Ayn drives the strategies and programs required to deliver safe, legal, and environmentally optimal products to market. A recent mission trip to Guatemala brought home the tangible reality of the mixed effects of globalization on developing communities. (She resides in Camas, Washington, with her husband Albert and two spunky cats.)

Lewis Mudge, professor (retired), Berkeley, California

Minister. Robert Leighton Stuart Professor of Theology, emeritus, San Francisco Theological Seminary and the Graduate Theological Union, Berkeley. A theological ethicist, author or editor of six books, Dr. Mudge, previously taught at Amhurst College, was academic dean of McCormick Seminary, and served as secretary for Theological Studies of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches.

Rebecca “Toddie” Peters, assistant professor, Elon, North Carolina

Minister. Distinguished emerging scholar and assistant professor of Religious Studies at Elon University in North Carolina. She is an ordained PC(USA) minister and her books on the subject include In Search of the Good Life: The Ethics of Globalization, which won the 2003 Trinity Prize, and Justice in a Global Economy: Strategies for Home, Community, and World, which is being published by Westminster/John Knox, Fall 2006.

William (Bill) Saint, senior human development specialist, World Bank, Washington, D.C.

Elder. Senior World Bank human development specialist (Africa Region) since 1990. Previously served with the Ford and Rockefeller Foundations in both Africa and South America, on agriculture and rural development, as well as higher education policy.

Ronald Stone, professor (retired), Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania

Elder. John Witherspoon Professor of Christian Ethics, emeritus, Pittsburgh Theological Seminary. Author of sixteen books and editor of several others in ethics and theology. Founder, Theological Educators for Presbyterian Social Witness.

Walter Owensby, consultant, Potomac Falls, Virginia

Minister. Retired associate for International Issues, PC(USA)’s Washington Office. Trained as a development analyst and minister, he has served as a pastor, mission worker, and teacher.

Gwen Crawley, staff, Louisville, Kentucky

Elder. Interim coordinator, Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP). Crawley has managed healthcare and medical mission programs in the private sector and for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). She is editing an issue of Church & Society magazine on globalization timed to coincide with the presentation of “Resolution on Just Globalization: Justice, Ownership and Accountability to the 217th General Assembly (2006).

Christian Iosso, staff, Louisville, Kentucky

Minister. Coordinator, Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP). Previously, pastor of the Scarborough (N.Y.) Presbyterian Church, part-time college professor and staff to the General Assembly Mission Council of the United Presbyterian Church.

APPENDIX C

United Nations Millennium Development Goals

By 2015, all United Nations Member States have pledged to:

1. Eradicate extreme poverty and hunger
 - ✧ Reduce by half the proportion of people living on less than a dollar a day
 - ✧ Reduce by half the proportion of people who suffer from hunger
2. Achieve universal primary education
 - ✧ Ensure that all boys and girls complete a full course of primary schooling
3. Promote gender equality and empower women
 - ✧ Eliminate gender disparity in primary and secondary education preferably by 2005, and at all levels by 2015
4. Reduce child mortality
 - ✧ Reduce by two thirds the mortality rate among children under five
5. Improve maternal health
 - ✧ Reduce by three quarters the maternal mortality ratio
6. Combat HIV/AIDS, malaria and other diseases
 - ✧ Halt and begin to reverse the spread of HIV/AIDS
 - ✧ Halt and begin to reverse the incidence of malaria and other major diseases
7. Ensure environmental sustainability
 - ✧ Integrate the principles of sustainable development into country policies and programmes; reverse loss of environmental resources
 - ✧ Reduce by half the proportion of people without sustainable access to safe drinking water
 - ✧ Achieve significant improvement in lives of at least 100 million slum-dwellers by 2020
8. Develop a global partnership for development
 - ✧ Develop further an open trading and financial system that is rule-based, predictable and non-discriminatory. Includes a commitment to good governance, development and poverty reduction—nationally and internationally

- ✧ Address the least developed countries' special needs. This includes tariff- and quota-free access for their exports; enhanced debt relief for heavily indebted poor countries; cancellation of official bilateral debt; and more generous official development assistance for countries committed to poverty reduction
- ✧ Address the special needs of landlocked and small island developing States
- ✧ Deal comprehensively with developing countries' debt problems through national and international measures to make debt sustainable in the long term
- ✧ In cooperation with the developing countries, develop decent and productive work for youth
- ✧ In cooperation with pharmaceutical companies, provide access to affordable essential drugs in developing countries
- ✧ In cooperation with the private sector, make available, the benefits of new technologies—especially information and communications technologies

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 09-10

Advice and Counsel on Item 09-10, the “Resolution on Just Globalization: Justice, Ownership, and Accountability”—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC).

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns advises Item 09-10, the Resolution on Just Globalization: Justice, Ownership, and Accountability, be approved with the following amendments to strengthen the recommendations:

1. Amend Recommendation B.2 to insert the following as B.2.c and accordingly reassign the following items under B.2: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through and with brackets; text to be added or inserted is shown with an underline and with brackets.]

“c. sign and implement the U.N. Convention for the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women (CEDAW) treaty;”

“~~e.~~ d. lead international efforts to establish a small tax on international capital transactions (the so-called Tobin Tax) as a way to discourage currency speculation and stabilize global financial systems; and

“~~d.~~ e. cooperate more closely with other countries and international organizations in creating guidelines and mechanisms to help balance appropriately the interests of transnational corporations and of host or trading nations with weakened internal governance structures.”

2. Amend Recommendation F.4. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through and with brackets; text to be added or inserted is shown with an underline and with brackets.]

“4. Call upon the ACSWP in consultation with ACWC to use a gender lens, to conduct an ethical analysis of present U.S. tax policies and regulations in the global context and in light of prior General Assembly positions, updating the General Assembly’s 1977 policy, drawing on a representative group of experts on taxation and government policy, and recommending appropriate remedies in a study paper for the 219th General Assembly (2010).”

3. Amend Recommendation F.6.d as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through and with brackets; text to be added or inserted is shown with an underline and with brackets.]

“d. Prayerfully consider their own lifestyle and consumption patterns and the impact of ~~advertising and consumerism~~ the sexualization of persons by media and/or marketing, on themselves and their children.”

4. Amend Recommendation F.6.g as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through and with brackets; text to be added or inserted is shown with an underline and with brackets.]

“g. Encourage Presbyterians engaged in global production and trade to utilize codes of business ethics for themselves and their subcontractors that protect workers, the environment and host communities and cultures, working with local non-profit organizations such as ~~COVERCO~~ the Commission for the Verification of Codes of Conduct (COVERCO) in Central America to monitor workplace conditions and safety intentionally looking for partner organizations that uphold human rights principles.”

5. Amend Recommendation F.6.h. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through and with brackets; text to be added or inserted is shown with an underline and with brackets.]

“h. Encourage the following [General Assembly committees and] offices and agencies of the General Assembly Council, as resources allow, to be guided by the relevant sections of this report in their work:

“(1) The Advocacy Committee~~[s-on]~~ [for] Women’s [Concerns,] [and] [the Advocacy Committee for] Racial Ethnic Concerns~~[,]~~ and offices of Justice and Compassion goal area to monitor and advocate against the exploitation of women and children in the work place, unsafe working conditions, drug trafficking and prostitution.”

Rationale

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC) finds the “Resolution on Just Globalization: Justice, Ownership and Accountability” [Item 09-10] insufficient in its examination of gender in relation to its study of globalization. We urge the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) to consider a more thorough study of the gendered aspects of globalization in the future. Recognizing the recommendations are a solid beginning toward that work, ACWC has offered amendments that will strengthen that work in regard to women’s concerns.

1. In the interest of “health and safety” sought by the recommendation, pursuing an international standard for ensuring and securing the health and safety of women is within ACWC’s area of concern. The United States is not a signatory of the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women (CEDAW) treaty, despite the fact that, to date, 181 countries have signed it. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) supports universal ratification of CEDAW, also called the Women’s Convention. This treaty is a legal landmark document establishing that women are entitled to all human rights. In 1979, the convention was adopted by the General Assembly of the United Nations. The 199th General Assembly (1987) requested the Stated Clerk to urge all senators to vote in favor of the ratification of CEDAW in Paragraphs 35.124–.129 (Minutes, 1987, Part I, p. 584). The General Assemblies of 1988, 1992, and 1996 also urged US ratification. Once a country has ratified the Women’s Convention and joined the global movement to end discrimination against women, it has the option to become part of the Committee on CEDAW, it also has the option to submit reports to the UN on their own programs on equal rights for women and, therefore, provide the chance for citizens to voice praises and concerns on women’s rights. Ecumenical leaders, including the PC(USA) Stated Clerk Clifton Kirkpatrick, signed a letter in 2002 stating:

While the United States is a leader in the human rights arena, there are still many instances of gender inequality in the U.S. that need to be addressed. We have learned from U.S. government reports that women are still discriminated against in employment opportunities. One example is "A New Look Through the Glass Ceiling: Where are the Women?" compiled by the U.S. General Accounting Office in January 2002.

We uplift the words of First Lady Laura Bush on International Women’s Day 2002: "Our dedication to respecting and protecting women’s rights in all countries must continue if we are to achieve a peaceful, prosperous, and stable world." The ratification of this Convention is a clear step towards this goal. (See www.pcusa.org/peacemaking/un/cedaw-support for the whole statement)

2. The ACWC has among its responsibilities to monitor General Assembly and General Assembly Council (GAC) actions, resources, and reports. Using a gender lens in this work can be particularly valuable and there is interest for ACWC in this examination of the tax code. When the “joint income tax filing” for married couples was added in 1948, a “secondary earner” bias was also introduced into the U.S. tax code. With the realities of women earning an average of $0.77 for every dollar a man in the same job earns, the reality in most families is that women are the secondary earners. Secondary earners are taxed at a higher rate and that creates disincentives for the persons earning less, often women.

3. The increasingly sexualized portrayals of men, women, and children in advertising and media promote exploitation, minimize humanity, and homogenize diversity. Sexualizing women and their images to sell things is an old phenomenon, but the more recent trends to sexualize children/adolescents and now even men cannot be regarded as a positive move toward equality.

4. The Commission for the Verification of Codes of Conduct (COVERCO) is but one example of an excellent partner for this work. The ACWC applauds the work COVERCO has done to focus on issues of freedom of association, gender and discrimination, and child labor. There are other organizations that model inclusive leadership and work for just and equitable conditions for all workers. For example: the Mexico Solidarity Network, located in Chiapas, Mexico, is an indigenous worker justice organization that models shared leadership and supports women’s economic development and leadership. This organization stands in contrast to a surrounding culture that does not value women equally. Partnerships intentionally created with organizations that value diversity and are culturally proficient improve our own work toward becoming a beloved community.

5. This recommendation has an error of fact. The advocacy committees have separate functions and are entities of the General Assembly. This amendment makes those points more clear.

Item 09-11

[The assembly approved Item 09-11 as amended. See pp. 50, 51.]

Resolution on Human Rights in a Time of Terrorism and Torture

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) do the following:

1. Approve the “Resolution on Human Rights in a Time of Terrorism and Torture,” and direct the Stated Clerk to make the recommendations and background available on the website of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), www.pcusa.org, and distribute copies to sessions and middle governing bodies for study and action;
2. Affirm that the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) opposes the use of torture and all forms of ‘cruel, inhuman, or degrading’ interrogation by all agencies, employees, or agents of the United States government[, and all foreign governments and/or combatants, and] supports the application of the Geneva Conventions to all enemy soldiers and the humane treatment with due process for all combatants held by U.S. forces anywhere in the world, and supports the provisions of the Bill of Rights and the principles of judicial review and congressional oversight over Executive branch operations, now including counterterrorism, Homeland Security, and domestic surveillance programs, both classified and publicly acknowledged;
3. Endorse congressional and judicial remedies for the use of torture and illegal detention by agencies of the U.S. government, such as the appointment of a special counsel, open hearings, appropriate investigation, and legislation outlawing the use of “extraordinary rendition” and extraterritorial prison facilities.
4. Request the Stated Clerk and the Moderator of the 217th General Assembly (2006) to include salient concerns of this report in any public summary of the actions of the assembly directed to public officials, ecumenical partners, and church leaders;
5. Encourage members, sessions, presbyteries, and synods to pray for all victims of human rights abuse and those who persecute them, particularly in their observances of Human Rights Day (each December 10), to seek ways to assist these victims and prevent further abuse of others;
6. Authorize the Office of the Stated Clerk, as in the case of conscientious objectors, to express support for the principled refusal on grounds of Christian conscience by Presbyterian military, intelligence, and other personnel who are asked to participate in coercive and/or covert detention of prisoners;
7. Authorize the Stated Clerk, in consultation with the Advisory Committees on Litigation and the Constitution and the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy, to express support for the protection of the right of privacy for U.S. citizens against intrusion by government or private entities; and
8. Urge all Presbyterians, while being attentive to issues of human rights related to U.S. policy and practice, to continue to advocate for human rights in the many places around the world where those rights are in jeopardy.

Rationale

I. Introduction

For the past eighteen years, the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) and its predecessor bodies have worked with the Worldwide Ministries Division (WMD), the Office of Corporate Witness, the Presbyterian Washington Office (PWO), and the Presbyterian United Nations Office (PUNO) to provide a brief overview of human rights concerns around the world. This resolution on Human Rights focuses on the United States, as our nation has gone from being a leader in the cause of human rights to a cause for alarm among democratic nations. None of the observations in this report are pleasant to make, nor are they meant to delineate the full scope of human rights’ concerns in the world. Ongoing, entrenched human suffering and pervasive abuse of power continue to plague the peoples of the world.

This resolution follows the biblical model provided by the prophet Amos, who surveyed the countries around Judah with judgments attributed to God, before turning to Jerusalem. Amos summarizes the sins of each of the nations and warns, “... for three transgressions ... and for four, I [God] will not revoke the punishment” (Amos 2:6). He addresses his greatest grief to his own nation: “[Woe to] those who are at ease in Zion ... O you that ... bring near a reign of violence ... you have turned justice into poison and the fruit of righteousness into wormwood” (Amos 6:1, 3, 12). We also feel the weight of Jesus’ words, “... first take the log out of your own eye, and then you will see clearly to take the speck out of your neighbor’s eye” (Matt. 7:5).

The policy basis for this resolution is strong, as human rights concerns of the assembly date back well before the church’s advocacy for the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. A strong sample comes from the 1937 assembly:

“Every person being thus infinitely valuable in the sight of God, all are to be regarded as equally entitled to the rights granted by society or inherent in them as human beings... Personality being of infinite worth, there are areas of personal life which no state, no economic or social force should be authorized to invade. The claims of the totalitarian state to dominion over all the acts and thoughts of its subjects must be rejected. Freedom of thought and its expression, freedom of assembly, freedom of religious worship, and freedom of conscience that commands one to act in obedience to God and not in submission to man-made decree, must be preserved as the foundation statutes of a Christian brotherhood.” (Minutes, PCUSA, 1937, Part I, p. 217)

Past General Assembly Human Rights Reports also contain valuable Bible studies and human rights documents.

War remains the chief cause of widespread human rights violations, though acts of terrorism are also dramatic violations of human rights by non-State actors. There are also cultural factors such as female genital mutilation in parts of Africa and selective abortion in parts of Asia that discriminate against women.

In Africa, the Darfur region of the Sudan remains a major concern of the international community, as massive displacement of Black Sudanese groups by Arabs from the northern part of that country continues, using rape and even slavery as means for a kind of “ethnic cleansing.” Border areas of Chad are reportedly also being terrorized. Civil warfare in Liberia appears to have stopped; warfare continues in parts of the Congo, on the Ethiopian/Eritrean border, in parts of Somalia and Sierra Leone. (Trade in “conflict diamonds” is also being more regulated.) The government of Meles Zenawi in Ethiopia is blamed for violently refusing to cede power to an elected government, for massacres on June 8 and November 1–5, and for the imprisonment of 100,000 or more civilians in concentration camps. In Nigeria, relatively low-level warfare between Christian and Muslim regions has ended. Zimbabwe remains a dictatorship under Robert Mugabe with forced displacement of shantytowns and widespread malnourishment.

In the Middle East, the war with terrorism has come to Iraq, although there are signs that the constant bombings of civilians and U.S. troops are part of a simmering civil war, as well as resentment of the occupation. In Lebanon, after the assassination of former Prime Minister Rafik Hariri, Syrian troops withdrew. There have also been votes and other steps toward democracy in Lebanon, Jordan, Saudi Arabia, and Egypt, all of which have also experienced terror attacks. Recent National Assembly elections in Egypt took place amid several violent confrontations by the country’s security forces against supporters of Muslim Brotherhood-affiliated candidates. Nevertheless, a significant number of seats in the assembly were gained by the Brotherhood who, on the one hand, have expressed openness to dialogue with the country’s Christians but whose campaigns, on the other hand, had manifested flagrant ill will towards them. In Egypt also, the government’s decision to deport large numbers of Sudanese refugees after incidents of violent assault by the police, was troubling to human rights observers. In Palestine, Israel continues to annex territory it has occupied since 1967, in defiance of international law. Israel’s unilateral withdrawal of settlements in Gaza, without negotiation on the West Bank and Jerusalem and while retaining controls on Gaza’s borders and resources, continues to cause pessimism about the revival of a “peace process.” The poor and less-educated population of Gaza are themselves seeing intra-Arab violence. Some militant factions continue to shoot mortars into Israeli settlements and send suicide bombers into Israel proper, although the security barrier (or “wall”)—generally built on Palestinian land—has reduced the number of suicide bombers.

In Latin America, a war continues in Colombia between a one-time liberation movement and a mixture of government and paramilitary forces, with U.S. observers and drug war operatives active mainly in areas controlled by the government. Human rights work among the 5 million or so displaced persons is itself dangerous, as a recent series of Presbyterian News Reports describes. (See six part series by Alexa Smith, www.pcusa.org/pcnews.) Haiti remains a failed state with high levels of violence since the removal of Jean-Bertrand Aristide, under whom there had been violence on a much lesser scale. Guatemala still suffers from violence, especially against Mayan Indians and sometimes involving Presbyterian church members and leaders. Native peoples also suffer in the Amazon River basin in fights over resources, with tribal, religious and human rights leaders killed. Peru continues to have limits on democracy. (See the film “State of Fear” based on that country’s truth and reconciliation commission after 2002.) Others would point to Venezuela as emulating Cuba, but the Hugo Chavez government seems most concerned about intervention from the outside. Brazil, Argentina, and Chile, especially with Pinochet, are all dealing still with the legacies of brutal dictatorships in the 1960s–80s.

In Asia, Afghanistan remains in part a war zone, and women’s rights in particular are limited outside the capital of Kabul. Past reports have noted dictatorships participating in the “war on terror” while oppressing their own citizens, such as Uzbekistan and Turkmenistan. Similar criticisms have been aimed at Azerbaijan and Kazakhstan. Partly due to earthquake tragedies, the Kashmir region has not been a flashpoint between India and Pakistan. Pakistan, Bangladesh, and to a lesser extent, India, continue to have human rights problems, in part due to weak rural legal systems, caste prejudice, and religious discrimination. Cultural prejudice against women leads to some violence and, in the case of girl babies, some selective abortion occurs due to the availability of ultrasound. Christians constitute minorities under pressure in these and many other countries, partly due to their being the most widespread religious group in the world. (See “Washington Discovers Christian Persecution,” New York Times, 12/21/97.)

Terrorism has struck Bali; the Tsunami has caused great damage but less warfare in Christian and Muslim minority regions of Indonesia. Sri Lanka remains riven by Tamil-Sinhalese tensions, with danger of increased hostilities. Nepal also faces low-level warfare, through Maoist rebels. In the Philippines, pastors and members of the United Church of Christ have been targeted for their work on labor and human rights, while low-level warfare against Muslim groups continues on the island of Mindanao. (Detailed material on the Philippine situation is available from the Asia-Pacific area office and ACSWP.)

Officially Communist nations continue to practice or condone human rights abuses: North Korea remains a closed society, with much starvation and malnutrition. China’s legal and judicial authorities, while improving since Tiananmen Square’s suppressions, are still linked to widespread use of extreme interrogation and deprivation of due process, especially in rural areas. After some years of thawing relations with the United States, Cuba imprisoned critics of its regime who received funding from U.S. government agencies. Myanmar, formerly Burma, remains a dictatorship and closed society.

In Europe, there have been steady improvements despite continued problems. This is most dramatically affirmed in the case of Ukraine, where a democratically elected president was poisoned with dioxin but has survived to run his nation despite continued social tensions. United Nations (UN)/North Atlantic Treaty Organisation (NATO) peacekeepers continue to patrol in the Kosovo province of the former Yugoslavia, but some war criminals from the most violent period of ethnic cleansing are being prosecuted. Turkey, possibly an entrant to the European Union in the near future, has moderated its treatment of its Kurdish minority and some dissident writers.

From this brief survey, it is clear that despite widespread international acceptance of the concept of human rights, the actions of governments dramatically limit their exercise. Preemptive legal and extralegal approaches by the U.S. government since 9/11/01 have changed not only U.S. practice but that of some allies: Philippines, Uzbekistan, Saudi Arabia, Israel, Nigeria, Colombia, Haiti, Indonesia, Pakistan, even Mexico. As noted above, in some regions of the world participation in the “war on terror” can become part of a rationale for prosecuting domestic opponents and opposition groups, or allowing them to be targeted by paramilitary and/or “death squad” units. These government opponents and targets are sometimes members of Christian or other religious minorities.

Past human rights updates have described the strengthening of concepts of religious rights, social and cultural rights. The church has also noted the pressure that religious discrimination in some forms of Islamization have put on Christian minorities in some Muslim countries, and how state religions discriminate and penalize Christians in some non-Muslim countries as well such as Sri Lanka, India (in certain provinces), and Israel (in certain respects). Today, however, Christianity as associated with America is being linked with violations of the Geneva Conventions and efforts to circumvent human rights generally. This makes the situation of Christian minorities more precarious and weakens evangelism by all Christians.

There are other forms of human rights violations in the world, including bonded child labor, the trafficking of children and women, and the mistreatment of immigrants. With the General Assembly’s recent shift to biannual meetings, we encourage Presbyterians to shift with us to website-based reporting for urgent and the most up-to-date information. This resolution focuses upon human rights concerns that have come to the fore regarding U.S. policy and practice, both in dealing with persons incarcerated in the context of efforts to curtail terrorism and in dealing with U.S. citizens, as well. Some of these concerns are delineated below and are reflected in the recommendations placed before the 217th General Assembly (2006).

II. Human Rights and the United States

A. Torture and Detention

Though the headlines have varied, the message has been too often: torture is back, and in American uniform and interrogation rooms. Press stories worldwide have included: the picture of the hooded Iraqi in cruciform position, mocked by wires attached to his near naked body, now a global media icon; names with new meanings such as Abu Ghraib, Baghram Airbase, Guantanamo Bay; alleged secret prisons in Egypt, Saudi Arabia, Uzbekistan, Eastern Europe, as well as Afghanistan and Iraq; Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) agents abducting suspects in one country and sending them to another (“extraordinary rendition”); presidential advisors writing legal defenses of the use of physical and psychological coercion; and public strategies to circumvent the Geneva Conventions and U.S. Constitutional law by indefinite detention without trial in extraterritorial military facilities.

Does the Christian Church remain silent? No, and Presbyterians have joined together to speak out. (See Call to Say "No!" to Torture www.pcusa.org/peacemaking/torturestatement.htm.) Conferences on torture in light of the Christian faith have been held in Florida and at Princeton Theological Seminary, and survivors of torture have addressed congregations and presbyteries in several areas.

What we say about the intentional cruelty of U.S. soldiers, spies, and shadowy “contractors” is what we have said about the same cruelty by others: it degrades us all, and must be renounced and repented of before the Living God, whose eye sees into every hidden cell and secret budget allocation. Our basis for speaking: Jesus Christ, the head of the Church, was tortured to death, first by being flogged, and then by a slow form of capital punishment. Thus we join countless patriots in saying: “This is not America.” But deeper down we know, too: “This is not Christian.”

The last two years have been marked by a movement from contradictory official denials as torture photos surfaced, to definitions of interrogation that are themselves tortured, and in some cases to the promotion and appointment to higher rank and office of those who authorized torture and had authority over places where it was and may still be practiced. Several low-ranking soldiers have been disciplined; one general retired; and another choosing retirement rather than the public review required for promotion. The number of reported deaths of prisoners in U.S. custody in Iraq and Afghanistan stands at 108 (<http://www.cbsnews.com/stories/2005/03/16/terror/main680658.shtml?CMP=ILC-SearchStories>). The U.S. military has acknowledged numerous suicide attempts and hunger strikes in Guantanamo Bay, where in early February of 2005 thirty prisoners were being kept alive by feeding tubes (New York Times, February 9, 2006). Other governments have protested U.S. policy and have extracted their nationals from U.S. prisons. The Red Cross and UN agencies have sought unfettered access to these detention centers, often without success (www.boston.com/news/world/europe/articles/2005/11/03/red_cross_seeks). In point of fact, the Red Cross repeatedly sought to alert the U.S. military command in Iraq and the Department of Defense to credible reports of torture at Guantanamo Bay and Abu Ghraib, reports that were ignored or suppressed.

As late as December 2005, Vice President Richard Cheney and Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld sought to permit continuance of torture in interrogations of terror suspects by CIA operatives and to exempt those interrogators and related military personnel from potential prosecution for war crimes or violations of U.S. military codes of conduct. A few public figures have defended the use of extreme physical pressures to obtain vital information, with some contrasting our practices with the beheadings, targeted assassinations, and suicide bombings of others. While the not-so-random cruelty of fanatics and use of missiles and mortars in civilian areas may be more vicious and violent than the abuse of individuals in U.S.-controlled prisons, such justifications for torture set the bar of civilized behavior quite low and expose our own captured service personnel to similar mistreatment. America has lost much of both its honor and its credibility. Efforts to exempt U.S. citizens and military personnel from jurisdiction of the International Criminal Court, and to weaken that court itself, only underline the indefensible nature of U.S. policy. These matters also remain important because the U.S. government maintains prisons around the world, with 14,767 in prison in Iraq alone as of February 15, 2006 (New York Times, 2/15/06)

The church stands by its moral and theological arguments, applicable abroad as at home:

... While the Christian Faith in itself cannot provide the details of a good justice system, it can and should speak about the fundamental motives and final goals of a criminal justice system ... and some criteria for evaluating actual practices ... (Minutes, PCUS 1978, Part I, pp. 194–95)

We reaffirm the actions that previous General Assemblies have identified as necessary to bring justice and compassion into the fabric of the prison system. (Minutes, 1988, Part I, p. 1028)

There is the pragmatic argument that evidence provided by extreme methods is generally much less reliable than that of standard U.S. police procedure. Alleged evidence for Saddam Hussein’s Weapons of Mass Destruction programs, for example, came in part from one individual, Ibn Al-Shaykh Al-Libi, put through extreme measures (New York Times, Douglas Jehl, 12/9/05; also Newsweek and The New Yorker). In other countries, as past human rights updates have described, the purpose of torture is not actually to extract intelligence but to break the sense of self; it is a form of intimate, humiliating terror, a crime against the human spirit and God’s image in us. Neither does such torture prevent terrorism, as the Israeli Government of Ehud Barak determined when it formally ended the practices of extreme interrogations on Palestinians and Lebanese.

Patriotic Americans may wonder at how such a major ethical problem could develop so quickly in so many areas. Some believe that legal opinions such as that of August 1, 2002, developed by now-Attorney General Alberto Gonzales and others, which narrowly defined torture as pain “equivalent in intensity to the pain accompanying serious physical injury, such as organ failure, impairment of bodily function, or even death” had immediate effect, ratcheting up the amount of brutality that would not be considered torture. Others see the refusal of judicial process or visitation by the Red Cross or UN monitors allowing abuses to grow unchecked, especially in secret locations. While the removal of legal controls or accountability may have helped create a climate of impunity for U.S. and private security interrogators so lax that digital photography was widespread (more so than has been made public), two government reports and the testimony of survivors indicate that the practices of torture were widespread and routine. (See “Making Torture Legal,” Anthony Lewis, The New York Review, 7/15/04 and “Abu Graib: The Hidden Story,” Mark Danner, The New York Review, 10/7/04)

One of the panels, headed by James Schlesinger, whose members were chosen by Defense Secretary Rumsfeld, determined that “CIA’s detention and interrogation practices contributed to a loss of accountability at Abu Ghraib,” though it did not have the authority to investigate the CIA itself. The other panel, also reporting in July of 2004, was headed by Major General George Fay and interviewed at least twenty-five military intelligence officers and private contractors. That report, as summarized by Catholic Church human rights researchers James Hodge and Linda Cooper:

...details some forty-four incidents, including the stripping, hooding and sodomizing of detainees; subjecting them to temperature extremes; leading them around naked on leashes; and attaching electrical wires to their genitals. In one case, two naked youths were terrorized by snarling, unmuzzled military dogs held by military personnel who competed to try to make the teenagers defecate.” In the Fay report’s own words, “what started as nakedness and humiliation, stress and physical training, carried over into sexual and physical assaults.”

Human Rights Watch confirms that U.S. forces in Iraq, Afghanistan and Guantanamo Bay have “used interrogation techniques including hooding, stripping detainees naked, subjecting them to extremes of heat, cold, noise and light, and depriving them of sleep—in violation of the Geneva Conventions and the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment. This apparently routine infliction of pain, discomfort and humiliation has expanded in all too many cases into vicious beatings, sexual degradation, sodomy, near drowning and near asphyxiation (“water-boarding”—ed.). Detainees have died under questionable circumstances...”

Writing in the New England Journal of Medicine (July 2004), Robert J. Lifton writes of mounting evidence that “U.S. doctors, nurses and medics have been complicit in torture and other illegal procedures in Iraq, Afghanistan and Guantanamo Bay... [They have]... turned over prisoners’ medical records to interrogators who could use them to exploit the prisoners’ weaknesses and vulnerabilities,” including physical and psychological conditions.

Hodge and Cooper build on the work of Alfred McCoy, author of Closer Than Brothers, a book on the influence of CIA torture methods in the Philippine military, to outline the development and spread these techniques.

The basic techniques—the use of stress positions, sensory deprivation and sexual humiliation—are aimed at making victims feel responsible for their own pain and suffering...while it appears less abusive than physical torture, the psychological torture paradigm causes deep psychological damage to both victims and their interrogators, who can become capable of unspeakable physical cruelties.

The results of the CIA torture experiments (drawn from research funded in the 1950s in university psychology departments) were codified in 1963 in a secret manual known as “KUBARK Counter-intelligence Interrogation” (used widely in Vietnam in the Phoenix Program)...In 1983, the KUBARK manual provided a model for the CIA’s “Human Resource Exploitation Training Manual,” whose methods were used by the ...U.S.-trained Honduran Battalion 3-16 during the tenure of then-U.S. ambassador to Honduras John Negroponte, now ambassador to Iraq.

About the same time, the CIA compiled the ‘Psychological Operations in Guerrilla Warfare’ for the Nicaraguan contra commandos...Six manuals, also linked to a CIA program, were used at the U.S. Army’s School of the Americas and distributed across Latin America by Army Mobile Training Teams in the 1980’s. They advocated everything from executions of guerrillas to extortion, coercion and false imprisonment...” (National Catholic Reporter, Nov. 5, 2004, p. 12).

Human rights organizations have copies of these manuals, but additional documentation was discovered by The New York Times (in particular in a 1988 interview with Florencio Caballero, a former torturer), the Baltimore Sun (via a lawsuit in 1995), and by Representative Joseph Kennedy in his five-year effort to close the “School of the Americas.” Space does not permit further descriptions of techniques of “debility, dependence, and dread,” or the phenomenon of “ghost detainees,” some killed during interrogation, whose identities and locations are never released but whose existence was confirmed in the Fay and Schlesinger reports. (Note: Hodge and Cooper’s book, Disturbing the Peace: The Story of Father Roy Bourgeois and the Movement to Close the School of the Americas, Maryknoll: Orbis, 2004, contains much additional information.) Descriptions of the process of “extraordinary rendition” only magnify the concerns about due process and humane treatment, as in those cases suspects are spirited from one country for interrogation in another country usually known for human rights abuses. (See “Outsourcing Terror,” Jane Meyer, The New Yorker, 2/14–21/05)

B. The Fate of the Guantanamo Bay Prisoners

It has been more than four years since about four hundred of the five hundred plus current prisoners were put in prison without trial. Some of the alleged Al Qaeda or Taliban members were captured on the battlefield; some were obtained by offering rewards or bounties to warlords, as was the first prisoner to be tried before a military tribunal in Hamdan v. Rumsfeld. Readers may remember the treatment of John Walker Lindh, “the American Taliban,” who was initially kept naked and without food or medical attention, but then due to his citizenship, was given a legal hearing and negotiated sentence. After lengthy diplomatic protest, several British, Australian, and other nationals were also released; over time other prisoners have been sent back to prison or freedom in less influential countries of origin.

The U.S. Government has classified the prisoners on Guantanamo as “illegal enemy combatants” outside the jurisdiction of the Geneva Conventions concerning prisoners of war and, as Guantanamo Bay is on Cuban territory, outside the jurisdiction of the Bill of Rights and U.S. Constitutional law. Thus the Bush Administration has taken upon itself to develop a number of unique legal categories and proceedings, justified by its own definitions of the requirements of the “war on terror.” After a Supreme Court ruling that some kind of hearings be held (under the ancient right of habeas corpus, requiring some public justification for imprisonment), President Bush issued a three-page Presidential Order establishing tribunals of between three and seven military officers selected by the Administration to judge the captives (November 13, 2001). Two-thirds majorities are required for sentences of up to life imprisonment; unanimous votes are required for the death penalty (New York Times, January 8, 2006, Magazine, p. 51).

The conduct of these tribunals—if allowed by the Supreme Court—is important to us as Christians because of our equal standing as creatures before God, and Jesus’ clear urging that we “love our enemies,” whether or not they are brought to repentance. Doubts about the Administration’s capacity or intent to provide impartial justice would not only reflect on the reputation of the United States as a nation of laws, but on the responsibility of Christians who participate in proceedings that appear to deny captives their rights. Christians in other countries may suffer for our perceived sins; on a larger scale, the attractiveness of the democratic project of America will be further diminished, particularly in the Muslim world.

Eight features of the trials raise questions about the growth of Executive power and even “privilege” (a phrase not found in the Constitution):

1. The U.S. Congress, constitutionally authorized to declare war and convene military tribunals, had no role in the creation of the Guantanamo tribunals, their definition of war crimes, rules for evidence gathered by coercive means, etc.
2. Because evidence might be classified intelligence obtained by secret means, detainees may not know the full nature of accusations against them and their potential jeopardy.
3. The U.S. judiciary would have no role: appeals would go before three military judges chosen by the secretary of defense.
4. The likely charge of conspiracy, without evidentiary safeguards, may tend to serve as a “catch-all” equalizing the seriousness of offenses of all accused, despite widely varying levels of culpability. Thus international law and recent (1996 and 1997) congressional definitions of war crimes did not include, “conspiracy.”
5. Unlike genocide, for example, terrorism itself is not a settled part of international law.
6. The long delays in providing limited legal access for a limited number of prisoners have created a climate of deepened anti-Americanism and fatalism among many in the prison camp. Their doubt concerning American justice breeds distrust of their lawyers, thereby weakening their cases. As of December 30, 2005, more than thirty detainees were being forced to prevent their hunger strikes from leading to further suicides.
7. While a single appeal of the legality of the tribunals goes forward, the U.S. Senate voted on that same December 30 to deny all Guantanamo prisoners the right of habeas corpus. This amendment by Senator Lindsay Graham to a defense bill, now called the Detainee Treatment Act of 2005, provides congressional support for depriving the prisoners of due process.
8. On the U.S. military side, slow or no due process creates a legal limbo without an exit strategy, for not only is “justice delayed, justice denied,” but Islamist hatred of U.S. “domination” puts our troops constantly at risk. (These points are drawn from numerous reports on the tribunals and legal status of Guantanamo detainees, including: Time 6/20/05 and New York Times 12/19/05)

C. Increased Surveillance of U.S. Citizens Without Court Warrants

In late December of 2005, The New York Times published information it had held for many months concerning the Bush Administration’s practice of spying on U.S. citizens and groups without warrants. In addition to secret wiretaps and spying on approximately 150 anti-war and other activist groups, the president signed a directive to circumvent the secret court already set up to grant permission for large scale electronic surveillance, typically done on a smaller scale in past administrations. The admissions and defenses of these practices appear to contradict the president’s earlier assurances that the USA Patriot Act would not permit spying on U.S. citizens without court warrant. For these reasons and others, Congress has limited the renewal of the Patriot Act’s manifold expansion of Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) and CIA powers for six months from mid-December.

Starting soon after September 11, 2001, the president authorized the National Security Agency (NSA), itself begun in absolute secrecy under President Truman in 1952, to monitor the personal communications of U.S. citizens without going to the special court set up to provide warrants. Operating out of Yakima, Washington, and Sugar Grove, West Virginia, the NSA routinely intercepts all international communications (The New York Times, “The Agency that could be Big Brother,” by James Bamford, December 25, 2005, 4:1). What the Bush Administration has done is to extend a practice called “data mining” to cover “hundreds, perhaps thousands” of people whose communications may fit into a pattern or otherwise reveal connections to terrorist groups.

In 1978, following the abuses of the Nixon Administration and the investigations of foreign and domestic intelligence gathering by the Senate (headed by Senator Frank Church), Congress established a Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Court (or FISA) to which government agencies would need to show “probable cause” to receive authorization to conduct wiretaps and other surveillance. In twenty-seven years, approximately 19,000 warrants have been granted; only five were denied, and of these only one appealed to the Foreign Intelligence Court of Review. Thus there seems to be little cause for circumventing a body that has been very willing to authorize government surveillance already. The FISA court is also ready to act on emergency requests, making it hard to justify years of surveillance as “emergency measures” occasioned by the “war on terror.”

Despite the apparent curtailment of similar Defense Department operations of this kind in 2002 (the Total Intelligence Awareness program run by Ret. Admiral John Poindexter) in 2004 the General Accounting Office identified fifty-two agencies and departments using or planning “data mining” techniques, with the Department of Defense reporting the largest number. “These departments and agencies reported 199 data-mining efforts, of which 68 are planned and 131 are operational” (The New York Times, December 25, 2005, 4:4). While one can assume that some of these efforts are essentially computer searches of mounds of unclassified data, the classified searches may not fall under any judicial or legislative review as to their scope and justification.

The Senate Judiciary Committee is currently investigating how the president’s spying directive affects the Fourth Amendment against “illegal searches and seizures.” In addition to requesting information from senators or representatives, concerned Presbyterians may look at the government oversight section of the website of the Electronic Privacy Information Center, or the American Civil Liberties Union. In addition to expanded electronic surveillance at home, the Department of Homeland Security and more local police bodies have been conducting more surveillance of anti-war and other protest groups, from the Catholic Worker to PETA, or People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals, to bicycle demonstrations in New York City (New York Times, 12/25/05, 4:4).

D. Human Rights and the Criminal Justice System of the United States

Here we briefly set the civil liberties concerns above in the context of ongoing concerns within the U. S. criminal justice system, concerns that predate responses and reactions to terrorism.

As noted in previous human rights updates, there are widely varying standards for legal assistance, sentencing guidelines, and prison conditions among the states in the United States. Financial ability affects the quality of legal representation, as one would expect; the overall U.S. criminal justice system favors punitive rather than restorative or rehabilitative responses. Hence the United States has the highest percentage of its citizens in prison of any nation on earth, vastly different than other developed nations, though U.S. rates of crime and gun violence are higher as well. Former felons are also in many cases deprived of their right to vote after their debt to society has been paid. The percentage of Black, Hispanic, and Native American convicts is also much higher than their proportion of the overall population. The U.S. is also unique among developed nations in using the death penalty, a practice opposed since 1959 and 1966 respectively in the former United Presbyterian and Presbyterian Church in the United States, and in 1977 and 1985.

The disparity among racial ethnic groups extends to Death Row. In 1976, thirty-eight states began to reinstitute the death penalty, which had been judged “cruel and unusual” punishment. Since then, more than one thousand executions have taken place. From data on the first 983 of those executed (www.deathpenaltyinfo.org/factsheet) can be gathered the following statistics and information:

- The twelve states without a reinstated death penalty are Alaska, Maine, Minnesota, Vermont, Hawaii, Massachusetts, North Dakota, West Virginia, Iowa, Michigan, Rhode Island, and Wisconsin. The District of Columbia also has no death penalty.
- In 96 percent of the states where there have been reviews of race and the death penalty, there was a pattern of either race-of-victim or race-of-defendant discrimination, or both (Prof. David Baldus report to the American Bar Association (ABA), 1998).
- 98 percent of the chief district attorneys in death penalty states are white; only 1 percent are black (Professor Jeffrey Pokorak, Cornell Law Review, 1998).
- A sophisticated statistical study in Philadelphia found that for similar crimes committed by similar defendants, blacks received the death penalty at a 38 percent higher rate than all others (The Death Penalty in Black and White—Death Penalty Information Center, 1998).

- A comprehensive study on the death penalty in North Carolina found that the odds of receiving a death sentence rose by 3.5 times among those defendants whose victims were white (Professor Jack Boger and Dr. Isaac Unah, University of North Carolina, 2001).

A summary of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)'s position on the death penalty may be found in a recent statement by the Stated Clerk issued on December 2, 2005, that reaffirmed the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)'s strong witness on human rights concerns related to the criminal justice system. In his statement, he reaffirmed this branch of the body of Christ's policy positions against capital punishment. In addition, he "call[ed] on all the leaders of state governments to cease the practice of capital punishment in the United States of America." (For the full text of the Stated Clerk's statement go to www.pcusa.org/oga/newsstories/cappunishment.htm.)

There has been some progress at least in the administration of the death penalty. DNA evidence is being used to overturn convictions of innocent people. The Supreme Court has raised the age at which one can be executed to eighteen, and mentally-retarded perpetrators may appeal their convictions on that ground, assuming the provision of competent legal assistance.

Related to the treatment of prisoners, the 215th General Assembly approved a Resolution Calling for the Abolition of For-Profit Private Prisons (go to www.pcusa.org/oga/publications/private-prisons.pdf). That assembly stated:

In a humane society, in a democratic society, there are some things that can never be for sale, even and especially when they involve "one of the least of these followers of mine." Even if for profit private prisons could achieve significant cost savings to the tax-payer, which in fact they have not been able to do, they would still be morally unacceptable. Private prisons are not an economic but a deep religious and ethical issue, a cornerstone of our collective work to put justice back into the so-called "criminal justice system." The moral concern and authority of the faith community make it critical that our voices be heard and our weight be felt. (Minutes, 2003, Part I, p. 439)

The 217th General Assembly (2006), like its predecessors, calls for fair and humane criminal justice policies. This assembly urges the members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to continue to work to ensure that the rights of all people are equally protected (victims and offenders). To do otherwise would go against our Reformed tradition's teaching. The church of Christ is called to be Christ's faithful evangelist "... engaging in the struggle to free people from sin, fear, oppression, hunger, and injustice" (Book of Order, G-3.0300c(3)(c)).

Appendix A Selected Human Rights Organizations

The following organizations provide action strategies and/or research information on human rights violations. This list highlights only a few of the best-known organizations. Survey the members of your study group or congregation. You will probably discover that some of them are already affiliated with human rights organizations in your region or community. We encourage you to learn more about all those groups and consider which ones may be most helpful to you as you carry on your concerns of human rights.

Item 09-12

[The assembly answered Item 09-12 by the action taken on Item 09-15. See pp. 50, 51.]

On Developing Ways to Promote Humane Reform of National Immigration Laws—From the Synod of the Southwest.

The Synod of the Southwest overtures the 217th General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to:

1. Recognize that our present national immigration policies are not working effectively along our southern border with Mexico. Rather than stemming the tide of illegal immigration, the policies have had the unintended consequences of increasing deaths in the desert, the perpetuation of illegal status of whole groups of persons within our borders, and a huge challenge to all of our legal, medical, social, and economic systems.

2. Express our sincere appreciation and respect for Archbishop Roger Mahony and the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Los Angeles for their leadership and strong commitment to support humanitarian aid to immigrants in Christ's name even if such compassion should bring conflict with secular law;

3. Urge all our synods, presbyteries, and congregations to discover other communities of faith and people of conscience to enter into intentional dialogue with them to develop ways to promote humane reform of national immigration laws. Such dialogue should be based upon

a. a theological confession that all of us, our institutions and laws, fall short of the intentions of God, and need to be constantly reviewed and reformed;

b. biblical affirmation that God's bias for the powerless, the stranger, the poor and hungry compel us as disciples to form our legal processes so that all persons are cared for as beloved children of God;

c. our conviction as citizens that border security is important, our country needs to have clear, just, and constitutional immigration laws and policy;

d. the belief that just immigration laws, which protect human life, support the integrity of families, are possible, and can establish legal guest worker programs that benefit both the U.S. economy and worker's families, and address the root causes of illegal immigration; and

e. an increasingly larger view that immigration is not just a problem along our southern border, but is global and historic in its dimensions, and calls for systemic solutions.

ACREC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 09-12

Advice and Counsel on Item 09-12—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC).

Item 09-12 deals with humane reform of national immigration laws, and was sent by the Synod of the Southwest.

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) advises that Item 09-12 be answered by the action taken on Item 09-15.

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 09-12

Advice and Counsel on Item 09-12—From the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC).

Item 09-12 calls for humane reform of national immigration laws.

The Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns concurs with the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns' (ACREC) advice and counsel.

Item 09-13

[The assembly disapproved Item 09-13. See pp. 50, 51.]

On Irish Adoptions—From the Presbytery of Long Island.

The Presbytery of Long Island overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to direct the Stated Clerk to communicate with the civil government and Roman Catholic Church in Ireland our disappointment in the failure to provide information to adoptees separated from their birth mothers due to overseas adoption. Further, that the Stated Clerk encourage the civil government of Ireland and head of the Roman Catholic Church to make information freely available to those seeking their biological parents and families.

Rationale

In the 1940s and 1950s, the civil government and the Roman Catholic Church in Ireland collaborated to send 2,000 babies, born out of wedlock, to the United States for adoption without parental consent.

These adoptees are seeking to find their birth parents, and are being delayed or stopped by both civil and church authorities withholding or covering up vital information.

These adoptees should be allowed to locate their birth parents and families without Irish government or Roman Catholic Church interference.

While the Irish government is not legally bound to reunite families, there is a moral obligation to render assistance in reuniting families torn apart due to the ethos of the time.

Item 09-14

[In response to Item 09-14, the assembly approved an alternate resolution. See pp. 50, 51.]

On Appointing a Task Force to Assess the Effects of Government Faith Based Initiatives—From the Presbytery of New York City.

The Presbytery of New York City overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to direct the Moderator to appoint a nine-member task force to work with synods, presbyteries, and the Washington, D.C. office to assess the effects on witness to society of government faith-based initiatives and other vehicles by which Presbyterian churches and groups closely affiliated with congregations accept moneys from government bodies, with particular attention to contracts affecting public education; to gather information by congregation on the proportion of government contracts and moneys to individual church budgets; and to recommend guidelines on the acceptance of such moneys, especially with regard to public schools, charter schools, after-school programs, tutoring programs, and other such services for public school children; and to assess what guidelines and recommendations should be brought forward to the General Assembly.

In response to Item 09-14, the 217th General Assembly (2006) approved the following alternate resolution:

The 217th General Assembly directs the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP), in consultation with the Presbyterian Washington Office and appropriate program staff, to

- 1. assess the effects on Christian witness to society of government faith-based initiatives and other vehicles by which Presbyterian churches and groups closely affiliated with congregations accept moneys from government bodies, with particular attention to contracts affecting public education;
- 2. consider means to gather information by congregations on the proportion of government contracts and moneys to individual church budgets;
- 3. examine the effectiveness of publicly supported programs in Presbyterian churches, in consultation with presbyteries and synods; and
- 4. recommend to the 218th General Assembly (2008) guidelines on the acceptance of such moneys, especially with regard to public schools, charter schools, after-school programs, tutoring programs, and other such services for public school children.

[Original Financial Implications: (2006) $7,275; (2007) $17,430; (2008) $10,325 (Per Capita—OGA) [Assembly Action: (2006): $0; (2007): $0; (2008): $0]

Rationale

How government moneys affect congregational life, mission, historic commitments, and social witness needs careful and systematic study, guidelines, and possible action by the General Assembly.

COGA COMMENT ON ITEM 09-14

Comment on Item 09-14 from the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly.

Item 09-14 relates to the appointment of a task force.

Under the Standing Rules of the General Assembly, a request to create a task force is treated as a request to create a special committee. The Standing Rules (K.1.a) provide that the purpose of a special committee must be one that cannot be undertaken by the work of an existing entity.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) advises that the cost of a task force such as proposed in Item 09-14 is $35,030 over the period 2006–2008.

The COGA is a committee of fifteen persons, elected by the General Assembly from across the church, made up of elders and ministers who supervise the work of the Office of the General Assembly.

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 09-14

Advice and Counsel on Item 09-14 – From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP)

Item 09-14 from the Presbytery of New York City calls for a study and possible recommendations on the public funding of faith-based initiatives, particularly as this use of tax money affects public education.

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) advises that an alternate resolution to Item 09-14 be approved as provided below:

“The 217th General Assembly directs the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP), in consultation with the Presbyterian Washington Office and appropriate program staff, to

“1. assess the effects on witness to society of government faith-based initiatives and other vehicles by which Presbyterian churches and groups closely affiliated with congregations accept moneys from government bodies, with particular attention to contracts affecting public education;

“2. consider means to gather information by congregation on the proportion of government contracts and moneys to individual church budgets;

“3. examine the effectiveness of publicly supported programs in Presbyterian churches, in consultation with presbyteries and synods; and

“4. recommend to the 218th General Assembly (2008) guidelines on the acceptance of such moneys, especially with regard to public schools, charter schools, after-school programs, tutoring programs, and other such services for public school children.”

Rationale

The ACSWP concurs with the intent of Item 09-14 and because it is a matter of social witness policy, suggests a more usual and less costly approach to such a study and resolution than a Moderator’s task force.

The Office of the General Assembly and the General Assembly Council provided a resource packet on “Faith-based Initiatives & Charitable Choices” in 2001 (PDS #74-360-01-307), drawing on guidance from ACSWP, several program offices, and the Offices of Constitutional and Legal Services. That packet reviewed theological, legal, polity, and church-state issues but public education was not included because early faith-based initiatives dealt primarily with social service programs. The packet could be updated to include information on educational programs.

The first director of the White House Office of Faith-Based and Community Initiatives, John J. DiIulio Jr., now at the University of Pennsylvania, has recently summarized the issues in this growing but controversial area of public expenditure. In “The challenge for faith-based initiatives” (April 27, 2006), Professor DiIulio notes:

For more than three decades, the Supreme Court has permitted government to partner with sacred places that serve civic purposes so long as no public funds are expended for sectarian worship, instruction or proselytizing. Under the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and related laws, houses of worship have the right to take religion into account in hiring...plus a limited ‘ministerial exemption’ to do so in their capacity as community-serving non-profit organizations eligible for public funds.

On efforts to allow public support for proselytizing, however:

The public supports equal treatment, not special treatment. Surveys find about three-quarters agreeing that program beneficiaries ‘should have a variety of options’ including religious providers...But three-quarters also oppose public funding for religious programs that ‘only hire people of the same faith’ or require beneficiaries ‘to take part in religious practices.’

Most religious programs that serve needy children, youth and families are faith-based, not faith-saturated. As reports by Harvard University's Saguaro Seminar have suggested, their real civic claim to fame is not converting vulnerable people to a particular religion but mobilizing faith-motivated volunteers who serve needy people without regard to religion.

The work of sociologist of religion Robert Wuthnow, as well as that of DiIulio and others, explores the religious, administrative, and institutional factors affecting church receipt of public monies and private grants for social services. As the presbytery's overture suggests, the impacts of such funds on our Reformed identity, congregational life, and educational mission can be significant and are worthy of study for the larger church.

Item 09-15

[The assembly approved Item 09-15 as amended. See pp. 50, 51.]

On Advocacy and Welcome for All Immigrants—From the Presbytery of New York City.

The Presbytery of New York City overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to do the following:

1. Reaffirm the 216th General Assembly (2004)'s "Resolution Calling for a Comprehensive Legalization Program for Immigrants Living and Working in the U.S."

2. Affirm that our denomination—mindful of the current realities and threats to our belief system—not sway from our solidarity with, and pledge of service to, all of our brothers and sisters regardless of their race, creed, color, nationality, or residency status.

3. Affirm those Presbyterian congregations and presbyteries that are already standing alongside immigrants and are actively engaged in acts of compassion, empowerment, and advocacy.

4. Challenge each Presbyterian congregation and presbytery to embrace a comprehensive approach to "advocacy and welcome" for immigrants that includes, at the very minimum

~~[a. compassionate responses to immediate human needs;~~

~~[b. creative empowerment of immigrants and courageous advocacy for effective and systemic policy changes, such as a plan for undocumented migrants to achieve legal status;~~

~~[c. a guest worker program with a path to permanent residency;~~

~~[d. transparent access to visas to unify families;~~

~~[e. a call for increased wages for workers of United States owned companies in other countries;~~

~~[f. a call for greater economic development in poor countries to decrease the economic desperation, which forces the division of families and migration.]~~

[a. an opportunity for hard-working immigrants who are already contributing to this country to come out of the shadows, regularize their status upon satisfaction of reasonable criteria, and, over time, pursue an option to become lawful permanent residents and eventually United States citizens;

[b. reforms in our family-based immigration system to significantly reduce waiting times for separated families who currently wait many years to be reunited;

[c. the creation of legal avenues for workers and their families who wish to migrate to the U.S. to enter our country and work in a safe, legal, and orderly manner with their rights fully protected; and

[d. border protection policies that are consistent with humanitarian values and with the need to treat all individuals with respect, while allowing the authorities to carry out the critical task of identifying and preventing entry of terrorists and dangerous criminals, as well as pursuing the legitimate task of implementing American immigration policy.

[e. a call for living wages and safe working conditions for workers of United States-owned companies in other countries;

[f. a call for greater economic development in poor countries to decrease the economic desperation, which forces the division of families and migration.]

5. Affirm the right of each congregation, presbytery, and our denomination as a whole, to speak out clearly and constantly to the media and others regarding the PC(USA)'s call to serve all those in need and to stand with the oppressed, our refusal to be deferred from this mandate, and our willingness to break laws that forbid us to live out our responsibilities to God and to our brothers and sisters who do not have U.S. residency documents.

6. Encourage [~~Presbyterian~~] legislators serving in the House and Senate to actively work across party lines to [~~defeat this proposed legislation while actively working across party lines to achieve more amicable legislation that resolves the conflicts surrounding immigration policy issues~~] [achieve legislation that is consistent with the principles stated in Recommendation 4 above].

7. Affirm the PC(USA)'s commitment to providing sanctuary to anyone in need of safe space, food, or shelter.

8. Advocate these positions through the Washington Office of the PC(USA) and the Office of the Stated Clerk, including amicus curiae briefs, if necessary.

9. Direct the General Assembly Council, through its National Ministries Division, to create and facilitate a network of "immigrant welcome" churches that agree with the affirmations of this overture.

10. Reaffirm that we must find ways to ensure that "marginalized persons" in our society—citizen or not—are not pitted against each other.

~~[11. Reaffirm that the words "justice for all" within our country's Pledge of Allegiance do not represent an either/or proposition.~~

~~[12. Reaffirm that we Presbyterians take the positions stated within this overture because it is right in God's eyes, we can trace our denomination's faith heritage back to its roots in another land and, for the vast majority of us, we can also trace our family heritage back to roots in another land, making all of us immigrants in one form or another.~~

[11. Express our grave concern about the negative impact of the growing effort to make the border more secure through building walls designed to move migrant patterns further into the more dangerous part of the borderlands, by increasing the number of federal agents, and by deploying armed National Guard to the already volatile region.

[12. Commend the visionary efforts of programs such as Just Coffee, Just Trade Centers, and micro-credit programs that strengthens communities and enables people to stay in their homeland through economic development.

[13. Urge presbyteries to develop and implement strategies, policies, and protocols.

[a. to educate their congregations and membership with regard to ministries with immigrant peoples consistent with Item 10-05 ("Resolution Calling for a Comprehensive Legalization Program for Immigrants Living and Working in the United States") approved by the 216th General Assembly (2004), ministries with

[i. undocumented people,

[ii. asylum seekers,

[iii. women and children trafficked into the U.S.A.,

[iv. immigration detainees, and

[v. documented people with immigration issues;

[b. to empower those ministries at a local and presbytery-wide level;

[c. to encourage and support immigrant communities to organize on their own behalf relative to the list of issues in Recommendation 13.a. above.]

Rationale

It is our long-standing church belief that “God sends the church in the power of the Holy Spirit to share with Christ in establishing God’s just, peaceable, and loving rule in the world. ... Justice is the order God sets in human life for fair and honest dealing and for giving rights to those who have no power to claim rights for themselves” (Book of Order, W-7.4001–4002).

This long-standing belief is supported by the biblical vision of “doing justice” which calls for “supporting people who seek the dignity, freedom, and respect they have been denied, working for fair laws and just administration of the law” (Book of Order, W-7.4002c–d).

This long-standing belief is additionally supported by the biblical vision of “welcoming the stranger in the land, seeking to overcome the disparity between rich and poor, bearing witness against political oppression and exploitation, redressing wrongs against individuals, groups, and peoples ... in this nation and in the whole world” (Book of Order, W-7.4002e.–h.).

The church is called “to engage those structures and systems which create or foster brokenness and distortion. Christians respond to these calls through acts of advocacy and compassion, through service in common ministries of the church, and through cooperation with agencies and organizations committed to these ends” (Book of Order, W-7.3003).

The law and the prophets repeatedly call us to care for those in need and to welcome the “stranger in our land.”

The children of Israel were strangers in the land of Egypt and were commanded by God to remember each year that “once you were strangers in the land of Egypt.”

Jesus and his family resided in Egypt as “strangers in the land.”

Jesus taught of the inherent value of all peoples, whether or not they are native to our shores, particularly through the parable of the good Samaritan (Luke 10:30–37).

Jesus calls us to respond to God’s love by loving and serving all the people of God’s world.

There are an estimated 11.5 million to 12 million undocumented persons living in the margins of our society (many of whom had no choice but to leave their home countries where they could no longer support themselves or their families).

The United States House of Representatives has sent to the Senate legislation that, among its many measures, would make it a felony to offer humanitarian assistance to undocumented persons as well as erect walls on our borders to prevent access to our country.

ACREC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 09-15

Advice and Counsel on Item 09-15—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC).

Item 09-15 deals with advocacy and welcome for all immigrants, and was submitted by the Presbytery of New York City.

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) advises that Item 09-15 be approved with the following amendment:

1. Delete Recommendations 4.c. and d.
2. Amend Recommendation 6 as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through and in brackets; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic with an underline and in brackets.]

“Encourage Presbyterian legislators serving in the House and Senate to work actively across party lines to defeat [~~this~~] proposed legislation [~~while actively working across party lines~~] [that would make it a felony to offer humanitarian assistance to undocumented persons and] to achieve more amicable legislation that resolves the conflicts surrounding ‘immigration policy issues.’”

Rationale

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) commends the Presbytery of New York City for bringing Item 09-15 for consideration and action by the 217th General Assembly (2006). This overture is consistent with actions taken by previous General Assemblies in support of humane immigration policies that “express hospitality and openness to the gifts that immigrants bring to our society.”

The ACREC advises that Recommendations 4.c. and d. are addressed more adequately in the Resolution Calling for a Comprehensive Legalization Program for Immigrants Living and Working in the United States, which calls for “the establishment by law of a comprehensive legalization program for undocumented persons already living and working in the United States” and “reform of current immigration policies and procedures to ensure a more timely and humane process.” (See Resolution Calling for a Comprehensive Legalization Program fro Immigrants Living and Working in the United States, Minutes, 2004, Part I, pp. 737, 738, and 746).

On Being Faithfully Engaged in the Ministry of Ending Homelessness—From the Presbytery of New York City.

The Presbytery of New York City overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to do the following:

1. Affirm those Presbyterian congregations who are already actively engaged in acts of compassion, empowerment, and advocacy alongside those who are homeless.

2. Challenge each Presbyterian congregation to embrace a comprehensive approach to ending homelessness that includes compassionate responses to immediate human needs, creative empowerment of homeless individuals, and courageous advocacy for effective and systemic policy changes, such as [housing production] developing and maintaining affordable (i.e. Section 8) housing. homelessness prevention, service provision, and promotion of livable incomes; and specifically, we challenge each congregation to

a. honor the dignity and full humanity of those who are homeless and impoverished, and include them as fully equal and respected members of the congregation and in information-gathering and/or decision-making processes in the congregation’s responses to homelessness;

b. root the congregation’s work to end homelessness in faithful acts of prayer, worship, stewardship, study, and education;

c. actively identify and collaborate with other faith communities, nonprofit agencies, business and government entities at municipal, local, state, and national levels in order to maximize effectiveness; and

d. utilize existing resources on homelessness developed by the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) since 1997 under the Women’s Ministries program area, the Presbyterian Hunger Program, and the Urban Ministries program area, as well as resources developed by the Presbyterian Network to End Homelessness.

3. As Presbyterian congregations engage in acts of compassion, empowerment, and advocacy, the 217th General Assembly (2006) also does the following:

a. [Directs the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy to work in collaboration with the Presbyterian Hunger Program, the Urban Ministries Program, the Washington Office, the Presbyterian Health, Education, and Welfare Association, and the Presbyterian Network to End Homelessness in order to develop a comprehensive and creative policy on ending homelessness. This policy should include initiatives at all levels of the church and government and pay particular attention to the production of affordable housing, the prevention of homelessness, the provision of supportive services, and the promotion of livable incomes that enable families and individuals to live with dignity and to participate fully in society.]

[That the 217th General Assembly (2006) direct the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) to study and update policy on ministry with the homeless in consultation with Presbyterian Hunger Program, Urban Ministries Program, the Presbyterian Washington Office, Presbyterian Health, Education and Welfare Association, Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns, Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns, and the Presbyterian Network to End Homelessness, and bring a resolution with recommendations to the 218th General Assembly (2008).]

b. Directs the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy to consult with other denominations, the National Council of Churches, and the World Alliance of Reformed Churches regarding their initiatives to end homelessness.

c. Directs the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy to report a proposed policy on ending homelessness and provide recommendations for the implementation of this policy to the 218th General Assembly (2008) so that the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) may be more faithfully engaged in the ministry of ending homelessness.

[Financial Implications: (2006): $11,464; (2007): 42,292; (2008): 29,821 (Per Capita—GAC)]

Rationale

“God sends the church in the power of the Holy Spirit to exercise compassion in the world, feeding the hungry, comforting the grieving, caring for the sick, visiting the prisoners, freeing the captives, sheltering the homeless, befriending the lonely” (Book of Order, W-7.3001).

“... The call [to compassion] is accepted as the faithful respond in prayers of confession and intercession, in acts of self-offering, and in offering material goods to be shared in ministries of compassion” (Book of Order, W-7.3002).

“... The church is also called to engage those structures and systems which create or foster brokenness and distortion. Christians respond to these calls through acts of advocacy and compassion, through service in common ministries of the church, and through cooperation with agencies and organizations committed to these ends. ...” (Book of Order, W-7.3003).

God makes continual provision for the poor in God's Law, given to the leaders of Israel and embodied in Christ's life and teaching.

Millions among us find themselves homeless in the United States, which is the most visible and egregious sign of the fact that 37 million people in the United States live below the poverty line, including one in every six children (U.S. Census Bureau), a number that continues to grow even as the national economy grows, increasing disparities between rich and poor.

In response to increased awareness and concern regarding homelessness on the part of Presbyterian congregations and others, a grassroots coalition, the Presbyterian Network to End Homelessness, was established in 2004.

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 09-16

Advice and Counsel on Item 09-16—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

Item 09-16, from the Presbytery of New York City, overtured the 217th General Assembly (2006) to develop a policy on ending homelessness.

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) advises that Item 09-16 be approved with the following amendment and comment:

Amendment:

Replace the final three paragraphs of the recommendation section with the following:

“Directs the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) to study and update policy on ministry with the homeless in consultation with Presbyterian Hunger Program, Urban Ministries Program, The Presbyterian Washington Office, Presbyterian Health, Education and Welfare Association, Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns, Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns, and the Presbyterian Network to End Homelessness, and bring a resolution with recommendations to the 218th General Assembly (2008), including pastoral, ecumenical and public policy approaches to ending homelessness.”

Comment:

1. Currently, as the economic gap continues to widen between the rich and poor in the United States, there is an encouraging movement in a number of major cities to develop policies aimed at ending homelessness within the next decade, and a growing emphasis upon mobilizing resources and forming new partnerships to work toward ending homelessness.

2. Some of the largest city governments, however, are taking resources from social services that prevent homelessness [ending or decreasing support for established and highly successful programs such as WIC (Women, Infants, Children), day care for the persons with mental disabilities, federally funded Section 8 rental housing subsidies, and programs for battered women, etc.] and then finding funds to remove the homeless from city streets.

3. Many hundreds of Presbyterian congregations are engaged in creative ministry with homeless persons, families and individuals. There is a reservoir of knowledgeable professionals and compassionate volunteers within many presbyteries that could be called upon for expert testimony to help the church form a more up-to-date policy. The most comprehensive current policy statement on housing and homelessness is “A Call to Renewed Ministries in Housing,” 1981, accompanied by the study paper, “Lazarus at the Gate” (Minutes, UPCUSA, 1981, Part I, pp. 384–97).

On Requesting That Federal Funds to Pay for Hurricane Relief Not Reduce Existing Programs Needed for Poor or Vulnerable Citizens—From the Presbytery of the Twin Cities Area.

The Presbytery of the Twin Cities Area overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to request that the Federal Government provide funds sufficient to pay for the rebuilding assistance authorized by Congress and that such funds not reduce existing programs needed for poor or vulnerable citizens, and that copies of this resolution be sent to the president of the United States, the vice president of the United States, and all members of Congress.

Rationale

The Presbytery of the Twin Cities Area is asking that the 217th General Assembly (2006) approve the above recommendation.

Hurricanes have caused billions of dollars in damages to the southern United States, with special hardships borne by the poor and underinsured.

The affected people and properties will need substantial financial assistance.

The government is proposing that the Federal budget be slashed and the proceeds be used to pay for hurricane damages.

Most of the budget cuts will adversely affect the poor, the children, and the elderly.

On Urging Presbyteries to Educate and Empower Congregations and Membership for Ministry with Immigrant Groups and Individuals in the United States—From the Presbytery of Mid-Kentucky.

The Presbytery of Mid-Kentucky recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the Presbyterian Church (USA) do the following:

1. Urge its presbyteries to develop and implement strategies, policies, and protocols
 - a. to educate their congregations and membership with regard to ministries with immigrant peoples consistent with Item 10-05 (“Resolution Calling for a Comprehensive Legalization Program for Immigrants Living and Working in the United States”) approved by the 216th General Assembly (2004), ministries with
 - undocumented people;
 - asylum seekers;
 - women and children trafficked into the U.S.A.;
 - immigration detainees; and
 - documented people with immigration issues;
 - b. to empower those ministries at a local and presbytery-wide level.
 - c. to encourage and support immigrant communities to organize on their own behalf relative to the list of issues in 1.a. above.
2. Request that presbyteries share their strategies, policies, and protocols with the General Assembly offices on Immigration Issues and with the National Ministries Division (NMD).
3. Direct the General Assembly offices on Immigration Issues and the NMD share those strategies, policies, and protocols with presbyteries throughout the church.

Rationale

The church is called by Jesus Christ to minister to the hungry, the thirsty, the stranger, the naked, the sick, and the prisoner (Matt. 25:35–46). The Old Testament provides clear mandates to offer hospitality to the stranger (Lev. 19:33–34; Deut. 10:18–19). The church’s ministry and mission seek to be faithful expressions of justice and compassion.

Though we have been instructed that the law has been made for people and not people for the law, Presbyterians ministering to immigrant communities may face serious legal consequences. With new and changing legislation on immigration-related issues, church members assisting immigrants need to be informed about the contents of the legislation, legal and ethical consequences of such ministry, church-state issues, human rights, and provisions for sanctuary.

Immigration law in the United States significantly affects how churches and pastors minister to immigrant peoples and individuals. The current system does not provide a comprehensive legalization system for undocumented people, does not permit family reunification, and does not ensure humane and just treatment for workers.

In the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), the presbytery is responsible “to develop strategy for the mission of the church in its area consistent with G-3.0000” (G-11.0103a). The 216th General Assembly (2004), in Item 10-05 (“Resolution Calling for a Comprehensive Legalization Program for Immigrants Living and Working in the United States”), called upon its members and governing bodies to advocate for “the reform of current immigration policies and procedures to ensure a more timely and humane process.”

We see the current immigration situation as a God-given opportunity for Presbyterians to serve and witness to the needs of these immigrants. Such ministry will also encourage and further the ministry of our multicultural churches.

ACREC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 09-18

Advice and Counsel on Item 09-18—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns.

Item 09-18 deals with urging presbyteries to educate and empower congregations and membership for ministry with migrant groups and individuals in the United States. It was submitted by the Presbytery of Mid-Kentucky.

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns advises that this item be answered by the action taken on Item 09-15.

Item 09-19

[The assembly approved Item 09-19. See pp. 50, 52.]

In light of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)’s theology and practice, the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) do the following:

- 1. Reaffirm the use of consumer action (e.g. boycotts and public protest) in the struggle for economic justice.
- 2. Acknowledge that such action may be called for in the ongoing Campaign for Fair Food.
- 3. Authorize the General Assembly Council to approve Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) participation in such consumer actions if it is taken in accord with existing Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) criteria and in concert with our partners in the Alliance for Fair Food.
- 4. Promote this resolution through preaching, education, and participation in the Campaign for Fair Food by all settings of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) through periodic mailings to congregations and the use of resources available on www.pcusa.org/fairfood.

Resolution in Support of Ongoing Partnership Work with the Coalition of Immokalee Workers and the Campaign for Fair Food

God Has Created a World Where There Is Enough for Everyone

God has created a world in which there is enough for everyone to live and thrive (Genesis 1). Walter Brueggemann, biblical scholar of the Old (First) Testament, insists that the “beginning point for God ... is the wonder and goodness of creation,” and that creation itself is an “exuberant, lyrical, doxological expression of gratitude and amazement for the goodness and generosity of God. The theme that recurs is generosity and abundance. There is enough! There is more than enough!”ⁱ

However, most Florida farmworkers picking tomatoes are earning sub-poverty wages. According to the Department of Labor, their wage (40–45 cents per 32 pound bucket) has remained stagnant for more than twenty-five years and their median annual income ($7,500) is below poverty level.ⁱⁱ In addition to sub-poverty wages, farmworkers work 10–12 hour days in pesticide-laden fields, have no right to overtime pay, no sick leave, no benefits, and no right to organize. Some farmworkers are held in modern-day slavery: they are held against their will and forced to work, often in isolated labor camps, receive little or no pay, are watched by guards, and endure actual violence or threats of violence.ⁱⁱⁱ

Presbyterians confess that “life is a gift to be received with gratitude and a task to be pursued with courage. [People are] free to seek ... life within the purpose of God: to develop and protect the resources of nature for the common welfare, to work for justice and peace in society, and in other ways to use [their] creative powers for the fulfillment of human life” (The Book of Confessions, “The Confession of 1967,” PC(USA), 9.17).

We Are Stewards of God’s Creation

Created in God’s image, the Divine has appointed us stewards of creation, which includes our economic life. Such stewardship involves discernment and decision-making such that our words and actions reflect our belief in God’s sovereignty and good purpose for creation. “God alone is to be obeyed. Christians are first to ask of the economic system not whether it is most efficient or productive of economic goods, as important as that is, but how it reflects the purpose of God for creation” (Christian Faith and Economic Justice, PC(USA), Minutes, 1984, Part I, p. 370, paragraph 29.081).

Mexican, Guatemalan, and Haitian farmworkers came together in 1993 to form the Coalition of Immokalee Workers to address sub-poverty wages and violence in the fields. Recognizing they faced numerous barriers to achieving their goals because of race, ethnicity, and immigrant status, the farmworkers not only joined together, they also reached out to the religious community. Soon after, they were awarded a Self-Development of People grant through the Peace River Presbytery (where Immokalee is located). Unlike other workers in other industries, farmworkers are explicitly excluded from the National Labor Relations Act, so the growers that employ them are under no legal obligation to dialogue with them. Local Presbyterians in the Peace River and Tampa Bay presbyteries accompanied the farmworkers during work stoppages, marches, and hunger-strikes that drew attention to the exploitative conditions in the fields. While through these actions the CIW was able to end violence in the fields of the Immokalee, Florida, region, the sub-poverty wages and terrible working conditions persisted.

The Church Shall Promote Social Righteousness

As Presbyterians, we affirm that “the promotion of social righteousness” is one of the great ends of the church (Book of Order, G-1.0200). Therefore, the church is called to correct, in its own life and in the life of the world, practices and systems that exploit humanity or nature. We are reminded that as Christians “... We are not only to share our resources individually with one another; we are to help fashion institutions which foster justice and well-being in the community” (Christian Faith and Economic Justice, PC(USA), Minutes, 1984, Part I, p. 375, paragraph 29.132).

As Florida Presbyterians accompanied the farmworkers, they and the workers grew to believe that significant change could realistically be achieved by approaching the problem from the top of the agri-food industry supply chain—not only with the growers, but with the grower’s clients, retail food buyers like fast food companies, and groceries, who profited from worker exploitation in the form of low-cost tomatoes.^{iv}

Our Consumer Decisions Bear Witness to and Serve God and God’s World

As Christians who are also consumers in the marketplace, we have a particular responsibility to ensure that our decisions to purchase or refrain from purchasing goods and services build rather than diminish the well-being of humanity and the earth, particularly because these practices are expressions of our faith. “...Our consumer decisions should be shaped by our beliefs, should translate or be a ‘sign’ of those beliefs in the world of commerce. Christians understand this in terms of stewardship, our responsibility to use possessions as witness to and in service of the Lord of the Church and the world” (Minutes, UPCUSA, 1979, Part I, p. 253, “Boycotts: Policy Analysis and Criteria).

To this end, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and its predecessor bodies have, at various times, engaged in consumer boycotts. Some examples include:

- ◆ a boycott of those products made by child labor (1937),
- ◆ a boycott of public accommodations that discriminate because of race (1960),

- ◆ a boycott of table grapes in support of the UFW (1973),
- ◆ a boycott of Nestle Corporation for promoting infant formula in the developing world where its preparation endangered the lives of infants (1978),
- ◆ a boycott of J.P. Steven’s Corporation for deliberately precluding workers’ right to organize (1979),
- ◆ a boycott of Taco Bell restaurants and products to establish socially responsible purchasing practices by the fast-food corporation and end the exploitation of farmworkers in the company’s tomato supply-chain (2002).

The Coalition of Immokalee Workers (CIW) discovered that Taco Bell was a major purchaser of tomatoes from Immokalee, Florida. When Taco Bell did not respond to multiple letters and phone calls requesting that they address exploitation among their tomato suppliers, the workers called for a consumer boycott of Taco Bell in 2001. The Presbytery of Tampa Bay brought an overture to support the Taco Bell Boycott to the 214th General Assembly (2002) where it was approved.

Many Presbyterians and congregations prayed, fasted, wrote letters, protested, and provided hospitality or material support to the coalition as they sought to establish socially responsible purchasing by Yum! Brands, Taco Bell’s parent company, based in Louisville, and the largest fast-food company in the world.^v Over the almost three years that the PC(USA) participated in the boycott, the Office of the Stated Clerk and the coordinator of the boycott convened several rounds of talks between executives of Yum! Brands and the CIW.

In March 2005, the Coalition of Immokalee Workers reached a precedent-setting agreement with Yum! Brands, which established

- ◆ the first-ever direct, ongoing payment by a fast-food industry leader to farmworkers in its supply chain to address substandard farm labor wages (nearly doubling wages for farmworkers that harvest for Taco Bell’s Florida suppliers);
- ◆ the first-ever enforceable code of conduct for agricultural suppliers in the fast-food industry (including the naming of the CIW, a worker-based organization, as an investigative body for monitoring worker complaints);
- ◆ market incentives for agricultural suppliers willing to respect their workers’ rights, even when those rights are not guaranteed by law;
- ◆ 100 percent transparency for Taco Bell’s tomato purchases in Florida (Yum! Brands has committed to provide records of their tomato purchasing to the CIW in order for the workers to monitor the agreement).

Further Yum! Brands agreed to work together with the Coalition of Immokalee Workers to promote the principles established in the agreement throughout the retail food industry. The General Assembly Council and the Office of the Stated Clerk have publicly commended Yum! Brands and the CIW on this landmark victory for human rights.

In Our Christian Vocation and the Covenant of Work We Shall Bless Our Neighbors and Uphold Mutual Responsibility

The Scots Confession speaks of engaging in work that honors God and is “to the profit of our neighbor” The works that profit our neighbor include “to save the lives of the innocent, to repress tyranny, to defend the oppressed...to deal justly with all...in word and deed, and finally, to repress any desire to harm our neighbor...and these are most pleasing and acceptable to God...Acts to the contrary are sins (The Book of Confessions, The Scots Confession, Chapter XIV, 3.14).

In 1995 the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) produced a statement on vocation and work entitled, God’s Work in Our Hands, which reminds us that the covenant of work entails “mutual responsibility between employers and employees, producers and consumers... None of us works independently. Employees, employers, and customers need each other, depend upon each other, and owe each other help beyond the letter of the law... Our partners in work, even when we cannot see them or know them personally, deserve our respect and our attention to their needs” (God’s Work in Our Hands, p. 10, 1995). Further, “all sectors of society—including labor, management, and government—must be engaged in the task of economic renewal of our life together. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) should play a significant role as a catalyst for conversation among these sectors” (Ibid, p. 18).

The Coalition of Immokalee Workers helped the church and consumers across the country understand how we are connected to one another and how we can work together to create systems that are more just and ensure the human rights of those who are most vulnerable. At the celebratory press conference announcing the agreement between CIW and Yum! Brands, Clifton Kirkpatrick, Stated Clerk of the General Assembly, reminded the church and the wider public that “the significance of this agreement is in the promise it holds for transforming the entire fast-food industry and the responsibility it confers on each one of us as consumers to walk with CIW and Yum Brands into this future. Together we must ensure that this momentous first step charts a sure and clear path for other major fast-food buyers to follow.”^{vi}

Accordingly, the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly has written to McDonald's, Burger King, and Subway encouraging the companies to implement the principles established in the CIW-Yum! Brands agreements within their own supply chains.

As Ambassadors of Christ's Reconciling Love, the Church Is Called to Challenge and Heal the World

In continuity with the Torah and in the tradition of the Hebrew prophets, our Savior Jesus Christ, a poor man himself, challenged the powers and principalities of his day to recognize the dignity of every person and to create communities and practices that promoted justice, dignity, and human flourishing by his teaching, healing, and example. In so doing, Christ reconciled the world to God and called us to be ambassadors of that love in action.

Through God's reconciling love, "God overcomes the barriers between sisters and brothers and breaks down every form of discrimination based on racial or ethnic difference, real or imaginary. The church is called to bring all people to receive and uphold one another as persons in all relationships of life: in employment, housing, education, leisure, marriage, family, church, and the exercise of political rights" (The Book of Confessions, The Confession of 1967, 9.44a, (PC(USA), 1967).

Through his birth, ministry, death, and resurrection, Jesus Christ redeemed not only people and nations, but powers and principalities, that once again, God's good purpose for creation might be known. We are called to be ambassadors of Christ's reconciling love in this world, that the gospel might be known and bear fruit (The Book of Confessions, The Confession of 1967, 9.45b, (PC(USA))).

The reconciliation of [humankind] through Jesus Christ makes it plain that enslaving poverty in a world of abundance is an intolerable violation of God's good creation. Because Jesus identified himself with the needy and exploited, the cause of the world's poor is the cause of his disciples. ... The church calls [all people] to use [their] abilities, [their] possessions, and the fruits of technology as gifts entrusted to [them] by God for the maintenance of [their] families and the advancement of the common welfare. ... A church that is indifferent to poverty, or evades responsibility in economic affairs, or is open to one social class only, or expects gratitude for its beneficence makes a mockery of reconciliation and offers no acceptable worship to God. (The Book of Confessions, The Confession of 1967, 9.46c (PC(USA), 1967)

In March 2005, the Coalition of Immokalee Workers wrote a public letter to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), lifting up how the church has been a true partner in our common struggle for fair food and human rights.

Together we have achieved a historic victory for human rights for farmworkers and set a precedent for change for the entire fast-food industry. ... Throughout this struggle, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has worked with us, side by side. You supported the boycott, facilitated our process of negotiations with Yum Brands; you were with us in our hunger strikes, you supported the truth tours and welcomed us in your congregations; you put the words of the Bible into action. And for us as farmworkers, to see that, it is more than just the church "standing with us" in our struggle—it is about becoming people who are a part of one community, struggling together for the same goals. ... The church was absolutely necessary in this struggle because you have a lot of power especially in the eyes of corporations. And you had more connections with their human side. Executives of corporations are members of congregations. And farmworkers are church people also. Your ability to connect both with executives and with farmworkers as people of faith, allowed a point of encounter between worlds that were in conflict but that were able to find, in this case through the church, a reconciliation.

Because of the relationship of trust and respect developed through the boycott between the CIW and the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) the CIW invited the church to be founding member of the Alliance for Fair Food, which continues the work for corporate socially responsible purchasing and human rights in the agricultural industry. In September 2005, the General Assembly Council voted to become a founding member of this alliance of religious, human rights, student, international, and community organizations that are working in partnership with the CIW.

In conjunction with other allies of the CIW, in November 2005, the Stated Clerk of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) issued a public statement critiquing McDonald's public refusal to implement the important principles of accountability, transparency achieved in the CIW-Yum! Brands agreement within its own supply chain, and its resistance to working with the CIW. In continuity with the church's public witness on fair food, the Office of the Stated Clerk continues to call upon all retail food corporations to ensure the human rights of farmworkers in their supply chains.

Commissioners’ Resolution. On Declaring Suicide Bombing a Crime Against Humanity.

That the 217th General Assembly (2006) approve the following declaration and action:

We, the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) declare that any suicide bombing, no matter who is the perpetrator or the target, constitutes a crime against humanity.

While international law, through various treaties and international consensus affirms the criminality of such acts when linked to a government, it is crucial that the church and the world affirm the culpability of individuals and groups that assist in carrying out suicide bombings [and terrorism] through financial or logistical support and that civil or military authorities who fail to exercise adequate powers of control over perpetrators and fail to take appropriate measures, be held accountable. The international community and faith community as a whole are obligated to prevent and call for international judicial prosecution of all those aiding and abetting these crimes.

We instruct our Moderator and Stated Clerk to encourage our leaders in the U.S.A., our ecumenical partners, our interfaith partners, the National Council of Churches, the World Council of Churches, and the United Nations Security Council to make suicide bombing a matter of declaration and legislation under national laws, and to raise this issue with all appropriate international agencies as appropriate.

We hereby pledge and instruct the Stated Clerk of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), the Washington Office of the PC(USA), and the Presbyterian UN representatives to take every opportunity to publicly and officially condemn suicide bombings [and terrorism] and to help empower victims of such attacks to be able to bring those who plan and inspire suicide bombings [and terrorism] to the bar of international justice. Further to instruct the Stated Clerk to notify the United Nations, the World Court, the U.S. State Department, Amnesty International, Human Rights Watch, and other appropriate human rights organizations of the 217th General Assembly (2006)’s position on this topic, and ask for their collaboration in amending international law, especially international criminal court elements of crime; Article 7 entitled “Crimes Against Humanity.”

Rationale

Terrorist suicide bombings have killed and maimed tens of thousands of targeted innocent civilians around the globe. Bombings have attacked civilian populations in Argentina, London, Lebanon, Jordan, India, Pakistan, Spain, Israel, Egypt, Iraq, Bali, the U.S.A. (airplane bombing of World Trade Center Towers and Pentagon), Russia, Indonesia, Morocco, Saudi Arabia, and Yemen. Human rights law and world law should reflect the gross evil of suicide terrorist bombing; and justly condemn the:

Evil of those who would manipulate poverty, brainwash, make financial promises, and use coercion to recruit suicide terrorist bombers;

Evil of those who would design and manufacture belts, shoes, or other concealments used in suicide terrorist bombing;

Evil of those who would finance such efforts;

Evil of those states and organizations that endorse, support, and encourage such activities; and,

Evil of targeting civilians in direct violation of Geneva and Rome conventions.

This resolution builds on our prior General Assembly statements:

- Core Value from the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) Social Policy Compilation, Chapter Five: Human Rights: 1977 Statement—Minutes, UPCUSA, 1977, Part I, p. 119.

Whereas, every Christian judgment must begin with confession of our own involvement, both in general and in particular, in evil done and good left undone; and

Whereas, violence done to life or dignity of men and women in any land for any cause, whether by established authorities or those who oppose them, is an offense to God and persons and an injury to the most basic human rights; [emphasis added]

Therefore, the 189th General Assembly (1977):

1. Calls upon all members of the church as Christians and as citizens to concern themselves with all victims of oppression, injustice and terrorism, whether governmental or revolutionary, and seek in solidarity to support such by their prayers, their public witness, and where possible, their personal aid and encouragement; and
2. Directs the representatives of the church to pursue indefatigably through governmental, ecclesiastical, or any other channel open to them in this or other lands this concern, testimony, and commitment of our church;[emphasis added]

- The General Assembly has a responsibility to speak out on injustice in the world: (From the ACSWP Social Policy Compilation, Chapter One: Theological Basis for Social Action—“1958 Statement—Minutes, UPCUSA, 1958, Part I, p. 537)

Confessing our faith that God, who is Creator of all things, is sovereign over his creation, and that no area of life—personal, social, political, or economic—is beyond his rule and redemption;

Believing that God, who has spoken in many and diverse ways to his people, and through his people to the world, still speaks today, and that his word, decisively and uniquely revealed in Jesus Christ, is one of both judgment and mercy;

Believing that God’s word and will are today most critically revealed as the Scriptures illuminate the social, political, and economic order, and that his judgment and mercy are more particularly manifest in the struggle for human rights,

The General Assembly:

Affirms its conviction that neither the church as the body of Christ, nor Christians as individuals, can be neutral or indifferent toward evil in the world;

- The General Assembly’s responsibility is not just national but international. (From ASCSWP Social Policy Compilation, “Chapter Three: International Affairs”)

ACSWP Introduction

The Presbyterian churches entered the post world war years with a new sense of the “smallness” of the world, and the interrelatedness of its nations and peoples. Issues of international scope have come to occupy a primary place in the concerns addressed by the General Assemblies. General Assemblies have, since 1945, supported action in the fields of foreign policy,

- The basic human right is the right to life, and our involvement in support and encouragement of the United Nations is also outlined in ACSWP compilation: “Chapter Five: Human Rights”

- We are grateful that the United Nations, on behalf of the international community, has the mandate and responsibility to promote and protect fundamental human rights and the dignity and worth of the human person, including freedom of religion and belief.

Therefore, we affirm that

1. Religious freedom is a universal human right. ...
3. Governments have responsibility to promote and protect religious freedom and should
 - a. give specific protections concerning religious freedom in their official policies, constitution and practices;
 - b. give full cooperation to the UN in the performance of its responsibilities for protecting human rights; and should not
 - c. co-opt, manipulate, or constrain religious practice by any persons, groups, or religious bodies except as may properly be necessary for the protection of human rights for all; ...[emphasis added]

- Religiously motivated suicide bombing is to not be affirmed as it violates the human rights of others, as shown in 3.c. above.

Summary: This resolution adds specificity and action to our prior commitments to human rights, encouragement of responsible UN law, and makes clear the General Assembly's position on suicide bombing. It also makes clear that not only are governments responsible for their corporate actions, but nongovernmental, transnational, and other associations of individuals, those who finance them, and those who provide material support should also be subject to international law. International justice is one means of breaking the cycle of attack and revenge among groups of people.

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 09-20

Advice and Counsel on Item 09-20—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy.

Item 09-20 urges the General Assembly to declare suicide bombing a crime against humanity.

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) advises that Item 09-20 be disapproved.

Rationale

1. Regarding crimes against humanity, the United Nations Development and Human Rights Section reported on June 15, 2006, that the draft statute defining crimes against humanity included the following prohibited acts: murder; extermination; enslavement; deportation or forcible transfer of population; torture; rape or other sexual abuse; persecution of groups; enforced disappearance of persons; inhumane acts causing serious injury, detention, imprisonment, or deprivation of liberty in violation of international law. To single out a particular form of terrorism for condemnation in a context in which other crimes against humanity are committed is one-sided.

2. Existing General Assembly policy condemns violence against civilians in any form (Minutes, 1997, Part I, 562).

3. The modern phenomenon of suicide bombing has been condemned by representatives of Muslim, Jewish, and Christian communities in the Middle East and in the United States of America.

4. The biblical witness on suicide and war is complex. It includes Saul's suicide and Samson's pulling down a Philistine temple on himself and others.

5. In its discussion of living in a time of terrorism and violence, the 216th General Assembly (2006) made the following statement on the immorality of terrorism:

The General Assembly proclaims as PC(USA) policy that our moral criteria of both just peacemaking and justifiable war (Helvetic Confession, Westminster Confession) find terrorism whether state, group or individual as immoral because it wrongfully and deliberately attacks innocent civilians. It also condemns any targeting of civilians by military forces participating in wars that otherwise might be justifiable [from Faithful Living in a Time of Violence and Terrorism: A Study Guide on the Resolution on Violence, Religion, and Terrorism, 216th General Assembly (2004) Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)]

6. In approving the principles of just war teaching, the 210th General Assembly (1998) explicitly regarded any direct attacks upon civilian populations as a violation of justice and therefore immoral (Minutes, 1998, Part I, 456–59).

7. The policy of selective, phased divestment to decrease violence in the Israeli-Palestinian situation was carefully designed by MRTI to reduce the funding of violence against civilians in the Israel-Palestine conflict regardless of the perpetration of the crime by either side. The action of the 216th General Assembly and MRTI have made clear this church's condemnation of violence against civilians through governmental, nongovernmental, corporate, or personal agents.

8. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has affirmed the International Criminal Court of Justice as the appropriate venue for the prosecution of the immoral and criminal acts of bombings of civilians. The 211th General Assembly (1999) affirmed the need for international mechanisms for the administration of justice capable of addressing major categories of crime with consistent application for all countries (Minutes, 1999, Part I, 435).

Commissioners' Resolution. On Raising the Federal Minimum Wage.

That the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), through the Stated Clerk of the PC(USA), communicate to all members of Congress its desire that legislation to increase the minimum wage be swiftly passed and [accurately] [at least] reflect the increase in the cost of living since the last minimum wage increase in 1997, with the goal of a wage level sufficient to lift full-time workers out of poverty]. Additionally, middle governing bodies, local congregations, and individuals are encouraged to support efforts to increase the minimum wage at [federal,] state[,] and local levels as well. [Presbyterians are also encouraged to take advantage of the resources and advocacy opportunities of the National Council of Churches' Let Justice Roll' campaign.]

Rationale

Presbyterian General Assemblies have repeatedly called for just wages for workers. As early as 1910, the assembly called for a "Living Wage" as part of the ecumenical Social Creed of the Churches, pioneering the whole concept of "living" or "family" wages.

The 98th General Assembly (1958) "encourage[ed] business and labor leaders to recognize their responsibility for the well being of persons in such matters as sufficient wages, health, housing and other living conditions" (Minutes, PCUS, 1958, Part I, p. 226).

The 183rd General Assembly (1977) "...Reaffirm[ed] the actions of previous General Assemblies supporting the right of every employable person to a job, decent and safe working conditions, and a salary adequate to meet at least his or her basic needs" (Minutes, UPCUSA, 1977, Part I, p. 126).

The 120th General Assembly (1980) said, "... In view of our theological understanding of economic and social justice we affirm for all persons the right to be paid adequately and treated with fairness and dignity ..." (Minutes, PCUS, 1980, Part I, pp.229-30).

The Book of Order of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) states, "The Church is called to be Christ's faithful evangelist...participating in God's activity in the world through its life for others by...engaging in the struggle to free people from sin, fear, oppression, hunger, and injustice" (Book of Order, G-3.0300c(3)(c)). Moreover, the policy statement on God's Work in Our Hands: Employment, Community, and Christian Vocation affirms that:

All conditions of paid employment, including compensation and working conditions, should sustain and nurture the dignity of individuals, the well-being of households and families, the social cohesiveness of communities, and the integrity of the global environment....

The minimum wage was enacted at the federal level through the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938, which also set standards for overtime pay and child labor, and was designed to eliminate "labor conditions detrimental to the maintenance of the minimum standard of living necessary for health, efficiency and general well-being of workers."

The federal minimum wage has remained at $5.15 an hour since September 1997, representing more than eight years at $5.15 an hour while the cost of living continues to rise. This has resulted in the minimum wage doing the opposite of what the Fair Labor Standards Act intended, by keeping minimum wage workers in "labor conditions detrimental to the maintenance of the minimum standard of living necessary of living necessary for health, efficiency, and general well-being of workers."

By way of example, in 1991, family health coverage cost one fourth of the yearly income of a minimum wage worker. By 2005, family health coverage cost $10,880 at a time when the minimum wage was (and continues to be) $10,712.

Not only does the current minimum wage keep hard working individuals locked in poverty, it sends the message that honest work is less profitable, and therefore less desirable than many illegal money-making schemes. In a society that prides itself as being guided by the rule of law, this is a devastating double message to be sending to impressionable young people who live on the economic edge.

ACSWP and ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 09-21

Advice and Counsel on Item 09-21—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy and the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns.

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) and the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC) advise approval of Item 09-21 with the following amendments: (Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with an underline.)

“That the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), through the Stated Clerk of the PC(USA), communicate to all members of Congress its desire that legislation to increase the minimum wage be swiftly passed and ~~accurately at least~~ reflect the increase in the cost of living since the last minimum wage increase in 1997, with the goal of a wage level sufficient to lift full-time workers out of poverty. Additionally, middle governing bodies, local congregations, and individuals are encouraged to support efforts to increase the minimum wage at federal, state, and local levels as well. Presbyterians are also encouraged to take advantage of the resources and advocacy opportunities of the National Council of Churches' "Let Justice Roll" campaign.”

Rationale

The statement is in conformity with the following policies of the General Assembly:

The 1987 Statement:

3. Urges members, presbyteries, and synods to monitor plans for welfare reform on the state and national levels, paying particular attention to welfare-to-work proposals, urging that:
 - a. welfare-to-work programs be voluntary rather than mandatory;
 - b. employment training be for jobs that will pay a living wage;
 - c. the focus be on job creation where jobs at a living wage do not exist, whether through self-development or through public service jobs;
 - d. adequate child care and transportation be provided to people in training programs; and
 - e. continued health benefits for parents and children be made available to persons as they re-enter the work force.

The 1988 Statement:

In light of the growing disparity in household income and the past positions of General Assemblies, the 200th General Assembly (1988):

Urges the President and Congress of the United States to raise the minimum wage to its historical level of 50 percent of the average non-supervisory, nonagricultural wage and provide for regular increases that will keep the minimum wage at an adequate level to lift people out of poverty.

Urges the President and Congress of the United States to oppose further cuts in social programs that benefit and to increase support for programs unable to serve all eligible persons due to lack of funds.

The number of people living in poverty has increased each of the last three years. Single women and children make up 70 percent of those who live below the poverty line. The overall growth in the national economy has not been appropriately shared by those in the lower income levels.

The real value level for the minimum wage in 1968 was equivalent to $9.05 in 2006, a similar amount that most living wage ordinances are calling for today. It is expedient that all efforts to increase the minimum wage to a living wage begin.

Commissioners' Resolution. On Calling All Presbyterians to Take Positive and Immediate Steps to Live Carbon Neutral Lives.

That the 217th General Assembly (2006) does the following:

1. [Declares this to be a “Resolution” according to the definitions provided in Section 1 of the “Forming Social Policy” guidelines of the General Assembly, applying the “1981 Energy Policy” to the current environmental circumstances, until the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) brings a recommended new energy policy to the 218th General Assembly (2008).] [Direct the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy to make a study of personal responsibility and carbon-neutrality available as a working paper on the website of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) as soon as possible, in order to share its concrete, effective action steps for Presbyterians to take to reduce their energy consumption. This working paper will highlight the threats posed by accelerated climate change and lift up ways for individuals, families, and congregations to reduce emissions of carbon dioxide and other gases produced in heating, air conditioning, transportation and food production, packaging, and shipment. In addition, this paper will suggest policy measures being considered in greater depth by the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy and several consultant theological ethicists and political scientists for eventual report to the 218th General Assembly (2008).]

2. Finds that the Christian mandate to care for creation and the biblical promise of the restoration of right relationships between God, human beings, and the rest of creation impels and inspires us to act to reduce our energy usage.

3. Finds that the urgency, injustice, and seriousness of this issue calls us as Christians to act NOW and to act boldly to lead the way in reducing our energy usage.

4. Strongly urges all Presbyterians to immediately make a bold witness by aspiring to live carbon neutral lives. (Carbon neutrality requires our energy consumption that releases carbon dioxide into the atmosphere be reduced and carbon offsets purchased to compensate for those carbon emissions that could not be eliminated.)

5. Directs the ACSWP to make the current draft of the report and recommendations, “A Christian Witness on Energy” available to all Presbyterians, and to the General Assembly Council, at the earliest possible time in order to share its concrete, effective action steps for Presbyterians to take to reduce their energy consumption.

6. Directs the General Assembly Council to assign the appropriate staff to inform all Presbyterians, governing bodies, and churches of the urgent need for them to reduce their energy consumption and the injustice of our current energy practices while ACSWP completes its work.

7. Directs the General Assembly Council, upon receipt of “A Christian Witness on Energy” report, to assign the appropriate staff to prepare an implementation plan for a church-wide carbon neutral program.

8. Calls upon all Presbyterians to take this seriously, to pray asking for God’s forgiveness and guidance, to study this issue, to calculate your carbon emissions, to educate others, and to use less energy, striving to make your life carbon neutral.

Rationale

It is the consensus of the scientific community that human activity is rapidly changing the natural environment in measurable ways through the destructive effects of climate change (commonly called global warming).

Global climate change is predominantly caused by our burning of fossil fuels, like coal, oil, and natural gas, which emit greenhouse gases, and accelerating faster than predicted just a few years ago.

Global climate change is directly causing or contributing to harmful changes including but not limited to:

1. Ice sheet and glacial melting at alarming rates;
2. Rising sea levels that, by the end of this century, will encroach or cover many of the world’s coastal communities and lands where more than half of the world’s population currently resides;
3. A 30 percent weakening of the Gulf Stream in the last twelve years;
4. Episodic coral reef die-off worldwide threatening traditional fisheries, a major food source for many;
5. Island nations, such as Tuvalu, to seek refuge in other countries for their entire populations due to sea level rise;
6. Water shortages and severe droughts in Africa;
7. Record number of killer storms worldwide, leaving more than a thousand people dead and 3,500 missing as of April 2006 from Hurricane Katrina alone, and billions of dollars of damage in multiple states;

8. A violation of the rights of entire populations, such as the Alaskan Inuit, to maintain their traditional culture of hunting and fishing on which their lives depend;

9. Hundreds of species to face extinction—from Arctic polar bears to tropical tree frogs—due to habitat changes.

A growing number of scientists now suggest that we have perhaps only a decade's grace period to reduce our energy usage before these devastating effects start to become irreversible.

We Americans are champion energy consumers, using 40 percent of the world's oil and emitting 25 percent of the world's greenhouse gases, even though we are less than 5 percent of the world's population.

We have the knowledge, skills, and resources to reduce our energy consumption and switch to alternative energy sources that are less harmful to the environment.

Prompt action and leadership by individuals, organizations, communities, states, and countries can keep global climate change from becoming much worse.

The president of the United States has called upon the nation to reduce its dependence on fossil fuels.

Previous General Assemblies (1981, 1998, 1999, and 2003) passed overtures, resolutions, and policies addressing our unjust energy practices, calling us to develop frugal lifestyles reducing our energy consumption; and urging the United States to sign the Kyoto Treaty and to lead in reducing carbon emissions to combat global warming.

A recent Presbyterian Panel survey indicates that majorities of us believe our energy consumption contributes to global climate change; most agree that energy conservation reflects values of the Christian Reformed faith. Yet less than 50 percent of us have taken even the simplest steps to reduce our energy consumption.

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy's energy report (in response to General Assembly Overture 02-57. On Revising the Denominational Policy on the Issue of Energy) has a draft of the report that will be presented at 218th General Assembly (2008).

We feel called to offer a bold, faithful, concrete plan for action in the meantime to address the urgency of climate change and our excessive energy consumption before the 218th General Assembly (2008).

Dale Francis, Presbytery of Lake Erie

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 09-22

Advice and Counsel on Item 09-22—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy.

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy advises that Item 09-22 be approved with amendment:

1. Delete the text of Recommendation 1. and insert the following in its place:

“1. Declares this to be a “Resolution” according to the definitions provided in Section 1 of the “Forming Social Policy” guidelines of the General Assembly, applying the “1981 Energy Policy” to the current environmental circumstances, until the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) brings a recommended new energy policy to the 218th General Assembly (2008). Direct the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy to make a study of personal responsibility and carbon-neutrality available as a Working Paper on the website of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) as soon as possible, in order to share its concrete, effective action steps for Presbyterians to take to reduce their energy consumption. This Working Paper will highlight the threats posed by accelerated climate change and lift up ways for individuals, families and congregations to reduce emissions of carbon dioxide and other gases produced in heating, air conditioning, transportation and food production, packaging and shipment. In addition, this paper will suggest policy measures being considered in greater depth by the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy and several consultant theological ethicists and political scientists for eventual report to the 2008 General Assembly.

2. Delete Recommendations 5. and 7. and re-number the subsequent recommendations.

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy also advises that the assembly affirm Recommendations 2., 3., 4., 6., and 8., and all but the last two of the Rationale paragraphs.

Rationale

The commissioners' resolution on climate change, personal responsibility, and carbon neutrality calls for an interim statement on these important matters prior to the completion of the more comprehensive resolution on energy policy called for by the 214th General Assembly (2002). The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy appreciates the sense of urgency of the commissioners, who recognize that the assembly has already spoken several times on climate change or global warming. What is new in the commissioners' resolution is the request that a resource on how to live "carbon-neutral" lives be made available online and otherwise in anticipation of the full energy report in 2008. The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy can do this, while making clear that the current draft report and other materials lack sufficient theological and geopolitical content for a full resolution. The energy resolution team that produced a report focused on personal responsibility and carbon-neutrality was appointed by the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy and thanked for its work in late 2005. Because that document has not been completed, and has not been made available to commissioners, we believe it would best be termed a working paper but nonetheless made publicly available as the commissioners request.

At this time, the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy is concerned not only with the raw fact of rapid climate change, but with the enormous political and economic interests involved in our current dependency on carbon-based fuels. Our nation is engaged in one significant war related, in part, to oil, and our country is particularly the focus of antipathy from large sections of the Islamic world. China and other developing economies are gaining in strength and increasingly competing for energy resources and geo-strategic advantage. Commissioners may note, then, that the report envisioned by the 214th General Assembly (2002) will be substantially broader than this background resource.

Commissioners' Resolution. On Abandoning Mountaintop Removal of Coal.

That the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) urge state and federal agencies that regulate mining practices, as well as coal companies themselves, to abandon the practice of mountaintop removal coal mining and work to meet our nation's energy needs in a manner that is just, sustainable, and consistent with Christian values.

Rationale

Jesus instructed Christians in the Sermon on the Mount in Matthew 7:12, "In everything do to others what you would have them do to you; for this is the law and the prophets."

Mountaintop removal is a mining technique that involves demolishing up to 700 feet of elevation of mountain to reach seams of coal and then dumping mining waste in valleys below.

This mining practice drastically alters the landscape in and around homes and communities in Appalachia.

This altered landscape has dramatically increased flooding in communities near these mining sites. For instance, the town of McRoberts, Kentucky, flooded five times in eighteen months after mountaintop mining began operation above their town.

Hundreds of lives have been lost and thousands of families have lost homes and property in recent floods and many of these families still live in emotional exile to their roots in temporary residence from which there seems to be no end in sight.

The quality of life for families near mining sites is decreased due to the threat of floods, continual blasting, dust, and falling rock and this situation has forced families to live in fear for their lives and property or to abandon their family home place and leave a lifetime of memories.

Mountaintop removal coal mining contributes to a cycle of poverty that has created high unemployment, high illiteracy rates, record numbers of school closings, and a lack of opportunity in areas where coal is produced by mountaintop removal.

Mountaintop removal coal mining destroys both the beauty and productive capacity of the land thus eliminating future or alternative economic opportunities for the families of Appalachia.

God instructs us to "... not defile the land in which you live, in which I also dwell ..." (Num. 35:34).

We are instructed in James 4:17 to turn away from sin.

Mountaintop removal coal mining has buried 724 miles of streams and destroyed up to a million acres of forested mountains in Appalachia.

Streams, mountains, and forests damaged by mountaintop removal coal mining can never be restored to support the community of life that God created.

The Evangelical Lutheran Church in America, the United Methodist Church, the Episcopal Church, the Catholic Conference of Eastern Kentucky, and the Presbytery of Salem of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) have passed resolutions concerning mountaintop mining.

Item 09-24

[The assembly approved Item 09-24. See pp. 50, 52.]

Commissioners' Resolution. On the "Return to the Earth" Program.

That the 217th General Assembly (2006) endorse and encourage participation by PC(USA) congregations in the "Return to the Earth" program of the Mennonite Central Committee, which seeks the return of unidentifiable remains of American aboriginal peoples and enables a process of education and reconciliation between Native and non-Native peoples.

Rationale

For many years, Native American lands, including burial grounds, were confiscated by the Federal government in order that those lands could be utilized for other purposes. Both the 1906 Antiquities Act and the 1979 Archaeological Resources Protection Act asserted that Indian bones and sacred objects found on federal land are the property of the U.S. However, in 1990, Congress enacted the National Graves Protection and Repatriation Act, which required the return of human remains and objects to Native American tribes and nations from which they came. Presently, more than 100,000 human remains still exist in a variety of repositories, unable to be identified as belonging to a specific tribe and are listed as "culturally unidentifiable" because they cannot be conclusively linked to any federally documented group.

One effort to address this problem was the establishment of a series of regional cemeteries. These cemeteries will receive an allocation of culturally unidentifiable Native Americans for burial. Thus, these remains will not necessarily be buried in their original homeland near their tribe of origin. Nevertheless, the remains will have a proper and reverent burial and the interred will be treated reverently and lovingly by Native Americans organized to receive them and will finally rest in Native American homelands.

We seek for churches to engage in study and conversation about restorative justice and to partner with Native Americans in repatriating aboriginal remains. Actions of support and assistance may include monetary donations, advocacy on behalf of repatriation, the construction of small cedar burial boxes (ossuaries), and the sewing of linen burial cloths. These will be needed for the thousands of funerals that will be conducted.

The bones of Joseph were carried from Egypt during the Exodus journey because our ancestors in faith considered it important that those remains have a final resting place in their ancestral homeland. This biblical heritage can help us to understand the desire of our Native American brothers and sisters to provide honorable burial for their ancestors.

Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy Agency Summary

1. Assigned Responsibilities: Strengthening Presbyterian Social Witness

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP), as a servant of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), develops, interprets, and monitors policies that encourage and challenge the Church and society to reflect and act in faithful response to God’s call to do justice. (Mission Statement, approved October 2002 in El Paso, Texas)

In every age, the Spirit calls on the church to discern afresh God’s redemptive purpose in our particular time and place in history. The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP)’s work is to discern what it means to proclaim and embody the Gospel in relation to contemporary society. In this work, the ACSWP and its task forces draw upon a great wealth of resources:

- the voices of the biblical text;
- the wisdom of theological discourse;
- the guidance of the Reformed confessions;
- the tradition of past policy statements;
- the insights of sociopolitical disciplines;
- the advice of members and all governing bodies of the church;
- the insights of people who are poor, victims of existing policies, and those who have not had a voice in councils of the church; and
- the counsel of ecumenical partners. (Minutes, 1993, Part I, p. 769).

Social witness can occur at many different points: in a church session, in a presbytery, in an advocacy group, in the participation of Christians in mission, in a meeting of the ecumenical church, in an individual Christian’s brave refusal to “go along” with injustice.

For Presbyterians, however, decisions about the church’s social witness need to be made by persons elected to serve in governing bodies (session, presbytery, synod, and General Assembly). As governing bodies meet, the elected persons are commissioned “. . . not simply to reflect the will of the people, but rather to seek together to find and represent the will of Christ . . .” (Book of Order, G-4.0301d).

In providing service and resources to meet the needs of congregations, middle governing bodies, and the General Assembly, ACSWP members find guidance in the Mission Statement quoted above. Theologically grounded ethical reflection is part of the salt and light of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. The ACSWP engages with the grassroots in assisting the General Assembly to discern what it means to proclaim and embody the Gospel in a world that remains too grim for too many.

Making a personal social witness begins with very individual ways of growing and developing as a Christian—prayerfully studying the Scriptures, being inspired by Jesus, the prophets, and courageous stands of the church, gaining insight from past ethical witness, connecting one’s faith with others in the Christian community, and then being faithful in the world beyond the church. The ACSWP seeks to be a partner in the ministry of reconciliation, for “each member [who] is the church in the world...” (The Book of Confessions, The Confession of 1967, 9.38).

The churchwide work of the ACSWP is based on ethical guidance from the Scriptures, The Book of Confessions, and the Book of Order. The 1993 General Assembly policy statement, Why and How the Church Makes a Social Policy Witness, provides extensive documentation of key biblical passages and is a useful document in congregational interpretation of the ACSWP and its mission.

All of those biblical texts have a common theme. The Gospel says that to confess Jesus Christ as Lord is to believe that God can and has overcome the powers of sin in the world. Christians do not work alone, but join the Lord Jesus Christ who is already at work in our world. John Calvin said that social concern, expressed by action on behalf of our neighbors, is a central part of the faith. Our historic confessions, the work of theologians, and the actions of 216 General Assemblies have reaffirmed that message. Our faithfulness as Reformed Christians means action.

Procedures and Personnel

In support of the work of the assembly, the ACSWP is given direct access to the assembly as it meets biennially. Between sessions of the assembly, the ACSWP also assists the General Assembly Council (GAC), the Office of the General Assembly (OGA), and other agencies of the church as their work involves the development and interpretation of social witness policy.

The committee carries out its responsibilities in four major ways. They are the

1. development and recommendation of new social witness and policy for approval by the General Assembly;
2. interpretation and communication of the General Assembly’s social witness and policy, both to the church and the world at large;
3. rendering of advice and counsel to the entities and governing bodies of the church on matters of social witness policy throughout the year; and
4. rendering of advice and counsel to the General Assembly when it meets as a governing body.

The ACSWP develops and recommends new social witness and policies primarily in response to referrals from the General Assembly and its entities, and in a manner consistent with the Manual of the General Assembly, “On Forming Social Policy.” This policy development requires depth of theological reflection, breadth of input, diversity of insight, and equity of participation in the policy development work. Before a policy statement is approved, extensive consultation is mandated at all stages of development. Thus, no work of the committee is independent of the concerns of Presbyterians gathered in worshiping and serving communities across the land.

The committee’s advice and counsel group carries out the task of providing advice and counsel at the meeting of the General Assembly. This group of elected committee members, together with other staff and resource persons from several General Assembly Council entities, advises commissioners in assembly committees and other entities about social policies, which are applicable to issues before the assembly. It may also comment on the need or direction for future social policy. Advice and counsel is provided throughout the meeting, through “Advice and Counsel Memoranda,” by oral testimony before assembly committees, and informally.

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) consists of twelve members, nine of whom are at-large members elected by the General Assembly from the whole church and three who are General Assembly Council members. Members are: Donna C. Bradley, Tucson, Ariz.; Dianne L. Briscoe, Denver, Colo.; Sue Dickson (vice-chair), Ashland, Ohio; Charles F. Easley Sr., Atlanta, Ga.; B. Gordon Edwards, Stillwater, Okla.; Esperanza Guajardo, San Antonio, Tex.; Nile Harper (chair), Fridley, Minn.; Ronald J. Kernaghan, Pasadena, Calif.; Lewis S. Mudge, Berkeley, Calif.; Ronald H. Stone, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Jack M. Terry, Minneapolis, Minn. Leslie Klingensmith, an at-large member from Silver Springs, Maryland, resigned from the committee in the fall of 2005 for family reasons. Her replacement had not been named at the time of this writing. Staffing for the committee includes Christian Iosso, coordinator; Belinda M. Curry, associate; Bonnie M. Hoff, senior administrative assistant; and Daniel Gilliam, senior administrative assistant.

In 2005, ACSWP expressed its appreciation to former Coordinator Peter A. Sulyok for his faithful leadership and work on more than one hundred social policy documents during twelve years of service; and ACSWP thanked Interim Coordinator Gwen M. Crawley for her eight months of excellent service. In 2004, appreciation was expressed to Senior Administrative Assistant Marilyn LaFountain for her five years of faithful service.

2. Accomplishments

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) members and staff make themselves available for interpretive events as requested and as time allows. The committee welcomes inquiries through its office in Louisville. All governing bodies, churches, and members are encouraged to use the “Presbyterian Social Witness Policy Compilation,” which contains the core of the assemblies’ social policy statements since 1946. It is revised regularly to meet the needs of the church and can be downloaded from the worldwide web at (www.pcusa.org/acswp).

The ACSWP meets following each General Assembly, to discern and prioritize its work; periodically between the assemblies, to review progress on papers and projects; and in January prior to an assembly, to edit and approve final drafts for submission to the assembly. This year the committee has prepared one policy statement, four resolutions, one interim report, four monitoring reports, and one statement in response to ecumenical partner concerns:

- Living into the Body of Christ: Towards Full Inclusion of People with Disabilities;
- Report on “A Reformed Understanding of Usury for the Twenty-First Century”;
- Report on Economic Security for Older Adults;
- Resolution on Just Globalization: Justice, Ownership, and Accountability;
- Human Rights Resolution;
- Monitoring Report on the Implementation of the Problem Pregnancies and Abortion Policies with Recommendations;
- Monitoring Report on the Implementation of Turn Mourning Into Dancing! A Policy Statement on Healing Domestic Violence with Recommendations;
- Monitoring Report on the Implementation of the Resolution Calling for the Abolition of For-Profit Private Prisons with Recommendations;
- Monitoring Report on the Progress of the Implementation of the Transforming Families Policy with Recommendations;
- Interim Report and Invitation to Study and Celebrate the Centennial of the Social Creed of the Churches of 1908;
- Statement on Taiwan and China

In preparation of this year’s major policy statement, the Task Force on “Harvesting Seeds of Justice: Ministering in Church and Society with Persons Who Have Disabilities” completed its work in the spring of 2005. This task force worked to develop the proposed policy and recommendations for the church to work for justice with persons living with disabilities, both within the church and the wider social order. The ACSWP took ownership of the task force’s report on “Living into the Body of Christ: Towards Full Inclusion of People with Disabilities” at its summer 2005 meeting. A synod consultation on this report was held in the fall of 2005 and their contribution was integrated into the report.

To prepare an upcoming policy statement, the ACSWP appointed the members of the Task Force on “Comprehensive Serious Mental Illness” at its winter 2005 meeting. This task force will develop proposed policy and recommendations for the church to work for justice with persons living with mental illness, again both within the church and society. The task force has held three meetings. The Research Services office of the General Assembly Council (GAC) assisted the task force in the development of a Presbyterian Panel Survey on Mental Illness. This document was sent to the panel members in the winter of 2006. The task force also developed a churchwide feedback study guide to stimulate dialogue at all levels of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) on mental illness concerns. This document was published and made available to the church by the ACSWP in early 2006. The committee maintains its concern for the development of two future new policy task forces related to earlier General Assembly referrals on end of life issues and genetics.

Not all of ACSWP's work goes directly from a task force or resolution team to the assembly. While the committee seeks to ensure the final decision-making authority of commissioners, sometimes studies and resolutions are circulated and "field-tested" for comment and broader church involvement. Such is the case of two current studies on energy and bioethics, where past General Assemblies called for updating the 1981 statements. These reports are "The Power to Speak Truth to Power" and "The Nature and Value of Human Life," both basically sound, but twenty-five-plus years old. The ACSWP is also exploring ways to use the new web technologies to enhance the communal conversation and consensus-building that strengthens our shared social witness.

The ACSWP published the following reports: Resolution on Allegations of Child Sexual Abuse Against Educators with Study Guide (PDS 68-600-05-003), Resolution Calling for a Comprehensive Legalization Program for Immigrants Living and Working in the United States with Study Guide (PDS 68-600-05-001) Report and Recommendations on Limited Water Resources and Takings with Study Guide (PDS 68-600-05-004) Iraq: Our Responsibility and the Future (PDS 68-600-05-002). These resources are also available on the Web (www.pcusa.org/acswp). The committee also published a video in Spanish on Connecting Diversity in Community: Race, Class, Gender, Religion (Construimos Comunidad entre Personas Diferentes: Raza, Clase Social, Género, Religión) (PDS 68-600-05-006).

In addition, the committee assisted in the publication of four other reports. The policy statement on Transforming Families (OGA-04-093) and the Human Rights Update 2003–2004 (OGA-04-046) was published by the Office of the General Assembly. These report are on the Web (www.pcusa.org/oga/publications.htm). The Resolution on Africa: A Guide for Study and Reflection (PDS 74-280-04-004) was published by the Worldwide Ministries Division (WMD) in partnership with the Presbyterian Peacemaking Program (PPP) of the Congregational Ministries Division (CMD) and ACSWP. This report is available on the Web (www.pcusa.org/wmd/resources.htm). The document, Faithful Living in a Time of Violence and Terrorism: A Study Guide on the Resolution on Violence, Religion and Terrorism (PDS 70-270-04-025), was published by the Presbyterian Peacemaking Program in conjunction with Congregational Ministries Publishing and ACSWP. This report is available on the Web (www.pcusa.org/peacemaking/pubs/pubs).

The ACSWP works collaboratively with the divisions and other entities of the General Assembly Council, having liaison members from each division and from the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) and the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC). When possible, the committee spends time with church members, relevant presbytery committees, and with ecumenical members during its meetings. Such opportunities occurred in 2004 and 2005.

The ACSWP combined its summer and fall 2004 meetings. This meeting was held in the Middle East (Lebanon, Syria, Jordan, Israel/Palestine, Egypt) October 15–29, 2004. In addition to conducting its regular business for ACSWP, the committee's purpose for holding a meeting in this region was to:

- Deepen its knowledge of the issues in the Middle East;
- Focus on the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)'s historic attention to the issues in Israel/Palestine by exploring from the ground-up what the next initiatives might be in peacemaking and the prospects of partnership, with special attention to the possibilities of congregational work teams and economic development;
- Better understand the U.S. role in the Middle East, especially regarding the war in Iraq;
- Examine in greater depth and sensitivity interfaith issues and understandings, which impact U.S. foreign policy concerns affecting the "war against terrorism" and in considerations for nation-building in post-war Iraq;
- Hear firsthand Middle Eastern perspectives from various stakeholders in the area to enhance the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy's ability to offer support and solidarity with our church partners in the area, the Middle East Council of Churches; and
- Provide hands-on opportunity to work with Middle East Christians in projects furthering God's justice in community.

In March 2005, ACSWP and General Assembly Council (GAC) members B. Gordon Edwards and Esperanza Guajardo presented a power-point program to the full GAC on ACSWP's Middle East trip.

09 ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON SOCIAL JUSTICE ISSUES

The ACSWP periodically monitors issues concerning Taiwan, its independence and United Nations membership, and relations between the Presbyterian Church in Taiwan and the China Christian Council, together with the Worldwide Ministries Division.

The committee sponsors an annual gathering of the Theological Educators for Presbyterian Social Witness (TEPSW). This group is composed primarily of Christian ethicists currently or formerly serving in seminaries and other educational institutions related to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). In the fall of 2004, the TEPSW met at McCormick Theological Seminary, Chicago, Illinois. The 2005 meeting was held on the campus of Hartford Seminary in Hartford, Connecticut. The 2006 meeting will be held at Princeton Theological Seminary.

The ACSWP will focus on emerging social witness issues and priorities at its summer meeting. Other responses by the committee to General Assembly work may be found in the responses to referrals report.

Item 10-01

[The assembly approved Item 10-01 as amended. See pp. 49, 50.]

On Late-Term Pregnancy—From the Presbytery of Redstone.

The Presbytery of Redstone overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to declare the following:

[The church has a responsibility to provide public witness and to offer guidance, counsel, and support to those who make or interpret laws and public policies about abortion and problem pregnancies. Pastors have a duty to counsel with and pray for those who face decisions about problem pregnancies. Congregations have a duty to pray for and support those who face these choices, to offer support for women and families to help make unwanted pregnancies less likely to occur, and to provide practical support for those facing the birth of a child with medical anomalies, birth after rape or incest, or those who face health, economic, or other stresses.]

[The church also affirms the value of children and the importance of nurturing, protecting, and advocating their well-being. The church, therefore, appreciates the challenge each woman and family face when issues of personal well-being arise in the later stages of a pregnancy.]

["In life and death, we belong to God." Life is a gift from God. We may not know exactly when human life begins, and have but an imperfect understanding of God as the giver of life and of our own human existence, yet we recognize that life is precious to God, and we should preserve and protect it. We derive our understanding of human life from Scripture and the Reformed Tradition in light of science, human experience, and reason guided by the Holy Spirit. Because we are made in the image of God, human beings are moral agents, endowed by the Creator with the capacity to make choices. Our Reformed Tradition recognizes that people do not always make moral choices, and forgiveness is central to our faith. In the Reformed Tradition, we affirm that God is the only Lord of conscience—not the state or the church. As a community, the church challenges the faithful to exercise their moral agency responsibly.]

[When an individual woman faces the decision whether to terminate a pregnancy, the issue is intensely personal, and may manifest itself in ways that do not reflect public rhetoric, or do not fit neatly into medical, legal, or policy guidelines. Humans are empowered by the spirit prayerfully to make significant moral choices, including the choice to continue or end a pregnancy. Human choices should not be made in a moral vacuum, but must be based on Scripture, faith, and Christian ethics. For any choice, we are accountable to God; however, even when we err, God offers to forgive us.]

We affirm that the lives of viable unborn babies—those well-developed enough to survive outside the womb if delivered—ought to be preserved and cared for and not aborted. In cases where problems of life or health of the mother arise in a pregnancy, the church supports efforts to protect the life and health of both the mother and the baby. When late-term pregnancies must be terminated, we urge decisions intended to deliver the baby alive. We look to our churches to provide pastoral and tangible support to women in problem pregnancies and to surround these families with a community of care. We affirm adoption as a provision for women who deliver children they are not able to care for, and ask our churches to assist in seeking loving, Christian, adoptive families.

This General Assembly holds this statement as its position on a Christian response to problems that arise late in pregnancies. We find it to be consistent with current General Assembly policy on Problem Pregnancies and Abortion (1992), [and supersedes General Assembly statements of 2002 and 2003] ~~[and declare that it supersedes and replaces all other statements]~~ on late-term pregnancies and abortion.

[Financial Implication of (2006): $0 ; (2007): $4,800 ; (2008): $0 (Per Capita-GAC)]

Rationale

The church's support for the protection of human life is based on the biblical teaching that human beings are made in the image of God (Gen 1:26–27), that we are charged to protect the lives of innocent human beings (Prov. 31:8, 9; James 1:27), and forbidden to shed innocent blood (Jer. 7:6), and that God expects us as followers of Christ to minister to those who are needy as if we were serving our Savior himself (Matt 25:40). Our confessions affirm this teaching of Scripture (The Book of Confessions, Westminster Larger Catechism, 7.244–.246)

Our General Assembly has affirmed as policy (approved in 1992) that "... after human life has begun, it is to be cherished and protected as a precious gift of God" (Problem Pregnancies and Abortion, PC(USA), Office of the General Assembly, 1992, p. 11; see also Minutes, 1992, Part I, p. 369, paragraph 27.102). The assembly also affirmed that “The strong Christian presumption is that since all life is precious to God, we are to preserve and protect it” (Problem Pregnancies and Abortion, p. 11; see also Minutes, 1992, Part I, p. 368, paragraph 27.100).

In addition to the support for the preservation of life in Scripture, our confessions, and church policy, sound and common medical practice favors delivery over abortion as a safer and more humane method of terminating a late-term pregnancy.

Particularly in pregnancies where babies could live if delivered live, the church is called to speak and act in ways that protect the lives and health of the unborn as well as their mothers. Both mother and baby benefit physically and spiritually from live birth.

Today, in the United States, there are more than two million couples waiting to adopt a child. Many of these waiting couples are willing to adopt babies with medical problems and other special needs. The church should encourage and undergird this desire among its own members to minister to the needy and vulnerable among us.

Since General Assemblies have addressed the matter of late-term abortion several times and have a statement that has been so modified that it is unclear in intent, this new statement is meant to provide the church with a clear moral and pastoral position.

Concurrence to Item 10-01 from the Presbytery of Shenango.

Concurrence to Item 10-01 from the Presbytery of Lake Erie (with Additional Rationale).

Rationale

The church’s support for the protection of human life is based on Scripture and guidance found in The Book of Confessions, which affirm the teaching of Scripture.

We are created in the image of God (Gen. 1:27; Job 10:8–12), and as such, God places higher value on human beings than the rest of His Creation. As image bearers, we are distinct from the rest of creation (Gen. 1:26; Gen. 2:20; Ps. 8:5), and stewards of everything else God created (Gen. 1:26–30; Gen. 2:19–20; Ps. 8:6–8; The Book of Confessions, 3.02; 4.006; 6.023; 7.010).

Conception is considered a blessing of God (1 Sam. 1:1–20), and as the fruit of the love between a husband and a wife is one evidence of God’s love and sovereignty (Gen. 4:1; Gen. 29:30–33). Scripture refers to conception as the moment of our beginning (Gen. 4:1; Gen. 21:2; Gen. 29:33, 34, 35; Gen. 30:7; 1 Sam. 1:20; Matt. 1:20, 21). God speaks of us as being known, cared for, protected, and loved by Him before birth (Ps. 139:13–16; Jer. 1:4, 5; Eccl. 11:5; Job 31:15), and often announced His specific purpose for individuals before their birth (Gen. 16:11, 12; Gen. 25:23; Isa. 49:1; Jer. 1:4, 5; Matt. 1:18–25).

God forbids the killing of innocent human life (Gen. 9:5, 6; Ex. 20:13; Ezek. 20:31; Amos 1:13; Lev. 18:21; Jer. 32:35; The Book of Confessions, 7.246), and requires us to protect and care for the needy and the helpless (Prov. 24:11, 12; Ps. 10:17, 18; Ps. 41:1; Matt. 18:10; The Book of Confessions, 4.111; 5.114), which applies to innocent life in every case (The Book of Confessions, 7.245, 7.246).

The General Assembly has affirmed as policy that:

“After a human life has begun, it is to be protected and cherished as a precious gift of God,” and “The strong Christian presumption is that since all life is precious to God, we are to preserve and protect it.” (From Problem Pregnancies and Abortion, the General Assembly’s current policy, adopted in 1992, p. 11.)

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 10-01

Advice and Counsel on Item 10-01—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

Item 10-01 asks the 217th General Assembly (2006) to affirm a statement on late-term pregnancy as its Christian response to problems that arise late in pregnancies, and to declare that this statement supercedes and replaces all other statements on late-term pregnancies and abortion.

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) advises that Item 10-01 be disapproved with the following comment:

“The concerns raised in Item 10-01 are already present in current policy. The Statement on Post-Viability and Late-Term Abortion approved by the 214th and 215th General Assemblies (2002 and 2003), respectively, and reaffirmed by the 216th General Assembly (2004), and the church’s policies on adoption, should be more widely circulated and taken to heart by the members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

Rationale

While the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy recognizes the gravity of the moral issues that are raised by Item 10-01, we recommend that this overture be disapproved.

The 204th General Assembly (1992) approved the following statement that addressed various alternatives to abortion:

Presbyterian churches are urged to consider expanding or offering such resources as adoptive services, homes for pregnant women who lack the necessary financial and emotional support for childbirth and child rearing, and pregnancy counseling. In 1986, the General Assembly of the PC(USA) took a step in this direction in recommending that resource centers be set up for alternatives to abortion within each presbytery (Minutes, 1992, Part I, p. 372).

We also note resources listed and data on Presbyterian opinion in the ACSWP monitoring report (10-04), which looked particularly at problems involving post-viability fetus and delivery.

The Statement on Post-Viability and Late-Term Abortion, reaffirmed by the 216th General Assembly (2004), provides a Reformed theological context for decision-making and clearly points to the duties of the pastor and congregation for ministry. It addresses the complexity of moral decision-making and the issues that have been central to the church’s struggle around abortion for decades. These issues include:

- Life is precious to God—both the life of a woman and the fetus;
- Each person is endowed with the capacity and responsibility to make profound moral decisions, even about life and death;
- Such decisions can best be made within a loving, supportive community of faith;
- A central pastoral responsibility of church leaders and others is to provide counsel and support for all who face such decisions;
- Medical decisions are best left to qualified professionals;
- Public policies may constrain, but cannot ultimately bind, personal moral decision; and
- Our decisions are sometimes flawed, and we trust in God’s forgiveness.

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 10-01

Advice and Counsel on Item 10-01—From Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC).

Item 10-01 asks the 217th General Assembly (2006) to affirm a series of statements related to the termination of late-term pregnancies, to authorize them as the church’s position on these issues, and to declare that they replace all current statements on late-term pregnancies and abortion.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns advises that the 217th General Assembly (2006) disapprove this overture with the following comment:

The concerns raised in Item 10-01 have been considered by previous General Assemblies and are addressed in current policy. The 217th General Assembly (2006) reaffirms the current Statement on Post-Viability and Late-Term Abortion (2003). This statement, along with the four booklets on problem pregnancy*, developed by Women’s Ministries and the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns, should be more widely circulated and used by members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in their ministries.

Rationale

The church's current policy affirms "that life is precious to God, and we should preserve and protect it." It further states that "the ending of a pregnancy after the point of fetal viability is a matter of grave moral concern" that "may be undertaken only in the rarest of circumstances...when necessary to save the life of the woman, to preserve the woman's health in circumstances of serious risk to the woman's health, to avoid fetal suffering as a result of untreatable life-threatening medical anomalies, or in the cases of incest or rape." (Statement on Post-Viability and Late-Term Abortion, 2003, p. 2)

General Assembly policy statements recognize that the "church does not purport to know all the circumstances a woman and her family may face that may make the decision to end a pregnancy even after the fetus could be independently viable a moral choice. The more grave the threat to the woman's life and health, the more likely it is that ending the pregnancy may be the more moral choice...Such decision-making should be left to the woman and her medical and spiritual advisors" (Statement on Post-Viability, 2003, page 7).

The church has encouraged support for women in problem pregnancies, as expressed in policy statements and resources such as the ones listed below. Furthermore, the church has long emphasized alternatives to abortion, including adoption, as a way of reducing the number of abortions (Report of the Special Committee on Problem Pregnancies, 1992, p. 14).

Approval of Item 10-01 could negate the careful work of recent General Assemblies and overturn the current cautiously worded statement, which recognizes that the intensely personal decisions individual women face "do not fit nearly into medical, legal, or policy guidelines" (Statement on Post-Viability and Late-Term Abortion, 2003, p. 2). Current policy is the result of years of thoughtful committee deliberation and best represents the moral ground which Presbyterians have prayerfully struggled to find. This overture would undo all of that work, and it should be disapproved.

On Financial Support for or Against Abortion—From the Presbytery of Beaver Butler.

The Presbytery of Beaver-Butler overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to direct its offices and entities immediately to cease funding of any group that supports or advocates either for or against abortion and instead encourage PC(USA) congregations and members to voluntarily support organizations and ministries that best reflect the convictions of those individuals and congregations; and that the General Assembly Council report to the 218th General Assembly (2008) the steps taken to effect this overture.

Rationale

Current General Assembly policy encourages acceptance of all points of view about abortion as a moral decision: "The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) encourages an atmosphere of open debate and mutual respect for a variety of opinions concerning the issues related to problem pregnancies and abortion" ("Problem Pregnancies and Abortion" (1992), p. 10.) and "We also urge the General Assembly Council and the presbyteries to affirm procedures by which particular churches may be assured that their mission funds will not be used in violation of conscience on this issue" (Ibid, p. 16).

Churches and individuals in our denomination are divided on the morality of abortion. Some support a "pro-life" position, some a "pro-choice" position. Church policy acknowledges that. Churches and individuals in our denomination should be free, under our current abortion policy, to support the views and organizations that best reflect their convictions.

The General Assembly should not presume to use the mission and/or per-capita funds of Presbyterians to promote either side of this division in our church, but should take care to provide for freedom and exercise of conscience on the matter.

This overture allows for support either for or against abortion as our local churches and individuals are led. It encourages the discussion for which our church policy calls. It honors all views. It places the decisions at the lowest governing body level of our denomination. It is not coercive; rather, it offers Presbyterians assurance that they may contribute to the General Assembly without the burden of having their consciences violated.

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 10-02

Advice and Counsel on Item 10-02—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

Item 10-02, overture from the Presbytery of Beaver-Butler, calls for the 217th General Assembly (2006) to direct its offices and entities to take steps to cease funding of any group that supports or advocates for or against abortion yet encourages congregations and individuals to voluntarily support entities that reflect their convictions.

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) advises that Item 10-02 be disapproved.

Rationale

Item 10-02 should be disapproved because it would restrict General Assembly entities' ability to work for justice in partnership with a variety of religious and secular groups that share our mutual concerns in relation to matters of abortion, family planning, sex education, disease prevention, and population control.

The issues of choice regarding abortion and choice of financial support of abortion raised by Item 10-02 have been addressed by previous General Assemblies. The 189th General Assembly (1977) of the UPCUSA stated that "Agencies of the General Assembly ... may participate in and support ecumenical groups and coalitions of religious and public organizations, advocate with public policy processes and with institutions of society, etc." (Minutes, UPCUSA, 1977, Part I, p. 437).

Studies of Presbyterian opinion conducted by the Presbyterian Research Services indicate strong majorities of elders and ministers support the General Assembly's polices in these areas.

As women's reproductive healthcare options continue to come under attack, now more than ever, it seems imperative that Presbyterians strengthen our commitment to work for justice in partnership with other religious and secular groups that share our concerns.

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 10-02

Advice and Counsel on Item 10-02—From the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC).

Item 10-02 asks the 217th General Assembly (2006) to direct its offices and entities to cease funding of any group that advocates either for or against abortion and encourages the voluntary support of organizations and ministries that reflect the convictions of individual members and congregations.

The Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC) advises that Item 10-02 be disapproved.

Rationale

None of the offices and entities of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) support or advocate for or against abortion. The Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns supports the General Assembly policy (1992), which

- regards the large number of abortions in this society as "a grave concern to the church,"
- presumes that abortion "ought to be the option of last resort,"
- recognizes that we have "agreement and disagreement on the issue of abortion,"
- affirms "the ability and responsibility of women, guided by the Scriptures and the Holy Spirit, in the context of their communities of faith, to make good moral choices in regard to problem pregnancies,"

- encourages “an atmosphere of open debate and mutual respect for a variety of opinions concerning issues related to problem pregnancies and abortion,”
 - states that “the considered decision of a woman to terminate a pregnancy can be morally acceptable, though certainly not the only or required decision,” and
 - concludes that “by affirming the ability and responsibility of a woman to make good moral choices regarding problem pregnancies, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) does not advocate abortion but instead acknowledges circumstances in a sinful world that may make abortion the least objectionable of difficult options.” (Taken from the Report of the Special Committee on Problem Pregnancies and Abortion, 1992, pp. 10–11).

Item 10-03

[In response to Item 10-03, the assembly approved an alternate resolution. See p. 50.]

On Standing Clearly Against the Practice of Abortion While Extending the Love of Christ to Those Who Have Suffered Its Practice—From the Presbytery of Mississippi.

The Presbytery of Mississippi overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to do the following:

1. Affirm that God alone is the “author and giver” of life and reveals in Scripture that the miracle of life begins at the moment of conception. Therefore, the church opposes the practice of abortion (the premature ending of a pregnancy with the intent to end the life of the embryo or fetus by means of surgical intervention or administration of medications, or any other method that leads to a similar result), except when abortion is necessary (a) to protect the life of the mother as determined by a competent, licensed physician, where the continuation of the pregnancy would, more likely than not, result in either the mother or the unborn child not surviving continuation of the pregnancy; and (b) in cases of rape and incest where there is a finding by a competent, licensed physician that carrying the unborn child to term would, more likely than not, result in serious, long-lasting, and debilitating mental and emotional distress of the mother.
2. Acknowledge that individuals are confronted with unwanted pregnancies in a number of circumstances, including: pregnancy of a minor child; pregnancy of those believing they are incapable or unable to provide properly for the care and Christian nurture of the child. The church lovingly welcomes those individuals and seeks to share their burden with compassion. All members of the church are urged to minister to those contemplating abortion by prayerfully seeking the guidance of Scripture and offering counsel and assistance to ensure the child receives loving care and Christian nurture.
3. While not condoning abortion, extends the love of Christ to those who have suffered its practice.

In response to Item 10-03, the 217th General Assembly (2006) approved the following resolution:

To commend the Presbytery of Mississippi for its use of group discernment concerning abortion, and recommend that all presbyteries create task forces to replicate their process of prayer and study, that hearts and minds may be open to God’s wisdom through Scripture, other resources, and one another, and to direct the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly to communicate this action to the presbyteries.

Rationale

Resolutions previously passed by the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) have led to a general belief by members of the church and the public at large that the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) approves the practice of abortion, even partial-birth abortion, going so far as to oppose any limit on abortion (Minutes, 1992, Part I, pp. 372–73).

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) confesses in the Book of Order:

1. That “God created the heavens and the earth and made human beings in God’s image, charging them to care for all that lives” (G-3.0101).
2. That “the Church of Jesus Christ is the provisional demonstration of what God intends for all of humanity” (G-3.0200).
3. That the Church is called to participate in God’s activity in the world through its life for others by, among other things, ministering to the needs of the powerless. G-3.0300c.

4. That “the Church is called to undertake this mission even at the risk of losing its life, trusting in God alone as the author and giver of life” G-3.0400.

God has revealed through the Scriptures:

1. That as the author and giver of life, God has known each one of us even before we were formed in the womb, Jer. 1:5; Ps. 139:13; that God has created each of us, male and female, in His image, in the image of God all people have been created, Gen. 1:27; and that God has set us apart to be his subjects, having made us the objects of His compassion and grace, even before our birth, Ps. 22:10.

2. That having been made in the image of God, the Word of God commands us that we shall not kill, Ex. 20:13; that this Commandment requires that we use all lawful endeavors to preserve our own life and the life of others and also forbids us to take our own life or the life of our neighbor unjustly, or to undertake any act that would tend toward the unjust taking of another person’s life, The Book of Confessions, “Shorter Catechism,” 7.067–.069.

3. That God watches out for, protects, and defends the cause of all people, including, the weak, the afflicted, the fatherless, and the oppressed, and God listens to their voiceless cries in order that man, who is of the earth, may terrify them no more, Ps. 10:14, 17–18.

4. That God calls His Church to do these things on behalf of the Kingdom of God so that the will of God might be done on earth, and when doing so, to remember that God also calls us to speak up for those who cannot speak for themselves, Prov. 31:8.

5. That God charges us as members of his Church not to oppress or to do any wrong or violence to, among others, the fatherless, Jer. 7:6 and 22:5; and that between life and death, God has commanded us to choose life so that we may come to love God, follow his Word, listen to his voice, and hold fast to him, as the Lord of our life, Deut. 30:19–20.

The church has spoken out and forbidden the practice of abortion even as it stood in the midst of a society and government that condoned abortion and in doing so, has distinguished itself and set itself apart from virtually all civil governments that down through history have condoned practices of abortion, infanticide, and involuntary sterilization based on a variety of doctrines and beliefs that are a scandal to the compassion and grace that God, as the author and giver of life, has for all his people as well as a scandal to his active work, message, and ministry of reconciliation which God in the name of his son, Jesus Christ, calls us as his Church to undertake in all relationships of life (Excerpts from The Book of Confessions, “The Confession of 1967”).

“The church comes under the judgment of God and invites rejection by man when it fails to lead men and women into the full meaning of life ... or withholds the compassion of Christ from those caught in the moral confusion of our time” (The Book of Confessions, The Confession of 1967, 9.47).

Comments found on Items 11-01 and 11-02 by the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy at the 216th General Assembly (2004), stated, “women have the ability and responsibility for making good moral choices regarding a problem pregnancy,” and “The church should support a woman’s decision regarding a problem pregnancy, whatever her decision may be.” Those resolutions also call for furnishing information and papers on the subject and for counseling.

The PC(USA) should stand clearly against the practice of abortion and, as an even greater witness, extend the compassion and ministry of Christ’s church to those people who are considering such a decision or have been affected by its practice.

[Note: Some of the above language is from an overture from the Presbytery of Upper Ohio Valley to the 216th General Assembly (2004). That overture called for insertion of similar language in the Book of Order, and it was defeated at that General Assembly, and some quotes from the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy are taken from the “Rationale” in recommending disapproval of the overture (Overture 04-5, Item 11-01 found in the Minutes of the 216th General Assembly [2004]).

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 10-03

Advice and Counsel on Item 10-03—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

Item 10-03, overture from the Presbytery of Mississippi, calls on the 217th General Assembly (2006) to stand clearly against the practice of abortion while extending the love of Christ to those who have suffered its practice.

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) advises that Item 10-03 be disapproved.

Rationale

Over the past thirty years, General Assemblies of the Presbyterian church have consistently affirmed that the considered decision of a woman to terminate a pregnancy can be a morally acceptable, though certainly not the only or required, decision. Possible justifying circumstances would include medical indications of severe or mental deformity, conception as a result of rape or incest, or conditions under which the physical or mental health of either woman or child would be gravely threatened (Minutes, 1992, Part I, p. 368).

The position of the church affirms the right of women to make their own considered choices about abortion, in consultation with their medical and spiritual advisors. These matters have been treated extensively by prior General Assemblies and have been the subject of in-depth studies of considerable sensitivity and comprehensiveness.

Since all life is precious to God, we are to preserve and protect it. Abortion ought to be an option of last resort. The PC(USA) does not advocate abortion, but instead acknowledges circumstances in a sinful world that may make abortion the least objectionable of difficult options threatened (Minutes, 1992, Part I, p. 368).

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 10-03

Advice and Counsel on Item 10-03—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC).

Item 10-03 asks the 217th General Assembly (2006) to oppose the practice of abortion with limited exceptions and minister to those who have contemplated or experienced abortion.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC) advises that the 217th General Assembly (2006) disapprove this overture.

Rationale

Current General Assembly policy (1992) recognizes that Presbyterians have both agreement and disagreement on the issue of abortion. This overture refers to a general belief by members and the wider society that the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) approves the practice of abortion when in fact, our policy “does not advocate abortion but acknowledges circumstances in a sinful world that may make abortion the least objectionable of difficult options.” Furthermore, our policy states that “abortion ought to be an option of last resort,” and “the large number of abortions is a grave concern to the church.”

Presbyterian policy on abortion is grounded in the strong Christian presumption that “all life is precious to God.” While Presbyterians hold “varying points of view about when human life begins,” those holding these varying points of view agree that “after human life has begun, it is to be cherished and protected as a precious gift of God.”

Because problem pregnancies are the result of many complicated circumstances, Presbyterians recognize that “we have neither the wisdom or authority to address or make decisions about each situation.” Therefore, “we affirm the ability and responsibility of women, guided by the Scriptures and the Holy Spirit, in the context of their communities of faith, to make good moral choices in regard to problem pregnancies.” While “the considered decision of a woman to terminate a pregnancy can be a morally acceptable decision, we do not advocate the practice of abortion as the only or required decision.

This overture contends that the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) does not oppose any limit on abortion, while in fact, our policy states “abortion should not be used as a method of birth control,” for “gender selection only or solely to obtain fetal parts for transplantation.” It also expresses disturbance by “abortions that seem to be elected only as a convenience or to ease embarrassment” (Report of the Special Committee on Problem Pregnancies and Abortion, 1992, pp. 10–11).

The 214th General Assembly (2002) approved a policy stating, “the ending of a pregnancy after the point of fetal viability is a matter of grave moral concern to us all.” Because “humans are empowered by the spirit prayerfully to make significant moral choices, including the choice to continue or end a pregnancy,” late-term abortions “may be undertaken only in the rarest of circumstances and after prayer and/or pastoral care and counsel, when necessary to save the life of the woman, to preserve the woman’s health in circumstances of a serious risk to the woman’s health, to avoid fetal suffering as a result of untreatable life-threatening medical anomalies, or in cases of incest or rape” (Statement on Post-Viability and Late-Term Abortion, 2002, p. 2).

Previous General Assemblies have sought to educate congregations about Presbyterian policy and provide resources for pastoral care in local congregations. In response to an action of the 216th General Assembly (2004), information about the following resources was sent to every Presbyterian congregation:

- Problem Pregnancy: When You Need the Wisdom of Solomon
- Problem Pregnancy: When No Choice Is Easy
- Problem Pregnancy: There's Always a Father
- Problem Pregnancy: When Pregnancy Involves Loss, and
- Statement on Post-Viability and Late-Term Abortion.

These resources reflect the historical policy statements of the General Assemblies and are available from Presbyterian Distribution Services (1-800-524-2612). The Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns encourages use of Presbyterian resources and widespread education on Presbyterian abortion policy.

Item 10-04

[The assembly approved Item 10-04 as amended. See p. 50.]

Monitoring Report on the Implementation of the Problem Pregnancies and Abortion Policies with Recommendations

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) ~~[reaffirm the previous General Assemblies' policies on problem pregnancies and abortion and do the following]:~~

1. ~~[Approve]~~ [Receive] this "Monitoring Report on the Implementation of the Problem Pregnancies and Abortion Policies."

2. Commend the entities listed in this report for their efforts to implement the General Assemblies' problem pregnancies and abortion policies and recognize that the policies concerning problem pregnancies and abortion are not clearly understood by the public and media, and in an effort to help clarify and interpret the current PC(USA) policies, the 217th General Assembly (2006) calls upon its agencies to ensure an even-handed and fair representation of its current policies.

3. Urge the entities of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to report their ongoing efforts to implement the General Assemblies' problem pregnancies and abortion policies to future General Assemblies.

Rationale

This report and its recommendations are in response to the following referral: 25.087. D. Monitoring Report on the Implementation of General Assembly Policy on Abortion, Recommendation 6.a., That the 212th General Assembly (2000) Direct the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy to Develop a Monitoring Report on the Implementation of the Problem Pregnancies and Abortion Policies Every Five Years, Beginning in 2005, and Report to the Appropriate General Assemblies (Minutes, 2000, Part I, pp. 34, 265).

I. Introduction

The 212th General Assembly (2000) approved the "Monitoring Report on the Implementation of General Assembly Policy on Abortion" (Minutes, 2000, Part I, pp. 34, 264–76). In the report it was affirmed:

Overall, the entities of the church have been in compliance with the General Assemblies' policies on problem pregnancy and abortion in what they have said. (Minutes, 2000, Part I, p. 275)

It was also acknowledged in the report that "there was no monitoring in place for the overall implementation of the General Assemblies' policies on problem pregnancy and abortion over time" (Minutes, 2000, Part I, p. 276). In response to this concern, the 212th General Assembly (2000) "Direct[ed] the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy to develop a monitoring report on implementation of the problem pregnancies and abortion policies every five years, beginning in 2005, and report to the appropriate General Assemblies" (Minutes, 2000, Part I, p. 265).

It should be noted that in addition to this monitoring survey, Presbyterian Research Services periodically assesses support for the General Assembly's policies on problem pregnancies and abortion. Consistent with previous majorities of Presbyterians supporting the primary role of the woman's conscience in decisions on pregnancy termination, the August 2001 Presbyterian Panel opinion survey found majorities permitting post-viability abortion; to save a mother's life (elders, 96 percent; pastors, 98 percent), incest or rape (69 percent; 61 percent), to protect mother's health (63 percent; 60 percent), severe birth defect (56 percent; 39 percent), physician so advises (46 percent; 50 percent).

In the spring of 2005, the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) requested materials from the appropriate entities of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) regarding their efforts to implement the recommendations included in the "Monitoring Report on the Implementation of the Abortion Policies" approved by the 212th General Assembly (2000). The ACSWP affirms the good work of the entities of the church to implement the General Assemblies' policies on problem pregnancies and abortion. The ACSWP submits its findings to the 217th General Assembly (2006) in this problem pregnancies and abortion monitoring report with recommendations.

II. Review of Entities' Efforts to Implement the Policy

A. Board of Pensions (BOP)

The Board of Pensions (BOP) responded to the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP)'s request for a report on its efforts to implement the General Assemblies' policies on problem pregnancies and abortion. This data was analyzed and a summary of the ACSWP's findings is presented below.

Recommendation: The response the BOP submitted to the ACSWP addressed a concern raised in the findings of the "Monitoring Report on the Implementation of the Problem Pregnancies and Abortion Policies" (2000) that "the board could include appropriate policy segments about the decision-making process in its information publications" (Minutes, 2000, Part I, p. 273).

Findings: The BOP reported that each year in its Healthcare Summary of the Medical Plan for each Plan member the following information is provided on Reproductive Health Coverage:

- Subject to Plan limits, prescribed birth control through the Prescription Drug Program and medically necessary in vitro fertilization procedures are covered services.
- Consistent with the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)'s affirmation of the ability and the responsibility of a woman to make good moral choices regarding problem pregnancies, the Medical Plan reimburses medical costs for abortion procedures. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) further affirms that abortion should not be used as a method of birth control, for gender selection only, or solely to obtain fetal parts for transplantation (Minutes, 1992, Part I, p. 368).
- "When an individual woman faces the decision whether to abort a pregnancy, the issue is intensely personal, and may manifest itself in ways that do not reflect public rhetoric, or do not fit neatly into medical, legal, or policy guidelines. Humans are empowered by the spirit prayerfully to make significant moral choices, including the choice to continue or end a pregnancy. Human choices should not be made in a moral vacuum, but must be based on Scripture, faith, and Christian ethics. For any choice, we are accountable to God; however, even when we err, God offers to forgive us. The ending of a pregnancy after the point of fetal viability is a matter of grave moral concern to us all, and may be undertaken only in the rarest of circumstances and after prayer and/or pastoral care, when necessary to save the life of the woman, to preserve the woman's health in circumstances of a serious risk to the woman's health, to avoid fetal suffering as a result of untreatable life-threatening medical anomalies, or in cases of incest or rape" (Minutes, 2002, Part I, p. 628).
- Churches and employing organizations that object, as a matter of conscience, to the use of their dues for such costs may apply for Relief of Conscience. Moneys offset from Medical Plan dues of employers that have applied for and received Relief of Conscience are deposited in the Board of Pensions' Assistance Program and, when sufficient funds are available, grants are given to parents of adopted infants for unreimbursed medical expenses. For more information regarding this administrative policy, contact the Board of Pensions at 800-773-7752 (800-PRESPLAN).

Go to <http://www.pensions.org> for more information on the BOP.

B. General Assembly Council (GAC)

Several entities of the General Assembly Council (GAC) provided the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) materials on their efforts to implement the General Assemblies' policies on problem pregnancies and abortion. The results of the ACSWP's findings are listed below.

In each case, the entities listed were responding to this overall recommendation:

Recommendation: 25.082, 1.

Accept the “Monitoring Report on the Implementation of General Assembly Policy on Abortion” and direct the Stated Clerk to refer it together with the “Report on Problem Pregnancies and Abortion Prepared for the Problem Pregnancies Monitoring Team on the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy” (by Margaret Jendrek, January 12-14, 2000) to the following entities: Office of the General Assembly; Board of Pensions; Presbyterian Washington Office; Women’s Ministries of the National Ministries Division; and Presbyterians Affirming Reproductive Options (PARO), a network of PHEWA (Minutes, 2000, Part I, pp. 264–65).

Go to <http://www.pcusa.org/gac> for more information on the GAC.

1. Presbyterians Affirming Reproductive Options (PARO), a Network of the Presbyterian Health, Education and Welfare Association (PHEWA)

Findings: Presbyterians Affirming Reproductive Options (PARO), a network of the Presbyterian, Health Education and Welfare Association (PHEWA), has advocated the General Assemblies’ policies on problem pregnancies and abortion. The PARO submitted to the ACSWP the following publications that demonstrate its commitment in support of the positions taken by the General Assemblies’ on these social witness issues:

- Brochure on “Supporting the General Assembly Pro-Choice policy and protecting your religious and personal freedom.” (English and Spanish version)
- Articles published in the PHEWA’s Quarterly Newsletter (2001–2004) focused on these topics.
- A member of PARO served as the content editor for the November/December 2002 issue of Church & Society magazine on “The Challenge of Choice: Presbyterians and Roe v. Wade.”
- The Social Justice Biennial Conferences of the PHEWA, held in 2003 and 2005, included workshops on these topics.
- Periodically PARO sends “Action Alerts” and “Updates” on problem pregnancies and abortion concerns to its constituents.
- In 2000, PARO partnered with the Presbyterian Child Advocacy Network (PACN) of PHEWA in the production of the resource on Nurturing The Children of God: The Call to Foster Parenting & Adoption (PDS #72-650-00-001).

Go to <http://www.pcusa.org/phewa> for more information on the PHEWA and its networks.

2. Presbyterian Washington Office (PWO)

Findings: The Presbyterian Washington Office has advocated the General Assemblies’ policies on problem pregnancies and abortions in the following ways:

- Through communications to the United States Congress;
- Through the publication of articles on these topics in the “Women & Family” issues of the Stewardship of Public Life
- Through email “Action Alerts; and
- Through articles periodically published on its web site (e.g., “Putting Prevention First: Reduce Abortion” <http://www.pcusa.org/washington/issuenet/wf-040518>, and “Support for Family Planning Funding for the United Nations Population Fund” <http://www.pcusa.org/washington/issuenet/wf-040205>, etc.).

3. Women’s Ministries (WM)

Findings: In 2004, the Women’s Ministries office of the National Ministries Division (NMD) collaborated with the Office of the General Assembly (OGA) to publish the following resources on the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)’s web site at <http://www.pcusa.org/overture2004-10>:

- When No Choice Is Easy: For the Pregnant Woman

- When You Need the Wisdom of Solomon: Helping Others Face Problem Pregnancies
- There Is Always a Father: Does the Father Have a Problem Too?
- When Pregnancy Involves Loss: Helping Others Face Problems Pregnancies

There is also a link to the “Statement on Post-Viability and Late-Term Abortion” approved by the 215th General Assembly (2003) on this web page.

C. Office of the General Assembly (OGA)

The information for this section was submitted to the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) by the Office of the General Assembly (OGA). It includes recent actions taken by the OGA to implement the General Assemblies’ policies on problem pregnancies and abortion.

Go to www.pcusa.org/oga for more information on the OGA.

Findings: The Office of the General Assembly (OGA) has complied with the mandate it received from the 212th General Assembly (2000) regarding the referral listed above. The Stated Clerk of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) reported to the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) that the “Monitoring Report on the Implementation of General Assembly Policy on Abortion” together with the “Report on Problem Pregnancies and Abortion Prepared for the Problem Pregnancies Monitoring Team of the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy” was referred to all the entities named in the recommendation listed above.

In 2004, the Stated Clerk and the Moderator of the 216th General Assembly (2004) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) sent a pastoral letter to congregations on the issue of problem pregnancy, and referred them to the four resource booklets noted above consistent with the policies of the church, published by Women’s Ministries, National Ministries Division (NMD). As stated under the Women’s Ministries heading of this report, those four resources, plus the pastoral letter, and the “Statement on Post-Viability and Late-Term Abortion” approved by the 215th General Assembly (2003) are available on the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)’s Web site at www.pcusa.org/overture2004-10.

Periodically, the OGA receives letters from individuals on the topics of problem pregnancies and abortions. The Women’s Ministries office and the OGA have often worked together to develop a response to these persons based on the General Assemblies’ policies on problem pregnancies and abortions. Included with the materials the ACSWP received from the OGA was a copy of a letter the Stated Clerk sent to the moderator and members of a session regarding the action taken by the 214th General Assembly (2002) on late-term abortions.

III. Conclusion

The entities listed in this report are to be commended for their efforts to implement the General Assemblies’ policies on problem pregnancies and abortion in a climate of decreasing staff and financial resources. The complexity of these issues challenges the entities of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to give prayerful consideration to the General Assemblies’ policies on these topics as they do the following:

- Advocate these policies at the local, state, national and international levels of government.
- Develop resources to assist the whole church in grappling with the moral and ethical issues these topics pose.

Therefore, the whole church is encouraged to pray for these entities as they seek to comply faithfully with the General Assembly’s policies on problem pregnancies and abortion, as well as for those persons making decisions on these matters.

On Teen Suicide and Self-Injury—From the Presbytery of St. Augustine.

The Presbytery of St. Augustine overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to request appropriate agencies within the church to do the following:

1. Engage in theological and moral discourse that addresses the social, psychological, health, and spiritual dimensions of suicide [and self-injury among youth];
2. Produce new and/or publicize existing resources and provide opportunities to raise awareness in church leaders of the issues, causes, and prevalence of suicide and self-injury among youth;
3. Promote churchwide awareness of the problems of self-harm and suicide amongst youth through participation in national suicide prevention month, congregational education through worship and sermons, and implement other educational opportunities that address the range of mental health and spiritual concerns associated with suicide [and self-injury among youth]; and
4. Include consideration of youth suicide and self-injury in the ongoing ~~[revision of the 1981 study “Nature and Value of Human Life”]~~ [work] being done by the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy [(ACSWP)’s Task Force on Comprehensive Serious Mental Illness].

Rationale

The presbytery, in making this overture, affirms the following facts and convictions:

- That the Holy Scriptures in both Old and New Testaments bears witness to the Creator’s love for life; and
- That the community of God’s people are called to support and love one another; and
- That the church of Jesus Christ is called to confront suffering in God’s world with compassion and energy; and
- That there is increasing evidence that social, political, and family pressures exist that impact youth in ways which stress their capacities for healthy adjustments; and
- That many youth do not possess adequate maturity or support systems to help them understand and/or adapt to many of these challenges; and
- That many youth suffering from despair and confusion question the value of life and living, act out in risky and self-destructive ways, and disconnect themselves from church and family care; and
- That suicide is the third leading cause of death in persons 15 to 25 years of age in the United States, preceded only by accident and homicide, and that there are 10 suicides for every 100,000 youth each year;¹ and
- That social and religious stigma may discourage open dialogue about the multiple factors related to suicide thus impairing research and education; and
- That knowledge, energy, and commitment are needed by our society and communities of faith to confront and effectively reduce the tragedy of suicide in God’s world.

GAC (CMD) COMMENT ON ITEM 10-05

Comment on Item 10-05—From the General Assembly Council (Congregational Ministries Division).

Honest Talk About Suicide is the current resource addressing this issue. It introduces you to young people whose lives have been touched by suicide. Readers hear their stories and learn to recognize the warning signs and how the community of faith is responding to this important topic. The office continues to explore the needs for additional resources.

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 10-05

Advice and Counsel on Item 10-05—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

Recommendation 4 of Item 10-05 calls for the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) to “Include consideration of youth suicide and self-injury in the ongoing revision of the 1981 study ‘Nature and Value of Human Life.’”

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) advises that Item 10-05 be approved with amendment:

Amend Recommendation 4 as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“4. Include consideration of youth suicide and self-injury in the ongoing ~~revision of the 1981 study “Nature and Value of Human Life”~~ work being done by the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP)’s Task Force on Comprehensive Serious Mental Illness.”

Rationale

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP)’s Task Force on “Comprehensive Serious Mental Illness” is currently working on a proposed policy statement on mental illness concerns. Youth suicide and self-injury are two of the concerns this group is focusing on in its deliberations. The task force is studying these issues because teen suicide is the third leading cause of death among teenagers. In addition, the National Youth Violence Prevention Resource Center (NYVPRC) states that more than 90 percent of teen suicide victims have a mental disorder (e.g., depression, and/or a history of alcohol or drug abuse). (See “Teen Suicide” on the National Youth Violence Prevention Resource Center’s website at <http://www.safeyouth.org/scripts/teens/suicide.asp>).

ACREC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 10-05

Advice and Counsel on Item 10-05—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC).

Item 10-05 calls for the implementation of strategies to address the issues, causes, and prevalence of suicide and self-injury among youth. This overture was submitted by the Presbytery of St. Augustine.

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) advises Item 10-05 be approved with the following amendment (in italics).

Add a new Recommendation 5. to read as follows:

“5. Include the experience and perspectives of youth in communities of color in the moral and theological discourse on this issue, produce resources for education, worship, and awareness promotion that equip the church to respond to the needs of youth in racially and culturally diverse communities in a culturally proficient manner.”

Rationale

The National Youth Violence Prevention Resource Center (NYVPRC) reports that the suicide rate among Native American male youth is more than double the overall rate for male youth ages ten to nineteen (19.3 per 100,000 vs. 8.5 per 100,000). The NYVPRC also reports “the suicide rate has been increasing most rapidly among African American males ages 10 to 19—more than doubling from 2.9 per 100,000 to 6.1 per 100,000 from 1981 to 1998.” And in 1999 “a national survey of high school students found that Hispanic students, both male and female, were significantly more likely than white students to have reported a suicide attempt (12.8% vs. 6.7%). Among Hispanic students, females (18.9%) were almost three times more likely than males (6.6%) to have reported a suicide attempt” (Youth Suicide fact sheet, NYVPRC, 2002, available at <http://www.safeyouth.org/scripts/facts/suicide.asp>).

Many factors contribute to these alarming disparities in youth suicide rates, including environmental conditions and individual risk factors. Responding to the needs of youth in racially and culturally diverse communities requires paying attention to the particular needs of diverse communities as well as incorporating cultural proficiency into more general education resources and prevention efforts.

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 10-05

Advice and Counsel on Item 10-05—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC).

Item 10-05 concerns teen suicide and self-injury and asks the 217th General Assembly (2006) to request appropriate agencies within the church to promote awareness and provide resources on these issues.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC) advises that Item 10-05 be approved and referred to ACWC and other appropriate church entities for study and resourcing.

Rationale

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns would welcome working on the recommendations of this overture. One of our responsibilities is to resource and to advise the General Assembly and the General Assembly Council on issues of concern to women. Teen suicide and self-mutilation are major concerns to women, because self-injury is far more prevalent among young women than young men.¹ Also, the issue is closely related to the trauma of childhood sexual abuse. The earlier the abuse began, the more severe the mutilation.²

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns has experience with a related issue and produced an excellent study, Sisters of Mercy, Daughters of Grace: Presbyterians and Prostituted Women, Witherspoon Press, Louisville, 2003. There are numerous other fine resources to help congregations engage in theological and moral discourse on all the ramifications of teen suicide, among which is Counseling Troubled Youth by Professor Robert C. Dykstra, a Presbyterian pastor and seminary professor.

Living into the Body of Christ: Towards Full Inclusion of People with Disabilities

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.):

1. Approve the Introduction and “A Vision of Living into the Body of Christ”:

I. Introduction

This report with recommendations is in response to the following referral from the 211th General Assembly (1999): “Direct the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy, in consultation with appropriate entities, to develop a comprehensive disabilities policy, including learning disabilities, disabilities prevention, and all other disabilities identified by the Resolution on ‘Disabilities Concerns,’ and report to the 217th General Assembly (2005) [2006]” (Minutes, 1999, Part I, pp. 41, 308–309). The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy received further instructions from the 213th General Assembly (2001): “Direct the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy to instruct its task forces on disabilities and serious mental illness to include the dimension of domestic violence and its impact in their respective work” (Minutes, 2001, Part I, pp. 61, 239). The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) subsequently appointed two task forces to address these matters given their wide scope. This report and recommendations focus specifically on the issues explored by the task force on disabilities, while another team focuses on Christian faith in relation to serious mental illness.

The General Assembly is invited to begin where its advisory committee began, by affirming that the church include children, youth, and adults with disabilities, while acknowledging that not every Christian community recognizes its potential for ministry. Hence, a task force of volunteers was asked to develop policy and recommendations for the church to work for justice with persons who have disabilities, both within the church itself and the wider social order. A consultation with informed Presbyterians drawn from the synods enriched the work. This policy of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) confirms that the church—the Body of Christ—is to be a fully inclusive body in all dimensions of its life. To that end, the policy begins with a necessarily comprehensive set of recommendations.

Please note that “people” or “persons” are always spoken of first, before mention of “with disabilities,” or a similar phrase, throughout the opening “vision,” the recommendations section, and the background study rationale on which the recommendations are based. This “people first” language expresses the priority of our shared humanity. And for us as Christians, it underlines that our primary identity is found in Christ, not in social labels or medical designations.

II. “A Vision of Living into the Body of Christ”

As the body of Christ, we are to welcome everyone to the banquet Feast of God’s love in this world. The Feast of God’s love is open to all and fully inclusive of people from all pathways of life.

We envision a church in which the designation or naming of a person’s disability is less important than who that person is as one of God’s people.

We envision a church in which everyone welcomes and reflects diversity and inclusiveness in worship, education, fellowship, service, justice, leadership, and evangelism.

We envision a church in which all the members of the body of Christ honor, respect, nurture, and support the gifts, talents, and services of every other member.

We envision a church in which every child of God can realize her/his full potential, and through which society is consistently engaged and challenged to become more inclusive.

We envision a church that embodies the creative movement from awareness, through accessibility and integration, to full inclusion, and thus bears healing witness to the world.

We envision the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) as a leader in promoting and manifesting this vision of a just world, serving with and empowering people with disabilities to engage in this ongoing work.

This vision of living into a fuller experience of the Body of Christ illuminates the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)’s commitment to the full inclusion of people with disabilities in every aspect of life; living into this vision draws us closer to the fulfillment of God’s redemptive will “on earth as in heaven.”

2. Approve the recommendations

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) makes the following recommendations to the 217th General Assembly (2006), to the General Assembly Council (GAC) and its entities, to the Office of the General Assembly (OGA) and its entities, to the middle governing bodies, to sessions, to local leaders and members, to the Board of Pensions (BOP), to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Investment and Loan Program, Inc. (PILP), to the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation (PPC), and to the Presbyterian Theological Institutions and those related to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) by covenant agreement:

a. The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006):

(1) Affirm the witness of “That All May Enter” (1977), especially in light of its advocacy for greater access to churches and church-related institutions for people with disabilities.

(2) Approve the following recommendations related to “Living into the Body of Christ: Towards Full Inclusion of People with Disabilities”:

(a) approve the policy statement and recommendations;

(b) receive the background sections and appendixes;

(c) approve the report as a whole for churchwide study and use;

(d) direct the Stated Clerk to publish the entire report “Living into the Body of Christ: Towards Full Inclusion of People with Disabilities” with appendixes and a related study/action guide; distribute it to the middle governing bodies, resource centers, sessions, libraries of the theological seminaries; and make additional copies available for sale to aid study and implementation efforts in the church; and [Financial Implication of $43,875 for 2007 (Per Capita Budget—OGA)]

(e) commend the members of the Task Force on “Harvesting Seeds of Justice: Ministering in Church and Society with Persons Who Have Disabilities,” the Synod Consultation on Living into the Body of Christ:

Towards Full Inclusion of People with Disabilities, the staff of the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP), and the many individuals and groups who offered comments and suggestions in the development of this report on behalf of the whole church.

b. The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) urge the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and its membership to do the following:

(1) Give prophetic witness regarding issues related to people with disabilities, recognizing ~~some~~ that disability concerns are a matter of social justice~~.] [that intersect with a wide variety of other areas, including but not limited to:~~

~~[(a) race, gender, ethnicity, sexual orientation, age, and class;~~

~~[(b) housing, employment, transportation, and community involvement;~~

~~[(c) immigration and acculturation, demographic changes in urban and rural communities, and challenges facing local institutions (e.g., schools, hospitals, social service agencies, judicial systems, etc.);~~

~~[(d) medical care, family planning (including reproductive choice), and end-of-life issues;~~

~~[(e) domestic violence, including physical and sexual abuse;~~

~~[(f) bioethics, genetics, and other new medical technologies; and~~

~~[(g) interreligious dialogue, international peace processes (especially in light of war-related disabilities), and global health initiatives.]~~

(2) Be an advocate with and on behalf of people with disabilities at all levels of church and society, locally, nationally, and internationally.

c. The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) direct the General Assembly Council (GAC) to do the following:

(1) Facilitate, with the middle governing bodies, a strategy to educate, train, research, and provide advocacy for people living with disabilities and their families in church and society by assisting them in developing guidelines and training procedures for use by church leaders in local congregations.

(2) Facilitate, with the middle governing bodies, a strategy to invite and encourage people living with disabilities to seek leadership and employment positions throughout the church.

(3) Encourage the committees on representation and nominating committees at all levels of the church to consult with the Social Welfare Organizations office of the National Ministries Division (NMD) in engaging people living with disabilities into active governing body service.

(4) Encourage support of the efforts of the PC(USA)'s ecumenical partners' work (e.g., the World Council of Churches (WCC)'s Ecumenical Disability Advocates Network (EDAN) formed during the 8th Assembly of the WCC at Harare, Zimbabwe, in December 1998) to provide for the place, presence, and full inclusion of persons with disabilities in the Church Universal.

(5) Encourage the entities of the General Assembly (GA), the middle governing bodies, and congregations to assure that their meetings and meeting venues are accessible to and welcoming of people with disabilities.

(6) Encourage the Congregational Ministries Division (CMD) to support inclusive education throughout the church, supporting adaptations of current educational practices and materials as well as intentionally designing inclusive curricula.

(7) Encourage the Worldwide Ministries Division (WMD) to continue its support of the efforts of the PC(USA)'s partner churches and other appropriate organizations regarding persons with disabilities.

(8) Direct the offices of the Racial Ethnic Congregational Enhancement, Middle Eastern Ministries, Immigrant Group Ministries, and Evangelism and Racial Cultural Diversity, in partnership with the racial ethnic caucuses, the coordinating councils and networks of these offices, in partnership with the Social Welfare Organizations office of the National Ministries Division (NMD), and with all governing bodies of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), to develop strategies for the full and faithful implementation of this policy.

(9) Direct the Social Welfare Organizations office of the National Ministries Division (NMD) to continue to support existing programs and congregations seeking to cultivate inclusive ministries with people living with disabilities.

(10) Direct the Presbyterian Washington Office (PWO) of the National Ministries Division (NMD) (and other appropriate General Assembly entities) to

(a) convey disability policy concerns to political leaders and church members;

(b) monitor legislation addressing these concerns at the federal level, and to notify Presbyterians when they have an opportunity to influence such legislation;

(c) affirm the historical strides made through the following federal legislation: the Architectural Barriers Act (1968), the Rehabilitation Act (1973), the Education for All Handicapped Children Act (1975, amended 1977), the Americans with Disabilities Act (1990), the Individuals with Disabilities Education Improvement Act of 2004 (IDEA), and the Work Incentives Improvement Act (1999); and

(d) support new legislative initiatives that affirm the full humanity and advance the full inclusion of people with disabilities working whenever possible with other churches and organizations with similar goals.

(11) Direct the Presbyterian United Nations Office (PUNO) of the Congregational Ministries Division (CMD) (and other appropriate General Assembly entities) to convey disability policy concerns to the appropriate leaders in the United Nations.

d. The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) urge the synods, and presbyteries to continue to explore ways to make their campgrounds, lodges, and retreat centers physically and programmatically accessible to people with disabilities, and commends those who have already invested heavily in these improvements.

e. The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) urge pastors, sessions, and congregations do the following with and on behalf of people with disabilities:

(1) Work to foster and maintain positive attitudes towards people with disabilities.

(2) Encourage the self-advocacy and self-determination and full participation of people with disabilities in congregational life, spiritually, physically and programmatically.

(3) Seek ways to advocate for prevention of disabling conditions, including but not limited to those caused by violence, accidents, or addictions.

(4) Seek ways to advocate for improved quality of life for people with disabilities.

(5) Encourage congregations to engage people with disabilities and their families in developing strategies for implementing this policy and to resist the temptation to make such individuals and families solely responsible for administering such strategies for their congregations.

(6) Become aware of, and work with local organizations outside the church that can assist efforts on behalf of people with disabilities.

(7) Support the effort of caregivers within their congregations.

(8) Encourage congregations to monitor the items above using an annual audit form designed by the Presbyterians for Disabilities Concerns (PDC) network of the Presbyterian Health, Education and Welfare Association (PHEWA).

(9) Encourage churches, though they are exempt from many of the provisions of the American Disabilities Act (ADA), to seek to satisfy the requirements of the law.

(10) Commends those who have already engaged in advocacy and invested heavily in these improvements.

f. The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) encourage the National Ministries Division (NMD) to disseminate this report to colleges and universities through the offices that serve the various areas of higher education: collegiate ministries/student ministries; racial ethnic schools and colleges; the National Network of Presbyterian College Women; and the Association of Presbyterian Colleges and Universities, and encourage institutions to become more intentional in developing curricula, teaching methods, admission and recruitment policies, hiring practices, and policies affecting students that create a more welcoming and supportive climate for persons living with disabilities.

g. The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ASCWP) recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006):

(1) Gratefully recognize the faithful efforts and accomplishments that the theological institutions related to and in covenant agreement with the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) through the General Assembly's Committee on Theological Education (COTE) have made in regard to people living with disabilities.

(2) Urge these institutions, through COTE, to identify and include people living with disabilities in theological education, giving consideration to, and facilitating strategies for implementing more inclusive continuing education, chapel worship, spiritual formation programs, academic practices, and reasonable accommodations all in terms of people living with disabilities by encouraging seminaries to consult with Presbyterians for Disabilities Concerns (PDC) and/or the PC(USA)'s disabilities consultants.

h. The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) urge the Leadership and Vocation area of the National Ministries Division (NMD) to include resources for committees on preparation for ministry and committees on ministry that assist people living with disabilities as they go through the call process.

i. The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) encourage the Presbyteries' Cooperative Committee on Examinations to provide reasonable accommodations for the ordination exams for people living with disabilities.

j. The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) do the following:

(1) Affirm the importance of the ministry of the Board of Pensions (BOP) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in serving Plan members living with disabilities, as well as Plan members charged with care for spouses or children with disabilities, through the design and administration of its Benefits Plan and Assistance Program.

(2) Urge the BOP to continue to be

(a) sensitive to and thoughtful about the time demands that compliance with Benefits Plan requirements for documentation of medical status and medical needs place on families already strained by a disabling condition;

(b) reasonable in its requests for medical documentation and proactive in assisting families with compliance;

(c) timely in its actions and communications, so that Plan members and their families are well-informed about their participation status with the Board of Pensions;

(d) in direct communication with Plan members living with disabilities, so that the Board of Pensions may have a full appreciation of their particular circumstances and needs, leading to holistic care for the person and the family; and

(e) in partnership with employing organizations and national and local church leadership in coordinating the scope of the Medical Plan and the Assistance Program in order to offer appropriate care for all Plan members.

k. The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) require the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Investment and Loan Program, Inc. (PILP) to do the following:

(1) Encourage congregations to explore “Special Incentive Loans” for accessibility and new technology projects.

(2) Continue the regular review and improvement of processes by which congregations may pursue loans to make their facilities and resources more accessible and inclusive of people living with disabilities.

l. The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) urge the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation (PPC) to do the following:

(1) Encourage its authors to use language such as “People First” that is sensitive to the needs of people living with disabilities in new publications.

(2) Encourage its authors to include examples of the contributions of people with disabilities in their manuscripts.

(3) Encourage its authors to promote inclusion throughout the life of the church, at all levels of worship, education, and mission, and seek to promote justice with people living with disabilities in society and the world.

m. The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) instruct the General Assembly Nominating Committee (GANC) to encourage the middle governing bodies to increase the percentage of qualified people living with disabilities serving on General Assembly level committees by 1 percent per year through 2016.

Rationale

This report with recommendations is in response to the following referral: 1999 Referral: 25.038 Response to Recommendation Directing the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy, in Consultation with Appropriate Entities, to Develop a Comprehensive Disabilities Policy, Including Hearing Disabilities, Disabilities Prevention, and Other Disabilities Identified by the Resolution on “Disability Concerns” and Report to the 217th General Assembly (2005)—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 1999, Part I, pp. 41, 308–309).

The recommendation read as follows:

Direct the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy, in consultation with appropriate entities, to develop a comprehensive disabilities policy, including learning disabilities, disabilities prevention, and all other disabilities identified by the Resolution on ‘Disabilities Concerns,’” and report to the 217th General Assembly (2005) [2006]” (Minutes, 1999, Part I, pp. 41, 308–309).

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy received further instructions from the 213th General Assembly (2001): “Direct the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy to instruct its task forces on disabilities and serious mental illness to include the dimension of domestic violence and its impact in their respective work” (Minutes, 2001, Part I, pp. 61, 239). This report and recommendations focus specifically on the issues explored by the task force on disabilities, while another team focuses on Christian faith in relation to serious mental illness.

Introduction

Access Your Heart

Please include us.
It hurts to be excluded.
A quick hi and a hug are not enough.
We need real inclusion.
When will you understand?

We are all members of the body of Christ.
Some of us communicate in different ways.
Some of us see differently.
Some of us behave in ways we can’t control.
Some of us learn at different speeds.
Some of us need wheelchairs.
Some of us walk differently.
Some of us hear less.
Some of us never get to come to church.
Some of us are just left out.

We are all members of Christ’s family.
Why can’t you be more welcoming?

We are all in need of a church which welcomes and accepts us for who we are.
We are made in God's image.
When you forget to include us you are forgetting to include God.

Access is more than ramps and accessible bathrooms.
The hearts of everyone need to be open and welcoming.
When hearts are open we can really be a family in Christ.
Open your heart.
And let us in.

Sarah Nettleton (© 11/08/00)

The purpose of the recommendations above and the background to follow is to enable churches to welcome people with disabilities and to advocate with them for justice both within the church and in society. Justice in the Reformed perspective is marked by the exhibition of social righteousness in conduct, covenant, and relationships. It takes form in social structures that permit the flourishing of all of God's people. Therefore, full inclusion for people living with disabilities requires compassion and the establishment of a just social reality. The church exhibits its love for neighbor in the full participation of people living with disabilities, giving integrity to our advocacy for justice in the world. Seeking always the fullest life of the church, we further encourage our church to explore with other denominations new ways to embrace persons living with disabilities.

In this report, the following areas are covered:

First, having shared some stories that frame the need for the report, we outline a biblical and theological argument for total inclusion of people with disabilities into the very body of Christ, framing this argument within the historical commitment of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to justice within local communities, nations and the world.

Second, we briefly review the history of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in terms of how this denomination has approached issues facing persons with disabilities in the past.

Third, we close with additional stories of hope and despair to highlight the challenge facing the denomination in being the fully inclusive body of Christ in the world today.

A. From Exclusion to Accommodation—Stories on the Road to Full Inclusion

The need for these recommendations is best revealed in stories of those who feel excluded from the church, marginalized not by their disabling conditions, but by community. In the interest of privacy, and in an effort to make their stories more universal, the names of individuals have been changed or removed.

- A young family celebrated the birth of their premature son, "Bill." As he grew, Bill was diagnosed with a variety of disabilities and remained medically fragile. Except for a sloping, gravel sidewalk to the educational wing, the church was inaccessible. The boy's mother's hopes for an accessible church were completely dashed when the church landscaped the lawn, removed the sidewalk, and replaced it with a garden and a flight of stairs. One day, the mother was struck by a startling reality: If her son died, the church could not welcome his friends, his wheeling buddies. In that moment, she knew the church could not meet the basic ministry need of a funeral for her son. She and her family began to look for another church home, but fortunately remained Presbyterian. They found a church that was not only physically accessible, but whose church family had open hearts as well. Bill was embraced as a full participant in all the ministry programs of the church, was mentored by a teenager, and even sang in the choir. Now able to attend Sunday school, he was no longer relegated to the nursery. At last he was able to be a typical nine-year old boy, nurtured in the love of Christ.

- "Karen" was admitted to and enrolled in a seminary, sometime in the 1980s. Her mobility was such that she couldn't access the classroom on the third floor, so a separate classroom was arranged, just for her. A closed-circuit television was placed in a room on the first floor, with hookup so she could see her classmates and professor upstairs; and a direct phone line was installed, so she could communicate. That was the best accommodation the seminary could provide. Her peers found a way to do better: After a few days, other students joined her in her first floor classroom—and thus were, despite the building, in community with her.

- "Elizabeth," an extremely expressive twenty-eight-year-old, full-of-life woman, was in a group of a dozen young adults with developmental disorders; members of the church had been meeting with them frequently for more than four years. With the exception of just a few, most of the group were primarily unchurched, but still had some sense of a spiritual belief or need. After a period of time, several of the young adults, including Elizabeth, expressed a desire to join in Sunday worship. On the day they all came to join in the service, communion was being celebrated. One of the older women in the group passed the bread to Elizabeth saying, "this is the body of Christ, broken for you." Elizabeth, breaking the quiet reverence of the moment, joyfully exclaimed, "For ME?!!!" Joyfully indeed.

- Two men with visual impairments, one of whom completely blind, regularly stood with rigid posture during the singing of most hymns. Mary could see them from the balcony. Soon she and the “special” bell choir director—special because it was a chime choir for adults with disabilities—included the two men. The women learned how to cue the two men through a third person, rather than directly cueing the other ringers, most of whom had developmental disorders. In a short time, the blind ringer was able to anticipate his part in the rehearsed music, and assist in keeping the rhythm intact. What a blessed outcome—to be able to participate fully in the music of the church. At a birthday party several days later, the blind man had said, “It was the most fun I’d ever had!” How sad when a bystander said, “Can you imagine how barren their lives are?”

- A mother asked the church to purchase a pediatric high-rise for the commode for her son, at a cost of $29.99. Meanwhile, the church was already involved with an extensive renovation project, at a cost of more than $185,000. But when the renovation was complete, nothing had been done to make the commode accessible for her son. The mother spoke up for her son; the church failed to listen.

B. Where the Church Has Been and Where It Needs to Go

Disabilities vary in terms of cause, effect, and proportion; and perspectives among individuals living with a disability are similarly diverse. Just as not all so-called “able-bodied” persons think alike, persons with disabilities do not speak with one voice. In order to explore the complexities of experience, gifts, needs, and insight, it is essential to engage voices of diverse individuals at every level of conversation: theological and practical, congregational and national.

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has defined persons with disabilities as follows:

Persons with disabilities are a diverse group of individuals who have a physical or mental impairment that substantially limits one or more major life activities, such as relating, caring for one’s self, performing manual tasks, walking, seeing, hearing, speaking, breathing, learning, and working. (Minutes, 1991, Part I, p. 630)

As stated in the prospectus for this policy:

The church cannot stand in judgment of persons with disabilities, regardless of the origins of their disabling conditions. The church, following the example of Jesus Christ, must recognize that all persons—those with and without disabilities—have spiritual gifts and natural abilities that contribute to the work and the glory of God. Moreover, the church is a sent community. We are sent forth from our communities of worship to help in the transformation of our whole world. We are called to work for a just society. Our ministry in the world is to help overcome injustices by bringing about change in the attitudes and structures of society that are barriers to full participation in our common life by all the people of God. (ACSWP, “Prospectus for a Task Force of the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy on ‘Harvesting Seeds of Justice: Ministering in Church and Society with Persons Who Have Disabilities,’” 2000, p. 2.)

Further,

God calls the church to do justice, and new policy and recommendations should address the need to help individual Christians and congregations work for justice through effective advocacy independently or with organizations or faith groups having related goals. (Ibid., p. 4)

The Apostle Paul’s declaration that the Church is the body of Christ is central to the way people with disabilities and people without disabilities may perceive, understand, and learn to live more fully, personally, and communally, in and as Christ’s community with one another. As members, “one of another,” Paul tells us that we are integrally related, members with one another in this mysterious, wondrous, yet very true and real body of Christ (see Rom. 12:5, 1 Cor. 12:14, and Eph. 4:11, NRSV). (Note: The issue of language and “disability” will be covered throughout this policy, using different and current ways of talking and writing about a disability. Because all disabilities are political, decided upon by the body politic—in this case, the United States—that has authority over the lives of all people, determining the naming, classification categories, and treatments, we understood the fluidity of all labels and categories. This document will use both “persons first” language, and in some cases “deaf persons,” “deaf people,” “blind people,” or “blind persons,” which are commonly used among people who are deaf or who are blind.)

Paul states that the social divisions of his day and age—the division between Jews and Greeks, slaves and masters, women and men—are not applicable in this body, in which “. . . we were all made to drink of one Spirit” (1 Cor. 12:13, NRSV). The ways that all societies have labeled, categorized, classified, described, and thus divided people—be it along ethnic and racial lines, economic class, or gender (male and female; see Gal. 3:28, NRSV)—are contrary to the Kingdom of God. God’s visionary hope for this body transcends our human-constructed divisions within the church and within the world. Our work for justice within the church is never limited to the church itself. As such, the church is called to confront the barriers that deny all people—people with disabilities as well as people without—full participation in life.

In describing the roles and functions within the body of Christ, Paul declares that God does not exclude anyone from any of the gifts, services, or activities within the life of the church. There is no mention that one had to have certain intellectual gifts, physical abilities, social adaptation abilities, or sensory systems (e.g., what the body does to accommodate itself in space) for any part, place, role, or function to be members of the body of Christ. All that matters is that the Spirit of God is present in our collective life together, having drawn us together by a Holy tether “so we, who are many, are one body in Christ, and individually we are members one of another” (Rom. 12:5, NRSV).

Finally, we are all called, regardless of our abilities or limitations, to grow and live into the body of Christ, with Christ as the head of the body of which we are members. No one is excused from this gladsome task of discipleship, being and becoming a disciple of Christ. We must all, individually and communally, “. . . grow up in every way into him who is the head, into Christ . . . [promoting] the body’s growth in building itself up in love” (Eph. 4:15–16, NRSV). As the body of Christ, it is our responsibility to remove all barriers and share the Gospel. In so doing, we reveal to the world a glimpse of God’s Kingdom, challenging all social systems and constructs that deny the full humanity of any person. Equally, the Gospel is a challenge to those of us with disabilities ourselves to grow in discipleship and service of others.

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) rightly understands, openly acknowledges, and publicly confesses that it is not yet fully inclusive with and of people with disabilities as the body of Christ. “Living Into the Body of Christ: Towards Full Inclusion of People living with Disabilities” challenges the church to be not more inclusive, but to be a fully inclusive body of believers, united in Christ, and a living witness to the entire world.

C. Theological and Historical Reflections: Being the Body of Christ

As disciples of Jesus Christ, we are committed to working towards full integration of our worship, education, fellowship, counseling, and all other activities. Further, we are called to fulfill the Great Ends of the Church that call Presbyterians to “the promotion of social righteousness; and the exhibition of the Kingdom of Heaven to the world” (Book of Order, G-1.0200). In order to do this important work of the Gospel where we worship, work, learn, and live, it is essential to be rooted in the biblical imperative for us to be a fully inclusive church. To that end, we are guided by the following theological truths.

1. Imago Dei: All Persons Created in the Image of God

We believe that all people—regardless of our abilities or limitations, or what any society labels as an ability or disability—are created in the image of the Creator God, created to be in relationship with God and one another.

In Genesis 1:1–2:4a (NRSV), (this is understood to be the Priestly or “P” account of the creation story) the story of creation, it is written that “. . . God created humankind in [God’s] image, in the image of God [God] created them; male and female [God] created them. . . . God saw everything that [God] had made, and indeed, it was very good” (Gen. 1:27, 31, NRSV).

To be created in the image of God means that humankind is created with the potential of relationships, of creative use of power, and of freedom of choice within limits, which are all necessary for humankind to do all God wants and desires us to do. God delights in the relationship of Creator and creation, Creator and creatures, wanting all people to live as fully as possible in a relationship that is based upon a free, loving, gracious commitment, and invitation [Brett Webb-Mitchell, Unexpected Guests at God’s Banquet: Welcoming People with Disabilities into the Church (New York: Crossroad Publishing Company, 1994), p. 53]. All people are created in the image of God is the basis for human equality.

2. The Old Testament: God Calls Israel to Be Inclusive of People with Disabilities

In the history of ancient Israel there are at least two different perspectives on treatment of people with disabilities. Overall, we have the scriptural heritage of our current knowledge of the complex lives of people with disabilities, lacking in scientific understanding, and sometimes prone to attribute disabilities to sin.

For example, there are holiness laws that were strict about what would be offered on the sacrificial altar in worship of God. An animal with a blemish of any kind might not be offered to God (Lev. 22:22, NRSV). Like animals, people with disabilities are also unable to present an offering to God in the Temple: “. . . No one of your offspring throughout their generations who has a blemish may approach to offer the food of his God. For no one who has a blemish shall draw near, one who is blind or lame, or one who has a mutilated face or a limb too long, or one who has a broken foot or a broken hand, or a hunchback, or a dwarf, or a man with a blemish in his eyes or an itching disease or scabs or crushed testicles” (Lev. 21:17–20, NRSV). While such passages as this from Leviticus describe a social order based on degrees of separation and purity many in the church today would find normal daily living skills highly restricted by such cultic laws.

Yet there are passages that call the people of Israel to be kind and care for people with disabilities. For example, among the pilgrims who were moving for forty years in the wilderness, we read that “Cursed be anyone who misleads a person who is blind on the road. All the people shall say, ‘Amen.’” (Deut. 27:18, NRSV), or the passage from Leviticus: “You shall not revile the deaf or put a stumbling block before the blind; you shall fear your God: I am the Lord” (Lev. 19:14, NRSV) (Ibid., pp. 53–55).

Furthermore, in Isaiah God says,

... I will bring your offspring from the east, and from the west I will gather you; I will say to the north, “Give them up,” and to the south, “Do not withhold; ... everyone who is called by my name, whom I created for my glory, whom I formed and made.” Bring forth the people who are blind, yet have eyes, who are deaf, yet have ears! Let all the nations gather together, and let the peoples assemble. ... You are my witnesses, says the Lord, and my servant whom I have chosen, so that you may know and believe me and understand that I am he. (Is. 43:5–6a, 7–10, NRSV).

The Old Testament witness in these passages is clear: the people who are considered disabled are to be included among the throng of followers who are under the covenant of God’s love, promise, and hope. Note that various leaders of the people of Israel throughout the Old Testament have lived with a disability: Jacob with his physical limitations; Moses with his language problem; Naaman with leprosy; Mephibosheth with his physical disability, et al. In choosing these most-unlikely people to be leaders of the Israelites, our attention is on the ways that God uses those the rest of us would not necessarily choose to be vessels of God’s message of love for all creation. God is the premier advocate and defender of the place and presence of people with disabilities among the chosen people of Israel, reaching out to those who seek justice from any prejudice against them (Ibid., p. 56).

3. Being the Body of Christ with One Another

While the Old Testament provides laws, commandments, blessings, and words encouraging the people of Israel to take care of people with disabilities among them, these words come alive, gain flesh, muscle, and bone, in the living Good News, Jesus Christ, especially among people whom the world calls disabled. Indeed, it is through Jesus’ explicit ministry with people with disabilities that justice becomes a reality.

According to all Gospel accounts, Jesus continually kept company and surrounded himself with the outcasts of Jewish society, including people with disabilities. The Gospels are full of parables and situations where Jesus is living among those whom, even today, we would categorize as persons with disability. For example, in stories of humility and hospitality, Jesus tells the story of a wedding banquet, in which the host is to be sure not to invite just one’s friends or kin, especially the rich neighbor, “... in case they may invite you in return, and you would be repaid. But when you give a banquet, invite the poor, [people with disabilities, especially people with physical disabilities], and blind [persons]” (Luke 14:13, NRSV). [Please note that the text in the NRSV reads “those who are crippled, the lame, and the blind” (Luke 14:13).] The image of the wedding banquet upends the community’s expectation, offering a glimpse of the heavenly table where those who were once at the margins are fully included and enjoy places of great esteem.

Jesus constantly surrounded himself with and moved among people with either obvious or hidden disabilities as evidenced in the following stories: the man with leprosy (Mark 1:40–45, NRSV), the woman hemorrhaging (Mark 5:34, NRSV), two men who are blind (Matt. 9:27–32, NRSV), the calling of Zacchaeus (Luke 19:1–10, NRSV), sitting with people who are blind (John 9, NRSV), or the healing of the “one who was mute” (Matt. 9:32–34, NRSV). Jesus practiced a ministry of being with others, not a ministry of always doing to or for others, even in his healings.

Alongside these narratives, Jesus himself challenges what some have called “victim theology,” in which the “person with a disability is blamed for their lack of faith, which accounts for their disabilities not being healed; accuse the person of possessing demons, which must be exorcized; say that through the sufferings of persons with disability God shows forth God’s glory and power; or blame disability on either the sins of parents or of a [person with a disability]” (Arne Frison and Samuel Kabue, Interpreting Disability: A Church for All and for All [Geneva, Switzerland: World Council of Churches, 2004], pp. 21–22). In such a theological move, the “burden for healing is on the person with a disability, causing further suffering and continued alienation from faith communities” (John 9:2, NRSV), (Ibid., p. 22).

We understand that, for each person with any kind of disability, the relationship between healing and a person’s limitation is “both ambivalent and ambiguous.” The biblical witness regarding healing is tentative, relative, ambivalent, ambiguous, and ongoing. Healing can bring joy and relief. “It can also bring pain, frustration, and serious theological questions” (Ibid.).

Yet within the scope of salvation history, it is important to remember that God in Christ is the self-revelation of God throughout all eternity. The God who is love became the living embodiment of that love in becoming human, in the person of Jesus Christ. In his healing of others, Jesus directs our attention to the liberating, reconciling, empowering love of God. We focus on a portion of a person’s life, like a disabling condition, while Jesus brings wholeness to the individual, serving as a unique sign of God’s salvation in that healing moment, and always in the context of relationship: God the Creator with humankind, God’s creation. [Note: What is interesting about these healing narratives is that we do not read what Jesus cleansed or healed anyone so thoroughly that they never got sick again or did not die from some other cause. It was just in that moment, at that time, in certain circumstances, that God in Christ chooses to reveal the healing nature of God's unequivocal love.]

Theologian Dorothee Soelle writes about the extraordinary ability that Jesus models for us in being able to identify with people who are sick or have disabilities, being there for the sufferer's sake, because Jesus also suffered. God in Christ heals us all of our brokenness and limitations by taking on our wounds, tears, and aches of humanity. Jesus thus fulfills the Old Testament Scriptures, taking on our infirmities and bearing our diseases (Isa. 53:4, Matt. 8:17, NRSV). Jesus willingly takes upon himself the burdens of humanity, transforming the dross of life by the hope of a new creation and a new world, imbuing in each person dignity, worth, self-respect, and love.

In his ministry of being with others, Christ took upon himself the wounds and sorrows of the human race. God in Christ is present in the person who is ill, has a disability, or lives with chronic pain. In the act of caring with and for one another, we know, in a deep and significant way, the living God, who is our hope and future.

We stress that the love of God, and the God who is love, are known through such acts of humility, generosity, and care; it is in relationships with others that we also know God in deep and significant ways. It is important to point out that Scripture does not say that the one with a disability cannot be the caregiver, or that the person who is considered "sick" is not able to reciprocate.

Throughout the Gospels, God shapes a people to live in community, as the Church, in full inclusion of people with disabilities. Through the ministry of Jesus, we witness a new day, a new approach towards and with people living with disabilities. We are to be a people who live with each other's strengths and weaknesses, abilities and limitations, living in solidarity with one another. We come to understand that the "weakest" brother or sister is sometimes the strongest. As the hymn goes, "Bind us together Lord, with cords that cannot be broken... Bind us together in love. There is only one God, there is only one King; there is only one body, that is why we sing." (Bob Gillman, "Bind Us Together," Sing the Faith (Louisville, KY: Geneva Press, 2003), Hymn 2226.)

4. The Great Banquet Feast: On Earth as It Is in Heaven

Along with Jesus' ministry of presence with people with disabilities, Jesus offered a "sneak peek" into the ways of God's reign, with various parables. One of the most significant parables of God's realm, displaying full inclusion of people with disabilities among God's people, is the parable of the Great Banquet Feast (Luke 14: 15–24, Matt. 22:1–14, NRSV). The importance of such parables such as the "Kingdom of God parable" is that we are reminded, as we pray the Lord's Prayer, that we should be living on earth as it is in heaven (Matt. 6:10, NRSV). [Scholars understand that the Kingdom of God may also be understood to be "Dominion of God," "God's realm," or "the reign of God."]

This parable turns on its head the way in which we perceive persons with disabilities. It describes in detail and points out to all followers of Christ that in the Realm of God, those whom society sees as the outcasts—the "disabled ones"—are truly the wisest who kindly and graciously accept the invitation to be part of God's realm (Webb-Mitchell, op.cit., p. 91).

This powerful parable may truly influence our ecclesiological imagination, encouraging us to find ways to welcome people with disabilities in light of the Host's invitation that unlabeled the disabled. Because we live in communities sustained by the stories we find within Holy Scripture, and because the Scriptures are anew in the presence of people living with disabilities, we all discover anew what is revealed in these Scriptures. Being part of God's kingdom on earth, determines how we are to live with one another on earth: as welcomed "banquet guests" of God's Realm. This is our call and our witness to the world.

5. The Body of Christ: Many Members, One Body

Theologian Dietrich Bonhoeffer believed that the visible church is the body of Christ today:

The body of Christ can only be a visible body, or else it is not a body at all. This is a result of the incarnation: God in Christ came into his own as a baby in Bethlehem. Christ's body is both the ground of our faith and continual assurance of that faith as we are caught up into eternity by the act of God as members of the body of Christ. [Dietrich Bonhoeffer, Cost of Discipleship, (New York: Macmillan Press, 1975), pp. 263, 277.]

Being members, one of another, given the parable of the Banquet, we are given a basis for common action so that our Christian community of life more closely reflects our shared vision of God's Realm (Webb-Mitchell, op. cit., pp. 91–92). In Paul's letter to the Romans, even though we are children of Adam (collectively), because of the life, death, and resurrection of Jesus Christ, we read that "... our old self was crucified with him so that the body of sin might be destroyed, and we might no longer be enslaved to sin. For whoever has died is freed from sin. But if we have died with Christ, we believe that we will also live with him" (Rom. 6:6–8, NRSV). All have died with Christ and now find ourselves in Christ. "While the image of God in Adam (the old humanity) was marred ... we are [now] in God's image because we are in Christ" (Thomas Aquinas, Summa Theologiae [Westminster, MD: Christian Classics, 1991], p. 454).

In Interpreting Disability: A Church of All and for All, we read that if Christ is the true image of God, then being in Christ is being in the body of Christ, in which we become part of the true image of God. This is essentially a corporate image; a body is made up of many members, all of whom bring different contributions to the whole (1 Cor. 12, NRSV, Rom. 12, NRSV) (Fritzon and Kabue, op. cit., p. 17).

Given that we are members of the body of Christ, what does it mean to be fully inclusive of people with disabilities in the modern world?

a. Being the Body of Christ

In Paul's references to the body of Christ—whether it is his letter to the Romans, Corinthians, Colossians, or reportedly the Ephesians—there are no remarks regarding who can or cannot be part of this body. People are not relegated to any one body "part" because of a person's ability or visible limitation. The Holy Spirit alone chooses which role or function, gift or service, each person contributes within this united body.

This body has no division or hierarchy based upon one's gender, economic class, or ethnic or national heritage (Gal. 3:28, NRSV). These divisions existed in the time that Paul was writing to the Corinthian Church. We could quickly add contemporary divisions which have kept people apart (Ibid., p. 25). Our unity, our common ground, is our being baptized into the one body, where "... we are all made to drink of one Spirit" (1 Cor. 12:13, NRSV).

b. Sharing Roles, Gifts, Services, and Talents in the Body of Christ

It should be no surprise that the person living with a disability brings to the body of Christ his or her God-given gifts. In a congregation where one is shown acceptance and love, in loving relationship with one's family, friends, and members of Christ's body, each person's potential gift, talent, or service may be realized, and in doing so, God will be glorified.

Moreover, against our culture's inflated individualism of this day and age we are confronted by the Spirit of God who calls us into community. We are to share our gifts, talents, and services with one another, as Christ shared his life, his love, with us. The sense of one being the "lone pioneer" and buying into the need to be self-sufficient, the "pull yourself up by your own bootstraps" model of living, is not present in this model of ministry or living together in the body of Christ.

Rather, the life we live is one in which we refer and defer to the gifts, talents, and services of the body of Christ. It is a life of dependence upon God and interdependence with one another. The church is called to embrace the gifts, talents, and services of all people and to free individuals and communities to live as agents of God's justice in the world.

c. Being the Body of Christ with People with Disabilities: In Unity and Solidarity

This is our future: in the body of Christ, with the elimination of all barriers, boundaries, divisions, categories, and classifications, there is no longer "us" versus "them" in the body of Christ. The goal of this policy is to eliminate classifications and embrace our true unity in Christ. Further, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is called to confront systems and structures throughout society that perpetuate all such forms of injustice.

For example, as the surrounding society created special schools for persons with disabilities, or segregated classrooms in public schools for people with disabilities, so too did the church: we created special classrooms for people with disabilities, and special churches and chapels on state institution grounds. To this day, there are still special worship services for people with developmental disorders throughout the country, held at different times and places than Sunday morning worship. Likewise, there are still segregated Sunday school classes with special curricular that mirror the material written and the approach taken in 1950s and 1960s America.

In the 1970s, many school districts dealt with special education through a "mainstreaming" approach. Mainstreaming involved the following practice: placing a child with a disability into a public classroom with his or her peers throughout most of the day, making no special adaptations per se in the classroom itself, and offering remedial courses in another corner of the classroom or a special education classroom in another part of the building. Again, the church in many ways followed this approach, merely placing a person with a disability in Sunday worship, Sunday school, adult Bible studies, and youth groups, with no adaptations on behalf of the person with a disability or the congregation per se. This approach still did not erase the "us" versus "them" mentality. It is worth noting that not all parents of children with special needs are in favor of mainstreaming. Some feel their children receive more focused attention when schooled separately, while others prefer to have their children fully integrated into the larger classroom; it is important to recognize this difference and wherever possible offer both options.

From the late 1980s until today, “inclusion” is the central strategy of special educators and social activists in the “disability community.” [Note: We use this term with quotations because we recognize there is not a homogeneous community of “the disabled,” but a collective or network of many groups of people with disabling conditions, who do not necessarily agree with one another about many issues regarding the place, presence, treatment, education, health care, or language about and of people with disabilities.] Inclusion involved rearranging not only the classroom’s physical layout, but the entire curriculum and class of students as well. A classroom that is inclusive will function as a community, a model of the larger society. The goal is to see that people with disabilities and those without disabilities will relate to one another not as “us” versus “them,” but as “we,” as a community of learners that recognizes the contributions, gifts, and abilities of every member.

Among many advocates on behalf of people with disabilities, including people with disabilities, the motto in regards to civil rights is “nothing about us without us,” arguing that the very person with a disability is to be included in all discussions regarding the overall life of persons with a disability. We are proposing that we go further: bringing the future into today, by proposing that there be no more “us” and “them,” but that we live in the “we-ness” of the body of Christ. That is the solidarity, the unity that we aim for in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). Indeed, it is the solidarity we seek throughout the world.

d. Striving for “A More Excellent Way”

So how do we become a fully inclusive body of Christ? We do so by striving for “the greater gift...the more excellent way” (1 Cor. 12:31, NRSV), e.g., agape love. Agape love is an act of the will. As Frederick Buechner reminds us, “When Jesus tells us to love our neighbors, he is not telling us to love them in the sense of responding to them with a cozy emotional feeling. ... On the contrary, he is telling us to love our neighbors in the sense of being willing to work for their well-being even if it means sacrificing our own well-being to that end, even if it means sometimes just leaving them alone” (Frederick Buechner, Wishful Thinking [New York: Harper Row, 1973], p. 54).

The need to be in community with people with disabilities, who have often times been excluded from the church, must be addressed, confessed, righted, and affirmed by congregations in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). In so doing, we gain credibility and deepen our integrity in our prophetic witness to the larger world. Paul himself knew of his own “strengths and weaknesses,” acknowledged his own “thorn in the flesh,” and thanked God for the conversion and call experience that temporarily disabled him.

e. The Body of Christ: Growth for All

In Ephesians 4:15–16 (NRSV), the writer states that “... we must grow up in every way into him who is the head, into Christ ... [promoting] the body’s growth in building itself up in love.” Growth is an integral part of being the body of Christ, of which all the members are to partake. No one is excused from the growth of the awareness of the Spirit’s indwelling within this body, and how that awareness enables the body itself to grow more deeply, expanding into the horizon of God’s love.

The title of this policy, “Living into the Body of Christ,” was written with the emphasis of the dynamic, innate sense of growth and aliveness that being a member of the body of Christ is all about. We honor and expect that we are all on the road, on a pilgrimage, of being and becoming members, one of another, in the body of Christ, itself growing and building up in the love of God. This love is made palpable in the relationships we have with one another.

Growing in the body of Christ lifts up the question: how do we teach and learn? In the past two hundred years, growing in faith has often been equated with the acquisition of knowledge or information. Such practices as rote memorization of Bible verses, the recitation of creeds and confessions, and theological learning in a structured classroom setting with rows of students listening to a lecturer, while appropriate for some, are not achievable for others. Because of this academic focus (a blessing and curse for some Presbyterians), many times people with emotional disorders, behavioral disorders, learning disabilities, developmental disorders (such as autism and mental retardation), sensory and hearing impairments, and speech and language problems, have been excluded from Christian education, exiled in nursery classrooms or in other activities that fail to stimulate or nurture their spiritual lives.

The education, nurture, and growth of Christians are more than individual acquisitions of facts or information. For example, in recent years the focus of much education in the life of the church for people of all ages has been Christian practices. This renewed focus on Christian practices not only embraces the communal or congregational aspects of education but may also be a way forward for a Christian formation that fully includes people with all kinds of abilities and limitations.

6. Reconciliation in the Body of Christ: The Confession of 1967 [The Confession of 1967—Inclusive Language Text, (Louisville, Ky.: Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), Office of Theology and Worship, 2002), 9.01–.56]

Even though we read that the body of Christ consists of many members (1 Cor. 12:14, NRSV), in which all members should honor and respect one another, there are some members with disabilities who have been dishonored, considered dispensable, and treated with disrespect and open disregard within the church. Such experiences have led to dissension, protest, anger, frustration, sadness, unbelief, hurt, indignation, and a sense of haunting despair among many people with disabilities, their friends, family, and advocates, towards the church.

This is not the first time that the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) (and its predecessors) found such tension and dissension between people with disabilities and those who are able-bodied. During the 1960s, during the height of racial tension in the United States, the United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America (UPCUSA) created and affirmed The Confession of 1967. In Part II, “The Ministry of Reconciliation,” Section A. The Mission of the Church, 4.”Reconciliation in Society,” the following is written:

In each time and place there are particular problems and crises through which God calls the church to act. The church, guided by the Spirit, humbled by its own complicity and instructed by all attainable knowledge, seeks to discern the will of God and learn how to obey in these concrete situations. The following are particularly urgent at the present time.

a. God has created the peoples of the earth to be one universal family. In his reconciling love God overcomes the barriers between sisters and brothers and breaks down every form of discrimination based on racial or ethnic difference, real or imaginary. The church is called to bring all people to receive and uphold one another as persons in all relationships of life: in employment, housing, education, leisure, marriage, family, church, and the exercise of political rights. (Ibid., 9.44 a.)

As Presbyterians, we believe that along with overcoming the barriers between sisters and brothers based upon racial or ethnic differences, “real or imaginary,” that there has been a barrier separating people who are considered by the world to be disabled and those who are not disabled. This wall was torn down by Jesus Christ. “For he is our peace; in his flesh he has made both groups into one and has broken down the dividing wall, that is, the hostility between us” (Eph. 2:14, NRSV). As the body of Christ, the Church is called to tear down the dividing walls that exist in society as well.

The Confession of 1967 continues:

b. The reconciliation of humankind through Jesus Christ makes it plain that enslaving poverty in a world of abundance is an intolerable violation of God’s good creation. Because Jesus identified himself with the needy and exploited, the cause of the world’s poor is the cause of his disciples...A church that is indifferent to poverty, or evades responsibility in economic affairs, or is open to one social class only, or expects gratitude for its beneficence makes a mockery of reconciliation and offers no acceptable worship to God. (Ibid., 9.46 c.)

This paragraph is instructive in that it echoes the passages from Scripture already highlighted in this policy: “Because Jesus identified himself with the needy and exploited, the cause of the world’s poor is the cause of his disciples” (Ibid.). For us to remain indifferent to those who are needy, in this case those with disabilities who have been marginalized and disenfranchised from various parts of society, is to make a “mockery of reconciliation and offers no acceptable worship of God” (Ibid.). If the chief end, chief purpose of our creation, is to glorify God, (The Shorter Catechism, The Book of Confessions [Louisville, KY: Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), 2004], 7.001), then we must, as Christians shaped by the theological heritage of the Reformed tradition, work towards justice, committing to and working with people with disabilities in every part of the life of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), in every part of society, and indeed, in every part of the world.

We are thus called to be advocates in the wider society, working with others with disabilities, their family, friends, associates, and advocates, for the full-inclusion of people in all parts of social life. In doing so, the church looks “beyond all partial achievement ... to the final triumph of God”—full participation in life abundant.

D. Historical Context

1. A Brief History of People with Disabilities in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)

A sense of widespread injustice emerged in the 1960s within society. Driven largely by parents of children with disabilities, advocates drew attention to major needs: for special educational programs; targeted health care programs; and increased economic opportunities, including for adult-children. Institutions with people with certain disabling conditions were experimenting with “group homes,” and supervised living arrangements, and more people with disabilities were finding their voices and demanding justice. The “Special Olympics” and “Paralympics” were being organized for the first time. Along with the civil rights movements of African Americans and women’s groups in the 1960s, other designated “minority groups” were gaining political muscle and presence, be it in the surrounding society or in the church.

In 1970 and 1973 the General Assemblies of the United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America (UPCUSA) made two brief references regarding the needs and concerns “for the mentally retarded.” In those days, there was not much in the way of any organization that met or addressed the needs of persons with disabilities in the denomination. The same was true in the Presbyterian Church in the United States (PCUS). Furthermore, no curriculum by any of the major denominational publishing houses addressed the Christian educational, pastoral care, fellowship, or worship needs of persons with disabilities. Accessibility issues were largely unaddressed in a uniform manner by all denominations. The place and presence of people with disabilities in our culture and society, however, started to shift, and, in due time, changed drastically in the latter part of the 1970s. As a result, in 1977 the 189th General Assembly of the UPCUSA adopted (as revised) Overture 16. On Responding to the Concerns of the Handicapped ["That All May Enter" (TAME)]. This report was meant to be "a resource for congregations looking for ways to address the issue of disabled persons in our community" (From That All May Enter document's inside cover page [Louisville, Ky.: Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), 1989]). [This report was adopted by the 189th General Assembly (1977), United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America (Minutes, UPCUSA, 1977, Part I, pp. 99–102).]

When this document was written, approved, and published, very few churches of any denomination had published a policy paper on disability. The document itself was, in part, a response to the meeting of the World Council of Churches (Nairobi, Kenya, 1975), which adopted the first general statement of purpose related to the "role of the church and the ³³handicapped" (Ibid., p. 15). Harold Wilke's Creating the Caring Congregations (Nashville, Tenn.: Abingdon Press, 1980) remains a milestone in the literature on persons with disabilities in the Church. The Reverend Harold Wilke of the United Church of Christ (UCC) created the Healing Community Project in 1973 as a national interfaith and interdenominational ministry to the religious community. Its purpose was to create new models of ministry "with the disabled, as well as with others in our society who are alienated from the mainstream of life for whatever the reasons" (Ibid., p. 15). With "That All May Enter," the UPCUSA shared leadership in thinking theologically and acting prophetically to welcome people living with disabilities into congregational life, and in advocating for greater justice for people with disabilities in the larger society. Throughout the years since then, many other Protestant denominations, including the United Church of Christ, the United Methodist Church, the Episcopal Church (USA), the Evangelical Lutheran Church of America (ELCA) (and its predecessors), plus the Roman Catholic and Orthodox churches have used this document in crafting their own policies.

Since the adoption of "That All May Enter" in 1977, many congregations have responded to its challenge to ensure that all may physically enter into the life of a Presbyterian congregation. And the church as a whole was continually challenged to advocate for the full civil rights of persons with disabilities in the surrounding society.

Since Presbyterian reunion in 1983, General Assemblies of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) have adopted a new confession, a new catechism, and a number of policies and resolutions that influenced the lives of people living with disabilities in the church. Issues from domestic violence to restorative justice have been examined theologically, analyzed through social policies, and become more visible in the whole church's social witness. Indeed, many of these policies, from peacemaking to environmental issues, abortion to persons living with HIV/AIDS, are issues that also concern people with disabilities in the church and in the world.

While people with disabilities have been recognized within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and have had the case made for their being welcomed into the lives of congregations, there has been a more significant proactive movement by and with persons with disabilities in the United States. With the passage of various federal, state, and county laws in the United States, as well as new funding, medical and educational research, and the civil rights movement among persons with disabilities, people living with disabilities no longer are fighting simply for more than physical access. People with disabilities demand nothing less than to be fully included into the lives of their neighborhoods, communities, health care centers, workplaces, schools, stores, restaurants, places of governmental services, and religious institutions.

For example, building on Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, prohibiting discrimination against people with disabilities in all federally funded services including transportation, the "Education for All Handicapped Children Act" was passed in 1978. This federal law provided moneys to establish free and appropriate education for all children. And in 1990, the "Americans with Disabilities Act" (ADA), heralded by many as the "civil rights bill" for people with disabilities, became law. We encourage churches, though they are exempt from many of the provisions of the ADA, to seek to satisfy the requirements of the law in providing accessible facilities and reasonable accommodations to all persons living with disabilities.

Along with various federally mandated public laws and pending bills that address the housing, employment, health, retirement, and educational rights of persons with disabilities, there has also been a social movement among many people with disabilities and their families, friends, and advocates towards securing equal justice and equal rights for all people. The politics of disability rights has taken form in various social movements: the self-advocacy movement, e.g., "People First" (See Appendix C, "People First Language"); the self-determination movement; the planned or ad-hoc deinstitutionalization program of large state-run institutions; the euthanasia or "right to die," "right to live," and "Not Dead Yet" debates; concern about domestic abuse of people with disabilities; the abortion debate; and the rights of those people who have been affected by the persistent spread of HIV/AIDS. All of these issues and social movements raised concerns among people with disabilities and allies who are rightfully demanding nothing less than full-inclusion in all areas of society, including religious institutions of all faiths.

The emergence of computer technology since 1977 has given many (but not all) people a new means of communicating with one another. Most important, advanced computer technology has been a breakthrough innovation for many people with disabilities, who were once silent and silenced because of their inability to express themselves, letting their voices and opinions be heard and known.

In the fields of medicine and various therapies, there have been great advances. Issues about “quality of life” have become more prominent in all health care discussions. Amid new therapies, inventions of new drugs, the rise of Eastern medicines and therapies, and the possibility of living longer, there are not only more people living with disabilities, but there are therapeutic regimens that may enable people to live longer, fuller lives, regardless of ability. New prosthetics and redesigned wheel chairs, often with sophisticated electronics, are giving people new freedoms in the areas of mobility and movement.

Deinstitutionalization has also had a large effect upon the life of communities. Whereas many children and adults with disabilities were once placed in private or state-run institutions, deinstitutionalization has become a widespread movement in many states. [People like Wolf Wolfensberger and others have written extensively on this movement, whose roots are in the Scandinavian countries. Burton Blatt’s Christmas in Purgatory: A Photographic Essay on Mental Retardation (Syracuse, N.Y.: Human Policy Press, 1974) depicts the demeaning living situations in such state-run facilities. Providing homes for persons with disabilities remains a basic and critical need in this country, although much progress has been made in supporting individuals in living in the community, rather than in institutions. The proportion of individuals with developmental disorders living in homes for one to six persons has increased to 65 percent; settings for seven to fifteen persons comprise 12 percent, and 23 percent live in institutional settings of more than sixteen persons. There is wide variation by state in the use of institutional settings, which severely limits choices for many individuals. In Mississippi, for example, 49 percent of the persons with developmental disorders receiving residential settings live in large institutions. Residential services across the country are funded almost entirely with Medicaid funds, allowing states to leverage matching state and local funds effectively. If Medicaid funding continues to be threatened on the state and federal levels, however, the effects on these supports for persons with disabilities would be devastating.] Deinstitutionalization promoted the presence of persons with disabilities in our neighborhoods and communities, closing down enormous warehouse-like institutional facilities. New group homes sprung up in urban and suburban neighborhoods, often facing fights from their neighbors without disabilities who feared that the presence of people with disabilities would bring down house values. New group homes still face resistance and zoning challenges in various neighborhoods, but not as often as years ago. Some communities welcome people with disabilities with open houses and welcome mats rolled out for one and all. Yet many churches around these group homes have not welcomed people with disabilities. In response to this neglect and, in some cases actual inhospitable acts, some people with disabilities have remained unaffiliated with any local church.

Marriage among people with disabilities, including people living with mental retardation, is no longer seen as unusual. Couples are moving into neighborhoods and into supervised independent living apartments, houses, and townhouses. With improvements in availability and accessibility, people with disabilities have access to a variety of options: jobs and housing, places of worship, theaters, restaurants, parks, self-advocacy, and political gatherings. Most important, by moving into neighborhoods, people with disabilities are moving next door to our churches and parishioners. Yet mass transportation on Sunday mornings is often a major problem for people with disabilities who live on their own, where public transportation schedules may be restrictive or where such transportation may not exist at all.

Architecturally, there are more buildings, including churches, mosques, and synagogues, which are adapted or designed with the hope that people with disabilities will be part of the worshipping community. There have been advances not only in architectural design and technology, but also in attitudes or transformed perceptions of people’s worth and the importance of diversity, such that many are more welcoming of people living with disabilities who once faced many barriers. There is increased attention in the field of architecture generally towards so-called universal design, which improves access for all people, e.g., curb cuts, ramps, and electric doors are beneficial to mothers with strollers, workers with heavy equipment, etc.

Some deaf people regard themselves as members of a cultural and language minority, more similar to an ethnic minority, rather than individuals with a disability. Some deaf see their deafness, language, and their culture as a gift from God. In Washington, D.C., there is a statue of President Franklin D. Roosevelt, who had polio, now portrayed as seated in his wheelchair. There have been innovative theater productions of Broadway musicals, along with countless television series, that focus on the place and presence of people with disabilities in this world. Very Special Arts, Art “Brut,” and art by people with disabilities have been seized upon by the art world, with new exhibitions drawing art critics’ praises. [Gerry Hendershop, a consultant on disability statistics and Senior Research Advisor to the National Organization on Disabilities, does an excellent job in pulling together art exhibits with artwork by people with disabilities.]

Colleges and universities created special education majors in departments and schools of education where none existed in the 1950s. Alongside special education and remedial education programs in private and public education, there has been a rise in the number of occupational, physical, speech, music, art, dance, and drama therapies in the United States. Ongoing research on families with children with disabilities has mushroomed, and there are more parent-to-parent gatherings and parent support groups. Meanwhile, educational programming happens earlier and earlier in the life of a child with a disability, with early intervention programs and other identifying programs, often as soon as the baby with a disabling condition is born.

There has been an explosion of new diagnoses and re-drawn definitions of what constitutes a disability. In the 1950s, less than one hundred disabilities or diagnostic-labels were designated in the Diagnostic and Statistical Manual: Mental Disorder (DSM) (Diagnostic and Statistical Manual: Mental Disorders, First Edition [DSM]. Washington, D.C.: American Psychiatric Association, Mental Hospital Service, 1952). Today, the fourth revision of the DSM includes over three hundred diagnostic-labels (Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders, Fourth Edition, Text Revision [DSM-IV-TR®]. Washington, D.C.: American Psychiatric Association, 2000). An even more expansive list of disabling conditions may be found in: The International Classification of Diseases, Ninth Revision, Clinical Modification (ICD-9-CM). Hyattsville, MD: National Center for Health Statistics, 2005. The labels themselves have changed: in the 1960s someone with a low I.Q. was mentally retarded, with various subgroups under that; today the label is “developmentally delayed,” with mental retardation and autism as subgroups. Furthermore, countries differently label and name the same condition (e.g., what is “mental retardation” in the United States is a “learning disability or difficulty” in England).

2. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Today: We've Come a Long Way, But Still Have Far to Go

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has not responded consistently to the rapidly developing opportunities and issues facing people living with disabilities in the current context. Many of the national meetings of the various groups of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) are difficult for people with disabilities to attend, let alone participate or be major presenters. Many of our retreat centers and presbytery-owned campgrounds are physically inaccessible to people with disabilities. Our curricula in our Sunday schools, seminaries, and colleges are often not inclusive.

However, there are signs of hope emerging in the denomination. For example, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)'s Social Welfare Organizations office of the National Ministries Division (NMD) contracts with disability consultants who advise the whole church in areas regarding mobility, hearing, visual, and developmental disabilities. The Presbyterians for Disability Concerns (PDC), a network of the Presbyterian Health, Education and Welfare Association (PHEWA), reaches out to include people living with disabilities in leadership roles in church and society. The PDC produces newsletters, an annual Access Sunday Packet, and other disability resources.

Some Presbyterian churches are architecturally accessible to people with primarily physical disabilities, with more ramps and elevators in existing structures, along with spaces for wheelchairs among the rows of church pews. Some are welcoming to people with visual impairments with large print materials and to the blind with signs in Braille. Some are accessible to people with hearing impairments or who are deaf with sign-language interpreters available at worship. And some congregations have programs that are inclusive of people with developmental, emotional, and behavioral disorders in worship, fellowship events, youth groups, and Sunday school. But the numbers of our churches that have met these needs is still radically in need of expansion. We need to embrace accessibility as an arm of evangelism, in order to reach out and embrace those who are still being excluded by existing barriers.

Some of our national retreat centers have ramps for people using wheelchairs, smoother walkways, more accessible rooms, bathrooms, and other amenities, with accessibility studies having been completed at some of these centers. Similarly, the theological institutions related to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) are making efforts to become more accessible for people with disabilities, especially people with physical or sensory impairments, and for some students with learning disabilities. And some colleges related to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) are increasingly accessible to people with particular disabilities. But again, more needs to be done.

E. Stories of Growing Hope and Continuing Despair

Having covered the general history of the church and society in which persons with disabilities have a growing presence and place, it is important to understand what it means to live life with a disability in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). For example, 14 to 20 percent of the memberships of our churches are people who self-identify as persons with disabilities, and the number of people with disabilities in the country at large is rising.

But these statistics fail to show the ups and downs of the lives of people with disabilities, along with their families and friends, advocates, and health service professionals. Since 1977, when the denomination approved the statement “That All

May Enter,” we have been a denomination enriched and shaped by stories like the following. May these stories of hope and despair give rise to action.

- “Tommy,” a young person with autistic behaviors, was welcomed into the church’s confirmation class by the young associate pastor of the church where he attended, leading to Tommy’s confirmation into the fuller life of the church. But this was prompted by his mother’s advocacy to include Tommy in Sunday school and worship.
- “Julie” belonged to a church that was unable to meet the special needs of her deaf eight-year-old triplets, who felt unwelcomed and left out of Sunday school. But Julie is among the more fortunate parents, privileged to be in a church with a member who has a background in education of the deaf, and is willing to teach the triplets. As a result, not only are the children participating in Sunday School and worship, but the entire family feels embraced by the church community (Evan H. Silverstein, “Hearing the Deaf,” Presbyterians Today, vol. 91, no. 5 [June 2001], p.19).
- A church fellowship hall in any-town America had been built on a split level. As a result, the members with mobility disabilities could not join with their brothers and sisters in fellowship. Recognizing not only the physical barrier, but the emotional separation, the church decided to lower the floor, making one level floor throughout the building. Now the congregation is one people, worshipping side-by-side in body and heart.
- Meanwhile, the Presbyterian Washington Office (PWO) tracks federal legislation that is supportive of the self-determination and self-advocacy movements that are central towards the full-inclusion of persons with disabilities in the wider society. This includes monitoring Medicaid funding that provides health service for more than fifty million individuals, including low-income Americans and people with disabilities; monitoring federal legislation that affects housing and employment opportunities for people with disabilities; and monitoring any changes in the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA). And yet, sadly, people with disabilities have been the victims of harassment and hate crimes since the passage of the ADA in 1990. We need to expand our support of people with disabilities by preparing for incidences of backlash.
- “Fran” contracted polio when she was a teenager. She routinely discovers sanctuaries where she is unable to move her wheelchair to a place where she does not stick out because there is no distributed wheelchair seating in most churches.
- Another young person with multiple disabilities, “Molly” shares her frustration over how hard it is for Christians to practice what Christ preached. She felt like the token disabled young person in youth groups where she attended meetings, but was ignored by other young people. She no longer attends the church youth groups.
- A pastor whose daughter lives with Down’s syndrome told of how appalled she was at a Presbyterian camp where she heard a young person say, “God, sometimes you’re so stupid! You act like you have Down’s syndrome or something.”

Conclusion: The Body of Christ Moves Forward

The parable of the Great Banquet Feast concludes, “... Go out into the roads and lanes and compel people to come in, so that my house may be filled” (Luke 14:23, NRSV). The master of the house—God—sends the servant—Christ—to go out and bring more to the household, which was not completely full. To this very day, there is still plenty of room, and we are sent out by Christ into this world to compel people to come in.

All people are invited to come and be part of this Banquet Feast, God’s Realm. Our task, as the body of Christ, is a moral and ethical act, a gracious gesture, of Christian community: to be the welcoming and fully inclusive body of Christ. In so doing, we show forth not only a model of the kind of church Christ calls us to be but also the kind of community God longs for all the world to share: a community where all people are welcomed and blessed. Infused with a passion for the Gospel, the Good News, God’s Spirit thrusts us out into the world as God eagerly awaits one and all, anticipating with love and joy, our good company as we enjoy God and live fully with one another. Led by God’s Spirit, the whole Church not only embodies the justice love of God but prophetically challenges the world to accept and embrace the full humanity of all people.

Appendix B

The Journey of the Task Force on “Harvesting Seeds of Justice: Ministering in Church and Society with Persons Who Have Disabilities”

The Task Force on “Harvesting Seeds of Justice: Ministering in Church and Society with Persons Who Have Disabilities” was appointed by the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) in response to the referral the committee received from the General Assembly, “to develop a comprehensive disabilities policy, including learning disabilities, disabilities prevention and all other disabilities identified by the Resolution on “Disabilities Concerns ...” (Minutes, 1999, Part I, pp. 41, 308–309). The charge for this task force did not, however, include issues facing people with severe mental illness, which will be addressed by the ACSWP’s Task Force on “Comprehensive Serious Mental Illness.”

The task force included clergy, elders, and laymen and laywomen, young and old, and racial ethnic members. Members of the task force included: Geraldine Adams-Jones, Ellen Gillespie, Dorothy Jean Henderson, David Kiely, Joo Hai Kang, Sue Montgomery, Sarah Nettleton, Nancy Olthoff, David Swihart, Ruth West, Trace Haythorn (chair), Brett Webb-Mitchell (writer and consultant). Margaret P. Elliott resigned from the task force for family and work reasons. Staff support was provided by Peter A. Sulyok, former coordinator, Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP), and Belinda M. Curry, associate for policy development and interpretation, Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

The task force worked for three years, meeting together five times in various locations to gather information and to grapple with disabilities issues and the church’s role in addressing these concerns. The first meeting was November 2002 in Louisville, Kentucky. This was an orientation for the task force, in which they examined the prospectus and heard from members of the Presbyterians for Disability Concerns (PDC) network. The task force agreed to meet in a variety of contexts throughout the country to afford the members the best listening opportunity for both the blessings and challenges that people with disabilities face in the PC(USA). The task force changed the title of the proposed policy from “Harvesting Seeds of Justice: Ministering in Church and Society with Persons Who Have Disabilities” to “Living into the Body of Christ: Towards Full Inclusion of People with Disabilities.”

The second meeting was March 2003 in Minneapolis, Minnesota. The task force met with pioneers in ministries to and with people with disabilities.

The third meeting was October 2003 in Washington, D.C. The task force met with policymakers, advocacy groups, and legislators.

The fourth meeting was April 2004 in Pasadena, California. The task force met with community advocates and seminary representatives from Fuller Theological Seminary.

The fifth meeting was November 2004 in Hunt, Texas. The task force received and edited the first draft of the proposed policy. The task force received and edited two additional drafts of the proposed policy statement in February and May 2005.

Throughout the years the task force conducted focus groups in their hometowns as well as at the 216th General Assembly (2004) in Richmond, Virginia. The task force was intentional in listening for the breadth and depth of concerns of, by, and for people with disabilities. The task force was also involved in helping design The Presbyterian Panel’s May 2004 Survey on “Disabilities Issues.” Feedback from this survey was taken into consideration by the task force in the development of the proposed policy statement on “Living into the Body of Christ: Toward Full Inclusion of People with Disabilities.”

In addition to its work as a task force, the chair and several members of the task force shared in presentations of its work to the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) at its summer meeting in 2005, to a Synod Consultation on Living into the Body of Christ in the fall of 2005, and to the commissioners to the 217th General Assembly (2006).

Appendix C People First Language

The issue of language is of high importance among people living with disabilities, and thus should be for all of us. For example, many people with disabilities remember days when all people with disabilities were considered “handicapped,” referring to the begging gestures of putting one’s cap in the hand and asking for alms. To this day, there are many publications that do not use “person-first” or “people first” language: putting people in front of the disabling condition.

What further complicates this issue is the following: in some countries, mental retardation is a learning difficulty, or a learning disability, but a learning disability in the United States is not mental retardation. The other complicating variable is that the language of what is a disability continually changes, given the lobbying efforts of disability groups, or what the United States Congress or citizen-groups of persons with disabilities choose to be known by. Again, the deaf culture has chosen not to be considered disabled.

We invite all who write, preach, teach, conduct workshops, or speak in an ecclesial or public context about people living with disabilities to consider the following: First, is our knowing that someone has a disability an important part of referring to that person? Second, if knowing that someone is disabled is important, how would the person with a disability want her or his disability to be addressed or known?

[The assembly approved Item 10-07. See pp. 49, 50.]

The General Assembly Council, upon recommendation of its Congregational Ministries Division, recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) grant a two-year extension for the completion of Alternate Resolution to 2002 Referral: Item 13-07. Recommendation That the General Assembly Council, Office of Theology and Worship, Implement Commissioners’ Resolution 01-22. On a Churchwide Dialogue on End-of-Life Issues (Minutes, 2001, Part I, pp. 49, 498)—From the 214th General Assembly (2002) (Minutes, 2002, Part I, pp. 71, 654). Due to budget and staff reductions in the Office of Theology and Worship, the response to this referral has been delayed. Plans are underway in partial fulfillment of the resolution through a major conference on end-of-life issues to be held at Duke University before the 218th General Assembly (2008).

Rationale

This recommendation is a response to the following referral:

Alternate Resolution to 2002 Referral: Item 13-07. Recommendation That the General Assembly Council, Office of Theology and Worship, Implement Commissioners’ Resolution 01-22. On a Churchwide Dialogue on End-of-Life Issues (Minutes, 2001, Part I, pp. 49, 498)—From the 214th General Assembly (2002) (Minutes, 2002, Part I, pp. 71, 654).

On Affirming MRTI’s Advocacy Efforts with Pharmaceutical Companies That Have Not Granted Licenses on Life-Saving Medications That Treat Diseases of Poverty—From the Presbytery of the Pacific.

The Presbytery of the Pacific overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to affirm the Mission Responsibility Through Investment (MRTI) work[ing] plan and its [advocacy] efforts with [the] pharmaceutical companies [who] [which] still have not granted patent licenses on life-saving medications that treat [the] [certain] diseases of poverty (HIV/AIDS, tuberculosis, and malaria), and recommends consultation and coordination with the staff teams and resolution teams on HIV/AIDS remediation (Item 08-06) and Malaria reduction (Item 11-27)].

Rationale

The global community’s fight against diseases of poverty must be a comprehensive effort that addresses both prevention and access to treatment issues. As Christians, our Lord Jesus calls us to proclaim release to the captives. Given God’s compassion, this would seem to include those being held in the bonds of poverty and disease. The essential medicines needed to treat our HIV positive brothers and sisters in the developing world are beyond the reach of millions who need them. According to the UNAIDS 2005 report on the AIDS pandemic, sub-Saharan Africa continues to be the most affected region. Since the previous UNAIDS report, another three million of our sisters and brothers have contracted HIV in Africa. This represents 64 percent of the new cases.

The World Health Organization's "3 by 5 plan" (3 million people by 2005) and President Bush's Emergency Plan for AIDS have more than doubled the number of people who have gained access to antiretroviral medications, from four hundred thousand to one million. Despite these efforts, only one third of people living with HIV have access to these life-preserving medications. There are at least two million people facing a terminal illness because they cannot access the antiretroviral medications.

This is due in part to the patents that the pharmaceutical companies hold on these medications. Unless the pharmaceutical companies grant some licenses for the drug patents they hold, these medications will continue to be too costly for millions of subsistence farmers living on about one dollar a day. Several PC(USA) mission personnel and the MRTI (Mission Responsibility Through Investment) have identified access to healthcare as a critical issue in our fight against diseases of poverty (HIV/AIDS, tuberculosis, and malaria). This overture affirms the MRTI working plan to file shareholder resolutions that call for licenses to be granted for these essential medications that combat diseases of poverty. These measures will dramatically increase our sister's and brother's access to these medications at more affordable prices. Such efforts may be made in conjunction with the ICCR (Interfaith Council on Corporate Responsibility), which has already sponsored shareholder resolutions to this effect with several of the leading pharmaceutical companies.

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 10-08

Advice and Counsel on Item 10-08—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

Item 10-08 requests support for investment responsibility measures to help provide affordable medications to treat pandemic illnesses in poorer countries.

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) advises approval of this item with amendment as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“The Presbytery of the Pacific overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to affirm the Mission Responsibility Through Investment (MRTI) work plan and its advocacy efforts with pharmaceutical companies ~~who~~ which still have not granted patent licenses on life-saving medications that treat ~~the~~ certain diseases of poverty (HIV/AIDS, tuberculosis, and malaria), and recommends consultation and coordination with the staff teams and resolution teams on HIV/AIDS remediation (Item 08-06) and Malaria reduction (Item 11-27).”

Rationale

As is recognized in two other items of assembly business on HIV/AIDS (Item 08-06) and malaria in sub-Saharan Africa (Item 11-27), lack of funds means lack of medical intervention to prevent the spread of pandemic illnesses. This overture sees one part of the solution to include the licensing of appropriate medical patents to allow the low-cost production of these medications for developing nations.

The process by which the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)'s Mission Responsibility Through Investment (MRTI) Committee works does not start with shareholder proposals. It begins with research and correspondence with companies whose stock is held by the church's investment agencies, the Board of Pensions and the Presbyterian Foundation. These entities were established by the General Assembly to manage funds for ministers and programs of the church. Their representatives cooperate in implementing General Assembly policy through the MRTI Committee, which also includes representatives from the General Assembly Council, the Advocacy Committees for Women's and Racial Ethnic Concerns, and the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy.

The Committee on MRTI bases its approach to companies on the concerns of the General Assembly, such as this one for the "diseases of poverty" described in this overture's rationale. If dialogue does not yield some progress or an acceptable agreement with a company or companies, then MRTI may recommend submitting a shareholder proposal or resolution calling for a change in company policy. Often, even a relatively small percentage of the shareholder's proxy votes at an annual meeting can affect corporate policy. At the same time, commissioners should know that virtually any corporate social responsibility effort could lead to divestment, if the church felt a continuing business practice to be so clearly against the Gospel that church entities should not profit from it.

The presbytery forwarding this support for MRTI's work in this area is clearly familiar with both the corporate social responsibility approach and the public health issues involved.

ACREC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 10-08

Advice and Counsel on Item 10-08—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns.

Item 10-08 deals with affirming MRTI's advocacy efforts with pharmaceutical companies that have not granted licenses on life saving medications that treat diseases of poverty. It was submitted by the Presbytery of the Pacific.

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns advises approval.

Commissioners' Resolution. On Closing the Chef Menteur Landfill in New Orleans.

That the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) do the following:

1. Support the Citizens for a Strong New Orleans East in their effort to close the operation of the Chef Menteur landfill and preserve New Orleans for the communities [of color] that have traditionally resided there.

Comment: The concern here is for all humanity, not only people of color.

2. Urge that the Stated Clerk convey this message to the City of New Orleans, the Louisiana Department of Environmental Quality, and the Waste Management Inc.

3. The Advocacy Committee on Racial Ethnic Concerns will continue to explore ways of addressing issues resulting from the Katrina disaster by consulting with the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP), the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC), Peacemaking, Presbyterian Disaster Assistance (PDA), the Office of Black Congregational Enhancement, and other related entities that will ensure the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)'s appropriate response to these issues.

Rationale

The week of June 12–16, 2006, has been designated as a National Week of Solidarity to support the Citizens for a Strong New Orleans East in their effort to save New Orleans East for the communities of color that have historically resided there by closing the operation of a landfill intended to store environmentally toxic debris resulting from Hurricane Katrina.

The City of New Orleans and Waste Management Inc. have decided to create and operate a landfill for Hurricane Katrina debris at 16600 Chef Menteur Highway, proximate to the communities of New Orleans East, all of which were displaced by Hurricane Katrina.

Hurricane Katrina debris contains vast amounts of environmental toxins, including building materials containing asbestos and nearly 5 millions gallons of toxic household waste including paint, chlorine bleach, drain cleaner, and the like.

This landfill is not appropriately safeguarded against incoming groundwater seepage, which will mix with environmental toxins from the Katrina debris and will be pumped into an adjacent canal that flows directly into a largely Vietnamese community in New Orleans East and, as a result, will result in the permanent displacement of this community that has only now begun to rebuild.

This landfill is also approximately eighty feet away from Bayou Sauvage, the largest urban wildlife refuge in the country and will likely contaminate and destroy this delicately balanced ecosystem.

There are other nearby landfill sites that are readily available and protected against groundwater seepage so are more appropriate sites to store Katrina debris that are not being used in order to save costs for the City of New Orleans, the Louisiana Department of Environmental Quality, and the Waste Management Inc., the company contracted to haul the debris and operate the site.

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) believes that cost savings and profit should not be prioritized over the communities and people living in those communities.

On Rescinding and Modifying Certain Actions of the 216th General Assembly (2004) Regarding the Israeli-Palestinian Conflict—From the Presbytery of Mississippi.

The Presbytery of Mississippi respectfully overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to approve the following:

1. The 217th General Assembly (2006) reaffirms the 216th General Assembly (2004) for its concern for “a just resolution of the conflict between Israel and the Palestinians,” its support of inspired initiatives that could advance the prospects of peace in the Middle East, and for moving the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to think deeply and speak publicly about what makes for peace. While the desire for peace is reaffirmed, some of the means for achieving peace advocated by the 216th General Assembly (2004) were not appropriate and, in light of changing circumstances, should not be implemented. They should be rescinded or, in some cases, significantly modified to advance more effectively and fairly the cause of peace as in the recommendations that follow.

2. The 217th General Assembly (2006) believes that two of the items contained in the overtures approved as Item 12-01 (Minutes, 2004, Part I, pp. 64–66) undermine the cause of peace because (a) the language is unnecessarily harsh and accusatory; (b) the tone and prescriptions are arrogant and condescending towards the parties involved; (c) the viewpoint expressed suggests bias in favor of the Palestinian cause and prejudice against Israel; and (d) advocacy of phased selective divestment is punitive rather than redemptive—particularly in light of the rapidly changing circumstances on the ground. Accordingly, paragraphs 5 and 7 of Item 12-01 are hereby repealed, rescinded, and declared null and void. Those paragraphs to be repealed, rescinded, and declared null and void read as follows:

“5. Vigorously urges the U.S. government, the government of Israel, and the Palestinian leadership to move swiftly, and with resolve, to recognize that the only way out of this chronic and vicious impasse is to abandon all approaches that exacerbate further strife, lay aside arrogant political posturing, and get on with forging negotiated compromises that open a path to peace.

“7. Refers to Mission Responsibility Through Investment Committee (MRTI) with instructions to initiate a process of phased selective divestment in multinational corporations operating in Israel, in accordance to General Assembly policy on social investing, and to make appropriate recommendations to the General Assembly Council for action.”

3. The 217th General Assembly (2006) believes that the overture expressed as Item 12-02 (On Calling for an End to the Construction of a Wall by the State of Israel, see Minutes, 2004, Part I, pp. 853–54) is too broad in scope and does not further the cause of peace. Item 12-02 is a blanket condemnation of the security wall being built by the State of Israel. The 217th General Assembly (2006) does not believe that the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) should tell a sovereign nation whether or how it can protect its borders or handle matters of national defense. The problem with the security wall, in 2004 and presently, is its location. The 217th General Assembly (2006) supports fair criticism of the security wall insofar as it illegally encroaches into the Palestinian territory and fails to follow the legally recognized borders of Israel since 1949 demarcated by the Green Line. Accordingly, Item 12-02 of the 216th General Assembly (2004) is hereby rescinded in its entirety, and the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) requests the Stated Clerk to make known to the president of the United States, the members of Congress of the United States, the prime minister of the State of Israel, and the president of the Palestinian Authority its desire to see the parties establish an agreed boundary along the Green Line, unless the parties otherwise mutually agree. To the extent that the security barrier encroaches upon Palestinian land that was not part of Israel prior to the 1967 war, the barrier should be dismantled and relocated unless both sides shall otherwise agree.

4. The 217th General Assembly (2006) believes that two of the actions taken by the 216th General Assembly (2004) in Item 12-03 (On Confronting Christian Zionism, see Minutes, 2004, Part I, pp. 855–61) are confusing, potentially misleading, and extremely harmful to our relationships with Jews. Blanket condemnation of the ideology technically defined as “Christian Zionism,” in the present context, causes great confusion and harm. The claim that “Christian Zionism does not represent the majority of American Christians and the faith of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)” is misleading and incendiary. Rather than condemn particular expressions or theological understandings, the 217th General Assembly (2006) supports the call to study and reflect more deeply on this complex biblical and theological subject about which reasonable people of good faith can and do disagree. A pastoral letter from the Stated Clerk prior to such churchwide study and reflection is premature and ill advised. Accordingly, subparagraphs 1 and 2 of Item 12-03 are hereby repealed and rescinded.

The repealed and rescinded paragraphs read as follows:

“1. Call upon the Stated Clerk to issue to all churches in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) a pastoral letter on Christian Zionism and the ongoing conflict in Israel and Palestine by making this letter available on the PC(USA) Web site. The assembly requests the following offices to assist the Stated Clerk in the preparation of this letter; the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy, Corporate Witness, Interfaith Relations, Middle East, and the Office of Theology and Worship.

“2. Direct the Stated Clerk to inform current government officials that Christian Zionism does not represent the majority of American Christians and the faith of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)”

5. The 217th General Assembly (2006) (a) acknowledges the enormous historical and political complexity and challenges of peacemaking between Israel and Palestine; (b) recognizes and celebrates the fact that great strides towards peace have been made by the elected leaders of Israel and of the Palestinian Authority; (c) wishes to encourage all sides in this conflict to work together for peace and justice; and (d) seeks to nurture and support the peace process in a way that expresses confidence and concern for Israeli interests as well as Palestinian interests. Accordingly, the 217th General Assembly (2006) seeks to avoid advocating particular and specific solutions, and instead advocates the rebuilding of trust and confidence on both sides. We recommend and embrace the balanced approach of the Sharm el-Sheikh Fact-Finding Committee, also known as The Mitchell Report (May 4, 2001, <http://home.mindspring.com/~fontenelles/mitchell.htm>), which analyzed the conflict from the perspectives of Palestinians and Israelis and framed its recommendations as “recommendations” to both the Government of Israel and the Palestinian Authority. This avoids the appearance of one-sidedness and places the responsibility squarely on both sides to work for peace. The Mitchell Report is careful to speak in principle and not to insist on specific solutions: “It is not within our mandate to prescribe the venue, the basis or the agenda of negotiations. However, in order to provide an effective political context for practical cooperation between the parties, negotiations must not be unreasonably deferred and they must, in our view, manifest a spirit of compromise, reconciliation and partnership, notwithstanding the events of the past seven months.” This is the tone the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) wishes to take to promote the cause of peace and the things that make for peace.

6. The 217th General Assembly (2006) believes that, in the future, it would be better for the church to engage in discussion and dialogue before votes on significant theological or social positions are taken. The damage done to Presbyterian-Jewish relations could have been minimized had the church been encouraged to debate and discuss the overtures that, in their cumulative effect, have been construed as anti-Israel. Many churches first learned of these actions from Jewish friends. This is not good process and does not further the peace, unity, or purity of the church. Accordingly, the 217th General Assembly (2006) directs the Stated Clerk to refer all future overtures that might reasonably be expected to damage the relationship with Jews to the presbyteries for a period of study and reflection before voting to approve or reject such overtures.

In response to Item 11-01, the 217th General Assembly (2006) approved the following alternate resolution and comment:

After careful consideration of the overtures brought before the Assembly Committee on Peacemaking and International Issues of the 217th General Assembly (2006), we offer the following recommendations.

1. We acknowledge that the actions of the 216th General Assembly (2004) caused hurt and misunderstanding among many members of the Jewish community and within our Presbyterian communion. We are grieved by the pain that this has caused, accept responsibility for the flaws in our process, and ask for a new season of mutual understanding and dialogue.

To these ends, we replace the instructions expressed in Item 12-01 (Minutes, 2004 Part I, pp. 64–66) Recommendation 7, which reads with the following:

“7. To urge that financial investments of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), as they pertain to Israel, Gaza, East Jerusalem, and the West Bank, be invested in only peaceful pursuits, and affirm that the customary corporate engagement process of the Committee on Mission Responsibility Through Investments of our denomination is the proper vehicle for achieving this goal.”

2. Direct Mission Responsibility Through Investment (MRTI) to ensure that its strategies for engaging corporations with regard to Israeli and Palestinian territories

a. Reflect the application of fundamental principles of justice and peace common to Christianity, Islam, and Judaism that are appropriate to the practical realities of Israeli and Palestinian societies.

b. Reflect commitment to positive outcomes.

c. Reflect awareness of potential impact upon the stability, future viability, and prosperity of both the Israeli and Palestinian economies.

d. Identify affirmative investment opportunities as they pertain to Israel, Gaza, East Jerusalem, and the West Bank.

3. We call upon the church:

a. To work through peaceful means with American and Israeli Jewish, American and Palestinian Muslim, and Palestinian Christian communities and their affiliated organizations for an end to all violence and terror against Palestinian and Israeli civilians.

b. To work through peaceful means with American and Israeli Jewish, American and Palestinian Muslim, and Palestinian Christian communities and their affiliated organizations to end the occupation.

c. To work through peaceful means with American and Israeli Jewish, American and Palestinian Muslim, and Palestinian Christian communities and their affiliated organizations towards the creation of a socially, economically, geographically, and politically viable and secure Palestinian state, alongside an equally viable and secure Israeli state, both of which have a right to exist.

d. To encourage and celebrate efforts by individual Presbyterians, congregations, and judicatories of our church to communicate directly and regularly with Jewish, Christian, and Muslim communities, sponsor programs likely to improve relations among Christians, Jews, and Muslims, and engage in peacemaking in the Middle East.

4. The 217th General Assembly (2006) does not believe that the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) should tell a sovereign nation whether it can protect its borders or handle matters of national defense. The problem with the security wall, in 2004 and presently, is its location. The 217th General Assembly (2006) supports fair criticism of the security wall insofar as it illegally encroaches into the Palestinian territory and fails to follow the legally recognized borders of Israel since 1967 demarcated by the Green Line. To the extent that the security barrier violates Palestinian land that was not part of Israel prior to the 1967 war, the barrier should be dismantled and relocated.

5. Recognizing that the situation on the ground in the Israel-Palestine area is rapidly changing, the General Assembly Council (GAC) is directed to carefully monitor ongoing developments of the situation in the Middle East and to examine the policies of the PC(USA) related to the Middle East, in order to make a comprehensive report to the 218th General Assembly (2008).

6. Instructs the Stated Clerk to communicate Recommendations 1. through 5. above to the United States' president, vice president, secretary of state, and members of Congress; to Israeli and Palestinian leaders in the Middle East; to the membership of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.); to leadership of Christian, Jewish, and Muslim faith bodies and denominations in the United States and the Middle East with whom we are in communication.

Comment: The assembly received twenty-six overtures pertaining to the Middle East. The recommendation is the result of the General Assembly's honest and sincere effort to address the issues and concerns that appeared in the overtures in a comprehensive and concise document.

Rationale

The Presbytery of Mississippi subscribes to the goal of peacemaking reflected in the actions of the 216th General Assembly (2004), but cannot accept or support some of the means advocated by that General Assembly. We call on the great church of Jesus Christ to obey St. Paul's exhortation "Let us then pursue what makes for peace and for mutual upbuilding" (Rom. 14:19). The paired prescriptions of phased selective divestment and wholesale condemnation of the security wall fail to make for peace and mutual upbuilding. They fail to grapple fairly with historical complexity, are overbroad, produce pernicious side-effects and unintended consequences, and function more punitively than redemptively. While the goal of peace for Israel and Palestine is laudable, the means are accusatory, one-sided, simplistic, and punitive.

As a matter of conscience, the congregations comprising the Presbytery of Mississippi cannot support divestment as an economic sanction against American companies legally doing business in Israel and/or Palestine. The underlying purpose of divestment is to inflict economic hardship and harm on companies doing business in Israel or Palestine. In clear cases—like genocide or apartheid—such action can be justified. In the present situation, however, where there is justice and injustice on both sides, it is unjustified and inappropriate.

The price of phased selective divestment falls disproportionately on one party to this conflict, namely Israel. Such remedies do not make for peace. The use of economic sanctions as a weapon in peacemaking puts the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in the position of a judge passing judgment and imposing a sentence rather than a partner for peace. To rank and file members of the church, it appears arrogant, condescending, and punitive. Such actions, however well intentioned, do not make for peace.

Blanket condemnation of the security wall does not further the peacemaking process. The wall may be, for now, a necessary evil to deter attacks and counterattacks. To criticize the encroachment of the wall into Palestinian territory is legitimate. To tell a nation that it cannot protect its borders or defend its people from mortar or suicide bombers is naïve, arrogant, and hypocritical. The United States has protected borders to prevent illegal immigration. To tell Israel that it does not have the right to protect itself against enemy attack is simply wrong.

The Presbytery of Mississippi does not share the blanket condemnation of “Christian Zionism.” Reasonable Christians can and do read the Bible differently in respect of God’s promises to Israel. We realize that the position taken by the 216th General Assembly (2004) is specific and highly technical. However, in the context of the present Israeli-Palestinian conflict, it suggests, and creates the appearance of a stand against Israel. Thus, Item 12-03, passed by the 216th General Assembly (2004), creates more problems than it solves and is potentially misleading to the public. It is appropriate to call on the church to study this difficult and complex matter. It is improper to make blanket condemnation of positions that many Reformed Christians hold in good faith and with good biblical support. If we are to bear witness to the Truth, our public pronouncements must be carefully drawn so as not to misrepresent or mislead our position with respect to Israel. Greater clarity and charity is called for here.

The Presbytery of Mississippi objects to the negative and partisan tone of the overtures that condemn Israel’s role in the conflict. If our denomination wishes to encourage both sides to pursue the things that make for peace, we suggest a tone and balanced approach reflected in the report of the Sharm el-Sheikh Fact-Finding Committee, popularly known as The Mitchell Report (May 4, 2001). This report analyzes the conflict from several perspectives, acknowledges culpability and responsibility on both sides, frames its prescriptions as “recommendations,” and does not attempt to dictate or advocate specific foreign policy solutions. We believe this tone is much more consistent with the biblical role of peacemaking and the ministry of reconciliation than the strident, accusatory tone expressed in the overtures of the 216th General Assembly (2004). If the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) wishes to be taken seriously as a mediator, it must avoid the appearance of partisan politics and find ways to address both sides of the conflict. We believe this is the role to which God is calling us.

Finally, the Presbytery of Mississippi deeply regrets the fact that the overtures approved by the 216th General Assembly (2004) were not widely circulated or discussed in the larger church in advance of their approval. The reaction from Jewish communities and many Presbyterian members who typically do not follow General Assembly matters closely attests to the advisability of discussing and reflecting on weighty matters before overtures are approved. Items 12-01, 12-02, and 12-03 seem more like advocacy of a determined minority than the product of considered debate, reflection, and judgment of the larger church. The unintended consequence of rushing to judgment (and action) is to destroy trust in the decision-making process and in those leaders who are supposed to shepherd that process. Therefore, we call on the General Assembly Council to adopt a policy and set in place a procedure to refer controversial subjects to the presbyteries for a period of discussion and reflection in advance of taking a binding vote. Had this been done in 2004, Presbyterians could have discussed the issues among ourselves and with our ecumenical partners and Jewish friends in an atmosphere of trust and inquiry rather than after-the-fact in a defensive and highly charged atmosphere of suspicion and broken trust.

Concurrences to Item 11-01 from the Presbyteries of Central Florida, Peace River, Salem, and Santa Barbara.

Concurrence to Item 11-01 from the Presbytery of Kendall (with Additional Rationale).

Rationale

The Presbytery of Kendall is grateful for the historic commitment of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to support the things that make for peace between Israelis and Palestinians, and for her continuing desire to serve in the role of peacemaker. However, we believe that the actions taken by the 216th General Assembly (2004) neither make for peace nor contribute to constructive peacemaking. We believe that the church would have been better served had it followed a process similar to the one outlined in the work of the Theological Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church before proposing or taking any action in the matter.

For decisions that have a significant impact on the life of the church, particularly those that are complex or potentially divisive, time is needed for corporate study of Scripture, gathering of information, prayerful reflection, mutual questioning, careful listening, and collective weighing of options. For clearer discernment of the mind of Christ, and for the sake of the unity of the church, all voices should be heard, including those who may be affected by the potential outcome of a decision. (The Final Report of the Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church to the 217th General Assembly (2006), page 30, lines 855–860).

There is no more complex or potentially divisive issue in our time than that of the conflict between the State of Israel and the Palestinian Authority.

These actions of the 216th General Assembly (2004) were initiated by a committee of the General Assembly. The actions proposed therefore reflect the intent of the committee that developed them. This is entirely within the procedures provided for by the General Assembly. However, bringing forward an action of this magnitude through that process makes it ripe for breeding mistrust. Unlike overtures to amend the Book of Order, awareness of the content or scope of the committee's proposed actions is limited until they are published at the time of the assembly. Commissioners who must cope with a voluminous assembly docket within severe time limitations can neither adequately grasp the implications of, nor fully comprehend the consequences of, the decision they are asked to make. Add to that the support of staff and emotionally laden appeals from proponents of the actions. It is not an unreasonable perception that the assembly's decisions were made in response to one-sided orchestrated advocacy. The result is an erosion of trust, not in the commissioners, but in the integrity of the General Assembly process itself.

With respect to the corporate study of Scripture, no thoughtful study guides were developed in consultation with the Office of Theology and Worship for use across the church prior to taking such action. Such a study should focus, among other Scriptures, on the Apostle Paul's wrestling in the Book of Romans with the complexities of the identity and role of Israel in the unfolding of God's purposes.

With respect to the gathering of information, the message communicated to the assembly was that the proposed actions were consistent with previous General Assembly actions taken on the Middle East conflict. The leveraging of economic power through a process of phased, selective divestment was declared an effective strategy for bringing about positive change in the face of continued injustice. There were allusions to other places, including South Africa, where this strategy has been effective. The information not presented to the assembly was that these actions are contrary to the conclusions of every major fact finding commission and the reports of other major religious communities involved in the conflict. Offering unilateral support to either side of the conflict is not an effective strategy for bringing about positive change, as subsequent events on the ground have shown. The book, Obstacles to Peace—A Reframing of the Palestinian-Israeli Conflict, authored by a Jewish professor at Ben Gurion University in Jerusalem, Jeffrey Halper, and sponsored by the Israeli Committee Against House Demolitions (ICAH), concludes with the following:

Our goal, however, is promoting a win-win approach which addresses the fundamental needs and grievances of each party. Only on such a firm and just foundation can a re-framing offer a way out (p.80).

With respect to prayerful reflection, we assume the good intentions of those who brought the resolution forth. However, no matter how prayerful and well-intentioned an individual or group may be, it is still possible to be short-sighted and err "through the frailty inseparable from humanity" (Book of Order, G-1.0307). The effect of the assembly's action has been to position the church ideologically with one side over against the other. In so doing, we have diminished our ability to speak effectively to both sides and to the different groups within the two sides, to truly serve as a peacemaker.

With respect to mutual questioning, we cannot equate floor debate in an assembly gathering with the thorough vetting that a complex divisive issue like this deserves. Further, by calling on the assembly to declare that Christian Zionism is inconsistent with Reformed Theology, the innuendo is that anyone objecting to these actions is, therefore, espousing Christian Zionism. The assembly action describes Christian Zionism as making use of "idiosyncratic interpretations of scripture to undergird a certain reading of current events...and to generate support for specific political goals...." This is a theological straw man. It is a technique to label opposition to these actions with a theological pejorative. Most importantly, this characterization minimizes the theological complexity of the question of the mystery of Israel in God's purposes. This complexity is reflected in the writings of prominent Reformed theologians.

In Romans 11, we are introduced to the still deeper mystery that God's rejection of Israel is not final... Paul then goes on to confess that the gifts and call of God are irrevocable (Romans 11:29). Even if Israel is faithless, God is faithful (Romans 3:3-4). His rejection of his people is not final but only provisional. In the "No" of God's rejection is hidden the "Yes" of his election. Those whom God elected to be his witnesses will by no means be permanently discarded. Indeed, even in their rejection they continue to be signs of the mercy and power of God among the Gentiles... Nowhere in the New Testament is it asserted that the Jewish people as a whole are under some irremediable curse because of their rejection of Jesus Christ. (Donald G. Bloesch, professor of Theology Emeritus, Dubuque Theological Seminary, The Last Things (IV Press, 2004), pp. 201-203.

With respect to careful listening, it is clear from the response within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) that the actions of this assembly do not represent the views of all Presbyterians. For the sake of the unity of the church, and in order that all voices should be heard, the 217th General Assembly (2006) should rescind the actions of the 216th General Assembly (2004), until a process has been put in place that will involve the whole church in thoughtful and prayerful consideration of this complex and divisive issue.

With respect to collective weighing of options, the univocal message was that phased selective divestment has been and therefore will become a proven, responsible strategy to address injustice. Apparently little consideration had been given to the possible unintended consequences that would result from the assembly's actions. The denomination and its highest officials have been in crisis management mode, reacting after the fact to the flood of concern and criticism from within the church and the broader community that has arisen since news of the assembly's action first became public.

Our prayer is that the actions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) might once again become a witness to God's love in Jesus Christ, and of God's longing for justice for all peoples affected by this conflict, and that its actions might never again be so demonstrably biased toward either side.

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEMS 11-01-11-22; 11-23, 11-24, 11-34, 11-39, and 11-41.

Advice and Counsel on Items 11-01 through 11-22; 11-23, 11-24, 11-34, 11-39, and 11-41—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

Items 11-01 through 11-22 all concern the action of the 216th General Assembly (2004) on the initiation of a program to review Presbyterian financial investments as they affect the peace process in the Palestine-Israel conflict and in the need for a comprehensive policy development regarding the Middle East.

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) advises as follows:

1. That all of these overtures be referred to the Moderator's proposed working group (if approved) to advise ACSWP on possible policy recommendations for the 218th General Assembly (2008) and for advice to the Mission Responsibility Through Investment (MRTI) Committee as it carries through on the work mandated by the 216th General Assembly (2004).
2. Answer Item 11-24, overture from the Presbytery of New York City, to produce a substantive resource document on the Middle East by the action taken on Item 11-23.
3. Approval of Item 11-34, overture from the Presbytery of Newark, as it continues and commends the work of MRTI in continuity with existing Presbyterian policy.
4. Approval of Recommendation 3 of Item 11-21, overture from the Presbytery of Missouri Union, to direct the Board of Pensions and the Presbyterian Foundation to explore and identify profitable investments that will benefit both the Israeli and the Palestinian economies by giving special consideration to companies that create equitable employment and whose business is to the benefit of both Israeli and Palestinian societies.
5. Commend those corporations, non-governmental organizations (NGOs) and programs working directly to develop economic opportunities and cooperation for Palestinians, Israelis, and others in the Middle East, including those listed in Item 11-13 from the Presbytery of New Brunswick.

Rationale

The rationale for the continuation of MRTI's work of financial engagement in a nonviolent means of changing political-economic policies is grounded in the theologies of Reformed economic responsibility, the Christian Realist tradition forward from Reinhold Niebuhr's Moral Man and Immoral Society (1932), the Christian civil rights struggle in this country, and the thirty-five-year history of MRTI's engagement with economic power. Overall, churches and universities and more recently pension funds have influenced corporate decisions in many positive ways, nationally and internationally.

Studies of Presbyterian opinion conducted by the Presbyterian Research Services indicate broad acceptance of the General Assembly's policies in the areas of Christian investment and social responsibility. The Presbyterian church has been engaged in corporate responsibility work since 1971, and in 1984 approved a general study on "The Divestment Strategy: Principles and Criteria" (Minutes, 1984, Part I, p. 193–94). This reported stated that ". . . divestment of holdings in a particular firm or class of firms is both part of the normal management of funds and potentially an occasion for Christian witness to God's call for justice and a renewal of society" (Minutes, 1984, Part I, p. 194).

The ACSWP endorses the rationale of the Presbytery of Chicago's overture, Item 11-09, which is supportive of this policy:

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) affirms its consistent advocacy for a two-state solution in support of the self-determination of the Israeli and Palestinian peoples, to be expressed through recognized states within the pre-June 1967 borders, living side by side in peace, justice, equality and reconciliation; and

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) recognizes the urgency of the political realities in the Middle East, such that, with each passing day, the possibility of a just and peaceful two-state solution might be lost; and

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) acknowledges, in order to achieve such a two-state solution, there is the need for a just resolution to the following: adjudication of the status of Palestinian Jerusalem; conflicting religious claims with regard to the land; equal access to Jerusalem and Bethlehem for Christians, Jews and Muslims; the final status of Jerusalem.

The destiny of these two peoples—Palestinian and Israeli—are inextricably linked. Ultimately it will be the people of the Middle East who will have to bring justice and peace to their sacred and troubled land. This overture affirms the long-standing desire of Presbyterians to support these two peoples in their efforts to express their own self-determination. At the same time, it recognizes the seriousness of the fact that the current social, political and economic conditions of these two peoples are not equal.

This overture affirms that Presbyterians want the financial assets of their denomination only invested in peaceful pursuits. It provides that funds identified through the MRTI process as contributing to the suffering of Israelis and Palestinians are to be reinvested in peaceful pursuits within the region that will achieve this important goal.

Presbyterians have long held to the view that persons of good will, with faith in God and earnestness of purpose, may often come to different conclusions in pursuit of the same goals, but that God nevertheless calls us all to work together with respect for one another. As a Church, we must pursue these ends with an openness to the working of God's spirit and a sense of humility when considering the alternative visions of others in the fulfillment of justice and peace. At the same time we must maintain our own integrity in finally determining what we believe God is calling us to be and to do.

Acknowledging that there are significant differences about how to best be supportive of justice and peace in the Middle East, this overture provides the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) the best and most strategic opportunities for partnership with American and Israeli Jewish, American and Palestinian Muslim, and Palestinian Christian communities in this endeavor.

This approach can galvanize the largest majority of Presbyterians at all levels of the Church for significant advocacy for justice and peace in the Middle East, while sending a clear message to all the people of the Middle East that we desire justice and peace for all of God's family and we wish to apply a single standard of justice to resolve the current political problems of this region.

This "rationale" is consistent with Resolution on Israel-Palestine: End the Occupation Now of the 215th General Assembly (2003).

ACREC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 11-01

Advice and Counsel on Item 11-01—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC).

Item 11-01 will rescind and modify certain actions of the 216th General Assembly (2004) regarding the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. It was submitted by the Presbytery of Mississippi.

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) advises item 11-01 be disapproved.

Rationale

The ACREC rejects the notion that any criticism of the government of Israel is anti-Semitic, anti-Jewish, or anti-Israel, and is opposed to singling out the Jews (or any other group) by approving a unique policy for dealing with them. Numerous past General Assembly resolutions have affirmed Israel's right to exist, condemned Palestinian violence, and called upon Palestinians to employ nonviolent means in their aspirations for independence. The accusation of the General Assembly's decision as "one-sided" is baseless and unfair. Further, this item fails to take into consideration Presbyterian relations with other parties involved—namely Palestinian Christians and Muslims, Christian and Muslim Middle Eastern immigrants here in the USA, as well as all other people who care about peace in the Middle East.

This item would have the PC(USA) take a neutral stance on the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, and “place the responsibility squarely on both sides.” The ACREC affirms that the church is called to take a principled, ethical stance, based on Christ’s example and the teachings of Scripture. Neutrality gives tacit support to the stronger party, regardless of whether that party is right or wrong. Neutrality fails to name the perpetrators as perpetrators. Further, when neutrality is interpreted as inaction, it gives implicit approval to both perpetrators and victims to resort to atrocities. The church should not take a neutral stance toward Palestinian suicide bombers; and should not take a neutral stance toward the Israeli occupation of Palestine. Rather, the church needs to be a prophetic voice for justice and peace. Divestment is a nonviolent strategy that has produced positive results in past conflicts as Desmond Tutu has noted in the South African context.

Although actions taken by the 216th General Assembly (2004) evoked negative responses, the church should not become anxious or fretful by reactions to its principled positions and social witness. Moreover, the church should not fail to speak out and act on behalf of the victims in this conflict (Palestinian and Israeli) for fear of upsetting our Jewish neighbors.

The theological base of Christian Zionism is Dispensationalism, which does not accord with Presbyterian and Reformed principles of biblical interpretation. Dispensationalism encourages the view that the existence of the modern state of Israel is essential to a multistage divine plan. It thus confuses the relationship between the Jews as the people of God and the political entity of Israel as a nation state. Reformed tradition has always concluded that they are not necessarily mutual. It seems, in fact, Israel as a state stands in contradiction with the biblical principles on which Judaism rests.

GAC COMMENT ITEM 11-01

Comment on All Overtures Relating to Our Witness for Peace and Expressions of Conscience in Israel and Palestine—From the General Assembly Council.

The Office of the General Assembly has received more than two-dozen overtures related to the actions of the 216th General Assembly (2004) regarding Israel and Palestine. The General Assembly Council (GAC), with guidance from an informal group convened by Rick Ufford-Chase, Moderator of the 216th General Assembly (2004), at the request of the GAC, has carefully reviewed these overtures and submits the following comment and advice to the 217th General Assembly (2006).

Comment

The General Assembly Council recognizes the goodwill and concern for peace and justice reflected in all the overtures. The intense debate occasioned by the actions of the 216th General Assembly (2004) regarding “phased, selective divestment” from companies whose products, activities, or services support the violence of the conflict in Israel and Palestine is grounded in the inescapable reality that as Presbyterians we have deep, meaningful, and historic ties with many of the primary players in the conflict.

Our Christian partners in the region ask Presbyterians to hear and act on their grave concerns about the injustice of the occupation. They are clear that a peaceful resolution of the conflict will be unattainable as long as the occupation continues to make it impossible for Palestinians to create a viable state that offers genuine hope for their children’s future. The church’s own mission experience in the region impresses upon us that no Palestinian can be secure in the midst of the violence and daily oppression that define the military and economic occupation of the West Bank.

Our Jewish partners, both in the United States and Israel, are clear that no legitimate peace can be possible without a guarantee that the State of Israel will be respected by all of the surrounding nations in the region, or without genuine safety for the citizens of Israel who live under the constant threat of attack against civilians. Further, they have worked hard to help Presbyterians understand that we must “go the extra mile” in an attempt to stand against a two-thousand-year history of Christian violence against the Jews that culminated in the Holocaust.

Our partners in both Israeli and Palestinian peace organizations have continued to call on the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to find ways to support their positive efforts for reconciliation and the creation of a lasting, just, and durable peace that will allow their peoples to live together in two viable, side-by-side states.

Presbyterians have learned that most people—including many of our own members—who care deeply about these matters find it difficult, perhaps even impossible, to articulate the concerns and desires of one of our partners in this entrenched conflict without denying the validity of the concerns of the other. This is perhaps our greatest challenge, a critical balancing act as we continue to move across the high-tension wire of working to be a genuine partner for peace in the region.

The General Assembly Council notes the following concerns, many of which are broadly shared across our denomination, for careful attention by the 217th General Assembly (2006) as it considers these overtures:

- Many Presbyterians are fully committed to the ongoing support of our Christian partners in the Middle East who have called on us to continue the sensitive and careful implementation of the work of the Mission Responsibility Through Investment (MRTI) committee as regards the action of the 216th General Assembly (2004) to engage those corporations in which we hold stock about our social witness policy.

- Many Presbyterians are extremely concerned about the actions of the 216th General Assembly (2004)—especially regarding the specific language of “divestment”—and its unintended meaning and consequence for our Jewish sisters and brothers.

- Many Presbyterians are calling on the 217th General Assembly (2006) to encourage the exploration of alternative investments that promote peace (especially joint efforts by Palestinians and Israelis), strengthen the economies in Israel and the occupied territories, and work toward a viable, two-state solution.

- Some Presbyterians have called on us to empower a working group to continue to work intentionally on these matters with special attention to the following concerns:

- The quickly changing political realities in both Israel and Palestine;

- The need to build consensus around our core values as people of faith, even when some of those core values may appear to be in contradiction with one another;

- A commitment to strengthen and support all efforts to build positive understanding and relationships within and among Jews, Christians, and Muslims in Israel and Palestine, in the Middle East, and in the United States.

The General Assembly Council urges the 217th General Assembly (2006) to keep in careful balance all of the tensions we have noted above as it sorts its way through the various proposals and overtures.

Advice

As commissioners and advisory delegates wrestle with these sensitive issues, the General Assembly Council advises the 217th General Assembly (2006) to:

1. Empower the Moderators of the 216th and 217th General Assemblies (2004 and 2006) to create a working group of seven members that will:
 - a. Carefully monitor ongoing developments of the situation in the Middle East;
 - b. Intentionally listen to Presbyterians and our Christian, Jewish, and Muslim friends in the Middle East and the United States;
 - c. Develop guidance that honors each of their concerns as the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) considers how to move forward on these sensitive issues; and
 - d. Report its findings to the 218th General Assembly (2008), in conjunction with the General Assembly Council.

We urge the Moderators of the 216th and 217th General Assemblies (2004 and 2006) to ensure that the working group be made up of Presbyterians who are committed both to our continuing accompaniment of Palestinian Christians who seek the end of the occupation and to the deepening of our historic and ever-living relationship with our Jewish and Muslim sisters and brothers. Further, we advise that any guidance or recommendations on next steps from the working group be forwarded directly to the General Assembly Council for its consideration by February 2008. Given that the working group is not tasked with developing policy, any recommendations or comments the members may wish to make regarding policy should be referred to the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy.

2. Refer any overture—including overtures and commissioners’ resolutions not yet received—that may affect the investment policy of the PC(USA) or that calls for boycott of or divestment in a specific company, country or region, to the MRTI committee for their recommendation to a future General Assembly, through the General Assembly Council.

3. Encourage the Board of Pensions, the Presbyterian Foundation, and the MRTI committee to explore new or existing alternative investment possibilities that promote peace and strengthen the economies both in Israel and the occupied territories, and to report their findings to the 218th General Assembly (2008). We give this advice in humility, noting the serious fiduciary responsibility of these two partner agencies and seeking genuine partnership as we explore any possibilities cooperatively.

Rationale

In encouraging the formation of such a task force, we note the following:

- The important work of the MRTI committee is proceeding deliberately. We urge the 217th General Assembly (2006) to acknowledge that the MRTI committee's work cannot and will not result in the selling of any corporate stock until (at least) the deliberation of the 218th General Assembly (2008).
- The political situation in both Israel and Palestine is changing extremely quickly, and we believe it would be helpful to have a group that is tasked with working to follow, interpret, and understand the potential impact of those changes.
- We are convinced that our church would benefit greatly from a serious effort to listen to one another and seek a solid consensus for our actions in the delicate task of peacemaking in this troubled region of the world. The alternative is an "us vs. them" debate that misses the fundamental reality that most Presbyterians care deeply about the issues of peace and justice in Israel and Palestine.

In the end, we are clear that Jesus calls us to just such an effort in peacemaking. In the second chapter of Philippians, we are told that Paul's deepest desire for the church is to "make my joy complete," calling us to "be of one mind, having the same love, being of one accord, and of one mind. Do nothing from selfish ambition or conceit, but in humility regard others as better than yourselves. Let each of you look not to your own interests, but to the interests of others."

It is clear that, somehow, Christ calls us to stand with our Palestinian sisters and brothers—Christian and Muslim—and our Jewish sisters and brothers as each cries out for justice. We can stand with those bold and courageous leaders on both sides of this contentious debate who insist that there is a way to share the land of our forefathers and foremothers in peace and security with one another.

May it be so.

BOP COMMENT ON ITEMS 11-01–11-22; 11-23, 11-24, 11-34, 11-39, and 11-41.

Comment on Items 11-01 through 11-22; 11-23, 11-24, 11-34, 11-39, and 11-41—From the Board of Pensions.

In all its corporate actions, the Board of Pensions strives to support the mission of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), including the social witness policies approved by the General Assembly. Sometimes there is apparent conflict between the social witness desires of the denomination and our legal duties to members of the Benefits Plan. It is clear that our mutually approved long-term policies and procedures have worked well to avoid conflict and we urge the General Assembly to take no actions that would displace these very helpful policies and procedures.

The General Assembly has delegated oversight responsibility for Benefits Plan and Assistance Plan moneys to the Board of Pensions. This responsibility makes the Board of Pensions a "fiduciary," a status that carries both certain duties and the potential for certain liabilities if carried out improperly. This delegation and separation of oversight duties is intended to relieve the General Assembly from both fiduciary duties and liabilities. The Board of Pensions, acting through its board of directors, chooses the actual investment managers and determines how the money is allocated among various classes of securities to achieve the long-term investment objectives required of the Plans. The Board of Pensions does not select specific investments (either to buy or to sell): security selection is the job of the investment managers themselves.

As indicated below, managers of individually managed portfolios are made aware of our social witness policy and are required to justify to the Board of Pensions any deviation from that policy.

These are all important separations of roles and responsibilities that are in the best interests of commissioners, of the denomination, of the Benefits Plan, and of Plan members.

For these reasons, the General Assembly does not direct the Board of Pensions to divest the portfolio of an investment held by the Benefits Plan and does not direct that the Board of Pensions affirmatively invest in any specific security.

The General Assembly does, however, determine the social witness policies of the church, including how they pertain to investments of money held by or under the aegis of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). It does advise the Board of Pensions (and the Foundation) and it does urge us to take certain actions from time to time. We in turn are mindful of the General Assembly's wishes.

To confuse this important definition of roles and responsibilities would risk potential liability to the General Assembly, and possibly incur more investment risk for the Pension Trust and other benefits and assistance assets than would otherwise be desirable. We cannot, and the General Assembly would not have us avoid or compromise our legal duties and threaten the security of the Benefits Plan and Assistance Program.

There are two specific duties for us to consider when it comes to the question of divestment.

First, the Board of Pensions has a "duty of loyalty" to act in the sole and exclusive interests of the Benefits Plan members. That means our decisions must be in the interests of that group taken as a whole, not in the interests of the Board of Pensions, and not in the interests of some other group or some special part of the church. The Board of Pensions has established procedures that it believes are completely faithful to this obligation.

Second, the Board of Pensions has a "duty of care" to see to it that sufficient funds are available to keep the promises made to Plan members, both current and future. Selling or buying securities based on social witness principles alone could easily translate into taking on too much or too little risk at any given point in time. The board of directors has adopted detailed investment policies governing the allocation of the Plan's investments in various asset classes and the selection of managers for those asset classes. This allocation is the primary way we manage investment risk. The investment managers are responsible for the selection of individual investment holdings. We are responsible for selecting the investment managers, and this selection process is another of our risk management tools, and is an equally important separation of duties.

The result is that the Board of Pensions must make its own, independent judgments based on its legal duties of loyalty and care.

Having said that, it is our often-expressed objective to support the declared social witness policies of the denomination as best we can. Fortunately, specific policies on divestment adopted by the General Assembly in 1984 have served our mutual interests well, have promoted a united voice, and have avoided conflicts within the denomination.

Divestment

The Board of Pensions participates in the church's Mission Responsibility Through Investment (MRTI) activities. Under the 1984 policies of the General Assembly, the denomination's Committee on Mission Responsibility Through Investment recommends that a company be added to the General Assembly's divestment list after several steps. Three of those steps include

1. undertaking a thorough and comprehensive research of the company's involvement in an objectionable practice,
2. engaging the company in constructive dialogue about those practices through meetings and submission of shareholder resolutions; and
3. it is determined that no lesser alternative to divestment is available.

Ultimately the General Assembly determines, upon receiving such a recommendation, what is the effective social witness action for the church and its entities to undertake (including divestment or affirmative investment).

The General Assembly has long recognized that the divestment practice of the Board of Pensions is one of a "prohibition of ownership" rather than one of an "immediate sale" of securities listed for divestment.

When and if a security is added to the divestment list (there are currently 390 securities on the list), the Board of Pensions has adopted a formal process to ensure that the failure to own the security will not harm the financial soundness of the Plan.

At this point, there are two levels of decision because of the differing responsibilities and accountabilities of the decision-makers.

The first decision is for an investment manager. The investment manager must decide whether not owning a divestment list security will harm their portfolio results. If it decides that failure to own will not harm results, there is no issue as to portfolio performance, and the security is not held. Since, as a general rule our investment policies provide for observance of the General Assembly's divestment policies, if the manager decides that failure to own will harm portfolio performance, it must ask us and provide justification for an exception.

The second decision now becomes one for the Board of Pensions. It is inappropriate for us to fail to act. In other words, we are obligated to independently decide whether or not to initiate divestment, or to grant an exception.

In the event of a request for exception, if the investment committee determines that the request is reasonable and appropriate in the context of our duty of care, it may grant the exception. Currently, there is only one security held by the Board of Pensions under an approved exception request.

For example,

Stock A is placed on the divestment list for the first time. Manager X owns Stock A. When the divestment list is updated, we advise Manager X that Stock A may be held as a part of their normal investment program until such time as the security becomes part of the manager's sell discipline for all clients. Any subsequent purchase requires an exception from the Board of Pensions.

If a manager does not own the stock, any purchase requires an exception.

From time to time, securities are removed from the divestment list, and managers are so advised.

Affirmative Investment

The duties of care and loyalty apply equally as limitations on the purchase of securities. In addition, the separation of roles and responsibilities between the Board of Pensions and our investment managers is breached when we begin telling our investment managers to actively purchase specific securities. At that point we become portfolio managers ourselves, and to date that is not a responsibility we have undertaken because it would impose additional regulatory burdens and administrative expenses on the Plan that we have chosen to avoid.

Shareholder Resolutions and Proxy Voting

We do hold a small portfolio of securities outside the Benefits Plan specifically at the request of the Committee on Mission Responsibility Through Investment in order that the church can use these shares to propose shareholder resolutions from time to time. These holdings are at minimum levels required to submit shareholder resolutions.

It is also appropriate to note that the Board of Pensions does vote all shares held by or through us in accordance with the actions of the Committee on Mission Responsibility Through Investment.

The Board of Pensions respectfully requests that the commissioners take this comment into account when considering the several overtures on divestment or affirmative investment proposed to the 217th General Assembly (2006). The processes in place have served us well for more than twenty years, and will continue to serve us well going forward.

Item 11-02

[The assembly answered Item 11-02 by the action taken on Item 11-01. See pp. 43, 44.]

On Divestment In Multinational Companies Doing Business in Israel—From the Presbytery of the James.

The Presbytery of the James respectfully overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to approve the following:

1. The 217th General Assembly (2006) reaffirms the 216th General Assembly (2004) for its concern for "a just resolution of the conflict between Israel and the Palestinians," its support of inspired initiatives that could advance the prospects of peace in the Middle East, and for moving the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to think deeply and speak publicly about what makes for peace. While the desire for peace is reaffirmed, some of the means for achieving peace advocated by the 216th General Assembly (2004) were not appropriate and, in light of changing circumstances, should not be implemented. They should be rescinded or, in some cases, significantly modified to advance more effectively and fairly the cause of peace.

2. The 217th General Assembly (2006) believes that Recommendation 7 of the alternate resolution that was approved in response to Item 12-01 by the 216th General Assembly (2004) (see Minutes, 2004, Part I, pp. 64–66) undermines the cause of peace because advocacy of phased selective divestment is punitive rather than redemptive, particularly in light of the rapidly changing circumstances in Israel. Accordingly, Recommendation 7 of the alternate resolution approved in response to Item 12-01 is hereby repealed, rescinded, and declared null and void.

3. The 217th General Assembly (2006) (a) acknowledges the enormous historical and political complexity and challenges of peacemaking between Israel and the Palestinians; (b) recognizes and celebrates the fact that great strides towards peace have been made by the elected leaders of Israel and of the Palestinian Authority; (c) wishes to encourage all sides in this conflict to work together for peace and justice; and (d) seeks to nurture and support the peace process in a way that expresses confidence and concern for Israeli interests as well as Palestinian interests. Accordingly, the 217th General Assembly seeks to avoid advocating particular and specific solutions and instead advocates the rebuilding of trust and confidence on both sides.

4. The 217th General Assembly (2006) urges governing bodies, congregations, and other groups of Presbyterians to follow the example of the Theological Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity and other groups that, in the face of difficult issues, have engaged in processes of intensive discernment through worship, community-building, study, and collaborative work.

Rationale

The Presbytery of the James subscribes to the goal of peacemaking reflected in the actions of the 216th General Assembly (2004), but cannot accept or support the means advocated by Recommendation 7 of the alternate resolution that was approved in response to Item 12-01. We call on the great church of Jesus Christ to obey St. Paul’s exhortation “Let us then pursue what makes for peace and for mutual upbuilding” (Rom. 14:19). The plan of phased selective divestment fails to make for peace and mutual upbuilding. It fails to grapple fairly with historical complexity, is overbroad, produces pernicious side effects and unintended consequences, and functions more punitively than redemptively. While the goal of peace for Israel and Palestinian Authority is laudable, the means as exhibited by Recommendation 7 are one-sided, simplistic, and punitive.

As a matter of conscience, some of the congregations comprising the Presbytery of the James cannot support divestment as an economic sanction against American companies legally doing business in Israel and/or areas under the Palestinian Authority. The underlying purpose of divestment is to inflict economic hardship and harm on companies doing business in Israel or areas under the Palestinian Authority. There are some cases where such economic sanctions can be justified. In the present situation, however, where there is justice and injustice on both sides, it is unjustified and inappropriate.

The price of phased selective divestment falls disproportionately on one party to this conflict, namely Israel. Such remedies do not make for peace. The use of economic sanctions as a weapon in peacemaking puts the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in the position of a judge passing judgment and imposing a sentence rather than a partner for peace. To some rank and file members of the church, it appears arrogant, condescending, and punitive. Such actions, however well intentioned, do not make for peace.

Finally, the Presbytery of the James deeply regrets the fact that Recommendation 7 of the alternate resolution to Item 12-01, which was approved by the 216th General Assembly (2004), was not widely circulated or discussed in the larger church in advance of its approval. The issue of divestment of companies engaged in commerce in Israel was not widely discussed prior to the 216th General Assembly (2004) and caught many congregants off guard after they first read about it in The Wall Street Journal. It is the belief of some of the congregations within the Presbytery of the James that peacemaking resolutions presented at General Assemblies should “speak to” the church, not “speak on behalf” of the church, and certainly not to “take action on behalf” of the church without first building consensus. Had this peacemaking initiative been distributed before the 216th General Assembly (2004), Presbyterians could have discussed the issues among ourselves and with our ecumenical partners and Jewish friends in an atmosphere of trust and inquiry rather than after-the-fact in a defensive and highly charged atmosphere of suspicion and broken trust. The consequence of approving the divestment action without building consensus has been to seriously damage trust in the decision-making process and the connectional nature of the Presbyterian system of governance.

On Being Fair and Just on Issues Regarding Divestment and Investment—From the Presbytery of Florida.

The Presbytery of Florida overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to be fair, evenhanded, and just in their language and actions in decisions regarding divestment and investment.

Rationale

We affirm the spirit and sentiment of the 216th General Assembly (2004) regarding the Middle East.

We believe the perception within the church and in the world is that the actions of the 216th General Assembly (2004) were biased against Israel.

We believe the General Assembly should go out of its way to appear fair and evenhanded.

The situation in the Middle East is fluid and changing daily and efforts toward peace are being made by both Palestinians and the government of Israel.

On Issues Affecting Israelis and Palestinians, and the 216th General Assembly Divestment Action—From the Presbytery of New Covenant.

The Presbytery of New Covenant overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to approve the following resolution and communicate its results as indicated herein:

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)

1. Reaffirms its long-standing work for peace, security, dignity, and constructive cooperation among the nations, peoples, and faiths in the Middle East.
2. Reaffirms the long-standing principle that discipline and order should work always for building up and restoring constructive relationships of all of God's peoples rather than approaches that would tear down or diminish them.
3. Recognizes and expresses deep concerns for Palestinian Christians, Palestinian Muslims, Jews, and other Israeli citizens and visitors who have been so deeply harmed by the Israeli-Palestinian conflict.
4. Reaffirms the right of the State of Israel to exist; the right of the Palestinian people to self-determination and establishment of a separate and sovereign state; and the right for both Israeli and Palestinian peoples to live in security and peace, to have economic viability, and to be afforded the dignity due all God's people.
5. Reaffirms its condemnation of terrorism and any acts of destruction against innocent people—be they Israeli or Palestinian; be they Muslim, Jewish, Christian, or people of other faiths.
6. Acknowledges the recent progress toward peace and endorses the balanced approach to a lasting peace proposed by the Sharm el Sheikh Fact Finding Committee in The Mitchell Report (May 4, 2001). (See Item B.3. in "Rationale" below.)
7. Ceases those activities authorized by the alternate resolution to Item 12-01 of the 216th General Assembly (2004) that dealt with the issues of divestment as indicated below:
 7. Refers to Mission Responsibility Through Investment Committee (MRTI) with instructions to initiate a process of phased selective divestment in multinational corporations operating in Israel, in accordance to General Assembly policy on social investing, and to make appropriate recommendations to the General Assembly Council for action. (Minutes, 2004, Part I, p. 66)
8. Instructs the Mission Responsibility Through Investment Committee and the General Assembly Council to cease consideration of divestment that grew out of the 2004 action on the alternate resolution to Item 12-01, Recommendation 7; to focus its considerations on Palestinian and Israeli reinvestment for a positive, helpful, and peaceful future rather than punitive acts of divestment; and to consider criteria for future investments weighted toward those companies that are planning and/or carrying out economic benefits in both Israel and the Palestinian Territories through such items as (1) increasing job opportunities, (2) increasing social and health-care infrastructures, and/or (3) involving collaborative and cooperative ventures between currently or previously conflicted peoples.
9. Instructs the Stated Clerk to communicate Recommendations 1. through 8. above to the United States' president, vice president, secretary of state, and members of Congress; to Israeli and Palestinian leaders in the Middle East; to the membership of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.); to leadership of Christian, Jewish, and Muslim faith bodies and denominations in the United States and the Middle East with whom we are in communication.

Rationale

A. Basic Principles, Assumptions, and Related Actions

As Presbyterians, we have a long history of supporting the safety, security, and peaceful resolution to the complex issues that have divided peoples of the Middle East in general and the Israeli and Palestinian peoples in particular. We reaffirm that history and the following basic assumptions:

1. We have had a long-standing involvement in working for peace, security, dignity, and constructive cooperation among the nations, peoples, and faiths in the Middle East.
2. In our own governance we affirm a long-standing principle that discipline and order should always be used for building up and restoring constructive relationships of God's people rather than working in ways that would tear down or diminish them. (See Book of Order, D-1.0000 through D-1.0103.)
3. We have affirmed the rights of both Israeli and Palestinian peoples to exist, to live in security and peace, to have economic viability, and to be afforded the dignity due to all God's peoples—Jews, Muslims, and Christians. We agree with the Presbytery of Mississippi's statement that it "subscribes to the goal of peacemaking reflected in the actions of the 216th General Assembly (2004), but cannot accept or support some of the means advocated by the General Assembly. We call on the great church of Jesus Christ to obey St. Paul's exhortation, "Let us then pursue what makes for peace and for mutual upbuilding" (Rom. 14:19).
4. We have condemned terrorism and any acts of destruction against innocent people—be they Israeli or Palestinian; and be they Muslim, Jewish, Christian, or people of other faiths. We agree with the November 22, 2004, statement of the Fourth Presbyterian Church of Chicago's Session as follows: "We unequivocally condemn both death and other harm perpetrated against innocent Israeli citizens by Palestinian terrorist organizations and the death and other harm perpetrated against innocent Palestinian citizens by Israeli action."
5. We have supported the current Israeli-Palestinian peace process and urged all governments and parties to continue their progress toward a state of lasting security, peace, and stability.

Those are significant principles and actions of our Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)—ones that are in keeping with the basic tenets of our Christian faith. We affirm these principles with Recommendations 1 through 9 of the overture.

B. Reforming Past Actions

We believe that the intent of the 2004 alternate resolution to Item 12-01 was to promote peace and justice in the Middle East. However, in light of the subsequent, widespread response from Presbyterian and Jewish communities and in light of the current progress of Israel and Palestinians toward pursuing the roadmap to peace, we find that the 2004 alternate resolution to Item 12-01 needs to be readdressed and reformed for the following reasons.

1. During the 216th General Assembly (2004), the overture and alternate resolution to Item 12-01 was based on limited information with insufficient consideration of all the complexities and injustices from all sides of the conflict. It also served to intensify finger-pointing and more division rather than to promote reconciliation.
2. The approval of the alternate resolution to Item 12-01 (especially Recommendation 7, which called for a divestiture process that was focused solely on Israel) engendered significant, widespread, negative response after enactment within both our own Presbyterian denomination and Jewish communities. It resulted in our church's being viewed as anti-Semitic by a wide range of Jewish voices and others with whom we previously had warm and cordial relationships.
3. Divestment does not help the plight of Palestinians affected by the conflict. And economic sanctions in Israel will also negatively affect the lives of Palestinians. The Mitchell Report of the 2001 Sharm el Sheikh Fact Finding Committee reviews the history of events that led to renewed violence in 2000, documents the failure of both parties to limit escalation of violence, and makes recommendations about how to proceed. (For the full seventeen-page report, see the U. S. State Department web site at www.state.gov/p/nea/rls/rpt/3060.htm) The report states, "The Government of Israel and the Palestinian Authority must act swiftly and decisively to halt the violence. Their immediate objectives then should be to rebuild confidence and resume negotiations." It does not point the finger at either party, but calls for both parties to take steps to "END THE VIOLENCE," "REBUILD CONFIDENCE," and "RESUME NEGOTIATIONS."

Since the change in leadership of the Palestinian Authority, these steps have begun in earnest. The Mitchell Report affirms that, "Given the high level of hostility and mistrust, the timing and sequence of these steps are obviously crucial. This can be decided only by the parties." Only restoration of trust, an end to violence, and sincere negotiation will help the Palestinians.

4. We support the significant guiding principle of the Sharm el Sheikh Fact Finding Committee that they "should strive to steer clear of any step that will intensify mutual blame and finger pointing between the parties" and believe the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) should endorse this principle in dealing with the delicate Middle East conflict. We must not become a divisive force, but rather a healing force. Divestment, if carried out, could be counterproductive in the State of Israel's current withdrawal from Palestinian territories as well as counterproductive to the ongoing peace process. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) does not want to engender enmity and resistance on the part of Israel or on the part of the Palestinians in their path to peace.

5. In a complex and multilayered global economy in which interlocking companies constantly take over other companies and in which large corporations have subsidiaries all over the world, it is both naïve and uninformed to imagine that the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) never unintentionally profits from or engages in corporate activities we would call sin. We own shares in companies that engage in salacious advertising and that promote sex and violence on American television. To expect the Israeli government or targeted corporations to be above reproach while neither our church nor our nation is above reproach is both hypocritical and un-Christian.

6. The General Assembly's approach in Recommendation 7 of the 2004 alternate resolution to Item 12-01 is clearly outside our long-standing Presbyterian principle that discipline and order should work always for building up and restoring constructive relationships of all of God's peoples rather than approaches that would tear down or diminish them.

For all these reasons, this 2006 overture (1) calls for abandoning the 2004 General Assembly action that ordered the divestment study and process related to the Israeli-Palestinian issues, and (2) instructs the Mission Responsibility Through Investment Committee and the General Assembly Council to cease consideration of divestment that grew out of the 2004 alternate resolution to Item 12-01, Recommendation 7.

C. Supporting Long-Term Solutions

We strongly believe that we as American Christians have a responsibility to support long-term peaceful solutions to the issues that confront all peoples and nations of the Middle East as well as our world as a whole. We also believe that those responsibilities need to be acted out in ways that are consistent with building up rather than tearing down. That translates into using our resources of influence, expertise, time, energy and money in ways that will be positively productive (not punishing), investing (not divesting) for the peaceful future of both Israelis and Palestinians, and helping all affected move toward a future with peace, security, and dignity for all.

Helpful criteria for future investments could include weighted investment considerations for those companies that are planning and/or carrying out ventures in both Israel and the Palestinian Territories that would provide economic benefits such as (1) increased job opportunities, (2) increased social and health-care infrastructures, (3) rebuilt homes, farms and businesses, and/or (4) collaborative and cooperative ventures between currently or previously conflicted peoples.

This 2006 overture will hopefully enable use of our financial resources more in keeping with the basic practices of our faith.

And in order for all the actions of the 2006 overture to have an impact beyond our own investment activities, they need to be communicated to all parties indicated in Recommendation 9 of this overture.

To these ends we pledge our support and pray the larger church's action.

On Suspension of Divestment Resolution—From the Presbytery of Eastern Virginia.

The Presbytery of Eastern Virginia respectfully overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to propose that the resolution from the 216th General Assembly (2004) regarding phased, selective divestment of stocks be suspended.

Rationale

It is our prayer that our denomination will seek balanced, positive overtures for peace in the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, instead of directing negative actions at only one of the involved parties.

On Divestment and Israel—From the Presbytery of San Francisco.

The Presbytery of San Francisco overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the PC(USA) to take the following actions:

1. Reaffirm the 216th General Assembly (2004) decision to initiate a process of phased, selective divestment of multinational corporations that contribute to the construction of the separation barrier, profit from the Israeli occupation of the West Bank, or Palestinian violence. Request divestment from selected corporations where, according to Mission Responsibility Through Investment (MRTI), dialogue and shareholder actions have not produced satisfactory results.

Rationale

The occupation of the West Bank continues unabated, taking more land and isolating Palestinians from one another and their livelihood, undercutting the possibility of a viable economy. Action by the 217th General Assembly (2006) is required to carry forward the process initiated by the 216th General Assembly (2004).

2. Direct the MRTI to recommend opportunities for investment in joint Palestinian-Israeli ventures, including those provided by organizations such as Oikocredit, which benefit both peoples.

Rationale

This action demonstrates the historic commitment of the PC(USA) to the well-being of both Israel and Palestine, and expresses our hope for mutual cooperation and a just solution to the conflict between the two peoples.

3. Direct the Presbyterian Peacemaking Program to offer study tours for members and congregations of the PC(USA), as well as interfaith groups, that incorporate visits and interaction with both Israelis and Palestinians, especially meeting with those working toward peace and reconciliation.

Rationale

Many tours to the Holy Land visit only Israel or only Palestine and provide a one-sided version of the conflict between these two peoples. This overture seeks to correct this imbalance by providing study tours to see and hear all sides of the story.

On Actively Fostering Peace, Reconciliation, and Community Development Between Israelis and Palestinians—From the Presbytery of New York City.

The Presbytery of New York City overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to urge the Committee on Mission Responsibility Through Investment, the Worldwide Ministries Division, the Presbyterian Peacemaking Program, the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy, and all other appropriate bodies within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), to actively foster peace, reconciliation, and community development between Israelis and Palestinians. This should involve the intentional use of the funds of the church in two ways to support social, economic, and cultural integration of their communities: first, to explore ways to partner with nongovernmental organizations, and to support church-related mission efforts, that seek to promote the peaceful and productive living together of Jewish, Christian, and Muslim Israelis and Palestinians; and, second, to explore ways to invest in for-profit enterprises that actively engender peaceful cooperation by Israelis and Palestinians in the Middle East through such enterprises' own hiring practices, specific projects, and specific investments.

[Original Financial Implication: (2006) $0; (2007) $6,000; (2008) $0 (Mission—Unrestricted)] [Assembly Action: (2006) $0; (2007) $0; (2008) $0]

Rationale

“Blessed are the peacemakers” (Matt. 5:9).

This overture advances the goal of peace between Israelis and Palestinians expressed by many prior General Assemblies. Since at least 1948, Presbyterians have sought peace in the Middle East through a “return to the principle of faithful devotion to the welfare, needs, and rights of both the Jewish and Arab peoples” (160th General Assembly (1948)).¹ Consistent with this plea, prior General Assemblies have approved numerous resolutions unequivocally affirming Israel’s right to exist within secure borders (1969, 1974, 1977, 1983, 1989),² and seeking peace and reconciliation between Israelis and Palestinians, e.g., Resolution on Urging Sustainable Peace Between Israelis and Palestinians, 214th General Assembly (2002).³

This overture advances the goal of mutual respect between and among Christians (and particularly Presbyterians) and our Jewish and Muslim brothers and sisters. The means for the church to accomplish the ends of peace and reconciliation between Israelis and Palestinians are many. In addition, as thoughtful documents such as the 1987 position paper adopted for study and reflection by the 199th General Assembly (1987) on “Towards a Theological Understanding of the Relationship Between Christians and Jews,” and the actions on Islamic study taken by the 198th and 199th General Assemblies in 1986 and 1987 indicate, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is committed to continuing and deepening relationships with Jews and Muslims. In the past two years, however, the discussion of the issue of peace and reconciliation between Israelis and Palestinians, and the related issue of the relation of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) with Judaism in particular, has been focused heavily on whether and how the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) should sell certain investments as a means to accomplish these ends. The General Assembly action, “Resolution on Israel and Palestine: Initiating Divestment and Ending Occupation,” 216th General Assembly (2004),⁴ regardless of its merits, has directed more attention within the church to resolving conflicts between Israelis and Palestinians in the Middle East. However, both the content of the resolution and the process by which it was approved caused genuine distress in the Jewish community in the United States and damaged relationships between Jews and Presbyterians. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is and must continue to be committed to healing these relationships, whether it continues to pursue a policy of divestment or not.

This overture does not depend on or preclude other choices to accomplish the ends of peace and reconciliation in the world. Whatever the conscience of any member or body of the church with respect to support for or opposition to divestment as a peacemaking strategy, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is also committed to the consideration of other means to peace through investment. For example, the 183rd General Assembly (1971) of the United Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A. saw, in the command of the Confession of 1967 that the church “commend to the nations as practical policies the search for cooperation and peace,” a need to implement this truth through Corporate and Social Responsibility Investment Policy Guidelines.⁵ Five years later, the 116th General Assembly (1976) of the Presbyterian Church in the U.S. approved Investment Policy Guidelines for the General Assembly Mission Board of the Presbyterian Church in the United States.⁶ Those guidelines provided that the church should consider “[c]ontributions toward peace and humanitarian concerns rather than excessive reliance on military solutions to human, social, or economic problems at home and abroad.”⁷ As to investor actions, those guidelines also listed as the first action for consideration the decision of “[i]nvesting or declining to invest.”⁸ While the 197th General Assembly (1985) adopted a plan of “[p]hased, selective divestment” as a particular process for addressing issues raised by the 196th General Assembly (1984) in relation to existing holdings in corporations doing business in South Africa,⁹ the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has never rejected the primacy of initial investment decisions as a means of social responsibility and peacemaking.

This overture does not depend on or preclude other choices that may be made to accomplish the ends of peace and reconciliation between Israelis and Palestinians. In addition to its general position on investment policy actions, from time to time the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has also been specific about investment and funding for peace between Israelis and Palestinians in ways other than divestment. For example, the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy recommended to the 209th General Assembly (1997), with respect to issues of peace in the Middle East, that “the United States government, other governments, the United Nations, international development agencies and financial institutions, and private entities, ... cooperate fully in building more productive, sustainable, self-reliant, and socially equitable agricultural systems throughout the Middle East.”¹⁰ Similarly, that committee recommended that “the international community generally ... provide greater technical assistance and financial investment for appropriate water infrastructure in the region.”¹¹ The General Assembly approved these recommendations. Yet while many who support this overture believe that such positive investment offers a better strategy than divestment for using the resources of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to further peace and reconciliation between Israelis and Palestinians (while at the same time rebuilding relationships between the church and Jewish and Muslim communities), this overture is independent of that question.

This overture does not improperly restrict the kinds of investments that may be used to accomplish the ends of peace and reconciliation between Israelis and Palestinians. Consistent with the past actions described above, and with the larger views of the seminal 1974 General Assembly position that “Israel should assure full political rights and the right to effective participation in public life to all Israeli Arabs” and “Arab countries should assure and foster full participation by minority religious, ethnic, and national communities in political, social, and economic life,” (186th General Assembly of the United Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A.(1974)),¹² the current General Assembly should urge positive financial investment and funding in efforts likely to bring Israelis and Palestinians together. This should include not only nongovernmental activity, but investment in for-profit businesses, and recognizes that such investment can be part of a peacemaking process. For example, reports made in 2004 declared that more than 60 percent of all Palestinians are unemployed (e.g., Statement by the Reverend Jennifer Butler, co-chair of the NGO Working Group on Israel/Palestine on behalf of the International Coordinating Network on Palestine (United Nations, Nov. 29, 2004)).¹³ Companies whose hiring policies foster reduction of such unemployment and the integration of Israeli and Palestinian workers—Christian, Muslim, and Jewish—on equal terms should, all other things being equal, be favored for investment over companies with poorer policies or results. The current overture urges such consideration in investment and funding.

This overture does not directly affect the work or budget of a General Assembly entity. Although this overture does not require or forbid any expenditure or change any existing duty of any General Assembly entity, the proponents of this overture would expect to consult on this overture with the Committee on Mission Responsibility Through Investment, the Worldwide Ministries Division, the Presbyterian Peacemaking Program, and the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy.

On Pursuing Our Historic Vision of Peace in the Middle East, and on Suspending for Two Years the Phased, Selective Divestment Process—From the Presbytery of Seattle.

The Presbytery of Seattle respectfully overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to approve the following resolution:

The 217th General Assembly (2006) of the Presbyterian Church (U. S. A.) resolves to do the following:

1. Pursue faithfully and consistently our historic vision of peace and security for all peoples of the Middle East region.
2. Suspend for two years the “phased, selective divestment process” initiated by the 216th General Assembly (2004) in order to build up a relationship with groups among Palestinians and Israelis who are actively working for peace.
3. Encourage congregations and other entities of the PC(USA) to initiate engagement with companies, not-for-profits, nongovernmental organizations (NGOs), and diplomatic efforts that promote a just and lasting peace in the region.
4. Reaffirm the PC(USA) support for a two-state solution to the present conflict, believing that Palestinians have a right to freedom, security, and self-governance within their own state and, further, that such a state must be established within safe and secure borders and be economically viable.
5. Reaffirm the commitment of the PC(USA) to the vitality and well-being of the state of Israel, and maintain Israel’s right to exist as a state and Israel’s right to defend itself against terrorism and acts of violence that threaten its security.
6. Encourage and applaud efforts by individual Presbyterians, congregations, and judicatories of our church to communicate directly and regularly with Jewish, Christian, and Muslim communities, sponsor programs likely to improve relations among Christians, Jews, and Muslims, and invest in the peace of the Middle East.

Rationale

A large majority of Israelis and Palestinians prefer peace with their neighbors, rather than violence and war, and are ready to make hard sacrifices to achieve it. We as Presbyterians who believe in and promote peace ought to offer them encouragement and support.

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has given longstanding support to a just and lasting peace in the Middle East, and we believe that our church can play a positive role in fostering Middle East peace. However, the action taken by the 216th General Assembly (2004) regarding a process of selective divestment in companies doing business with Israel caused considerable division and distrust, both within our church and within the Jewish community, both in the United States and in Israel.

It is wrong to single out Israel by means of that policy, when other states and parties in the region are also guilty of serious human-rights violations that can and must be addressed. This decision distracts the PC(USA) from its historic commitment to a two-state solution to the conflict.

This overture would correct the actions taken in 2004, which have caused so much disruption, moving instead in a positive and productive way toward a just, equitable, and lasting settlement of the problems in the Middle East.

On Justice and Peace in the Middle East—From the Presbytery of Chicago.

The Presbytery of Chicago, having engaged in a seventeen-month intensive study and dialogue process with regard to the actions of the 216th General Assembly (2004), and with reference to Item 12-01, respectfully overture the 217th General Assembly (2006) to commit to the following:

1. To have those financial investments of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), as they pertain to Israel, Gaza, East Jerusalem, and the West Bank, be invested in only peaceful pursuits, and affirm that the customary Committee on Mission Responsibility Through Investments process of our denomination—in conjunction with appropriate reinvestment of funds where necessary—is the proper vehicle for achieving this goal.

2. To encourage the church at all levels (congregations, presbyteries, synods, and General Assembly) to undertake trips with members of the American and Israeli Jewish, American and Palestinian Muslim, and Palestinian Christian communities to Israel, Gaza, East Jerusalem, the West Bank, as well as the broader region, for educational community relations and advocacy purposes.

3. To work through peaceful means with American and Israeli Jewish, American and Palestinian Muslim, and Palestinian Christian communities and their affiliated organizations for an end to all violence and terror against civilians.

4. To work through peaceful means with American and Israeli Jewish, American and Palestinian Muslim, and Palestinian Christian communities and their affiliated organizations to end the occupation of the West Bank and East Jerusalem.

5. To work through peaceful means with American and Israeli Jewish, American and Palestinian Muslim, and Palestinian Christian communities and their affiliated organizations towards the creation of a socially, economically, geographically, and politically viable Palestinian state, alongside an equally viable Israeli state.

Rationale

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) affirms its consistent advocacy for a two-state solution in support of the self-determination of the Israeli and Palestinian peoples, to be expressed through recognized states within the pre-June 1967 borders, living side by side in peace, justice, equality, and reconciliation.

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) recognizes the urgency of the political realities in the Middle East, such that, with each passing day, the possibility of a just and peaceful two-state solution might be lost.

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) acknowledges, in order to achieve such a two-state solution, there is the need for a just resolution to the following: adjudication of the status of Palestinian Jerusalem; conflicting religious claims with regard to the land; equal access to Jerusalem and Bethlehem for Christians, Jews, and Muslims; the final status of Jerusalem.

The destiny of these two peoples—Palestinian and Israeli—are inextricably linked. Ultimately it will be the people of the Middle East who will have to bring justice and peace to their sacred and troubled land. This overture affirms the long-standing desire of Presbyterians to support these two peoples in their efforts to express their own self-determination. At the same time, it recognizes the seriousness of the fact that the current social, political, and economic conditions of these two peoples are not equal.

This overture affirms that Presbyterians want the financial assets of their denomination only invested in peaceful pursuits. It provides that funds identified through the MRTI process as contributing to the suffering of Israelis and Palestinians are to be reinvested in peaceful pursuits within the region that will achieve this important goal.

Presbyterians have long held to the view that persons of good will, with faith in God and earnestness of purpose, may often come to different conclusions in pursuit of the same goals, but that God nevertheless calls us all to work together with respect for one another. As a church, we must pursue these ends with an openness to the working of God's spirit and a sense of humility when considering the alternative visions of others in the fulfillment of justice and peace. At the same time we must maintain our own integrity in finally determining what we believe God is calling us to be and to do.

Acknowledging that there are significant differences about how to best be supportive of justice and peace in the Middle East, this overture provides the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) the best and most strategic opportunities for partnership with American and Israeli Jewish, American and Palestinian Muslim, and Palestinian Christian communities in this endeavor.

This approach can galvanize the largest majority of Presbyterians at all levels of the church for significant advocacy for justice and peace in the Middle East, while sending a clear message to all the people of the Middle East that we desire justice and peace for all of God's family and we wish to apply a single standard of justice to resolve the current political problems of this region.

*On Rescinding the Actions of the 216th General Assembly as They Apply to Divestment of Stock in Caterpillar, Inc.—
From the Presbytery of Great Rivers.*

The Presbytery of Great Rivers overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to do the following:

1. Rescind the actions taken by the 216th General Assembly (2004) as they apply to divestment of stock in Caterpillar Inc.

Rationale

The 216th General Assembly (2004) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) approved a series of resolutions designed to promote “a just resolution of the conflict between Israel and the Palestinians.” Item 12-01 instructed the Mission Responsibility Through Investment (MRTI) Committee of the PC(USA) to “initiate a process of phased, selective divestment in multinational corporations operating in Israel.”

The action of the 216th General Assembly (2004) focused on companies providing the kind of equipment to Israel that does not ultimately affect the outcome of the conflict. The action supporting divestment talks was perceived by many as an attempt to damage corporate reputations. The action has, instead, damaged the reputation of the PC(USA).

The PC(USA) has given longstanding support to a just and lasting peace in the Middle East, and we believe that our church can play a positive role in fostering Middle East peace. Such actions require a fair, objective, and balanced approach to addressing key issues in the dispute. The action by the 216th General Assembly (2004) regarding possible divestment from some companies doing business with Israel fails to meet that test and, in fact, causes considerable division and distrust within the PC(USA) and between the PC(USA) and the Jewish community.

A policy of divestment is punitive in nature. While divestment might, under certain circumstances, be a useful tool for social change, it is wrong to single out Israel as the object of a “divestment” policy when other states and parties in the region are also accused of serious human rights violations that can and must be addressed. To divest from Caterpillar based upon debatable and questionable criteria is a distortion of the truth and reflects an unjust bias. This decision distracts the PC(USA) from our denomination’s historic commitment to a two-state solution to the conflict.

We believe Palestinians have a right to freedom, security, and self-governance within their own state and, further, that such a state must be established within safe and secure borders and be economically viable, consistent with PC(USA) support for a two-state solution to the present conflict.

Consistent with the PC(USA)’s commitment to the vitality and well-being of the state of Israel in awareness that only a strong Israel can be a partner in a lasting peace, we believe in Israel’s right to exist as a state and in Israel’s right to defend itself against terrorism and acts of violence that threaten its security.

The action to instruct MRTI to divest in specific companies for alleged complicity in the struggle between the State of Israel and the Palestinians was beyond an internal administrative or governance issue of the General Assembly and, as such, was taken without sufficient research, debate, or education of the membership of the PC(USA).

2. Recognize Caterpillar for its responsible actions as a global corporate citizen.

Rationale

Caterpillar is a good corporate neighbor, both globally and locally. It has a long-standing commitment of employee adherence to a worldwide code of conduct, reaffirmed over the past thirty years by each incoming chairman. In fact, Caterpillar was one of the first companies to develop a code of conduct and testified before a committee of Congress as to its belief that all employees adhere to an ethical code of behavior. The Better Business Bureau recently recognized Caterpillar as a Torch Award winner for advocating adherence to a strong code of corporate ethics and business practices.

Caterpillar is a member of the Dow Jones Sustainability World Index that recognizes companies for a focus on social responsibility, for sustaining the environment, and for strong financial results. In 2003, Caterpillar became the first engine manufacturer to offer a complete line of 2004 model year clean diesel engines fully compliant and certified by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. The company has developed breakthrough engine technology (known as ACERT ®) that reduces emissions from its products; has set emission reduction targets for its facilities below those set forth in the Kyoto Protocol; and has established a new major business division focusing on expanding remanufacturing, aiding the environment by recycling millions of tons per year of its own and other companies' products.

The company has been a leader in its support for the United Way and has encouraged employees to serve on leadership committees of the national United Way. Most recently, the company announced a dollar-for-dollar match of employee contributions, a move that will increase support from $3 million per year to $6 million per year.

The Caterpillar Foundation has embarked on the largest sustainability partnership in The Nature Conservancy's history ($12 million) that will demonstrate fresh water management practices for major river systems on three continents. The company was an original founder of Tropical Forest Foundation and is involved in a demonstration project on sustainable forestry practices in Asia and South America.

Caterpillar managers take active leadership roles in community, civic, charitable, and nonprofit organizations. For example, Caterpillar CEOs served as chair of the National Salvation Army Advisory Board, chair of the World Methodist Council Achieving the Vision Endowment, chair of Easter Seals Rehabilitation and Family Services Center, and board member of Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. Others have demonstrated leadership in establishing extraordinary giving levels by being founders of the Salvation Army's William Booth Society, the Red Cross' Clara Barton Society, and United Way's Alexis de Tocqueville Society. Senior managers have led Habitat for Humanity projects and business units have built several homes. Hundreds of other employees are leading efforts in countless projects of all kinds on every continent.

Caterpillar products make progress possible—from providing potable water and sanitation facilities in third world villages; to infrastructure required for economic improvement in developing countries; to providing power generation to hospitals in Cuba, China and Iraq; to disaster relief and recovery in southeast Asia and the Gulf coast of the U.S. After the devastating tsunami in Asia and Hurricane Katrina, Caterpillar matched their employees giving to these disasters with 100 percent matching funds. Earthmoving equipment was sent to Asia and Louisiana. Other assistance to the Gulf region included helping to install power modules to power pumps to remove water from the city and to provide power to about 200 homes, increasing shuttles to the Gulf Coast from distribution centers so parts can be delivered sooner, waiving expedited charges for parts delivered to dealers in Mississippi and Louisiana, and donating equipment to help rebuild levees.

For fifty consecutive years, Caterpillar has held a spot on the Fortune 500 list, one of only 71 companies to do so of the nearly 1,900 that have made the list at least once. It provides tens of thousands of jobs, operates responsibly, and manages its businesses in a way that offers its shareholders a solid return on their investment.

3. Instruct the PC(USA) to pursue a peacemaking strategy of proactive engagement and selective investment in companies, not-for-profits, nongovernmental organizations (NGOs), and diplomatic efforts that are likely to promote a just and lasting peace in the region.

Rationale

This positive approach supports the historic pronouncements of the General Assembly with regard to the objective of peace in the region.

On Instructing MRTI with Regard to Divestment, and Affirming Our Desire of Previous Assemblies for a Just Resolution of the Conflict in the Middle East—From the Presbytery of Sierra Blanca.

The Presbytery of Sierra Blanca respectfully overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to approve the following:

The 217th General Assembly (2006) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)

1. Instructs Mission Responsibility Through Investment (MRTI) to cease the process authorized by the alternate resolution to Item 12-01 of the 216th General Assembly (2004) of phased selective divestment in multinational corporations operating in Israel.
2. Instructs MRTI to explore investment opportunities in both Israel and Palestine that might lead to a helpful and constructive contribution that supports the peace process and the promotion of social righteousness.
3. Affirms the expressed desire of previous years' Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) General Assemblies for peace and security for both Israeli and Palestinian people, and for a just resolution of conflict in the Middle East in ways that exhibit the kingdom of Heaven to the world.
4. Directs the Stated Clerk to communicate Recommendations 1. through 3. above to leadership in Israel and Palestine; leadership of Christian, Jewish, and Muslim faith communities in the U.S.A. and Middle East; and membership of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

[Original Financial Implication: (2006) $0; (2007) $6,000; (2008) $0 (Mission—Unrestricted)] [Assembly Action: (2006) $0; (2007) $0; (2008) $0]

Rationale

The great ends of the church are the proclamation of the gospel for the salvation of humankind; the shelter, nurture and spiritual fellowship of the children of God; the maintenance of divine worship; the preservation of the truth; the promotion of social righteousness; the exhibition of the kingdom of Heaven to the world. (Book of Order, G-1.0200)

The action called for by Recommendation 7. of the alternate resolution to Item 12-01 (2004) is punitive rather than redemptive, tears down rather than builds up. In the Great Ends we are called to things that build up as the primary mission of the church.

The 2004 action has served not only to cause division and turmoil within our own membership, but has caused dissension in our interfaith relationships with the Jewish community. It has given the appearance of being partisan politics, which have no place in the Christian pulpit.

Section G-1.0305 of the Book of Order notes that, as Presbyterians, we believe “that there are truths and forms with respect to which men [sic] of good characters and principles may differ. And in all these we think it the duty both of private Christians and societies to exercise forbearance toward each other.”

When disagreement has been so strong among our communion regarding Item 12-01 from 2004, when the complexities of a global economy probably mean none of us can be without some error in our investment decisions, when the decision of the previous assembly meant to lead to peace but may want reconsideration after two years of reflection and debate, “forbearance toward each other” probably means we need to rescind that decision.

One of the principles found in Presbyterian discipline and order is that “The power that Jesus Christ has vested in his Church ... [is] for redeeming, not for punishing. It should be exercised as a dispensation of mercy and not of wrath so that the great ends of the Church may be achieved ..." (Book of Order, D-1.0102). A constructive investment policy more fits that purpose.

On Calling for the Suspension of the Phased, Selected Divestment Process and for a Reevaluation of Investment Strategies in the Middle East—From the Presbytery of the Twin Cities Area.

The Presbytery of the Twin Cities Area overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to direct the General Assembly Council, through its Mission Responsibility Through Investment Committee,

1. to suspend the implementation of the process that may lead to phased, selective divestment of church funds and to reevaluate any divestment in light of new information and changing realities in the Middle East, through a transparent process equitable to both Palestinian and Israeli hopes and concerns; and
2. to expand the Mission Responsibility Through Investment function to include recommending investment as a constructive step in working toward peace and justice.

Rationale

In the annals of history, Jewish people have suffered in unique and unimaginable ways. Since its inception in 1948 the nation of Israel has never been without enemies sworn to its destruction, opposed to its very existence. Any critique of the nation of Israel must always be grounded in this reality, lest it thoughtlessly stir the world's hatred for Jewish people, which history shows is never far beneath the surface.

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has worked and prayed for justice and peace for all the peoples of the Middle East (Jewish, Muslim, and Christian), in particular advocating a two-state solution for Israel and Palestine in which both would enjoy viable economies and secure borders. However, we do not see evidence that the 216th General Assembly (2004), while appropriately affirming the principles of Mission Responsibility Through Investment, gave adequate attention to the concerns and voice of Jewish communities, either American or Israeli, or took into account Israel's need for security in the absence of peace agreements.

Furthermore, political realities in the Gaza Strip and West Bank have changed significantly since the action of the 216th General Assembly (2004).

On Working to Resolve the Israeli-Palestinian Conflict—From the Presbytery of New Brunswick.

On (a) the acknowledgement and commendation of inter-community peacemakers working to resolve the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, (b) the approval of specific contribution and investment actions by the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) as a complement to the corporate engagement process approved by the 216th General Assembly (2004), and (c) related actions as described below, the Presbytery of New Brunswick overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to do the following:

1. Reaffirm the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)’s long-standing support of actions that would lead to peace for Israelis and justice for Palestinians.
2. Acknowledge and commend the intercommunity peacemakers in both the Jewish and Palestinian communities, including the members of the Parents Circle—Families Forum, the residents of Neve Shalom/Wahat al-Salam (“The Oasis of Peace”) near Jerusalem, and Father Elias Chacour, the founder of Mar Elias Educational Institutions in Ibillin.
3. Acknowledge and commend the Reverend Marthame Sanders and Elizabeth Sanders for their Presbyterian mission service to the Christian community in Zababdeh on the West Bank from August 2000 to December 2003.
4. Ensure an ongoing Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)-endorsed mission presence in the West Bank, Gaza, and East Jerusalem that would support existing indigenous Christian communities.
5. Approve target annual financial contributions of at least $5,000 over the next two years to the Parents Circle—Families Forum, with such contributions coming, in whole or in part, from either the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) or its member synods, presbyteries, and congregations.
6. Approve target annual financial contributions of at least $25,000 over the next two years to Neve Shalom/Wahat al-Salam (“The Oasis of Peace”) with such contributions coming, in whole or in part, from either the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) or its member synods, presbyteries, and congregations.
7. Approve target annual financial contributions of at least $250,000 over the next two years to Mar Elias Educational Institutions with such contributions coming, in whole or in part, from either the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) or its member synods, presbyteries, and congregations.

8. Approve target annual investments of at least $100,000 over the next two years in microcredit development programs in the West Bank, Gaza, and East Jerusalem, as approved by the Mission Responsibility Through Investment Committee, from either the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) or its member synods, presbyteries, and/or congregations.

[The “target” contribution and investment references herein represent the goals of this overture but do not imply a formal or binding commitment on the part of the donating parties.]

9. Approve long-term investments from the investment funds of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) of at least $2,500,000 (or that amount withdrawn from companies under the divestment process, whichever is greater) in international, Israeli, and/or Palestinian companies that are engaged in economic activities supporting peace in the region as determined by the Mission Responsibility Through Investment Committee.

10. Encourage member synods, presbyteries, and congregations of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to participate in the Partner Program of Churches for Middle East Peace (CMEP).

Rationale

The Israeli-Palestinian peace process is in a pivotal but easily misinterpreted stage.

While some events reported by the news media can appear to be relatively positive, it is important to remember that, at the same time, actions not supportive of the peace process are continuing.

These actions can only be mitigated by prayer and ongoing strategic actions on the part of the peacemakers, including, prayerfully, the Presbyterian Church (USA). As Jesus has taught us, “Blessed are the peacemakers, for they will be called children of God” (Matt. 5:9, NRSV).

In addition to (1) maintaining the world’s focus on the Israeli-Palestinian issue, (2) encouraging constructive debate and policies, and (3) motivating both corporations and governmental entities to take the difficult steps toward a real peace, the Presbyterian responsibility includes the need to support the peacemakers in the region.

The Families Forum (www.theparentscircle.com) is the operational apparatus of the Parents’ Circle organization [based in Ramat-Efal and East Jerusalem]. Members of the Forum include hundreds of Israeli and Palestinian bereaved families who have lost, as a result of the Israeli-Arab conflict, a first-degree family member and accepted the principles and objectives of the Forum. The Families Forum acts to prevent further bereavement that is threatening the Israeli society and the peoples in the region as a result of the absence of peace. The Forum members believe in putting an end to occupation; termination of hostility and in achieving a political settlement agreed upon by all sides by means of reconciliation and communication between the two peoples and through mutual consideration and respect of each others’ national and legitimate aspirations. The Forum members act to influence, through various means, the public and policy makers to prefer the way of peace to that of war; to adopt moves towards mutual reconciliation; to deepen education to democracy and to internalize the awareness against the use of bereavement to deepen hostility between peoples.⁽ⁱ⁾

Donations to this group from Presbyterian institutional sources in 2005 were under $1,000.

Founded in 1978 and located midway between Tel Aviv and Jerusalem, Neve Shalom/Wahat al-Salam (“The Oasis of Peace”) (www.oasisofpeace.org) is a community of 50 families, half Palestinian and half Jewish, all with Israeli citizenship. Democratically governed by an elected secretary general and secretariat (mayor & city council), the village’s mission is to demonstrate that Jews and Palestinians can live together as equals. During even the most difficult times in Israel, the residents of the village are committed to this ideal. Through their various departments and educational projects, they reach out to the surrounding communities, involving all those who want to participate in lectures, workshops, and classes that further the work of peace among Palestinians and Jews.⁽ⁱⁱ⁾

Donations to this group from Presbyterian institutional sources in 2005 totaled approximately $1,800.

The Mar Elias Educational Institutions (MEEI)(www.meei.org) is a cluster of educational institutions that was founded by Father Elias Chacour in the village of Ibillin as a way “to create opportunities for vocational training, build competent leadership in the Arab community, and foster greater understanding of issues related to Christians, Muslims, Jews and the Druze living together in peace in the Holy Land.”⁽ⁱⁱⁱ⁾ Presbyterians were instrumental in founding Pilgrims of Ibillin (www.pilgrimsofibilin.org), a U.S.-based support organization for MEEI. In addition, two mission volunteers from Nassau Presbyterian Church in Princeton, New Jersey, currently are serving at the MEEI campus. Donations to MEEI from Presbyterian institutional sources in 2005 totaled approximately $150,000.

There is also a Presbyterian responsibility to respond to the tremendous economic investment needs in the region, especially in the Palestinian community. Both micro-credit and corporate investments would be appropriate actions in this context. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is already a significant denominational investor in such micro-credit programs in other parts of the world via Oikocredit, an international Christian credit organization that was founded in 1975 by the World Council of Churches.

In turn, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has long promoted constructive policy recommendations dealing with the Israeli-Palestinian conflict through its support of Churches for Middle East Peace (www.cmep.org), a Washington, DC, based coalition of twenty-one public policy offices of national churches and agencies which works to share with public officials the common policy perspectives and long Middle East experience of its member bodies. The intent of the CMEP Partner Program is “to build direct relationships with key Christian organizations and congregations nationwide to strengthen [its] ecumenical voice and advocacy work.”^(iv)

Finally, an action taken by the 216th General Assembly (2004) (the alternate resolution to Item 12-01) has attracted criticism, some of it still based on misunderstandings or misinterpretations of what the original resolution said.

When the concern within the American Jewish community over this action is well and accurately articulated, there is deep compassion in Presbyterian hearts. But, too often, Presbyterians have been confronted with the argument that any criticism of the Israeli government is, on its face, anti-Semitic. We reject that argument, just as we reject the argument that criticism of the United States government is unpatriotic or, for that matter, anti-Christian.

Darrell L. Guder, the author of Patterns of Missional Faithfulness, talks about the risks that a “contrast” religious community sometimes needs to take in this world to be faithful to the Gospel and to the teachings of Jesus. Sometimes these risks involve disagreements with friends from other faith communities. Sometimes these risks mean putting our commitment to peace and justice ahead of the discomfort we may feel in discussing difficult issues with people we love and respect.

The Presbyterian voice, indeed, is being heard in the Israeli-Palestinian debate. Let us continue to take actions that will help lead to a resolution of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, let us complement the process initiated by the 216th General Assembly (2004) with constructive contributions and investments in the region, let us continue to discuss our motives and hopes with our interfaith friends, and let us always be faithful to our Christian commitment to peace and justice.

On Peace in the Middle East—From the Presbytery of Baltimore.

The Presbytery of Baltimore respectfully overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to do the following:

1. Pursue faithfully and consistently its historic vision of peace and security for all the peoples in the Middle East.
2. Reaffirm the PC(USA) support for a two-state solution to the present conflict.
3. Rescind Recommendation 7 of the Resolution Urging Peace Between Israel and Palestine (Minutes, 2004, Part I, pp. 64–66); and refer the 2004 Resolution (without Recommendation 7) to the Mission Responsibility Through Investment Committee (MRTI); direct that MRTI review Presbyterian investments in multinational corporations doing business in the Middle East to determine whether their actions are antithetical to the stated aim of the resolution to achieve a “just resolution of the conflict between Israel and the Palestinians”; and direct MRTI, where appropriate, to make recommendations to the General Assembly Council in accordance with existing General Assembly guidelines for socially responsible investment.
4. Initiate a planning process that will result in investments and grants to support those groups among Palestinians and Israelis who are actively working for peace throughout the region.
5. Actively encourage Presbyterians, through local, national, and international educational projects, to forge ongoing relationships with Jews and Muslims that overcome our ignorance and suspicion of one another.

Rationale

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has given longstanding support to a just and lasting peace in the Middle East and we believe our church needs to play a positive role in fostering Middle East peace. However, the action by the 216th General Assembly (2004) calling for divestment from some companies doing business with Israel caused painful divisions within our church and with the Jewish community.

By singling out Israel as the focus of selective divestment, the strategy of divestment has generated fear and distrust among our Jewish neighbors and therefore precludes the formation of broad-based interfaith coalitions that can make substantive and cooperative contributions to the region.

The historic position of the Presbyterian church has recognized the anguish on the part of both Palestinians and Israelis. It has consistently acknowledged the legitimate claims of both, and has strived to pursue its vision of peacemaking without championing one side at the expense of the other. However, the divestment overture of the 216th General Assembly (2004) singles out Israel for censure without adequately acknowledging that other countries and parties in the region need to be held accountable for serious human rights violations. While divestment can be a useful tool for social change, it is wrong to single out Israel as the object of a divestment policy when other states and parties in the region are also guilty of serious human rights violations that can and must be addressed. This strategy distracts the PC(USA) from our denomination’s historic commitment to a two-state solution to the conflict.

While the implementation of a divestment policy attempts to change the behavior of selected companies by filing shareholder resolutions, the roots of the conflict among Palestinians and Israelis remain unaddressed and the threat of economic punishment contributes to a climate of hostility and unwittingly undercuts the positive changes within the political landscape, most notably the withdrawal of Israelis from Gaza.

We affirm that Palestinians have a right to freedom, security, and self-governance with their own state and, further, that such a state must be established within safe and secure borders and be economically viable. At the same, time we reaffirm the PC(USA)’s commitment to the vitality and well-being of the state of Israel in awareness that only a strong Israel can be a partner in a lasting peace.

Since a large majority of Israelis and Palestinians prefer peace with their neighbors, rather than violence and war, and are ready to make hard sacrifices to achieve it, the 217th General Assembly (2006) needs to call on the whole church to pursue a peacemaking strategy of proactive engagement and selective investment of time, talent, and financial resources in companies, not-for-profits, nongovernmental organizations (NGOs) and diplomatic efforts that are likely to promote a just and lasting peace in the region.

We encourage and applaud efforts by individual Presbyterians, congregations, and judicatories of our church to engage in dialogue with Jewish and Muslim communities and to sponsor programs likely to cultivate cooperation among all parties seeking peace in the Middle East. Presbyterians applaud the Israeli withdrawal from Gaza while, at the same time, urging Israel not to expand but reduce settlements in the West Bank. We call for a concerted effort on the part of our government to give whatever assistance is necessary to help Palestinian leaders to replace violence against Israel with positive initiatives toward peaceful coexistence. We are committed to policies that provide substantive and balanced support to both Israelis and Palestinians in the quest to establish a just and lasting peace in this volatile region.

While the World Council of Churches has adopted a strategy of divestment, several other denominations have rejected the use of economic threats to force political change. Instead they are developing an alternative approach that seeks to heal wounds and reduce tensions among both Palestinians and Israelis by calling for investments of time, energy, and resources in the region. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) needs to express its commitments in a balanced and positive way that affirms the prospects of peace and the promise of collaborative engagement.

On Being Pro-Palestinian and Pro-Israeli—From the Presbytery of Tampa Bay.

The Presbytery of Tampa Bay overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to do the following:

1. Seek ways to be truly Pro-Palestinian and Pro-Israeli in its statements and actions related to the conflicts in the region.
2. Condemn recent statements by some leaders in the Middle East calling for the destruction of Israel, and, therefore, reaffirm Israel's right to exist and the Palestinians own right for a sovereign state.
3. Urge Presbyterians to build upon our historic and existing partnerships with Christian Palestinians, and other people of faith in the region, and to build new partnerships for ministry, peace, and justice in the Middle East.
4. Direct that the process of phased, selective divestment ("Resolution on Israel and Palestine, 216th General Assembly, Recommendation 7") be stopped and move towards further partnership with Palestinian and Israeli organizations that work together for peace, education, and economic development in Gaza, the West Bank and Israel.

5. Organize interfaith groups, which would include Presbyterians, ecumenical partners, Muslims and Jews from the United States, in order to travel together to the Middle East, seeking a spirit of understanding, cooperation, and peace both in the region and at home.

Rationale

Resolutions made by the 216th General Assembly (2004) related to Israelis and the Palestinians sought to encourage a means of moving forward toward peace in the Middle East. In this process, we have taken many steps backwards in our relationship with the Jewish community, and with others, who believe our resolutions were not balanced in the way they viewed the conflicts in the region. We do commend the General Assembly for its statements regarding the hope and faith of our Palestinians Christian partners in the face of despair.

Item 11-16

[The assembly approved Item 11-16. See pp. 43, 45.]

The General Assembly Council, through the National Ministries Division and the Committee on Mission Responsibility Through Investment, recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) do the following:

1. Direct the Stated Clerk to communicate with corporations doing business in Israel and Palestine urging them to
 - a. ensure that principles of equal employment opportunity and workplace diversity are followed in their facilities;
 - b. incorporate explicit reference to internationally recognized human rights and labor standards, such as the International Declaration on Human Rights or the International Labor Organization of the United Nations, in their codes of conduct and policies to guide their practices;
 - c. seek ways to promote education, public policy, and economic development that can lead to a just peace and respect for human rights in Israel and Palestine.

2. That the Committee on Mission Responsibility Through Investment (MRTI) be allocated financial resources to hold one additional committee meeting in 2007 and additional dialogue meetings with corporations in 2007.

[Financial Implication: (2006) $0; (2007) $20,150; (2008) $20,150 (Mission—Unrestricted)]

Rationale

These recommendations are in response to the following referral: 2004 Referral: Item 12-01. On Supporting the Geneva Accord, Recommendation 7. Refers to Mission Responsibility Through Investment Committee (MRTI) with Instructions to Initiate a Process of Phased Selective Divestment in Multinational Corporations Operating in Israel, in Accordance to General Assembly Policy on Social Investing, and to Make Appropriate Recommendations to the General Assembly Council for Action—From the General Assembly Council (Minutes, 2004, Part I, pp. 64–66, 851).

The Committee on Mission Responsibility Through Investment (MRTI) carried out a careful process. Initially, MRTI reviewed the 1984 General Assembly policy on the use of divestment as a strategy for socially responsible investing, and the criteria for consideration of any recommendation for divestment. Also reviewed was the 1985 General Assembly policy describing the process of phased, selective divestment. At its first meeting following the General Assembly, MRTI identified General Assembly policy positions on the obstacles to a just peace in Israel and Palestine. These included the ongoing violence perpetrated by Palestinians and Israelis against innocent people; the Israeli occupation of the West Bank, Gaza, and East Jerusalem in violation of the Fourth Geneva Convention and United Nations resolutions; the presence of Israeli settlements in the occupied territories; the construction of the separation barrier; and the need for a viable Palestinian economy to enhance the possibility of a successful Palestinian state. These General Assembly policies were incorporated into criteria to focus the research into corporations that may be profiting from involvement in any of the obstacles to a just peace. The MRTI also adopted a clear statement on the process of progressive engagement of any such companies that noted the cycle of dialogue, shareholder resolutions, and proxy voting, and more dialogue before MRTI would be in any position to consider recommending possible divestment action to the General Assembly. This was reported to the General Assembly Council (GAC), and publicized widely.

The MRTI conducted research to determine which corporations, if any, were involved with the criteria. In August 2005, MRTI reviewed the research to select from all the companies identified an initial group of companies to engage. These were Caterpillar, Citigroup, ITT Industries, Motorola, and United Technologies. The MRTI also maintained contact with various ecumenical partners that were committed to engaging companies on the issue of their involvement in Israel and Palestine. These included the Episcopal Church, the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America, and the United Church of Christ.

The MRTI began the process of contacting and meeting with the companies, dialogue with the presbyteries where the companies are headquartered, and continued interpretation of the process to the church and the general public. The MRTI has also worked ecumenically on strategies for proactive investment in the region by churches and corporations in consultation with James Wolfensohn, special envoy for Gaza Disengagement, whose charge includes helping to rebuild the Palestinian economy.

On Proceeds from the Sale of Divested Holdings—From the Presbytery of Transylvania.

The Presbytery of Transylvania overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to ensure that whenever such a divestment occurs, then whatever proceeds are realized from the sale of those holdings be reinvested in corporations whose business in Israel is positive, helpful, and peaceful.

Rationale

The 216th General Assembly (2004) requested the Mission Responsibility Through Investment Committee (MRTI) to initiate a process of phased selective divestment in multinational corporations operating in Israel and expressed its opposition to the security barriers separating Israelis and Palestinians.

Some Jewish leaders and organizations believe that the resolutions of the 216th General Assembly (2004) reflect an attitude of anti-Semitism.

Comments by Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) leaders indicated that anti-Semitism or bias against the nation of Israel and the Jewish people was not the intent of any resolution at the 216th General Assembly (2004), and has no place within the life of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

On the Sale of Divested Holdings—From the Presbytery of Chicago.

The Presbytery of Chicago overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to approve that if— as a result of the alternate resolution of the 216th General Assembly (2004) taken July 2, 2004, on Item 12-01, (Minutes, 2004, Part I, p. 66, Paragraph 7), referring to Mission Responsibility Through Investment Committee (MRTI) with instructions to initiate a process of phased, selective divestment in multinational corporations doing business in Israel—the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) should sell any of its holdings in any corporation doing business in Israel, whatever proceeds are realized from the sale of those holdings be reinvested in corporations or other entities in Israel and Palestine whose work reflect the Hebrew injunction of “tikun olam—to repair the world.”

Rationale

“How very good and pleasant it is when kindred live together in unity” (Ps. 133:1).

The Session of the Fourth Presbyterian Church of Chicago has adopted a resolution expressing its intention to propose through the Presbytery of Chicago that should the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), as a result of the General Assembly’s action, sell any of its holdings in any corporation doing business in Israel, whatever proceeds are realized from the sale of those holdings be reinvested in corporations doing business in the region whose activities benefit the human condition.

The Fourth Presbyterian Church of Chicago advocates the positive approach of investing for peace in entities doing business in Israel and Palestine, using an investment criterion that can be embraced by all people, being guided by the prophetic injunction for justice (Amos 5:24: “... Let justice roll down like waters ...”) and the Talmudic concept of “tikum olam”—to repair the world.

The human mission to repair the world articulated in Jewish scriptures is also of a piece with the theological views of other faiths, including our own Christian faith, regarding humankind’s responsibilities for justice and peace.

Numerous opportunities to help carry out and encourage this mission abound in Israel and Palestine.

On Pursuing Investment Strategies to Promote Peace Between the Israeli and Palestinian People, While Affirming the Importance of Maintaining Healthy Relationships Among Presbyterians, Jews, and Muslims in the U.S.A.—From the Presbytery of National Capital.

The Presbytery of National Capital overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to continue investment strategies that promote peace between the Israeli and Palestinian people and seek prosperity for peoples of both nations by doing the following:

1. Direct the Mission Responsibility Through Investment (MRTI) to ensure that its strategies for engaging corporations with regard to Israeli and Palestinian territories are consistent with the following principles:

a. They should reflect the application of fundamental principles of justice and peace common to Christianity, Islam, and Judaism that are appropriate to the practical realities of Israeli and Palestinian societies.

b. They should reflect commitment to positive outcomes.

c. They should reflect awareness of potential impact upon the stability, future viability, and prosperity of both the Israeli and Palestinian economies.

2. Urge the Board of Pensions and the Presbyterian Foundation, as changes are made in their investment portfolios pursuant to directives of the 216th General Assembly (2004), to consider the following opportunities for positive impact upon peace in the region:

a. Explore profitable investments that involve multinational companies working cooperatively in both the Palestinian and Israeli economies or that involve cooperation between Palestinian and Israeli companies.

b. Give special consideration to investment in companies (1) that create equitable employment for both Israelis and Palestinians, (2) whose business is to the mutual benefit of both Israeli and Palestinian societies, (3) whose business in the region builds capacity in the Palestinian and Israeli economies, and (4) that introduce joint ventures between Palestinians and Israelis or companies that supply and support them.

3. Urge governing bodies and individuals within the PC(USA) to express their commitment to peace and justice for Israelis and Palestinians by considering these principles when investing their own funds, while continuing to engage in dialogue with similarly committed Jewish, Christian, and Muslim partners.

4. Direct the Stated Clerk of the PC(USA) to work with our international ecumenical and interfaith partners in Europe and the United States to press countries that provide financial support to Palestinians and/or Israelis to use their assistance to encourage progress towards a long-term peace and to discourage acts of terrorism and violations of human rights. Transparent accounting of this support should be required of all recipients.

5. Direct the General Assembly Council to coordinate PC(USA) initiatives related to future investment in development in the region and to provide support for the task force assigned by the 216th General Assembly (2004) in Item 12-09 to create a Palestine Mission Network and to authorize a feasibility study for the future development of Palestine. In addition, direct the General Assembly Council to provide wide visibility for these efforts and for other accomplishments in the work of peace through development.

6. Direct the General Assembly Council to engage in active dialogue with other Christian denominations and faith traditions that have taken similar actions to end violent conflict and to promote peace between Israelis and Palestinians.

Rationale

Continuing violent conflict between Israelis and Palestinians profoundly affects believers in three of the world's major faith traditions—Christianity, Judaism, and Islam.

The situation of hostilities between peoples with whom Presbyterians have established steadfast bonds compels us to respond.

Presbyterians have witnessed acts of aggression, terrorism, and threats of terrorism by Palestinians against innocent Israelis. At close range, Presbyterian have also witnessed the suffering of innocent Palestinians as the result of war, displacement, expansion of settlements by Israelis, and the recent introduction of a separation barrier onto Palestinian territory with far-reaching consequences for the future of the region.

Presbyterians abhor and condemn terrorism and violence carried out by individuals, groups, and governing bodies on both side of this conflict. Each incident inflicts injury upon a group with whom Presbyterians have special connection. Presbyterians also deplore expressions of anti-Semitism, both anti-Semitism directed against Jews and anti-Semitism directed against Arabs.

Presbyterians of the PC(USA) cherish our long and faithful commitment to our Jewish partners. We acknowledge God's irrevocable covenant relationship with the people of Israel and affirm our unwavering support for the secure existence of a viable and prosperous state of Israel, a position that has been reiterated over the decades since 1948.

Similarly, Presbyterians have enduring connections with Palestinians, including longstanding bonds of faith with Palestinian Christians and committed relationships with Palestinian Muslims. These drive from continuous Presbyterian mission presence in the Middle East since 1823, including medical, educational, and religious programs. The concern of the PC(USA) for the plight of Palestinian Muslims flows from our commitment to Christian-Muslim interfaith relationships. The PC(USA) consistently has affirmed the hope for a viable, just, secure, and prosperous Palestine.

In response to God's calling to believers, Presbyterians are compelled to discern where their actions might bring healing and resolution between Israelis and Palestinians.

Consequently, Presbyterians have struggled over how we might contribute to end hostilities between Israelis and Palestinians. Actions of the 216th General Assembly (2004) were designed to apply the good offices and resources available to the PC(USA) to halt violence. Now we are calling for active measures to promote peace.

The efforts of the 216th General Assembly (2004) of the PC(USA) to address the Palestinian-Israeli crisis resulted in great consternation and a sense of betrayal among our Jewish partners, drawing attention to the importance of sustaining and deepening the dialogue between Presbyterians and Jews. The actions also launched a moral discourse regarding the positive role of the church in critical situations, highlighting what actions are appropriate and might be effective in influencing the situation toward peace in the region.

Presbyterians living in the United States are called to communicate with partners who practice Christianity, Judaism, and Islam to express and experience the kind of mutual respect envisioned among all people of the Abrahmic faiths, i.e., deepening dialogue, growing tolerance of distinct practices in worshipping God, and a keen awareness of the vital links all believers share with co-religionists around the world.

We share with our Jewish and Muslim brothers and sisters a common vision for the future of the Middle East and a hope for peace and prosperity throughout the region. Specifically, we should pursue positive investment strategies in order to achieve the following:

- A reaffirmation of respect and affection for one another and respect for one another's faith;
- An end to violence and conflict in the land that is precious to Jews, Muslims, and Christians; and
- A vision of two nations, Israel and Palestine, coexisting peacefully within mutually respected borders, both nations thriving and participating fully in the world economy and community.

Actions taken by the PC(USA) at the 216th General Assembly (2004) were crafted to help realize this vision. Strategies suggested here presume that continuing steps toward peace should be carried out in sustained dialogue with Jewish, Christian, and Muslim partners as events unfold and new opportunities arise.

Advice and Counsel on Item 11-19—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

Please see ACSWP Advice and Counsel on Item 11-01.

ACREC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 11-19

Advice and Counsel on Item 11-19—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC).

Item 11-19 directs MRTI to pursue investment strategies in Israeli and Palestinian territories consistent with principles of justice and peace while affirming the importance of maintaining healthy relationships among Presbyterians, Jews, and Muslims in the U.S. This overture was submitted by the Presbytery of National Capital.

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) advises Item 11-19 be approved.

Rationale

Actions of the 216th General Assembly (2004) clearly intended to address the occupation of Palestine as the underpinning (though not the only) cause of violence in that region. After numerous statements by the previous General Assembly since the beginning of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict went unnoticed or ignored, it is logical and important for the church to take active measures to promote peace and the biblical principles of justice. The church's witness and peacemaking efforts should not be in words only, but in deed as well.

Many Jewish organizations (such as Gush Shalom, Jewish Voice for Peace, Tikun, Not in My Name, and European Jews for a Just Peace) as well as other Christian denominations (including the World Council of Churches, as well as many American, European, and African denominations) agree that a carefully thought out, biblically based divestment process could have a positive effect in persuading Israel to change policies toward the Palestinians that are contrary to international law and formal resolutions of the United Nations Security Council, and biblical principles of justice.

Both investment and divestment are needed strategies to bring about justice and peace in this conflict. While a positive investment strategy can be constructive and provide short-term benefits, it fails to identify and address the root causes of the perpetuation of the conflict, and does not oppose the expansion of Israeli settlements in Palestinian territories.

Recognizing that the PC(USA) alone cannot affect movement toward a just peace in this conflict, ACREC encourages the 217th General Assembly (2006) to call upon the Stated Clerk and the General Assembly Council to coordinate with other U.S. denominations and ecumenical partners investment and divestment strategies, and to engage in active dialogue with other Christian denominations and faith traditions that have taken similar actions to end the conflict and to promote peace between Israelis and Palestinians.

The ACREC calls the General Assembly's attention to the fact that the General Assembly Council, as assigned by the 216th General Assembly (2004), has created a Palestine/Israel Mission Network, and has completed a feasibility study for the future development of Palestine. It is important that the 217th General Assembly (2006) direct the General Assembly Council to implement the recommendations suggested in the feasibility study, and provide wide visibility for this network and its activities.

On Moving from a Divestment Strategy to a Strategy of Investment in Business That Promotes Peace and Reconciliation Between Israelis and Palestinians—From the Presbytery of Sheppards and Lapsley.

The Presbytery of Sheppards and Lapsley respectfully overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to do the following:

1. Pursue faithfully and consistently its historic vision of peace and security for all the people in the Middle East.

2. Move from the divestment strategy of the 216th General Assembly (2004) to a strategy of investment in businesses, not-for-profit programs, NGO's (nongovernmental organizations), and diplomatic efforts that are likely to promote peace and reconciliation between Israelis and Palestinians. In that regard, to the extent that the 216th General Assembly (2004) authorized the Mission Responsibility Through Investment Committee (MRTI), or any other PC(USA) body, to implement a strategy of divestment from Israel, that authority is hereby rescinded.

Rationale

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has given longstanding support to a just and lasting peace in the Middle East and we believe that our church can play a positive role in fostering Middle East peace. However, the action by the 216th General Assembly (2004) regarding possible divestment from some companies doing business with Israel caused considerable division and distrust within our church and within the Jewish community.

While divestment might be a useful tool for social change in some circumstances, it is wrong to single out Israel as the object of a “divestment” policy when other states and parties in the region are also guilty of serious human rights violations that can and must be addressed. In today’s global economy, it is also difficult to identify individual companies whose products aid in carrying out objectionable government programs, but which are not also supplying products for worthwhile humanitarian activities.

This policy distracts the PC(USA) from our denomination’s historic commitment to a two-state solution to the conflict. Since a large majority of Israelis and Palestinians prefer peace with their neighbors, rather than violence and war, and are ready to make hard sacrifices to achieve it, the 217th General Assembly (2006) instructs the PC(USA) to pursue a peacemaking strategy of proactive engagement and selective investment of time, talent, and financial resources in companies, not-for-profits, NGO’s, and diplomatic efforts that are likely to promote a just and lasting peace in the region.

Believing that Palestinians have a right to freedom, security, and self-governance within their own state and, further, that such a state must be established within safe and secure borders and be economically viable, the 217th General Assembly (2006) reaffirms the PC(USA) support for a two-state solution to the present conflict.

The 217th General Assembly (2006) reaffirms the PC(USA)’s commitment to the vitality and well-being of the state of Israel in awareness that only a strong Israel can be a partner in a lasting peace and we believe in Israel’s right to exist as a state and Israel’s right to defend itself against terrorism and acts of violence that threaten its security.

We encourage and applaud efforts by individual Presbyterians, congregations, and judicatories of our church to engage in dialogue with both the Jewish and Palestinian communities. We believe that Presbyterian concerns about the Middle East can be more cogently articulated and more effectively advanced by working with our Jewish and Palestinian neighbors and by developing substantive projects at home and in the Middle East that harness the talents and resources of all our religious communities.

On Continuing Investment Strategies That Promote Peace Between the Israeli and Palestinian People While Seeking Prosperity for Both Nations—From the Presbytery of Missouri Union.

The Presbytery of Missouri Union overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to do the following:

1. Continue investment strategies that promote peace between Israeli and Palestinian people and to seek prosperity for peoples of both nations by recognizing that:

a. Israel is a free and independent democracy in the Middle East, with 1,500,000 of its citizens being of Arab descent, out of an approximate 5,500,000 total population. The Arab-Israeli citizens have their own representation in the Israeli Knesset. The major world religions, Judaism, Muslim, and Christianity, are represented in the Israeli people. The Israeli's should be allowed to defend themselves against the onslaught of terrorism unprecedented anywhere in the world, without the interference of groups seeking to destroy them simply because of their Jewish heritage or groups seeking to follow through with politically correct ideas.

b. The Palestinians are a diverse people, both Christian and Muslim, free to choose their own government and establish their own statehood, but whose economy is nearly inextricably tied to the Israeli economy, and that any pressure to affect the Israeli economy does as much or more damage to the Palestinian economy as to the Israeli economy.

c. Israel has begun a process of removal of settlements from lands occupied as a result of their defense of the attacks taken against them by their neighbors in the 1967 war, and has fully withdrawn from the Gaza area already.

d. Terrorism in any form, in any place is abhorrent and contrary to the Word of God. Our God is a God of peace and in no way should our actions as individuals, congregations, presbyteries, synods, or as the General Assembly, be construed to be either anti-Semitic or anti-Arab in nature.

e. Christ charged us to be His followers and if we are to be His followers we are to reach out in love to both parties and affect relationship of peace, love, and harmony where little of each currently exists.

2. With the above understandings in place, direct the Mission Responsibility Through Investment Committee (MRTI) to review its previous findings as were directed by the 216th General Assembly (2004), and search for avenues of meaningful dialogue that will reflect positive outcomes for both Israeli and Palestinian people that reflect awareness of potential impact upon the stability, future viability, and prosperity of both economies. The MRTI committee is directed and the Board of Pensions and Presbyterian Foundation are requested to report back to the 2007 Fall General Assembly Council meeting and to the 218th General Assembly (2008).

3. Direct the Board of Pensions and the Presbyterian Foundation to explore and identify profitable investments that will benefit both the Israeli and the Palestinian economies by giving special consideration to companies that create equitable employment for both Israelis and Palestinians and whose business is to the benefit of both Israeli and Palestinian societies.

Rationale

The continuing violence in the region is a detriment to all people of the region and the world's major faith traditions—Christianity, Islam, and Judaism.

Economic pressure should be used by positive investments in both economies. By only using negative economic pressure on the Israelis, it affects the Palestinians to a greater degree since their economies are so entwined.

On Pursuing Investment Strategies to Promote Peace Between the Israeli and Palestinian People, While Affirming the Importance of Maintaining Healthy Relationships—From the Presbytery of Giddings-Lovejoy.

The Presbytery of Giddings-Lovejoy overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to continue investment strategies that promote peace between the Israeli and Palestinian people and seek prosperity for peoples of both nations by doing the following:

1. Affirm that peace in the Middle East will come when all governments recognize the sovereignty of all nations in the region. Specifically, there must be recognition of the rule of law and the right of the nations of Israel and Palestine to exist and govern themselves and bear arms to defend their countries from internal and external threats, especially the threat of terrorism. Terrorism has no moral basis and must be condemned by all nations in word and deed. It is our belief that basic principles of reciprocity and mutuality are the necessary foundations for the pursuit of investment strategies.

2. Direct the Mission Responsibility Through Investment Committee (MRTI) to ensure that its strategies for engaging corporations with regard to Israeli and Palestinian territories are consistent with the following principles:

a. They should reflect the application of fundamental principles of justice and peace common to Christianity, Judaism, and Islam that are appropriate to the practical realities of Israeli and Palestinian societies.

b. They should reflect commitment to positive outcomes.

c. They should reflect awareness of potential impact upon the stability, future viability, and prosperity of both the Israeli and Palestinian economies.

3. Urge the Board of Pensions and the Presbyterian Foundation, as changes are made in their investment portfolios pursuant to directives of the 216th General Assembly (2004), to consider the following opportunities for positive impact upon peace in the region:

a. Explore profitable investments that involve multinational companies working cooperatively in both the Palestinian and Israeli economies or that involve cooperation between Palestinian and Israeli companies.

b. Transparent accounting of this support should be required of all recipients.

6. Direct the General Assembly Council to coordinate PC(USA) initiatives related to future investment in development in the region and to provide support for the task force assigned by the 216th General Assembly (2004) in Item 12-09 to create a Palestine Mission Network and to authorize a feasibility study for the future development of Palestine. In addition, direct the General Assembly Council to provide wide visibility for these efforts and for other accomplishments in the work of peace through development.

7. Direct the General Assembly Council to engage in active dialogue with other Christian denominations and faith traditions that have taken similar actions to end violent conflict and to promote peace between Israelis and Palestinians.

Rationale

The Palestinian election in January of this year raised grave concerns, which intensify the need to find ways to halt violence and promote peace. The actions of the 216th General Assembly (2004) presupposed both Israeli and Palestinian governments denouncing terrorism in word and deed.

Continuing violent conflict between Israelis and Palestinians profoundly affects believers in three of the world's major faith traditions—Christianity, Judaism, and Islam.

The situation of hostilities between peoples with whom Presbyterians have established steadfast bonds compels us to respond.

Presbyterians have witnessed acts of aggression, terrorism, and threats of terrorism by Palestinians against innocent Israelis. At close range, Presbyterians also have witnessed the suffering of innocent Palestinians as the result of war, displacement, expansion of settlements by Israelis, and the recent introduction of a separation barrier onto Palestinian territory with far-reaching consequences for the future of the region.

Presbyterians abhor and condemn terrorism and violence carried out by individuals, groups, and governments on both sides of this conflict. Each incident inflicts injury upon a group with whom Presbyterians have special connection.

Presbyterians deplore expressions of anti-Semitism, both anti-Semitism directed against Jews and anti-Semitism directed against Arabs.

Presbyterians of the PC(USA) cherish our long and faithful commitment to our Jewish partners. We acknowledge God's irrevocable covenant relationship with the people of Israel and affirm our unwavering support for the secure existence of a viable and prosperous state of Israel, a position that has been reiterated over the decades since 1948.

Similarly, Presbyterians have enduring connections with Palestinians, including longstanding bonds of faith with Palestinian Christians and committed relationships with Palestinian Muslims. These derive from continuous Presbyterian mission presence in the Middle East since 1823, including medical, educational, and religious programs. The PC(USA)'s concern for the plight of Palestinian Muslims flows from our commitment to Christian-Muslim interfaith relationships. The PC(USA) consistently has affirmed the hope for a viable, just, secure, and prosperous Palestine.

In response to God's calling to believers, Presbyterians are compelled to discern where their actions might promote healing between Israelis and Palestinians.

Consequently, Presbyterians have struggled over how we might contribute to ending hostilities between Israelis and Palestinians. Actions of the 216th General Assembly (2004) were designed to apply the good offices and resources available to the PC(USA) to halt violence. Now we are calling for active measures to promote peace.

The efforts of the 216th General Assembly (2004) of PC(USA) to address the Palestinian-Israeli crisis resulted in great consternation and a sense of betrayal among our Jewish partners, drawing attention to the importance of sustaining and deepening the dialogue between Presbyterians and Jews. The actions also launched a moral discourse regarding the positive role of the church in critical situations, highlighting what actions are appropriate and might be effective in influencing the situation toward peace in the region.

Presbyterians living in the United States are called to communicate with partners who practice Christianity, Judaism, and Islam to express and experience the kind of mutual respect envisioned among all people of the Abrahamic faiths, i.e., deepening dialogue, growing tolerance of distinct practices in worshiping God, and a keen awareness of the vital links all believers share with co-religionists around the world.

We share with our Jewish and Muslim brothers and sisters a common vision for the future of the Middle East and a hope for peace and prosperity throughout the region. Specifically, we should pursue positive investment strategies in order to achieve:

- a reaffirmation of respect and affection for one another and respect for one another's faith;
- an end to violence and conflict in the land that is precious to Jews, Muslims, and Christians; and
- a vision of two nations, Israel and Palestine, co-existing peacefully within mutually respected borders, both nations thriving and participating fully in the world economy and community.

Actions taken by the PC(USA) at the 216th General Assembly (2004) were crafted to help realize this vision. Strategies suggested here presume that continuing steps toward peace should be carried out in sustained dialogue with Jewish, Christian, and Muslim partners as events unfold and new opportunities arise.

Item 11-23

[The assembly answered Item 11-23 by the action taken on Item 11-01. See pp. 43, 45.]

On Directing ACSWP to Constitute a Task Force to Draft a New Statement on Middle East Policy—From the Presbytery of Eastern Virginia.

The Presbytery of Eastern Virginia overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to do the following:

1. Direct the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) to constitute a task force to draft a new and comprehensive statement of General Assembly policy regarding the Middle East for consideration by the 218th General Assembly (2008), using the procedures outlined in "Forming Social Policy" (in the Manual of the General Assembly)—except as provided otherwise below.

2. Direct that the membership of the task force shall be comprised as follows: One member shall be designated by each presbytery that has sent an overture relating to the Middle East to at least one of the two most recent General Assemblies (the 216 [2004] and 217 [2006]), or that concurred with such an overture. Among those presbyteries not having sent or concurred with such overtures, each presbytery that has an official mission partnership with a partner church body in the region shall designate one member. The ACSWP shall designate four other members of the task force, two from among the elected members of the ACSWP and two from other nominees received from the church. The ACSWP shall take care to see that members of the task force reflect the diversity of theological and political convictions within the Reformed tradition as it relates to the Middle East.

3. Direct that two additional persons shall be invited to participate in all task force meetings with voice but no vote. One shall come from a mainstream Jewish organization that has criticized past General Assembly resolutions relating to the Middle East, but recognizes the right of self-determination for Palestinians. The other shall come from a mainstream Muslim organization that has criticized the state of Israel, but does not favor its destruction. The Stated Clerk, in consultation with the Worldwide Ministries Division, shall designate these two persons.

4. Direct that the task force shall compile an on-line bibliography related to the Middle East, providing information and various viewpoints on a range of countries and topics in the region. Among the topics to be considered are: the theological basis for Christian engagement in the Middle East; the state of partner churches in the region; the challenges to Christian evangelism in word and deed there; violations of religious freedom and other human rights; the fomenting of hatred and discrimination against minority ethnic and religious groups; poverty and its causes in the region; lack of education and health care; the rights of women and children and other vulnerable persons; military occupations and other impositions of government without the consent of the governed; nuclear proliferation and other threats by states to destroy their neighbors; terrorist acts against non-combatants and the states and organizations that sponsor such attacks; threats of environmental degradation; visions for how conflicts within and between nations in the region might be reconciled and a greater measure of justice and peace might be achieved; examples of how the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and its mission partners might make steps in those directions.

5. Direct that the task force shall solicit input from members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) ecumenical partners in the Middle East and a range of Muslim and Jewish groups concerned about the region.

6. Direct that the task force shall prepare a proposed policy statement with recommendations and background information addressing concerns such as those raised in Recommendation 4. above.

7. Direct that the work of the task force shall be funded and staffed with resources already allocated to the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy and the Worldwide Ministries Division.

8. Direct that, pending approval of a new policy statement on the Middle East, the “process of phased selective divestment in multinational corporations doing business in Israel” initiated by the 216th General Assembly (2004) be suspended.

[Original Financial Implication: (2006) $11,464; (2007) $80,292; (2008) $26,821 (Per Capita—GAC)] [Assembly Action: (2006) $0; (2007) $0; (2008) $0]

Rationale

The standards for “forming social policy” in the Manual of the General Assembly specify: “A ‘policy statement’ establishes the fundamental principles that guide the denomination’s social witness. From this policy base a strategy is developed, a program is defined, and personal social witness is empowered. The most current policy document produced in conformance with the requirements 2.a.–g. of this document and adopted by a General Assembly shall be the policy in force” (Manual of the General Assembly, 2006, Forming Social Policy, p. 77).

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has not approved a comprehensive policy statement on the Middle East since the former United Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A. did so in 1974.

It appears that this 1974 statement remains the “policy in force” that should “guide the denomination’s social witness” on the Middle East today.

It is self-evident that vast changes have occurred in the state of the Middle East since 1974.

Since 1974, General Assemblies have approved a long series of resolutions on the Middle East, most of which have been narrowly focused on a few nations and a few problems in the region, particularly the conflict between Israel and the Palestinians and the two wars with Iraq.

Few of these resolutions identify any basis in the broader 1974 policy statement.

It is not clear that the current Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) strategy for the Middle East is, in fact, developed from the policy base of 1974, nor that programs are defined or personal social witness empowered on the basis of that thirty-year-old statement.

There is need for a fresh and relevant policy statement that will guide a mission strategy for the 21st century.

The most recent resolutions of a General Assembly (the 216th General Assembly (2004)) relating to the Middle East were approved after relatively brief debate, yet these same resolutions then generated unexpected controversy and division with the denomination and in its interfaith relations.

The majority of commissioners did not seem to understand that these resolutions were venturing into new political territory nor did they appreciate that their actions would be perceived as “unbalanced” by some.

This is an appropriate moment to take a broader view of a range of issues in the entire region and to study the extent that the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is taking steps in particular situations that fit into a larger vision of peace, justice, and freedom, and the exhibition of the Kingdom of Heaven throughout the Middle East.

COGA COMMENT ON ITEM 11-23

Comment on Item 11-23—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly.

Item 11-23 proposes to form a task force to draft a new statement on Middle East Policy.

The Standing Rules of the General Assembly (K.1.a) require that commissions or special committees can only be undertaken if the work cannot be done by an existing corporation or entity under its assigned responsibilities. A request for a task force is treated under the Standing Rules as a request for a special committee.

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has created an existing comprehensive policy on Middle East issues, developed over the last half century, recommended by numerous study groups, and approved by and affirmed by many assemblies. The present concerns addressed in Item 11-27 addresses a small part of a well-developed policy.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) advises that the assembly should carefully consider whether or not it wishes to begin over again. If the assembly should desire to start from the beginning, it should consider whether the proposed membership and associated costs can be realistically borne within existing budget allocations to the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) and the Worldwide Ministries Division (WMD).

At this writing, it is unclear how costs would be allocated. However, we believe that the total costs of this proposal would be $154,350 over the period 2006–2010.

The COGA is a committee of fifteen persons, elected by the General Assembly from across the church, made up of elders and ministers who supervise the work of the Office of the General Assembly.

Advice and Counsel on Item 11-23—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

Item 11-23 from the Presbytery of Eastern Virginia calls upon the 217th General Assembly (2006) to direct the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) to constitute a task force to draft a new statement on Middle East Policy. This Advice and Counsel would also constitute an answer to Item 11-24 from the Presbytery of New York City.

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy advises approval of Item 11-23 with the following amendments:

~~“[8. Direct that, pending approval of a new policy statement on the Middle East, the ‘process of phased selective divestment in multinational corporations doing business in Israel’ initiated by the 216th General Assembly (2004) be suspended.]”~~

Rationale

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) commends the Presbytery of Eastern Virginia for bringing Item 11-23 for consideration and action by the 217th General Assembly (2006). The ACSWP notes to this assembly that the most recent Middle East policy statement, Resolution on the Middle East, was approved by the 209th General Assembly (1997). (See Minutes, 1997, Part I, pp. 66, 68, 560–84.) Thus, it is appropriate in this new millennium for the church to review, rethink, and broaden its current policies on the Middle East as it seeks to do ministry in partnership with the people in this region (Christians, Jews, and Muslims). The Middle East contains both complicated zones of conflict and war and interconnected ancient and living cultures that contribute to the common good of all humanity. A comprehensive analysis of the Middle East must look at religious, cultural, and geopolitical trends common to areas from Northern Africa to South West Asia.

Item 11-23 rightfully acknowledges that the ACSWP is the appropriate General Assembly entity to develop a new policy statement on the Middle East, always working cooperatively with Worldwide Ministries and drawing on a broad range of experts. As currently written, the overture includes overly specific recommendations regarding who should be included in the membership of this new task force. These recommendations are out of harmony with the policy on Why and How the Church Makes a Social Policy Witness, which states: “A task force called to develop a policy statement shall be appointed from nominees submitted from the church” (Minutes, 1993, Part I, p. 769). The General Assembly’s current policy encourages nominations from all presbyteries in the church and widespread consultation and testing of documents. In this case, recommendations would also be welcomed from the Moderator's working group on Israel and Palestine (if approved).

Therefore, the ACSWP advises that Item 11-23 be approved as amended to ensure that its policy work is consistent with the church's current policy formation process, and to ensure that the work of this proposed task force is distinct from the ongoing work of the Mission Responsibility Through Investment (MRTI) committee.

ACREC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 11-23

Advice and Counsel on Item 11-23--From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC).

Item 11-23 directs ACSWP to constitute a task force to draft a new statement on Middle East policy and suspends "the process of phased selective divestment in multinational corporations doing business in Israel." It was submitted by the Presbytery of Eastern Virginia.

The Advocacy Committee on Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) advises Item 11-23 be approved with the following amendments (shown in italics and with brackets).

1. Insert a new Recommendation "2.a." to read as follows:

"[2a. Composition of the task force shall recognize the vastness of the Middle East as a region and the diversity of peoples and issues within it. Representation on the task force should reflect that there are 14–18 million Christians in the Middle East, including Orthodox, Catholic, Protestant, and Pentecostals. There are Arabs, Jews, Armenians, Assyrians, Copts, Samaritans, Kurds, Acadians, and Berbers—to name but a few. There are many religions, and hundreds of sects. Further, there are at least 6 million Middle Eastern immigrants here in the U.S., about half of whom are Christians and many are members of PC(USA) congregations.]"

2. Delete Recommendation 8.

~~"[8. Direct that, pending approval of a new policy statement on the Middle East, the 'the process of phased selective divestment in multinational corporations doing business in Israel' initiated by the 216th General Assembly (2004) be suspended.]"~~

Rationale

While the idea of updating our policy on the Middle East has its merits, ACREC believes that a comprehensive policy statement on the Middle East must address the broad diversity of peoples and the full complexity of the issues in the region. It will require widespread consultation, a sense of history, and attention to diverse voices to address the issues fully.

The urgency of the political realities in Israel and Palestine—a reality that means daily humiliation under oppressive occupation for Palestinians, and lack of security for both Palestinians and Israelis—demand action. In the face of such injustice, ACREC affirms that the church is called to take a principled, ethical stance based on Christ's example and the teachings of Scripture. Neutrality gives tacit support to the stronger party, regardless of whether that party is right or wrong. Neutrality fails to name the perpetrators as perpetrators. Further, when neutrality is interpreted as inaction, it gives implicit approval to both perpetrators and victims to resort to atrocities. The church should not take a neutral stance toward Palestinian suicide bombers; and should not take a neutral stance toward the Israeli occupation of Palestine. Rather, the church needs to be a prophetic voice for justice and peace. Divestment is a nonviolent strategy that has produced positive results in past conflicts. The ACREC affirms the action of the 216th General Assembly (2004) calling for a "process of phased selective divestment in multinational corporations doing business in Israel."

Item 11-24

[The assembly answered Item 11-24 by the action taken on Item 11-01. See pp. 43, 45.]

On Creating a Task Force on the Middle East to Produce a Substantive Resource Document—From the Presbytery of New York City.

The Presbytery of New York City overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to establish a Task Force on the Middle East¹ to produce a substantive resource document to guide policy and inform future resolutions and actions of the PC(USA) in the region. The membership of this task force shall represent a cross-section of opinions and commitments within the national church on the issues and contexts of the Middle East, with a particular focus on the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, as well as a range of skills and expertise (e.g., theology, social ethics, comparative religion, history, international relations, economics, etc.). The task force shall consult with representative voices from the American Jewish and Arabic communities (especially Palestinian Americans), as well as from Israeli Jews, Israeli Arabs, Palestinians (both Muslim and Christian) living in the West Bank and Gaza, and Lebanese Christians.

The resource document should include the following:

1. A documentary history (along with a narrative summary) of the ecumenical and interfaith relationships, statements, and actions of the PC(USA) and its antecedent denominations in the Middle East.
2. A regional history of the Middle East from the end of World War I to the present day, with a particular emphasis on the history of the region currently known as Israel and the Palestinian Territories, including an annotated bibliography.
3. A specific history of the modern Zionism movement, including an annotated bibliography.
4. A reference guide of the major parties and entities active in the region, including nongovernmental organizations (NGOs) and religious organizations (e.g., the Likud party, Hezbollah, Middle East Council of Churches).
5. Annotated links and references to other reputable sources of information.

On the basis of the resource document, the task force shall formulate broad guidelines expressing the overarching commitments of the PC(USA) to a just and lasting peace in the region. Future statements and actions by the General Assembly or the General Assembly Council (GAC) (or any of their subordinate entities) that are related to the region shall follow these guidelines unless the guidelines are altered first by action of the General Assembly.

The task force shall make its report to the 218th General Assembly (2008). This report shall include a reflection on their process, the reference document, the guidelines, and recommendations for usage of the resource and for keeping it current.

[Original Financial Implication: (2006) $12,400; (2007) $47,880; (2008) $18,450 (Per Capita—OGA)] [Assembly Action: (2006) $0; (2007) $0; (2008) $0]

Rationale

The helpfulness of a resource document to guide policy formation, particularly public statements and actions, seems clear; more educated commissioners can formulate policy more thoughtfully and communicate their intentions more effectively.

The actions of the 216th General Assembly (2004) related to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict highlight this need. Those actions have created significant divisions both within our church and between us and our Jewish brothers and sisters. Many who took or supported those actions seemed caught unawares by the intensity of the reaction from the Jewish community (and from within the church). Yet, if one has a reasonable familiarity with the history of the conflicts and its touchstones, one would have realized that phrases such as “the right of refugees to return to their homeland”² cannot be used casually or without clear explanation and not provoke such a reaction. While this would not have eliminated a strong emotional reaction from Jewish community, it would have mitigated against the response. Given the high tensions and enormous complexities of issues in the region, to the point where history itself is hotly debated, the need for such a comprehensive guide for future action is clear.

Second, the unexpected media firestorm arising from the 216th General Assembly (2004) proved very difficult to address, not only because the General Assembly made little or no provision for a media response plan, but because there were not clear resources for local pastors and sessions to go to in answering simple questions like, “what is the history of the PC(USA)'s involvement in the region? Are they anti-Israel?" While steps have clearly been taken in recent months to provide more contextual information,³ we believe that the envisioned task force will simultaneously provide broader and more substantive resources along with a greater sense of credibility because of the transparency of the writing process and the diversity of the writers.

Third, we believe that the production and acceptance of broad guidelines for PC(USA) policy based on this thorough contextual analysis will not only provide consistency and accountability for church statements and actions, but it will provide an easily accessible summary of the PC(USA)'s hopes for the region and our goals for our role there. This summary will help us as we work to reestablish our bona fides that are being questioned by some within the church and the Jewish community, who perceive or suspect that there is a more insidious agenda at work than our fervent desire for a just and lasting peace.

Endnotes

1. While the major emphasis here is on the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, it is recognized that this conflict cannot be understood in isolation from the context of the greater Middle East. Hence, the broader title is employed to give the task force a broader mandate.

2. See action 4b of Item 12-01 of the 216th General Assembly (2004), which was also a reiteration of the "End the Occupation Now" action of the 215th General Assembly (2003), posted at <http://www.pcusa.org/worldwide/israelpalestine/israelpalestineresolution.htm#1>

3. We note the resources now posted at <http://www.pcusa.org/worldwide/middleeast.htm>, and especially those at <http://www.pcusa.org/worldwide/israelpalestine/resources.htm>.

COGA COMMENT ON ITEM 11-24

Comment on Item 11-24—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly.

Item 11-24 relates to the formation of a task force to produce a resource document on the Middle East.

The Standing Rules of the General Assembly (K.1.a) require that commissions or special committees can only be undertaken if the work cannot be done by an existing corporation or entity under its assigned responsibilities. A request for the creation of a task force is treated under the Standing Rules as a request for a special committee.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) advises that a task force, appointed by the 217th General Assembly (2006), would have financial implications of $78,730 to the Per Capita Budget over the period 2006–2008. The intent of this item might be more properly met through a task force or subcommittee appointed by the General Assembly Council to develop these materials.

The COGA is a committee of fifteen persons, elected by the General Assembly from across the church, made up of elders and ministers who supervise the work of the Office of the General Assembly.

On Condemning International Trafficking in and Sexual Exploitation of Children—From the Synod of the Northeast.

The Synod of the Northeast respectfully overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to do the following:

1. Condemn international trafficking¹ in and sexual exploitation of children, which affects 2 million children annually.
2. Direct the General Assembly Council, through its National Ministries Division, its Justice and Compassion mission area, and the associate for Child Advocacy to raise awareness within our presbyteries and local churches and to - provide educational resources and reference lists, and
 - network with other groups advocating on this issue, including ECPAT.²
3. Direct the General Assembly Council~~[, through its Worldwide Ministries Division,]~~
 - to educate mission workers about the issue of international trafficking in children and sex tourism;
 - to familiarize staff and personnel with this issue.
4. Recommend to synods and presbyteries that their members become educated on this issue and engage in advocacy and action to end exploitation of all children around the world
 - providing resource centers with resources and reference lists;
 - conducting seminars such as the Presbyterian U.N. Seminar on this topic sponsored by the Synod of the Northeast in August 2005.
5. Direct the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly and the Moderator of the General Assembly to send a written communication to the members of U.S. Senate urging that the U.S. ratify the U.N. Convention on the Rights of the Child.
6. Direct the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly and the Moderator of the General Assembly to send a written communication to the members of U.S. Congress supporting federal legislation “End Demand for Sex Trafficking” (H.R. 2012 and S.937), which has already been introduced.
7. Direct the Stated Clerk of General Assembly and the Moderator of the General Assembly to send a written communication to the general secretary of the United Nations
 - commending the High Office on Human Rights and UNICEF for their diligent global efforts to protect children from international trafficking and sexual exploitation;
 - supporting ratification and enforcement of international laws that protect children, such as the International Labour Organization’s (ILG) Convention No. 182 that prohibits the worst forms of child labour, the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, especially Women and Children, and the Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the sale of children, child prostitution, and child pornography;
 - requesting the World Health Organization to consider the impact of international trafficking of children and sexual exploitation of children as they consider and deal with health issues related to the HIV/AIDS global pandemic.
8. Urge members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) not to do business with companies in the travel and tourism industry [and other companies in international trade] that have not signed the “Code of Conduct for the Protection of Children from Commercial Exploitation in Travel and Tourism,” seeking ethics to be linked with economics, as in the boycotting of South African products and companies during Apartheid or the “Nestle Boycott” during the 1980s [and make that list available to all presbytery stated clerks].

9. Request the General Assembly to continue to provide support of and funding for ECPAT in its work of advocating on behalf of children who are sexually exploited and in caring for child victims of sex tourism. [Presbyterian Women and PCUSA entities in the Synod of the Northeast have previously given grant funds to ECPAT.]

10. Direct the Stated Clerk of General Assembly and the Moderator of the General Assembly to send letters of appreciation to the three U.S. companies who have signed the Code of Conduct: The Carlson Corporation and Radisson for their courage and leadership in signing the Code of Conduct, as well as the travel agencies in Boston and Philadelphia, which have also signed.

Rationale

Two million children are victims of sexual exploitation and 1.2 million children are trafficked annually (which is 2½ times the population of the city of New Orleans).

One hundred ninety-two of the 194 member states of the U.N. have ratified the Convention on the Rights of the Child, the only exceptions being Somalia and the U.S.³

Only three U.S. companies have signed the “Code of Conduct for the Protection of Children from Commercial Exploitation in Travel and Tourism,” yet an estimated one-fourth of international child sex tourists are Americans.

The international demand for children in the sex trade is high because of the belief that children are less likely to be infected with HIV/AIDS.

The 1994 Crime Bill (the Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act) makes it illegal for a U.S. citizen to travel overseas in order to engage in sexual acts with a minor, but few Americans know of its existence, and it is not strongly enforced.

The 2000 Trafficking Victims Prevention Act offers some protection for children brought to this country in the sex trade, however it is difficult to enforce and victims are hard to identify. Also it does not protect U.S. children.

Sex tourists usually believe it is legal and culturally acceptable to sexually exploit children in other countries, and often state that the impoverished children benefit by the payment received.

Trafficking is a global problem affecting large number of children every year. Children and their families are often lured by the promise of better employment and a more prosperous life far from their homes.⁴

Child trafficking is lucrative and linked with criminal activity and corruption. Children who have been trafficked face a range of dangers, including violence and sexual abuse. They are even arrested and detained as illegal aliens—often with little or no access to their parents or other support services.⁵

The PC(USA) has been a leader in child advocacy and working against trafficking in children and needs to continue our commitment to put faith into action.

Endnotes

1. Definition of Trafficking from UNICEF Factsheet: Trafficking refers to the illegal transport of human beings, in particular women and children, for the purpose of selling them or exploiting their labor.

2. ECPAT’s work is to “End Child Prostitution, Child Pornography and Trafficking of Children for Sexual Purposes.” The original acronym came from “End Child Prostitution in Asian Tourism.”

3. President Clinton signed the convention in 1995 with the intent it be ratified, but it has yet to be presented to the full Senate because it remains in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Opponents of the convention claim it might enable the U.N. to usurp national and state sovereignty, undermine parental authority, allow and encourage children to sue parents or have abortions, or enable the U.N. to dictate how we raise and teach our children. These fears are false. For fuller information and facts see www.childrightscampaign.org/crcfacts.htm or contact ECPAT www.ecpatusa.org (718) 935-9192.

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 11-25

Advice and Counsel on Item 11-25—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

Item 11-25 asks the 217th General Assembly (2006) to condemn international trafficking and sexual exploitation of children. Item 11-25 also requests several actions to raise awareness of this issue and to support federal legislation and international laws to protect children from trafficking and sexual exploitation.

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) advises that Item 11-25 be approved.

Rationale

The Reformed teachings of the church lead us to speak out against injustice particularly for those who have no voice themselves. Children, in particular, have no voice to speak out against the injustices they suffer. As set out particularly in the affirmation of Why and How the Church Makes a Social Policy Witness:

We affirm the authority of Scripture for our faith and life, not only as individuals but also as a witnessing community in the world.

The trafficking and sexual exploitation of children is a tremendous and alarming global problem that needs to continuously be unmasked and which demands action.

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 11-25

Advice and Counsel on Item 11-25—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC).

Item 11-25 asks for specific action of the PC(USA) in condemning international trafficking in and sexual exploitation of children.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC) advises Item 11-25 be approved.

Rationale

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns is called to be a voice of justice and advocacy for women in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and around the world. International trafficking, the illegal transport of human beings, particularly women and children, for the purpose of selling them or exploiting their labor, and the sexual exploitation of children is a huge global business (see Profiting from Abuse, Unicef, November 2001) that particularly dehumanizes women and children, the primary victims, but also men, the primary perpetrators. It destroys the lives of the “the least among us.” All exploitation is unjust because it is a misuse of power.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns commends the overture’s detailed rationale and asks commissioners to especially note these three points:

- 192 of 194 member states of the U.N. have ratified the Convention on the Rights of the Child, the only exceptions being Somalia and the U.S.
- Only three U.S. companies have signed the “Code of Conduct for the Protection of Children from Commercial Exploitation in Travel and Tourism,” yet an estimated one-fourth of international child sex tourists are Americans.
- The PC(USA) has been a leader in child advocacy and working against trafficking in children and needs to continue our commitment to put faith into action.

Item 11-26

[In response to Item 11-26, the assembly approved an alternate resolution. See pp. 43, 45.]

On Expressing the Church's Concern for the People of Haiti—From the Presbytery of Tropical Florida.

The Presbytery of Tropical Florida overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to express to the president and the Congress of the United States of America the church's concern for the people of Haiti, to request the president and the Congress to address the political and social situation in Haiti with the resources available to our nation, to provide for welcome and relief for Haitian refugees, and to cease the current practice of immediate deportation of those who are attempting to escape the horror that exists in that troubled country.

In response to Item 11-26, the 217th General Assembly (2006) approved the following alternate resolution:

That the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) do the following:

- 1. Express to the president and Congress of the United States the church's concern for the people of Haiti.
- 2. Request the president and Congress
 - a. to address the political and social situation in Haiti with the resources available to our nation;
 - b. Provide for welcome and relief for Haitian refugees;
 - c. Cease the current practice of immediate deportation of those who are attempting to escape the horror that exists in that troubled country and admit Haitians in temporary protected status.
- 3. Call upon the United States government to adopt a Haiti policy that is friendly toward the political empowerment of the vast majority of Haitian citizens, who are poor, often disenfranchised, and systematically excluded from participation in political life.
- 4. Call upon the United States government to be generous in its trade agreements and financial aid to Haiti, providing assistance without imposing conditions that are deleterious to Haiti's economic health, self-government, and independence.
- 5. Give thanks for the life and dignity of all human beings, especially those whose condition of poverty and oppression is contrary to the will of God as expressed by Jesus Christ, our Lord.
- 6. Reaffirm the support of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) for the right of all people, in particular those of Haiti, to self-government and the free exercise of democratic processes without interference from other nations, including agents of the United States.
- 7. Reaffirm previous actions taken by the General Assemblies of the Presbyterian church in relation to the people of Haiti.
- 8. Call on the members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to continue to pray and advocate for peace, stability, and justice for Haiti and its people.

Rationale

The mission of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has historically included ministries of compassion to hurting people and social justice to opposed peoples.

The people of the nation of Haiti are suffering from a combination of natural disasters, economic depression, and political unrest and chaos.

The government of the United States of America has the power to influence changes in international situations through both political and economic means.

The United States of America takes pride in its historical welcome to immigrant peoples, including “your tired, your poor, your huddled masses yearning to breathe free, the wretched refuse of your teeming shore; send these, the homeless, tempest tossed to me.”

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 11-26

Advice and Counsel on Item 11-26—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP)

This Advice and Counsel also answers Item 11-38.

Item 11-26 calls for the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to express concern for the people of Haiti.

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) advises that an alternate resolution to Item 11-26 be approved. The alternate resolution uses recommendations adapted from both Item 11-26 and Item 11-38. Text would read as follows:

“The 217th General Assembly (2006) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) does the following:

- “1. Express to the president and Congress of the United States the church’s concern for the people of Haiti.
- “2. Request the president and Congress to address the political and social situation in Haiti with the resources available to our nation.
- “3. Provide for welcome and relief for Haitian refugees.
- “4. Cease the current practice of immediate deportation of those who are attempting to escape the horror that exists in that troubled country.
- “5. Give thanks for the life and dignity of all human beings, especially those whose condition of poverty and oppression is contrary to the will of God as expressed by Jesus Christ, our Lord.
- “6. Reaffirm the support of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) for the right of all people, in particular those of Haiti, to self-government and the free exercise of democratic processes without interference from other nations, including agents of the United States.
- “7. Reaffirm previous actions taken by the General Assemblies of the Presbyterian Church in relation to the people of Haiti.
- “8. Call upon the United States government to adopt a Haiti policy that is friendly toward the political empowerment of the vast majority of Haitian citizens, who are poor, often disenfranchised, and systematically excluded from participation in political life.
- “9. Call upon the United States government to be generous in its trade agreements and financial aid to Haiti, providing assistance without imposing conditions that are deleterious to Haiti’s economic health, self-government, and independence.
- “10. Call on the members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to continue to pray and advocate for peace, stability, and justice for Haiti and its people.”

Rationale

The recommendations above adapted from Items 11-26 and 11-38 are consistent with previous actions taken by the General Assemblies of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in relation to Haiti, especially the action taken by the 204th General Assembly (1992) On Haitian Refugees (Minutes, 1992, Part I, pp. 74, 81, 918–19). That action, recognizing the linkage between conditions in Haiti and the flow of refugees, bears updating today. The recommendations approved in 1992 offer strong policy support in favor of Items 11-26 and 11-38. Those recommendations include the following:

The 204th General Assembly (1992):

1. Call[ed] on the president and United States government to:
 - a. Suspend immediately the high seas interdiction and forced return of Haitian refugees;
 - b. Ensure the fair, consistent, generous, and expeditious consideration of all requests by Haitians for asylum and/or safe haven in this country;
 - c. Admit as refugees, with the right to work, such Haitians with a well-founded fear of persecution;
 - d. Admit in Temporary Protected Status (TPS), with the right to work, such other Haitians at risk;
 - e. Call on the United Nations high commissioner for refugees to implement more fully the protection mandate in relation to the exodus of persons from Haiti;
 - f. Support the restoration of constitutional order and democratic government in Haiti, so that the people of Haiti, with the active support of the international community, can bring peace, stability, and justice to their nation;
2. Call(ed) upon our governing bodies and congregations of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to:
 - a. Pray for the country and people of Haiti;
 - b. Work closely with the Refugee Program of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and of Church World Service and Witness; (Minutes, 1992, Part I, pp. 74, 81, 919).

In addition to the policy listed above, the theological and ethical principles that guide this denomination's work on immigration and refugee issues also offer support in favor of the recommendations included in Items 11-26 and 11-38. These theological and ethical principles challenge us to empathize with the struggles of our refugees, asylum seekers, and immigrant sisters and brothers, especially the following:

Principle 5: Christians have the responsibility to challenge and to shape government policy regarding refugees, asylum seekers, and immigrants.

Principle 6: Love of neighbor requires Christians to seek justice for refugees, asylum seekers, and immigrants.

Principle 7: Faithfulness to Christ means Christians always live in tension with national values and policies. (Resolution on Transformation of Churches and Society Through Encounters with New Neighbors, Minutes, 1999, Part I, pp. 32, 353,366)

Therefore, in light of the policies cited above and the situation described in Item 11-38, the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) advises approval of all of these measures.

ACREC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 11-26

Advice and Counsel on Item 11-26—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns.

Item 11-26 expresses the church's concern for the People of Haiti. It was submitted by the Presbytery of Tropical Florida.

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) advises that Item 11-26 be approved.

Rationale

People from Haiti are taking a great risk in trying to leave their country looking for a safer place to live and to survive due to the chaotic situation their country is experiencing. They are immediately deported when they are arrested trying to enter the U.S. The policy of the U.S. government with the people from Haiti is not in accord with the policies being used for other countries. Citizens from other countries are being treated differently than Haitians. When others are in similar situations, they are given temporary protected status asylum or other considerations while in the U.S.

Item 11-27

[The assembly approved Item 11-27 as amended. See pp. 43, 45.]

On Appointing a Special Committee to Explore the Radical Reduction of the Impact of Malaria in Sub-Saharan Africa—From the Presbytery of Northern New York.

The Presbytery of Northern New York overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to explore the radical reduction of the impact of malaria in sub-Saharan Africa.

- To this end, an extra commitment opportunity will be formed to create a special committee [that] shall be composed of persons appointed by the Moderator of the 217th General Assembly (2006), who shall also extend an invitation to representatives from our Sub-Saharan African church partners who shall be full participants (for a total of up to eight persons) ~~[the Moderator the Church of Central Africa Presbyterian to appoint committee members from the CCAP who shall be full participants].~~

- The committee will seek to create a framework for collaboration with a broad partnership of civic, health, philanthropic, and other organizations. It would not only seek to address the ravages of malaria, but also: (1) work with partners to establish relationships and protocols that would facilitate both fiscal responsibility and fidelity of participation for collaborators; (2) identify how a large-scale, multi-organizational effort would be managed and reviewed; and, (3) identify specific difficulties minimizing success in previous efforts to combat malaria.

- A report detailing an international plan of action will be presented to the 218th General Assembly (2008).

[• To this end, the extra commitment opportunity mentioned above will also be used to fund an associate position for funds development for the diseases of poverty (such as malaria, TB, and AIDS) in the international context. This position shall be funded for an initial three-year term.]

[Original Financial Implication: (2006) $0; (2007) $33,715; (2008) $28,630 (Mission—Unrestricted)] [Assembly Action: (2006) $0; (2007) $0; (2008) $0]

Rationale

The Presbytery of Northern New York is convicted by the ravages of malaria—causing the death of 1.2 million people in sub-Saharan Africa annually.

Malaria is a disease whose impact is most potent in the parts of the world that are both rural and extremely poor; pregnant women, children under the age of five, and the elderly are the most vulnerable and comprise the vast majority of the fatalities; for those who survive, malaria is a lifelong condition. Only with cooperation and coordination can we reach this deeply into suffering.

Current estimates from the “Roll Back Malaria” Partnership suggest there is currently $250 million being spent worldwide to combat malaria, where $1.8 billion is needed.

The Presbytery of Northern New York believes God is calling the PC(USA) to play a specific role in gathering the strength of many to end the ravaging destruction of malaria in sub-Saharan Africa.

We believe the devastation of malaria is so enormous and the cost so massive, no one will be able to truly make a difference alone. If a special committee were tasked to create the framework for a broad partnership built upon sustainable mission in Africa and utilizing models of public health that have achieved recognized success, then the challenge will be met with the necessary leverage.

Extreme poverty, the scale of the disease, and the challenges of sub-Saharan Africa all necessitate an effort beyond the PC(USA).

Jesus said it only takes a little yeast to leaven the whole loaf. We cannot solve malaria or effect the necessary change on our own. Yet, through Jesus Christ, we can be the leaven who raises the whole.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY COUNCIL COMMENT ON ITEM 11-27

Comment on Item 11-27—From the General Assembly Council.

The General Assembly Council (GAC) urges that no action be taken on Item 11-27.

The General Assembly Council affirms the Christian concern demonstrated by the Presbytery of Northern New York for our brothers and sisters in Africa, whose lives are ravaged by malaria, and the GAC commends the Presbytery of Northern New York for bringing this issue before the General Assembly.

This overture calls for a broad response to the toll of malaria, seeking to reduce malaria “in sub-Saharan Africa,” and it states that a report detailing an “international plan of action” will be presented to the next General Assembly. However, the overture appears to focus its implementation on only one country, Malawi. It is not clear if the committee mandated by the overture is to include members from many nations of sub-Saharan Africa, or from only Malawi.

The GAC believes that concentrating the responses called for by this overture in the specific areas of sub-Saharan African where PC(USA) already has strong partnerships would be more efficient and more effective than trying to mount a campaign to combat malaria in a vast and widely diverse region. The PC(USA) is already providing ongoing support for these church partners as they work to combat malaria. Central to that work is the NetWorkers Malaria Prevention Program of International Health Ministries, which enjoys strong support from Presbyterian Women, and has disbursed more than $375,000 to our church partners, to fund their malaria prevention education activities and provide bed nets.

The GAC affirms the proposed involvement of civic, health, and philanthropic organizations, and recommends that such collaboration be led by PC(USA)’s partner, the Church of Central Africa Presbyterian. It appears feasible that such collaboration could, as the overture suggests, build on successful public health models and leverage support by working collaboratively. The GAC urges that such collaborative efforts be aimed at a multifaceted approach to alleviating the impact of malaria, including environmental controls, education, preventive medications and treatment drugs, and bed nets.

We question, however, the creation of a large, and potentially expensive, committee structure for carrying out this work. We perceive that, to be effective, such a committee would need to meet several times, both in the U.S. and in Africa. Significant budget would be necessary, depending on the size of the committee and the number and location of its meetings. This budget cannot be funded from current GAC resources, and therefore this endeavor would have to be self-funded by its participants, the presbytery, or external sources from which funding can be sought.

We recommend a less expensive alternative that would require no action by the General Assembly: the creation a self-funded network of members, congregations, and presbyteries interested in working with African partners to address malaria-related issues.

The GAC, specifically the International Health Ministries Office, would be able to resource such a network with background information on successful malaria prevention projects (as well as those that have not been successful) and with any assistance needed in working with our partner, the Church of Central Africa Presbyterian.

COGA COMMENT ON ITEM 11-27

Comment on Item 11-27—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly.

Item 11-27 proposes appointing a special committee.

The Standing Rules of the General Assembly (K.1.a) require that commissions or special committees can only be undertaken if the work cannot be done by an existing corporation or entity under its assigned responsibilities.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) advises that Item 11-27 is programmatic in its intent and should be referred to the General Assembly Council. The financial implication for the GAC mission budget to create a special committee of the General Assembly to accomplish this proposal would cost a total of $75,730 over the period 2006–2008.

The COGA is a committee of fifteen persons, elected by the General Assembly from across the church, made up of elders and ministers who supervise the work of the Office of the General Assembly.

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 11-27

Advice and Counsel on Item 11-27—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC).

Item 11-27 calls for the appointment of a special committee to explore the radical reduction of the impact of malaria in sub-Saharan Africa.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC) advises that Item 11-27 be referred to the General Assembly Council, Worldwide Ministries Division, for review and possible action/implementation.

Rationale

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns believes this overture deserves thorough consideration. Pregnant women, children under five, and the elderly are more vulnerable and comprise the vast majority of the fatalities. The ACWC recognizes the financial significance if the overture is implemented. Therefore, ACWC believes a review by the General Assembly Council, Worldwide Ministries Division, of this overture, including consultations with partner churches in Africa such as the Church of Central Africa-Presbyterian, and especially the women in leadership positions in that church, could be incorporated into Worldwide Ministries Division work.

On Supporting the Peace Process in Sudan—From the Presbyteries of Trinity and Shenango.

The Presbyteries of Trinity and Shenango overture the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to reaffirm our denomination’s close connections to Sudan for more than 100 years; to raise awareness of the need to continue advocating for peace in Sudan and for pressure on the government of Sudan¹, National Congress Party, to assure its compliance with the terms of the Comprehensive Peace Agreement (CPA)²; and to explore the appropriateness of taking measures against any companies selling war materiel to the government of Sudan by recommending to the General Assembly that it add~~ing~~ their names to the divestment list of the Committee on Mission Responsibility Through Investment (CMRTI) [General Assembly], stating as follows:”

1. Direct the Stated Clerk to send greetings to our ecumenical partners, the New Sudan Council of Churches and the Sudan Council of Churches, and to our church partners, the Sudan Presbyterian Evangelical Church and the Presbyterian Church of Sudan, thanking God for their courageous and faithful witness to Our Lord Jesus Christ; commending them for their work toward reconciliation that provides an environment for good governance; and affirming our solidarity with them as they increase their capacity for evangelism and the establishment of schools and other community projects necessary to civil society.

2. Encourage all Presbyterians to pray for a just peace for all the people of Sudan; to raise awareness of genocide in Sudan, planned and paid for by the government of Sudan, which continues to the present against the southern and marginalized people of Sudan, including Darfur and eastern Sudan; and to make their voices heard by the leaders of our government, including the president of the United States, secretary of state, members of Congress, and the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, on behalf of continued sanctions against the government of Sudan until a just and lasting peace exists for all people of Sudan.

3. Direct the Committee on Mission Responsibility Through Investment (CMRTI) to explore the appropriateness of recommending to the General Assembly that it add~~ing~~ to its divestment list those companies profiting from the sale of armaments, helicopters, tanks, and other war materiel to the government of Sudan until those companies either suspend their operations in Sudan or a just and lasting peace exists for all people of Sudan.

[4. In view of the massive suffering in the Sudan, we recommend that the General Assembly Council be authorized to act on behalf of the General Assembly on the MRTI's recommendation and to do so with all due speed.]

Rationale

Blessed are the peacemakers, for they will be called children of God (Matt. 5:9). Ties between Presbyterians in the United States and Presbyterians in Sudan go back more than a century to when the Sudan Presbyterian Evangelical Church was organized in northern Sudan and the Presbyterian Church of Sudan was organized in the south as a result of the partition of the country under the Anglo-Egyptian Condominium. Three presbyteries of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) are in specific partner relations with Presbyterians in Sudan, and seven mission personnel are presently assigned to Sudan.³ Furthermore, our partners in Sudan have again called on the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to take action to bring peace and justice to Sudan.⁴

The 209th General Assembly (1997) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) approved Overture 97-75. On the Situation in the Sudan and Our Response to That Situation, to draw attention to the genocide in southern Sudan and request Presbyterians to intercede with prayer, mission personnel, finances, and advocacy with the United States government.

The 212th General Assembly (2000) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) recommended, in response to Commissioners' Resolution 00-6. On Investment in Sudan, that CMRTI explore the appropriateness of complete divestment from Talisman Energy, Inc., a Canadian-based company whose oil revenues helped underwrite the government of Sudan's genocide on the people of southern Sudan. Talisman Energy, Inc. was added to CMRTI's divestment list. In 2002, Talisman suspended its operations in Sudan and later sold its stake.⁵

The 213th General Assembly (2001) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) approved Commissioners' Resolution 01-12. On the Civil War in Sudan, in support of passage by Congress of the Sudan Peace Act of 2002 (SPA). The SPA, intended to encourage good-faith peace negotiations between the government of Sudan and representatives of southern Sudan under threat of sanctions, became law October 21, 2002. The Comprehensive Peace in Sudan Act of 2004, which expanded the SPA by explicitly adding Darfur, became law December 23, 2004. Despite extensive documentation of human rights abuse, systematic rape, arbitrary killings, and the denial of safe passage to agencies for the delivery of humanitarian assistance, however, the situation in Darfur, in particular, remains intractable due to the financing and organizational support afforded the Janjaweed (proxy militias) by the government of Sudan, all to the end of terrorizing internally displaced Sudanese by the hundreds of thousands and all nongovernmental agencies that would venture to provide them basic humanitarian assistance.

After years of delays by the government of Sudan and the persistence of international negotiating teams, the CPA was signed in Sudan on January 9, 2005. The CPA includes eight separate protocols, including those dealing with wealth sharing, power sharing, and autonomy for Southern Sudan. Under the CPA, a Government of National Unity (GNU) has been formed for the six-year transitional period, with Southern Sudan governed autonomously. At the end of the six-year interim, a referendum will be held on the issue of a unified Sudan or secession of the South. For all of the CPA's provisions concerning the government of Sudan to be implemented in a timely manner vigilant monitoring and continuous pressure to overcome the inertia of the government of Sudan's reluctance to share power and wealth will be necessary.⁶

Sudan's long running civil war intensified during the late 1990s, as the government of Sudan waged a ruthless genocide against southern and other marginalized peoples, seeking to transform Sudan's traditional agricultural economy to one based on petroleum exploration and production. The escalation of the genocide, funded by expanding oil revenues, resulted in millions of deaths and millions more being driven by bombs, massacres, and village burnings from their traditional homelands into crowded displacement camps set up in northern Sudan.⁷ By 2004, Sudan's agricultural sector was in ruins, with more than 70 percent of its export earnings deriving from the sale of oil.⁸

During this same time period, member churches of our ecumenical partners, in obedience and discipleship to the teachings of Jesus Christ, began to give the highest priority to justice, peace, reconciliation, and advocacy through a growing movement called the "People-to-People Peace Process."⁹ By striving for reconciliation and peace agreements among tribes and communities of southern Sudan that were engaged in hostilities, raids, looting, and violence against one another, the member churches increased amicable intercommunity relations in southern Sudan. As the peace movement continued to grow, the principles of the People-to-People Peace Process were further developed into the Resource Centre for Civil Leadership (RECONCILE), a program that continues to empower communities for peaceful solutions within the framework of a just civil society.¹⁰

The CPA's six-year interim period presents churches with new needs and opportunities for evangelism, theological training, women's programs, youth work, prison ministries, basic education, and health care. Our church partners should be assured of the readiness of Presbyterians and the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to offer intercessory prayer, advocacy efforts, finances, and trained mission workers to assist them as they rebuild civil society in Sudan.

The Sudan Presbyterian Evangelical Church (SPEC) has grown quickly in recent years as it ministered among the displacement camps in northern Sudan. The SPEC operates two training facilities in the capital, Khartoum, for the preparation of pastors and evangelists: Nile Theological College and Gereif Bible School.¹¹ The Presbyterian Church of Sudan (PCOS), which has also experienced extraordinary growth, is involved in developing the capacity of the churches in education, medical services, and self-sustainability.¹² The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), at previous General Assemblies, has called for solidarity with our sisters and brothers in Sudan as they seek the path of peace through the love of Christ. May Presbyterians feel themselves called to join in support of this historic peace process in Sudan by praying for and assisting our Presbyterian partners in Sudan. Many resources have been made available by the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), both print and internet resources, for prayer, study, advocacy, and support of peace in Sudan. The Worldwide Ministries Division-Central and West Africa Office, Presbyterian Disaster Assistance, the Presbyterian Peacemaking Program, and the Sudan Advocacy Action Forum all offer resources.¹³

Finally, so that concerned Presbyterians may be aware whether their investment interests are connected to the sale of war materiel to the government of Sudan, the CMRTI should explore whether it would be appropriate to add the names of companies so profiting to its divestment list until such companies suspend their operations in Sudan or until a just and lasting peace exists in Sudan. This measure, when applied to Talisman Energy, Inc. contributed to a successful outcome and the same could be hoped for in regard to companies profiting from the unjust suffering of southern and marginalized Sudanese.

4. Dr. Haruun Ruun, executive director of the NSCC, addressing a Church World Service meeting September 22, 2004, "urged international churches and people of faith to advocate for a peaceful resolution in Sudan . . . Haruun Ruun later stated on the issue of advocacy the following: "Sudan could not have reached this far in its history without the effective advocacy mounted by the ecumenical partners. Advocacy will continue to be crucial . . . Internationally—to ensure transparency e.g. in the international trade of Sudan's natural resources for the benefit of the people and thus avoid the Angolan and New Guinean experiences and in monitoring the fragile peace to survive." Talisman is accused of collaborating with the government of Sudan in planning for the disposal of civilians in areas marked for oil exploration and in coordinating military strategy with the government of Sudan that resulted in ethnic cleansing, killings, war crimes, confiscation of property, enslavement, kidnapping, and rape. ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEMS 11-28 and 11-37

Advice and Counsel on Item 11-28 and 11-37 – From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP)

Items 11-28 and 11-37 concern the Sudan/Darfur Crisis.

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) advises that Items 11-28 and 11-37 be approved with comment:

The moral urgency of the situation in Darfur, and now neighboring Chad, constitutes a judgment on those nations, including the United States, which have called the situation a “genocide,” but have done little of consequence to change it. As the overture suggests, weak response by individual governments translates into weakness in international institutions, in this case both the Organization of African States and the United Nations, as well as the International Criminal Court. The particular dynamics of a kind of racial ethnic cleansing involving mass rape and cases of enslavement, as well as mass murder, starvation, and deportation, damage the cause of human rights and weaken international law. Thus the concern of the overtures is well founded. Articles 2–5 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights state:

Article 2

Everyone is entitled to all the rights and freedoms set forth in this Declaration, without distinction of any kind, such as race, colour, sex, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, property, birth or other status.

Furthermore, no distinction shall be made on the basis of the political, jurisdictional or international status of the country or territory to which a person belongs, whether it be independent, trust, non-self-governing or under any other limitation of sovereignty.

Article 3

Everyone has the right to life, liberty and security of person.

Article 4

No one shall be held in slavery or servitude; slavery and the slave trade shall be prohibited in all their forms.

Article 5

No one shall be subjected to torture or to cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment. (See the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, <http://www.un.org/Overview/rights.html>).

A short reference to the Darfur situation is made in the Rationale of Item 09-11, Resolution on Human Rights in a Time of Terrorism and Torture, paragraph four, p. 2.

Commissioners are also advised that Item 03-09, if approved, might serve to delay the implementation of the corporate social responsibility measures contained in the overture. Particularly in cases where government action is slow or blocked, the committee advises that such measures involving the church's investment portfolios are a nonviolent form of moral pressure on governments that deny human rights. In this case, there are also environmental factors at work in the development of oil resources for the benefit of only one sector of the population.

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 11-28

Advice and Counsel on Item 11-28—From the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC).

Item 11-28 calls on PC(USA) to support the Peace Process in Sudan.

The Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC) advises Item 11-28 and Item 11-37 be joined and be approved.

Rationale

The Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC) is called to be a voice of justice and advocacy for women in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and around the world. If ever there was an urgent call for advocacy for a peace process, it is Sudan. The Sudanese women have been calling for justice and peace for decades.¹ The Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns strongly supports Sudanese women in their ongoing work for peace and justice in Sudan and believes immediate action is necessary.

Statement on Taiwan and China

“The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) [~~approve~~][receive] the following [report]: “Statement on Taiwan and China.”

“Statement on Taiwan and China

“The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) greatly values [and shall maintain] its long-standing relationships with both the Presbyterian Church of Taiwan and the China Christian Council. Both provide a strong witness of the love of Jesus Christ to their people.”

The Presbyterian Church of Taiwan, while not always in the same place as its government, is able to speak out on political affairs. In China, while the public sphere is quite different, the church is able to express its views to the government of the People's Republic (PRC).

Despite the tension between the two governments that may be heightened in the period before the 2008 Olympics in Beijing, there are some hopeful signs:

1. Close to a million Taiwanese business people reside in the People's Republic today. Their children attend Taiwanese schools. Commerce and investment across the Strait amount to more than $100 billion.
2. Charter flights from mainland China to Taiwan for the Lunar Holiday allow families to celebrate together.
3. Democratic elections for parliament in Taiwan in December 2004 showed that a majority of the people of Taiwan prefer to play it safe with stability.
4. In May, Chinese President Hu Jintao proposed new diplomatic language aimed at ending the decades-old state of hostilities by agreeing to open talks if Taiwan accepted the principle of "two shores, one China" while acknowledging that the two sides might differ precisely on what that term meant. "[This] deliberate ambiguity of the new wording could allow Taiwan's president, Chen Shui-bian, to claim that 'one China' refers to the Republic of China—the formal name of the government in Taipei—or even a loose federation of the mainland and China" (Pan, Philip P. "China Alters Language On Taiwan." Washington Post, (May 13, 2005): A01).

So what should Americans do in these circumstances? The advice of James R. Lilley, former head of the American Institute in Taiwan and former ambassador to China, is "There is no need to choose sides between Taiwan and China. You can go along with both."

This certainly conforms with the PC(USA) Worldwide Ministries Division's view of partnership with churches around the world, which honors and respects them, but refrains from becoming involved in their internal politics as it encourages dialogue between the churches toward peaceful solution of their differences.

On another matter, Taiwan understandably desires to become a member of the World Health Organization (WHO). Two circumstances could keep this from happening at this time: (1) Given current international relations, the United States may not be the best advocate for Taiwan's membership. (2) China, as a permanent member of the United Nations Security Council, with veto power, would vote "no" to Taiwan's membership.

Fortunately this will not keep the Center for Disease Control in Taiwan from having fast, expert assistance should there be another epidemic, such as SARS was several years ago. The Center for Disease Control (USA) states that part of its mission is to provide a full range of services to countries in need of its expert assistance. This was the case during the SARS epidemic, and would be the case in the future.

Presbyterians in the United States are asked to continue to pray for the people and churches of China and Taiwan as they seek to resolve their differences in a peaceful way and provide Christian witness and mission in their respective countries.

Rationale

This report is in response to the following referrals:

On Promoting a Free, Fair, and Democratic Election in the Democratic Republic of Congo—From the Presbytery of New Hope.

At the request of Congolese Presbyterians, other Congolese people, and their friends around the world, the Presbytery of New Hope overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the PC(USA) to do the following:

- 1. Educate the General Assembly Moderator, the General Assembly Stated Clerk, the General Assembly Council, and the members and clergy of the PC(USA) about conditions in the Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC).
- 2. Establish a Day of Prayer and Fasting for the people of Congo.
- 3. Encourage the General Assembly Moderator, the General Assembly Stated Clerk, the General Assembly Council, and the members and clergy of the PC(USA) to advocate that the U.S. Congress do the following:
 - a. Send a bipartisan congressional delegation to visit the Congo to assess, first hand, ways and means to promote and carry out free, fair, and democratic elections in the Congo.
 - b. Utilize the resources of the U.S. government for continued and increased support to the U.N. to bring under control remaining armed conflicts that divide people in the DRC.
 - c. Support the current efforts to bring unity to the Congo as provided by the Global and Inclusive Accord.
 - d. Utilize the resources of the U.S. government to implement a free, fair, and democratic election in Congo, including financial support now needed to make appropriate preparations for and to carry out the election process.
 - e. Determine responsible channels for directing the use of this money for its intended purposes.
 - f. Utilize the influence of the U.S. government to encourage DRC's neighboring countries to support a free and fair election in DRC.
 - g. Support funding and implementation of a Truth and Reconciliation Commission in Congo after free and fair elections.
 - h. Support and advocate foreign debt forgiveness for Congo after free and fair elections.
 - i. Support and advocate, after free and fair elections, aid for educational, medical, transportation, and telecommunications infrastructure.
 - j. Urge and support the newly elected Congolese government in placing the education of its children and youth as a high priority.

Rationale

The Presbyterian Church of the Congo, now numbering more than two million members, traces its roots to the 1891 missionary efforts of two U.S. Presbyterians: the Reverend William Shepherd and the Reverend Samuel Lapsley.

Our Presbyterian brothers and sisters in the Democratic Republic of Congo are crying out for our help because the Congolese people are living in deplorable and deteriorating conditions; the levels of poverty and hunger are despicable; illiteracy and unemployment are rampant; diseases like HIV/AIDS are increasing; the infrastructure of the nation is crumbling; and political instability is increasing.

The nation of the Democratic Republic of the Congo has great natural resources, has realized little benefit from this potential national wealth, and needs political stability to encourage development.

The people of the Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC) have not experienced the joy of a free, fair, transparent, and democratic election of their national leaders since receiving independence in 1960.

The people of DRC now urgently are calling for a free, fair, transparent, and democratic election of their national leaders as promised to them by the Inter-Congolese Dialogue, sanctioned by a Global and Inclusive Accord and a Transitional Constitution approved by Congolese negotiators in Pretoria, South Africa, on April 4, 2003.

Many Americans of the faith community, including members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), and American friends of Congo who have lived in, and/or visited, this great African country in recent years now plead for free and fair elections.

America is seen in the Congo and around the world, as a people who cherish freedom and democratic institutions, and President George W. Bush in his Second Inaugural Address has articulated U.S. policy in support of free elections in every country around the globe.

Europe has donated a large sum of money to support free elections in the DRC, and the United Nations is increasing the number of peacekeeping troops in the DRC.

Education is the foundation of an effectively functioning democracy and economy, consequently, for an election to succeed and a democratic government to continue, the schools of the Congo must be successful.

Regarding the People and Presbyterian Church of the Congo—From the Presbytery of Chicago.

The Presbytery of Chicago, at the request of Congolese Presbyterians, other Congolese people, and their friends around the world, overtures the 216th General Assembly (2006) to support the Congo Presbyterian Church and the people of the Democratic Republic of the Congo in the following manner.

1. Educate the members of the PC(USA) about conditions in the Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC).
2. Encourage PC(USA) churches and presbyteries to become involved in supporting the Congo's election and the ministries of the Congolese Presbyterian Church that address the well-being of the people of Congo: education, health, and economic development.
3. Encourage members of the PC(USA) to urge their legislators to petition the U.S. Congress to do the following:
 - a. Send a bipartisan congressional delegation to the Congo to assess the current situation and promote a fair democratic election.
 - b. Utilize the resources of the U.S. government to increase support to the U.N. to stop armed conflicts that divide and kill people in the DRC.
 - c. Support current efforts to bring unity and peace to the Congo as provided by the global and inclusive accord.
 - d. Provide significant financial support and other needed resources for the Congo's election.
 - e. Determine and utilize responsible channels for directing the use of this money for its intended purposes.

- f. Utilize the influence of the U.S. government to encourage the Congo's neighboring countries to cease their conflict and their interference in the internal affairs of the Congo.
- g. Urge the Congolese government to place the education of its children and youth as a high priority by
 - (1) providing a free, appropriate education in primary and secondary schools;
 - (2) paying teachers living wages.

Rationale

The Presbyterian Church of the Congo, now numbering more than two million members, traces its roots to the 1890 work of the U.S. Presbyterians, the Reverend William Shepherd and the Reverend Samuel Lapsley, who planted the seeds for the current 819 Presbyterian churches, 349 schools, hospitals, universities, and women's training programs that serve the Congolese people.

Our brothers and sisters in the Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC) are crying out for our help because almost 4 million Congolese have died in the last six years due to civil war and its results, and because those who live there are in deplorable conditions, the levels of poverty and hunger are devastating; illiteracy and unemployment are rampant; diseases like HIV/AIDS are increasing; the infrastructure of the nation is crumbling; and the political instability constantly interferes with recovery efforts.

The people of the DRC have not experienced a democratic election since receiving independence in 1960 and are urgently calling for an election promised to them by the Inter-Congolese Dialogue, through the Global and Inclusive Accord and Transitional Constitution approved by Congolese negotiators in Pretoria, South Africa, on April 4, 2003.

There is great potential for civil war to break out in the Congo if an election does not occur in 2006.

There is a growing outcry for a Congolese election and financial support for the Congo by Americans of all faith communities, including Presbyterians, many of whom have lived in or visited the Congo in recent years and have seen the devastation there.

America is viewed by the Congolese and around the world as a nation that supports the development of democracy and President George W. Bush, in his Second Inaugural Address, articulated U.S. policies in support of elections in every country around the globe.

Education is viewed by the Congolese as the most critical building-block of their future democracy and economy; and support for the 108,000 children and youth in Congolese Presbyterian schools is a priority for the Congolese Presbyterian Church. "Universal primary education" was established as an essential human right by the Millennium Declaration of the United Nations in 2000.

The Democratic Republic of the Congo's natural resources flow out of the country to highly developed countries, including the United States, without the benefits of those resources reaching the citizens of the DRC.

On Support for Congolese People in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC)—From the Presbytery of Eastern Virginia.

The Presbytery of Eastern Virginia respectfully overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to do the following:

1. Address in prayer and in action the human suffering and injustices inflicted upon the Congolese people, of whom our Presbyterian brothers and sisters numbering approximately two million are an integral part.

2. At the request of our Congolese brothers and sisters and their friends around the world, let it be resolved that the PC(USA) advocate with the U.S. government:

a. That a bipartisan U.S. Congressional delegation visit the Congo to assess firsthand ways and means to promote and carry out a free, fair, and democratic election in 2006.

b. That the resources of the U.S. government be utilized in implementing a free, fair, and democratic election in the Congo, including financial support now needed to make appropriate preparations for, and to carry out the election process.

c. That responsible channels be found for directing the use of this money for its intended purposes.

d. That the resources of the U.S. government be utilized for continued and increased support to the U.N. in order to bring under control remaining armed conflicts that divide people in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC).

e. That the U.S. government strongly support efforts to bring unity to the Congo as provided by the Global and Inclusive Accord.

f. That after the election of a fairly elected democratic government, foreign debt be forgiven for the new government of the DRC.

g. That the PC(USA) General Assembly establish a day of prayer and fasting in 2006 for our Congolese brothers and sisters in the DRC.

Rationale

In fewer than ten years after Congo became a personal property of King Leopold II of Belgium, Christian churches, starting with the Catholic Church, began to evangelize, educate, and provide health ministries. Early in 1891, the Presbyterian Church in the U.S. arrived by sending two young Presbyterian ministers: one African American from Virginia, the Reverend William Sheppard, and the other white, the Reverend Samuel Lapsley from Alabama.

These two pioneer Presbyterian missionaries formed what is known as the Presbyterian Church of the Congo, which is now a combination of two General Assemblies: the Presbyterian Church in the Congo (CPC), and Presbyterian Church in Kinshasa (CPK). These General Assemblies now exceed two million Congolese members, almost equal to the total membership of the PC(USA).

Presbyterian advocacy for Congolese people traces its roots to the Reverend William Sheppard. Early in his mission work in the Congo, he discovered and exposed human rights abuses of the Congolese by King Leopold II of Belgium.

Congolese human rights abuses existed during the entire seventy-five year rule of King Leopold and the Belgian government, and throughout the entire 32 years of Mobutu's dictatorship. Injustice and human rights abuses continue to the present day.

Twenty-four delegates from the Presbytery of Eastern Virginia, who visited Kinshasa in July of 2004, were touched by the degree of misery and hardship in which they found their Congolese brothers and sisters living. They came back to the United States with broken hearts full of empathy and compassion. They are the eyewitnesses who heard the Congolese asking for our intervention.

Our Scriptures are rich in calling upon people of faith to address the needs of the poor, oppressed, and weak. Our Lord Jesus calls upon us to love our neighbors and to minister to the least of us. “Religion that is pure and undefiled before God, the Father, is this: to care for orphans and widows in their distress, and to keep oneself unstained by the world” (Jas. 1:27, NRSV).

The people of the DRC have not experienced the joy of a free, fair, transparent, and democratic election of their national leaders since receiving independence in 1960.

The people of DRC are now urgently calling for a free, fair, transparent, and democratic election of their national leaders as promised to them by the Inter-Congolese Dialogue, sanctioned by a Global and Inclusive Accord and a Transitional Constitution approved by Congolese negotiators in Pretoria, South Africa, on April 4, 2003.

Many Americans of the faith community, as well as American friends of the Congo who have lived in and/or visited this great African country in recent years, now plead for free and fair elections.

In the Congo and around the world, America is seen as a community that cherishes freedom and democratic institutions. In his Second Inaugural Address, President George W. Bush articulated U.S. policy in support of free elections in every country around the globe.

The European Union has donated a large sum of money to support free elections in the DRC, and the United Nations is increasing the number of peacemaking troops in the DRC.

ACREC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 11-32

Advice and Counsel on Item 11-32—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC).

Item 11-32 calls for the U.S. government to support the Congolese people by sending a congressional delegation to promote free and fair elections in 2006, forgive debt, and support UN efforts for peace and unity in the Congo. It was submitted by the Presbytery of East Virginia.

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) advises Item 11-32 be approved.

Rationale

The ACREC supports the recommendations of this resolution because much of the instability and human rights abuses arose out of the systemic racism inherent to colonialism. As the overture cites:

Congolese human rights abuses existed during the entire seventy-five year rule of King Leopold and the Belgian government, and throughout the entire thirty-two years of Mobutu’s dictatorship. Injustice and human rights abuses continue to the present day.

The historic role of advocacy on behalf of the Congolese in the Presbyterian church is also part of the valuable legacy of African American Presbyterians. As the overture explains, the Reverend William Sheppard from Virginia “discovered and exposed human rights abuses of the Congolese by King Leopold II of Belgium.”

The ACREC urges the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to continue in the tradition of Rev. Sheppard to advocate on behalf of the people of the Democratic Republic of Congo in the face of human rights abuses that have their roots in colonial oppression.

Item 11-33

[The assembly approved Item 11-33. See pp. 43, 46.]

The General Assembly Council, upon recommendation of its Congregational Ministries Division, recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) approve the following:

THE COMMITMENT TO PEACEMAKING

The 217th General Assembly (2006), recognizing the usefulness of the “Commitment to Peacemaking” to the peacemaking efforts of congregations:

1. Commends those sessions that have adopted the “Commitment to Peacemaking.”
2. Recognizes that the Office of the Stated Clerk sends a certificate of commendation to the stated clerk of the presbytery in which the congregation is located for presentation at a stated meeting of presbytery for those sessions that have adopted the “Commitment to Peacemaking.”
3. Requests stated clerks of presbyteries who receive the certificates for sessions that have adopted the “Commitment to Peacemaking” to present them at a stated meeting of presbytery in such a way as to adequately commend the congregation for this achievement.
4. Urges presbyteries to find ways to share and celebrate the experiences of congregations where sessions have adopted and implemented the “Commitment to Peacemaking.”
5. Urges presbyteries and synods also to consider adopting the “Commitment to Peacemaking” in forms appropriate to those governing bodies and commends those governing bodies that have done so.
6. Commends the 71 presbyteries and 6 synods that have 50 percent or more of their congregations whose sessions have adopted the “Commitment to Peacemaking.”
7. Commends presbyteries that have 75 percent or more of their congregations whose sessions have adopted the “Commitment to Peacemaking.”
8. Urges peacemaking committees of the presbyteries to contact the sessions in their presbytery that have not adopted the “Commitment to Peacemaking” to express the importance of this commitment and to urge their adoption of it.
9. Recognizing that the Presbyterian Peacemaking Program maintains a list of those sessions that have adopted the “Commitment to Peacemaking” in order to serve them in their peacemaking efforts, requests that a report be made to the 218th General Assembly (2008) on the number of sessions that have adopted the “Commitment to Peacemaking.”
10. Requests the 217th General Assembly (2006) to commend publicly those presbyteries that have actively incorporated peacemaking into their ministry, including acknowledging and supporting those congregations whose sessions have adopted the “Commitment to Peacemaking.”
11. As requested by the 216th General Assembly (2004), the 217th General Assembly (2006) honors those presbyteries that have reached 50 percent or more of their congregations whose sessions have adopted the “Commitment to Peacemaking” since the 216th General Assembly (2004).

Rationale

This recommendation is in response to the following referral:

2004 Referral: Item 12-07. The Commitment to Peacemaking, Recommendation 9. That a Report Be Made to the 217th General Assembly (2006) on the Number of Session That Have Adopted the “Commitment to Peacemaking”—From the General Assembly Council (Minutes, 2004, Part I, pp. 74, 901).

The “Commitment to Peacemaking” equips Presbyterians as they seek to implement the Mission Work Plan Justice and Compassion goal, “Advocate for peace and nonviolence in accord with General Assembly policy and direction, and aid other governing bodies in peacemaking efforts.”

As of January 9, 2006, 4,523 congregations have adopted the “Commitment to Peacemaking.” The Presbyterian Peacemaking Program will bring an up-to-date report to the General Assembly when it meets in June 2006.

On Supporting the Continuation of MRTI’s Selective and Careful Process of Corporate Engagement Relating to Human Rights Abuses in Israel and Palestine—From the Presbytery of Newark.

The Presbytery of Newark respectfully overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to do the following:

1. Commend the careful and responsible work of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)’s Mission Responsibility through Investment (MRTI) Committee for its selective and careful process of corporate engagement regarding particular business practices as they relate to human rights abuses in Israel and Palestine.
2. Support the continuation of this process including dialogue with corporations, shareholder proxies, shareholder resolutions, and, only if necessary, recommendations for divestment as mandated by the 216th General Assembly (2004)—consistent with the church’s long-standing practice of ensuring its investments are used to further the church’s mission.
3. Express grave concern that over the past two years the peace process has been seriously damaged by the policies and actions of both Israeli and Palestinian leaders.
4. Call upon Israel to stop settlement population growth by means of new immigration in the West Bank, East Jerusalem, and the Jordan Valley; begin a process of substantial settlement withdrawal; end the construction or reconstruction of any defensive barriers or walls beyond the 1967 border and therefore within the Palestinian territory; and end extra-legal assassinations of Palestinians.
5. Call upon Hamas to expressly end violence and disavow the goal of expelling Israel from Palestine; recognize Israel; form a government in coalition with Fatah and other parties for the purpose of creating a viable, independent, peaceful, and secure Palestinian nation.
6. Continue to pursue dialogue among Christians, Jews, and Muslims, including all other stakeholders in the Middle East, thereby continuing the historic recommendations and practices of the Presbyterian Church (U. S. A.).

Rationale

The continuing aggression by Israel on the one hand by means of settlement expansion and military occupation and on the other hand the violent response by Palestinian militant groups to that expansion and occupation are major causes of the continuation and prolongation of the Israel-Palestine conflict. They have led not to negotiation, reconciliation, and security for either Israel or the Palestinians but to an increase in extremism and polarization on both sides of the conflict. The calls by Hamas and other extremist groups for the violent expulsion of Israel and Israelis from all of Palestine are matched by the calls within Israel for the expulsion of Palestinians from all of the West Bank.

The continuing involvement of multinational corporations, as identified by MRTI, whose work contributes to the violence committed by both the government of Israel and the Palestinian Authority greatly endangers the peace process.

The MRTI’s process of research, dialogue, and engagement with corporations, including the filing of shareholder resolutions, has been successful as a means of ensuring that PC(USA) investments are consistent with the church’s moral values, and promotes its mission goals. These goals include peace, social and economic justice, and respect for human rights. The MRTI’s engagement strategies have addressed corporate practices in numerous countries, including Colombia, Iran, Syria, China, Nigeria, Indonesia, Guatemala, Nicaragua, Burma, Equatorial Guinea, Bangladesh, Mexico, and Vietnam.

When the lengthy engagement process does not achieve positive results, MRTI may recommend that the General Assembly place the corporation on the General Assembly divestment list. Previous occasions when divestment recommendations have been made and approved include:

- the traditional policies of no investment in companies involved in tobacco, alcohol, gambling, and pornography,
- limits on investments in military manufacturing corporations,
- most famously in some companies doing business in South Africa during the apartheid regime, and
- most recently the Canadian oil company, Talisman Energy, for its oil exploration and construction of a pipeline in the Sudan.

When considering engagements with corporations, including possible divestment, all stakeholders in the Middle East conflict should be seen as potential subjects of the work of MRTI.

Phased Selective Divestment: Giving Voice to the Silenced—From the Presbytery of Boston.

The Presbytery of Boston overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to do the following:

1. Receive this overture as a statement of thanksgiving for the 216th General Assembly (2004) and its faithful social witness to the Gospel in the approval and implementation of Item 12.01, Initiating Divestment and Ending Occupation.
2. Commend the General Assembly Council for its administration of the assembly's work and the MRTI Committee for its "progressive engagement" of firms whose services or products foster violence and injustice in Israel and Palestine.
3. Continue to work with ecumenical and interfaith partners to complete "phased selective divestment" as a means of engaging corporate entities, government agencies, and the religious community in exploration and dialogue that those long silenced in Palestine and Israel might know justice, freedom, and peace.
4. Continue to develop educational and interpretive materials about this "phased selective divestment" program so that those intrigued and/or aroused by the church's witness might discover a cogent, faithful Christian argument.

Rationale

Through this overture, the Presbytery of Boston expresses its appreciation to the 217th General Assembly (2006) for the social policy witness of the 216th General Assembly (2004) concerning Palestine and Israel. Further, by supporting that witness, the Presbytery of Boston encourages sessions, presbyteries, and synods to affirm the power and potential of reconciliation in Palestine and Israel. As the Confession of 1967 foretells, our witness can make a difference.

The 216th General Assembly (2004) approved a resolution, “On Israel and Palestine: Initiating Divestment and Ending Occupation,” and instructed the Mission Responsibility Through Investment (MRTI) Committee to “initiate a process of phased selective divestment in multinational corporations operating in Israel, in accordance to General Assembly policy on social investing, and to make appropriate recommendations to the General Assembly Council for action.”

1. On Social Policy Witness

The 216th General Assembly (2004)’s resolution and the instructions given the Mission Responsibility Through Investment Committee were prompted by receipt of an overture from the Presbytery of St. Augustine. Social policy witness by governing bodies of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is an intrinsic component of the church’s mission. (See the Report of the Task Force on Why and How the Church Makes a Social Policy Witness, approved by the 205th General Assembly (1993).) The presbytery was warmly commended for its resolution.

The 216th General Assembly (2004) and the General Assembly Council had little time to prepare for public reaction to the assembly’s actions. Reaction came swiftly and, at times, was negative.

Presbyterian General Assemblies are not made anxious by reaction to the church’s social witness. Nonetheless, the role of Christian leadership can become lonely without the concerted expression of fellowship by sister governing bodies.

2. On Phased Selective Divestment

Language approved by the 216th General Assembly (2004) called for “phased selective divestment” of assets currently invested in corporations identified through an ecumenical and interfaith process.

The assembly’s action invokes a tested Reformed process. Since 1984, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has engaged more than twenty corporations in dialogue over military-related and tobacco manufacture and distribution, and human rights practices—practices that fall short of God’s vision for creation.

Phased selective divestment calls the church to three tasks: education, interpretation, and public witness. First, we are challenged to study, learn, and understand—to become better informed about life in Palestine and Israel. Second, we are asked to become proficient reporters of the realities present in Palestine and Israel. Third, we are to engage in acts of public dialogue and witness including the divestment of assets invested in firms identified as contributing to violence in Palestine and Israel.

Pursuant to social policy witness through investments, the MRTI Committee established criteria for assessment of company behavior:

Activities and products that are used to

- support and maintain Israeli occupation;
- establish, expand, or maintain Israeli settlements;
- support or facilitate violent acts by Israelis or Palestinians against innocent civilians; and
- support or facilitate the construction of the Separation Barrier.

The MRTI Committee identified five companies in which the PC(USA) invests that engage in the activities listed above. These firms are:

- Caterpillar—Manufactures heavy equipment used by Israel to demolish homes, destroy olive trees, and construct roads for Israeli-settler-use-only in occupied territory.
- CitiGroup—Allegedly served as a conduit via Arab banks and terrorist organizations for funds from various charities that were payments to families of Palestinian suicide bombers.
- ITT Industries—Supplies the Israeli military with communications, electronic, and night vision equipment used by its forces in occupied territory.

- Motorola—Develops encrypted wireless communication equipment used by Israeli military in occupied territory and invests in unlicensed cell phone companies that market their products to Israeli settlements but evade payments of millions of dollars in legal taxes that would benefit the Palestinian economy.
- United Technologies—Provides helicopters used by Israeli military for attempted assassination strikes on suspected Palestinian terrorists, often killing innocent civilian bystanders.

Guided by the principals of phased selective divestment, MRTI has begun a conversation with each company. Simultaneously, it has initiated a conversation with the investment committees of General Assembly entities.

3. On Presbyterian Concerns in Palestine and Israel

Christians have a historic place within the communities of the Middle East. Believers (the Middle East Council of Churches estimates the number to be between 14 and 16 million) gather in congregations throughout the region. Approximately 75,000 Arab Christians live in the West Bank, Gaza, or East Jerusalem.

The number of Arab Christians, including those in the West Bank, Gaza, and East Jerusalem, is declining. We know this to be the case, in part, because of the number of Arab Christians who now worship in our congregations.

In many of our places of worship, we hear firsthand of conflict between Palestinian and Israeli cultures. Arab Christians witness to the marginalization and silencing of the whole Palestinian community by Israeli security forces as well as violence perpetrated by extremists on all sides. We hear of bulldozers demolishing homes and uprooting farms, and walls severing communication among family members.

The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has said that a just peace would include “a state of Palestine with safe and secure borders that includes the Gaza Strip, the West Bank, and East Jerusalem in a manner that permits geographical integrity and economic viability” (from “Steps Toward Peace in Israel and Palestine”, PC(USA), Resource Sheet 20, February 2005).

Today, approximately 200 Israeli settlements have been established within the geographical area envisioned as a Palestinian state but occupied since the Six Day War of 1967. These settlements are lodged on land taken from Palestinians. Almost 500,000 Israelis now live inside the occupied territories of the West Bank and East Jerusalem. With the backing of the United States government, a system of highways has been constructed in the occupied territories. To further bolster control, concrete walls—in places twice as high as the Berlin Wall—and electric fences now confine Palestinians to “cantons” or enclaves. This wall, 425 miles long, encroaches into Palestinian territory, blocks free movement of Palestinians (even if they are Israeli citizens), and may become the de facto border between Palestine and Israel for the foreseeable future.

It is clear that the Christian community, in particular the Reformed community, has an abiding interest in the just, equitable, and peaceful resolution of the dispute between Palestine and Israel. Our community knows something about the daily dangers faced by Palestinian and Israeli sisters and brothers of multiple faiths working for justice, freedom, and peace. We have not forgotten the captivity of General Assembly Moderator Ben Weir, his suffering and release, and the risks faced by those throughout the region who engage in works of reconciliation today.

A Brief Statement of Faith says:

In a broken and fearful world the Spirit gives us courage to pray without ceasing, to witness among all peoples to Christ as Lord and Savior, to unmask idolatries in Church and culture,
to hear the voices of peoples long silenced, and to work with others for justice, freedom, and peace. (The Book of Confessions, A Brief Statement of Faith, 10.4, Lines 65–71)

Since it is the church’s vocation to hear the voices of peoples long silenced;

Since it is the church’s mission to work with others for justice, freedom, and peace;

Since assemblies are called to speak truth to power; and

Since there is clear and abundant evidence that our witness is needed;

This presbytery affirms its witness through the preceding recommendations.

On Recognizing the Value of Proactive, Constructive Nonviolence and Establishing Nonviolence Training—From the Presbytery of Baltimore.

The Presbytery of Baltimore overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to approve the following resolution regarding proactive, constructive nonviolence:

Violence permeates America and the rest of the world in the 21st century. It threatens the life and well-being of children and adults everywhere. People, with longing spirits and wounded hearts, look to the church for help in reducing violence and resolving conflicts without using the violent means so destructive to themselves, others, and the environment. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) hereby responds to this need for reducing violence by establishing a program for clergy and church members that teaches the power, tools, and application of the creative, democratic, and liberating nonviolence taught by Jesus, specifically by

1. Directing the General Assembly Council to do the following:

a. Expand the scope of the Presbyterian Peacemaking Program by recognizing and incorporating proactive, constructive nonviolence as an essential part of the peacemaking program.

b. Direct the Presbyterian Peacemaking Program to establish—within existing budgets—and implement a training program for clergy and laypersons that teaches the principles, practices, and application of proactive, constructive nonviolence, thus empowering individuals and congregations with an expanded vision of nonviolence and a readiness to take action. Such a program should include:

(1) Developing and supporting programs, workshops, and retreats in nonviolence training throughout the country.

(2) Preparing facilitators who will organize and implement nonviolence retreats and present nonviolence training for congregations.

(3) A nonviolence training curriculum that recognizes the roots of violence; provides understanding of how nonviolence empowers people; explores the proactive, constructive nonviolence of Jesus; provides the tools and skills for nonviolent action and social change; studies historical and existing dynamic positive social movements; and encourages participants to move into the world with plans for personal and social nonviolent actions and attitudes that foster peace.

(4) A goal of building communities of people trained in nonviolence who can lead families, churches, organizations, and communities committed to peace, justice, and reconciliation.

c. Include on the PC(USA) Webpage a nonviolence network resource page to provide up-to-date information about retreats, training, activities, and internet links to other pertinent web sites.

2. Encouraging each presbytery to recruit a coordinator of nonviolence training to organize and train facilitators and to promote training throughout the presbytery.

Rationale

For seventy-six years the Presbyterian church has recognized that nonviolence is one way that Christians can be faithful: “The Assembly declares its belief that the right and duty of citizenship should not be conditioned upon the test of ability or willingness, contrary to conscience, to bear arms or to take part as a combatant of war” according to the 142nd General Assembly (1930) of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America. This position has been affirmed by many General Assemblies, most recently by the 215th General Assembly (2003).

In Peacemaking: The Believer’s Calling (1980) the General Assembly affirmed that “The church is obedient to Christ when it nurtures and equips God’s people as peacemakers” and specifically recommended that the emerging peacemaking program “Develop leadership at all levels of church life for a peacemaking ministry in the community of the church universal. ...”

In Christian Obedience in a Nuclear Age (1988) the General Assembly said, “Nonviolence is both a way of life and a tactical method. As a way of life ... it seeks peacefully to affirm creation, to respect the value and dignity of all human beings, and to recognize the potential for human fulfillment in all of God’s people. As a tactical method, nonviolence asserts the value of peaceful methods of change. ...”

The 212th General Assembly (2000) “Call[ed] upon Presbyterians, individually and in family, congregational, and presbytery settings, to study about and promote the development of a culture of peace and nonviolence at all levels of society.”

And the 216th General Assembly (2004) “Affirm[ed] that the just peacemaking principles of the PC(USA), as recognized by the 210th General Assembly (1998), are equally pertinent for addressing terrorism. These include (1) the promotion and preferential use of nonviolent means for conflict resolution and change. ...”

It has been the experience of the Presbytery of Baltimore that a training program can instill proactive, constructive nonviolent lifestyle as a powerful, life-enriching, spirit-filled dimension of peace building. Nonviolence training can be successfully integrated into the larger peace and justice program of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and its inclusion can bring new life, energy, and involvement.

The Baltimore proactive, constructive nonviolence training program, Transforming Violence to Wholeness, was initiated by the Peacemaking in a Violent World Task Group of the Peace and Justice Committee of the Presbytery of Baltimore, with the support of the Synod of the Mid-Atlantic. It began with a nonviolence retreat held in April 2004 in partnership with the Fellowship of Reconciliation (FOR). From that initial training, six people from the Presbytery of Baltimore received advanced training through FOR as facilitators to lead nonviolence programs and retreats. During the past year these facilitators conducted four, twenty-hour nonviolence training retreats and one facilitator retreat. In addition, they have facilitated many shorter workshops and programs.

Attendees have included national staff of the Presbyterian Peacemaking Program and the Presbyterian Peace Fellowship as well as members of fourteen Baltimore Presbyterian churches, and members of twelve other faith groups from nine states.

This program has been well received by the churches of the Presbytery of Baltimore and we commend it to the whole church.

On Advocating for Positive Change in Darfur and All of Sudan—From the Presbytery of the Palisades.

The Presbytery of the Palisades overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to use its influence in every possible way to advocate for positive change in Darfur and all of Sudan:

1. We call upon the appropriate agencies within the denomination to make available educational materials that address the political, racial, and religious issues involved.

2. We call upon the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to direct the Committee on Mission Responsibility Through Investment (CMRTI) to review all of its investments to determine if it has any holdings in companies doing business in Sudan. If any such holdings do exist, CMRTI is directed to explore the appropriateness of [recommending to the General Assembly that it] add[ing] to its divestment list those companies profiting from sales [of products other than humanitarian in nature.] to Sudan, until those companies either suspend their operation in Sudan or a just and lasting peace exists for all people of Sudan.

3. We call upon the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to take all other steps it may deem appropriate, and to bring all reasonable influence to bear on the Sudanese government to take the necessary steps to restore peace, stability, and community in all regions of Sudan, but particularly in the region of Darfur, which has been, and continues to be, subject to the extremes of human rights atrocities and genocide.

[4. In view of the massive suffering in the Sudan, we recommend that the General Assembly Council be authorized to act on behalf of the General Assembly on the MRTI’s recommendation and to do so with all due speed.]

Rationale

Since early 2003, the government of Sudan has followed a policy of extreme violence against the Darfur region in the western part of the country.

This violence has included not only a massive campaign of aerial bombardment against civilians, but also government support for Arab militia called Janjaweed, that have been given free rein to murder, rape, pillage, and in all ways destabilize and destroy community life in Darfur.

It is estimated that at least 400,000 Darfurians have lost their lives, more than 2 million are internally displaced, and more than 200,000 have fled to neighboring Chad.

These human rights atrocities, considered a genocide by many, are continuing in spite of numerous United Nations resolutions and an international outcry.

Many multinational corporations are operating in Sudan in cooperation with government-owned corporations and through direct contracts with the regime.

The royalties and other payments from these arrangements continue to enable the Sudanese government to fund the genocide in Darfur.

It is essential to respond to the human rights tragedy there by bringing maximum pressure to bear on the initiation of appropriate corrective measures.

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEMS 11-28 and 11-37

Advice and Counsel on Item 11-28 and 11-37 – From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP)

Items 11-28 and 11-37 concern the Sudan/Darfur Crisis.

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) advises that Items 11-28 and 11-37 be approved with comment:

The moral urgency of the situation in Darfur, and now neighboring Chad, constitutes a judgment on those nations, including the United States, which have called the situation a “genocide,” but have done little of consequence to change it. As the overture suggests, weak response by individual governments translates into weakness in international institutions, in this case both the Organization of African States and the United Nations, as well as the International Criminal Court. The particular dynamics of a kind of racial ethnic cleansing involving mass rape and cases of enslavement, as well as mass murder, starvation, and deportation, damage the cause of human rights and weaken international law. Thus the concern of the overtures is well founded. Articles 2–5 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights state:

Article 2

Everyone is entitled to all the rights and freedoms set forth in this Declaration, without distinction of any kind, such as race, colour, sex, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, property, birth or other status.

Furthermore, no distinction shall be made on the basis of the political, jurisdictional or international status of the country or territory to which a person belongs, whether it be independent, trust, non-self-governing or under any other limitation of sovereignty.

Article 3

Everyone has the right to life, liberty and security of person.

Article 4

No one shall be held in slavery or servitude; slavery and the slave trade shall be prohibited in all their forms.

Article 5

No one shall be subjected to torture or to cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment. (See the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, <http://www.un.org/Overview/rights.html>).

A short reference to the Darfur situation is made in the Rationale of Item 09-11, Resolution on Human Rights in a Time of Terrorism and Torture, paragraph four, p. 2.

Commissioners are also advised that Item 03-09, if approved, might serve to delay the implementation of the corporate social responsibility measures contained in the overture. Particularly in cases where government action is slow or blocked, the committee advises that such measures involving the church’s investment portfolios are a nonviolent form of moral pressure on governments that deny human rights. In this case, there are also environmental factors at work in the development of oil resources for the benefit of only one sector of the population.

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 11-37

Advise and Counsel on Item 11-37—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC).

Item 11-37 advocates for positive change in Darfur and all of Sudan.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC) advises Item 11-37 be approved.

Rationale

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns is called to be a voice of justice and advocacy for women in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and around the world. If ever there was an urgent call for advocacy for a peace process, it is Sudan. The Sudanese women have been calling for justice and peace for decades.¹

On Supporting the Democratic Aspirations of the People of Haiti—From the Presbytery of New York City.

The Presbytery of New York City overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to:

1. Give thanks to God for the life and dignity of all human beings, especially those whose condition of poverty and oppression is contrary to the will of God as expressed by Jesus Christ, our Lord.
2. Reaffirm the support of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) for the right of all people, in particular those of Haiti, to self-government and the free exercise of democratic processes without interference from other nations.
3. Warn against all lawless or excessive violence in Haiti, whether that of political groups, street gangs, insurgent movements, the Haiti National Police, the United Nations peacekeeping force (MINUSTAH), kidnappers, or common criminals.
4. Express its alarm and disapproval of interference made in recent years by agents of the United States government in Haiti’s constitutional and democratic processes.
5. Call upon the Government of the United States to adopt a Haiti policy that is friendly toward the political empowerment of the vast majority of Haitian citizens, who are poor, often disenfranchised, and systematically excluded from participation in political life.
6. Ask that the United States government be generous in its trade agreements and financial aid to Haiti, providing assistance without imposing conditions that are deleterious to Haiti’s economic health, self-government, and independence.

Rationale

Since Haiti declared its national independence in 1804 after a successful war of rebellion from France, it has been subject to highly oppressive measures, usually of an economic nature but sometimes military, imposed upon it by stronger nations. Since the early 20th century, the dominant force in Haiti's political and economic life has been the United States government.

To speak only of recent troubles: Between 2000 and 2004, the U.S. government and organizations allied with it destabilized Haiti by undermining its democratically elected president, fomenting a crisis that led to a second coup d'état against him. For example, in 2001, the U.S. government initiated a loan-embargo, using its veto power in the Inter-American Development Bank (IDB) board of directors to block release of already approved loans for health care, education, and water—unjustly increasing the hardship of Haiti's people. Although U.S. interference in Haiti's political process has been observed for years by many scholars and reporters, it has received scant attention in major news outlets until a work of investigative journalism published in The New York Times in January this year. ("Mixed U.S. Signals Helped Tilt Haiti Toward Chaos: Democracy Undone: Back Channels vs. Policy," by Walt Bogdanich and Jenny Nordberg, January 29, 2006).

The interim government of Haiti that the U.S., France, and Canada, installed in March of 2004 has incarcerated many political prisoners. In spite of the recent presidential election, the democratic process in Haiti is far from secured.

Haitian people need political and economic empowerment more than they need charity. Indeed, the lack of such empowerment and the heavy-handed treatment of the Haitian government by the U. S. government are prime causes of poverty in Haiti.

The people of the United States, by and large, have come to take Haiti's destitution for granted and to view it as irremediable. This overtone is predicated on the belief that the PC(USA) has a responsibility to do what it can to correct these attitudes and to influence the U. S. government to support the democratic aspirations of Haiti's poor, who are its vast majority.

On Moving to a Strategy of Investment in Businesses that Promote Peace, Justice, and Reconciliation Between Israelis and Palestinians—From the Presbytery of the Western Reserve.

The Presbytery of the Western Reserve respectfully overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to pursue faithfully and consistently its historic vision of peace, justice, and security for all the peoples in the Middle East; and to do the following:

1. Move from the divestment strategy of the 216th General Assembly (2004) to a strategy of investment in businesses, not-for-profit programs, nongovernmental organizations (NGO's) and diplomatic efforts that promote peace, justice, and reconciliation between Israelis and Palestinians.

2. Encourage PC(USA) congregations to engage the Jewish and Palestinian American communities through dialogue on issues of mutual concern and by developing projects locally and in the Middle East that harness the talents and resources of our religious communities that promote peace, justice, and reconciliation.

Rationale

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has given longstanding support to a just and lasting peace in the Middle East and we believe that our church can play a positive role in fostering Middle East peace.

Since a large majority of Israelis and Palestinians prefer peace with their neighbors, rather than violence and war, and are ready to make hard sacrifices to achieve it, the 217th General Assembly (2006) should instruct the PC(USA) to promote a peacemaking strategy that includes selective investment of time, talent, and financial resources in companies, not-for-profits, NGO's, and diplomatic efforts that support a just and lasting peace in the region.

In continuity with many past resolutions of prior General Assemblies, this overture reaffirms that both Israelis and Palestinians have a right to freedom, security, and self-governance within their own state, and, further, such states must be established in conformance with the borderlines existent before the 1967 War. Both states must be economically viable as well as safe and secure.

God's call compels the PC(USA) to work for justice and peace for Israelis and Palestinians by speaking and acting with our witness and resources.

On Approving One Week of Prayer and Witness with Christians in the Middle East—From the Presbytery of Western New York.

The Presbytery of Western New York overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the PC(USA) to ~~approve~~ recommend that each church and presbytery seriously consider celebrating one Week of Prayer and Witness with Christians in the Middle East during the season between Easter and Pentecost 2007 ~~[to be celebrated in every church and presbytery].~~

Events for this week could include:

- 1. Sunday worship; liturgical resources, stories and visuals to be provided.

2. Speakers and mission exchange visits.
3. Education; Presbytery forums, adult and young adult education programs, seminary/college “teach ins” (mini-courses), etc.
4. A children’s project and youth materials.
5. Resources for clergy retreats.
6. Information on appropriate Holy Land travel options [that incorporate visits and interaction with both Israelis and Palestinians].
7. Craft fairs from Middle Eastern artisans.
8. Middle Eastern partnership celebrations and opportunities such as home-building projects and adopt-a-church, or community.
9. Congressional accompaniment travel opportunities.

Rationale

The present crisis in the Middle East has substantially impacted the lives of all who live there. This organized plan will focus the attention of congregations and presbyteries on Christians who endure the struggle of being a minority in their culture. It will offer ideas, plans, and resources to deepen understanding and broaden mission awareness. It will also help those who share these concerns to find each other to interrelate in mission outreach and to develop effective partnerships.

To be staffed by General Assembly Council (Worldwide Ministries Division personnel) and members of the PC(USA) Israel/Palestine Mission Network.

On Rescinding the Divestiture Policy to Restore Trust Between Presbyterians, Our Jewish Friends, and the General Public—From the Presbytery of the Mid-South.

The Presbytery of the Mid-South overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to protest the Israeli divestiture recommendation made by the 216th General Assembly (2004), which met in Richmond, Virginia. Furthermore, believing that having this recommendation could be harmful to the membership and missions of Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), the assembly rescinds this policy in the interest of restoring trust between Presbyterians, our Jewish friends, and the general public.

[The assembly referred Item 12-01 to the General Assembly Council (Office of Theology and Worship). See p. 14.]

On Creating the Office of Minister of Christian Education—From the Presbytery of Mission.

The Presbytery of Mission overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to create the office of minister of Christian education and to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendments to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

1. Shall G-6.0103 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“The Church offices mentioned in the New Testament which this church has maintained include those of presbyters (ministers of the Word and Sacrament, ministers of Christian education, and elders) and deacons. (Ephesians 4:11–12)”

2. Shall G-6.0106 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“a. To those called to exercise special functions in the church—deacons, elders, and ministers ~~of the Word and Sacrament~~—God gives suitable gifts for their various duties. In addition to possessing the necessary gifts and abilities, natural and acquired, those who undertake particular ministries should be persons of strong faith, dedicated discipleship, and love of Jesus Christ as Savior and Lord. Their manner of life should be a demonstration of the Christian gospel in the church and in the world. They must have the approval of God’s people and the concurring judgment of a governing body of the church.

“b. Those who are called to office in the church are to lead a life in obedience to Scripture and in conformity to the historic confessional standards of the church. Among these standards is the requirement to live either in fidelity within the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman (W-4.9001), or chastity in singleness. Persons refusing to repent of any self-acknowledged practice which the confessions call sin shall not be ordained and/or installed as deacons, elders or ministers ~~of the Word and Sacrament~~.”

3. Shall G-6.0203 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“When ministers of the Word and Sacrament are designated as educators, chaplains, pastoral counselors, campus ministers, missionaries, partners in mission, evangelists, administrators, social workers, consultants, or in other specific tasks appropriate to the ministry of the church, they shall evidence a quality of life which helps to share the ministry of the good news. They shall exercise pastoral care of those for whom they are responsible and shall seek to fulfill their ministry by serving Christ and their fellow men and women, strengthening the church and equipping it for concern and service to the life of the human community. In addition to fulfilling the particular responsibilities to which they are called, they shall participate in a congregation, in their presbytery, and in ecumenical relationships, and shall be eligible for election to the higher governing bodies of the church and to the boards and agencies of those governing bodies.”

4. Shall a new section “G-6.0300 Ministers of Christian Education” be added and the subsequent sections, “G-6.0300–.0503,” be re-numbered as “G-6.0400–.0603.” The new section, “G-6.0300,” and subsequent sections, shall read as follows:

“G-6.0300 3. Ministers of Christian Education

“G-6.0301

“As the Lord has set aside through calling and training certain members to perform a special ministry of Christian education and has committed to them a form that is primarily educational, the church, through the presbytery, calls them to the responsibility and office of ministers of Christian education. Such ministers shall be members of presbytery, which shall designate them to such work as may be helpful to the church in mission, in the performance of which they shall be accountable to the presbytery. They shall be responsible for participation in the larger ministry of the church in addition to the duties to which they are called and designated by the presbytery. Ministers of Christian education have membership in presbytery by action of the presbytery itself, and maintain their membership in accordance with G-11.0000.

~~“G-6.0302~~

“When ministers of Christian education are designated as educators, chaplains, pastoral counselors, campus ministers, missionaries, partners in mission, evangelists, administrators, social workers, consultants, or in other specific tasks appropriate to the ministry in the church, they shall evidence a quality of life that helps to share the ministry of the good news. They shall seek to fulfill their ministry by serving Christ and their fellow men and women, strengthening the church and equipping it for concern and service to the life of the human community. In addition to fulfilling the particular responsibilities to which they are called, they shall participate in a congregation, in their presbytery and in ecumenical relationships, and shall be eligible for election to the higher governing bodies of the church and to the boards and agencies of those governing bodies.

~~“G-6.0303~~

“In the exercise of pastoral care, ministers of Christian education shall maintain a relationship of trust and confidentiality, and shall hold in confidence all information revealed to them in the course of providing such care and all information relating to the exercise of such care. When the person whose confidences are at issue gives express consent to reveal confidential information, then a minister of Christian education may, but cannot be compelled to reveal confidential information. A minister of Christian education may reveal confidential information when she or he reasonably believes that there is risk of imminent bodily harm to any person.

[Text remains unchanged.]

5. Shall G-6.0501 (or G-6.0601 as renumbered in Recommendation 4. above) be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added is shown as italic.]

“When a church officer, whether a minister of the Word and Sacrament, minister of Christian education, elder, or deacon, renounces the jurisdiction of this church in writing to the clerk or stated clerk of the governing body of jurisdiction, the renunciation shall be effective upon receipt. Renunciation of jurisdiction shall remove the officer from membership and ordained office and shall terminate the exercise of office.”

6. Shall G-7.0102 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added is shown as italic.]

“The particular church carries a vital responsibility in the mission of the church. There God’s people perform especially the ministries of worship, proclamation, sharing the Sacraments, evangelism, education, teaching, nurture, counseling, personal and social healing, and service. Without this basic ministry to persons, neighborhoods, and communities, and the support given at the congregational level through prayer, personnel, and money, any other significant ministry of the church becomes impossible. Congregations serve as essential mission arms of the presbytery and of the larger church.”

7. Shall G-7.0103 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added is shown as italic.]

“The members of a particular church voluntarily put themselves under the leadership of their officers, whom they elect. The session, which consists of the pastor or co-pastors, the associate pastors, the minister of Christian education, and the elders in active service, is the governing body in a particular church. The law and government of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) presuppose the fellowship of women and men with their children in voluntary covenanted relationship with one another and with God through Jesus Christ. The organization rests upon the fellowship and is not designed to work without trust and love.

8. Shall G-7.0302a be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added is shown as italic.]

“The congregation shall hold an annual meeting and may hold other meetings as necessary. The annual meeting may consider such business as electing officers, hearing reports of the session along with plans for the coming year, hearing reports from the board of deacons and other organizations of the church, and transacting other business as is appropriate. It shall review the adequacy of the compensation of the pastor or pastors and the minister of Christian education upon report of the prior review by the session. (G-10.0102n) Public notice of the meeting shall be given on two successive Sundays.”

9. Shall G-7.0304a(2)–(3) be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added is shown as italic.]

“(2) matters related to the calling of a pastor or pastors or minister of Christian education;

“(3) matters related to the pastoral relationship or relationship with the minister of Christian education, such as changing the call, or requesting or consenting or declining to consent to dissolution;”

10. Shall G-7.0308 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added is shown as italic.]

“Since neither a minister of Word and Sacrament nor a minister of Christian education is ~~not~~ a member of the congregation, she or he may not vote in the meeting of the congregation. When there is a tie vote, a minister of Word and Sacrament presiding shall put the question a second time. If there is a tie vote again, the motion is lost.”

11. Shall G-9.0101 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added is shown as italic.]

“The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) shall be governed by representative bodies composed of presbyters; ~~both~~ elders, ~~and~~ ministers of the Word and Sacrament and ministers of Christian education. These governing bodies shall be called”

12. Shall G-9.0501b be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added is shown as italic.]

“b. Committees of governing bodies above the session shall consist of laypersons, ~~and~~ ministers of Word and Sacrament, and ministers of Christian education with at least one half the members being laypersons.”

13. Shall G-9.0503a(1) and (4) be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added is shown as italic.]

“(1) to ordain ministers of Word and Sacrament and ministers of Christian education and to install them in permanent ~~pastoral~~ called relations.

“Sections (2) and (3) remain unchanged.

“(4) to visit particular churches, governing bodies, or other organizations of the church reported to be affected with disorder,^d and to inquire into and settle the difficulties therein, except that no commission shall have the power to dissolve a ~~pastoral~~ called relationship unless such power has been specifically delegated to it by the appointing body;”

14. Shall G-9.0504a–b be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added is shown as italic.]

“a. An administrative commission of a session shall consist of at least two elders and the moderator of the session or other minister of the Word and Sacrament or minister of Christian education installed in a permanent relationship within the particular church governed by the session.

“b. Administrative and judicial commissions of presbytery, synod, and the General Assembly shall be composed of ministers of the Word and Sacrament and/or ministers of Christian education and elders in numbers as nearly equal as possible.”
[The rest of the text remains unchanged.]

15. Shall G-9.0801a–b be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added is shown as italic.]

“a. Each presbytery and synod shall elect a nominating committee broadly representative of the member churches of the presbytery or presbyteries, with a membership of one third ministers of the Word and Sacrament and/or ministers of Christian education, one third laywomen, and one third laymen. The nominating committee shall consist of three classes, each serving for a three-year term except where initial classes of one- and two-year terms are necessary to establish regular rotation.

“b. The nominating committee shall nominate persons to fill all vacancies on continuing committees (except the nominating committee), councils, boards, and other bodies that require election by the presbytery or synod. Consideration shall be given to the nomination of equal numbers of ministers of the Word and Sacrament and/or ministers of Christian education, lay men, and laywomen (one third each), except that women elders and men elders shall be nominated to the committee on ministry to which presbytery functions may be delegated. (G-11.0501, G-12.0102d, G-13.0111, G-13.0202)”

“The session of a particular church consists of the pastor or co-pastors, the associate pastors, ministers of Christian education, and the elders in active service.^a All members of the session, including the pastor, co-pastors, ~~and~~ the associate pastors, and ministers of Christian education, are entitled to vote.”

17. Shall G-11.0101 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added is shown as italic.]

“Presbytery is a corporate expression of the church consisting of all the churches^a, ~~and~~ ministers of the Word and Sacrament, and ministers of Christian education within a certain district. When a presbytery meets, each church shall be represented by an elder^b commissioned by the session with the following additional provisions:” [The rest of the text remains unchanged.]

18. Shall G-11.0103n be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added is shown as italic.]

“n. to ordain, receive, dismiss, install, remove, and discipline ministers,^c to plan for the integration of new ministers into the life and work of presbytery, to establish minimum compensation and benefit requirements for all ~~pastoral calls~~ called positions ...”

19. Shall G-11.0103p be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added is shown as italic.]

“p. to designate ministers to work as teachers, evangelists, administrators, chaplains, and in other forms of ministry recognized as appropriate by the presbytery. ~~Such as~~ Ministers of Word and Sacrament may administer the Sacraments at times and places approved by a governing body, or in conformity to other conditions specified by a governing body. The applicable provisions of W-2.3000, W-2.4000, and W-3.3600 shall be followed;”

20. Shall G-11.0402 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added is shown as italic.]

“The presbytery, through its appropriate committee, shall examine each minister or candidate who seeks membership in it on his or her Christian faith and views in theology, the Sacraments, and the government of this church, except as provided in G-14.0314. Every minister seeking membership in a presbytery shall have a ~~call to a pastoral relation~~ called relationship within the presbytery, or from a governing body or agency as defined in G-11.0411, for which the receiving presbytery shall give its permission, or shall be honorably retired as defined in G-11.0412.”

21. Shall the first paragraph of G-11.0403 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added is shown as italic.]

“A presbytery shall determine the ministers of the Word and Sacrament and ministers of Christian education who shall be its continuing members. In making this determination the presbytery shall be guided by written criteria developed by the presbytery for validation of ministries within its bounds. These criteria shall be based upon the description of the nature of ordained office found in G-6.0100 and G-6.0200 and the following standards:”

22. Shall G-11.0403c be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added is shown as italic.]

“c. The ministry shall give evidence of theologically informed fidelity to God’s Word. This will normally require the Master of Divinity degree or its equivalent and the completion of the requirements for ordination set forth in G-14.0402 for minister of Word and Sacrament and the Masters of Christian Education degree or its equivalent and the completion of the requirements for minister of Christian education set forth in G-14.0300.”

23. Shall G-11.0406a–c be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added is shown as italic.]

“a. An active member is a minister ~~of the Word and Sacrament~~ who has been admitted to the presbytery in accordance with G-11.0401, and is now engaged in ministry that complies with all of the criteria in G-11.0403 without exception. An active member may be engaged in a validated ministry within congregations of the church (G-11.0409), in a validated ministry in other service of this church (G-11.0410), in a validated ministry in service beyond the jurisdiction of this church (G-11.0411), or may be honorably retired (G-11.0412). An active member is entitled to take part in the meetings of the presbytery and to speak, vote, and hold office.

“b. A member-at-large is a minister ~~of the Word and Sacrament~~ who has previously been admitted to the presbytery or another presbytery as an active member, and who now, without intentional abandonment of the exercise of ministry, is no longer engaged in a ministry that complies with all the criteria in G-11.0403. A minister may be designated a member-at-large because he or she is limited in his or her ability to engage in a ministry fulfilling all of the criteria for a validated ministry because of family responsibilities or other individual circumstances which presbytery recognizes as important. A member-at-large shall comply with as many of the criteria in G-11.0403 as possible and shall be encouraged to become a parish associate in a congregation. A member-at-large is entitled to take part in the meetings of the presbytery and to speak, vote, and hold office. The status of each member-at-large may be granted by the presbytery upon the minister's application and shall be reviewed annually.

"c. An inactive member is a minister ~~of the Word and Sacrament~~ who has previously been admitted to the presbytery or another presbytery as an active member, but is now voluntarily engaged in an occupation that does not comply with all of the criteria in G-11.0403. The presbytery may, at the minister's request or on its own initiative after notifying the minister in person or by certified mail at the last known address, determine that the minister's category of membership is that of inactive member. An inactive member is not entitled to take part in the meetings of the presbytery or to speak, vote, hold office, or serve on committees, except that the inactive member may speak when the matter under consideration concerns that minister. The continued status of each inactive member shall be reviewed annually up to three years. If at the end of three years the minister has not been restored to active membership or membership-at-large, the presbytery shall delete that person's name from the appropriate roll of presbytery and may give that person a certificate of membership to a particular church. (G-11.0414)"

"The stated clerk shall maintain ~~four~~ seven rolls, one listing the names of all the ministers of the Word and Sacrament who are continuing members of the presbytery and who are active members, one listing the names of all the ministers of the Word and Sacrament who are continuing members of the presbytery and who are members-at large, one listing the names of all the ministers of the Word and Sacrament who are continuing members of the presbytery and who are inactive members, one listing the names of all the ministers of Christian education who are continuing members of the presbytery and who are active members, one listing the names of all the ministers of Christian education who are continuing members of the presbytery and who are members-at large, one listing the names of all the ministers of Christian education who are continuing members of the presbytery and who are inactive members, and one listing all Certified Christian Educators and Certified Associate Christian Educators within the bounds of the presbytery who are entitled to the privilege of the floor with voice at all presbytery meetings, and a fifth roll listing those who have been deleted from the other rolls. On or before December 31 of each year, the presbytery shall determine the category of membership of each continuing member in accordance with the relevant sections of this chapter and cause appropriate record of such determination to be made."

25. Shall G-11.0408 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added is shown as italic.]

"A minister of Word and Sacrament or a minister of Christian education who is an active member of presbytery may be engaged (1) in a validated ministry within congregations of this church, (2) in a validated ministry in other service of this church, (3) in a validated ministry in service beyond the jurisdiction of this church, or may be (4) honorably retired."

26. Shall G-11.0409 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added is shown as italic.]

"An active minister of Word and Sacrament member engaged in a validated ministry within congregations of this church shall serve a particular church or churches as pastor, co-pastor, associate pastor, designated pastor, designated co-pastor, designated associate pastor, stated supply, temporary supply, interim pastor, or interim associate pastor, or organizing pastor as provided in G-6.0202, G-14.0501, and G-14.0513."

27. Shall G-11.0414b be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added is shown as italic.]

"b. Release from the exercise of the ordained office of a minister of the Word and Sacrament or minister of Christian education requires a discontinuance of all functions of that office. The designations reverend, minister, pastor, or other similar term shall not be used. The status of a minister who has been so released shall be the same as any church member."

28. Shall G-11.0415b be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added is shown as italic.]

“b. A minister of the Word and Sacrament or minister of Christian education who has received permission to labor outside the bounds of the presbytery of membership but has not received permission to labor within the bounds of the presbytery of labor shall, after a period of two years, be placed on the inactive roll.”

29. Shall G-11.0502b be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added is shown as italic.]

“b. It shall make recommendations to presbytery regarding calls for the services of its ministers. Every call for the services of a minister or candidate in a ~~pastoral relationship~~ called position shall be placed in its hands and presented by it to the presbytery with a report as to the call being in order and recommendation as to whether the call shall be placed in the hands of the minister or candidate. Every request by a minister or candidate for the presbytery’s approval of a task appropriate to the ministry, though not a pastoral relationship to a particular church, shall be made by the minister or candidate through the committee and shall be reported by it to the presbytery with recommendation for presbytery’s action.”

“The persons elected by the church to service in the offices of the church (G-6.0000) shall be ordained to these offices by the church. Ordination is the act by which the church sets apart persons to be presbyters (ministers ~~of the Word and Sacrament~~ or elders) or deacons, and is accompanied with prayer and the laying on of hands. Ordination to the office of minister of the Word and Sacrament and of Christian education is an act of the presbytery. Ordination to the offices of elder and deacon is an act of the session, except in the case of the organization of a new church. (G-7.0202)”

31. Shall G-14.0209a be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added is shown as italic.]

“a. The members of the church having answered these questions in the affirmative, those to be ordained shall kneel, if able, for prayer and the laying on of hands by the session. Those previously ordained ordinarily shall stand, along with the congregation, if able, for the prayer of installation. The session may invite other elders and ministers ~~of the Word and Sacrament~~ to participate in the laying on of the hands.”

32. Shall G-14.0300 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added is shown as italic.]

“3. Preparation for the Office of Minister of the Word and Sacrament and Minister of Christian Education”

33. Shall G-14.0301 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added is shown as italic.]

“It is important that those who are to be ordained as ministers ~~of the Word and Sacrament~~ receive full preparation for their task under the direction of the committee on preparation for ministry. (G-9.0902) For this purpose, presbyteries shall enter into covenant relationship with those preparing to become ministers ~~of the Word and Sacrament~~. This relationship shall be divided into the two phases of inquiry and candidacy.”

34. Shall G-14.0302 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added is shown as italic.]

“The purpose of the inquiry phase is to provide an opportunity for the church and for those who believe themselves called to ministry ~~of the Word and Sacrament~~ to explore that call together in such a way that a decision regarding the inquirer’s suitability for ministry ~~of the Word and Sacrament~~ will be based on knowledge and experience of one another.”

35. Shall G-14.0303a be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added is shown as italic.]

“a. A person desiring to become an inquirer shall indicate to the session of the particular church a desire to explore the personal implications of becoming a minister ~~of the Word and Sacrament~~.”

36. Shall G-14.0303g(6) be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added is shown as italic.]

“(6) a statement of his or her understanding of the task ministers ~~of the Word and Sacrament~~ perform, including an awareness of his or her specific gifts for ministry ~~of the Word and Sacrament~~ and of areas in which growth is needed.”

37. Shall G-14.0304 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added is shown as italic.]

“The purpose of the candidacy phase is to provide for the full preparation of persons to serve the church as ministers of the Word and Sacrament and ministers of Christian education. This shall be accomplished through the guidance and evaluation of candidates, using learning contacts within a context of supportive relationships.”

38. Shall G-14.0305a be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added is shown as italic.]

“a. An inquirer shall apply to the presbytery through the stated clerk to become a candidate for ~~the office of minister of the Word and Sacrament~~ ministry through the session of his or her church.”

39. Shall G-14.0305f(1) be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added is shown as italic.]

“(1) Do you believe yourself to be called by God to the ministry of the Word and Sacrament (ministry of Christian education)?”

40. Shall G-14.0305f(4) be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added is shown as italic.]

“(4) Do you desire now to be received by this presbytery as a candidate for the ministry of the Word and Sacrament (ministry of Christian education) in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)?”

41. Shall G-14.0305j be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added is shown as italic.]

“j. By the end of the candidacy phase, each candidate to be ordained to the ministry of Word and Sacrament shall demonstrate readiness to begin ministry of the Word and Sacrament by”

42. Shall a new section, “G-14.0305k” be added to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added is shown as italic.]

“k. By the end of the candidacy phase, each candidate to be ordained to the office of minister of Christian education shall demonstrate readiness to begin the ministry of Christian education:

“(1) presenting evidence of competence in the fields of religious education theory and practice, theology, Bible, polity, and worship and Sacraments, ordinarily attested by completion of the requirements of G-14.0703a-g and G-14.0311; and evidence of ministerial skill attested in the supervised practice of ministry;

“(2) presenting evidence of readiness to participate in a calling presbytery’s plan for transition and of plans for continuing study and growth (G-11.0103n and G-14.0506, last sentence);

“(3) expressing theological views compatible with the confessional documents of the church;

“(4) expressing understanding of the meaning of the questions required for ordination (G-14.0405) informed by knowledge of the church in diverse settings;

“(5) revealing commitment to the ministry of Christian education within the discipline of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) with personal maturity, spiritual depth, and a capacity to respond to the needs of others, including colleagues in ministry;

“(6) presenting an outline for a teaching segment together with the contemporary need to which it was addressed and exegetical interpretation of the biblical material out of which the teaching arose as set forth in G-14.0703. This lesson shall be presented before the calling presbytery, or committee thereof, as a part of the appearance of the candidate as set forth in G-14.0402.”

43. Shall G-14.0310a be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added is shown as italic.]

“a. In the final year of theological education or when a candidate for the ministry of Word and Sacrament has satisfied the requirements of G-14.0310, and before a candidate may receive a call, the committee on preparation for ministry of the candidate’s presbytery shall conduct a final assessment of the candidate’s readiness to begin ministry. This consultation shall focus on the outcomes of inquiry (G-14.0303g) and candidacy (G-14.0305j) and shall include each of the requirements of certification set forth in G-14.0310b–e. A summary of this assessment shall be reported to the presbytery and shall be transmitted to a calling presbytery when requested. When, in the opinion of the committee on preparation for ministry, a candidate is ready for examination for ordination, pending a call, it shall recommend to the presbytery that the presbytery so certify the candidate. (See G-14.0507.) It may be given authority by the presbytery to certify candidates on behalf of the presbytery with the provision that all such actions shall be reported to the next stated meeting of the presbytery.”

44. Shall a new section “G-14.0311” be added and subsequent sections “G-14.0311–.0314” be re-numbered as “G-14.0312–.0315,” which shall now read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added is shown as italic.]

“a. In the final year of theological education or when a candidate for minister of Christian education has satisfied the requirements of G-14.0311, and before a candidate may receive a call, the committee on preparation for ministry of the candidate’s presbytery shall conduct a final assessment of the candidate’s readiness to begin ministry. This consultation shall focus on the outcomes of inquiry (G-14.0303g) and candidacy (G-14.0305k) and shall include each of the requirements of certification set forth in G-14.0311b–e. A summary of this assessment shall be reported to the presbytery and shall be transmitted to a calling presbytery when requested. When, in the opinion of the committee on preparation for ministry, a candidate is ready for examination for ordination, pending a call, it shall recommend to the presbytery that the presbytery so certify the candidate. (See G-14.0507 and G-110103l.) It may be given authority by the presbytery to certify candidates on behalf of the presbytery with the provision that all such actions shall be reported to the next stated meeting of the presbytery.

“b. The candidate’s presbytery shall require a candidate to fulfill the following requirements to be certified as to be ready for examination for ordination, pending a call:

“(1) demonstration of readiness to begin ministry of Christian education as required in G-14.0305k;

“(2) presentation of a transcript showing satisfactory grades at a regionally accredited seminary, college, or university, together with a diploma and completion of requirements as outlined in G-14.0703;

“(3) presentation of satisfactory grades together with the examination papers in the six areas as listed in G-14.0311c.

“c. The areas of these examinations are:

“(1) Open Book Bible Exegesis. This examination shall assess the candidate’s ability to find and state the meaning of an assigned passage of Scripture. The candidate shall have access to any or all of the following: Hebrew and Greek texts, translations, commentaries, and other exegetical tools, including those which presuppose knowledge of the biblical languages. Using these, he or she shall be asked to state the meaning of the passage, show how he or she arrived at this interpretation, and suggest how this passage might be used in the contemporary life of the church.

“(2) Bible Content. This examination shall assess the candidate’s knowledge of the form and content of the Bible.

“(3) Theological Competence. This examination shall assess the candidate’s capacity to make effective use of the classical theological disciplines and of the confessional documents of the church in relating the gospel to the faith of the church in the contemporary world.

“(4) Worship and Sacraments. This examination shall assess the candidate’s understanding of the meaning and purpose of corporate worship and the Sacraments, familiarity with the Directory for Worship and The Book of Confessions and their application to the life of worshipping communities.

“(5) Educational Theory and Practice—This examination shall assess the candidate’s ability to integrate educational theory and practice in the church’s educational ministry.

“(6) Church Polity. This examination shall assess the candidate’s working knowledge of the constitutional structure of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and the method by which differences are properly resolved and programs to fulfill the mission of the church are determined.

“d. The examinations required in the six specified areas shall be graded by representatives of the presbyteries under the supervision of the Presbyteries’ Cooperative Committee on Examinations for Candidates as provided in G-11.0103m.

47. Shall G-14.0400–.0402 be amended to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“G-14.0400 Ordination for the Ministry of the Word and Sacrament and of Christian Education

“G-14.0401 Ordination of Candidates

“Ordination for the office of minister of the Word and Sacrament and minister of Christian education is an act of the whole church carried out by the presbytery, setting apart a persons to ~~the ministry of the Word and Sacrament~~ these ministries. Such a person shall have been in covenant relationship with a presbytery or presbyteries for a period of at least two years including at least one year as a candidate (see G-14.0313c for exception), met the requirements of G-14.0310 together with the completion of the theological degree, and received a call for service to a church or other work in the mission of the church that is acceptable to the candidate and the presbytery.

“G-14.0402 Examination for Ordination

“a. The candidate shall appear before the presbytery in which he or she shall make a brief statement of personal faith and of commitment to the ministry ~~of the Word and Sacrament~~ except as provided in ~~G-14.0314~~ G-14.0315. The presbytery, having received certification of a diploma from a theological institution accredited by the Association of Theological Schools and acceptable to the presbytery, having heard the candidate and his or her sermon for a minister of the Word and Sacrament preached or a lesson presented for a minister of Christian education before the presbytery or a committee thereof (G-14.0305j(6)), and having received the recommendation of its responsible committee (G-11.0402), shall conduct any further examination of his or her Christian faith and views in theology, the Bible, the Sacraments, and the government of this church as it deems necessary.”

48. Shall G-14.0404a be amended to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“a. The ordination of candidates to the ministry of the Word and Sacrament and the ministry of Christian education shall ordinarily take place in the presence of the congregation in which the candidate is a member, and in the place for the regular worship of that congregation.”

49. Shall G-14.0405b(4) be amended to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“(4) Will you be a (minister of the Word and Sacrament, minister of Christian education) in obedience to Jesus Christ, under the authority of Scripture, and continually guided by our confessions?”

50. Shall G-14.0405b(9) be amended and a new section “(10)” be added to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“(9) (For Ministers of Word and Sacrament) Will you be a faithful minister, proclaiming the good news in Word and Sacrament, teaching faith, and caring for people? Will you be active in government and discipline, serving in the governing bodies of the church; and in your ministry will you try to show the love and justice of Jesus Christ?

“(10) (For Ministers of Christian Education) Will you be a faithful minister, guiding the church’s educational program, teaching the faith, and caring for people? Will you be active in government and discipline, serving in the governing bodies of the church; and in your ministry will you try to show the love and justice of Jesus Christ?”

51. Shall G-14.0405d–e be amended to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“d. The candidate, having answered the questions in the affirmative, shall kneel, if able, and the presbytery shall, with prayer and the laying on of hands, ordain the candidate to the office of (minister of the Word and Sacrament, minister of Christian education). The member presiding shall then say:

“(Name) _____, you are now ordained a (minister of the Word and Sacrament, minister of Christian education) in the Church of Jesus Christ. Whatever you do, in word or deed, do everything in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God the Father through him. Amen.

“e. Then the members of the presbytery, and others as may be appropriate, shall welcome the new minister in the ministry (of the Word and Sacrament, of Christian education). At the conclusion of the ordination service, the new minister may make a brief statement and shall pronounce the benediction.”

52. Shall G-14.0500 be amended to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“G-14.0500 5. Calling and Installing Ministers of the Word and Sacrament and Ministers of Christian Education”

53. Shall the title of G-14.0501 be amended to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“G-14.0501 Pastors, Co-Pastors, ~~and~~ Associate Pastors, or Minister of Christian Education”

“b. A ~~pastor or associate pastor~~ minister shall be elected by the vote of the congregation and the relationship between them shall be established by the presbytery. The call extended to a ~~pastor or associate pastor~~ minister shall be approved by the presbytery and cannot be changed except by consent of the presbytery, at the request of the ~~pastor or associate pastor~~ minister, or at the request of the church by action of the congregation.”

“G-14.0502 Election of a ~~Pastor~~ Minister

“a. When a church is without a ~~pastor~~ minister in any of its called relationships, or after the effective date of the dissolution of the ~~pastoral~~ relationship, the congregation shall, with the guidance and permission of the committee on ministry, G-11.0502d, proceed to elect a ~~pastor~~ minister in the following manner. The session shall call a congregational meeting to elect a nominating committee, which shall be representative of the whole congregation. This committee’s duty shall be to nominate a minister to the congregation for election as pastor, co-pastor, associate pastor, or minister of Christian education. Public notice of the time, place, and purpose of the meeting shall be given at least ten days in advance, which shall include two successive Sundays.

“Work of the Committee

“b. The nominating committee shall confer with the committee on ministry as provided in G-11.0502d and when seeking an associate pastor, ~~or~~ co-pastor, or minister of Christian education, with the pastor or any continuing co-pastors. Care must be taken to consider candidates without regard to race, ethnic origin, sex, marital status, age, or disabilities. When a church is considering extending a call to a minister of another denomination, the minister shall follow the procedures required in G-11.0400.

“c. When the committee is ready to report, it shall notify the session, which shall call a congregational meeting, giving public notice as required in the paragraph a. above, for the purpose of acting on the report of the nominating committee. The same procedure shall be followed in the selection of an associate pastor or minister of Christian education. The action of the congregation, if favorable, shall be presented to the presbytery for its concurrence. If the presbytery concurs, it shall make arrangements for the minister’s installation. A call ~~to a permanent pastoral relationship~~ shall not be issued until it has been approved by the presbytery. (G-11.0502d)

“G-14.0503 Congregational Meeting

“a. When a congregation is convened for the election of a ~~pastor (associate pastor)~~ minister, the moderator of the session appointed by presbytery or some other minister of the presbytery shall preside.

“Vote by Ballot

“b. Following prayer for the guidance of God, the moderator shall call for the report of the nominating committee. Following the report, the moderator shall then put the question: “Are you ready to proceed to the election of a pastor (associate pastor or minister of Christian education)?” If they are ready the moderator shall declare the name submitted by the nominating committee to be in nomination. The vote shall be upon the question whether the congregation, under the will of God, shall call the person nominated to be its pastor (associate pastor or minister of Christian education), and it shall be taken by ballot. In every case a majority of the voters present and voting shall be required to elect.

“G-14.0504 Larger Parish

“When two or more churches established by presbytery as a larger parish unite in calling a ~~pastor~~ minister, the call must specify the support promised by each church. With the approval of presbytery, such a call may be issued by a larger parish council providing for the approval of the churches given in properly called meetings of their congregations, for payment of a total salary from a common parish treasury along with an explanation of the financial agreement between the churches of the parish, and for the annual review of the ~~pastor’s~~ minister’s salary by the parish council with provision for a vote thereon by each congregation. When such a call has been issued by a parish council, and approved by the presbytery, each participating church shall be obligated to continue its financial support of the parish for the duration of the ~~pastorate~~ call, unless excused by the other participating churches with the approval of the presbytery. The call shall specify that the minister is called to be pastor (associate pastor or minister of Christian education) of the churches constituting the parish.

“G-14.0505 Dissent

“On the election of a ~~pastor (associate pastor)~~ minister, if it appears that a substantial minority of the voters are averse to the nominee who has received a majority of the votes, and that they cannot be persuaded to concur in the call, the moderator shall recommend to the majority that they not prosecute the call. If the congregation is nearly unanimous, or if the majority insist upon their right to call a pastor (associate pastor or minister of Christian education), the moderator shall forward the call to the presbytery, certifying the number of those who do not concur in the call and any other facts of importance. The moderator shall also inform the person being called of the nature and circumstances of the decision.”

56. Shall G-14.0510a(1) be amended to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“(1) Do we, the members of the church, accept (Name) _____ as our (pastor, associate pastor, or minister of Christian education), chosen by God through the voice of this congregation to guide us in the way of Jesus Christ?”

57. Shall G-14.0510a(3) be amended to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“(3) Do we promise to pay her/him fairly and provide for her/his welfare^f as she/he works among us; to stand by her/him in trouble and share her/his joys?^g Will we listen to the word she/he preaches/teaches, welcome her/his pastoral care, and honor her/his authority as she/he seeks to honor and obey Jesus Christ our Lord?”

58. Shall G-14.0510b–e be amended to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“Prayer and Laying on of Hands

“b. The members of the congregation having answered these questions in the affirmative, a candidate being ordained and installed shall kneel, if able, and the presbytery shall, with prayer^h and the laying on of hands,ⁱ ordain the candidate to the office of minister of the Word and Sacrament/minister of Christian education and install him or her in the particular ~~pastoral~~ ministerial responsibility. A minister, previously ordained, who is being installed ordinarily shall stand, if able, for the prayer of installation.

“Statement

“c. The member presiding shall then say:

“(Name) _____, you are now a minister of the Word and Sacrament/minister of Christian education in the Church of Jesus Christ and for this congregation. Whatever you do, in word or deed, do everything in the name of the Lord Jesus,^j giving thanks to God the father through him. Amen.

“(For a minister previously ordained say only: You are now a minister of the Word and Sacrament in and for this congregation. Whatever you do, ... etc.)

“Welcome

“d. Then the members of the presbytery, and others as may be appropriate, shall welcome the newly ordained and installed or newly installed minister into their fellowship in the ministry ~~of the Word and Sacrament~~.

“Brief Charges

“e. Persons invited by the presbytery may then give brief charges to the ~~pastor (associate pastor)~~ minister and to the congregation^l to be faithful in their relationship and in their reciprocal responsibilities.”

59. Shall G-14.0511–.0512 be amended to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“G.-14.0511 Welcome

“After the installation service, the officers and members of the church should come forward to their pastor (associate pastor or minister of Christian education) and give him or her an appropriate expression of cordial reception and affectionate regard.

“G.-14.0512 More Than One Church

“The installation of a minister ~~as pastor or associate pastor~~ of more than one church may take place in a joint service, provided each church is present and answers for itself the constitutional questions set forth in G.-14.0510.”

60. Shall the first paragraph of G-14.0513 be amended to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“G.-14.0513 Temporary ~~Pastoral~~ Called Relations

“When a church does not have a pastor, or while the pastor is unable to perform her or his duties, the session should obtain the services of a minister of this denomination in a temporary pastoral relation. When a congregation employs more than one ~~pastor~~ minister, or a pastor and one or more associate ~~pastors~~ ministers, and there is a vacancy in one of these positions, it may obtain the services of a minister in a temporary ~~pastoral~~ relation. No formal call shall be issued by the congregation and no formal installation shall take place. Temporary ~~pastoral~~ relations are those of stated supply, interim pastor, interim co-pastor, interim associate pastor, interim minister of Christian education, temporary supply, or organizing pastor:”

61. Shall G-14.0513b–c be amended to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“Interim Pastor

“b. An interim pastor is a minister of the Word and Sacrament invited by the session of a church without an installed pastor to preach the Word, administer the Sacraments, and fulfill pastoral duties for a specified period not to exceed twelve months at a time, while the church is seeking a pastor. An interim co-pastor is a minister of the Word and Sacrament invited by the session of a church without an installed co-pastor which had a co-pastor model which was in effect for at least three years and where the congregation desires to continue such model of permanent ministerial relationship, to preach the Word, administer the Sacraments, and fulfill pastoral duties for a specified period not to exceed twelve months at a time, while the church is seeking a co-pastor. The session may not secure or dissolve a relationship with an interim pastor or interim co-pastor without the concurrence of the presbytery through its committee on ministry. A ~~minister~~ pastor may not be called to be the next installed pastor, co-pastor, or associate pastor of a church served as interim pastor or co-pastor.

“Interim Associate Pastor

“c. An interim associate pastor is a minister of the Word and Sacrament invited by the session to serve in this position while the church is seeking a new associate pastor or is seeking a pastor to serve as co-pastor in accord with G-6.0202. The session may not secure or dissolve a relationship with an interim associate pastor without the concurrence of the presbytery through its committee on ministry. An interim associate pastor shall serve for a specified period not to exceed twelve months at a time and may not be called to be the next installed pastor or associate pastor of a church served as interim associate pastor.”

62. Shall a new section, “G-14.0513d,” be added and current sections G-14.0513d, e, and f be renumbered and amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“Interim Minister of Christian Education

“d. An interim minister of Christian education is a minister invited by the session to serve in this position while the church is seeking a new minister of Christian education. The session may not secure or dissolve a relationship with an interim minister of Christian education without the concurrence of the presbytery through its committee on ministry. An interim minister of Christian education shall serve for a specified period not to exceed twelve months at a time and may not be called to be the next installed minister of Christian education of a church served as interim.

“Temporary Supply

“~~d. e.~~ A temporary supply may be a minister of the Word and Sacrament, a candidate of the Word and Sacrament, a commissioned lay pastor, or an elder secured by the session to conduct services when there is no pastor or the pastor is unable to perform pastoral duties. The session shall seek the counsel of presbytery through its committee on ministry before securing a temporary supply. A temporary supply may not be called to be a pastor or associate pastor of a church served as temporary supply, unless six months have elapsed since the end of the temporary supply relationship, except by a two-thirds vote of presbytery. A presbytery may choose to shorten or cancel the six-month interval if it is determined to be in the best interest of the congregation.

“Inquirer or Candidate as Temporary Supply

“~~e. f.~~ When a church is without a ~~pastor~~ minister or when a ~~pastor~~ minister is unable to perform ~~pastoral~~ ministerial duties, the session, after obtaining the approval of the presbytery having jurisdiction over the church through its committee on ministry, may secure the services of an inquirer or candidate of Word and Sacrament to serve as temporary supply. Appropriate guidance and supervision for such an inquirer or candidate serving as temporary supply must be assured by the presbytery having jurisdiction over the church and approved by the inquirer’s or candidate’s committee on preparation for ministry.

“Organizing Pastor

“~~f. g.~~ An organizing pastor is a minister of the Word and Sacrament or commissioned lay pastor appointed by the presbytery to serve as pastor to a group of people who are in the process of organizing a new Presbyterian church. An organizing pastor may be designated a member of the presbytery administrative staff and is to be hired in accordance with the principles of G-9.0702, G-9.0704, and G-4.0403. This relationship as organizing pastor shall terminate when the new church is formally organized by the presbytery. At that time the new church may, with the approval of the committee on ministry and the presbytery, call the organizing pastor to be its pastor without being required to elect a pastor nominating committee and conduct a pastoral search, or it may choose to elect a pastor nominating committee and conduct a full pastoral search as provided in the Form of Government.”

63. Shall G-14.0514 be amended to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“Ordained ministers of other Christian churches may be employed by the session of a particular church in a temporary ~~pastoral~~ relationship, provided that such ministers present to the presbytery credentials of good standing in the ecclesiastical body to which they belong, and provided that presbytery gives its approval to the temporary ~~pastoral~~ relationship.”

64. Shall G-14.0515a be amended to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“a. A parish associate is a minister who serves in some validated ministry other than the local parish, or is a member-at-large, or is retired, but who wishes to maintain a relationship with a particular church or churches in keeping with his or her ordination ~~to the ministry of the Word and Sacrament~~. Such persons, already qualified as continuing members of presbytery, may serve as parish associates. The relation shall be established, upon nomination by the pastor, between the parish associate, the session, and the presbytery. The parish associate shall be responsible to the pastor, as head of staff, on an “as needed, as available” basis and with or without remuneration. A parish associate may not be called to be the next installed pastor or associate pastor of a church served as parish associate unless at least six months have elapsed since the end of the parish associate relationship.”

65. Shall G-14.0600–.0606 be amended to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“G-14.0600 Dissolution of ~~Pastoral~~ Called Relationships

“G-14.0601 By Presbytery

“The ~~pastoral~~ relationship between a pastor, associate pastor, or minister of Christian education, and a church may be dissolved only by presbytery.

“G-14.0602 Request by Minister

“The minister may request the presbytery to dissolve the ~~pastoral~~ called relationship. The minister must also state her or his intention to the session. In the case of a pastor or associate pastor or minister of Christian education, the session shall call a congregational meeting to act upon the request and to make recommendations to presbytery. The presbytery may grant authority to its committee on ministry to dissolve the ~~pastoral~~ called relationship and to inform the presbytery in cases in which the congregation and the ~~pastor~~ minister concur. If the congregation does not concur, the presbytery shall hear from the church, through the congregation’s elected commissioners, the reasons why the presbytery should not dissolve the ~~pastoral~~ relationship. If the church fails to appear, or if its reasons for retaining the relationship are judged insufficient, the request of the minister may be granted and the ~~pastoral~~ relationship dissolved.

“G-14.0603 Request by Congregation

“If any church desires the ~~pastoral~~ called relationship to be dissolved, a similar procedure shall be observed. A congregation, after a duly called congregational meeting, may request presbytery to dissolve its relationship with its ~~pastor~~ minister. The pastor shall moderate the congregational meeting (in accordance with G-7.0306) unless he or she deems it to be impractical. The presbytery may grant authority to its committee on ministry to dissolve the relationship and to inform the presbytery in cases in which the ~~pastor~~ minister and the congregation concur. If the ~~pastor~~ minister does not concur, the presbytery shall hear from him or her the reasons why the presbytery should not dissolve the relationship. If the ~~pastor~~ minister fails to appear, or if the reasons for maintaining the relationship are judged insufficient, the relationship may be dissolved.

“G-14.0604

“G-14.0605 Pastor/Minster Emeritus, Emerita

“When any pastor, ~~or~~ associate pastor, or minister of Christian education retires, and the congregation is moved by affection and gratitude to continue an association in an honorary relationship, it may, at a regularly called congregational meeting, elect him or her as pastor (or minister) emeritus or emerita, with or without honorarium, but with no ~~pastoral~~ ministerial authority or duty. This action shall be taken only after consultation with the committee on ministry of the presbytery concerning the wisdom of this relationship for the peace of the church. This action shall be subject to the approval of presbytery, and may take effect upon the formal dissolution of the ~~pastoral or associate pastoral~~ ministerial relationship or anytime thereafter.

“G-14.0606 Officiate by Invitation Only

“Former ~~pastors and associate pastors~~ ministers may officiate at services for members of a particular church, or at services within its properties, only upon invitation from the moderator of the session or, in case of the inability to contact the moderator, from the clerk of session.”

66. Shall G-15.0502 be amended to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“When a minister of the Word and Sacrament of another Christian denomination is called to a work properly under the jurisdiction of a presbytery, the presbytery, after the constitutional conditions (G-11.0404–.0405) have been met, shall recognize the minister’s previous ordination to the office of the ministry. Similar procedures shall be followed in dismissing a minister from this denomination to another.”

67. Shall G-16.0201j–k be amended to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“Ministers of Union Churches

“j. The pastoral relations of the ministers of the Word and Sacrament of the uniting churches shall be dissolved automatically by the action of the presbytery in approving this plan, but they may be eligible to be ministers (pastors, or associate pastors) of the union church according to the will of the union church and subject to the approval of the governing bodies.

“Full Members

“k. The minister or ministers of the Word and Sacrament of the union church shall be full and responsible members of each governing body of immediate jurisdiction and shall be subject to discipline as provided below in subsection s.”

68. Shall G-16.0201s–t be amended to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“Judicial Cases

“s. The minister or ministers of the Word and Sacrament shall be subject to the discipline of the presbyteries or comparable governing body provided that when either shall begin an action it shall invite a committee from the others to join the commissioner, prosecutor, or prosecuting committee in formulating and pressing the charges. In the event of appeal the case shall be finally decided by the highest governing body to which the appeal is taken in the church which commenced the action, and that decision shall be equally binding on the governing bodies of jurisdiction.

“Pension

“t. The minister or ministers of the Word and Sacrament shall participate in the denominational pension plan of one of the churches. If the minister is already participating in one plan, membership in that plan shall be retained. If the minister is not a member of any plan, one or the other of the churches’ plans shall be chosen.

69. Shall G-16.0400e be amended to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“e. The minister or ministers of the Word and Sacrament of the union church shall be full and responsible members of each governing body of immediate jurisdiction and shall be subject to discipline as provided below in subparagraph m.”

70. Shall G-16.0400m–n be amended to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“Judicial Cases

“m. The minister or ministers of the Word and Sacrament shall be subject to the discipline of the governing body of jurisdiction provided that when one shall begin an action, it shall invite a committee from the others to join the commissioner, prosecutor, or prosecuting committee in formulating and pressing the charges. In the event of appeal the case shall be finally decided by the highest governing body to which the appeal is taken in the church which commenced the action and that decision shall be equally binding on the governing bodies of jurisdiction.

“Pension

“n. The minister or ministers of the Word and Sacrament shall participate in the denominational pension plan of one of the several churches. If the minister is already participating in one plan, membership in that plan shall be retained. If the minister is not a member of any plan, one or the other of the churches’ plans shall be chosen.”

71. Shall W-1.4005a be amended to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“a. The minister of the Word and Sacrament as pastor has certain responsibilities which are not subject to the authority of the session. In a particular service of worship the pastor is responsible for”

72. Shall W-2.3011b be amended to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“b. A governing body may also authorize the celebration of the Sacrament of Baptism by chaplains or other ministers of the Word and Sacrament serving in hospitals, prisons, schools, or other institutions where the governing body has an authorized ministry or an institutional witness, by chaplains ministering to members of the armed forces and their families, and by ministers of the Word and Sacrament engaged in new church development under the jurisdiction of the governing body. In all such cases of Baptism, the minister of the Word and Sacrament shall take responsibility that the newly baptized person is enrolled as a member of a particular church. Such enrollment may be arranged in advance in consultation with the session of the church, or the governing body may provide that any such newly baptized member shall be enrolled in absentia as a member of a particular church designated by the governing body and under its jurisdiction or upon the roll held by the governing body until a new church is organized.”

73. Shall W-2.4010 be amended to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“It is also appropriate to observe the Lord’s Supper on other occasions of special significance in the life of the Christian community, as long as the celebration of the Sacrament is open to the whole believing community. The Lord’s Supper may be observed in connection with the visitation of the sick and those isolated from public worship as a means of extending the church’s ministry to them. On all such occasions of the celebration of the Sacrament, the Word shall be read and proclaimed. Even though such a celebration may involve only a few members of the congregation, nevertheless it is not to be understood as a private ceremony or devotional exercise, but as an act of the whole church, which shall be represented not only by the minister of the Word and Sacrament or the one authorized by presbytery to administer the Sacrament, but also by one or more members of the congregation authorized by the session to represent the church. (W-2.4012; W-3.3609–.3618; W-3.6204)”

74. Shall W-2.4012b be amended to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“b. Chaplains or other ministers of the Word and Sacrament serving in hospitals, prisons, schools, or other institutions, and chaplains ministering to members of the armed forces and their families, may administer the Sacrament of the Lord’s Supper when authorized to do so by the governing body which has jurisdiction over the ministry exercised by the particular minister. The terms of the authority to administer the Sacrament of the Lord’s Supper shall be stated in the minister’s terms of call or endorsement.”

75. Shall W-3.3606 be amended to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“The minister of the Word and Sacrament shall use the name given the person to be baptized and shall baptize in the name of the triune God. The baptismal formula is: “_____, I baptize you in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit.”

76. Shall W-3.3612 be amended to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“The minister of the Word and Sacrament or one presiding shall invite the people to the Lord’s Table using suitable words from Scripture. (W-2.4011) If the words of institution (1 Cor. 11:23–26, or Gospel parallels) will not be spoken at the breaking of bread or included in the prayer of thanksgiving, they are to be said as part of the invitation.”

77. Shall W-4.4001 be amended to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“In ordination the church sets apart with prayer and the laying on of hands those who have been called through election by the church to serve as deacons, elders, ministers of the Word and Sacrament, and ministers of Christian education. (W.2.1005) In installation the church sets apart with prayer those previously ordained to the office of deacon, elder, ~~or~~ minister of the Word and Sacrament, or minister of Christian education, and called anew to service in that office.”

78. Shall W-4.5001 be amended to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“When those especially commissioned for specific acts of discipleship; those ordained as deacons, elders, or ministers of the ~~Word and Sacrament~~, or others serving in the church conclude a period of ministry, it is appropriate for the congregation and others associated with the ministry to recognize those person’s gifts and service.”

79. Shall W-6.2005 be amended to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“In the service of Baptism the congregation, trusting in the power of the Holy Spirit, and on behalf of the universal Church, pledges responsibility for Christian nurture. (W-2.3013; W-3.3603) The session and the elders are responsible for providing for the development and supervision of the educational program of the church, for instructing church officers, and for developing discipleship among members. (G-6.0304; G-10.0102e, f, h, j, l) The pastor nurtures the community through the ministries of Word and Sacrament, by praying with and for the congregation, through formal and informal teaching, and by example. (G-6.0106; G-6.0202) Some in the community of faith whose special gifts and training have prepared them for a ministry of education are called to the task of leadership in nurture. The minister of Christian education nurtures the community through the ministries of educating, instructing, and guiding in the Christian faith. Teachers, advisors, and others appointed by the session guide, instruct, and equip those for whose education and nurture they are responsible. (W-3.3503) Parents or those exercising parental responsibilities share the faith of the church with children. (W-4.3002; W-5.7000)”

80. Shall W-6.3002 be amended to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“All Christians are called to care for one another in daily living, sharing joys and sorrows, supporting in times of stress and need, offering mutual forgiveness and reconciliation. This care is primarily offered as the community of faith worships together. It is also provided as people interact in community and as they come together in groups for nurture or to carry on ministries of the church. Elders, deacons, and ~~pastors~~ ministers are called to special responsibility for this common pastoral care.”

81. Shall D-12.0104f be amended to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“f. If a ~~pastor~~ minister is temporarily excluded from the exercise of the office of ordained minister, the presbytery may, if no appeal from the case is pending, declare the ~~pastoral~~ called relationship dissolved.”

82. Shall D-12.0105d be amended to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“d. If a minister is removed from office without removal from membership, the presbytery shall give the minister a certificate of membership to a Christian church of the minister’s choice. If the minister is a pastor or minister of Christian education, the ~~pastoral~~ called relationship is automatically dissolved by the censure.”

Rationale

This will be the ordination process for minister of Christian education

This proposal for the creation of the office of the minister of Christian education is not intended to replace the certification process (as outlined in G-14.0700) for those persons who do not feel called to become a minister of Christian education. However, for those persons who do feel called to seek ordination, the process would be as follows:

1. Whether pursuing a master’s degree from a Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) seminary or its equivalent or taking certification courses accredited by the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Educator Certification Council, the individual desiring ordination will enter the process of Preparation for the Office of the Minister of Christian Education as currently outlined in the Book of Order for the Office of Minister of Word and Sacrament (G-14.0300 and following).

2. Upon completion of the educational requirements (G-14.0703a–g), the candidate for ordination to minister of Christian education will take the standard ordination exams of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) with one exception. For the Open Book Bible Exegesis, the candidate will include an outline for a teaching segment as opposed to an outline for a sermon. The candidate will not be required to demonstrate working knowledge of the original language of the text (G-14.0310d(1)). Hebrew and Greek are not required for the master’s of Christian education degree.

3. The committee on preparation for ministry, in its final assessment of a candidate for ordination to minister of Christian education, may require the candidate to demonstrate knowledge of religious education theory and practice by designing a piece of original curriculum and teaching a portion of it.

4. When the committee on preparation for ministry (CPM) has made its final assessment of the candidate’s readiness to begin ministry and certified that all requirements have been fulfilled, a summary of this assessment shall be reported to the presbytery and shall be transmitted to a calling presbytery when requested. When, in the opinion of the CPM, a candidate is ready for examination for ordination, pending a call, it shall recommend to the presbytery that the presbytery so certify the candidate. (See G-14.0507.)

5. Upon receipt of a call for service to a church or other work in the mission of the church that is acceptable to the candidate and the presbytery, the calling presbytery shall proceed with the ordination as outlined in G-14.0400 and following.

This overture is seeking the creation of a fourth ordained office within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). This office will be called minister of Christian education. This overture is offered because we believe that:

- This office will benefit the life and mission of our denomination.
- This office is in line with our Reformed tradition and polity.

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), as a Reformed body, has historically declared education central to creating faithful disciples of Jesus Christ. This belief is based in the Scriptures and in our theology derived from those Scriptures. In Deuteronomy, the sixth chapter, God's people are reminded,

Keep these words that I am commanding you today in your heart. Recite them to your children and talk about them when you are at home and when you are away, when you lie down and when you rise. Bind them as a sign on your hand, fix them as an emblem on your forehead, and write them on the doorposts of your house and on your gates. (Deut. 6:6–9)

In the closing words of the Gospel of Matthew, Jesus commanded that his followers not only make disciples, but that they teach those disciples all that Jesus had commanded. The Apostle Paul lists teaching as one of the gifts given by the Holy Spirit to build up the body of Christ and in his letters to Timothy and Titus mentions his concerns for sound teaching no fewer than eight times.

John Calvin in the Institutes of the Christian Religion (4.3.4) mentions a fourth office of “doctor” or teacher. He writes,

Those who preside over the government of the church in accordance with Christ's institution are called by Paul as follows: first Apostles, then prophets, thirdly evangelists, fourthly pastors, and finally teachers [Eph.4:11]. Of these only the last two have an ordinary office in the church; the Lord raised up the first three at the beginning of His Kingdom, and now and again revives them as the need of the times demands.

The nature of the Apostle's function is clear from this command: “Go, preach the gospel to every creature” [Mark 16:15]. ... Next come pastors and teachers, whom the church can never go without. There is, I believe, this difference between them: teachers are not put in charge of discipline, or administering the sacraments, or warnings and exhortations, but only of Scriptural interpretation—to keep doctrine whole and pure among believers. But the pastoral office includes all these functions within itself. (McNeill, John T., ed. Calvin: Institutes of the Christian Religion 2. Translated and Indexed by Ford Lewis Battles (Louisville: Westminster John Knox, 1960))

On his return from his Strasbourg sojourn in 1541, Calvin presented a schedule of ecclesiastical organization with four offices: pastor, teacher, elder and deacon. The second order, the teacher, was charged with teaching the faithful in wholesome doctrine. In Puritan New England, the First Church (Congregational) of Boston ordained John Cotton in 1632 to serve as teacher alongside their pastor, John Wilson. The next year, the newly organized Church of Cambridge selected Thomas Hooker as its pastor and Samuel Stone as its teacher.

The centrality of education continues to be witnessed to in our Book of Order. In G-5.0102c we are reminded that “...studying Scripture and the faith of the Christian Church” is one of the marks of membership. In G-10.0102e and G-10.0102f sessions are called “to provide for the growth of [the church's] members and for their equipment for ministry through ...educational programs including the church school” and “to develop and supervise the church school and the educational program of the church.” The importance of education is also emphasized by our denomination through the support we offer Union Theological Seminary—Presbyterian School of Christian Education and its ministry of training Christian educators.

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), as a denomination, has been inconsistent in its commitment to Christian education. This inconsistency can be seen in a number of ways:

1. Presbyterian seminaries seldom require that their students take more than a single introductory course in Christian education. This minimal training does not adequately prepare ministers of Word and Sacrament to lead a Christian education program. Additionally, there is no ordination examination testing knowledge of Christian education theories and practices.

2. Most of those who lead Christian education programs in Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) congregations have little, if any, formal training in Bible, theology or faith development. While these individuals bring great faith and effort to their task, they are limited in both knowledge and experience.

3. We have historically offered limited support, oversight, and compensation to trained Christian educators.

This inconsistency has contributed to the following:

1. A declining level of biblical knowledge among Presbyterians. Anecdotal evidence implies that vast numbers of our members know neither the books of the Bible nor the major stories and themes of Scripture.
2. A declining level of Reformed theological knowledge. Presbyterians today are influenced by a variety of theological views. Popular authors and television evangelists whose doctrine is seldom in line with our own often have as much if not more impact on the theological positions of Presbyterians.
3. A lack of participation by adults in continuing biblical or theological education. The denominational annual statistics show that only a small percentage of adults are engaged in Sunday school or Bible studies.
4. A loss of our children from a life of active adult faith. Many of our children who finish confirmation classes see that moment as a time to exit from the life of the church. It is believed that most of the individuals who leave the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) do not go to other denominations, but merely drop out.

These outcomes will only become more acute because:

1. We now live in the post-Christian era. Presbyterians can no longer assume that the dominant culture, either through our educational institutions or social institutions, will teach our children the Christian faith.
2. Many of our members are coming to Presbyterianism from other faith traditions. When they do so they bring with them the values and concepts formed in a variety of traditions not always compatible with our own. Other members are coming from either a minimal or nonexistent religious background, thus requiring intensive discipleship.
3. Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) congregations are in competition with highly visible mega-church and television ministries whose theology, style of biblical interpretation, and government are far removed from those of our Reformed tradition.
4. The racial-cultural make-up of our nation is rapidly changing. As a largely Anglo denomination, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) will face great challenges in adapting our educational materials and styles to meeting the needs of these ever growing racial-ethnic minorities.

The office of minister of Christian education is in line with our Reformed tradition and polity. As noted above, John Calvin believed that this fourth office was important to the life and work of the Reformed church. Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) polity also offers us a context in which to place this office. The Book of Order (G-6.0104) states:

While the ministry is one, specific forms of ministry may emphasize special tasks and skills and the ordering of the offices of ministry shall reflect this variety. There may be forms of ministry in which primary emphasis is given to proclamation of the Word and the celebration of the Sacraments, forms that stress deeds of love and mercy, forms that are primarily educational, administrative, legislative, or judicial, and forms that are primarily prophetic.

Each of these forms of ministry, with the exception of educational, is already a primary responsibility of one or more of the existing ordained offices. Proclamation of the Word and the celebration of the Sacraments are covered by the office of minister of Word and Sacrament. Forms that stress deeds of love and mercy are housed in the office of deacon. Administrative, legislative, judicial, and prophetic are housed in the offices of the elder and the minister of Word and Sacrament. However, no office has as its primary purpose the ministry of education. If we desire to ensure that educational ministry is emphasized in the life of the church, we need to create the office of minister of Christian education.

Therefore, the office of minister of Christian education will benefit the life and mission of our denomination. This office will commit to the teaching ministry of our church by creating the office of minister of Christian education. This position will:

1. Give greater visibility to the ministry of Christian education.
2. Encourage more individuals to use their gifts for the purpose of Christian education.
3. Provide for input from ordained educators in the overall work of sessions and presbyteries.
4. Ensure greater accountability for and support of those who engage in Christian education.
5. Encourage higher quality education and equipping of Christian educators.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 12-01

Advice on Item 12-01—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 217th General Assembly (2006) to answer Item 12-01 with the following authoritative interpretation:

Existing polity allows the church to ordain and install persons who are called to ministries of Christian education. Although the text of G-6.0203 does not specify “Christian educator” among the roles of minister, the inclusion of “educator” is sufficiently broad to include minister of Christian education. Concerns about whether such a role could appropriately be a validated ministry were answered by the General Assembly in 1987 when it noted that it is not required that a ministry include proclaiming the good news in the Word and Sacrament for a presbytery to validate the ministry under G-11.0403 or approve it as a valid call for the ordination of a candidate under G-14.0401 (Minutes, 1987, Part I, p. 147, paragraph 15.210, Communication 8-87).

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution further advises the 217th General Assembly (2006) with the following comment.

Christian educators have played an important role in the life of the church for decades and they are essential to its life and health. Many men and women have served in various ways as Christian educators, and demonstrated the value and benefits of their ministry, while often sacrificing for their devotion. Presbyteries are urged to find ways to lift the ministry of Christian educators in their midst.

At the same time, we must be cautious and reluctant to create a fourth office beyond those offices of ministry defined in the New Testament and affirmed by our Constitution (G-6.0103). The offices this church has maintained provide the latitude necessary for ministry of Christian education.

The Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) recognizes a wide variety of ministries. The Book of Order, at G-6.0203, recognizes that ministers maybe “designated as educators, chaplains, pastoral counselors, campus ministers, missionaries, partners in mission, evangelists, administrators, social workers, consultants, or in other specific tasks appropriate to the ministry of the church . . .”

For many years, the minister of the Word and Sacrament was called the “teaching elder” and this language has been recaptured at G-4.0301. It is appropriate that ordination to the ministry of the Word and Sacrament is the usual track for those who are called to be ministers of Christian education. Current constitutional provisions allow congregations to call and presbyteries to ordain and install ministers of the Word and Sacrament who would be designated as “ministers of Christian education.” Such ministry is in conformity with the criteria for validated ministries found at G-11.0403.

For those who are not called to the ministry of the Word and Sacrament, the Book of Order specifies a process for becoming a certified Christian educator or a certified associate Christian educator (G-14.0700).

In addition, the many Book of Order amendments proposed by Item 12-01 work against current efforts to diminish the size and detail of the Form of Government and, particularly, Chapter 14.

GAC (CMD) COMMENT ON ITEM 12-01

Comment on Item 12-01—From the General Assembly Council (Congregational Ministries Division).

Items 12-01 and 12-02, in different ways, call for a new office to be known either as minister of Christian education or education elder.

Over the past several General Assemblies, numerous overtures have been brought forward around the ordination of Christian Educators. All of these have failed. That two more overtures have come to the 217th General Assembly (2006) demonstrates that the issues behind the various overtures are still alive, particularly the meaning of ordination.

The 216th General Assembly (2004) directed the Office of Theology and Worship to “set forth the Reformed-Presbyterian understanding of the relationship between Baptism and the ministry of all church members both ordained and not ordained.” This referral is in progress and would be strengthened by these additional referrals.

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 12-01

Advice and Counsel on Item 12-01—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC).

Item 12-01 calls for the creation of a fourth office—the Office of Minister of Christian Education.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC) advises Item 12-01 be referred to the General Assembly Council, Office of Vocation and Leadership, for study.

Rationale

The ACWC advises Items 12-01 and 12-02 be answered with a study of Christian educators, focusing on the status of Christian educators in the church, as well as the needs and wants of such educators and the congregations in which they serve, to be conducted by the GAC Office of Vocation and Leadership in consultation with ACWC and the Association of Presbyterian Christian Educators (APCE). This study, and its subsequent recommendations, would be presented to the 218th General Assembly (2008).

Christian educators serving in the church are primarily women. The ACWC takes seriously the need to support Christian educators in the important work that they do, as well as support the local church in providing excellent, Reformed, Christian education to their youth and adult members. We uphold the need for Christian educators to have voice and vote on the presbytery floor, as well as the support and protection that presbyteries currently provide for its minister members. This justice needs to be granted in a timely manner. Certified Christian educators endure a rigorous and extensive training and educational process to achieve their certification. The ACWC believes that Christian educators are entitled to more support and respect than they currently receive in presbyteries.

The recommended study would allow a broad, inclusive analysis of Christian educators in our church today as well as a complete overview of its implications for our Book of Order and presbyteries. Ephesians 4:11–13 tells of the important gifts that Christ has bestowed upon each of us, as well as the important task we are called to perform with these gifts. “The gifts Christ gave were that some would be apostles, some prophets, some evangelists, some pastors and teachers, to equip the saints for the work of ministry, for building up the body of Christ, until all of us come to the unity of the faith and of the knowledge of the Son of God, to maturity, to the measure of the full stature of Christ.” Christian educators are the primary women and men responsible for this great task of equipping the saints for their work in the world. It is our responsibility as a church to support and uphold these educators as they go about this great commission.

The ACWC has recommended to the 217th General Assembly (2006) a study of the status of women, which could yield useful data and information around the attitudes and perceptions of certified Christian educators, as well as suggestions for changes that should be made concerning this issue.

PCCEC COMMENT ON ITEM 12-01

Comment on Item 12-01—From the Presbyteries Cooperative Committee on Examinations for Candidates.

The Presbyteries’ Cooperative Committee on Examinations for Candidates advises the 217th General Assembly (2006) to disapprove Item 12-01 and is in full agreement with the advice to the 216th General Assembly (2004) given by Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Presbyteries' Cooperative Committee on Examinations for Candidates appointed a task group to respond to Item 12-01 (Overture 16. On Creating the Office of Minister of Christian Education—From the Presbytery of Mission). The Presbyteries' Cooperative Committee on Examinations discussed the overture and asked us to summarize that discussion and respond to the overture.

Need to Maintain High Standards for Ministers

The Presbyteries’ Cooperative Committee on Examinations for Candidates believes it has grounds to address this overture because it serves the church by promoting a high standard of preparedness for ministers of Word and Sacrament. We believe that Item 12-01 dilutes this standard. Provisions in the current Book of Order allow persons to be ordained a minister of Word and Sacrament and to be certified as a Christian educator, maintaining the standards for ordination to the office of minister of Word and Sacrament and demonstrating excellence in Christian education.

Cost of Developing a New Exam, New Grading Process, and Ongoing Expenses

Moreover, Item 12-01 has a direct impact on the work of the Presbyteries' Cooperative Committee on Examinations for Candidates. It mandates a new examination in "Educational Theory and Practice." This new examination would require an increase in the membership of the PCCEC to include members with expertise in educational theory and practice to write this new examination. Also, presbyteries would need to elect examination readers with this expertise. The Open Book Bible Exegesis examination would need to be issued in two versions, one which tests a working knowledge of Greek and Hebrew and one meeting the lesser requirements of Item 12-01. The Theological Competence, Worship and Sacrament, and Polity examinations may need to be adjusted because of the differences in academic education. Examination readers (graders) would need to be trained to grade these two levels of examination, complicating the grading process. There would be significant initial costs in developing the new exam; and the ongoing costs in the grading of examinations would increase.

Item 12-02

[The assembly referred Item 12-02 to the General Assembly Council (Office of Theology and Worship) with comment. See p. 14.]

Comment: This recommendation is being forwarded with great appreciation of the role of Christian educators.

On Amending the Book of Order to Create a Fourth Office to Be Known as Educating Elder—From the Presbytery of Shenandoah.

The Presbytery of Shenandoah overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to do the following:

1. Amend the Book of Order to create a fourth office to be known as educating elder. The educating elder shall be a certified Christian educator (G-14.0700). The educating elder shall be called, ordained, and/or installed by a congregation (G-6.0106) and shall be a voting member of the session of the congregation in which he/she is called to serve. The educating elder shall be a member of the presbytery while serving a call within that presbytery, with the responsibilities and privileges conferred by such membership, including those relating to the committee on ministry (G-11.0501). The educating elder called to serve the church in a position beyond the congregation shall be ordained and/or installed by the congregation in which his/her membership resides.

The educating elder shall perform those duties common to all elders (G-6.0304) including assisting in worship (W-1.4003) and distributing the elements in communion (W-3.3616d). The educating elder will encourage and support growth in Christian faith and life for all ages (G-14.0701b).

2. Direct the Stated Clerk to send the following amendments to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

a. Shall G-6.0106a–b be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“a. To those called to exercise special functions in the church—deacons, elders, educating elders, and ministers of the Word and Sacrament— God gives suitable gifts for their various duties. In addition to possessing the necessary gifts and abilities, natural and acquired, those who undertake particular ministries should be persons of strong faith, dedicated discipleship, and love of Jesus Christ as Savior and Lord. Their manner of life should be a demonstration of the Christian gospel in the church and in the world. They must have the approval of God’s people and the concurring judgment of a governing body of the church.

“b. Those who are called to office in the church are to lead a life in obedience to Scripture and in conformity to the historic confessional standards of the church. Among these standards is the requirement to live either in fidelity within the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman (W-4.9001), or chastity in singleness. Persons refusing to repent of any self-acknowledged practice which the confessions call sin shall not be ordained and/or installed as deacons, elders, educating elders, or ministers of the Word and Sacrament.”

b. Shall a new section, “G-6.0400 Educating Elder,” be added and the current G-6.0400–.0500 be renumbered to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“G-6.0400 4. Educating Elder“6.0401 Scriptural and Historical References

“a. The basic model for ministry in Scripture and the Christian tradition is service. Christians serve God and others in the name of Jesus Christ. The educating elder is called to serve the church. Ordination is the way the church sets apart persons for service, confirms persons in their inward call to ministry, and sets them within the church’s order. An ordained office provides affirmation of God’s call, validation, and accountability of persons called to educational ministry.

*“b. In the New Testament, teachers are called along with apostles, evangelists, prophets, and pastors to equip the saints for the work of ministry and for the building up of the body of Christ. John Calvin in The Institutes of the Christian Religion (4.3.4) mentions a fourth office of teacher. According to Calvin, education is an indispensable task of the church. The Presbyterian church has historically emphasized that the church’s teaching function must be given centrality if God’s reconciling work in Jesus Christ is to be made known.*

“6.0402 Christian Educators and Presbytery

“Certified Christian educators, having completed the academic, examination, and experiential requirements for certification, would be eligible to be ordained to the office of educating elder. The church, through the local congregation and the presbytery, calls the educating elder to the office and responsibility of educating elder. Such educating elders shall receive training approved by the presbytery. The committee on ministry of the presbytery shall examine the educating elder as to his/her personal faith and motives for seeking ordination. The local congregation shall call, exam, ordain, and/or install the educating elder. The church where he/she has membership shall call, exam, ordain, and/or install the educating elder if he/she is called to a position beyond the bounds of a local congregation. The educating elder shall be a member of the presbytery and session of the congregation where he/she is called to serve, with voice and vote.

“6.0403 Gifts and Requirements

“The educating elder should be a person of faith, dedication, and good judgment. Her or his manner of life should be a demonstration of the Christian gospel, both within the church and in the world.

“6.0404 Specific Responsibilities

“The educating elder, in partnership with the pastor, elders, and deacons of a local church, may be responsible for the Sunday school, workshops assisting children in worship, youth groups, preparing young people to make a profession of faith, communion and discipleship classes, Bible studies, teacher/leader training, retreats, outreach ministries, daycare centers, and other ministries. The educating elder may assist in worship and serve communion.

“When a church officer, whether a minister of the Word and Sacrament, elder, educating elder, or deacon, renounces the jurisdiction of this church in writing to the clerk or stated clerk of the governing body of jurisdiction, the renunciation shall be effective upon receipt. Renunciation of jurisdiction shall remove the officer from membership and ordained office and shall terminate the exercise of office.”

d. Shall G-7.0103 be amended to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“The members of a particular church voluntarily put themselves under the leadership of their officers, whom they elect. The session, which consists of the pastor or co-pastors, the associate pastors, and the elders and educating elders in active service, is the governing body in a particular church. The law and government of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) presuppose the fellowship of women and men with their children in voluntary covenanted relationship with one another and with God through Jesus Christ. The organization rests upon the fellowship and is not designed to work without trust and love.”

“a. The pastor of the church shall be the moderator of the session and the session shall not meet without the pastor except as hereunder provided. In congregations where there are co-pastors, they shall, when present, alternately preside in the session. When it may appear advisable for prudential reasons that some minister other than the pastor should preside, the pastor may, with the concurrence of the session, invite a minister of the same presbytery to do so. A presbytery may appoint a lay pastor as moderator of session to the church to which she or he is commissioned. The person assigned to the commissioned lay pastor as mentor and supervisor shall also supervise his or her work as moderator. In addition, the moderator of the session of a church with a vacant pulpit may request an elder or educating elder who is a member of the presbytery’s committee on ministry, the stated clerk, executive presbyter, or associate executive presbyter, to preside; such elder may not moderate the session of the church of which that elder is a member. In the case of the sickness or absence of the pastor the same expedient may be adopted; or the session, after having obtained the approval of the pastor, may convene and elect another of its own members to preside.”

s. Shall G-14.0101 be amended to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“The persons elected by the church to service in the offices of the church (G-6.0000) shall be ordained to these offices by the church. Ordination is the act by which the church sets apart persons to be presbyters (ministers of the Word and Sacrament, or elders, or educating elders) or deacons, and is accompanied with prayer and the laying on of hands. Ordination to the office of minister of the Word and Sacrament is an act of the presbytery. Ordination to the offices of elder, educating elder, and deacon is an act of the session, except in the case of the organization of a new church. (G-7.0202)”

t. Shall a new section, “G-14.0700 Calling and Ordaining Educating Elders” be added and current Sections “G-14.0700–.0800” be renumbered as “G-14.0800–.0900,” so that they shall read as follows:

“G-14.0700 Calling and Ordaining Educating Elders

“G-14.0701 Calling Provisions

“Those persons called to the ministry of educating elder shall fulfill all of the requirements of certified Christian educators as found in G-14.0800 [currently G-14.0700]. When seeking a call within a particular presbytery, that presbytery’s committee on ministry may examine the candidate beyond the certified educator requirements as to his or her readiness for ministry.

“G-14.0702 Election of an Educating Elder

“a. An educating elder shall be elected by the vote of the congregation and shall be approved by the presbytery. This call cannot be changed except by consent of the presbytery at the request of the educating elder, at the request of the church by action of congregation, or at the request of the calling institution or agency.

“Work of the Committee

“b. The nominating committee shall confer with the committee on ministry as provided in G-11.0502e [new] when seeking an educating elder. Care must be taken to consider candidates without regard to race, ethnic origin, sex, marital status, age, or disabilities.

“G-14.0703 Congregational Meeting

“a. When a congregation is convened for the election of an educating elder, the pastor/moderator of the session shall preside.

“b. Following the prayer for the guidance of God, the moderator shall call for the report of the nominating committee. Following the report, the moderator shall then put the question: ‘Are you ready to proceed to the election of an educating elder?’ If they are ready the moderator shall declare the name submitted by the nominating committee to be in nomination. The vote shall be upon the question whether the congregation, under the will of God, shall call the person nominated to be its educating elder, and it shall be taken by ballot. In every case, a majority of the voters present and voting shall be required to elect.

“G-14.0704 Service Beyond Congregation

“When an institution or agency beyond a specific congregation extends a call to an educating elder, the presbytery’s committee on ministry shall be informed of such a call, and finding the call in good order, shall add the name of the educating elder to the presbytery rolls upon ordination and/or installation of the educating elder. The congregation in which the educating elder holds membership shall provide a service of ordination and/or installation. If said congregation is not within the presbytery bounds of the calling institution/agency, the educating elder shall, within one year of having accepted the call, become a member of a PC(USA) congregation located within the presbytery of the calling institution/agency.

“G-14.0705 The Call

“The terms of the call shall always provide for compensation that meets or exceeds any minimum requirements of the presbytery in effect when the call is made and shall thereafter be adjusted annually as required to conform to such requirement. The presbytery may prepare a standard form for terms of call or adopt a model form provided by an agency of the General Assembly.

“G-14.0706 Service of Ordination and Installation

“The service of ordination and installation shall focus upon Christ and the joy and service of responsibility of serving him through the mission and ministry of the church, and shall include a sermon appropriate to the occasion. The minister presiding shall state briefly the nature of the office of educating elder.

“G-14.0707 Questions to Educating Elder

“The minister shall ask the one preparing to be ordained or installed as educating elder to stand before the congregation and to answer the following questions:

“a. Do you trust in Jesus Christ your Savior, acknowledge him Lord of all and Head of the Church, and through him believe in one God, Father, Son, and Holy Spirit?

“b. Do you accept the Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments to be, by the Holy Spirit, the unique and authoritative witness to Jesus Christ in the Church universal, and God’s Word to you?

“c. Do you sincerely receive and adopt the essential tenets of the Reformed faith as expressed in the confessions of our church as authentic and reliable expositions of what Scripture leads us to believe and do, and will you be instructed and led by those confessions as you lead the people of God?

“d. Will you fulfill your office in obedience to Jesus Christ, under the authority of Scripture, and be continually guided by our confessions?

“e. Will you be governed by our church’s polity, and will you abide by its discipline? Will you be a friend among your colleagues in ministry, working with them, subject to the ordering of God’s Word and Spirit?

“f. Will you in your own life seek to follow the Lord Jesus Christ, love your neighbors, and work for the reconciliation of the world?”

“g. Do you promise to further the peace, unity, and purity of the church?”

“h. Will you seek to serve the people with energy, intelligence, imagination, and love?”

“i. Will you be a faithful educating elder, watching over the people, providing for their Christian nurture, worship, and service? Will you share in government and discipline, serving in governing bodies of the church, and in your ministry will you try to communicate the teachings and show the love and justice of Jesus Christ?”

“G-14.0708 Constitutional Questions to the Congregation

“The educating elder-elect having answered in the affirmative, an elder shall stand with him or her before the congregation and shall ask the congregation to answer the following questions:

“a. Do we, the members of the church, accept (names) _____ as elders or deacons,^a chosen by God through the voice of this congregation to lead us in the way of Jesus Christ?”*

“b. Do we agree to encourage them, to respect their decisions, and to follow as they guide us, serving Jesus Christ, who alone is Head of the Church?”

“G-14.0709 Prayer and Laying on of Hands

“a. The members of the church having answered these questions in the affirmative, the one being ordained shall kneel, if able, for the prayer and the laying on of hands by elders and ministers of Word and Sacrament. Those previously ordained shall stand, along with the congregation, if able, for the prayer of installation.

“Statement

“b. The moderator shall say to the one who has just been ordained and/or installed: You are now an educating elder in the Church of Jesus Christ and for this congregation [or _____ (institution/agency)]. Whatever you do, in word or deed, do everything in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God the Father through him. Amen.

“Welcome

“c. The elders and minister(s) of Word and Sacrament shall welcome the newly ordained and/or installed educating elder into their fellowship in ministry.

“Congregation

“d. After the service, it is appropriate for the members of the congregation (and institution/agency) to greet their new educating elder, showing affection and support.

“G-14.0710

“An educating elder may terminate the call from the congregation or institution/agency for good cause, with the session’s or institution’s consent. Upon the ending of one’s call, the educating elder ceases to be an active member of the session to which he/she had been called as well as a voting member of presbytery.

Rationale

In the Old Testament, God’s people are instructed “keep these words that I am commanding you today in your heart. Recite them to your children ... (Deut. 6:6–7 NRSV). In the New Testament, teachers are called out along with apostles, evangelists, prophets, and pastors “to equip the saints for the work of ministry, for building up of the body of Christ” (Eph. 4:11–12 NRSV). Jesus tells us in the Great Commission to “Go therefore and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit, and teaching them to obey everything that I have commanded you. ...” (Matt. 28:19–20 NRSV).

Since its inception, the church has declared education to be one of its primary tasks. John Calvin, in The Institutes of the Christian Religion (4.3.4) writes, “Those who preside over the government of the Church, according to the institution of Christ, are named by Paul, first Apostles; secondly Prophets; thirdly, Evangelists; fourthly, Pastors; and lastly, Teachers (Eph.iv.11). Of these, only the two last have an ordinary office in the Church.” Calvin then describes the temporary function of apostles, prophets, and evangelists. He continues, “Next come Pastors and Teachers, with whom the church can never dispense, and between whom, I think, there is a difference, that teachers preside not over discipline, or the administration of the sacraments, or admonitions, or exhortations, but the interpretation of Scripture only, in order that pure and sound doctrine may be maintained among believers. But all these are embraced in the pastoral office.” The Presbyterian church has historically emphasized that the church’s teaching function must be given centrality if God’s reconciling work in Jesus Christ is to be made known.

In the congregation and higher governing bodies, educators are often responsible for leading Bible study, evaluating curriculum, teaching worship readiness for children and parents, instructing and guiding in Baptism and the Lord’s Supper, coordinating and developing faith through confirmation, directing youth ministry, equipping officer training, and administering new member assimilation.

At the presbytery level, educators plan events that develop leadership abilities and enrich the minds and hearts of the laity, particularly for those smaller congregations that do not always have the benefit of pastors or educators on staff but, nevertheless, deserve trained leadership. Often educators train commissioned lay pastors. They supervise and/or direct camping ministry, which can be a primary setting for making vocational choices. At the General Assembly level, educators plan for and design curricula and resources for the denomination. They carry out actions of the General Assembly. They are representative of the denomination both to sister denominations and other educational entities. While educators are engaged in these many and varied ministries, they are often not examined or held accountable by the presbytery as to their suitability for educational ministry and competence in the fields of theology, Bible, polity, and worship, and sacraments.

Ordination is the act by which the church sets apart persons for service (G-14.0100). It is the way the church confirms persons in their inward call to ministry and sets them within the church’s order. An ordained office provides affirmation of God’s call, accountability, and validation. At the present time, three groups of persons are ordained: ministers of Word and Sacrament, elders, and deacons. A fourth ordained office for certified Christian educators, that of educating elder, would strengthen the denomination’s time-honored emphasis on education in the faith and affirm God’s call to this form of ministry. The educator certification process provides for examination in the areas of biblical interpretation, Reformed theology, human development, religious education theory and practice, polity, program and mission of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), and worship and sacraments as well as experiential requirements (G-14.0703).

The office of educating elder would set within the order of the church persons called to an indispensable function within the life of the church. It would provide a way for the church to maintain standards of competence for those who give leadership in its educational ministry. The office would provide an ordered way for educators to be held accountable for their ministry. It would give educators access to the governing bodies of the church and full participation in their deliberations. Finally, it would lift up the educational function of the church as the essential ministry that Presbyterians have always known it to be.

Frequently Asked Questions Regarding the Educating Elder

1. Why should Christian educators be ordained?

Ordination is the act by which the church sets apart persons for service (G-14.0100). It provides a way for the church to affirm an individual's sense of God's call to him or her and to give full recognition of those persons who are called to an educational ministry. Ordination offers the means for the church to meet needs of educators for accountability, support, and full participation in the governance of the church. It affirms the historic priority of education as an indispensable ministry and indicates the seriousness with which the church views education.

2. Why do we need a fourth office?

Currently our church is well-served by three offices, minister of Word and Sacrament, elder, and deacon, each with specific responsibilities that contribute to the well-being of the church. However, in light of our current environment of biblical illiteracy and an increasing number of church members without a background in reformed theology, there is a clear need for intentional focus on education and nurture which this fourth office can provide.

John Calvin, founder of the Reformed Tradition, in his Institutes of the Christian Religion (4.3.4) writes, "Those who preside over the government of the Church, according to the institution of Christ, are named by Paul, first Apostles; secondly Prophets; thirdly, Evangelists; fourthly, Pastors; and lastly, Teachers (Eph.iv.11). Of these, only the two last have an ordinary office in the Church." Calvin then describes the temporary function of apostles, prophets, and evangelists. He continues, "Next come Pastors and Teachers, with whom the church can never dispense, and between whom, I think, there is a difference, that teachers preside not over discipline, or the administration of the sacraments, or admonitions, or exhortations, but the interpretation of Scripture only, in order that pure and sound doctrine may be maintained among believers. But all these are embraced in the pastoral office."

Traditionally, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and its predecessor denominations have continued to place a high value on Christian education, including the adoption of a fourth office, educating elder, just prior to reunion in 1983. Given the above reality, it is appropriate to draw on the roots of our Reformed tradition and reinstitute a fourth office with specific responsibilities that focus on education and nurture, to be known as the educating elder.

3. How will this benefit the whole church?

Ordination of those called to ministries of education will strengthen the importance of Christian education in all congregations by

- providing a way for the church to maintain standards of competence and accountability for those who give leadership in its educational ministry;
- lifting up the educational function of the church as the essential ministry which Presbyterians have always known it to be;
- providing opportunity for persons called to an indispensable function within the life of the church to have access to the governing bodies of the church and full participation in their deliberations;
- providing for clarification and validation of a call when specific expertise in educational ministry is needed.

The office of educating elder allows for the intentional focus on education and nurture in a way that is lacking in the current structure of governance. As this intentional focus is realized in the life of the presbytery, it will begin to enrich the educational ministries of all of its churches. This may indeed encourage additional gifted and committed people to be drawn to this calling.

4. Why should the new office be an elder?

Ever since the establishment of the fourth office by Calvin, education has been central to the responsibility of elders. In response to the growing educational and nurturing needs of the church, it is imperative to reclaim the historical and ever vital role of teaching elder. The preparation, accountability, and support for the educating elder are designed for that particular office and its distinctive functions and emphases. While this is a new office, the framework is in place for the ordination of elders requiring fewer changes to the Book of Order.

5. What is the process required for becoming an educating elder?

The process would require working with the Educator Certification Council to become a certified Christian educator by completing the accrediting process (academic, experiential, and examination) as stated in the Book of Order (G-14.0703). The congregation who has called the certified Christian educator will examine, ordain, and/or install that individual as an educating elder with the approval of the presbytery.

6. How can someone be a member of a congregation and a member of the presbytery?

An elder

- is a member of a congregation;
- serves as a member of the presbytery when elected to serve as a commissioner to that governing body or elected as an officer of the governing body;
- serving as chairperson of a standing committee, or a member of the council of presbytery, may be enrolled as a member of presbytery for the term of office, whether or not commissioned by his or her session;
- serving as exempt staff for the presbytery, may be enrolled as a member of the presbytery for the duration of service in such staff position, whether or not commissioned by his or her session;
- who is a certified Christian educator may be enrolled as a member of the presbytery.

A person filling this new office—the educating elder—would be enrolled as a member of the presbytery as long as he or she is actively serving a call within that presbytery.

7. What if a congregation wants to call someone to do educational ministry who is not ordained or certified?

Congregations are free to do that now and this will not change. However, once a person is serving a congregation, there would be more opportunities available for service within the congregation and the larger church if he/she chooses to continue his/her education in the area of Christian education.

8. How will this amendment further the Kingdom of God?

Researchers tell us that effective Christian education, more than anything else, influences the faith maturity of a person. Faith maturity influences how we live our lives and greatly influences how Christians respond to God's call to ministry. That means effective Christian education affects a person's involvement in the church, the vocation he or she chooses, the way he or she interprets Scripture, his or her understanding of stewardship, his or her prayer life, his or her compassion for persons in need throughout the world, and his or her commitment to care for creation. The educational ministry is exciting and humbling. We believe this amendment will promote and encourage more effective Christian education. The hope of those serving as church educators is that we will model the love of God by equipping the people of God for ministry in the name of Jesus Christ.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 12-02

Advice on Item 12-02—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 217th General Assembly (2006) to disapprove Item 12-02 with the following comment.

Item 12-02 proposes creating the office of “educating elder.” This overture is somewhat similar to Item 12-01. An innovation in the overture is that ordination as an educating elder would be by the session of a church, after examination by the committee on ministry of the presbytery, but the individual would also be a member of presbytery.

Section G-6.0301 defines the office as sharing "... in governance and ministry." G-6.0302 spells out their collegiality with ministers of the Word and Sacrament as the exercise of "leadership, government, and ministry." The proposal to create another office might well confuse how the office of elder is understood.

It is also noted that G-14.0700 provides for two levels of certification for Christian educators.

Further, a governing body is already authorized in G-14.0102 to commission "... persons called to perform special services in the church" Sessions already have the authority necessary to designate a particular elder as an "educating elder."

See the ACC comment on Item 12-01 for additional guidance.

GAC (CMD) COMMENT ON ITEM 12-02

Comment on Item 12-02—From the General Assembly Council (Congregational Ministries Division).

Items 12-01 and 12-02, in different ways, call for a new office to be known either as minister of Christian education or education elder.

Over the past several General Assemblies, numerous overtures have been brought forward around the ordination of Christian Educators. All of these have failed. That two more overtures have come to the 217th General Assembly (2006) demonstrates that the issues behind the various overtures are still alive, particularly the meaning of ordination.

The 216th General Assembly (2004) directed the Office of Theology and Worship to "set forth the Reformed-Presbyterian understanding of the relationship between Baptism and the ministry of all church members both ordained and not ordained." This referral is in progress and would be strengthened by these additional referrals.

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 12-02

Advice and Counsel on Item 12-02—From the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC).

Item 12-02 calls for the creation of a fourth office of ordination—Educating Elder.

The Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC) advises Item 12-02 be referred to the Office of Vocation and Leadership for study.

Rationale

The ACWC advises Items 12-01 and 12-02 be answered with a study of Christian educators, focusing on the status of Christian educators in the church, as well as the needs and wants of such educators and the congregations in which they serve, to be conducted by the Office of Vocation and Leadership in consultation with ACWC and the Association of Presbyterian Christian Educators (APCE). This study, and its subsequent recommendations, would be presented to the 218th General Assembly (2008).

Christian educators serving in the church are primarily women. The ACWC takes seriously the need to support Christian educators in the important work that they do, as well as support the local church in providing excellent, Reformed, Christian education to their youth and adult members. We uphold the need for Christian educators to have voice and vote on the presbytery floor, as well as the support and protection that presbyteries currently provide for its minister members. This justice needs to be granted in a timely manner. Certified Christian educators endure a rigorous and extensive training and educational process to achieve their certification. The ACWC believes that Christian educators are entitled to more support and respect than they currently receive in presbyteries.

The recommended study would allow a broad, inclusive analysis of Christian educators in our church today as well as a complete overview of its implications for our Book of Order and presbyteries. Ephesians 4:11–13 tells of the important gifts that Christ has bestowed upon each of us, as well as the important task we are called to perform with these gifts. "The gifts Christ gave were that some would be apostles, some prophets, some evangelists, some pastors and teachers, to equip the saints for the work of ministry, for building up the body of Christ, until all of us come to the unity of the faith and of the knowledge of the Son of God, to maturity, to the measure of the full stature of Christ." Christian educators are the primary women and men responsible for this great task of equipping the saints for their work in the world. It is our responsibility as a church to support and uphold these educators as they go about this great commission.

The ACWC has recommended to the 217th General Assembly (2006) a study of the status of women, which could yield useful data and information around the attitudes and perceptions of certified Christian educators, as well as suggestions for changes that should be made concerning this issue.

Item 12-03

[The assembly approved Item 12-03 as amended. See p. 14.]

On Amending G-14.0701 to Name Certified Christian Educators as Mandated Reporters in Cases of Abuse of Minors or Adults Lacking Mental Capacity—From the Presbytery of Genesee Valley.

The Presbytery of Genesee Valley respectfully overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the Book of Order, section G-14.0701, to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Shall G-14.0701 of the Form of Government be amended by adding a new section “d.” to read as follows: [Text to be added is shown as italic.]

“d. Certified Christian educators and certified associate Christian educators shall report to ecclesiastical and civil legal authorities knowledge gained in the course of service to the church, of harm, or risk of harm, related to the physical abuse, neglect, and/or sexual molestation or abuse of a minor or an adult who lacks mental capacity when [(1) such information is gained outside of privileged communication; or (2)] he or she reasonably believes that there is risk of future physical harm or abuse.”

Rationale

The 216th General Assembly (2004) and a majority of the presbyteries approved amending G-6.0204 (regarding ministers of Word and Sacrament), G-6.0304 (regarding elders), and G-6.0402 (regarding deacons) so that all three offices of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) are church-mandated reporters of physical abuse, neglect, and/or sexual molestation or abuse of a minor or an adult who lacks mental capacity. Without specifically mentioning the role of commissioned lay pastor (CLP), the amending of G-6.0304 inherently applies to the CLP role because, by definition, every CLP is an elder (G-14.0801). However, the newly enacted amendments do not inherently apply to the two roles of certified Christian educator, because not all certified Christian educators are elders.

It is the intent of this overture to extend the church’s position regarding mandated reporting to both designated certified Christian educator roles in G-14.0701, the certified Christian educator (CCE) and the certified associate Christian educator (CACE).

Persons who are called to and employed in the ministry of Christian education in our church are expected to “share the responsibility of providing for the spiritual growth of members for their ministry. . .” (G-14.0701b). It is ethically consistent for the church to expect our accredited Christian educators to adhere to the same standard of practice for officers of the church in circumstances where children, minors, or adults who lack mental capacity may be at risk for harm or abuse. If we entrust people who are vulnerable into the care and ministry of those who are specifically accredited to provide Christian education in our church, then extending this standard of practice regarding mandated reporting will have both symbolic and practical value in order to demonstrate our commitment to the spiritual well-being of all the people of Jesus Christ.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 12-03

Advice on Item 12-03—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 217th General Assembly (2006) to disapprove Item 12-03.

Rationale

The 216th General Assembly (2004) approved an overture that would amend the Book of Order and make ministers of the Word and Sacrament, elders, and deacons mandated reporters of child abuse or abuse of minors or adults lacking in mental capacity. This overture was ratified by the presbyteries and is now embodied respectively as G-6.0204b, G-6.0304b, and G-6.0402b (Minutes, 2004, Part I, p. 85). Mandated reporters are set by state law and stipulate that certain persons, typically in positions that include oversight of children, have a mandated responsibility to report any incident of suspected child abuse or neglect to the authorities, such as a state's Department of Children and Family Services. Mandated reporters include social workers, nurses, physicians, family therapists, counselors, child care personnel, schoolteachers, administrators, et. al.

Child abuse has become a very serious issue in American society. It is an affront to and rejection of Christian values. It is an abhorrent social problem that has commanded appropriate and sensitive focus and wide media coverage. Accordingly, there is a large-scale effort, in every sector of society, not only to bring attention to the wounding and traumatizing of our precious younger citizens, but also to marshal every avenue of prevention and intervention.

Everyone has the right and responsibility to report suspected child abuse to the civil authorities. The Book of Order, in its current form, does not prohibit any Christian educator from reporting suspected child abuse or neglect to an officer in the church and thereby paving the way for mandated reporting. A church's personnel policies are an appropriate place for a provision of mandated reporting for its Christian educators. Too, a presbytery may build such a provision for certified Christian educators into its manual of operations or standing rules. Therefore, the right and responsibility of being good stewards of the children entrusted to the church's care should be viewed as a sacred trust held by all in the community of faith.

Item 12-03, which would amend G-14.0701, might appear a logical extension of the General Assembly's action in 2004 by expanding mandated reporters to include certified Christian educators. The language employed in the overture is somewhat similar, but not the same, as that used in the current Book of Order amendments made for ministers, elders, and deacons. Several significant distinctions exist between this proposed amendment and the similar amendments approved at the 216th General Assembly (2004).

First, certified Christian educators are not officers of the church by reason of such a position, and are not guided or bound by ordination vows. A crucial purpose in the amendments approved for ministers, elders, and deacons was to limit the circumstances in which, because of their ordained status, such officers might claim that disclosure of information regarding sexual misconduct was shielded from mandatory reporting by confidential communications made to an ordained officer of the church. In contrast, certified Christian educators, since they are not officers of the church, have no argument that they could shield such communications as confidential communications made to an ordained officer of the church. Thus, the reasons for the 2004 amendments do not apply to certified Christian educators.

Moreover, officers, in particular, are subject to the discipline of the church as expressed in ordination vow number five, which is the same for all three offices, "Will you be governed by our church's polity, and will you abide by its discipline? Will you be a friend among your colleagues in ministry, working with them, subject to the ordering of God's Word and Spirit?" (Ministers, G-14.0207; elders and deacons, G-14.0404). Certified Christian educators, under the provisions of G-14.0702 do not have to be Presbyterian, and as such are not subject to the disciplinary processes as defined in the Rules of Discipline.

No amendment to the Book of Order is necessary to reinforce these responsibilities with respect to Certified Christian Educators.

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 12-03

Advice and Counsel on Item 12-03—From the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC).

Item 12-03 calls for the inclusion of certified Christian educators as mandated reporters in cases of abuse of minors or adults lacking mental capacity.

The Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC) advises Item 12-03 be approved.

Rationale

The ACWC supports measures that will promote the protection of children and adults lacking mental capacity. As a church, we have a crucial responsibility to our children and adults lacking mental capacity to provide for them a safe, nurturing community. The ACWC believes that because certified Christian educators are in close contact with children, it is important that they be held to the same standards of reporting, as are our ordained ministers, elders, and deacons.

On Transferring Crescent Springs Presbyterian Church to the Presbytery of Cincinnati—From the Presbytery of Cincinnati.

The Presbytery of Cincinnati overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to approve the transfer of Crescent Springs Presbyterian Church in Crescent Springs, Kentucky, from the Presbytery of Mid-Kentucky to the Presbytery of Cincinnati.

Rationale

The Crescent Springs congregation, in a meeting held on March 13, 2005, voted to request to be transferred from the Presbytery of Mid-Kentucky to the Presbytery of Cincinnati. The Presbytery of Mid-Kentucky approved the request on April 18, 2005. The Presbytery of Cincinnati approved the request on September 13, 2005. The Synod of Living Waters and the Synod of the Covenant will be asked to concur with these actions.

Concurrence to Item 12-04 from the Synod of Living Waters.

Concurrence to Item 12-04 from the Synod of the Covenant (with Additional Rationale):

Rationale

History

The Presbytery of Cincinnati currently includes seven congregations in Northern Kentucky. Prior to the 1983 reunion of the Presbyterian Church U.S. and the United Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A., two of those seven congregations were “northern” in the Presbytery of Cincinnati, and five were “southern” in the Presbytery of Louisville.

In 1985–87, five formerly “southern” congregations transferred to the Presbytery of Cincinnati. During this time, Crescent Springs Church, also a formerly “southern” congregation located in Northern Kentucky, voted to remain in the Presbytery of Louisville.

When Crescent Springs made that decision, its members were extremely active in the Presbytery of Louisville. As years have gone by, their level of participation has waned. This is due to a number of factors including their general orientation to the Northern Kentucky/Cincinnati area and the fact that their neighboring PC(USA) congregations belong to the Presbytery of Cincinnati.

By transferring to the Presbytery of Cincinnati, the Crescent Springs congregation hopes to become more involved in the life of a presbytery.

On Transferring Glen Burnie Korean Presbyterian Church from the Atlantic Korean-American Presbytery to the Presbytery of Baltimore—From the Presbytery of Baltimore.

The Presbytery of Baltimore, joined by the Atlantic Korean-American Presbytery and the Synod of the Mid-Atlantic, overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to transfer the Glen Burnie Korean Presbyterian Church of Glen Burnie, Maryland, from the Atlantic Korean-American Presbytery, of which it is now a member, to the Presbytery of Baltimore, effective with the adjournment of the 217th General Assembly (2006).

Rationale

The Glen Burnie Korean Presbyterian Church is situated in Glen Burnie, Maryland, in Anne Arundel County, within the geographical bounds of the Presbytery of Baltimore.

The Glen Burnie Korean Presbyterian Church has, through the action of its session December 29, 2002, and congregation December 29, 2002, expressed its desire to be a part of the Presbytery of Baltimore and participate in its mission and ministry.

Concurrence to Item 12-05 from the Synod of Mid-Atlantic.

Concurrence to Item 12-05 from the Atlantic Korean-American Presbytery (with Additional Rationale)

Rationale

The Glen Burnie Korean Presbyterian Church has wanted to be a part of the Presbytery of Baltimore within the geographical bounds of it and the Atlantic Korean American Presbytery took an action unanimously to release the congregation on September 22, 2005, at its stated meeting.

On Transferring Warrenton Presbyterian Church from the Presbytery of National Capital to the Presbytery of Shenandoah—From the Presbytery of National Capital.

The Presbytery of National Capital, joined by the Presbytery of Shenandoah and the Synod of the Mid-Atlantic, overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to transfer Warrenton Presbyterian Church of Warrenton, Virginia, from the Presbytery of National Capital, of which it is now a member, to the Presbytery of Shenandoah, effective with the adjournment of the 217th General Assembly (2006).

Rationale

Warrenton Presbyterian Church, through the vote of its congregation, has asked the Presbytery of National Capital to dismiss the congregation to the Presbytery of Shenandoah. Because of geographic and travel considerations, the pastoral staff and members of Warrenton Presbyterian Church are prevented from playing an active and responsible role in the life of the presbytery. It is their hope and intent to be full participants in the life of the Presbytery of Shenandoah, which has acted to welcome them. The Presbytery of National Capital gave its approval at a stated meeting on November 15, 2005.

Concurrence to Item 12-06 from the Synod of Mid-Atlantic.

On Transferring First Presbyterian Church of McGehee, Arkansas from the Presbytery of the Pines to the Presbytery of Arkansas—From the Synod of the Sun.

The Synod of the Sun overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to move the First Presbyterian Church of McGehee, Arkansas, from the governance of the Presbytery of the Pines to the governance of the Presbytery of Arkansas.

Rationale

The Presbytery of the Pines approved dismissing this congregation on March 6, 2004.

The Presbytery of Arkansas approved receiving this congregation on September 21, 2004.

The Synod of the Sun approved this change in principle on October 29, 2004, and approved this specific overture on October 28, 2005.

The First Presbyterian Church in McGehee, Arkansas, is in Desha County, in the southeastern part of Arkansas. For many years, the folks in that congregation have gone to Little Rock, their state capital, for all kinds of services—recreation, medical needs, shopping, legal advice, and support. Their youth participate in the Youth Council in the Presbytery of Arkansas and for some time have enjoyed and benefited from the summer camping program at Ferncliff, the camp and conference center in the Presbytery of Arkansas. In addition to these tangible evidences of connection, they feel a part of the Presbytery of Arkansas. The congregation initiated this request for transfer.

Should this transfer be approved, the geographical boundaries of the Presbytery of Arkansas would read as follows:

The Presbytery of Arkansas shall consist of the following counties within the State of Arkansas: Arkansas, Baxter, Benton, Boone, Carroll, Clark, Cleburne, Conway, Craig-head, Crawford, Cross, Desha, Faulkner, Franklin, Fulton, Garland, Grant, Greene, Hot Spring, Independence, IZard, Jackson, Jefferson, Johnson, Lawrence, Lee, Logan, Lonoke, Madison, Marion, Monroe, Montgomery, Newton, Perry, Phillips, Pike, Poinsett, Polk, Pope, Prairie, Pulaski, Randolph, St. Francis, Saline, Scott, Searcy, Sebastian, Sharp, Stone, Van Buren, Washington, White, Woodruff, and Yell.

And furthermore, should this transfer be approved, the geographical boundaries of the Presbytery of the Pines regarding counties in the Sate of Arkansas would read as follows:

The Presbytery of the Pines shall consist of the following counties within the State of Arkansas: Ashley, Bradley, Calhoun, Chicot, Cleveland, Columbia, Dallas, Drew, Hempstead, Howard, Lafayette, Lincoln, Little River, Miller, Nevada, Ouachita, Sevier, and Union.

(Note: The list of parishes in the State of Louisiana which reside in the Presbytery of the Pines would remain unchanged if this overture were to be approved.)

The Presbytery of Eastern Virginia overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to do the following:

1. Direct ~~[the Moderator of the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)—in consultation with the Vice-Moderator, the Executive Director of the General Assembly Council, the Stated Clerk, and the chair, vice-chair, and one additional member of the National Ministries Division—to constitute a task force]~~ [the General Assembly Council, Evangelism Office,] to analyze at least forty-five randomly chosen congregations that have shown significant growth over the past 24 to 36 months prior to the previous General Assembly, construct a report on this analysis, and present it to the 218th General Assembly (2008).

~~[2. Direct that this task force shall consist of at least eighteen people and not more than twenty eight. It shall be composed of equal numbers of male and female clergy and equal number of male and female laity. One half of the task force shall be from churches with total average Sunday worship attendance of 150 or less. One fourth shall be from churches with total average Sunday worship attendance between 151 and 300. The remaining fourth shall be from churches with average attendance of 300 or more per Sunday.]~~

~~[3.]~~ [2.] Significant growth shall be defined as increasing membership by at least 10 percent for two consecutive years. This data shall be derived from the annual statistical reports to the General Assembly.

[4-] [3.] Direct that the ~~[task force]~~ [General Assembly Council, Evangelism Office,] shall consider such factors as geographic location, visibility of the church, socioeconomic levels, [racial and cultural diversity,] mission emphasis, mission goals, prevalence of small groups, Christian education efforts, youth ministry, worship styles and frequency, [theological perspective, involvement of women, social justice viewpoint,] overall feelings about the church among officers and members, and any and all other factors that ~~[the task force]~~ [they] may perceive as effective growth.

[5-] [4.] The churches to be analyzed shall be stratified as follows: at least fifteen shall be churches with average Sunday worship attendance of 150 or less; at least fifteen shall be churches with average Sunday worship attendance of 151–300; at least fifteen shall be churches with average Sunday worship attendance of 300 or more.

[6-] [5.] Direct [them] ~~[the task force]~~ to interview the staff of the churches and as many lay leaders as [they] ~~[the task force]~~ deems appropriate. Other clergy and lay leadership in the selected churches' presbytery may also be interviewed. The majority of these interviews may be by telephone and conference calling. However, at least one-fourth shall be face-to-face. ~~[The task force]~~ [The General Assembly Council, Evangelism Office,] shall also consider such print and visual media (e.g. newsletters, bulletins, web sites, advertising, etc.) as deemed significant by [them] ~~[the task force]~~ and interviewees.

[7-] [6.] [The General Assembly Council, Evangelism Office,] ~~[The task force]~~ shall analyze, with prayer and spiritual discernment, all of the data and interviews to determine commonalities and differences as to the reasons for the growth among the churches. [In addition, the General Assembly Council, Evangelism Office, shall recommend goals and strategies for synods, presbyteries, and churches. They] ~~[The task force]~~ shall then publish [their] ~~[its]~~ findings to the 218th General Assembly (2008) and through the assembly to the congregations of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) as a means of helping all of our congregations to begin focusing on realistic growth strategies appropriate to each of our congregations.

[8-] [7.] Direct that the [General Assembly Council, Evangelism Office,] ~~[task force]~~ discuss and, if they deem appropriate, recommend some form of apt recognition from the denomination for those churches that exhibit significant growth (as defined by the [General Assembly Council, Evangelism Office,] ~~[task force]~~).

[Original Financial Implication: (2006) $14,050; (2007) $70,190; (2008) $18,100] [Assembly Action: (2006) $0; (2007) $0; (2008) $0]

Rationale

For several decades the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has declined in membership.

The church as a whole has long noticed this decline and has studied it resulting in papers and books from within the church and individual scholars and various consulting groups.

In spite of such studies, the decline continues as is more than evident from the latest statistical reports.

In spite of this overall decline, many churches within our denomination are growing.

It is self-evident that churches function differently in terms of worship, mission, Christian education, administration, and outreach due to size, location, age, and other factors. Yet these factors have infrequently been included in a systematic fashion in each of these studies.

In addressing institutional problems, new approaches that focus on what is going right in the institution rather than what is wrong can offer new, creative solutions.

ACREC AND ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 12-08

Advice and Counsel on Item 12-08—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) and the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC).

Item 12-08 directs the creation of a task force to study growing congregations. It was submitted by the Presbytery of Eastern Virginia.

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) and the Advocacy Committee on Women's Concerns (ACWC) advise that Item 12-08 be approved with the following amendments.

Amend Recommendations 2. and 4. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through and with brackets; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic and with brackets.]

“2. Direct that this task force shall consist of at least eighteen people and not more than twenty-eight. It shall be composed of equal numbers of male and female clergy and equal number of male and female laity. One half of the task force shall be from churches with total average Sunday worship attendance of 150 or less. One fourth shall be from churches with total average Sunday worship attendance between 151 and 300. The remaining fourth shall be from churches with average attendance of 300 or more per Sunday. [Twenty percent of the task force shall be persons of color.]

....

“4. Direct that the task force shall consider such factors as geographic location, visibility of the church, socio-economic levels, [racial and cultural diversity,] mission emphasis, mission goals, prevalence of small groups, Christian education efforts, youth ministry, worship styles and frequency, [theological perspective, involvement of women, social justice viewpoint,] overall feelings about the church among officers and members and any and all other factors that the task force may perceive as affective growth.”

Rationale

The ACREC and the ACWC share with all Presbyterians the concern for the decline in membership throughout our denomination and applaud the intent of this overture to examine growing churches so that we might learn from their examples.

The ACREC and the ACWC also affirm the vision of becoming a multicultural church that has been lifted up by the General Assembly Council in its Mission Work Plan Goals and Objectives for 2007–2008, the Racial Ethnic/Immigrant Evangelism and Church Growth Strategy (1998) as faithful expressions of the church’s commitment to embodying the diversity of God’s creation as defined in the Book of Order, paragraph G-4.0403. If we are truly committed as Christians to invite all of God’s people regardless of ethnicity into the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.); than we must be intentional about identifying and promoting models of ministry that successfully respond to the increasing racial and cultural diversity of communities across the U.S.

Furthermore, ACWC is charged with the responsibility of monitoring the full inclusion of women into the denomination. Information gathered from the study would assist ACWC in its responsibility.

OGA COMMENT ON ITEM 12-08

Comment on Item 12-08—From the Office of the General Assembly.

In considering this overture, the commissioners should be aware of previous research in this area. In response to General Assembly approval of an overture from the Cherokee Presbytery to study the motivations of individuals joining PC(USA) congregations, in 1998 Research Services conducted a survey of new members of PC(USA) congregations. Research Services undertook a study of growing Presbyterian congregations in 2002. Both of these projects were conducted in collaboration with the Evangelism Office.

In addition, Research Services is currently working with Elder Dr. Dean Hoge (professor of sociology, Catholic University) to plan and conduct research on the decline in membership. Dr. Hoge is a prominent sociologist of religion and has published a number of books describing his research with the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). Two of his more recent books are Vanishing Boundaries and Money Matters. Dr. Hoge and the staff of Research Services are presently in the process of designing the research project. Following the General Assembly, they will be meeting with the Stated Clerk, the Executive Director of the General Assembly Council, members of the Mission Work Plan Task Force, and staff of the Evangelism Office.

On Establishing Kaw Prairie Community Church in Lenexa, Kansas, as a Union Church—From the Presbytery of Heartland.

The Presbytery of Heartland overtures the General Assembly of the PC(USA) to approve the action taken by the Presbytery of Heartland and the Central States Synod of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America to establish Kaw Prairie Community Church in Lenexa, Kansas, to form a union church. Kaw Prairie Community Church will be responsible and accountable to both denominations.

Rationale

The Presbytery of Heartland and the Central States Synod of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America seek to manifest more visibly the unity of the church of Jesus Christ and strengthen the witness to our Lord and Savior in the community of Lenexa, Kansas, by this action (Book of Order, G-15.0101).

The Presbytery of Heartland approved this action at its February 11, 2006, meeting.

The Regional Office of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America's approval will be received in June 2006 prior to the meeting of the General Assembly but after the overtures deadline of May 1, 2006.

On the Union of St. John's United Methodist Church and the Wharton United Presbyterian Church—From the Presbytery of Newton.

The Presbytery of Newton respectfully overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to approve the union of the St. John's United Methodist Church, Wharton, New Jersey, and the Wharton United Presbyterian Church, Wharton, New Jersey.

Rationale

The congregations of the St. John's United Methodist Church, Wharton, New Jersey, and the Wharton United Presbyterian Church, Wharton, New Jersey, have each approved a Plan of Union at their respective congregation meetings on March 12, 2006.

All of the needed legal and ecclesiastical steps have been taken to assure a full and joyful union according to the Book of Order of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A) and the Book of Discipline of the United Methodist Church.

The Presbytery of Newton approved the Plan of Union at its stated meeting at the First Presbyterian Church of Sparta, New Jersey, on March 14, 2006.

Item 12-11

[The assembly approved Item 12-11 as amended. See pp. 14–15.]

On Sexuality Curricula and Other Materials Being Consistent with the Biblical and Confessional Teaching—From the Presbytery of Shenango.

The Presbytery of Shenango overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to direct the General Assembly Council (Congregational Ministries Division) and all other PC(USA) entities to use the biblical and confessional teachings that sexual relationships belong only within the bond of marriage of a man and a woman as the standard for the development of any future materials or recommendations for materials in print or in its website. [The curriculum should include information on reproductive health to allow for an open discussion between teachers and youth in light of our understanding of God's plan for sexuality.]

Rationale

The General Assemblies of 1998, 1999, 2000, and 2002 spoke to guiding our youth toward decisions of sexual purity and revising, rewriting, or otherwise correcting the existing PC(USA) sexuality curricula materials to reflect biblical and confessional teaching on this subject. Louisville offices have delayed action in this area well beyond an acceptable time frame and the reasonable patience of the General Assembly.

Youth are especially vulnerable to the messages concerning sexuality being sent by our culture in the various forms of media. Even many of our schools tend to send mixed messages in the formal instruction of youth with a lukewarm encouragement to delay sexual relationships while offering and even promoting contraception.

Scripture teaches the holiness of the sexual relationship in marriage. It values the body as a temple of the Holy Spirit and urges disciples of Christ to glorify God with our bodies. The biblical teaching also is intended to protect our children and youth from the abusive relationships and lifelong harm that result from sexual relationships outside the marriage relationship.

It is the church's role to communicate faithfully the biblical message regarding sexual relationships to our children and youth and encourage parents in their desire to see their children grow into faithful disciples of Christ in thought, word, and deed.

GAC (CMD) COMMENT ON ITEM 12-11

Comment on Item 12-11 from the General Assembly Council (Congregational Ministries Division).

Congregational Ministries Publishing and its predecessor developed and published human sexuality resources for church leaders and parents of older youth and younger youth (God's Gift of Sexuality); for church leaders and parents of elementary children (God's Plan for Growing Up); and for church leaders and parents of young children (In God's Image), as mandated by overtures in 1984 and 1990. Guidelines for writers included requirements for biblical content and specific instructions regarding adherence to the confessional standards and the policies of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). All documents used for reference were approved General Assembly statements.

Background

In each instance Congregational Ministries Publishing brought together design teams of knowledgeable people in the areas of Christian education, theology, education, human sexuality, health sciences, and parenting to discuss appropriate content, including content from the faith perspective. The materials were field tested across the country by Presbyterians. Editors produced the final product in light of comments received from those who field-tested the materials.

The first God's Gift of Sexuality resources included a question and answer section. That section was also included in later resources (God's Plan for Growing Up and In God's Image).

For the answers to the questions, writers relied on statements found in PC(USA) documents on particular issues as guides to help in understanding the issues.

The guides are compiled from the Scriptures and thirteen documents endorsed by General Assemblies.

Congregational Ministries Publishing is a program of the Congregational Ministries Division and a ministry of the General Assembly Council. Its publications and resources support General Assembly actions as well as Presbyterian policies.

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 12-11

Advice and Counsel on Item 12-11—From the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC).

Item 12-11 calls for sexuality curricula and other materials to be consistent with biblical and confessional standards.

The Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC) concurs with the agency comment made by the General Assembly Council (Congregational Ministries Division) and advises that Item 12-11 be disapproved.

Rationale

The Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns believes this overture is seeking a new answer to a settled fact examined most closely by the 211th General Assembly (1999). The comment from the General Assembly Council (Congregational Ministries Division) describes the considerable process and the instructions that guided the development and production of the sexuality curricula.

Item 12-12

[The assembly approved Item 12-12 as amended. See pp. 14–15.]

The General Assembly Council, upon recommendation of its Congregational Ministries Division, recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) do the following:

1. Receive [, with gratitude,] the report of the Older Adult Ministries Task Force.

2. Approve its recommendations listed below, contingent upon the availability of financial resources and future General Assembly Council governmental structure, in order to enhance the quality of life for the increasing number of aging in our denomination, under the General Assembly goal of Spirituality and Discipleship and featuring aspects of other General Assembly goals and objectives:

a. Spirituality and Discipleship

(1) That the General Assembly Council, Congregational Ministries Division, through Congregational Ministries Publishing, develop a series of resources on spirituality and aging, suitable to the life stages, circumstances, and transitions of older adults, including: healthy and positive aging, spiritual growth, life review, later life planning (wills, advance directives, living arrangements, financial planning), caregiving and care receiving, elder abuse, death and dying, loss, lifelong learning, and service.

(a) That the General Assembly Council, Congregational Ministries Division, authorize the Office of Older Adult Ministries to review, update, and republish existing resources in older adult ministry as needed.

(b) That the General Assembly Council, Congregational Ministries Division, through the Office of Older Adult Ministries, offer distance learning opportunities such as on-line courses, teleconferences, and web-casts to increase leadership skills in aging issues.

(2) That the Office of the Executive Director, through the Office of Mission Funding and Stewardship, and in collaboration with the Office of Older Adult Ministries, develop congregational stewardship education resources targeted at baby boomers (persons born 1946–1964) and Gen Xers (born 1965–1980) in the life of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

(3) That the General Assembly encourage the ongoing relationship between the Presbyterian Foundation and the Office of Older Adult Ministries as a $6,000,000 endowment is raised to ensure the long-range financial viability of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)'s Older Adult Ministries.

(4) That the General Assembly encourage the ongoing relationship between the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Board of Pensions and the Office of Older Adult Ministries to ensure the long-term financial viability of the Association of Retired Ministers, Their Spouses or Survivors.

b. Leadership and Vocation

(1) That the General Assembly Council, Congregational Ministries Division, through the Office of Older Adult Ministries, support and promote the work of the Presbyterian Older Adult Ministries Network and the Association of Retired Ministers, Their Spouses or Survivors as collaborators in joint endeavors (including ecumenical and global partners), involving new partners that enhance and expand older adult ministries.

(a) That the General Assembly encourage each presbytery to establish a committee on older adult ministries comprised of professionals and volunteers from its congregations. There should be adequate racial ethnic and cultural representation to assure awareness of cultural diversity and unique health concerns of older racial ethnic persons.

(b) That the General Assembly request that each presbytery nominate and support representatives to the Presbyterian Older Adult Ministries Network and the Association of Retired Ministers, Their Spouses or Survivors.

(c) That the General Assembly request all Presbyterian-related seminaries, colleges, and universities to nominate and support representatives (including faculty, seminarians, and students) to the Presbyterian Older Adult Ministries Network for purposes of raising awareness, connection, collaboration, and opportunities for service learning.

(d) That the General Assembly encourage all Presbyterian seminaries, colleges, and universities to integrate into appropriate courses issues of aging, death, and dying.

c. Evangelism and Witness

That the General Assembly Council, National Ministries Division, through the Office of Evangelism and Witness and in collaboration with the Office of Older Adult Ministries, develop congregational evangelism resources targeted at baby boomers (persons born 1946–1964) and Gen Xers (born 1965–1980) in the life of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

d. Justice and Compassion

(1) That the General Assembly, through the Office of Theology and Worship, encourage congregations to provide large-print Bibles, hymnals, and bulletins; accessible, safe facilities; and hearing devices.

(2) That the General Assembly encourage congregations to become involved in advocacy for older adults and their families through the Presbyterian Older Adult Ministries Network, their local, regional, state, and national agencies and governments.

(3) That the General Assembly encourage congregations to provide respite care and support for caregivers, advocacy for frail older persons (including the prevention of elder abuse), and ministries designed to include home bound members in the life and worship of the congregation.

(4) That the General Assembly Council, Congregational Ministries Division, through the Office of Older Adult Ministries and in collaboration with the Presbyterian Health, Education, and Welfare Association through the Presbyterian Health Network; National Health Ministries; and the Health Ministries Association:

(a) Use every opportunity to promote the formation or expansion of parish nursing and other health ministries at all levels of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

(b) Authorize the formation of an official denominational network of parish nurses to facilitate communication, ministry with long-distance caregivers, sharing of resources, and the promotion of healthy, holistic (body, mind, and spirit) aging and caregiving practices in congregations.

(c) Request, through the Office on Social Justice and the Washington Office, continuation of work to maintain and strengthen Social Security, Medicare, and Medicaid; to raise awareness about and identify solutions to the continuing disparities in illness, health care, and mortality that exist among racial ethnic persons.

(5) That the General Assembly Council, National Ministries Division, through the Racial Ethnic program area and in collaboration with the Office of Older Adult Ministries, produce resources, workshops, conferences, seminars, and health fairs that will focus on special aging concerns and health care disparities of racial ethnic persons.

(6) That the General Assembly Council, Congregational Ministries Division, establish a covenant partnership with the Presbyterian Association of Homes and Services for the Aging (PAHSA), through the Office of Older Adult Ministries, to produce and distribute resource materials concerning housing options, elder day care, senior centers, home health and housing services.

e. Staffing and Budget

[Recommend that an appropriate connecting point (or points) be clearly identified within the Mission Work Plan structure that will relate to the needs and issues of the older adult ministry networks, and that these connecting points be identified within the existing G.A.C. staff.]

~~[(1) That the General Assembly Council, Congregational Ministries Division, staffing rationale include: a full time associate for Older Adult Ministries (mission program), a full time program assistant (mission administration), and a part-time funds development contract employee (mission funding).]~~

~~[(2) That the General Assembly Council, Congregational Ministries Division, budget provide the necessary funding to support the Office of Older Adult Ministries (one third) in partnership with the Presbyterian Older Adult Ministries Network (one third) and the Association of Retired Ministers, Their Spouses or Survivors (one third)]~~

f. Reporting

That the General Assembly Council, Congregational Ministries Division, authorize funding of an Older Adult Ministries Review Team consisting of five persons to meet annually for ten years to review the progress of older adult ministries and report to the General Assembly Council, Congregational Ministries Division, the church's progress on these recommendations at the 218th, 219th, 220th, and 221st General Assemblies (2008, 2010, 2012, 2014) [as funding is available].

Rationale

This recommendation is a final response to the following referral:

2003 Referral: Item 06-05. Overture 03-22. On Reaffirming the Church's Commitment to Older Adult Ministry—From the Presbytery of Greater Atlanta (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 43, 400–401).

A. History

The following is the original overture from the Presbytery of Greater Atlanta, approved by the 215th General Assembly (2003), that led to the establishment of a Task Force on Older Adult Ministries for the purpose of reviewing older adult ministries, discerning current needs, and recommending a plan for the future. It is included in the task force report for easy reference.

Overture 03-22. On Reaffirming the Church's Commitment to Older Adult Ministry—From the Presbytery of Greater Atlanta.

The Presbytery of Greater Atlanta recommends that the 215th General Assembly (2003) reaffirm its commitment to older adult ministry by doing the following:

1. Assuring the continuation of the Office on Older Adult ministries with sufficient budget and staff to meet the growing needs of the rapidly increasing numbers of older adults in the church and in society.
2. Establish a Task Force on Older Adult Ministries to review the progress that has been made in older adult ministries in the PC(USA) during the past decade, to study the current and growing needs of older adults and to develop a plan and to move forward to endorse, enhance, and support the quality of life for the increasing number of aging members of our denomination. ...

The 204th General Assembly (1992) approved the Report of the Task Force on Older Adult Ministry, which identified seven priority issues in older adult ministry [Education and Leader Development, Special Focus on Racial Ethnic Persons, Attention to Health Care and Housing, Education and Action Concerning Abuse of Older Adults, Emphasis on Intergenerational Experiences, Attention to Spirituality, and Aging] for denominational emphasis for the next decade (Minutes, 1992 Part I, pp 139, 1011 ff [casebound version only]).

The year 2002 marked the end of the specified decade, in which numerous programs, workshops, keynote addresses, and conferences have focused on the seven priority issues.

A number of resources have been developed to raise awareness about older adult ministry, including videos (Aging Me...Aging You...The Journey of a Lifetime and Aging Me...Aging You...Exploring the Issues), a ten-book series (Older Adult Issues), and A Very Present Help: Psalm Studies for Older Adults.

The United Nations, seeing older adult issues as a worldwide concern, designated 1999 as the Year of Older Persons, with the theme being "Toward a Society for All Ages."

The World Council of Churches, emphasizing the issues of older adults globally, sponsored a major conference in Madrid, Spain, to develop action plans in older adult ministries for nations, states, agencies, and organizations.

The "Baby Boomer" generation will begin turning 65 in 2011, at which time 76 million persons will begin joining the ranks of "older adulthood."

There will be fewer people available to care for older persons when they need the attention and support of committed caregivers.

Membership in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is increasing in age, with 67 percent of all members being 45 years of age or older.

The Scriptures witness to utilizing the skills of older adults: “So even to old age and gray hairs, O God, do not forsake me, until I proclaim your might to all generations to come. Your power and your righteousness, O God, reach the high heavens” (Ps. 71:18–19), and “In old age they still produce fruit; they are always green and full of sap” (Ps. 92:14).

We believe the statements made in the Joint UPCUSA and PCUS Task Force Report on Ministry to and with Older Adults and approved by the 193rd General Assembly (1981) are still relevant: “We believe in the unique worth of every person, including older adults, because we believe life is an ongoing process of growth and change, because we believe that the love of Jesus Christ is the foundation and norm of our service, and because we believe that older adults are pioneers of a new era of self-reliance and interdependence.”

The next decade will usher in the largest generation of older adults as the baby boomer generation, born between 1946–1964, begins its sojourn into later life. This generation will start turning 65 in 2011, and the number of older people will increase dramatically during the 2010–2030 period. Long-established issues of aging will take on new dimensions and become increasingly complex as this generation enters into its later years. This generation will be healthier and more educated than previous groups of elders, bringing a great vibrancy to their later years. These older adults will also live longer with more chronic health conditions, posing new challenges to quality of life. Over the 20th century, the older population grew from 3 million to 35 million. The oldest-old population (those age 85 and over) grew from just over 100,000 in 1900 to 4.2 million in 2000. The older population in 2030 is projected to be twice as large as their counterparts in 2000 (making up 12 percent of the population), growing from 35 million to 71.5 million and representing nearly 20 percent of the total U.S. population (Federal Interagency Forum on Aging-Related Statistics. Older Americans 2004: Key Indicators of Well-Being, Federal Interagency Forum on Aging-Related Statistics, Washington, DC:U.S. Government Printing Office, 2004).

The implications of the age wave are local and global, affecting every generation, every family, every community, and every system providing resources. It is in the community of faith that every human life has value, dignity, and purpose. As the numbers of older adults grow, their needs and circumstances will influence the direction of the church’s evolving mission. Therefore, the church needs to prepare and inform its leaders, develop resources, advocate, and communicate issues of aging at every level of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

As an integral part of the Congregational Ministries Division of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), the Office of Older Adult Ministries has significant responsibilities in the areas of resource development for congregations, presbyteries, and other ministry partners. It also plays a vital role in the ongoing administrative support for the Congregational Ministries Division covenant partners, the Presbyterian Older Adult Ministries Network (POAMN), and the Association of Retired Ministers, Their Spouses or Survivors (ARMSS).

Tools for education and leadership development are evolving rapidly. In addition to annual conferences, it is important to use multimedia technology, develop and offer on-line courses, resources, teleconferences, and web-casts involving a wide spectrum of persons interested in ministries with the aging. Print resources need to be developed, updated, and produced that focus on spirituality and aging, wellness and caregiving, evangelism and community, and transitions of older adults.

Spiritual growth is foundational for all aspects of older adult ministry and is an area the church must be prepared to address. Age is accompanied by changes in roles, relationships, health, resources, and living circumstances. A strong spiritual base is central to the well-being of older adults as they encounter losses, navigate transitions, and plan for the future. A Brief Statement of Faith states that “In life and in death we belong to God.” It is therefore imperative that congregations become equipped to encourage and nurture spiritual growth in adults as they age.

As the growing Body of Christ, persons 45 years of age and older represent a veritable mission field for evangelism in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). An increase in the number of mature members has critical implications for ministry, mission, and stewardship within the church and abroad. Evangelism at its best reaches out to persons of all ages and stages of life and to diverse populations, bringing about a truly multicultural, multigenerational church, enriched by its very diversity.

Increasing numbers of older adults and their families are faced with decisions about and provisions for adequate health care, caregiving, safe and secure housing, and barriers to participation in the life of the church and community. Social issues become social barriers as people age, affecting quality of life, relationships, and the ability to engage and to serve. Ethical and end-of-life issues loom large in light of technological advances that enable the prolongation of life. A caring community of faith makes a significant difference in the lives of older persons and their families as they engage in faithful later life planning, encounter change and loss, and mature in wisdom and faith.

B. Summary

The General Assembly encourages congregations to reduce barriers to participation in congregational life and worship by embracing diversity and inclusiveness as outlined in the Book of Order, G-4.0403:

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) shall give full expression to the rich diversity within its membership and shall provide means which will assure a greater inclusiveness leading to wholeness in its emerging life. Persons of all racial ethnic groups, different ages, both sexes, various disabilities, diverse geographical areas, different theological positions consistent with the Reformed tradition, as well as different marital conditions ... shall be guaranteed full participation and access to representation in the decision making of the church.

Today we are witnesses to a transformation that is taking place all over the United States and indeed, all over the world. People are aging. Thanks to improved sanitation, nutrition, health practices, and education, Americans are living longer and better than any time in the history of humankind. The post World War II Baby Boom (numbering 76–77 million) is now spawning a new generation of older adults that will, as every generation has, bring its own challenges and opportunities, but on a much larger scale. Early life stages of this post-war generation created the demand for new specialties in pediatrics, baby food, education, and jobs. As they grow older their physical, spiritual, socio-emotional, and economic needs will balloon. The size and scope of this generation will inform and affect the aging experience for the generations that follow.

As our society grays, so do our congregations. Just as our communion table is not a Presbyterian table, aging is not uniquely a Presbyterian phenomenon. For all mainline denominations, aging congregations are the norm rather than the exception. In the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), for every nine members over the age of 65 there is only one member under 20 years of age. Fifty-seven percent of Presbyterians are over age 50, and 35 percent are 65 or older (The Presbyterian Panel, 2003–2005). The majority of Presbyterians are mature adults with a wealth of experience, wisdom, and love for the church and its mission to build the Body of Christ. It is neither realistic nor responsible to lump all mature adults into one large category with a discreet list of recommendations that will meet their needs and encourage their involvement in the church.

The process of aging is varied and complex, based more on functional than chronological age, influenced greatly by attitude and worldview, and made more unique by age grouping, history, circumstances, and experience. Dr. Henry Simmons, professor of Religion and Aging of Union Theological Seminary and Presbyterian School of Christian Education, suggests a model of later life that includes three stable periods, each followed by a transition (Simmons and Wilson, Soulful Aging, 2001, pp. 5–7). “Extended middle age” is marked by retirement and the maturing of children, and can last a very long time. “Ready or not” involves a loss (such as the death of a spouse, physical deterioration, or divorce) that requires a significant change of lifestyle and redefinition of self, considering the change in circumstances. “The new me” is a second period of stability in which a person adjusts to a new lifestyle with its new tasks and opportunities. “Like it or not” is a period of dependence marked by limitations and the need for help in carrying out activities of daily living. “The rest of living” is another stable period marked by dependence and frailty. “Dying” is the final transition, the culmination of life. Through these stages of aging we experience the journey of life and faith in contexts of family, church, and community.

In an era of increasing needs and diminishing resources at local, regional, and national levels of government, faith communities are being challenged to provide services, spiritual direction and nurture, care, and resources to a growing population of elders in our communities. As the people of God, we are called to action! The church has an unprecedented opportunity for evangelism and witness to un-churched but spiritually hungry adults that could result in substantial church growth and commitment for many years to come. As we live the biblical mandate of loving God with all that we are and our neighbors as ourselves, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) must be willing to boldly go forward in faith to - raise awareness of the many faces of aging,

- build and encourage connections among a variety of ministries that serve older adults and their families within and connected to the PC(USA),
- be open to making fundamental changes and functional transitions from existing to future ministries,
- develop sustainable ministries with, by, for, and to older adults.

The Task Force on Older Adult Ministries has been inspired by the Book of Acts, continuing to advance the message and mission of Jesus, as if creating a 29th chapter of Acts. The work of the Older Adult Ministries Task Force embraces the themes of Awareness, Connection, Transition, and Sustainability (ACTS), in an attempt to create and advocate models of positive aging for the future. It is important to recognize and identify assets and resources, make connections between them, and provide services and programs that are suitable and sustainable in the life of the congregation and in the context of community.

The 2006 Older Adult Ministries Task Force Report includes the following:

- Summary
- Recommendations to focus on spirituality, social issues, and education/leadership
- Progress report of older adult ministries in the PC(USA) over the past ten years
- Demographic profile of older Americans and older Presbyterians
- Survey highlights of the 2005 survey on older adult ministries conducted by Research Services of the PC(USA)

Members of the Older Adult Ministries Task Force included: Donna Coffman, Winchester, Virginia; Terry H. Cunningham (chair), Charleston, West Virginia; Joyce Horsley, Atlanta, Georgia; Patty Jenkins, Chicago, Illinois; Jan L. McGilliard, Blacksburg, Virginia; Vann Rogers, Dayton, Ohio; James F. Reese, Cherry Hill, New Jersey; Warren Rutledge, Salem, Oregon; Michele Shultz, Houston, Texas; Margaret C. Suttle, Fair Oaks, California; Hattie Wagner (vice chair), Louisville, Kentucky.

PC(USA) Staff Support: Greg Cohen, Louisville, Kentucky; Ginny Nyhuis, Louisville, Kentucky.

C. Older Adult Ministry Progress Report—1992–2005

Older Adult Ministry began as a grassroots movement and it continues to have characteristics of one as individuals and groups catch the vision and begin to search for resources and training. Much has been accomplished through intentional leadership development through the support of the Congregational Ministries Division of the General Assembly, Older Adult Ministries staff, executive committees of the Presbyterian Older Adult Ministries Network (POAMN), and the Association of Retired Ministers, Their Spouses or Survivors (ARMSS).

The Report of the Task Force on Older Adult Ministry, approved by the 204th General Assembly (1992) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) outlined seven priority issues on which to focus the ministry: Education and Leader Development, Special Focus on Racial Ethnic Persons, Attention to Health Care and Housing, Education and Action Concerning Abuse of Older Adults, Emphasis on Intergenerational Experiences, Attention to Spirituality and Aging, and Global and Ecumenical Concerns.
