“Education and Leadership Development” has occurred through conferences, workshops, seminars, and retreats at national, synod, presbytery, and congregational levels. Montreat Conference Center held two conferences each year, one for older adults and the other for persons involved in developing and sustaining older adult ministries, including laypersons, clergy, social workers, hospital and retirement community chaplains. Montreat now offers one joint conference for older adult participants and persons seeking training in older adult ministries.

The Presbyterian Older Adult Ministry Network (POAMN) sponsored annual conferences to provide education and leadership development for persons interested in advocacy and programming for, with, and by older adults. Approximately one half of conference participants each year were new to the network, indicating continued interest and growth. Conferences held in different regions of the country benefited the organization in a variety of ways: they involved local leadership, sponsorship, and promotion from congregations, presbyteries, and institutions. Many participants came from the geographic regions where the conferences were held, resulting in growth of and involvement in the network.

Synods have been particularly active in promoting older adult ministries by sponsoring conferences and retreats that offer leaders opportunities for education and leader development. Unfortunately, synod programs related to older adult ministries have been discontinued or greatly reduced due to funding reductions and following a trend toward non-programmatic status.

Presbyteries actively promoted education and leader development in older adult ministries through resource centers, leadership events, older adult ministry committees, task forces, work groups, and teams, often assisted by a presbytery staff person. Presbyteries also recruited Presbytery Representatives for Older Adult Ministries (PROAMs) who related to the Presbyterian Older Adult Ministries Network (begun in 1990) and the Association of Retired Ministers, Their Spouses or Survivors (begun in 1997), covenant partners engaged in ministry with the Congregational Ministries Division. The ongoing work of these partners in ministry is carried out through presbytery representatives.

“Focus on Special Issues of Racial Ethnic Persons” has taken place through the committed efforts of racial ethnic persons serving on older adult ministry committees, leading workshops, and keynoting at conferences throughout the country at all levels of the church. It is through racial ethnic representation that issues and awareness have been raised and resources made available. Local congregations and health fairs have been successful in raising awareness, advocating, and providing resources concerning special issues of racial ethnic persons. There continues to be a disparity in the incidence of illnesses and deaths in a wide range of racial ethnic groups.

“Health Care and Housing Issues”: The Board of Pensions and the Presbyterian Association of Homes and Services for the Aging (PAHSA) have focused on providing housing services for older adults. The PAHSA residential communities, health care facilities, and program services fulfill residents’ physical, intellectual, social, emotional, and spiritual needs so they will experience the fullest life their health will allow. The Board of Pensions offers both financial and housing assistance to active older adult personnel, retired church workers, and their spouses. Assistance programs offer affordable housing or financial aid to help retirees exercise choice in their living arrangements.

The Office of Older Adult Ministries, the Presbyterian Older Adult Ministries Network, and the Association for Retired Ministers, Their Spouses or Survivors have advocated tirelessly for positive aging through proactive planning and preventive health practices. Health Ministries (USA) joined forces with the Presbyterian Older Adult Ministries Network on the 2005 annual conference. Congregations have been encouraged to survey their older members about their needs (skills, and interests) using a survey tool published in the Older Adult Ministry: A Guide for the Session and Congregation. Examples of projects resulting from survey efforts include:

- Use of church properties, seed funding provided by churches, presbyteries, and synods to provide housing for older adults
- Creative models that address in-home health needs resulting in greater independence
- Creative models for retrofitting houses to meet the needs of persons with limitations
- Parish nursing, health ministries, health promotion, screenings, and exercise to promote wellness and proactive health behaviors
- Models for transportation, visitation, respite care, adult day care, and support groups
- Connecting older persons with community resources

“Abuse of Older Persons”: The Office of Older Adult Ministries and its networks have used excellent community, regional, and national resources on elder abuse and neglect, applying them to congregational care and nurture, education, peace, and justice. These topics are personal, perceived to be “private,” and are difficult to approach. Articles have occasionally appeared in AGEnda, the newsletter of the Office of Older Adult Ministries. The Older Adult Week Planning Guide (2003) recommended elder abuse and neglect as an issue of concern.

“Intergenerational Activity”: In 1999 the United Nations designated the International Year of Older Persons under the theme, Toward a Society for All Ages. Many denominations, including the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), adopted this theme, featuring conferences and printed resources (Building an Intergenerational Church, by the Reverend Ed Loper) promoting intergenerational opportunities and models within congregations and presbyteries. Many workshops across the country have focused on the importance of intergenerational relationships. Creative models have been shared through AGEnda and Presbyterians Today.

“Spirituality and Aging”: National resources developed around this theme include A Spirituality for Later Life (one in the ten-book series), and a segment of Video II, Aging Me, Aging You...Exploring the Issues. Workshops, retreats, sermons, and programs on this topic have been presented throughout the country at all levels of the church with excellent response. Spirituality has provided a foundation for all aspects of older adult ministry. Practical resources such as large-print bulletins, Bibles, and hymnbooks and attention to issues of accessibility have allowed older adults and others with physical limitations to participate more fully in congregational life and worship. As the deepest dimension of all of life, spirituality has been and will be integral to the many facets of the aging experience: hopes and fears, new roles and responsibilities, losses, changing relationships and living circumstances, concerns of physical, emotional, and fiscal health and well-being.

“Global and Ecumenical Concerns of Older Persons”: Global and ecumenical issues of aging have consistently been addressed at the national level of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) through the Office of Older Adult Ministries’ participation in the National Interfaith Coalition on Aging (NICA), the National Council on the Aging (NCOA), Global Action on Aging, and the United Nations. Because of this participation, global and ecumenical concerns of older persons were addressed and awareness raised through conferences of the Presbyterian Older Adult Ministries Network, the quarterly newsletter AGEnda, workshops, and presentations throughout the country. The United Nations’ International Year of Older Persons theme: Toward a Society for All Ages provided an excellent focus and resources to highlight issues of aging around the world. Participation in these organizations has broadened the scope of older adult ministries in general, and provided a venue for identifying leadership for conferences and opportunities for collaboration.

Presbyterian Older Adult Ministries Network (POAMN): This church-wide, largely volunteer network includes many committed laypersons who bring a wide variety of skills and background to older adult ministries. Some of these include educators, social workers, parish nurses and other health professionals, counselors, and caregivers. Many pastors and middle governing body professionals have found valuable support for their work through their association with the Presbyterian Older Adult Ministries Network. Members represent older adult ministries based in congregations, middle governing bodies, retirement communities, senior centers, ecumenical, and faith-based organizations. The POAMN facilitates networking among older adult ministry colleagues through national and regional training events and conferences, educational workshops and forums for the sharing of ideas and experiences.

The network partners with presbyteries to recruit representatives who promote the advancement of older adult ministries with Presbyterian congregations. The POAMN leadership continues to seek more effective ways to share program success stories, to address multicultural issues, and to develop accreditation specific to the administration of older adult ministries. Following five years of planning and research, the organization has launched a certification program in older adult ministries, first with a pilot group in the fall of 2005, and then offered through three courses introduced at the 2006 and 2007 POAMN conferences.

Association of Retired Ministers, Their Spouses or Survivors (ARMSS): Established in 1997 resulting from the full-time effort of a volunteer in mission serving in the Office of Older Adult Ministries, the Association of Retired Ministers, Their Spouses or Survivors nurtures and advocates for its retired members in recognition and celebration of their contributions to the church. The ARMSS assists its members in finding meaningful service and connection to the church during retirement and supports presbyteries in their ministry for and with retired clergy, their spouses or survivors. The ARMSS also publishes a quarterly newsletter that is mailed to more than 9,000 retirees. The ARMSS has recruited presbytery representatives (105) and promoted membership across the denomination. Annual conferences have featured excellent themes and leadership, and have offered opportunities for connection and fellowship. Many presbyteries have organized fellowship events for this target group.

E. Spirituality and Discipleship

According to a 1997 survey on older adult ministries conducted by Research Services of the PC(USA), survey participants indicated the need for curriculum and resources designed specifically for older adults that speak to the life issues of persons in the second half of life. Such resources would greatly benefit leaders desiring to engage elders in study and dialogue in ways that are relevant to their lives. It is often in this context that older adults experience the support and love they need to act in faithful, responsible ways with regard to their own aging process.

The renewing of current older adult ministry resources, the ongoing development of the older adult ministries web site, and the development of multimedia educational opportunities will expand the horizons of this ministry to meet the needs of an increasingly diverse audience. The development of products and services will offer tangible benefits to members of the Presbyterian Older Adult Ministries Network (POAMN) and the Association of Retired Ministers, Their Spouses or Survivors (ARMSS). Conversely, POAMN and ARMSS will benefit from increased visibility and interest in membership, and product sales may contribute to greater self-sufficiency.

The fostering of a mutually supporting relationship among the Office of Older Adult Ministries, the Presbyterian Older Adult Ministries Network (POAMN), the Association of Retired Ministers, Their Spouses or Survivors (ARMSS), and potential partners will maximize the talent and resources of each organization. Joint conferences will facilitate networking and sharing of resources. Joint conference planning will reduce expenditures and increase understanding of each organization's goals and objectives. The POAMN and ARMSS representatives working together in presbyteries will strengthen the ties between the organizations and improve efforts being made in the presbyteries they serve.

Giving opportunities to support the work of the Office of Older Adult Ministries and its covenant partners need to be targeted toward the older adult population we seek to serve. As vested persons of our ministries, the development of an annual fund along with the provision of information and the securing of financial gifts through estate plans, wills, bequests, gift annuities and other giving instruments should be encouraged and promoted. In cooperation with the Presbyterian Foundation and the Board of Pensions, the Office of Older Adult Ministries needs to include stewardship education and financial planning information in its resource materials and study guides designed and tailored to meet the needs and desires of older adults.

F. Leadership and Vocation

To be prepared for ministry today is to have a working knowledge and understanding of aging issues from a variety of perspectives: the aging process, normal vs. abnormal aging, spiritual gifts and needs, life transitions (the search for meaning and meaningful work), loss, end-of-life decision-making, death and dying. The median age of a Presbyterian is 55 years. More than one-third of members are 65+ years of age, and over half are over age 50. Educational opportunities and practical experiences are essential for the preparation of ministers of Word and Sacrament, church officers, commissioned lay pastors, and church educators. Equipping the laity for leadership in older adult ministries is an important investment in the care and nurture of congregations and presbyteries.

Seminaries, colleges, and universities that offer and promote courses and continuing education in gerontology will be making an investment in their students to serve effectively in church and community. First, however, they must become aware of the need to offer gerontological education and opportunities for practical experience. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) must be prepared to provide needed resources and appropriate connections to educational institutions, middle governing bodies, and congregations seeking assistance. Intentional collaboration of ministry divisions within the denomination is essential to ensure the best stewardship of resources and relationships. Useful connections made with Presbyterian, ecumenical, and national partners will strengthen and enhance older adult ministries for all who share the vision of a just society for all ages. These connections must be made with care and intention, attention to right relationships, and clarity of purpose.

Transitions are a normal part of human existence and are to be expected in the life of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). Therefore, it is of utmost importance that older adult ministries maintain a sustaining presence in times of change. A strong national presence in the denomination through the Office of Older Adult Ministries and its covenant partners Presbyterian Older Adult Ministries Network (POAMN) and Association of Retired Ministers, Their Spouses, or Survivors (ARMSS) will ensure the necessary continuity and stability of program and practice.

G. Evangelism and Witness

Persons 45 years of age and older represent significant potential for growth in church membership. Informal estimates project that mainline denominations could grow at a rate of 5 percent per year for the next forty years by focusing evangelism efforts on persons in this age range. An increase in the number of mature members has considerable implications for ministry, mission, and stewardship within the local church and abroad. Evangelism at its best reaches out to persons of all ages and stages of life and to diverse populations, bringing about a truly multicultural, multigenerational church enriched by its very diversity.

Multigenerational aspects of church ministries and programming are not new. Church programs have taken into account age-related differences and needs, structured on the premise of relative cultural homogeneity, regardless of the age range. While earlier generations transferred their cultural experiences and core values to younger generations with relative continuity and low conflict, a notable change has taken place with the Baby Boom generation and beyond: “Each generation has undergone unique life experiences and developed its own cultural characteristics, translating into low cultural continuity and high intergenerational conflict” (Benke and Benke 2002, The Generation Driven Church, The Pilgrim Press, 3). The authors outline the challenges and opportunities before the church today considering the number of un-churched adult Americans estimated at 120 million, two-thirds of which are Baby Boomers (born 1946–1964) and Gen Xers (born 1965–1980).

Given the changing paradigms of church and society, increased attention to generational theories as applied to the church will benefit the efforts of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) “to follow Jesus’ call to love God and our neighbors, and to make disciples within our neighborhoods and throughout the world” (from the mission statement of Evangelism and Witness, PC(USA)).

H. Justice & Compassion

A look at the demographic profiles of older Presbyterians and older Americans will increase our understanding of how the church might respond in faithful, caring, and empowering ways to encourage the full participation of older adults in the life of the church. Note that while 13 percent of the U.S. population is over age 65, 33 percent of Presbyterians fall into this age range.

The Administration on Aging provides a unified picture of the health and well-being of our older adult population in its recent publication entitled Older Americans 2004: Key Indicators of Well-Being. From this report come these basic demographics on persons age 65 and above:

- In 2003, nearly 36 million people age 65 and over lived in the U.S., accounting for just over 12 percent of the total population. Over the 20th century, the older population grew from 3 million to 35 million. The oldest-old population (those age 85 and over) grew from just over 100,000 in 1900 to 4.2 million in 2000.
- The Baby Boomers (born between 1946 and 1964) will start turning 65 in 2011, and the number of older people will increase dramatically during the 2010–2030 period. The older population in 2030 is projected to be twice as large as their counterparts in 2000, growing from 35 million to 71.5 million and representing nearly 20 percent of the total U.S. population.
- The growth rate of the older population is projected to slow after 2030, when the last Baby Boomers enter the ranks of the older population. From 2030 onward, the proportion age 65 and over is projected to continue to grow. The oldest-old population is projected to grow rapidly after 2030, when the Baby Boomers move into this age group.
- The U.S. Census Bureau projects that the population age 85 and over could grow from 4.2 million in 2000 to nearly 21 million by 2050. Some researchers predict that death rates at older ages will decline more rapidly than is reflected in the U.S. Census Bureau's projections, which could lead to faster growth of this population.

National and global trends in aging related to health care, caregiving, ethnic diversity, employment, poverty, and housing have significant implications for individuals, households, family systems, social agencies, and institutions. Older Americans 2004: Key Indicators of Well-Being (Federal Interagency Forum on Aging-Related Statistics, Washington, DC:U.S. Government Printing Office, November 2004) provides a unified picture of the health and well being of our older population and is the collaboration of a forum representing a dozen federal agencies. This report identifies thirty-seven indicators representing five areas of well-being among older Americans: population, economics, health status, health risks and behaviors, and health care. It is this kind of collaboration that the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) needs to mirror in its efforts to advocate for quality of life for older adults and their families.

As health and caregiving concerns increase dramatically in the later years, church professionals and volunteers are often stretched thin as they endeavor to meet the needs of members experiencing challenges. New paradigms warrant new methods for being the church, for carrying out the great commandment to love and care for one another. Parish nursing, health ministries, persons certified or otherwise trained in older adult ministries, life coaches, retirement living, and housing experts are needed to: raise awareness about the issues, provide connections to resources, provide advocacy and companionship through later life transitions, and to create a foundation for quality of life through sustainable initiatives and programs.

Racial ethnic persons must be represented on older adult ministries committees at all levels of the church to ensure the consideration of circumstances unique to racial and ethnic populations. The sharing of distinctive cultural experiences enrich and inform the work of any group. For example, ageism is not as prevalent in the African American church experience as in Caucasian churches among laypersons or clergy (Saucer and Elster 2005, our help in ages past: the black church's ministry among the elderly, 12). However, there are significant disparities among racial ethnic persons and persons of color related to health care, illness, and mortality that must be considered if committees on aging are to effectively advocate for and serve the ever increasing elderly population (National Healthcare Disparities Report, <http://www.qualitytools.ahrq.gov>).

I. Highlights from Older Adult Ministries Survey-Research Services, August, 2005

In the spring of 2005, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Research Services office surveyed PC(USA) congregations; presbyteries and synods; and Presbyterian-related seminaries, colleges, and universities about their involvement and interest in older adult ministries. Representatives of two-thirds or more of most of these constituencies responded.

1. More PC(USA) congregations reported their older adults have been involved in worship leadership (88 percent), community action (76 percent), and evangelism (57 percent) than in mentoring (42 percent).

2. More than half of congregations offer facilities and resources helpful to many older adults such as handicapped-accessible entrances and exits (87 percent), adequate lighting (84 percent), handicapped-accessible property and plant facilities (69 percent), handicapped-accessible restroom facilities (67 percent), and a sound system for hearing-impaired people (59 percent).

3. Less than half of congregations offer large-print hymnals (49 percent), large-print church bulletins (43 percent), large-print Bibles (40 percent), handicapped-accessible choir areas (21 percent), or handicapped-accessible.

4. Two in five congregations (41 percent) are involved in ministries designed specifically for older adults, but only one in eight (12 percent) employ staff whose major responsibility is working with older adults.

5. Both congregations with and without existing ministries designed specifically for older adults felt older adult ministries were important. Representatives of almost all congregations with those ministries (98 percent) and of four in five congregations without such ministries (82 percent) indicated that older adult ministries were very important, important, or somewhat important to their congregations.

6. While representatives of two-thirds of congregations with existing programs for older adult ministries (66 percent) said their congregations were very likely, likely, or somewhat likely to expand those ministries, only two in five congregations without existing ministries (39 percent), on the other hand, said their congregations were likely to start them.

7. During the past year more than half of congregations have sponsored intergenerational projects that involved children and adults of different ages (53 percent) and/or spiritual development opportunities for homebound older adults and/or older adults in nursing centers (52 percent).

8. Approximately a third of congregations have sponsored efforts to help members learn about (34 percent) and/or to develop for themselves or their relatives (29 percent) living wills, durable power of attorney, health care surrogate, or other end of life legal procedures.

9. Only 9 percent of congregations have celebrated Older Adult Week in May, and only 3 percent have trained church members to recognize and respond to elder abuse.

10. Less than half of congregations offer respite care to primary caregivers of older adults (26 percent) and/or have referred older adults to local agencies for services during the past year (45 percent).

11. A quarter or more of congregations have worked with local retirement facilities, nursing centers, and their residents to foster residents' spiritual development (40 percent) and/or have worked with other congregations to develop and publicize ministries for older adults in areas such as health care, housing, transportation, and food assistance (23 percent).

12. Only 4 percent of congregations have worked with local retirement facilities and nursing centers to identify and prevent elder abuse, worked with others in the community to identify and prevent elder abuse, and/or participated in a local shepherd's center program (an interfaith volunteer ministry for older adults).

13. During the 2004–2005 academic year more than half of Presbyterian-related seminaries offered courses on the theology of death and dying (56 percent) and/or courses that included elder abuse-related issues (60 percent).

14. Half or more of the seminaries had emeritus/a and/or other retired professors teach courses (100 percent), give special lectures (80 percent), preach (70 percent), and/or supervise or mentor students (50 percent).

15. Half or more of the seminaries had other older adults supervise or mentor students (70 percent), serve as consultants (60 percent), and/or serve on committees (50 percent).

16. Half of the seminaries (50 percent) had representatives active in the Presbyterian Older Adult Ministries Network, and one in five (20 percent) offered reduced fees to older adults for regular courses.

17. During the 2004–2005 academic year two in five Presbyterian-related colleges and universities (40 percent) offered courses on end of life issues.

18. Two-thirds or more of colleges and universities had emeritus/a and/or other retired professors (86 percent) and/or other older adults (63 percent) teach courses.

19. Half of schools offered reduced fees to older adults for enrollment in educational programs (51 percent), and two-thirds (67 percent) operated service-learning programs that involve older adults.

20. Three-quarters of seminary representatives (70 percent)—but only a quarter of congregational representatives (26 percent) and only one in six college and university representatives (16 percent)—reported being very familiar, familiar, or somewhat familiar with the PC(USA) Older Adult Ministries office’s programs and services.

Item 12-13

Report from the National Ministries Division, Racial Ethnic Education Support Work Group

[The assembly approved Item 12-13, Recommendation 1. See pp. 14–15.]

1. The General Assembly Council, National Ministries Division, Racial Ethnic Support Work Group, recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) reaffirm the church’s mission of racial ethnic educational support and its commitment to the Historically Presbyterian Racial Ethnic Institutions (HPREI): Barber-Scotia College, Cook College and Theological School, Johnson C. Smith University, Knoxville College, Sheldon Jackson College, Stillman College, Menaul School, and Presbyterian Pan American School.

Rationale for Recommendation 1.

A promise made is a promise kept. Each of the predecessor denominations that came to form the current Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) founded racial ethnic institutions and provided mission support for racial ethnic education. This mission has a noble and longstanding legacy within the church and an impressive history. Traditionally, Presbyterians have demonstrated the love of God and compassion of Christ by providing educational opportunities to those for whom it is frequently an obstacle.

There is a long history of a portion of the Christmas Joy Offering being used for the support of racial ethnic institutions. Funding for these institutions has never been adequate and the church’s support has been crucial for their health and well-being. The situation is the same today.

The Racial Ethnic Educational Support Work Group wants to be clear that it is not simply history that compels our participation in the mission today. There is a legitimate twenty-first century need for this mission as seen in the often disproportionate challenge racial ethnic students face as a consequence of their background or language barriers, as evident in the sobering reality of economic disparities within society, disparities that particularly plague racial ethnic youth, as characterized in the unique character and contribution of historically Presbyterian racial ethnic institutions and their ongoing commitment to make a difference.

[The assembly approved Item 12-13, Recommendation 2 with amendment. See pp. 14–15.]

2. The General Assembly Council, National Ministries Division, Racial Ethnic Support Work Group, recommends to the 217th General Assembly (2006) that a special group (including a representative of Mission Support Services (MSS)) be formed to develop educational guidelines and standards and a method for applying them in order to ensure that the Christmas Joy Offering supports institutions that can most effectively serve populations for whom access to educational opportunities would otherwise be difficult if not impossible to attain. [These educational guidelines, standards, and the method for applying them should be completed, enacted and reported to the 218th General Assembly (2008).]

Rationale for Recommendation 2.

Accountability is credibility. The work group learned about the tremendous challenges small private educational institutions face in making a quality education available to those who can least afford it. Indeed, it is a complicated task to focus on quality while maintaining financial stability. But the requirements of this highly technical, competitive world necessitate that schools and colleges consistently provide a quality educational product. Those who invest in such institutions deserve to have confidence that their money is well spent and one of the best ways of doing that is through the establishment of guidelines and standards.

The work group recommends that the National Ministries Division convene a small group of persons with relevant expertise to develop measurements and standards that will help ensure a quality education for those attending Christmas Joy Offering supported schools and colleges—for instance, that faculties are strong, that facilities are adequate, that curriculum and instruction are competent, and that there is reasonably long-range stability. The work group studied the United Methodist model that employs such standards and thought a similar approach would work well for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

[The assembly approved Item 12-13, Recommendations 3–4. See pp. 14–15.]

3. The General Assembly Council, National Ministries Division, Racial Ethnic Support Work Group, recommends to the 217th General Assembly (2006) that until such guidelines and standards are established the Christmas Joy Offering continue to be used exclusively for the historically Presbyterian racial ethnic institutions with whom the GAC has traditionally covenanted.

Rationale for Recommendation 3.

Stay the course until a new course is clear. The work group recommends continued support of the historically Presbyterian racial ethnic institutions (HPREI) and would like to be certain that support continues even as guidelines and standards are developed.

A referral from the 216th General Assembly (2004) asked the General Assembly Council, National Ministries Division, to consider the possibility and appropriateness of Bloomfield College receiving Christmas Joy Offering funding given its status as a Presbyterian-related college with a racial ethnic plurality. In its consideration of this issue, the work group visited separately with the president and other representatives of Bloomfield College, and with the presidents of the HPREIs, to talk with them and hear their ideas and perspectives. In these discussions, the work group learned to appreciate the subtlety of the difference between being a racial ethnic college, i.e., a college whose mission and identity specifically involves educating racial ethnic students, and being a college that welcomes and serves racial ethnic students.

The work group learned that Christmas Joy Offering funding is extremely valuable to the HPREIs because it is timely, reliable, and unencumbered. Bloomfield College is an excellent institution and is to be commended for its openness to and active embrace of diversity, but the church already supports racial ethnic education in general through scholarships and other financial aid to students (for which Bloomfield College students are eligible), but Christmas Joy Offering money is the only remaining support in the mission budget specifically directed to racial ethnic institutions.

4. The General Assembly Council, National Ministries Division, Racial Ethnic Support Work Group, recommends to the 217th General Assembly (2006) that the General Assembly Council (GAC) consider establishing a special fund and case statement to help meet the unique needs of the HPREIs.

Rationale for Recommendation 4.

Long-term viability requires long-term support. While Christmas Joy Offering funds may be valuable components of the HPREIs' annual budgets, they are not ample enough to supply the kind of resources required to help restart institutions that find themselves needing reorganization.

The work group feels it would be advantageous for the General Assembly Council to study the feasibility of establishing a special fund and case statement highlighting the importance and value of HPREIs so that additional resources could be made available to historically Presbyterian racial ethnic institutions that would benefit from a fresh start. From time to time these institutions have promising and viable plans for improving themselves but lack the resources needed to implement such a vision. Creating a special fund would make it possible for the church to provide the kind of assistance that would allow for a fresh start.

Background Rationale

These recommendations are in response to the following referral: 2004 Referral: 07-06/07. b. Direct NMD to Reevaluate Its limitation of Christmas Joy Offering Moneys to Specific Racial Ethnic Schools and Colleges (Minutes, 2004, Part I, pp. 42–43, 661–63).

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has a long and proud history of supporting education for those who have not always enjoyed access to public classrooms or to the economic and social benefits education can provide. This commitment is rooted in the basic Protestant doctrine of the priesthood of all believers. The church's commitment to higher education in particular is the oldest continuous form of mission beyond the congregation. It is our response to Jesus' commandment to "love the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul and with all your mind" (Matt. 22:37). It stems from our Reformed understanding of vocation as a lifelong response to God in all aspects of life.

Education has been a fundamental element in the struggle for equality. One of only two historically black colleges in the United States before the American Civil War—the Ashmun Institute, which became Lincoln University, in Oxford, Pennsylvania—was started in 1854 by the Reverend John Miller Dickey, pastor of the Oxford Presbyterian Church. Others followed after the war, among them: Biddle Memorial Institute, which became Johnson C. Smith University in North Carolina; Scotia Seminary, which merged with Barber Memorial College to become Barber-Scotia College in North Carolina; Knoxville College in Tennessee; Stillman College in Alabama; and Mary Holmes College in Mississippi. Four of these schools still exist. All were started as a mission enterprise at a time when only about five percent of African Americans could read or write. Most started by offering preparatory, secondary, and normal school training. As student learning levels increased, college courses were added.

In like manner, the church established mission schools for students of other ethnic backgrounds including Hispanic, Native American, and Alaska Native. They included Menaul School in New Mexico, Sheldon Jackson College in Alaska, Cook College and Theological School in Arizona, and Presbyterian Pan American School in Texas. Besides providing access to education, these schools educated in ways that reflected the culture of the population being served. At reunion in 1983, the PC(USA) acknowledged that racial ethnic educational institutions "have been the primary source from which racial ethnic church leadership has developed."

Authors Juan Williams and Dwayne Ashley began their recent history of historically black colleges and universities with these words: "Since before the days of slavery, education has been the North Star of black aspiration."

Education, more than anything else, has been key to the fight for black freedom in America. People who could read and write automatically became leaders among those who had been denied schooling as a tool of racial oppression. Education led to the establishment of institutions ranging from black churches to black businesses, political and civic groups, and, of course, black colleges. One good example was missionary educator Mary McLeod Bethune. Nurtured as a student at the Presbyterian Missionary School in Mayesville, Florida, and later at the Scotia Seminary in Concord, North Carolina, she founded the all-girls Daytona Educational and Industrial Training School for Negro Girls in 1904. The school in Daytona Beach, Florida, became Bethune-Cookman College, a coeducational institution of more than 2,500 students, which, today, is affiliated with the United Methodist Church. Bethune was appointed to leadership posts by four U.S. presidents and, in 1935, founded the National Council of Negro Women.

For African Americans, the impact of historically black colleges and universities remains disproportionately significant more than forty years after legal segregation was abolished. Such institutions make up only 4 percent of all U.S. colleges and universities, but graduate 28 percent of all students who earn undergraduate degrees. They include 46 percent of black business executives, 50 percent of black engineers, 80 percent of black federal judges, 85 percent of black doctors, and 75 percent of African Americans with Ph.D.s.

Much the same can be said for other ethnic groups that have struggled to gain access to education. As with African Americans, churches took the lead in providing opportunities, often by establishing institutions for that purpose. Two things above all else characterized these institutions: they were created with the central purpose of educating racial and ethnic populations and, in doing so, they provided the extra nurture many students needed to succeed.

1. Presbyterian Racial Ethnic Schools Today

Among the seventy-four schools, colleges, and universities approved as church-related by the 216th General Assembly (2004), six colleges and two secondary schools serve racial ethnic students primarily. They include:

Barber-Scotia College in Concord, North Carolina, founded in 1867 as Scotia Seminary for Negro Women by the Reverend Luke Dorland. It merged in 1930 with Barber Memorial College of Anniston, Alabama. The name Barber-Scotia College was adopted in 1932. Current enrollment: 0.

Cook College and Theological School in Tempe, Arizona, founded in 1911 by Presbyterian missionary Charles Cook to educate and enable Native Americans to be Christian leaders. Current enrollment: 20.

Johnson C. Smith University in Charlotte, North Carolina, founded in 1867 as Biddle Memorial Institute by the Reverend S. C. Alexander and the Reverend W. L. Miller. The name was changed to Johnson C. Smith University in 1932 to honor the husband of one of its benefactors. Current enrollment: 1,350.

Sheldon Jackson College in Sitka, Alaska, founded in 1878 by the Reverend Sheldon Jackson as a training center for Tlingit Indians. It is the oldest educational institution in Alaska. Current enrollment: 110.

Knoxville College in Knoxville, Tennessee, founded in 1875 by missionaries of the United Presbyterian Church of North America. Current enrollment: 200.

Stillman College in Tuscaloosa, Alabama, founded in 1876 by the Reverend Charles Allen Stillman as a training school for black ministers. Current enrollment: 1,500.

Menaul School in Albuquerque, New Mexico, founded in 1881 as the Pueblo Training School by the Reverend Sheldon Jackson. The U.S. government assumed operation of the Indian school in 1891. In 1896, the Reverend James A. Menaul received Presbyterian mission funding for a boarding school to serve Spanish-speaking boys from New Mexico. Current enrollment: 200.

Presbyterian Pan American School in Kingsville, Texas, founded in 1956 through merger of the Texas-Mexican Industrial Institute, founded in 1912, and the Presbyterian School for Mexican Girls, founded in 1924. Current enrollment: 160.

Besides having individual covenant agreements with church governing bodies, most of these schools, as members of the Presidents Roundtable, share in a partnership covenant with the General Assembly, which was last renewed in 2004. All relate to the General Assembly Council (GAC) through a covenant with the Association of Presbyterian Colleges and Universities of which all are members. All of the institutions continue to espouse a mission that reflects their Christian heritage. All have long, proud histories and impressive alumni lists that include Mary McLeod Bethune (see above); Mable Phiefer, founder of the Black College Network; Dr. Thelma D. Adair, former PC(USA) Moderator; the Reverend Dr. William H. Sheppard, Presbyterian missionary to Congo; the Honorable Richard C. Erwin, U.S. district judge; Mildred Mitchell Bateman, West Virginia's first African American department head; Lester Coffey, president of Coffey Communications; and Dr. Trudier Harris-Lopez, professor and authority on African literature, to name but a few.

Recent years have brought mixed fortune to these historic schools. Some, such as Stillman College and Johnson C. Smith University, have managed to stay financially stable and academically strong. Presbyterian Pan American School continues to attract a mix of Anglo, Hispanic and, increasingly, Asian students to its college preparatory program. The other institutions have struggled to remain financially solvent with one—Mary Holmes College—having to declare bankruptcy and subsequently close its doors. Of these institutions, Barber-Scotia College, Knoxville College, Cook College and Theological School, Sheldon Jackson College, and Menaul School have all seen one or more changes in presidential leadership. Currently all but Cook have interim presidents. Barber-Scotia and Knoxville have lost accreditation, which makes them ineligible for federal funds including student loans. In almost every case, losing financial aid causes enrollment to plummet, which only confounds the school's financial situation.

Since 1974, the PC(USA) has supported minority education through a special churchwide appeal, currently known as the Christmas Joy Offering (CJO). This offering supports all but one of the denomination's racial ethnic institutions. When the current offering was established in 1988, the proceeds were divided between racial ethnic schools and colleges and the Board of Pensions. The schools and colleges received 35 percent under a formula devised at reunion. The 203rd General Assembly (1991) revised the formula so that proceeds would be divided equally between the schools and Board of Pensions. The CJO raised $5.4 million in 2004. Disbursements to racial ethnic institutions totaled $2,588,206 after expenses through a combination of base grants (45 percent), incentive allocations (47 percent) and money reserved for contingencies and program administration (8 percent).

The GAC administers several endowments for racial ethnic schools and colleges. In addition, the GAC has approved loans totaling more than $1.6 million for Menaul, Sheldon Jackson, Knoxville, and Mary Holmes. All, with the exception of Mary Holmes, are in the process of repaying the loans but have struggled to do so at times. The church has helped Barber-Scotia College to pay its property and casualty insurance premiums as it did for Mary Holmes. The GAC staff members have provided hands-on assistance with budgeting and accounting at Barber-Scotia, Mary Holmes, Sheldon Jackson, and Menaul. The GAC also provides ongoing assistance to racial ethnic schools and colleges, including promotion, through the National Ministries Division.

2. Racial Ethnic Educational Support Work Group

It is against this backdrop that the GAC established the Racial Ethnic Educational Support Work Group in September 2004. Given the church's limited ability to provide financial support to its racial ethnic institutions, the GAC felt it was important to consider whether the current allocation formula for the Christmas Joy Offering provided recipients with sufficient funding to help them remain viable, or whether the formula should be changed. In addition, the 216th General Assembly (2004) referred to the GAC a request that part of the Christmas Joy Offering be allocated to Bloomfield College based on that school's significant racial ethnic enrollment and high percentage of students requiring financial aid.

Given the evidence of recent years, the work group faced many questions in determining whether continued support for racial ethnic institutions remained a prudent investment. Can the racial ethnic schools and colleges successfully meet the demands of this historic church mission academically, morally, and religiously with facilities and technology suitable for the 21st century? Is there a way of assessing when support for these institutions should be withdrawn or when funds should be redistributed? Is the current support program asking the right questions and supporting the right objectives? Is the current program effective, or is its scope too extensive for the church in these times? What, if anything, should the church be doing to support racial ethnic students at non-racial ethnic colleges and universities?

The work group was given two objectives:

- to review the value of giving exclusive support to historically related racial ethnic schools and colleges without providing support for other related institutions with significant racial ethnic enrollment, and
- to evaluate the value of providing less for the greater number of institutions verses more for a lesser number of institutions in the allocation of funds from the Christmas Joy Offering.

After reviewing these objectives and the questions underlying them, the work group adopted as its purpose statement:

to recommend ... how funds and other resources committed to support racial ethnic education can most effectively be used to serve populations for whom access to educational opportunities and potential achievements otherwise would be difficult if not impossible.

The work group set out to do this with the following mission priorities:

- to promote opportunities for racial ethnic students to grow in the fullness of Christ by enhancing preparation and providing assistance;
- to promote the stability and viability of Presbyterian-related racial ethnic institutions through funding support;
- to encourage vital partnerships and connections with congregations, presbyteries, and synods in sustaining racial ethnic educational support;
- to maintain an appropriate context for the responsible use of racial ethnic educational resources; and
- to advocate for and interpret the unique challenge and contributions of the church's racial ethnic educational mission.

The work group determined that it should focus on enabling support for institutions, rather than individuals. The group believed that shifting support from institutional grants to scholarships, for example, would be harder to administer and would not ensure assistance for students who were most at risk. In addition to ongoing support through the Christmas Joy Offering, the work group identified two other types of financial assistance the church could provide for its racial ethnic institutions. The first was "recovery funds" that an institution could draw upon in emergencies, including natural disasters. The second was money for new and innovative programs to help students succeed.

The work group met five times between January and December 2005, twice in Louisville, once in Atlanta, once in Tuscaloosa, Alabama, on the campus of Stillman College, and once in Newark, New Jersey, near Bloomfield College. Time was set aside at two meetings to hear from the presidents of the racial ethnic schools and colleges and from the president of Bloomfield College.

What follows is a summary of what the work group heard and conclusions reached:

- Despite a widespread skepticism, there remains a need for institutions whose primary focus is educating racial ethnic students. Smaller percentages of these students attend college compared to white students. Many come with special needs including the need for remedial help. Without such help many students would find it hard to succeed, even if they could gain admittance to other institutions. Racial ethnic schools provide a supportive setting and a broad array of programs for these students including developmental centers, reading laboratories, and expanded tutorial and counseling services. In addition, as with women who attend all-women's colleges, racial ethnic students have greater opportunity to engage in school activities and to develop leadership skills at racial ethnic schools. Private racial ethnic colleges are the most successful at graduating racial ethnic students and getting them into graduate school. As one person told the work group: "These institutions take the marginalized to the mainstream."

- Often the conditions that cause racial ethnic students to struggle academically are social or economic. Intervention is needed long before a student enters college or, in some cases, even high school. The church needs to help find ways of addressing these conditions to help ensure students' success. At the very least the church should help find ways to identify students with special needs so they can receive help in a timely way.

- For many years the church discouraged racial ethnic schools and colleges from building endowments. An important historical document from the former PCUSA General Assembly Mission Council, Strategy for Minority Education (1975), states: "Endowment funds for those institutions formerly related to the Board of National Missions of the United Presbyterian Church are virtually nil since the Board always told those institutions that the church was their living endowment." This approach distinguished minority institutions from other church-related institutions and, as a result, when church action made them independent some thirty or forty years ago, they had few actual reserves and faced a real challenge in developing themselves amid the populations they served. For the leaders of these institutions, the need to devote so much attention to current financial conditions has left little time to focus on the schools' academic mission.

- At times racial ethnic schools and colleges have struggled to find and retain leaders with administrative skills and a detailed knowledge of higher education. The church could play a greater role in identifying qualified people to serve on boards of trustees and could assist in equipping them for the challenges they face. A particular need has been for persons with knowledge of finance and accounting procedures. Another has been for all institutions consistently to have an annual financial audit, which could serve as an early warning of potential problems.

- The Christmas Joy Offering is, at best, a supplemental source of funding, inadequate by itself to help struggling institutions address all of their financial challenges. Nevertheless, the church could do more to promote the offering, in which only about half of all congregations participate.

- The church should consider a peer review system for evaluating racial ethnic schools and colleges similar to that of the United Methodist Church. Such a system would require establishing criteria and guidelines for assessment. One concern would be that the guidelines not be so rigid as to leave no room for the church to respond in emergency situations. The work group was cautioned that, unlike the federal government, whose policy is to cut off financial aid when a school loses accreditation, the church should not immediately withdraw its support at such a critical time. For a fragile institution, continuing to provide assistance can mean the difference between the institution regaining its accreditation or continuing in a downward spiral. Loss of government funding has the effect of further marginalizing people who already struggle with marginalization. Because these schools are a mission of the church, it is even more important that the church step in when the government pulls out.

3. Bloomfield College

Bloomfield College in Bloomfield, New Jersey, was founded in 1868 as a Presbyterian seminary, the German Theological School of Newark, to prepare German immigrants for the ministry. In its almost 140-year history, the college has changed in response to the changing needs of the community around it. In doing so the school has continued the tradition of its founders to provide educational opportunities for students whose circumstances and needs threaten to exclude them from higher education.

The only Presbyterian college in the Synod of the Northeast, Bloomfield is a comprehensive liberal arts institution serving more than 2,000 students, nearly 75 percent of whom are racial ethnic. Many of these students face challenges similar to those of students at racial ethnic schools including the need, in many cases, to work full-time and care for their families while pursuing a degree. Bloomfield has a recently renewed covenant with the Synod of the Northeast and a Westminster Foundation Advisory Board composed of elders, clergy, and at-large members of presbyteries in New Jersey, New York, and Long Island, and of synod representatives. The board oversees the work of the Presbyterian minister who serves as the college's full-time chaplain.

All Presbyterian colleges enroll racial ethnic students. Among the non-racial ethnic institutions, however, none has as high a percentage as Bloomfield. Of the rest, thirty had a minority enrollment of less than 10 percent in 2003, twenty-one had an enrollment of between 10 percent and 20 percent, and six had an enrollment of between 20 percent and 35 percent. Though Bloomfield does not identify itself as a racial ethnic institution, its unusually large minority enrollment was a significant factor in its request to be included in the Christmas Joy Offering.

After considerable discussion, the work group decided to recommend no immediate change in distribution of the Christmas Joy Offering. The work group found there to be a subtle but, nonetheless, significant difference between being a racial ethnic college, i.e., a college whose mission and identity specifically involves educating racial ethnic students, and being a college that welcomes such students in addition to others. As a Presbyterian college, Bloomfield is eligible to receive certain forms of scholarship assistance from the denomination.

4. Conclusion

Support for Presbyterian-related racial ethnic institutions has been a mission imperative for the denomination for more than 100 years. It is a mission that is important to both the church and society, a mission grounded in biblical and Reformed theology with strong moral justification, reflecting a belief that the church is called to do what an unjust society refuses to do. Over time this mission has evolved from one in which, at least in the former Northern church, the denomination exercised central control to one that is focused on self-determination and respect for institutional autonomy.

Adequately funding the mission has been a challenge from the beginning. A legitimate contemporary impetus for the mission remains. Conditions not unlike those that led to the church's original support of racial ethnic education are as compelling today as in the past. Unfortunately no compelling statement of need has existed in recent years. As a result the mission lives mostly on the momentum of the past.

We believe the recommendations in this report can be important steps in reclaiming this mission for the 21st century.

On Affirming the Church's Commitment to Church Revitalization and Evangelism—From the Presbytery of Philadelphia.

The Presbytery of Philadelphia overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to affirm its commitment to urban church revitalization and evangelism and other urban mission projects by instructing the Moderator of the 217th General Assembly (2006) [as money is available] to appoint a task force to update the Urban Strategy to the Year 2005 report and its recommendations, providing a report to the 218th General Assembly (2008) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) with a more current comprehensive urban strategy which would [include the following:] [readdress]:

a. Declaring the problems of the urban church an urgent priority, and to consider the social and economic problems of the urban church communities in order to implement new strategies for addressing said problems (in consultation with the Evangelism and Witness program area and the Justice and Compassion program area).

b. Calling for positive, long-term action in response to the spiritual, economic, and social justice issues facing our cities:

(1) Urging every presbytery and every congregation to work with renewed energy in addressing the crisis in our cities.

(2) Urging presbyteries to

(a) designate 80 percent of net proceeds, after all loans, mortgages, and other obligations have been paid, from the sale of urban Presbyterian church buildings, properties, and endowments (of churches that have been dissolved) to be used by the presbytery for urban church redevelopment, urban leadership training, new urban church development, evangelism, and urban mission outreach in that city;

(b) designate the remaining 20 percent to a national urban ministry and endowment fund to be managed by the Presbyterian Foundation, for the purpose of supporting new urban initiatives and of issuing program grants for conferences and workshops on urban ministry.

c. Establishing an “Urban Economic Development Fund” and urging every Presbyterian in the United States to give at least one day’s pay to support the fund, believing that if a majority of Presbyterians respond in this way, we will raise millions of dollars for both short-term needs and long-term development in the cities throughout our country.

d. Urging every Presbyterian to commit the equivalent of one day’s work for the rebuilding of community where we live, believing that a change in our relationship with those in pain around us begins with an initial step in their direction.

e. Calling for a national year-long celebration in 2008 of the Presbyterian church in the city, coordinated by the Evangelism and Witness program area, including a national conference on the crisis in the cities as a follow-up to regional consultations, bringing together representatives of the church, business, and government, along with significant numbers of those who live and work in those urban centers.

f. Calling for a report to the ~~[219th]~~ [218th] General Assembly ~~[(2010)]~~ [(2008)] of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) on each of the above actions with recommendations for further implementation.

Rationale

The city is the site of tremendous power and affluence in proximity to tremendous poverty, powerlessness, and pain. While some cities are experiencing rapid demographic changes and a new spirit of health and vitality, many urban congregations are existing in crisis mode. Our church is losing not only individual members, but congregations as well. The continuation of this situation could soon leave little or no effective Presbyterian presence in many cities throughout our country.

We are instructed by the Gospels to provide a ministry of presence and reconciliation to men, women, and children, and to peoples of all economic, educational, and social stations, and to people of diverse and alternative lifestyles. We must come to see ourselves in partnership with Jesus of Nazareth in ministry and mission in the city and in the world; and to continue to support ministries of city church as a body, as a part of our ministry to the whole world.

As Paul reminds us, if one of our city churches suffers in membership decline and struggles to minister to a changing neighborhood, then the whole presbytery suffers, and the denomination suffers as well.

Presbyterians are a people with a vision for the future and an awareness of the past. It is therefore important that we choose to remain in our cities, regardless of racism, cultural, and economic differences, and to be active participants in the reconstruction of urban life, in accordance with our faith, our baptism, and our experience of Jesus Christ.

This overture is based upon: Overture 92-59. On Supporting, Studying and Celebrating Urban Ministry—From the Presbytery of Detroit; and Report of Racial Ethnic Ministry Unit and the Social Justice and Peacemaking Unit, submitted to the 204th General Assembly (1992) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

ACREC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 12-16

Advice and Counsel on Item 12-16—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns.

Item 12-16 deals with affirming the church's commitment to church revitalization and Evangelism. It was submitted by the Presbytery of Philadelphia.

[The assembly approved Item 12-17 as amended. See pp. 14–15.]

The General Assembly Council, National Ministries Division, and the present working group appointed by Leadership and Vocation, Presbyteries' Cooperative Committee on Examinations, and the Committee on Theological Education, asks the 217th General Assembly (2006) to research the obstacles to inclusiveness and develop strategies to overcome them[, as funds are available.] [~~Additional funding is needed~~] in order to

- Research the causes of the problems that racial ethnic candidates encounter.
- Talk with the affected persons.
- Consider major changes to polity and ordination processes.

Rationale

This recommendation is in response to the following: 2004 Referral: Item 10-03. Report of the Task Force to Study Reparations, Recommendation 5. To Request the Office of Churchwide Personnel Services, the Presbyteries' Cooperative Committee on Examinations for Candidates, and the Committee on Theological Education to Investigate Whether There Is Cultural Bias in the Process of Ordination to the Ministry of the Word and Sacrament, and to Report the Results to the 217th General Assembly (2006) Including Recommendations for Measures to Correct any Problems That May Be Found—From the General Assembly Council Task Force to Study Reparations (Minutes, 2004, Part I, pp. 57, 704).

The undersigned representatives of the groups named in the request met September 12–14, 2005, in Louisville, Kentucky.

We reviewed previous research about ordination exams and the preparation for ministry process and noted the marked differences in the scores and experiences of Caucasian and racial ethnic candidates.

We reviewed the PC(USA) ordination process, including the work of local congregations, presbytery committees on preparation for ministry, theological schools, and standard ordination exams. We also discussed the process of receiving a first call.

We concluded that the topics identified in the request must be set in a larger frame that includes a vision of future ministerial leadership, goals for its preparation, and sensitivity to the cultural assumptions that must underlie the process of ordination in the future.

We acknowledged that the PC(USA) is rooted in white western culture. In the future, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) will operate in a multicultural society, and if it is to grow in size and faithfulness as “a provisional demonstration of what God intends for all humanity” (Book of Order, G-3.0200), it must become inclusive and multicultural too.¹ Therefore, wherever cultural bias is engrained the church's practices, it must be removed.

This working group did not, however, have the resources to identify the obstacles to inclusiveness so that strategies can be devised to overcome them. The discrepant rates of exam failure between racial ethnic and other groups are deeply troubling. The working group agreed that the possible reasons for the difference—cultural bias in the construction or method of the test, grading bias, educational preparation, etc.—require further study. Similar problems in other aspects of the preparation and screening process were identified as well.

With additional resources for research and work group meetings, comprehensive strategy recommendations can be brought to the 218th General Assembly (2008).

Some steps should and can, we believe, be taken immediately in all areas of the process. We have carried recommendations about these matters to the bodies we represent. Examples of some of the activities we identified are: providing guidance to CPMs, increasing racial ethnic representation on PCC and among exam readers, providing more mentoring for racial ethnic seminarians, and providing guidance to COMs and PNCs about support in the first call.

Endnote

1. The 208th General Assembly (1996) made a pledge to increase racial ethnic membership by 2005 to 10 percent and by 2010 to 20 percent. A commitment to inclusiveness is also recorded in the Book of Order, in G-3.0401:

a. to a new openness to the presence of God in the Church and in the world, to more fundamental obedience, and to a more joyous celebration in worship and work;

b. to a new openness to its own membership, by affirming itself as a community of diversity, becoming in fact as well as in faith a community of women and men of all ages, races, and conditions, and by providing for inclusiveness as a visible sign of the new humanity;

c. to a new openness to the possibilities and perils of its institutional forms in order to ensure the faithfulness and usefulness of these forms to God's activity in the world;

d. to a new openness to God's continuing reformation of the Church ecumenical, that it might be a more effective instrument of mission in the world.

OGA COMMENT ON ITEM 12-17

Comment on Item 12-17 (NMD-Request for Additional Funding to Research Obstacles to Inclusiveness, Develop Strategies to Overcome Obstacles in the Process to Ordination)—From the Office of the General Assembly.

The Office of the General Assembly agrees with the conclusion of the task force that “the discrepant rates of exam failure between racial ethnic and other groups are deeply troubling.” Additional study would be beneficial to understand and address the causes. The OGA is not alone in its concern because Leadership and Vocation Office (formerly known as Churchwide Personnel Services) and the Committee on Theological Education are also involved. The three offices are taking steps to implement measures identified by the task force. Unfortunately there are no provisions in current budgets to fund the research. If the report is accepted in principle with a provisions that adds “when resources are available” to the recommendation, potential sources of funding can be investigated that might enable the research to be done.

[The assembly disapproved Item 12-18 with comment. See pp. 14–15.]

Comment: In making this decision regarding Item 12-18, we recognize that many in the Presbytery of North Central Iowa deem Bienvenidode Jesus Rivera-Acosta to be reformed in theology, a skilled and effective pastor, and willing to embrace the polity of the PC(USA). We are pleased that the Presbytery of North Central Iowa has commissioned Rivera-Acosta as a lay pastor and is showing flexibility and all due diligence in the preparation for the ministry process. We pray that these efforts will result in further growth in your important immigrant ministry. A member of our committee is from Puerto Rico and has called to our attention that the Evangelical Seminary of Puerto Rico, which is recognized by the PC(USA) as an official seminary, could provide excellent training and resources for such situations for preparing immigrant candidates for ministry.

On Adding New Section G-11.0404g Regarding New Immigrant Ministers—From the Presbytery of North Central Iowa.

The Presbytery of North Central Iowa overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Shall G-11.0404 be amended by adding a new section G-11.0404g:

“In the case of immigrant ministries, presbyteries shall have broad latitude to recognize the ordination of ministers coming from developing countries with different practices of ordination and to recognize the ‘good standing’ of such ministers when it is attested to by members of their own communion or by members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). The presbytery may, by three-fourths vote of those present, enroll such a minister as a member of the presbytery.

Rationale

In its Racial Ethnic/Immigrant Evangelism Church Growth Report, approved by the 210th General Assembly (1998), the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) affirmed its commitment to the building of new immigrant ministries. It recognized that one of the challenges facing such ministries is identifying, training, and credentialing the leadership of these emerging groups. Specifically, it recognized that “presbyteries will have to take innovative approaches to recognize the ordination of clergy from other traditions, train commissioned lay pastors, and use the office of evangelist for these emerging fellowships.”

In 1999, the General Assembly approved a new paragraph G-11.0404b (now G-11.0404f) to allow presbytery reception of a new immigrant minister who lacks the educational history required in G-14.0310b–d.

In 2004, the General Assembly added a new section G-9.0503a(2)(a) to allow presbyteries the right to grant an immigrant fellowship voice and vote in the meetings of presbytery. It also added G-9.0503a(2)(b) to allow presbyteries the right to ordain as elders “the chosen lay leadership of the immigrant fellowship” when they are equivalent to elders and session. Presbyteries are instructed to write their own criteria for making such determinations.

The Presbytery of North Central Iowa supports the General Assembly’s strategy for developing immigrant fellowships/congregations. The state of Iowa presents a rich field for the development of such mission congregations because of the influx of immigrants into both urban and rural areas of the state to find work.

Two congregations of the Presbytery of North Central Iowa and the Synod of Lakes and Prairies have been partners in outreach and Bible fellowship development to the Hispanic community in Fort Dodge and Clarion, Iowa, for more than two years.

The presbytery gratefully acknowledges the General Assembly’s commitment to innovation. However, this presbytery’s recent experience in dealing with faith communions in developing countries demonstrates that barriers to the effective use of immigrant leaders continue to exist, including different education requirements, inability to send and receive transcripts, differing practices of ordination, communication between faith communions, and the inability or unwillingness of faith communions in developing countries to cooperate with PC(USA) governing bodies in meeting the requirements of the Book of Order.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 12-18

Advice on Item 12-18—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 217th General Assembly (2006) to disapprove Item 12-18.

Rationale

The overture proposes to give presbyteries “broad latitude” to recognize the ordination of ministers coming from developing countries and serving in new immigrant fellowships. However, the limits of this latitude are unclear, and the resulting possibilities are problematic. The overture would permit any person, regardless of standing or office, who is a member of the minister’s communion to attest to the “good standing” of the minister, even though this person may know little or nothing about the minister’s record of service.

In addition, G-11.0404f assumes that the minister comes from a denomination in correspondence with the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). The term “in correspondence” is defined in G-15.0201b

- b. The General Assembly is in correspondence with the highest governing body:
 - (1) of those churches with which it has had historical relations outside the United States,
 - (2) of those churches that are members of the ecumenical bodies in which the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) holds membership; and
 - (3) of those churches with which the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has formal ecumenical dialogue approved by the General Assembly.

There is, however, nothing in the language of the proposed G-11.0404g to indicate whether the same expectation applies to ministers covered by this provision.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution understands G-11.0404f as already creating wide latitude to presbyteries with regard to identifying leadership in immigrant communities. The proposed overture would add little to this latitude. It would, however, create the possibility that ministers from developing countries from churches not in correspondence with the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and whose credentials are not adequately ascertained might find their way into Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) congregations. Such circumstances may well be injurious to the peace, unity, and purity of the church.

Advice and Counsel on Item 12-18—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC)

Item 12-18 will amend the Book of Order to add a new section G-11.0404g giving presbyteries broad latitude to recognize the ordination of ministers coming from developing nations. This overture was sent by the Presbytery of North Central Iowa.

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) advises Item 12-18 be disapproved.

Rationale

The existing standards for the reception of ministers into the PC(USA) from other church denominations are sufficient to handle the issues this item is intending to address. Item 12-18 would remove at least one safeguard for maintaining the PC(USA)’s academic and theological standards for ministry. Many reformed churches across the world do not hold the same standards for ministry the PC(USA) embraces. The ACREC believes Item 12-18 would reduce one of the PC(USA)’s safeguards to maintaining its present standards for ministry.

The ACREC believes that a better way of accomplishing the intent of this item would be to urge presbyteries (especially through their committees on ministry and committees on preparation for ministry) and seminaries to work to assist new immigrant ministers to complete their educational requirements and to meet any other additional standards of the PC(USA) for ordination to the ministry of Word and Sacrament.

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 12-18

Advice and Counsel on Item 12-18—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC).

Item 12-18 calls for adding a new section G-11.0404g regarding new immigrant ministers and ordination standards.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC) advises Item 12-18 be disapproved.

Rationale

One of the ACWC’s two main responsibilities is monitoring and evaluating policies, procedures, programs, and resources regarding the way in which they impact the status and position of women in the church and around the world. The ACWC is concerned with language in the new suggested section, “presbyteries shall have ‘broad latitude’ to recognize the ordination of ministers coming from developing countries with different practices of ordination . . .” There are immigrant ministers who do not support the ordination of women. The ACWC opposes the enrollment of any clergy who oppose the ordination of women.

General Assembly Council Annual Report Regarding the Progress and Implementation of the Strategy Contained in “Renewing the Commitment”

This report is in reference to the following referral: 2001 Referral: 22.096. Response to Recommendation That the 213th General Assembly (2001) Request the General Assembly Council to Report Annually Regarding the Progress and Implementation of the Strategy Contained in “Renewing the Commitment”---From the General Assembly Council (Minutes, 2001, Part I, pp. 19, 197).

The 213th General Assembly (2001) approved “Renewing the Commitment: A Churchwide Mission Strategy for Higher Education Ministry by the PC(USA), and requested an annual report to the General Assembly regarding the implementation of the strategy. [See 2001 Referral: 22.096. Response to Recommendation That the 213th General Assembly (2001) Request the General Assembly Council to Report Annually Regarding the Progress and Implementation of the Strategy Contained in “Renewing the Commitment”---From the General Assembly Council (Minutes, 2001, Part I, pp. 19, 197).]

Establishment of Campus Ministry Internship Program by 2003–04 Academic Year: The pilot project established one internship. The second year heavily promoted the program in selected synods. Limited success was primarily due to limited local funding sources. Likely candidates for positions were concerned about their own financial security due to need to begin servicing student loans that would not be offset by internship stipends or delayed through this service to the church. Encouragement by the Collegiate Ministries office including referrals to successful internship models will continue.

Funds Development Process: The funds development process began as a Higher Education Ministry/Students’ Ministries Office based project, but was then shifted to be a Higher Education program area effort. The Collegiate Ministries Office is supporting the efforts of the newly formed Presbyterian Associate for Collegiate and Higher Education Ministries (PACHEM) to develop sample resources to promote “Higher Education Sunday” observances on a presbytery-by-presbytery basis with contributed income shared in the manner of the denomination’s Pentecost Offering formula.

Electronic Based Process of PC(USA) Constituents to Connect with Higher Education Ministries: Data gathering among seven denominations is complete and the directory went on line during the fall of 2003. Concurrent with this process a “Higher Education Ministry Catalog” was published and made available through the denomination’s web site, www.pcusa.org/collegiate/resources

The Collegiate Ministries Office in partnership with the Presbyterian Association for Collegiate and Higher Education Ministries (PACHEM) has published the “PC(USA) Collegiate Ministry Locator” and distributed it to every congregation in the denomination. The “Locator” is also available and constantly updated on the denomination’s website at www.pcusa.org/collegiate/locator

The Collegiate Ministries Office, again in partnership with (PACHEM), has established the “Bridge Project” in which the names and email addresses of graduating high school students are collected and then forwarded to the collegiate ministries (congregations included) serving the schools in which these students have enrolled. The prototype operation of the Bridge Project in the summer of 2005 forwarded nearly 400 students names. Expansion of this project includes cooperative efforts with Youth and Young Adult offices to gain access to attendees at Triennium and the Presbyterian Youth Connection events as well as at other youth conferences supported by the denomination and its middle governing bodies.

Leadership Development of Collegiate Ministry Staff and Students: The Collegiate Ministries Office was instrumental in establishing the Presbyterian Association for Collegiate and Higher Education Ministries (PACHEM). With this organization Collegiate Ministries has a partner in developing national and regional leadership development events, identifying and encouraging new collegiate ministry staff, building a supportive network among middle governing body persons with higher education ministry responsibilities and promoting the growth of this mission within local churches as appropriate to their context and resources.

The Collegiate Ministries Office has taken the lead among six other denominations in the planning and implementation of the “CM101 New Collegiate Ministry Staff Training” event to be held immediately following the conclusion of this General Assembly. The event will be held on the campus of Lewis and Clark College, which has had a long relationship with the PC(USA).

The “Renewing the Commitment” strategy has given guidance to the Collegiate Ministries Office as it relates to the efforts of the Fund for Theological Education, the Presbyterian Leadership Search Effort, the Advocates for Ministry group and the various offices in the Leadership and Vocation Goal Area of the General Assembly Council.

Continuation and Expansion of the Presbyterian Student Strategy Team: The Strategy Team has taken on the planning of annual student leadership conferences encouraging the establishment and liaison with “affinity groups” including racial ethnic students and partnerships with the National Network of Presbyterian College Women. The team has identified and set up a communications network with the Korean-American Student Empowerment organization and among Hispanic students related to the PC(USA). The strategy team has set before itself a five-year plan to establish regional, representative groups of Presbyterian college students who can be engaged in the church’s mission and future leadership.

[The assembly approved Item 13-01 with amendment. See p. 11.]

On the Authority of Holy Scripture—From the Presbytery of Mississippi.

The Presbytery of Mississippi overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the PC(USA) to approve the following:

[1. ~~In the belief that the Holy Scripture is the Word of God and God’s guide to us for worship and life, the 217th General Assembly (2006) does confirm that the authority of Holy Scripture is “... most necessary; those former ways of God’s revealing his will unto his people being now ceased.”¹~~

[2. ~~The 217th General Assembly (2006) also confirms that “The authority of the Holy Scripture, for which it ought to be believed and obeyed, dependeth not upon the testimony of any man or church, but wholly upon God (who is truth itself), the author thereof; and therefore it is to be received, because it is the Word of God.”²~~

[3. ~~The 217th General Assembly (2006) also confirms the belief that “Insofar as Christ’s will for the Church is set forth in Scripture, it is to be obeyed. In the worship and service of God and the government of the church, matters are to be ordered according to the Word by reason and sound judgment, under the guidance of the Holy Spirit.”³~~

[4.] The 217th General Assembly (2006) does urge all members of the church to search the Holy Scripture to [determine] [seek] God’s revealed Word regarding any and all issues that may touch the church; and, to be diligent in [determining] [seeking] God’s will and living in accordance with that will.

Rationale

Proper conclusions regarding issues that result in serious concern and debate within the church can be best settled by searching, studying, and prayerfully ascertaining God’s will as disclosed in His revealed Word. To adapt, mold, or conform the church in accordance with contemporary mores and patterns of sinful life will separate us from God, from God’s will.⁴

The system of doctrine revealed in the Holy Scripture does reveal God’s will.

Comment on Item 13-01—From the Office of the General Assembly.

This overture calls upon the General Assembly to confirm three statements about the place of Scripture in our lives and decision-making, and to urge the church to search the Scriptures for information about issues that touch the church.

The Office of the General Assembly advises that this overture not be approved.

This overture intends to draw our attention to the value we place on the Word of God as revealed in the Bible. The three statements relating to the authority of Scripture are taken from our Constitution, two coming from The Book of Confessions and one from the Book of Order. While it is important to be reminded of the power of God’s Word to us as we struggle with difficult decisions in our lives individually and in our corporate life together, simply reaffirming our foundational beliefs adds no new power to the place of these statements or even these documents in our everyday lives.

As Presbyterians, our creeds and confessions speak to us in detail about our interaction with Scripture. This overture would simply confirm parts of that understanding; it would add no new insights.

GAC (CMD) COMMENT ON ITEM 13-01

Comment on Item 13-01—From the General Assembly Council (Congregational Ministries Division).

Item 13-01 asks the General Assembly to confirm the PC(USA)'s belief in the authority of Scripture by explicit affirmation of two quotations from the Westminster Confession of Faith.

The Book of Order states clearly the role of the confessions in the life of the PC(USA): “The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) states its faith and bears witness to God's grace in Jesus Christ in the creeds and confessions in The Book of Confessions. In these confessional statements the church declares to its members and to the world who and what it is, what it believes, what it resolves to do” (G-2.0100a).

The Book of Confessions contains several declarations concerning the authority of Scripture, specifically in The Scots Confession (3.19), The Second Helvetic Confession (5.001–.009), The Westminster Confession of Faith (6.001), The Theological Declaration of Barmen (8.10–.12), The Confession of 1967 (9.27–9.30), and A Brief Statement of Faith (10.4).

Item 13-02

On Referring “The Trinity: God’s Love Overflowing” Back to the Office of Theology and Worship for Further Consultation—From the Presbytery of Shenandoah.

[The assembly answered Item 13-02 by the action taken on Item 13-05. See pp. 11–12.]

The Presbytery of Shenandoah overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to refer the paper “The Trinity: God’s Love Overflowing” back to the Office of Theology and Worship and the Trinity Work Group for further consultation with local churches, and that the revised paper be presented to the 218th General Assembly (2008).

Rationale

We are concerned about the timing of the report, that it not conflict with discussion of the report of the Theological Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church. For the Trinity report to get a fair hearing, it is better that it come before a later assembly.

Members of the presbytery have expressed concern about the language of the document, especially its ramifications for the church’s theology and practice.

So, too, we encourage all Presbyterians to read the document and to consider it carefully. Further, we recommend that the assembly establish a process for review by and input from local churches across the denomination.

GAC (CMD) COMMENT ON ITEM 13-02

Comment on Item 13-02—From the General Assembly Council (Congregational Ministries Division).

The General Assembly Council advises that Item 13-02 be disapproved.

Rationale

In these past two years the paper has undergone significant revision and has been interpreted widely throughout the church. In addition to consultations in at least ten presbyteries and five of the PC(USA) seminaries—this is in addition to multi-presbytery consultations that have been held in the beginning stages of the process. Reading and comment has been invited through an article in Presbyterians Today (circulation 56,000), two separate articles in Ideas Magazine (distribution 20,000), and presence on the Theology and Worship section of the PC(USA) website. In addition the Office of Theology and Worship has received comments from numerous individuals, from advocacy committees within the PC(USA), and from various interest groups in the church (Covenant Network, Presbyterians for Renewal, the Presbyterian Layman, etc.).

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 13-02

Advice and Counsel on Item 13-02—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC).

Item 13-02 requests that “The Trinity: God’s Love Overflowing” be referred back to the Office of Theology and Worship for further consultation.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC) advises Item 13-02 be disapproved.

Rationale

The ACWC has monitored the work of the task force that developed “The Trinity: God’s Love Overflowing,” as part of its responsibility, which called for the task force to study the doctrine of the Trinity in Presbyterian theology and worship, “with particular attention to the need to recover the terms and images that refer to the being of the persons of the Trinity ...” The Introduction, found on page one of “The Trinity: God’s Love Overflowing” (lines 5–12) explain the timetable used by the task force. It is important to note, “The 216th General Assembly (2004) affirmed [the task force’s] request to seek a response from the larger church in preparing a final draft.”

Additional time was given by the General Assembly, and “many faithful Presbyterians [were] eager to enter into deep theological reflection and discussions with [the task force].” The task force for “The Trinity: God’s Love Overflowing” has diligently completed its work, which began in 2001.

The ACWC commends the work of the Trinity task force and advises “The Trinity: God’s Love Overflowing” be approved. Comments regarding the paper and amendments to the recommendations appear on a separate advice and counsel paper. (See Item 13-05.)

[The assembly approved Item 13-03. See pp. 11–12.]

The General Assembly Council, upon recommendation from its Congregational Ministries Division, recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) authorize the Office of Theology and Worship to undertake a study of “salvation and sin,” and report the results of its study to the 218th General Assembly (2008).

Rationale

Recent Christological discussion throughout the church has focused on the issue of “who is saved.” While the General Assembly’s approval of the theological statement, “Hope in the Lord Jesus Christ,” has provided helpful guidance on this matter, there is a need to address the meaning of salvation so that the church’s proclamation of the gospel can be strengthened. Among the ways Scripture and our confessions speak about salvation, being saved from sin is prominent, and so a study of salvation must include consideration of the nature of sin and its effects.

Budget constraints make it impossible to follow the once-standard procedure of appointing a task force to meet multiple times over several years. The Office of Theology and Worship intends to employ a new model for theological studies that will utilize theological faculty, pastors, elders, and staff in a range of ways that will expand the number of Presbyterians engaged in the issue without the unsustainable cost of meeting expenses.

[The assembly approved Item 13-04 with amendment and with comment. See pp. 11–12.]

The General Assembly Council, upon recommendation of its Congregational Ministries Division, recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) do the following:

1. Call all congregations to renewal, through Word and Sacrament, of our life together in Jesus Christ, by engaging in practices that deepen baptismal life and discipleship. Specifically, invite congregations, for the next two years, to

- a. set the font in full view of the congregation;
- b. open the font and fill it with water on every Lord's Day;
- c. set cup and plate on the Lord's table on every Lord's Day;
- d. lead appropriate parts of weekly worship from the font and from the table;

Rationale

These recommendations are in response to the following referrals:

1998 Referral: Overture 98-33. On Amending W-2.4006 and W-2.4011a to Establish Open Communion—From the Presbytery of the Twin Cities Area (Minutes, 1998, Part I, pp. 86–87, 671–72).

2002 Referral: Item 10-01. Recommendation that the General Assembly Council Office of Theology and Worship Conduct a Comprehensive Study of Sacramental Theology and Practice with Special Attention to the Ways in Which the Catechumenate Relates Baptism and the Lord's Supper and Report to the 217th General Assembly (2006)—From the General Assembly Council (Minutes, 2002, Part I, pp.21, 503).

2004 Referral: Item 08-06. On Amending W-2.4006 and W-2.4011 Concerning Who May Participate—From the Presbytery of Central Washington (Minutes, 2004, Part I, pp. 17, 612–15).

In 1998, Overture 98-33 was sent to the 210th General Assembly (1998) by the Presbytery of the Twin Cities, requesting that the assembly amend the Directory for Worship in the Book of Order regarding the invitation to the Lord's Supper. The overture asked that W-2.4006 be amended as follows:

"to replace the third sentence, 'All the baptized faithful are to be welcomed to the Table, and none shall be excluded because of race, sex, age, economic status, social class, handicapping condition, difference of culture or language, or any barrier created by human injustice,' with, 'All persons of faith are to be welcomed to the Table, baptized or not, child or adult, in order to be assured of God's love and grace in Christ Jesus.'"

It asked that W-2.4011(a) be amended:

“to replace the first sentence, ‘The invitation to the Lord’s Supper is extended to all who have been baptized, remembering that access to the Table is not a right conferred upon the worthy, but a privilege given to the undeserving who come in faith, repentance, and love,’ with, ‘The invitation to the Lord’s Supper shall be extended to all persons of faith present, remembering that access to the Table is not a right conferred upon the worthy, but a grace extended to all.’”

And it asked that in W-2.4011(b), the initial word “baptized” be deleted, so it would read,

“Children who are being nurtured and instructed in the significance of the invitation to the Table and the meaning of their response are invited to receive the Lord’s Supper...”

The 210th General Assembly (1998) referred this overture to the Office of Theology and Worship. The Office of Theology and Worship, observing that “the underlying issue which needs to be addressed is the relationship between baptism and the Lord’s Supper,” recommended that the 214th General Assembly (2002) authorize, “a full and substantive study of the sacraments both within the Reformed tradition and in the ecumenical context, in order to help the church discern the history and theology of baptism and the Lord’s Supper, as well as their appropriate relationship.” This assembly, meeting in 2002, authorized the appointment of a study group, and asked for a report back at the 217th General Assembly (now, 2006).

In 2003, a study group was formed, consisting of the following members: David B. Batchelder, Heidi Worthen Gamble, Scott Haldeman, Stan Hall, Martha Moore-Keish, Thom Nelson, Neal D. Presa, Craig A. Satterlee (Evangelical Lutheran Church in America), David L. Stubbs, Tom Trinidad, Jane Rogers Vann, and Marney A. Wasserman (convener). Alan Barthel joined us, representing the Presbyterian Association of Musicians. Staff assistance from the Office of Theology and Worship was provided by Paul Galbreath and Chip Andrus.

The study group sought to understand the biblical, historical, theological, and confessional foundations of the Sacraments, as well as the context of contemporary North American culture in which they are celebrated. Additionally, the study group sought to learn of the sacramental practices and understandings present in congregations of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) today, and to engage in churchwide consultation and dialogue.

In 2004, a second overture to the General Assembly, Item 08-06 from the Presbytery of Central Washington, was referred to the study group. It also sought to amend the same two sections of the Directory for Worship but with different language. This overture asked that in W-2.4006, the third sentence (see above) be amended to read:

“All ~~the baptized faithful~~ who acknowledge Jesus Christ as their Lord and Savior are to be welcomed to the Table, and none shall be excluded because of race...”

And it asked that in W-2.4011(a), the first sentence (see above) be amended to read:

“The invitation to the Lord’s Supper is extended to all who ~~have been baptized~~ acknowledge Jesus Christ as Lord and Savior, remembering that access to the table is not a right...”

and that in W-2.4011(b), the initial word “baptized,” before “children,” be deleted (as above).

The Sacraments Study Group met six times over three years, with members researching all aspects of the issues involved, while being intentional about practicing Word and Sacrament in our worship together. In addition to having a member of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America among our number, the study group met with ecumenical representatives from the United Methodist Church, the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ), the Reformed Church in America, the United Church of Christ, and the Episcopal Church (USA).

While this was expected to be a final report to the 217th General Assembly (2006), the Office of Theology and Worship believes that the issues call the whole church to deepen baptismal identity, and to reflect together on sacramental practices, as these shed light on the church’s identity and mission and give visible shape to our common life in Christ.

Invitation to Christ: Part One

“... Everyone who thirsts, come to the waters; and you that have no money, come, buy and eat!” (Isa. 55:1).

—The Spirit of God is at work, through the Word and Sacraments, to form and reform the church. Therefore, we invite the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to renewed sacramental practice—expanded, deepened, reflected on, in all of our congregations. We trust the church to be the body of Christ, and we trust God’s Spirit to lead us. As we do this faithfully and well together, God will be at work among us.

—A season of renewed sacramental practice can refocus the church for discipleship and mission. These recommendations are fundamentally about directing the church’s attention to our primary commission from the risen Lord: to make disciples. Our regular Sunday practice of Word and Sacrament has everything to do with how well we carry out Christ’s mission: disciples are washed in the waters of baptism, formed by the Word of God, and nurtured at the Lord’s table. Strong, maturing disciples are expressions of the church’s faithfulness.

—In an age of widespread spiritual hunger, in a time of theological confusion about the central tenets of the faith, in a time of prolonged membership decline in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), a renewed sacramental life can strengthen the church’s ministries of evangelism and hospitality. In the church’s practices at font and table, the Gospel’s invitation to know and follow Christ is clearly extended to those outside the church; seekers are invited to confess faith in Christ, as they are welcomed into the community to learn the practices of discipleship, and maturing disciples are continually nurtured and strengthened for living the baptized life.

—We believe a renewed sacramental life will bring into clear focus the gospel’s call to ministries of compassion and justice. Christ sends us out as disciples to love neighbors, to serve the poor, to do justice, and to show mercy. The church’s practices at font and table teach us to feed, to serve, to wash, and to welcome—so that we might learn how to feed and wash, welcome and serve those around us in the world. The gospel imperative to love God and neighbor that we hear in the Word, we see at the table and the font, so that we can obey Christ’s command.

—Our baptismal identity in Jesus Christ unites us as the church; it is the foundation for our communal life and the ground of our ministry in the world. A renewed focus on baptismal identity and sacramental practice will enable us to live together with our differences and enjoy the unity that is Christ’s gift to his church. The church may become better able to recognize this gift as we gather regularly and deliberately around the font and the table.

—The historic relationship between baptism and the Lord’s Supper is shared with the whole Church of Jesus Christ. Throughout the ecumenical church, the Lord’s Supper is practiced as the meal of the baptized, at which those who have been initiated into Christ at the font gather around his table to be strengthened for living as disciples. Consideration of change in this historic pattern has significant implications for all our ecumenical partners.

—A two-year discipline of expanded sacramental practice is an invitation to discernment, a way of inviting the church to listen together to what the Spirit of God is saying to us about our identity and mission. The Sacraments we celebrate, together with the Word of God we proclaim, both define that identity and send us on that mission. As we gather around pulpit, font and table to listen, we believe we will hear more clearly who and whose we are, and how we are called to live for Christ in the world in this time.

Pastoral Letter

June 2006

To all the congregations of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.):

Sisters and brothers in Christ, grace and peace to you in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ.

We write to invite you on a spiritual journey to explore the deep and joyful waters of baptism.

As members of the Sacraments Study Group of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), we are convinced that a rediscovery of the gift and the call of our baptism can transform the church for ministry in the 21st century. We believe that the Christian life, engaged as a life of discipleship springing from baptism, can help to center and unify the church around its foundational calling from the risen Christ, to “go and make disciples” (Matt. 28:19).

Earlier this summer, on our recommendation, the General Assembly voted to call all our congregations “to renewal, through Word and Sacrament, of our life together in Jesus Christ, by engaging in practices that deepen baptismal life and discipleship.” Specifically, we invite every church to practice 5 simple disciplines over the next two years:

- (1) Set the font in full view of the congregation;
- (2) Open the font and fill it with water on every Lord’s Day;
- (3) Set cup and plate on the Lord’s table on every Lord’s Day;
- (4) Lead appropriate parts of weekly worship from the font and from the table;
- (5) Increase the number of Sundays on which the Lord’s Supper is celebrated.

Concrete suggestions for engaging these “Sacramental Practices” are enclosed. A set of brief papers prompting your theological reflection on the Sacraments and your practice of them will follow shortly. And a means for sharing your experience with others in the church will soon be in place, so that we may learn from one another.

The Sacraments Study Group consists of fifteen people who have met together for three years. At our first meeting, we determined that it would be important for us to do our thinking about Sacraments in the context of a shared sacramental practice. For that reason, we celebrated the Lord’s Supper and we reaffirmed the covenant of our baptism, at each meeting. We worshiped in grand sanctuaries, intimate chapels, and sterile hotel conference rooms; but in every location, we had water and God’s Word, bread and wine, amidst a gathering of God’s people. It is impossible to say how profoundly we were nourished, formed, and led by the Spirit, through our shared practice!

In the end, it was this practice that gave birth to our recommendations to the General Assembly and to the whole church. While we prayed, studied Scripture, read history, talked theology, wrote papers, surveyed churches, interviewed congregational leaders, and visited with ecumenical partners—it was the power of God’s presence in our worship together, around pulpit, font, and table, that we came deeply to trust. Consequently, it is this same attention to sacramental life and immersion in rich sacramental practice that we are now eager to commend to the whole church, with the support of the General Assembly.

All around us is a changing world where hungry and broken people are looking for a trustworthy word, a place to belong, a chance to start over, a way of life that can satisfy the longing within. The Word of the Gospel and the water, bread and wine of the sacraments are God’s gifts to the church for the sake of this very world! As we find ourselves surrounded by growing numbers of people who have not been raised in the church and have little understanding of its life, it has become urgent that our ministry focus clearly on these simple and central gifts we have been given—Word, water, wine and bread—and that we explore anew how best to offer them and the new life to which they point to a hungry and wanting world.

So we invite you to renewed discipleship and to joyful, passionate baptismal living. We encourage you to join us in these five practices, and in reflective dialogue with others, both in your congregation and across the church. We will be eager to hear about what you are learning, and how you are being led by the Spirit of God.

At the font and the table, we meet the same risen Lord to whom the Scriptures bear witness. The central invitation that both baptism and the Lord’s Supper extend, together with the Word proclaimed, is the invitation to know the Lord Jesus Christ and to live in the world as his disciples. We pray that each of you will be renewed in your own faith and life in Christ. We join our prayers with yours for the vitality and strength of your congregation, and we pray for renewal in the life and work of the whole church.

Questions for Reflection on Sacramental Practice

As you begin these sacramental practices, and as you engage in reflection on your congregation's patterns for celebrating baptism and the Lord's Supper, you may find the general questions below a helpful starting place for conversation. Additional, more specific reflection questions related to Scripture, church history, theology, and contemporary culture will be included in the Theological Reflections section to follow.

1. The sacraments of baptism and the Lord's Supper are made up of spoken words, actions, texts, and symbols.
 - Describe the words, actions, texts, and symbols that are present in your congregation's celebration of the sacraments.
 - Make a list of the various meanings each of the sacraments has for your congregation.
 - How are these meanings expressed in your celebration of the sacraments?
2. Describe how font, table, and pulpit are related to each other in a typical service of worship.
 - What does their physical location in the church communicate about their relationships?
 - What words, actions, texts, and symbols demonstrate a connection between the two sacraments? Between Word and Sacrament?
 - What parts of worship, in addition to the sacraments themselves, involve the font and the table?
3. Describe the preparation your congregation offers prior to participation in the Sacraments.
 - What kinds of preparation for baptism does your congregation offer? For whom? When?
 - What kinds of preparation for participation in the Lord's Supper does your congregation offer? For whom? When?
 - Are acts of baptismal remembrance or reaffirmation celebrated in your congregation? Describe them.

This final question may be useful at several points in your exploration of sacramental practice.

4. Review the sacramental practices commended in this resource.
 - Which practices has your congregation already been doing?
 - Which new practices has your congregation participated in?
 - Compare the congregation's previous patterns with its use of these 5 practices.
 - What insights about the sacraments arise out of your experience with these practices?
 - What do you sense the Spirit of God is leading you to explore further?

Invitation to Christ: Sacramental Practices

“With joy you will draw water from the wells of salvation” (Isa. 12:3).

Introduction

In Luke 24, the evangelist narrates the first post-resurrection appearance of the Risen Christ to two disciples who have departed Jerusalem for Emmaus in a state of dejection. In this well-known encounter, Jesus appears as their companion along the way. Conversation around the meaning of the Hebrew Scriptures concerning the Messiah leads to a meal where the stranger acts as host. It is a revelatory meal, one in which the identity of the host is made known to the two disciples, who are left pondering the meaning of their experience. The gospel narrates that they said to one another, “Were not our hearts burning within us while he was talking to us on the road, while he was opening the scriptures to us?” (v. 32). Returning to share this experience with their fellow disciples, “they told what had happened on the road, and how he had been made known to them in the breaking of the bread” (v. 35).

This story holds together different and indispensable ways of human knowing: hearing and sensing, word and symbol, scripture and sacrament. Only after their experience of a shared meal did the two disciples recognize Jesus. The meal made it possible for them to return to their hearing of the Word and discover a new depth they had not previously understood. The relationship of experience to understanding is of great importance to our sacramental practice. Indeed, when the disciples report their encounter with the risen Jesus to those in Jerusalem, they name the meal as the place where recognition took place even though, in retrospect, their hearts were burning while he spoke the word to them.

Believing that lived experience deepens our understanding, we offer these practices for sacramental renewal. We believe that a richer, stronger baptismal practice will help us see more clearly how to be a Word and Sacrament church in a needy world. In our pastoral letter, we commend five simple disciplines to the church. For some congregations, they will already be familiar; for others, they will be entirely new. These practices are suggestions for how to make use of ordinary things that are deep with significance. They set before us the meaning of our common life as a baptized community that is nurtured in Word and Sacrament and sent to serve the world.

Five Practices

(1) Set the font in full view of the congregation.

Locate your church's baptismal font and bring it into the space where the congregation assembles for worship. Consider placing the font in a location where it is well seen and accessible to the congregation on a weekly basis. This could mean at the front of the center aisle, or at the back near the entrance into the church. Think in terms of baptismal space, which would include space for people to gather around the font, and if the church celebrates the Easter Vigil, a Paschal candle.* In preparation for Sunday, spend some time during the week experimenting with different placements of the font, and imagine how each one changes the significance of baptism for the congregation every time they enter the worship space. What does the location of your font and table communicate to the congregation?

* The paschal candle is a reminder of the Paschal (Passover) mystery of Christ's death and resurrection. Lit with new fire at the Easter Vigil, this candle is placed near the font and kept lighted for all occasions recalling our dying and rising with Christ through baptism.

(2) Open the font and fill it with water on every Lord's Day.

Remember that the font is the receptacle for the primary and central symbol for baptism, which is water. Let the water be present all the time—whether there is a baptism to celebrate or not. You might even remove font covers if possible. Covers used to be necessary to protect the water from being stolen for superstitious reasons.

It is appropriate to start with some water in the font, and have a pitcher with which to pour additional water during worship. The pitcher might be placed on a small table, on the floor beside the font, or carried in procession. The minister, an assisting elder, or even a child may pour the water. It is important to help the one pouring understand the baptismal meanings evoked in this grace-filled act.

When might it be timely to pour the water in the liturgy? There are many different opportunities during worship where pouring water or engaging the font helps deepen our understanding of baptismal life. Water that can be seen and heard—as worship begins, at confession and pardon, at offering or sending—brings attention to our baptismal identity as God's own, to our ongoing need for grace, and to our calling into lives of discipleship.

(3) Set cup and plate on the Lord's Table on every Lord's Day.

Together these vessels point the congregation to the core meaning of our eucharistic life, a life of thanksgiving for who we are in Christ. When you are not celebrating the Lord's Supper, keep an empty paten and chalice central on the table, so that these symbols may speak to us of our hunger for Christ who feeds us at this table. Just as the font must be visible to express its meaning, so will the Lord's Table be allowed to function as a symbol. Be sensitive to what the presence of other things on the Lord's Table says about the meaning of the meal.

(4) Lead appropriate portions of weekly worship from the font and from the table.

What we do and how we do it convey meaning every bit as much as what we say. Intentionally leading worship from the font helps people make theological connections that might not be so clear to them otherwise. The presence of the leader at the font invites the congregation to see and hear anew portions of the liturgy that have baptismal implications. For example, leading the Prayer of Confession and Declaration of Pardon from the font grounds our confidence in God's forgiveness in our baptismal identity. Lifting water with hands as the words of forgiveness are spoken makes this connection even more strongly.

Imagine the increased meaning of all acts of promise-making if done at the font where God's covenant pledge to us is enacted. Reception of new members, including youth, ordination and installation, dedication, commissioning, and marriage might all take place around the font.

The congregation can also engage the font as they receive the Lord's Supper. When worshipers pass by the font as they come forward to receive the bread and wine, some will look and see, while others will reach into the water and remember their baptism actively.

Baptism gives the church its mission, as well as its identity. Offering the Charge and Blessing from the font (again, lifting water with hands) is a reminder that we are a sent people, baptized for service in the world. Ministry, mission, stewardship, and ethics are all rooted in our being washed in grace for self-giving in the world.

Leading the intercessions or extending the offering invitation from behind the Lord's Table can help make similar connections. At this table where the hungry are fed, our prayers and our gifts for others come into focus as ways we respond to the Word and reach out to serve the world Christ loves.

(5) Increase the number of Sundays on which the Lord's Supper is celebrated.

At Eucharist we are fed and nourished to live the baptismal life. The Christ with whom we are joined in baptism, and whose body we are, continues to give himself to us in the meal that bears his name. As the only repeatable part of Christian initiation, the Lord's Supper draws us more deeply into the paschal mystery of our dying and rising with Christ. Trusting the integrity of our Reformed tradition and its affirmation of Word and Sacrament as normative for each Lord's Day, we encourage the increased frequency of the Lord's Supper. Congregations might consider adding particular Sundays in the liturgical year, or try celebrating the Lord's Supper through an entire season, like the season of Easter. Whether you increase the annual number of communion Sundays by one or by several, more frequent and regular use of these means of grace strengthens the church in its baptismal identity and call.

In addition to existing resources like the Presbyterian Planning Calendar, Directory for Worship (found in the Book of Order), Book of Common Worship, and Holy Is the Lord, the Office of Theology and Worship will be producing aids to assist congregations that desire to increase the frequency of communion.

THE TRINITY: GOD’S LOVE OVERFLOWING

Introduction

“The Trinity: God’s Love Overflowing” is the product of more than five years of study, consultation, discussion, and prayer by a group of pastors, elders, and theologians. The 212th General Assembly (2000) instructed the Office of Theology and Worship to constitute a task force to study the doctrine of the Trinity in Presbyterian theology, worship, and life. The task force report was due in 2003, but work was delayed by the events of September 11, 2001. In 2004, the 216th General Assembly (2004) approved the request of the Office of Theology and Worship to seek responses from the church before preparing a final draft. This was done, and the response was heartening. Many faithful Presbyterians were eager to enter into deep theological reflection, discussion, and feedback that has strengthened the final report.

“The Trinity: God’s Love Overflowing” does not present an exhaustive or new doctrine of the Trinity. It aims to assist the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in reclaiming the doctrine of the Trinity in theology, worship, and life. Often the church takes up a theological issue only when there is great controversy—a time when a lack of consensus on an issue embroils the church in an intractable debate. The doctrine of the Trinity is a pressing issue for contemporary Presbyterians for precisely the opposite reason. Despite the remarkable renewal of Trinitarian theology in recent decades, this doctrine is widely neglected or poorly understood in many of our congregations. The task force is convinced that the doctrine of the Trinity is crucial to our faith, worship, and service. The Office of Theology and Worship and the task force pray that Presbyterians will once again find that the doctrine of the Trinity is good and joyful news!

“God’s Love Overflowing” is a metaphor, deeply rooted in Scripture and Christian tradition, that speaks of the infinite ways the triune God loves all of creation, including humankind. Comparing God’s love to a waterfall or a stream may seem impersonal, yet biblical images of living water and rolling streams abound. “God’s Love Overflowing” is an attempt to express the amazing riches that flow boundlessly from the triune God who in loving freedom seeks and saves us, reconciles and renews us, and draws us into loving relationships that reflect the eternal oneness of God.

The General Assembly document, “A Report to the Church on Issues of Language and Gender” (2000), provided important background for the work of the task force. The document speaks of “inclusive” language for the people of God and “faithful” language for God, language that plumbs the depths of Scripture for rich and varied imagery. Such “faithful” language for God affirms classic Trinitarian doctrine while seeking fresh ways to speak of the mystery of the triune God. All theological reflection involves words and language, and so we must grapple with the limits and possibilities of language for God, but this was not the primary charge to the task force. The General Assembly asked for faithful and constructive theological reflection that could help the church renew its faith in the triune God.

As members of the task force prayed, worshiped, and worked together, they sought guidance first from Scripture, then from our confessions, from the Reformed and ecumenical theological tradition, and from the prayers of the church, past and present. In its reflection, the task force was mindful of the struggle to find faithful ways to speak of the God who is love overflowing, to address the Trinity in worship and prayer, and to do so in words that faithfully bear witness to the mystery and the presence of the One who is with us and for us. “The Trinity: God’s Love Overflowing” seeks to expand rather than limit the church’s vocabulary of praise and wonder. No one name, no single metaphor, no set of words or phrases—however thoughtful, poetic, or profound—can say everything that could be said about the mystery of God’s love made known to us, in Jesus Christ and sealed in our hearts by the Holy Spirit.

Part I, “Confessing God’s Overflowing Love,” is confessional; it summarizes our sense of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)’s theological convictions. Part II, “Participating in God’s Overflowing Love,” is liturgical; it seeks to show the ways all Christians participate in the life of God as we worship together. Part III, “Embodying God’s Overflowing Love,” is missional; it speaks of the concrete ways all Christians are called to embody the overflowing love of God in mission and service—in the life of faith, hope, and love. The Trinity Task Force and the Office of Theology and Worship hope and pray that this report is found to be faithful to the triune God whom we seek to worship and serve with heart, soul, mind, and strength.

I. Confessing God's Overflowing Love

Confident in the scriptural witness, in unison with the creeds of the ecumenical church, and guided by our Reformed confessions, we place our faith in the triune God alone.

In life and in death we belong to God. Through the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Spirit, we trust in the one triune God, the Holy One of Israel, whom alone we worship and serve. (The Book of Confessions, A Brief Statement of Faith, 10.1).

In sovereign love God created the heavens and the earth and called and formed the people of Israel to be a light to all the nations. In costly grace the Lord Jesus Christ ministered among us and was crucified and raised for us and for our salvation. In transforming power the Holy Spirit renews and sanctifies us, draws us into new communion with God and each other, awakens our praise and worship, and equips us for the service of God in the world. The triune God does all this through “the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Spirit” (2 Cor 13:14).

A. The Doctrine of the Trinity as the Summary of the Gospel

... We have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ, through whom we have obtained access to this grace in which we stand; and we boast in our hope of sharing the glory of God. ... and hope does not disappoint us, because God's love has been poured into our hearts through the Holy Spirit who has been given to us (Rom 5:1–5).

The doctrine of the Trinity is a summary of the gospel of Jesus Christ—it cannot be understood apart from this gospel, and the gospel cannot be fully understood apart from the doctrine of the Trinity.

According to the witness of Scripture, God's love comes to us in a threefold way: God loved the world and gave the Son for our salvation (Jn. 3:16); Jesus Christ, God's only Son our Lord, loved us and gave his life for us (Gal. 2:20); the gift of God's love in Christ has been poured into our hearts by the Holy Spirit (2 Cor. 1:22). The church's confession and praise of the triune God is rooted in the threefold self-revelation of the one God who is our creator, our redeemer, and our sanctifier.

Even before the election of Israel and the coming of Christ, God's creation of the world expressed overflowing love. The abundance and diversity of creatures display the majestic beauty of creation. Yet all creation groans for redemption, even as every human heart hungers for the fullness of life that only God can give (Rom. 8:22–23). As sinful creatures, we know the triune God reliably neither by our observation of the world nor by our exploration of the marvels of our creaturely existence. Rather, we know the great love of the God who is three-in-one and one-in-three truly, tangibly, and decisively only through God's own self-gift in the person and work of Jesus Christ and in the presence and power of the Holy Spirit.

In continuity with God's mighty acts among the people of Israel, but also with surprising newness, the Word of God was with us and for us uniquely in the person of Jesus who as an infant cried in the arms of Mary, who was baptized by John and received the Holy Spirit, who broke bread with sinners and tax collectors, who forgave and healed the paralytic in Capernaum, whose power flowed to the hemorrhaging woman, who taught with authority, who blessed the children, who prayed in agony at Gethsemane, who endured torture and death on the cross at Golgotha, who was raised bodily and in victory on Easter morning.

Active in the history of Israel and singularly at work in the life, death, and resurrection of Jesus, God continues to be present and active in and among us as the Spirit, who filled the believers at Pentecost, who empowered the apostles to do signs and miracles, who called Philip to evangelize and baptize the Ethiopian eunuch, who gave a variety of gifts to the church and formed the body of Christ, who has inspired faith, love, and hope in the church across the ages, and who continues to call women and men to all ministries of the church.

The church's confession of the triune God is embedded not only in the biblical witness but also in the early church's prayer and practice. Christians are baptized (Mt. 28:19) and blessed (2 Cor. 13:14) in the name of the triune God. The apostle Paul describes common Christian prayer to God in Trinitarian terms: “When we cry ‘Abba! Father!’ it is that very Spirit bearing witness with our spirit that we are children of God, and if children, then heirs, heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ...” (Rom. 8:15b–17a). The overflowing love of God comes to us through Jesus Christ in the power of the Holy Spirit.

... This work of God, the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, is the foundation of all confessional statements about God, [humanity], and the world ... (The Book of Confessions, The Confession of 1967, 9.07).

The love of the triune God made known to us in Jesus Christ by the Holy Spirit is plentiful beyond measure (Rom. 5:20). It is given freely and extravagantly, utterly unmerited and unexpected. It is always greater than we can imagine or conceive. Like a gushing fountain, God's love overflows toward us (Jer. 2:13; Jn. 4:14). It freely pours forth in an inexhaustible stream, never diminished in the giving, never drying up. It is constant and trustworthy. It is more powerful than all the forces of sin and evil that deny and resist the gift and call of the love of God given to us in Jesus Christ and shared with us by the Holy Spirit. It cannot be quenched, even by death itself (Song 8:6–7).

... Neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor rulers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor powers, nor height, nor depth, nor anything else in all creation will be able to separate us from the love of God in Christ Jesus our Lord (Rom. 8:38–39).

The Trinitarian understanding of God has been at the heart of the church's message and prayer since its beginnings. Far from an ivory tower doctrine, it is a doctrine concerned with the truth of God and the reality of our salvation. Only God can save us and sanctify us. When we speak of the three distinct but inseparable persons of the Trinity, they are not to be understood, as modalism teaches, as mere masks or temporary roles that hide God's deepest reality. Nor are Jesus Christ and the Holy Spirit secondary deities or mere creatures of a supposedly solitary supreme God, as subordinationism teaches. The Trinitarian faith of the church rejects both these views because they deny that God is truly present as our savior in Jesus Christ and truly present among and in us as the life-giving Spirit. Against the views of modalism and subordinationism the church declares in its doctrine of the Trinity that Jesus Christ and the Holy Spirit are, together with God the Father, fully and eternally God. As the Nicene Creed affirms, Jesus Christ is "God from God, Light from Light, true God from true God," and the Holy Spirit is to be worshiped and glorified as "the Lord, the giver of life" (The Book of Confessions, Nicene Creed, 1.2–3).

B. A Mystery Revealed

The doctrine of the Trinity testifies to a mystery beyond human comprehension. It speaks of the very being of God that exceeds our understanding.

God said to Moses, "I am who I am."... This is my name forever, and this is my title for all generations. (Ex. 3:14–15)

Our minds cannot fully comprehend and our words and images can never fully explain the mystery of God. But while the name of God is inexhaustible and exceeds our grasp, we are not left in ignorance. We are invited to participate in this mystery that has been opened to us by God's own self-disclosure in Jesus Christ and in the coming of the Holy Spirit who binds us to Christ.

No one has ever seen God. It is God the only Son, who is close to the Father's heart, who has made him known (Jn. 1:18).

... What no eye has seen, nor ear heard, nor the human heart conceived, what God has prepared for those who love him—
these things God has revealed to us through the Spirit; for the Spirit searches everything, even the depths of God (1 Cor. 2:9–10).

The mystery of the Trinity is an open and radiant mystery. It is the mystery of the truth that God is holy, abundant, overflowing love both in relationship to us and in all eternity. We meet God's threefold love in the astonishing faithfulness of the Holy One of Israel, in the costly grace given to us in Jesus Christ our Savior, and in the new life in communion with God and others that has come to us in the gift of the Holy Spirit.

We dare to speak of God as eternally triune because this is the way the Holy One has come to us. The triune God is self-giving not only in relation to us, but also in the depths of the eternal divine life. In the unity of their mutual love the three persons of the Trinity are the divine reality from before the earth was formed and to all eternity. We know this to be true because God is faithful. God is not one way in relation to us and another way in God's own eternal being. There is no God behind the One who has come to us in Jesus Christ by the Holy Spirit. We therefore confidently affirm that the doctrine of the Trinity is neither presumptuous speculation nor mathematical nonsense. About this the church must have no doubt: the doctrine of the Trinity proclaims to us the very heart of God. Using the language of Christian tradition, we proclaim that the Father so loved the world, sending the Son for us and our salvation, which we receive in and through the presence and power of the Holy Spirit.

When we confess with the creeds of the universal church that God is "one in substance, and yet distinct in three persons" (The Book of Confessions, The Scots Confession, 3.01), we use terminology that is strange and perhaps off-putting to many members of the church today. However, the intent of these words is to declare that the mystery of the Trinity cannot be reduced either to a solitary individual or to a close-knit group of individuals. Trinitarian faith witnesses to the divine reality as living, active, dynamic, and relational. Relationship is at the heart of God's being. One yet richly differentiated, God's being is in communion. God lives and acts in mutual, self-giving love.

It would be presumptuous to speculate about the inner life of God on the strength of our own reason or imagination. Lurking in such speculation is the danger of making God after our own image or according to our own wishes and desires. Yet if we keep to the witness of Scripture, we can be confident that confessing faith in the triune God is not fueled by idle speculation. It is shaped by the outpouring of God's abundant love for us in Jesus Christ and in us by the Holy Spirit. We trust that the way God acts in relation to us corresponds to who God is in all eternity. Before the world was created, and after it shall have come to its end, God is none other than the one who is for us once for all in Jesus Christ and with us here and now by the Holy Spirit.

C. Three in One, One in Three

In the history of the church's thinking and speaking about the Trinity, two analogies have been especially prominent. One likens the Trinity to the capacities of an individual human mind. Just as a human being is one and the same in each of the three distinct acts of remembering, knowing, and willing, so God exists as one-in-three and three-in-one. Often called the psychological analogy, this way of thinking places the emphasis on the one-in-threeness of God. The other analogy likens the Trinity to a loving communion of persons. As human beings find their deepest identity in relationships of mutual love, so God exists as three-in-one and one-in-three in the ineffable exchange of love among the three persons of the Trinity. Often called the social analogy or analogy of human life in relationship, this way of thinking places the emphasis on the three-ness of God.

Neither of these analogies should be pressed too far. On the one hand, pressing the analogy of the different capacities of a single human mind may reduce God to a solitary individual, neglecting the reality of personal relationship within God's being. On the other hand, pressing the social or relational analogy runs the risk of portraying God as three separate individuals who decide to work in concert with each other. This would be tantamount to tritheism or belief in three gods. Fortunately, we do not have to choose between these analogies of single personhood and personal life in community. The church has never declared one of these analogies right and the other wrong. Instead, it has rejected the dangers to which each of these analogies may lead if pushed too far.

The mystery of the Trinity is reverently expressed by Gregory of Nazianzus: "No sooner do I conceive of the one than I am illumined by the splendor of the three; no sooner do I distinguish them than I am carried back to the one" (On Baptism, Oration 40.41).

D. ~~[Naming]~~ [Speaking of] the Triune God

In recent years new ways of speaking of the Trinity in the prayer and theology of the church have been proposed. Some of these proposals are helpful; some are unsatisfactory. What must be clear is that we cannot distinguish the persons of the Trinity simply by assigning different attributes or acts to each of the persons. The divine attributes are held in common by all three persons: all are holy, all are loving, all are wise and powerful. Similarly, an action of God cannot be restricted to one of the three persons. All of the acts of the triune God are indivisible. The persons of the Trinity do not work independently. Each of God's acts is always the one work of the whole Trinity.

For example, while the first person of the Trinity is often referred to as the "Creator," this must not be understood to exclude the involvement of the second and the third persons in the work of creation. Thus while the triad "Creator, Redeemer, Sanctifier" appropriately ~~[names]~~ [describes] distinct aspects of God's relationship to the world, it does not designate the relationships of the triune persons to each other. In the life of the triune God the three persons are uniquely distinguished and uniquely united by their mutual relationships. Each person gives and receives love from the others in a distinctive way.

In what ways may we speak faithfully of the mystery of the Trinity today? With the witness of Scripture, the ecumenical creeds, and the Reformed confessions and liturgies, we speak of God as Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) affirms and values this way of speaking of the triune God, resisting any tendency to discard or diminish it.

Faced with the alternatives of ~~never [confessing God]~~ [speaking of the Trinity] as Father, Son, and Holy Spirit and ~~only [confessing God]~~ [speaking of the Trinity] as Father, Son and, Holy Spirit, we see a ~~[third]~~ way [that is] more consistent with the Scriptures and theological and liturgical tradition. The language of Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, rooted in Scripture and creed, remains an indispensable anchor for our efforts to speak faithfully of God. When secured, an anchor provides both necessary stability and adequate freedom of movement. If our lifeline to the anchor is frayed or severed, the historic faith of the one holy catholic and apostolic church risks being set adrift. With this anchor in place, however, we are liberated to interpret, amplify, and expand upon the ways of naming the triune God familiar to most church members. We are freed to speak faithfully and amply of the mystery of the Trinity. We may cultivate a responsible Trinitarian imagination and vocabulary that bears witness in different ways to the one triune God known to us from Scripture and creed as Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. Faithfulness to the gospel frees us to honor and continue to use this faithful way of speaking of the triune God even as it frees us to adopt other faithful images [~~and names~~]. Rather than simply repeating the word ‘God’ in prayer and liturgy, we are free to broaden our vocabulary for speaking of the triune God, emboldened by the rich reservoir of biblical and traditional terms, [~~names,~~] images, and metaphors.

The language of Father, Son, and Spirit has too often been misunderstood to sanction hierarchies that some human beings arbitrarily impose on others. However, a Trinitarian understanding of God is indispensable in empowering faithful resistance to oppressive uses of human power that are rooted in hierarchy and subordination. Similarly, Trinitarian language has been used to support the idea that God is male and that men are superior to women. For this and other distortions of Trinitarian doctrine we repent. God is not male (The Book of Confessions, The Westminster Confession of Faith, 6.011). Question 51 in “Belonging to God: A First Catechism” asks: “When we pray to God as our Father, do we mean that God is male?” and answers: “No. Only creatures who have bodies can be male or female. But God is Spirit and has no body.” A Trinitarian understanding of God makes it clear that the Creator of gender is not subject to it.

As we explore diverse possibilities for Trinitarian images, we are mindful of the temptation to bring the mystery of God under our control. Therefore, we must always be guided by the words of scripture and creed that speak of God as Father, Son, and Holy Spirit.

At the same time, we should not insist on the exclusive use of the traditional Trinitarian names, lest we quench the Spirit and even foster idolatry. Such a view would insufficiently acknowledge the divine mystery, would neglect the freedom of God’s children to glorify God imaginatively with all our hearts and minds, and would diminish the joy of knowing God ever more fully.

Female imagery of the triune God has yet to be adequately explored. The overflowing love of God finds expression in the biblical depiction of God as compassionate mother (Isa. 49:15; 66:13), beloved child (Mt. 3:17), and life-giving womb (Isa. 46:3). The divine wisdom (hochmah in Hebrew, sophia in Greek) is portrayed in the Bible as a woman who preaches in the streets, gives instruction, advocates justice, builds houses, and acts as a gracious hostess (Prov. 1,8,9).

Responding to objections that the title “Father” is “more appropriate” to God, John Calvin reminds us “that no figures of speech can describe God’s extraordinary affection towards us; for it is infinite and various.” He further explains that God “has manifested himself to be both ... Father and Mother” so that we might be more aware of God’s constant presence and willingness to assist us (Commentary on Isaiah 46:3). God “did not satisfy himself with proposing the example of a father,” writes Calvin, “but in order to express his very strong affection, he chose to liken himself to a mother, and calls [the people of Israel] not merely ‘children,’ but the fruit of the womb, towards which there is usually a warmer affection” (Commentary on Isaiah 49:15).

Maternal imagery reminds us that God is a mother who expends herself for us, sheltering us like an eagle hovering over her young and bearing us on her wings (Ex. 19:4; Deut. 32:11). Carried by and born of the Virgin Mary, the child of God shares life with us, working to establish justice, righteousness, and peace (Isa. 9:7; Lk. [~~2:46–55~~] [1:46–55]). As we are born of flesh and blood, so we are also born again by the Spirit of God (Jn. [~~3:30–6~~] [3:3–6]). The [~~Spirit~~] [~~Lord~~] lifts us up and carries us throughout life (Isa. 46:1–4).

E. A Plenitude of Images of the Trinity

Recognizing that all language about the triune God refers beyond itself by way of analogy, we draw on Scripture and our confessions to speak of the triune God in historically faithful yet freshly imaginative ways. The analogies employed in the following list have not been chosen at random. They are guided by God’s self-revelation as attested in Scripture. Some triads have a narrative quality; others are drawn from creation. Three guidelines have been followed: (1) in each case the three terms must have an inner relationship; (2) the terms must either be personal or functional—the two should not be mixed; and (3) functional Trinitarian language should be understood to amplify and enrich our understanding of God—it cannot replace personal language.

While classical Trinitarian theology speaks of the “first, second, and third” persons of the Trinity, Scripture also refers to the three in other patterns, as in the apostolic benediction which invokes “the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Spirit” (2 Cor. 13:13).

As we worship, the triune God is the One From Whom, the One through Whom, and the One in Whom we offer our praise (Rom. 11:36).

As we seek God’s grace and wholeness, acknowledging the sin and brokenness in us, our human communities, and the whole creation, the triune God is our Rainbow of Promise, our Ark of Salvation, and our Dove of Peace (From Gail Ramshaw, Koinonia: Services and Prayers [Geneva: Lutheran World Federation, 2004]).

As we read, proclaim, hear, and live out the message of Scripture, the triune God is known to us as Speaker, Word, and Breath (Heb. 1:1; Jn. 1:1; Jn. 20:22; Ps. 104:30).

In baptism, the triune God is for us Overflowing Font, Living Water, Flowing River (Book of Common Worship, p. 412; Jn. 4:10, 13–14; Jn. 7:37).

As we are born anew by water and the Spirit, the triune God is Compassionate Mother, Beloved Child, and Life-giving Womb (Isa. 49:15; Mt. 3:17; Isa. 46:3).

As we grow in grace, the triune God is our Sun, Light, and Burning Ray (John of Damascus, First Apology).

As we offer ourselves, our resources, and our gratitude in stewardship and Eucharist, the triune God is Giver, Gift, and Giving (Jas. 1:17; Jn. 3:16; 2 Cor. 9:15; 1 Jn. 3:24).

In celebrating the communion of our life together in Christ, the triune God is Lover, Beloved, and the Love and binds together Lover and Beloved (Augustine, The Trinity).

As members of the believing community, we acknowledge the triune God as our Rock, Cornerstone, and Temple (Ps. 28:1; Eph. 2:20–21).

When we speak of God's wrath in the face of evil, the triune God is for us Fire that Consumes, Sword that Divides, and Storm that Melts Mountains (Deut. 5:25; Mt. 10:34–35; Ps. 97:5).

As we seek to live in faith, love, and hope, the triune God is for us the One Who Was, the One Who Is, and the One Who Is To Come (Rev. 4:8).

In these and other ways we stammer to confess that the triune God is an inexhaustible mystery of purifying and transforming love. God abides in eternal communion. Divine life is giving and receiving, sharing and delighting in reciprocal love. Abundant, overflowing love is the glory, majesty, and beauty of the triune God. By the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ and the communion of the Holy Spirit, we are invited to participate in the eternal life of the triune God who is love (1 Jn. 4: 8).

[We must always bear in mind that Scripture affirms Jesus Christ is the very image of God. This means the Triune God has chosen to reveal the Divine identity in the life and work of Jesus Christ. Christ is the mystery of our salvation and the revelation of God to the world.]

F. The Doctrine of the Trinity and Christian Practice

The church's faith and life will be enriched as we learn and live into the triune reality of God. Faithfully articulated, the doctrine of the Trinity teaches that Jesus Christ our Savior and the Holy Spirit our Sanctifier are truly one with God who made the heavens and the earth and who called Israel to be a light to all nations. God is not a solitary and self-enclosed being (as we often imagine God to be and as we often aspire to be). The eternal triune God wills to communicate with creatures and to share the divine life and love with them. God's being is in mutual love and shared life. God is the gift-giving God. This is the way God has related to us in the life, death, and resurrection of Jesus Christ and in the pouring out of the Holy Spirit, and it reveals who God is and how God acts in all eternity.

God is love. In the life of God and in God's relation to us, there is no withholding of life and love, no reservation, no qualification, no half-heartedness in giving. God's triune life is described by ancient church tradition as a perichoresis: a mutual indwelling, mutual interaction, and mutual interpenetration of the persons of the Trinity in eternal life and communion. In this everlasting and interactive divine communion, each lives with, in, and for the others. All is held in common except the distinctiveness of the persons in their reciprocal relationships of love. Confessing God as triune, we affirm that this eternal life-in-communion of the triune God is freely and gladly extended to us and to the world.

This Trinitarian way of thinking and speaking of God transforms our understanding of the power of God and of fruitful human power. True power, the creative and life-giving power that originates with the triune God, is not dominating and coercive power. It is not power that manipulates and overwhelms. True power is life-giving, life-enabling, life-empowering power. True power is the power strong enough to live for and with another. It is the power strong enough to be vulnerable for another, to suffer with and for another, to rejoice with and for another, to give one's all for another. The power of the triune God is the power of omnipotent, shared love.

The overflowing love of God given to us in Jesus Christ and shared with us by the Holy Spirit draws us out of ourselves and into life in right relationship with God and others. Human beings are created in and for relationship. We bear witness to the triune God by our life in relationship. Knowledge of the triune God and knowledge of ourselves are inseparable (Calvin, Institutes, 1.i.1). This does not mean that we can use the doctrine of the Trinity as a kind of blueprint for human life or as a program for the renovation of human society. But this much we can surely say: If God's life is in communion, then human life, too, created in the image of God, is intended by God to be life in communion. From this perspective, sin often takes the form of rejecting life in relationship, of wanting to live only for oneself, of actively and intentionally disobeying the laws of God, of wanting to live apart from God, or of living as though our sisters and brothers did not exist or were there only for our benefit. But sin may also take the form of self-devaluation and self-hatred, of wanting to disappear into another, of neglecting God's purpose because we do not feel worthy of it, or of trying to hide one's personhood and unique talents. In whatever form, living in bondage to sin is living against the grain of reality as constituted by the triune God, in whom depth of communion and personal differentiation are inseparable. God wills all creation to participate in this triune life of communion.

The doctrine of the Trinity is not an abstract theory but a practical doctrine. The truth of the doctrine of the Trinity must be claimed with our whole heart, mind, and strength. It must be put into practice in our everyday life. It has its roots in the proclamation of the gospel and in the church's life of prayer. By practicing our faith in worship and service, we take part in the life and love of the triune God. We enter into the realm of God's community-forming love, which is able to reconcile sinners and make enemies into friends. As we worship and praise the God made known in Jesus Christ by the power of the Holy Spirit, as we attend to the preaching of the Word of God and the celebration of the sacraments of baptism and Lord's Supper, as we assist our neighbor, forgive our enemy, and live in friendship with all people, we take part in the life-giving and peace-making love of the triune God. In Christian faith, hope, and love, we are united with God in Christ by the power of the Holy Spirit. In our common worship, common prayer, and common service of our neighbor, we are being formed and nurtured in the overflowing love of the triune God.

G. The Doctrine of the Trinity and Christian Mission

Christian service and mission, too, are shaped and guided by the missions of the triune God. God has sent Jesus Christ to accomplish our reconciliation with God and sends the Holy Spirit to bring us to new life in Christ and to renew the whole creation.

The mission of the church is a participation in the mission of the triune God. The church's mission is not determined by our own special interests and favorite agendas. In Jesus Christ "God was reconciling the world to himself" (2 Cor. 5:19; The Book of Confessions, The Confession of 1967, 9.07). The Holy Spirit is the Bond of Peace (Eph. 4:3) who brings together in new unity people of many languages, nations, cultures, and races. The Spirit works toward the full realization of God's reign of justice and peace. The mission of the church is established and directed by the reconciling and community-building activity of the triune God.

Participating in this mission, we extend the reconciling and peace-making love of God to others. We share the good news. We show compassion to the needy. We work with others for justice, freedom, and peace. We practice forgiveness. We welcome strangers and the outcast. We use our gifts to build up the church, which is Christ's body. We encourage friendship and community among all people. We take part, always imperfectly and provisionally, in the overflowing, self-giving, community-forming love of God that is the mystery of the Trinity. The triune God who is and calls us to take part in life in communion is the object of our faith, the basis of our love, and the goal of our hope.

The church looks with eager longing to the consummation of life in the triune God who is overflowing love. With A Brief Statement of Faith of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), we declare:

In life and in death we belong to God.
 Through the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ,
 the love of God,
 and the communion of the Holy Spirit,
 we trust in the one triune God, the Holy One of Israel, whom alone we worship and serve. (The Book of Confessions, A Brief Statement of Faith, 10:1).

II. PARTICIPATING IN GOD'S OVERFLOWING LOVE

All of Christian life is a participation in the abundant love of the triune God. In our worship of God, we bring participation to awareness and speech. Each act of worship—praising, confessing, forgiving, proclaiming, professing, baptizing, thanksgiving, offering, sharing, praying, blessing, sending—nurtures our faith in this Trinity of love.

Our need and desire to worship confront us with the inadequacy of our language for God. With all the saints, "we are forced to raise our lowly words to subjects which cannot be described" (Hilary of Poitiers, The Trinity 2.2). We worship the triune God who transcends even our best efforts to sing or speak, to preach or praise. John Calvin declared, "If all that can be said or imagined about love were brought together into one, yet it would be surpassed by the greatness of the love of God. By no metaphor, therefore, can God's incomparable goodness be described" (Commentary on Isaiah 46:3).

Yet our faith will not let us keep silent. In a favorite hymn we pray, "O for a thousand tongues to sing my dear redeemer's praise" (Charles Wesley, Presbyterian Hymnal, #466). Our praying, praising, worshiping language is a reflection of the overflowing love of God's triune beauty. We come to see the classic Trinitarian language, Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, as a root out of which grows a rich[er] vocabulary of praise. We draw from the deep well of Scripture and from the prayers of the church, past and present, to expand and enrich the ways we speak of God and to God. Thus we hope to deepen our participation in the abundant love of God—the one in three, the three in one.

The sixteenth century Reformation was characterized by a "return to the sources," especially Scripture and the theology of the early church. Yet the reformation of the church did not mean the rejection of all that had gone before. Calvin himself encouraged "an assiduous reading of the ancient writers" (Institutes, IV.xviii.9). Contemporary conversations with other Christian churches have helped Presbyterians to rediscover and reformulate our liturgical roots.

The Service for the Lord's Day in the Book of Common Worship is ordered around four basic movements: "Gathering," "The Word," "Thanksgiving," and "Sending." These basic movements, described in the Book of Order, Directory for Worship, provide a helpful outline for our reflection on worship of the triune God.

and by committing their lives to God's reign in the world.

(Ibid., W-1.1002).

We are called to worship by the triune God whose gracious love invites our grateful response. It is God who calls us to worship, not we ourselves, and so we are beckoned by words of Scripture that voice the fullness of Promise, Salvation, and Peace.

*Holy, holy, holy is the Lord of hosts;
The whole earth is full of God's glory.
I am the Alpha and the Omega, says the Lord God,
Who is and who was and who is to come, the Almighty.*

Prayer and Praise

Joyful, joyful we adore Thee, God of Glory, Lord of Love...(Henry Van Dyke, Presbyterian Hymnal, #464).

*Christian worship joyfully ascribes all praise and honor, glory and power to the triune God. ...
(Book of Order, Directory for Worship, W-1.001).
... In prayer,
through the Holy Spirit, people seek after and are found by the one true God who has been revealed [through] Jesus Christ (Ibid., W-2.1001).*

In worship we seek to embody our calling to glorify and enjoy God forever (The Book of Confessions, The Shorter Catechism, 7.001, 7.111). Our worship begins with praise. "Let everything that breathes praise the Lord!" (Ps. 150:6). We come to worship as creatures in the presence of the Creator, as beloved in the presence of the Lover, as humanity in the presence of the Holy One. We strain to give voice to the holiness, majesty, and mercy of God. And so the vocabulary of praise is expansive, rich, all-embracing.

In praising the triune God we use biblical language, both classic—Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, and surprising—
Mother, Child, and Womb.
We may use words that speaks of the inner relations of the Godhead—Lover, Beloved, Love, and those that speak of the loving activity of the Three among us—Creator, Savior, Sanctifier, Rock, Redeemer, Friend,
King of Glory, Prince of Peace, Spirit of Love.

Heartfelt praise of the triune God marks the beginning of all our worship:

God of all glory,
on this first day you began creation, bringing light out of darkness.
On this first day you began your new creation, raising Jesus Christ out of the darkness of death.
On this Lord's Day, grant that we,
the people you create by water and the Spirit, may be joined with all your works in praising you for your great glory.
Through Jesus Christ,
in union with the Holy Spirit, we praise you now and forever. Amen (Book of Common Worship, p. 45).

Confession and Pardon

*Lord, let your love, love with no end, come over us,
That we may be saved; that we may have light
To find our way in the darkest night,
Let your love come over us ("Shine On Us," Michael W. Smith and Deborah D. Smith).*

The believing community announces the good news of God whose love gives people grace to confess their sin and complicity in brokenness, to repent, expressing sorrow and intention to change, to accept God's forgiveness and extend that forgiveness to another, to forgive the other and accept the other's forgiveness, to work toward reconciliation in brokenness, to trust the power of God to bring healing and peace (Book of Order, Directory for Worship, W-6.3009).

As we offer our praise to the Holy One, we see more clearly our relationship to God, to ourselves, and to one another. In the presence of the Trinity, who is overflowing love, grace, and communion, we are confronted by our own loveless, ungracious, and self-absorbed ways. This overflowing triune love also has the power to overcome our sins of self-devaluation and our feelings of worthlessness. The God who forgives is at once powerful, wise, and tender:

Power of the eternal Father, help me!
Wisdom of the Son, enlighten the eye of my understanding!
Tender clemency of the Holy Spirit, enflame my heart and unite it to yourself! (Catherine of Siena, Prayer 5).

Through the ages, believers have used the threefold Kyrie (Lord, have mercy) in the act of confession, seeking mercy from the triune God. This ancient form is echoed in a contemporary prayer of confession:

Holy God, Maker of us all; have mercy on us.
Jesus Christ, Servant of the poor, have mercy on us.
Holy Spirit, Breath of life, have mercy on us (Iona Abbey Worship Book, p. 23).

In Reformed worship, we approach the holy grace of God with boldness; an assurance of pardon accompanies an act of confession:

The mercy of the Lord is from everlasting to everlasting.
I declare unto you, in the name of Jesus Christ,
You are forgiven.
May the God of mercy,
Who forgives you all your sins,
Strengthen you in all goodness,
And by the power of the Holy Spirit
Keep you in eternal life. Amen (Book of Common Worship, p. 56).

A prayer of confession for Epiphany from the Book of Common Worship concludes with the light of the triune God reflected in the forgiven believer:

God of glory. . .
In your mercy, cleanse us of our sin, and baptize us once again with your Spirit, that, forgiven and renewed, we may show forth your glory shining in the face of Jesus Christ (Book of Common Worship, p. 193).

Confession and Pardon are at once personal and corporate. As we have been forgiven in Christ, so we forgive one another, sharing in the peace of God who is Grace, Love, and Communion (2 Cor 13:13).

THE WORD

*Be Thou my wisdom, and Thou my true word;
I ever with Thee and Thou with me, Lord.
Heart of my own heart, whatever befall,
Still be my vision, O Ruler of all* (trans. Mary E. Byrne, Presbyterian Hymnal, #339).

Prayer for Illumination

Scripture Readings and Psalm Proclamation Affirmation

*The church confesses the Scriptures to be the Word of God written, witnessing to God's self-revelation.
Where that Word [of God] is read and proclaimed, Jesus Christ the Living Word is present by the inward witness of the Holy Spirit. ...
(Book of Order, Directory for Worship, W-2.2001).*

The assurance of forgiveness clears our senses for the hearing of God's Word. A prayer for illumination prepares the gathered community to share in the reading and proclamation of the Word.

Meanwhile, let my mind meditate on it, let my tongue speak of it,
let my heart love it,
let my mouth preach it,
let my soul hunger for it,
my flesh thirst for it, and my whole being desire it, until I enter into the joy of my Lord, who is God one and triune, blessed forever.
Amen (Anselm of Canterbury, Proslogian 789–97).

The Holy Spirit is poured out on the gathered community, hearer and speaker alike. “. . . Through the Holy Spirit we know Christ, who is God and the Son of God, and in the Son we see the Father. The Word is the messenger who makes the divine nature perceptible to us, and the Spirit is the interpreter of the Word” (John of Damascus, Third Apology 18). As the Scriptures are read, the people are invited to take part, and to listen attentively through prayerful responses:

For the Word of God in Scripture,
For the Word of God among us,
For the Word of God within us,
Thanks be to God (Iona Abbey Worship Book, p. 18).

With the sixteenth-century Protestant reformers we believe that “. . . the preaching of the Word of God is the Word of God . . .” (The Book of Confessions, The Second Helvetic Confession, 5.004) and so proclamation lies at the center of our worship. Preaching is a Trinitarian event, enjoining the entire worshipping community. The Word written, the Word incarnate, and the Word proclaimed are spoken, heard, and taken to heart. The very Word that called all things into being calls us into service by the power of the Spirit.

What goes before prepares us for this proclamation; what follows is our response, an affirmation of our common faith. Just as our words, however strong and true, cannot do justice to the triune God, so no creed or confession can encompass the mystery of our triune faith. Yet we continue to preserve and reform and rediscover formulations of what we believe:

Lord, heavenly Father, you are my heart.
Lord Jesus Christ, you are my body.
Lord Holy Spirit, you are my breath.
Lord, Holy Trinity, you are my only refuge and my eternal rest! (Mechthild of Magdeburg, Flowing Light 5.6).

In our preaching, in our hearing, in our understanding, the triune God is for us
Speaker, Word, and Breath.

Baptism

*Living water, never ending, quench the thirst and flood the soul.
Wellspring, source of life eternal, drench our dryness, make us whole. (Sylvia Dunston, Sing the Faith, #2247)*

*In Baptism, the Holy Spirit binds the Church in covenant to its Creator and Lord. ...
Baptism unites the people of God with each other and with the church of every time and place.
Barriers of race, gender, status, and age are to be transcended.
Barriers of nationality, history, and practice are to be overcome.
(Book of Order, Directory for Worship, W-2.3003, 2.3005)*

Trinitarian language entered the worship and theology of the early church through the practice of baptism. Across time and space, Christians have followed Christ's command to baptize new disciples "in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit" (Matt. 28:19). We regard this classical language of baptism not as a magic formula, but as a concrete link to our many brothers and sisters in Christ. We repeat the language of Matthew 28:19 in baptism to demonstrate our ecumenical commitment to join hands with all Christians and to show forth the unity of the one holy catholic and apostolic church. [With the exception of the baptismal formula itself.] [W][w]e are also free to supplement this language with additional Trinitarian images to reflect the expansive grace, love, and communion of the one God.

In accordance with Scripture, though we are many, in baptism we affirm one body and one Spirit, one hope, one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God [and Father of all] (Eph. 4:4–6). The community of the baptized is bound together by the overflowing love of God which unites us to Christ in his death and resurrection, makes us alive to God, and sets us free to live according to the Spirit (Rom. 6–8). The baptism of Jesus reveals the triune presence in the descent of the Spirit and the voice from heaven proclaiming, "This is my Son, the Beloved."

Our baptismal prayer of thanksgiving expresses our joy in the fullness of the triune God's overflowing love:

Eternal and gracious God, we give you thanks.
in countless ways you have revealed yourself in ages past, and have blessed us with signs of your grace.
We praise you that through the waters of the sea,
you led your people Israel out of bondage, into freedom in the land of your promise.
We praise you for sending Jesus your Son, who for us was baptized in the waters of the Jordan, and was anointed as the Christ by your Holy Spirit.
Through the baptism of his death and resurrection, you set us free from the bondage of sin and death, and give us cleansing and rebirth.
We praise you that in baptism
you give us your Holy Spirit, who teaches us and leads us into all truth, filling us with a variety of gifts, that we might proclaim the gospel to all nations and serve you as a royal priesthood.
Pour out your Spirit upon us and upon this water, that this font may be your womb of new birth.
May all who now pass through these waters be delivered from death to life, from bondage to freedom,
from sin to righteousness.
Bind them to the household of faith, guard them from all evil.
Strengthen them to serve you with joy until the day you make all things new.
To you be all praise, honor, and glory;
through Jesus Christ our Savior, who, with you and the Holy Spirit, lives and reigns forever (Book of Common Worship, pp. 411–12).

In the waters of baptism we can see that God is Overflowing Font, Living Water, Flowing River
(BCW, p. 412; Jn. 4:10, 13–14; Jn. 7:37).

When at baptism we remember the stories of salvation, we tell of the God whose faithfulness is known in Rainbow, Ark, and Dove (Gen. 8–9).

THANKSGIVING

*Now thank we all our God, with heart and hands and voices!
Who wondrous things hath done, in whom this world rejoices! (Martin Rinkart, Presbyterian Hymnal, #555)*

Offering

*... As the Holy Spirit has graced each member with particular gifts for strengthening the body of Christ for mission, so worship should provide opportunities to recognize these gifts and to offer them to serve Christ in the church and in the world.
(Book of Order, Directory for Worship, W-2.5002).*

All that we are—in our creation as in our salvation—is a gift from the triune God. With gratitude and thanksgiving, we offer ourselves for service, we offer our prayers for the life of the world, and we offer our gifts for the mission and ministry of Christ.

When we offer our whole lives for God, we commonly speak words of Scripture:

Now there are varieties of gifts,
but the same Spirit;
and there are varieties of services,
but the same Lord;
and there are varieties of activities, but it is the same God who activates
all of them in everyone. (1 Cor. 12:4–6)

These words remind us of the interplay of variety and oneness—in God’s relationships with the community of faith as well as within the church. The call to discipleship comes first in our baptism, and is renewed in the call to participate fully in the household of faith. In the koinonia of the Holy Spirit, the Word of God becomes concrete in our lives and we begin to partake of the divine life and to share in the abundant love of the triune God.

As we hear the divine call, we respond in prayer. In our intercessions, we call on the triune God in language that reflects our deepest longings, desires, and concerns.

Come, Holy Spirit, and bring from heaven a ray of Thy light!
Come, Thou father of the poor, Thou giver of gifts, Thou light of the world, the blessed Comforter, the dear guest of the soul, and its sweetest refreshment;
Thou, our repose in labor, our coolness in heat, our comfort in affliction!
(Bernard of Clairvaux, Prayers, pp. 62-3).

We approach the triune God who has promised to intercede on our behalf (Rom. 8:26--27).

Gracious God, because we are not strong enough to pray as we should, you provide Christ Jesus and the Holy Spirit to intercede for us in power.
In this confidence we ask you to accept our prayers (Book of Common Worship, p. 103).

Prayers of intercession begin to move our hearts outward, toward others, overflowing into the world God loves.

O God of all creation who has come to us in Jesus, lead us in your way of love and fill us with your Spirit.
Choose us to bring good news to the poor, to proclaim liberty to the captives, to bring sight to the blind and set free the oppressed.
So shall your new creation come and your will be done (Iona Abbey Worship Book, pp. 84–85).

God is gracious toward us. Our joyful response is gratitude. And so the offering of material goods has been part of Christian worship since the beginning (Acts 2:42–47). In the act of giving, our gifts are blessed by God and set apart for ministry.

Thou hast accepted the gifts, offerings, and fruits brought unto Thee as an odor of a sweet spiritual smell, and hast been pleased to sanctify them, and make them perfect, O good One, by the grace of Thy Christ, and by the presence of Thy all-holy Spirit (The Divine Liturgy of St. James 38).

As we share our gifts of energy, of prayer, and of money, we are living our faith in the world.

the world the Holy One loves, the world the Powerful Christ came to save, the world in which the Comforting Spirit breathes and blows.

In this act of gift sharing, we recognize the Trinity as

Giver, Gift, and Giving;
Truth, Goodness, and Beauty;
Sun, Light, and Burning Ray.

Eucharist

Here, O our Lord, we see You face to face, Here would we touch and handle things unseen... (Horatius Bonar, Presbyterian Hymnal, #520).

*... The New Testament describes the meal as a participation in Christ and with one another in the expectation of the Kingdom and as a foretaste of the messianic banquet. ...
In remembering, believers receive and trust the love of Christ present to them and to the world; they manifest the reality of the covenant of grace in reconciling and being reconciled; and they proclaim the power of Christ's reign for the renewal of the world in justice and in peace. ...
Brought by the Holy Spirit into Christ's presence, the Church eagerly expects and prays for the day when Christ shall come in glory and God be all in all (Book of Order, Directory for Worship, W-2.4002, 2.4004, 2.4007).*

Having gathered around the Word, and around the Water, we are prepared to gather around the Table. At the table we give thanks, recalling all that God has done for us, we partake of the divine presence, receiving the food of Christ's very self, and we celebrate our oneness with friends and family, neighbors and strangers, through the power of the Spirit. At the table we meet the triune God who welcomes us as Table, Food, and Server (Catherine of Siena, Prayer 12); here we see that God for us is at once Grace, Love, and Communion.

Eucharist is the great thanksgiving.

Eternal God, holy and mighty, it is truly right and our greatest joy to give you thanks and praise, and to worship you in every place where your glory abides.

You revealed your glory
as the glory also of your Son and of the Holy Spirit, three Persons, equal in majesty, undivided in splendor, yet one Lord, one God,
to be worshiped and adored in your eternal glory.
We praise you, Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, great Trinity of power and love, our God, forever and ever (Book of Common Worship, pp.126, 136).

The Lord's Supper is also a grateful remembering of the drama of salvation. We recall Christ's words at the Last Supper, and Jesus' saving death is brought into the present moment for us as we share the loaf and the cup.

Jesus, the true Savior of the world, who died for us and is seated in glory at the right hand of the Father, dwell in your hearts through His Holy Spirit, that you be wholly alive in Him, through living faith and perfect love (John Calvin, Form of Church Prayers 223).

Eucharistic Prayers—The Great Thanksgiving—give voice to the powerful grace of the triune God. The very structure of Eucharistic prayers is Trinitarian, giving thanks for the work of the one God. Our Presbyterian Hymnal (p.13) describes the movement of this prayer. The opening of the prayer “gives thanks appropriate to the occasion, remembering God’s mighty acts of salvation.” This leads to the Sanctus (Holy, Holy, Holy), in which the congregation joins in the praise of the Holy One. Thanksgiving continues, “recalling Christ’s work of redemption and gift of the Sacrament,” concluding with an acclamation that remembers Christ’s saving death and resurrection, once and for all. The third section of the prayer calls upon the power of the Spirit: “The action of the Holy Spirit is sought, and petitions are offered that we may know the unity we have in Christ and be empowered for service. The prayer concludes with praise to the triune God.”

Partaking in this meal changes us, for it is a partaking in the life of the triune God. “The cup of blessing that we bless, is it not a [communion] in the blood of Christ? The bread that we break, is it not a [communion] in the body of Christ? Because there is one bread, we who are many are one body, for we all partake of the one bread” (1 Cor. 10:16–17).

God the Creator, Thou hast made the bread.
 Christ the Redeemer, Thou hast changed it.
 Holy Spirit, the Binder, Thou does convey it:
 bread for our touching, food for our souls:
 Even as our lives are bound together in Thee....
 God the Creator, Thou hast changed us.
 Christ, the Redeemer, Thou hast changed us.
 Holy Spirit, the Binder, Thou does keep us changed:
 Even as now we are bound together in Thee
 (George MacLeod, in A Book of Reformed Prayers, p. 124).

Holy Communion is a celebration here and now, a meal that nourishes our service in the world and that whets our appetite for the heavenly banquet. Participation in Holy Communion creates in us a longing for wholeness, for communion with all creation, for the promise of God’s Shalom.

SENDING

*May the God of hope go with you every day,
 Filling all our lives with love and joy and peace.
 May the God of justice speed us on our way, Bringing light and hope to every land and race (Alvin Schutmaat, Presbyterian Hymnal, #432).*

Charge and Blessing, Dismissal

*Nourished by this hope, the Church rises from the Table and is sent by the power of the Holy Spirit to participate in God’s mission to the world, to proclaim the gospel, to exercise compassion, to work for justice and peace until Christ’s Kingdom shall come at last. ...
 God calls the church in worship to join the mission of Jesus Christ in service to the world.
 As it participates in that mission the church is called to worship God in Jesus Christ, who reigns over the world.
 (Book of Order, Directory for Worship, W-2.4007, 7.1002)*

In Christian worship, the sending is the beginning—the way we live out what we practice in worship (Rom. 12:1). We have been forgiven, we have taken the Word to heart, we have been renewed and refreshed, we have offered what we have and are to the one God who is Giver, Gift, and Giving. The overflowing love of the triune God fills us with spiritual power, compassionate mercy, and creative imagination, preparing us to live in this overflowing love.

Arise, O Spirit of Life, that through Thee we may begin to live;
 descend upon us and transform us into such human beings as the heart of God longs to see, renewed into the image of Christ, and going on from glory to glory.

O God, Thou Supreme Good, make Thyself known to us; through Jesus Christ our Lord.

Amen (Gerhard Tersteegen, in A Book of Reformed Prayers, p. 60).

Just as we gather around the Word and the Font and the Table, so we are sent out to proclaim the good news, to welcome the stranger, and to feed the hungry. The worshipping community is sent forth with a charge.

As you have been fed at this table—go to feed the hungry.

As you have been set free—go to set free the imprisoned.

As you have received—give.

As you have heard—proclaim.

And the blessing which you have received from Father, Son and Spirit go with you

(alt. Iona Abbey Worship Book, p. 189).

As we go from worship into the world, words of blessing and benediction are spoken;

The blessing of God and the Lord be yours,

The blessing of the perfect Spirit be yours,

The blessing of the Three be pouring for you

Mildly and generously,

Mildly and generously (Celtic Vision, p. 248).

The grace of Christ attend you,

the love of God surround you,

the Holy Spirit keep you, that you may live in faith, abound in hope,

and grow in love,

both now and forevermore.

Amen (Book of Common Worship, p. 851).

The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ,
the love of God,
and the communion of the Holy Spirit
be with you all.
Amen!

III. EMBODYING GOD'S OVERFLOWING LOVE

The life of faith is our embodiment of God's overflowing love in the world. Because God is love, the love of God and neighbor becomes the pattern for our life as creatures made in the divine image. "If we love one another, God lives in us, and God's love is perfected in us" (1 Jn. 4:7–12). The Law of Moses insists on the inextricable connection between God's love toward us and our love of others. This wholehearted love is made clear in the Shema:

Hear, O Israel: The LORD is our God, the LORD alone. You shall love the LORD your God with all your heart, and with all your soul, and with all your might. Keep these words that I am commanding you today in your heart. (Deut. 6:4–6)

At the center of both law and gospel is the commandment to embody God's overflowing love in all our relationships. Jesus commanded his disciples to love one another, "By this will everyone know that you are my disciples if you have love for one another." He even taught his followers to love their enemies (Matt 5:44). When asked about the greatest commandment, Jesus recalled the Shema.

"You shall love the Lord your God with all your heart, and with all your soul, and with all your mind." This is the greatest and first commandment. And a second is like it: "You shall love your neighbor as yourself." On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets. (Matt. 22:36–40)

The abundant overflowing love of Giver, Gift, and Giving draws us out of ourselves and into life and love-affirming acts of giving and receiving. As we delight in the glory, majesty, and beauty of holiness, we are drawn into the communion of restored relationship. In gratitude for the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Spirit, we are empowered to live in love, and emboldened to bear witness and to serve. The pattern of our worship shapes the pattern of our lives together. The Spirit's presence in the life of the church creates a community which bears witness to God's welcoming, reconciling, sanctifying, just, sharing, celebrating and blessed love.

Welcoming Love
 Reconciling Love
 Sanctifying Love
 Loving Justly Sharing Love
 Celebrating Love
 Love's Blessing

The following reflections on the embodiment of God's triune love seek to open the scriptures in the way that sermons do. Through a variety of human voices, the Spirit challenges us to embody God's overflowing love.

A. Welcoming Love

"Welcome one another, therefore, just as Christ has welcomed you, for the glory of God" (Rom. 15:7).

When God introduced Eve to Adam, Adam welcomed her with open arms. "... [You are, indeed,] bone of my bones and flesh of my flesh!" he said (Gen. 2:23). Recognizing his fundamental connection to her, his shared humanity with her, he could not help but celebrate her presence, imagining the possibilities for what life would look like together.

We continue to grieve over what happens next. For somehow, in the course of a few verses, Adam moves from exulting in his fellowship with Eve to blaming her for his own violation of God's law. From "bone of bone and flesh of flesh" to "she made me do it! She gave me the fruit! It's her fault" (see Gen. 3:12). The once-beloved Eve, she who shares in the very substance of Adam, is no longer welcome. Fellowship is broken. Lines are now drawn.

What would the world be like if we could get back to the welcoming words of Adam, the fundamental recognition that we share in the same stuff of creaturely existence? What would it mean for us to know that our lives in some sense indwell those of one another as those made in the image of the triune God, that One who is perfectly united even in differentiation?

Of course our conviction and our hope is that the church is a place where we seek to welcome one another with the enthusiasm of Adam meeting Eve. One church gives every visitor homemade brownie mix, wrapped up in a cutely decorated Mason jar. And that's not a bad start, even if it's still a far cry from looking the visitor in the eye and knowing that it is we, only together, who reflect the image of God. The truth is that getting beyond a superficial offering of niceties to the genuine connection of deep welcoming is difficult for us—even impossible for us—because we are divided. We are divided by our denial of sin, by our blaming others for the predicament we find ourselves in. We size people up and evaluate them and stereotype them, keeping them at arms' length rather than truly receiving them.

So how do we get back to that joyful cry of Adam? Our forbears in the faith—as far back as Irenaeus (d. ca. 202)—were fond of putting Adam's words in the mouth of Jesus Christ himself. The one who entered into the womb of Mary, who loved to share a meal with friends and with strangers, who cried out in agony on the cross; this one looks us directly in the eye and says, "you are bone of my bones and flesh of my flesh." We are welcomed as God's beloved because God has entered into fundamental connection with us in the person of Jesus Christ, by the power of the Holy Spirit.

Given that God is simultaneously different from us, how all this works is a mystery. But it is a mystery which is revealed to us, known by us, and to which we are called to bear witness. Convinced of the reality of God's welcoming love, the Apostle Paul extended welcome to Jews and Gentiles, eager for all to know "the plan of the mystery hidden for ages in God who created all things" (Eph. 3:9). He insisted that through Christ, in one Spirit, all have access to the Father. We are, therefore, "no longer strangers and aliens, but ... members of the household of God" (Eph. 2:18–19). The rift has been healed; we are free to welcome one another with open arms.

One pastor does an exceptional job of conveying that the welcoming work of the church is rooted and grounded in the overflowing love of the welcoming, triune God (Eph. 3:17). Every church, of course, wants to be welcoming. But in this church the welcome seems to be oriented in a place where it cannot be robbed by the fragility of our pettiness, our blaming, our sin. The service begins with a processional, a loaf of crusty bread and a beautiful chalice brought down the center aisle, followed by a pitcher of water large enough to need two hands to carry it. The processional ends; the music stops. The pastor goes to the table, her face full of the joy that comes when we have the opportunity to share that great mystery which is the heart of our faith. She breaks the bread, and lifts the chalice. She pours the pitcher of water into the font until it splashes over the sides. Lifting her hands, she looks out at those gathered and greets them with the words, "Welcome home."

B. Reconciling Love

“... While he was still far off, his father saw him and was filled with compassion ...” (Lk. 15:20).

“... In Christ God was reconciling the world to himself ... and entrusting the message of reconciliation to us” (2 Cor 5:19).

In Jesus’ parable of the prodigal, a restless son cuts his ties with his family, leaves home, and squanders his portion of the family treasure. When he loses everything, he decides to return home to ask for his father’s forgiveness. But before the prodigal has a chance to make his plea, his father runs out to embrace him, orders that he be dressed in royal garb, and arranges a feast to celebrate his return. This familiar parable of Jesus describes the unexpected, overflowing, extravagant love of God who works for our reconciliation long in advance of our journey home.

There is, however, a second part of the story that is sometimes overlooked. The elder brother of the prodigal is angry and resentful. He resists being reconciled to his undeserving brother. He refuses to rejoice in the father’s gracious act of reconciliation.

As the second part of the parable suggests, the reconciling love of God arouses resistance. It challenges our sense of moral superiority. It upsets attitudes and practices like racial prejudices and class divisions that keep us at war with God and each other. Like the elder brother we often prefer to justify our separation from others, to nurse our wounds, and to harbor our resentments. We resist the truth that right relationship with God is inseparable from reconciliation with our brothers and sisters.

In addition to arousing resistance, the reconciling love of God is costly. Just as the father of Jesus’ parable spares no expense in bringing about reconciliation with his lost son, so for the reconciliation of the world God in Jesus Christ became obedient unto death. By his own blood Christ has created one new humanity, breaking down all dividing walls, and giving us all “access in one Spirit to the Father” (Eph. 2:18). If we are to participate in the reconciling love of God, there will be a cost. We will have to empty ourselves of the self-righteousness, the abuse of power, and the deadly desire to control others that build walls between us and God and between us and other people. We will have to allow ourselves to be united with our servant Lord by the transforming power of the Holy Spirit.

The parable also teaches that the reconciling love of God is inclusive. It embraces the despised as well as the respected. It includes every aspect of human life: the personal and the communal, the economic and the political, our relationships with friends and our relationships with enemies.

According to the parable of the prodigal and indeed according to the entire biblical witness, the reconciling love of God is both a surprising gift and a high calling. We are all called to the ministry of reconciliation by the reconciling love of God. To be reconciled to the triune God is to be forgiven, made new, given reason to rejoice, and sent into the world as ambassadors of the love of God in Christ by the power of the Holy Spirit.

In a world addicted to violence, the biblical message of the reconciling love of God calls us to be agents of reconciliation in our family, in our church, in our community, and in international relationships. We are called to be peacemakers and to work at settling disputes without recourse to violence. “The church, in its own life, is called to practice the forgiveness of enemies, and to commend to the nations as practical politics the search for cooperation and peace” (The Book of Confessions, The Confession of 1967, 9.45).

The reconciling love of the triune God calls and enables us to embrace those we often exclude because we consider them “other,” “different,” “unworthy,” “the enemy.” When under the prompting of the Holy Spirit we dare to take part in the ministry of reconciliation in response to God’s reconciling love in Jesus Christ for us and for the world, we bear witness to and participate in the very being and activity of the triune God.

C. Sanctifying Love

“... that we may present everyone [complete] in Christ. For this I toil and struggle with all the energy that he powerfully inspires within me” (Col 1:28–29).

The gospels are full of healing stories, accounts of Jesus healing the sick, the lame, the blind, the bent, the broken. Luke tells the story of ten lepers who cry to Jesus for mercy; all ten are healed and cleansed (Luke 17), but only one returns thanks. In the gospels, bodily healing is most often accompanied by some kind of spiritual healing, by forgiveness, newfound faith, the praise of God, the telling of good news. “Your faith has made you well,” Jesus says to one leper, the only one of ten who turned around and said “thank you” to Jesus for making him clean and whole. This man was not only unclean, a leper, an outcast, but a foreigner, a Samaritan. He obeyed Jesus and was cleansed and he came back shouting praise to God. His healing was complete; he was cleansed from the inside out. Spiritual wholeness and physical well-being are connected. Salvation, sanctity, health, and healing are integral to Jesus' ministry. Holiness and wholeness, wellness and well-being go together.

We all have holiness codes. Some people are clean; others are not. To some, holiness has to do with legalism, with outward adherence to rules and regulations. But Jesus said, "it's not what goes into your mouth that makes you unclean, but what comes out" (Matt 15:11, para.). What we say and what we do come from the inside out. Here the words of Jesus and the spirit of the Law are in concert. God looks on the heart. Our bodies are temples of the Holy Spirit. By faith we are made whole slowly but surely; by loving God wholeheartedly—body, mind, soul, and strength—we learn to love as God loves, fully and freely.

Sanctity moves from the inside out. Sanctification is a lifelong process of growth in grace. We are healed, restored, freed, transformed into God's likeness by degrees.

"Now the Lord is the Spirit, and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is freedom. And all of us, with unveiled faces, seeing the glory of the Lord as though reflected in a mirror, are being transformed into the same image from one degree of glory to another; for this comes from the Lord, the Spirit" (2 Cor. 3:17–18).

God's holy love rubs off on us and that holiness, our wholeness, rubs off on others—on neighbors and strangers, on the weak and the strong—through wholehearted love, love that seeks the welfare and well-being of friend and foe, of creatures and of creation itself. It is a holy mystery: we are bearers of divine love and holiness. Our relationship with the holy Trinity enables us to see the world with new insight; suddenly the ordinary becomes sacred; people, time, places are hallowed.

Augustine said, "Love God and do as you please." He knew that if God's love dwells in us we will become more loving; if God's holiness cleanses us, we will become more and more whole; if God's grace fills us grace will grow in us. We will be changed by the gracious love of the triune God making our lives as creatures in the world more holy. We begin to see ourselves and others as saints. Holiness happens from the inside out.

D. Loving Justly

"... And what does the Lord require of you but to do justice, and to love kindness and to walk humbly with your God" (Mic. 6:8).

"And Jesus said, 'Neither do I condemn you. Go your way, and from now on do not sin again'" (Jn. 8:11b).

To do justice ... that's a tough call. A Brief Statement of Faith affirms the justice mandate: "In a broken and fearful world the Spirit gives us courage ... to work with others for justice, freedom, and peace" (The Book of Confessions, 10.4, lines 65–66, 71). Yet age-old conditions are witness to the failure to live and love justly. Justice butts up against power, privilege, and prejudice. The ancient cries for justice are manifold. Habakkuk laments the reality that "... justice never prevails" (Hab. 1:4b). Malevolence compels Esther to speak. Amos voices God's indignation: "... I take no delight in your solemn assemblies. Take away from me the noise of your songs. ... But let justice roll down like waters ..." (Am. 5:21, 23–24).

Put simply, "God don't like ugly!" This African American colloquialism reflects divine displeasure with the ways of the world: "[The Lord] expected justice, but saw bloodshed; righteousness, but heard a cry!" (Isa. 5:7b). Today every part of the world is teeming with systems and attitudes that oppress, destroy and serve as insidious weapons of mass destruction. Hymnist Brian Wren strikes a chord for loving action:

With faith newborn and passionate for justice, together now, we'll travel out from home, to sacrifice the peace of calm uprightness, and struggle for the city of Shalom (Brian Wren, Piece Together Praise).

"Sacrifice" and "struggle"—words that signal hard work, discomfort, and often reflect a voice in the wilderness, radical and standing alone. Jesus rejects laws that cause suffering, laws with loopholes, laws that steal personhood, laws that kill the spirit. When tested, he offers a radical standard of justice. The woman accused of adultery is such a test. The law is clear; adulterers are stoned. The accusers are on firm legal ground. But, while legally correct, are they morally correct? Does their law reflect God's justice?

No! We are called to a higher standard.

“Owe no one anything, except to love one another; for the one who loves another has fulfilled the law. The commandments, ‘You shall not commit adultery; You shall not murder; You shall not steal; You shall not covet’; and any other [divine] commandment, are summed up in this word, ‘Love your neighbor as yourself.’ Love does no wrong to a neighbor; therefore, love is the fulfilling of the law” (Rom. 13:8–10).

Love overflowing is the essence of the Three in One; right relationship, complete and perfect within the Trinity draws us to ponder all our relationships and our participation in creating a just society. Through the lens of love, the woman’s accusers fail the test, “Is this God’s justice?”

In the movie, A Few Good Men, two marines obey orders to punish Willie, a comrade, but perceived as a weakling, a snitch, and an embarrassment to the squad. Their actions result in Willie’s accidental death and they are dishonorably discharged. Crushed by the verdict, one marine cries, “We followed an order. What did we do wrong? We didn’t do anything wrong!” The other responds, “Yeah, we did. We were supposed to fight for those who couldn’t fight for themselves. We were supposed to fight for Willie.”

God’s justice is full of compassion and reflects a fierce bias toward the weak. God calls us to fight for the Willies of the world—women, children and men, vulnerable and invisible. They rummage through trashcans; they stand in line for jobs and food; they are below the poverty line; they are across the border; they are in prison; they are in debt. They are our neighbors, but through indifference we do not see them. Indifference may become cruelty when justice is meted out to strangers or enemies. Is cruelty ever permissible as a means to an end? Is this God’s justice?

Loving justly affirms Jesus’ blessing and sending to go and sin no more. Loving justly is more than mere lip service to an ideal. It means that love, even in radical forms, is the only order that we obey. It requires sacrifice and struggle for Shalom.

This is the justice of the triune God—the prospect of that peaceful kingdom where the wolf and lamb feed together, the cow and the bear graze, and where none will hurt or destroy on God’s holy mountain (Isa. 65:25). God gives us the mandate; Jesus gives us the example; the Spirit gives us courage ... to do justice—a tough, but high calling.

E. Sharing Love

“And God is able to provide you with every blessing in abundance, so that by always having enough of everything, you may share abundantly in every good work” (2 Cor. 9:8).

What might a community that faithfully reflects God’s intentions for human relationships look like? The apostle Paul suggests that it would look like a human body, constituted by its various parts and indistinguishable from them (1 Corinthians 12, Romans 12, Ephesians 4). Christ is the head of this body, in which Christians are literally members of one another (Romans 12:5). This unprecedented interconnectedness came to be called koinonia in the New Testament, and took on very tangible characteristics (Acts 2:42–47). The early Christians shared everything with one another: love, time, property, possessions, energy, wisdom, compassion, assistance. In this reciprocal sharing, the body and its members received power to display the triune God’s overflowing love to the world, in fulfillment of the risen Christ’s commission to make disciples (Matt. 28:18–20). “... And day by day the Lord added to their number those who were being saved” (Acts 2:47).

Koinonia is sharing, participation, partaking, communion. As the early Christians reflected more deeply on the nature of God’s triune life in the light of Jesus’ incarnation, life, suffering, crucifixion, resurrection, ascension, and return, they came to see that the unparalleled depths of communion that they experienced every day in their shared life with one another were actually the overflow of God’s own love. This overflowing love existed eternally in God as the mutual participation, self-giving, vulnerability, interdependence, and responsibility shared among the divine persons. As the divine koinonia, it was the source of all human koinonia. [Jesus prayed that this might be so: “I ask not only on behalf of these, but also on behalf of those who will believe in me through their word, that they may all be one. As you, Father, are in me and I am in you, may they also be in us, so that the world may believe that you have sent me” (Jn 17:20-21).] By the Holy Spirit, this mutually self-giving divine life graciously overflowed in a sharing of God’s limitless generosity and abundance with us in Jesus Christ.

In our life together in the church, the body of Christ, the implications are staggering. Partaking of the very life of God, we participate unreservedly in one another’s lives. Freely sharing God’s abundant blessings with others, we reflect God’s infinite self-giving in attitudes and acts of human generosity.

We partake regularly together of God’s extravagant grace in worship, sharing in the very body and blood of Christ, and miraculously being interconnected with one another as we receive the bread and the cup (1 Cor. 10:16–17).

We give generously and sacrificially of the abundant resources God places at our disposal, recognizing that we and they belong to God, and that we hold all of God's benefits in trust as stewards, to be administered for the benefit of others.

We open ourselves transparently to one another in our faults, weakness, and suffering, accepting the vulnerability this entails in the light the cross sheds on God's eternal vulnerability to the world's pain. We do this in the conviction that God's grace is sufficient, and God's strength is made perfect in weakness and suffering (2 Cor 4:6–7, 12:9).

We practice interdependence in our relationships, rejecting the pretense of self-sufficiency. We are freed to “need” one another without co-dependence, and to give and receive from others, recognizing that our destinies are inseparably connected and we stand or fall together.

We willingly assume responsibility for one another, especially the weak, the marginalized, and the needy, placing our resources as needed at the disposal of others with whom we are inseparably connected as co-sharers of the divine generosity.

The overflow of God's Trinitarian love does not stop with the Christian community. The pattern of koinonia in the early church was one of ever-expanding circles of sharing, ever-broadening boundaries of participation, giving, vulnerability, interdependence, and responsibility for one another, all humankind, and ultimately the whole creation. As the triune God's extravagant love continues to overflow in the church today, we receive power to share the abundant love of God in the world, in word and deed. Thus the Lord adds to our numbers daily, as we grow in grace and embody God's love in tangible deeds of self-giving before a world desperately in need of the Good News.

F. Celebrating Love

“The time is surely coming, says the LORD, when the one who plows shall overtake the one who reaps, and the treader of grapes the one who sows the seed; the mountains shall drip sweet wine, and all the hills shall flow with it” (Am. 9:13).

The wine at the wedding had run out. And for some reason, Jesus' mother goes to him to report this social faux pas. Jesus says, “Why are you bothering me, mother? My hour has not yet come.” But there just happened to be six huge stone water jars lying around—20 to 30 gallons each. Jesus has them filled with water and taken to the master of ceremonies. Then the celebrating really starts. Jesus has provided the best wine of the whole night—and an unbelievable amount of it! (Jn. 2:1–10).

John tells us that this was the first “sign” that Jesus is truly the Son of God (Jn. 2:11). Turning water used for washing and purification into an overabundance of wine. What a sign! We are astonished. But perhaps a little voice in us wonders, Couldn't Jesus have done something more useful? Was this really the most responsible stewardship of his ministry resources? We live so seldom in a celebrating mode. We parcel out our time and energy; we calculate and juggle; we try to figure out what other people can do for us and in turn what they may be trying to get from us. Jesus' extravagant gesture at the Cana wedding changes this whole landscape. It takes us from calculating to celebrating. Jesus' sign is proof that the messianic age is dawning. The reign of God is near! And when this promised reign comes in fullness, it brings good things with it. It brings an abundance like you've never seen. It brings joy.

We celebrate the extravagance of God's love for us already now. Even before we know our own name, our Maker claims us. Even before we knock, our Gracious Host opens the door for us. Even before we ask for food, our Good Shepherd spreads a table before us. The creative, redemptive, sustaining love of God takes the shape of extravagant hospitality towards all creation. We are intended to live joyfully and generously, assured of God's gracious abundance.

God's extravagance towards us frees us to be generous, even extravagant, in our dealings with others. We can respect and celebrate the creation as God's good gift, rather than depleting it for our own selfish purposes. We can enjoy our relationships with other people because we're not always angling for what we can gain from them. God's generosity towards us frees us to think about our time and money differently. We don't have to spend our days anxiously building bigger barns to protect all our treasure. We can throw off the burden of ceaseless productivity, so we have time to keep Sabbath, time to devote to praising God and renewing our bodies and souls. “Come to me, all you that are weary and are carrying heavy burdens,” Jesus says, “and I will give you rest.” (Matt. 11:28)

The joy of the triune God is poured out on creation, so that all creation will rejoice. Salvation is feasting in the kingdom of God, where people will come from north, south, east, and west to sit at table together. Their celebration will satisfy the yearnings of body and spirit. Their fellowship will shatter boundaries of language and culture and past enmity. In Jesus' fellowship meals, in the homes of Pharisees or of Gentiles, surrounded by thousands or alone with his disciples, hints of this joyful communion begin to heal the pain and brokenness of human life. His followers glimpse the glorious end that awaits them: celebrating together in God's new realm. The picture of Jesus we get at this extraordinary wedding at Cana tells us that God is not interested just in our failings and sorrows, but in our joys as well. Our lives, both now and forever, are to reflect the fullness of God's perfect joy. “Everything is ready! Come to the ... banquet!” (Matt. 22:4)

G. Love's Blessing

Genesis 12:1–3; 22:1–19

Luke 1:26–38; 2:25–35

“Now the Lord said to Abram, ‘Go from your country and your kindred and your father’s house to the land that I will show you. I will make of you a great nation, and I will bless you ...’”

“The angel said to her, ‘Do not be afraid, Mary, for you have found favor with God. And now, you will conceive in your womb and bear a son, and you will name him Jesus.’ ... Mary said to the angel, ‘How can this be, since I am a virgin?’ The angel said to her, ‘The Holy Spirit will come upon you, and the power of the Most High will overshadow you; therefore the child to be born will be holy; he will be called Son of God.’”

The blessing of God is a vocation.

It calls us, as it called Abram, to leave all that is familiar for what is yet to be revealed.

It calls us, as it called Mary,
to be a people who, by the favor of God,
bear the divine Word,
as it is conceived in us by the Holy Spirit.

“I will bless you, and make your name great, so that you will be a blessing.”

“Then Mary said, ‘Here am I, the servant of the Lord; let it be with me according to your word.’”

The blessing of God requires of us a choice:

to be blessing, as Abram,
not for ourselves but for others;
to ‘let it be’ with us, as with Mary,
according to God’s word.

“I will bless those who bless you, and the one who curses you I will curse; and in you all the families of the earth shall be blessed.”

“Then Simeon blessed them and said to ... Mary, ‘This child is destined for the falling and the rising of many in Israel, and to be a sign that will be opposed so that the inner thoughts of many will be revealed.’”

Being blessed is no private matter.

It binds us to each other in ways none of us seeks, for beholding God’s blessing in another compels from us a choice.

Like the neighbors of Abram we will respond with blessing or curse.
Indifference is not an option.

Like the neighbors of Mary’s son, in our response we disclose our hearts.

God will be the judge.

The blessed one, like Abram, must only remain true.

“[God] said, ‘Take your son, your only son Isaac, whom you love, and go to the land of Moriah, and offer him there as a burnt offering on one of the mountains that I shall show you.’”

“And a sword will pierce your own soul too.”

Blessing comes with a price.

Abram, now Abraham, must be willing to sacrifice the blessing as burnt offering to his God.

The handmaid of the Lord, blessed among women will herself give birth to blessing, and it will tear apart her heart.

Being blessed is having our identity, who we are in relation to God and each other, formed by Love's gifts, Love's promises, Love's claims.

Being blessed is being made blessing, an embodiment of the image in which we are made:
giver, gift, giving;
lover, beloved, love.

H. Conclusion: Our Hope

Our theological reflection begins and ends with the love of God made known to us in Jesus Christ:

"For God so loved the world ..." (Jn. 3:16).

Only divine love can give meaning to our preaching and our practice:

"If I speak in the tongues of mortals and of angels, but do not have love, I am a noisy gong or a clanging cymbal" (1 Cor 13:1).

In the end, it is that overflowing love that keeps us and holds us:

"...neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor rulers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor powers, nor height, nor depth, nor anything else in all creation, will be able to separate us from the love of God in Christ Jesus our Lord" (Rom 8:38–39).

And so our prayers embody our hope that all may rejoice in the boundless love of the triune God:

*[We] pray that, according to the riches of [God's] glory, [God] may grant that you may be strengthened in your inner being with power through [the] Spirit, and that Christ may dwell in your hearts through faith,
as you are being rooted and grounded in love.
[We] pray that you may have the power to comprehend, with all the saints, what is the breadth and length and height and depth, and to know the love of Christ that surpasses knowledge, so that you may be filled with all the fullness of [] God []* (Eph. 3:16–19).

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 13-05

Advice and Counsel on "The Trinity: God's Love Overflowing"—From the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns.

The Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC) commends the task force for its study of the doctrine of the Trinity in Presbyterian theology and worship, and the significant advance it exhibits in Presbyterian discussions about the gender of God. The ACWC thanks the task force for its attention to the ways in which God may be understood and described expansively with regard to gender. The ACWC advises The Trinity: God's Love Overflowing be approved with the following amendment [inserted text is shown with an underline and with brackets]:

Recommendations to the 217th General Assembly (2006):

“5. encourage the Office of Theology and Worship to work with Congregational Ministries Publishing and/or Presbyterian Publishing Corporation, [in cooperation with Women's Ministries.] to make available liturgical resources based on The Trinity: God's Love Overflowing.”

The ACWC advises that, when liturgical resources for the paper are prepared, specific examples of alternative baptismal formulas are provided.

Rationale

The original recommendation to constitute a task force to study the doctrine of the Trinity was approved by the 212th General Assembly (2000), and came through the Congregational Ministries Division. Recommendation 2 reads: “Direct the General Assembly Council, through its office of Theology and Worship, to constitute a task force (2001–2003) to study the doctrine of the Trinity in Presbyterian theology and worship, [with particular attention to the need to recover the terms and images that refer to the being of the persons of the Trinity, as stated in “Definitions and Guidelines on Inclusive Language,”] and that the task force report to the 215th General Assembly (2003)” (Minutes, 2000, Part I, p. 176).

The Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns has a responsibility to monitor the use of expanded language for God and inclusive language for the people of God. All of the liturgical resources developed to accompany The Trinity: God's Love Overflowing should be done cooperatively with Women's Ministries to ensure the use of both expanded and inclusive language.

Reformed theologians, such as Bill Placher and Aurelia T. Fule, have argued in favor of an expansion of the traditional idiom: “I baptize you in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit, One God, Mother of us all.” Just as we have come to expand and paraphrase the words of institution in communion, so we might expand our baptismal words, such as:

- N. I baptize you in the name of God who is your Father, your Mother, your Rock and your Maker.
I baptize you in the name of Jesus Christ, God's Son, your Savior and Lord, and Your dearest Friend.
I baptize you in the name of the Holy Spirit, your Comforter, your Advocate, and your In-dweller.

ACREC COMMENT ON ITEM 13-05

Comment on Item 13-05—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC).

Item 13-05 deals with “The Trinity: God's Love Overflowing.” It was submitted by the Office of Theology & Worship.

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) concurs with the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC), with additional comment.

The ACREC strongly urges that the content of all liturgical and study resources created in association with the Trinity paper embrace and emerge from the multicultural context of our denomination. Those creating the resources should reflect the racial, ethnic, and cultural diversity present in our denomination, and the resources themselves should be translated into multiple languages for those constituents who worship and study in languages other than English.

[The assembly approved Item 13-07. See pp. 10–11.]

The Committee on Theological Education recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) grant permission to the following theological institutions to celebrate the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper in 2007–2008: Austin Presbyterian Theological Seminary, Columbia Theological Seminary, University of Dubuque Theological Seminary, Louisville Presbyterian Theological Seminary, McCormick Theological Seminary, Pittsburgh Theological Seminary, Princeton Theological Seminary, San Francisco Theological Seminary, Johnson C. Smith Theological Seminary in cooperation with the Inter-denominational Theological Center, and Union Theological Seminary & Presbyterian School of Christian Education.

Rationale

Beginning in 1989 the General Assembly became the governing body that grants permission to celebrate the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper at Presbyterian theological institutions. The 216th General Assembly (2004) granted permission for celebrations in 2005–2006.

Item 13-08

[The assembly approved Item 13-08. See pp. 11–12.]

The Committee on Theological Education recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) approve William J. Carl III as president of Pittsburgh Theological Seminary.

Rationale

General Assembly approval of Dr. Carl's appointment as president of Pittsburgh Theological Seminary is required by "A Plan for the Governance and Funding of the Theological Institutions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)," approved by the 198th General Assembly (1986) and by the seminary's current bylaws.

On Wednesday, July 21, 2005, the Pittsburgh Theological Seminary Board of Directors named the Reverend Dr. William J. Carl III as its next president. He assumed his duties as president on February 1, 2006. Carl previously served as pastor of the 1,700-member First Presbyterian Church in Dallas, Texas, a position he had held since 1983.

Born in Broken Arrow, Oklahoma, in 1948, Carl grew up in Bartlesville, Okla., and graduated from the University of Tulsa with a bachelor's in religion and philosophy. He earned his master's of divinity from Louisville Presbyterian Theological Seminary where he was a Patterson Fellow in New Testament Greek. In 1977, he received his doctor of philosophy in rhetoric and communication from the University of Pittsburgh where he also taught as an instructor. He was ordained in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in 1973.

Before coming to Dallas, Carl served as associate professor of homiletics and worship and instructor of New Testament Greek at Union Theological Seminary (Va.). Thirty years ago, he was an instructor at Pittsburgh Seminary and more recently served as an adjunct professor at Austin Theological Seminary.

He has lectured at Oxford, Princeton, Boston University, the Moscow Theological Academy, the Kerala United Theological Seminary in India, and dozens of other divinity schools and conferences both here and abroad. Carl has published five books and more than fifty scholarly articles and reviews.

Carl served as president and interim executive director of Greater Dallas Community of Churches and while with First Presbyterian, led the largest social ministry program in the nation serving the poor and dispossessed in downtown Dallas. For twenty-two years, he has preached to as many as half a million people via television across Texas every third Sunday.

Carl is the longest tenured pastor in the 150-year history of the First Presbyterian Church in Dallas, having just surpassed the record of former pastor Andrew Pickens Smith who was a chaplain in the Battle of Gettysburg.

Carl has been involved in the community for more than two decades having served on the boards of Austin College, Texas Health Resources, Children's Medical Center, Presbyterian Healthcare Resources, and Louisville Presbyterian Theological Seminary.

Carl serves as an ethics consultant for Duke University Medical Center and lectures on the brain and cognitive neuroscience at medical schools and conferences. He has served as guest chaplain of the United States Senate and had a sermon entitled, "So Help Me God" published in The Congressional Record at the request of Senator Howard Baker.

Item 13-09

[The assembly approved Item 13-09. See pp. 11–12.]

The Committee on Theological Education recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) approve the following Covenant with Auburn Theological Seminary:

A COVENANT BETWEEN THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH (U.S.A)
AND AUBURN THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

I. Purpose

The purpose of this covenant is to define the nature and scope of the relationship mutually agreed to by Auburn Theological Seminary (hereinafter "Auburn") and the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

II. Brief History of the Relationship

In 1818, the Synod of Geneva, comprised of the presbyteries of Geneva, Cayuga and Onondaga, presented an overture to the General Assembly of the PCUSA "requesting the advice of the General Assembly relative to the establishment of an academical and theological seminary, which the synod proposes instituting within their bounds ..." (Minutes, PCUSA, 1818, p. 25; or The Presbyterian Constitution and Digest, p. 1865). Andover and Princeton were unable to supply sufficient ministers to the rapidly-developing "northwest," which was experiencing a flood of immigration, and the synod deeply felt the urgency of establishing such an institution.

The General Assembly responded to this overture as follows:

Resolved, That the Assembly are not prepared at present to give an opinion or advice on the subject of the overture from the Synod of Geneva, which contemplates the establishment of an academical and theological seminary, believing the said synods are the best judges of what may be their duty in this important business. (Minutes, PCUSA, 1818, pp. 25-26; or The Presbyterian Constitution and Digest, p. 1865)

The Assembly's response no doubt reflected its preoccupation with the support and development of the seminary at Princeton, which it had founded in 1812. Having heard this response, the Synod of Geneva, during a special session at Auburn, New York, on August 6, 1818, voted to found a seminary "for the purpose of completing the education of pious young men for the gospel ministry."¹ The Synod then petitioned the Legislature of the State of New York for appropriate action, which it took on April 14, 1820, when it chartered "the Presbyterian Theological Seminary" at Auburn.

¹Charter, State of New York, Laws of 1820, chapter 215: AAN ACT to incorporate the Presbyterian Theological Seminary, established by the Synod of Geneva, at Auburn, in the County of Cayuga. Passed April 14, 1820. "Reprinted in" Auburn Theological Seminary: By-Laws adopted May 21, 1940, Original Charter of 1920, with Subsequent Amendments of 1906 - 1917 - 1939," p. 19.

In the controversies over doctrine, polity and mission that soon developed in the Presbyterian Church, Auburn stood firmly with the New School camp. The General Assembly of the PCUSA of 1837 passed the Excinding Act, which declared that congregations and presbyteries formed under the terms of the Plan of Union (1801) had no part of or standing in the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America. The Assembly thus excluded by non-recognition four synods (Genesee, Geneva, Utica and Western Reserve) and twenty-eight presbyteries (Minutes, PCUSA, 1837, p. 444).

A convention of New School representatives met at Auburn in mid-August, 1837. Among other documents, it produced the “Auburn Declaration,” which Robert Hastings Nichols called “the most important official or semi-official doctrinal formulation of the Presbyterian Church since the Adopting Act {of 1729}.”² The convention also agreed to send commissioners from the excinded presbyteries to the General Assembly in 1838; they were not seated.

By 1869, the old and new school churches had reunited, both north and south, although most of the southern churches remained a separate denomination. The Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A. recognized and approved Auburn Seminary’s relation to the presbyteries of New York State, and, through them, to the denomination.

In 1870, all the other seminaries in the northern United States that were founded under local auspices agreed to shift their relationship to the General Assembly, giving the Assembly veto power over faculty appointments. Auburn refused to enter into this relationship, maintaining that its presbytery-elected board already gave the church sufficient control, and after about forty years of attempts on the Assembly’s part to change the Board’s decision, the matter seems to have been dropped.

In 1916, the Auburn Board declared the “unbroken friendship” between the Seminary and the Assembly. The Board further declared Auburn’s “organic connection with the presbyteries in Central and Western New York, maintained now as from the first; which through these ninety-eight years of history, the Seminary has sought to serve with all fidelity; and which it intends to serve in coming years with fullest service and devotion.”³

In 1924, the Rev. Henry Sloane Coffin and various Auburn faculty spearheaded the drafting of the Auburn Affirmation, a plea for theological tolerance in the midst of the fundamentalist-modernist controversies.

Throughout all these years, Auburn’s annual report to the General Assembly was regularly received and included in the Minutes.

In 1939, Auburn took up residence on the New York City campus of Union Theological Seminary (hereinafter “Union”). Auburn retained its endowment and form of governance. The proposed agreement between Auburn and Union was included in the Minutes of the 1939 General Assembly of the PCUSA. One of its provisions assured that the agreement

... shall not alter or modify Auburn’s relationship with the presbyteries which elect members of its Board of Directors, nor with the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, nor the General Assembly thereof; and Auburn hereby reaffirms its loyalty to, and present relationship with, such presbyteries, Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, and the General Assembly thereof. (Minutes, PCUSA, 1939, part I, p. 256)

Auburn’s removal to New York City caused a temporary chill between the General Assembly and the Seminary. Auburn’s annual report did not appear in the Minutes beginning in 1940. Reporting resumed in 1947, however, and continued into the early 1980s.

III. The Relationship Between Auburn and Union

Auburn is an independent theological institution chartered in New York State. It operates in partnership with Union, but it has never merged with Union. In this partnership, Union conducts degree programs; Auburn conducts non-degree programs for clergy and laity on behalf of both institutions. Auburn does not currently grant degrees, although it retains its authority to do so. Auburn does, however, provide instructional and other program for Union’s Presbyterian students who are matriculated for degrees.

IV. Recent Developments Leading to the Negotiation of a Covenant

Since 1980, Auburn has been an active participant, as a corresponding member, in the Committee on Theological Education (hereinafter “COTE”) and its’ predecessor. At the time of reunion in 1983, Auburn asked the Special Committee on Theological Institutions to clarify Auburn’s status as a Presbyterian theological institution. That committee, appointed under the Articles of Agreement to propose a governance and funding arrangement for the eleven institutions listed in the Articles (of which Auburn was not one), handed questions about Auburn to the Committee on Theological Education, which included this issue in the mandate of the Special Committee to Study Theological Institutions (SCSTI), appointed in 1988. SCSTI recommended and the General Assembly concurred that COTE should investigate the feasibility and desirability of a covenant relationship between Auburn and the General Assembly.

V. Parties to the Covenant

The parties to this covenant, Auburn Theological Seminary, governed by its Board of Directors, and the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, (U.S.A.), operating as a governing body, are distinct entities. They are independent, neither being controlled by the other.

VI. Responsibilities Under the Covenant

A. Auburn affirms its commitment in the following areas:

1. Academic Matters

a. Auburn’s mission is to strengthen religious leadership through non-degree educational programs, through its program for Union’s Presbyterian students, and through research conducted at its Center for the Study of Theological Education. In all these arenas, relationships with Presbyterian congregations, presbyteries and other governing bodies will continue to be a priority for Auburn, which also has strong ecumenical and multifaith commitments.

b. Auburn will continue to provide resources for Presbyterian students enrolled for degrees at Union Theological Seminary in New York. These provisions assure a qualified lecturer for a course or courses in the polity, worship and confessions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.); financial aid for Presbyterians enrolled at Union; a program of counseling, informal denominational instruction and fellowship for these students; and assistance in matters related to candidacy and placement.

c. Auburn will continue to administer the Presbyteries’ Cooperative Examinations, designating a proctor as appropriate.

d. Auburn will continue to provide an extensive program of non-degree continuing theological education for clergy and of theological education for laity, both on its campus in New York City and at other sites in New York State and elsewhere. As in the past, Auburn will give priority to local programs planned with presbyteries and Presbyterian congregations in New York State and, in response to invitations, in other parts of the United States.

e. Auburn will continue to conduct research on theological education through its Center for the Study of Theological Education. The Center is the only educational research center with a major focus on theological education. It provides research and reports that benefit a wide spectrum of schools and faith traditions. Auburn will continue to make research findings available to the Committee on Theological Education, other interested Presbyterian Church agencies, and Presbyterian theological institutions, as appropriate.

2. Cooperation

a. Auburn will continue to participate in cooperative ventures undertaken by the other Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) institutions. As is the case with the other institutions, this cooperation is voluntary.

b. The seminary will submit reports to the Committee on Theological Education (or its successor), for informational purposes only. Such reports shall ordinarily include information about finances, enrollment and graduates, changes in the Charter and By-Laws, appointments to the teaching staff, elections to the Board of Directors, and a brief narrative account of activities.

c. The Presbyterian Church, from time to time, turns to its related theological institutions as an educational and theological resource for various purposes. Auburn’s Centers for Church Life, Multifaith Education, and the Study of Theological Education will offer such resources when feasible, especially in their areas of expertise, such as continuing education, lay education and research on theological education.

2. Financial Support

Auburn will not seek an institutional financial allocation from the Theological Education Fund or its successor.

3. Development Activity

a. Auburn will focus its efforts to raise current operating funds in the New York State presbyteries that elect members of Auburn's Board of Directors and in other areas to which it has relationships, such as field sites where Auburn has conducted programs, as well as congregations linked to Auburn through those who participate actively in Auburn's campus-based programs, Union graduates, current students and Auburn Board members.

b. Auburn recognizes the importance of the Theological Education Fund for support of the preparation of ministerial leadership. Therefore, when soliciting congregations of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), Auburn will continue to encourage support for the Theological Education Fund. The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), recognizing that Auburn has in fact, throughout its history, been a significant partner in the education of the ministers of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), affirms its commitment in the following way:

4. Membership on the Committee on Theological Education (or its successor)

This covenant relationship with Auburn will give to that institution voice but not vote on the Committee on Theological Education or its successor. Travel and lodging expenses associated with attendance of Auburn's representative at meetings of the Committee on Theological Education (or its successor) shall be reimbursed by the Presbyterian Church in accordance with its reimbursement policies.

5. Public Identification of Auburn

Auburn will be publicly identified, in relevant announcements of the Committee on Theological Education and other entities that refer to theological institutions related to the Presbyterian Church, as a "theological institution related by covenant to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)," with a special notation that Auburn does not receive an institutional allotment from the Theological Education Fund. For financial aid for studies purposes, Auburn will be understood as a Presbyterian-related seminary.

6. Representation of Auburn at Presbyterian Church Meetings

Presbyterian students at Union Seminary (for whom Auburn Seminary has a special responsibility) will be represented at meetings of the General Assembly on an occasional basis as specified in the Standing Rules of the General Assembly. Auburn will be represented at occasional Presbyterian Church gatherings on the same basis as other institutions that are in a covenant relationship with the General Assembly.

7. Auburn's Autonomy

Notwithstanding any other provision of this Covenant, the General Assembly acknowledges and agrees that the Board of Directors of Auburn is elected in accordance with its charter from New York State. Also notwithstanding any other provision of this Covenant, the General Assembly acknowledges and agrees that, in the event of the dissolution or winding up of the affairs of Auburn or any of its successors, or the insolvency or bankruptcy of Auburn or any of its successors, or any merger, consolidation or other change in the legal structure or status of Auburn or any of its successors, none of the rights, privileges, powers, purposes or property, and none of the liabilities, of Auburn or any of its successors shall be distributed to, assigned to or otherwise revert to or be appropriated by the General Assembly or the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) or any successor of either or both on the other hand, all such rights, privileges, powers, purposes and property, and all such liabilities, shall be disposed of or transferred as the Board of Directors of Auburn or any of its successors shall determine in its sole discretion, in accordance with the laws of the United States and the State of New York.

VII. Amendment

Changes in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) or in the circumstances of Auburn may affect portions of this covenant. Either party to this covenant, Auburn and the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) as represented by the Committee on Theological Education, or their successor entities- -may request revision of parts or all of this covenant during the term of this agreement. Amendment to this covenant may be executed by mutual agreement of the Board of Directors of Auburn and the General Assembly.

VIII. Term

The term of this covenant shall commence when formally approved and signed by the designated parties and shall expire on December 31, 2012. The covenant may be renewed by mutual consent.

IX. Formal Approval

This covenant shall be effective upon formal approval by the Board of Directors of Auburn and by the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and when signed by the Moderator and the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and by the President and the Chair of the Board of Directors for the Seminary.

Rationale

In its report, approved by the 205th General Assembly (1993), the Special Committee to Study Theological Institutions recommended that Auburn Theological Seminary relate to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) through the Committee on Theological Education (COTE). The special committee judged that existing categories of membership on the Committee on Theological Education did not adequately serve in respect to Auburn Theological Seminary. Accordingly, the special committee recommended the adoption of a unique agreement between the General Assembly and Auburn. The Committee on Theological Education concurred with the recommendation and developed a covenant agreement with the Board of Auburn Theological Seminary, which was approved by the 208th General Assembly (1996). The original covenant between the General Assembly and Auburn expired on December 31, 2001. The covenant was renewed in 2001 and expires on December 31, 2006.

The COTE commissioned a Covenant Renewal Committee consisting of Jim Kitchens (chair), Sue Dallam, and Ted Wardlaw to visit Auburn Seminary September 15–16, 2005. The visit included interviews with staff and board members of the seminary. On October 24, 2005, COTE's Covenant Renewal Committee recommended renewal of the above amended Covenant to the Executive Committee of COTE, which it approved and forwarded to the entire committee with one additional amendment, number nine (9) below. On October 26, 2005, COTE voted to recommend to the 217th General Assembly (2006) the Covenant as amended and written above. The ten (10) changes from the previous covenant (2001–2006) are listed below.

1. Section II, paragraph 9, for historical accuracy, should now read: "In 1924, the Rev. Henry Sloane Coffin and various Auburn faculty..."

2. Section IV, paragraph 1, sentence 1, to clarify the date when participation began, should now read, "Since 1980, Auburn has been an active participant, as a corresponding member, in the Committee on Theological Education (hereinafter "COTE") and its' predecessor.

3. Section VI under "Academic Matters" paragraph 1, last sentence should now read, "In all these arenas, relationships with Presbyterian congregations, presbyteries and other governing bodies will continue to be a priority for Auburn, which also has strong ecumenical and multifaith commitments." "Multifaith" more accurately describes the commitments of Auburn than the previous term "interfaith."

4. Section VI under "Academic Matters" paragraph 2 should now read, "These provisions assure a qualified lecturer for a course or courses in the polity, worship and confessions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)." The sentence more accurately describes Auburn's relationship to the hiring of faculty at Union.

5. Section VI, under "Academic Matters" paragraph 5, sentence 3 should now read "faith traditions" instead of "denominations." Again, this more accurately describes the institutions and organizations Auburn serves.

6. Section VI under "Cooperation," paragraph 3, sentence 2 should now read "Auburn's Centers for Church Life, Multifith Education, and the Study of Theological Education will offer such resources when feasible, especially in their areas of expertise, such as continuing education, lay education and research on theological education." The Centers at Auburn are now the conduit for the resources described.

7. Section VI under "Financial Support" should now read "Auburn will not seek an institutional financial allocation from the Theological Education Fund or its successor." This change would permit Auburn to receive discretionary funds from the TEF when approved by COTE under the established guidelines. The discretionary fund is currently 2.5 percent of the fund.

8. Section VI, B., 2., line 4 should now read “institutional allotment.” See “Financial Support” recommendation immediately above.

9. The following sentence should be added to Section VI, B., 2.: “For financial aid for studies purposes, Auburn will be understood as a Presbyterian-related seminary.”

10. Section VIII: Term should now read “shall expire December 31, 2012.” This extends the covenant from a five to a six-year term to coincide with the biennial General Assembly schedule.

Item 13-10

[The assembly approved Item 13-10. See pp. 11–12.]

On the Development of a Denominational E-Hymnal—From the Presbytery of Miami.

The Presbytery of Miami overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the PC(USA) to approve the research and development for an internet-based denominational resource for congregational singing as a part of the ongoing work of the Presbyterian Association of Musicians, the Office of Theology and Worship, and the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation.

Rationale

Congregational singing is a foundational practice of Christian faith. The PC(USA) and its antecedent bodies have equipped the church in every generation with resources for congregational singing. The PC(USA) and its predecessors have produced a hymnal about every twenty years (1990, 1972, 1955, 1933, 1911, etc.), and exploration is already underway of the need for and the development of a new denominational hymnal for the PC(USA). In the formulation of these resources, the church has sought to express our theological tradition, respect our theologies of music, preserve our heritage of hymnody, and honor new expressions of faith, and has utilized the best media available at the time. The reality of U.S. congregational life is that there is a multivalence of media, musical styles, instrumentation, languages, and leadership being explored and employed in public worship. This multivalence shows no sign of diminishing and, indeed, may be the work of the Holy Spirit.

Internet technology already exists and continues to advance to enable local congregations to use music in a customized format. Other denominations already have begun to use these new technologies to enhance their congregational singing. These technologies afford the church unprecedented opportunities to provide flexible resources that will support the lively, present-day conversations about faithful congregational singing practices. We believe it is prudent to use the best technology available in the development of a new congregational singing resource. This resource should have the ability to embrace a multitude of musical styles and cultures to be shared throughout the denomination, without the time lag of the twenty-year hymnal cycle. This resource could also be added to and subtracted from in the future in order to keep pace with the ever-increasing availability of good congregational music resources.

Concurrence to Item 13-10 from the Presbytery of the James.

GAC (CMD) COMMENT ON ITEM 13-10

Comment on Item 13-10—From the General Assembly Council (Congregational Ministries Division).

Item 13-10 calls on research and development for an internet-based denominational resource for congregational singing as part of the ongoing work by the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation, the Office of Theology and Worship, and the Presbyterian Association of Musicians.

The General Assembly Council advises that Item 13-10 be referred for consideration to the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation, the Office of Theology and Worship, and the Presbyterian Association of Musicians. The 216th General Assembly (2004) directed these three entities to carry out a feasibility study for publishing a new denominational hymnal. The 217th General Assembly (2006) will act on the recommendations of this joint report.

ACREC AND ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 13-10

Advice and Counsel on Item 13-10—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) and the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC).

Item 13-10 calls for the creation of internet-based denominational resources for congregational singing. It was submitted by the Presbytery of Miami.

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) and the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC) advise that Item 13-10 be approved, and urges the following:

- Great care must be taken to ensure that the personnel entrusted with creating the internet-based resource will reflect the rich diversity
- Every effort should be made to ensure that the groups and individuals creating the resource will be proactive in hearing from and including the traditions and congregational singing resources valued by a wide diversity of cultures within the PC(USA). This would include, but would not be limited to, translation of these resources into languages such as Korean, Spanish, Arabic, and other languages as appropriate.
- The group should also research how to assist churches that do not presently have sufficient technology to benefit from internet-based resources.

Rationale

Any resource provided by the denomination should be relevant to and reflective of all the cultures present in it. Also, ACREC encourages the creators of this proposed resource to be mindful of the churches that do not yet have internet access because of cost or because of regional infrastructure deficiencies.

The Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC) is charged with the responsibility to monitor the use of expanded language for God and inclusive language for the people of God. All liturgical resources in the PC(USA) should be developed reflecting the commitment of the church to be a fully inclusive body, expressing a broad understanding of God.

Item 13-11

[The assembly approved Item 13-11 with amendment. See pp. 11–12.]

The Presbyterian Publishing Corporation (PPC) Board of Directors recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) do the following:

1. Cause to be prepared a new denominational hymnal for corporate worship.
2. Direct that PPC proceed to constitute a hymnal committee of between 8–12 persons[, with at least two (2) members being under age 25,] to make selections for the new hymnal. Such persons would be selected in cooperation with the Office of Theology and Worship and the Presbyterian Association of Musicians.
 - a. The PPC would bear the expense of the hymnal committee, all other development costs, publication, and marketing and promotion without recourse to the mission funds of the PC(USA).
 - b. The hymnal committee would be encouraged to exhibit sensitivity to the need for inclusive language, the diversity of worship styles regnant in the church today, the richness of multicultural and global forms of worship, the enduring value of traditional hymnody, the importance of the Psalter, and the distinctiveness of the Reformed theological tradition.
 - c. The PPC would recruit and hire competent editorial and marketing staff to serve as liaisons to the hymnal committee, the Office of Theology and Worship, and the Presbyterian Association of Musicians, and to oversee the work of publishing the new hymnal.
 - d. The PPC would give serious attention to the possibility of including liturgical material in the new hymnal in order to enhance its utility in a variety of worship contexts, as suggested by the feasibility study.

e. The PPC would explore publication of the new hymnal in a variety of media as befits the worship practices of the church at the time of publication [with developing an e-hymnal being the top priority].

f. The PPC would report its progress in the development of the new hymnal to the 218th and 219th General Assemblies (2008 and 2010 respectively) and present the final selection of hymns and liturgical material to the 220th General Assembly (2012).

Rationale

This recommendation is in response to the following referral: 2004 Referral: Item 08-01. Recommendation to Research Feasibility of a New Presbyterian Hymnal; Feasibility Report to 217th General Assembly (2006)—From the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation (Minutes, 2004, Part I, pp. 15, 595).

Presbyterian worship should reflect as fully as possible the richness of our apostolic and Reformed heritage.

A new denominational hymnal has been produced by every successive generation of Presbyterians in the course of the last century.

The last denominational hymnal debuted in 1990.

A new denominational hymnal could not properly be developed and published before 2013.

The 216th General Assembly (2004) “authorize[d] the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation, the Office of Theology and Worship, and the Presbyterian Association of Musicians to begin research into the feasibility of a new Presbyterian hymnal; that the feasibility report be given to the 217th General Assembly (2006), ... designate[d] the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation as the prospective publisher of the next Presbyterian hymnal ...” (Minutes, 2004, Part I, p. 595).

Such feasibility was gauged through an extensive survey conducted by the General Assembly Council’s Office of Research Services.

The PPC will fund the development of a new denominational hymnal exclusively by means of its own cash reserves.

The development and publication of a new denominational hymnal (expense estimated to be $5,085,000) will have no impact whatsoever on the mission funds of the denomination.

Above all, the renewal of worship is of critical importance to the vitality of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

Item 13-12

[The assembly approved Item 13-12. See pp. 11–12.]

The General Assembly Council, upon recommendation of its Congregational Ministries Division, recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) authorize for two years the celebration of the Lord’s Supper at Ghost Ranch in Abiquiu and in Santa Fe, at Montreat Conference Center, and at Stony Point Center in connection with the Presbyterian conferences and retreats held at those centers; at worship celebrations held at the Presbyterian Center in Louisville, Kentucky; and at the following events:

- Presbyterian Association of Musicians conferences: June 18–July 1, 2006 (Montreat); July 9–14, 2006, Westminster Worship and Music Conference in Westminster College with Richard and Martha Crofts as conference directors; July 23–28, 2006, PAM West Worship and Music Conference at Pasadena Presbyterian Church with Fannie Scott as conference director.
- Association of Retired Ministers Spouses and Survivors (ARMSS) conferences: June 14–17, 2007, in Denver, Colorado; June 5–8, 2008 (at Stony Point Conference Center).
- Presbyterian Older Adult Ministry Network (POAMN) conferences—April 25–28, 2007, in Zephyr Point, Nevada; April 23–26, 2008, in Heartland Center, Missouri.

*Item 13-14

[The assembly approved Item 13-14. See pp. 11–12.]

Request 06-10. On Amending G-2.0200 to Correct the Latin Translation—Coordinator, Office of Theology and Worship, GAC.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) direct the Stated Clerk to add the following footnote to G-2.0200:

“An alternative translation of the Latin phrase, ecclesia reformata semper reformanda, given above is, ‘The church reformed, always to be reformed’ according to the Word of God, and the leading of the Holy Spirit.”

Rationale

Latin scholars dispute how to translate the phrase, ecclesia reformata semper reformanda, found at the end of G-2.0200, as well as in G-18.0100. Since including the phrase in the Book of Order, the phrase has increased in popularity and use, being used to express what is widely considered to be a hallmark of Presbyterian theology.

The phrase itself is difficult to translate because of the difference between Latin and English grammar. It is in the passive voice, rarely used today. It is a form called “gerundive,” a term known primarily to scholars and grammarians.

The response of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution to the request recognizes that the phrase can be variously translated without rendering obsolete those banners and other usages since the translation entered our Book of Order in 1983 at reunion.

An additional problem is how the phrase has been interpreted. The focus is on how God reforms the Church, “according to the Word of God and the call of the Spirit.” Only to the degree that these two agencies combine does the church grow into what the Lord of the Church wants it to be.

Letter of Request as Received by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

The first four chapters of the Book of Order are a treasure, providing the church with significant theological resources for its faith and life. Preliminary Principles, The Church and Its Confessions, The Church and Its Mission, and The Church and Its Unity give voice to a profound ecclesiology that calls the church to faithfulness, reminding us of who we are and whose we are.

Because the first four chapters of the Book of Order are central to the church’s faith and life, it is crucial to ensure that their principles are articulated clearly and accurately. In Chapter II, The Church and Its Confessions, the Book of Order mistranslates the Reformation motto, ecclesia reformata semper reformanda—“The church affirms ‘Ecclesia reformata, semper reformanda’ that is, ‘The church reformed, always reforming,’ according to the Word of God and the call of the Spirit” (G-2.0200). This mistranslation seriously distorts the original intention of the phrase, the way the phrase has functioned within the Reformed tradition, and the trajectory of G-2.0200 itself.

Latin scholars and church historians are unanimous in their judgment that reformanda is gerundive and passive rather than participial and active. In plain English, that means the word should be translated “to be reformed” rather than “reforming.” Thus, the whole would be rendered, “the church reformed, always to be reformed.” The passive voice makes it clear that the church is not the agent of its own reformation; “always reforming” implies that the church reforms itself, or worse, that the church is always changing itself!

Latin grammar is confirmed by the longer version of the motto: ecclesia reformata semper reformanda secundum verbum dei—“the church reformed, always to be reformed according to the word of God.” That is to say, the church is the recipient of God’s action, reforming the church in accordance with the Word of God in the power of the Holy Spirit.

More could be said, but I hope the ACC will consider recommending that the translation be corrected, by amending G-2.0200 to read “The church affirms ‘Ecclesia reformata, semper reformanda,’ that is, ‘The church reformed, always to be reformed.’ according to the Word of God and the call of the Spirit.” Alternatively, the ACC may wish to consider including the fuller version of the motto so that the amended text would read, “The church affirms ‘Ecclesia reformata, semper reformanda secundum verbum dei,’ that is, ‘The church reformed, always to be reformed according to the Word of God’ and the leading of the Holy Spirit.”

Item 13-15

[The assembly approved Item 13-15. See pp. 11–12.]

The Presbyterian Publishing Corporation Board of Directors recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) confirm the reelection of Davis Perkins to a fourth, four-year term as president and publisher of Presbyterian Publishing Corporation.

Rationale

The Presbyterian Publishing Corporation Board of Directors unanimously reelected Dr. Davis Perkins to a fourth, four-year term as president and publisher of Presbyterian Publishing Corporation at their meeting on September 22–24, 2005. The General Assembly Council was petitioned at their February 2006 meeting to concur with the reelection and did so unanimously.

*Item 13-16

[The assembly approved Item 13-16. See pp. 11–12.]

The Presbyterian Publishing Corporation recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) approve an amendment to the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation's Deliverance Document (Organization for Mission) and Amended and Restated Bylaws of the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation.

Rationale

These changes are to clarify the board's role in regard to publishing decisions. The Presbyterian Publishing Corporation (PPC) Board of Directors voted at the June 2004 meeting to make the following change to the Bylaws of the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation in Article III(B) Rights of Directors to add: "The Directors shall act only as a Board of Directors and the individual directors shall have no power as such."

Additionally, the Board of Directors recommends a change to the Deliverance Document so that provision (g) will be replaced as follows: "Editorial decisions are made by the staff of the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation in fulfillment of the goals expressed in the Mission Statement, in furtherance of the functional activities delineated in (f), and in accord with the values of intellectual inquiry and rigor regnant in Reformed tradition. The President and Publisher informs the Board of Directors on a regular basis about forthcoming titles. The Board holds the President and Publisher accountable for the quality, character, and balance of the Publishing Corporation's offerings."

Item 13-Info

A. Office of Theology and Worship: A Report to the Church

The Office of Theology and Worship is bringing two major theological studies to the General Assembly for its approval and for wide use throughout the church. "Invitation to Christ" is a major study of sacramental theology and practice that makes specific recommendations for the renewal of sacramental practices in congregations. "The Trinity: God's Love Overflowing" explores the love of the Triune God theologically, liturgically, and homiletically, and provides guidance for the faithful use of Trinitarian language in the church's life.

Theology and Worship staff continue to work with persons from across the church on many other referrals from previous General Assemblies, including studies of the Belhar Confession, the theological understanding of the relationship between Christians and Jews, language for the ministry of the whole people of God and the ordered ministries of the church, possible revision of the Directory for Worship, possibilities for a new hymnal, inclusive language confessional resources for worship, and much more.

Thanks to generous grants from the Lilly Endowment, the Office of Theology and Worship is engaged in two significant initiatives that are designed to strengthen pastoral leadership in the church. The "Company of New Pastors" begins to work with groups of seminary students in the middle of their second year of theological studies and continues to work with them through the first four years of their parish ministry. The Company of New Pastors nourishes patterns of Christian formation that encourage the deeply theological core of the pastoral vocation. "Re-Forming Ministry" brings together groups of pastors, theological faculty, and governing body officials to engage in deep, sustained exploration of the nature and mission of the church. Re-Forming Ministry groups overcome the usual separation of these three ministerial groups so that they can work collegially to provide theological guidance to the whole church.

Lilly Endowment funded programs work in concert with ongoing responsibilities of the Office of Theology and Worship. The "Company of Pastors" is a voluntary community of more than 600 Presbyterian ministers who take on a set of spiritual, theological, and vocational disciplines. The Quarterly journal Call to Worship: Liturgy, Music, Preaching & the Arts, "Sacramental Ethics," and the "Emerging Worship" initiative provide resources for pastors, musicians, and educators that can broaden and enrich congregational worship. The Theology and Worship Occasional Papers and Church Issues Series provide timely resources for pastors and sessions. Engagement in national and world Faith and Order consultations, the Lutheran-Reformed Theology Committee, the World Alliance of Reformed Churches' theology department, and dialogues with Pentecostals, the Catholic Church, and others ensures PC(USA) participation in the theological life of the whole church.

Much more could be said about the ministry of the Office of Theology and Worship, but the purpose of this report is not merely to list programs. It is far more important to ask what the Office of Theology and Worship has learned about the faith and life of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) through its broad range of theological and liturgical work, and to ask what this suggests about the direction of future efforts.

Theological studies, work with pastors and other congregational leaders, and ecumenical engagements all indicate that at this point in its life, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) must find ways to articulate basic elements of the gospel in vibrant, incisive ways. This need and opportunity does not call for abstract speculation about fine points of doctrine. Rather, ours is a time that cries for ministers and members alike who know and speak the shape of Christian faith with clarity and power. The church lives in a culture that is in desperate need of the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Spirit. Yet the church's "cultural disestablishment" has weakened its capacity to proclaim the good news in ways that attract the interest of a culture that imagines it knows all about "Christian religion."

Communication strategies, management techniques, increased funding, and "meeting people's needs" are not adequate to the task before the church. What is required of us is serious, sustained, churchwide attention to the core of Christian faith and life. Scripture, the church's experience in diverse times and places, and our theological heritage are essential resources for a new commitment to persistent theological, ethical, and ecclesial work that can renew the church's faith and faithfulness.

Serious and sustained exploration of Christian faith is not absent from the church. It is taking place in many congregations, presbyteries, and pastors' groups. However, these locations of deeply theological inquiry remain disconnected from one another, lacking common purpose. The experience of the Office of Theology and Worship indicates that ministers, elders, deacons, and members are able, willing, and even enthusiastic about the possibilities for shared exploration of the gospel that will make possible a new clarity in the gospel's proclamation.

B. Committee on Theological Education Agency Summary

1. Assigned Responsibilities

The Committee on Theological Education (COTE) has the responsibility for developing and maintaining a comprehensive plan for theological education from the perspective of the whole church. The committee seeks to identify, develop, and propose strategies for a denomination-wide approach to theological education. The committee serves as an advocate for theological education, seeking to support the seminaries and to strengthen them for their mission in the world. The Committee on Theological Education can be seen as a two-way communication link between the denomination and its graduate theological institutions. Voting members of the committee include thirteen people elected to represent the church at large and a representative from each of the ten seminaries related directly to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). Corresponding members of COTE, who serve with voice but no vote, include: representatives from Auburn Theological Seminary and from the Evangelical Seminary of Puerto Rico (both institutions related to the General Assembly through covenant agreements negotiated every five years); a representative of the Omaha Presbyterian Seminary Foundation and representatives of two non-Presbyterian seminaries.

2. Accomplishments

a. Interschool and Seminary/Church Cooperation

In cooperation with the Interschool and Mission Cooperation Subcommittee of COTE, the PC(USA) seminaries continue to seek creative ways to work more closely together and in collaboration with other entities of the denomination. Currently, the seminaries are cooperating on interschool projects designed to raise awareness of the ministry as a vocation among college and university students. The COTE contributed moneys to the Advocates for Ministry Program in 2005, a network of eight pastors visiting annually over thirty colleges and universities to invite more than 1,500 faculty-identified students to consider a call to pastoral ministry. The COTE continued to be members of the advisory board of the Presbyterian expression of the Pastoral Leadership Search Effort (PLSE), an ecumenically cooperative project that seeks to empower congregations to identify youth and young adult members who have gifts for pastoral ministry and to plug them into a network of communication and resources. Seminary faculty, staff, and students and the staff of the office of theological education are also involved in a variety of projects in cooperation with various offices representing all three divisions of the General Assembly Council (including the General Assembly Council's Mission Work Plan), the Office of General Assembly, and the Board of Pensions.

A task group with representation from the Presbyteries' Cooperative Committee on Examinations for Ordination, Leadership and Vocation, and COTE continued to make progress on addressing issues of mutual concern. Recommendations made by the task group are being implemented by the various entities and by a ministry staff team that was established in 2003. Continuing collaboration of the three entities is expected.

The COTE sponsored and coordinated a PC(USA) Seminary Faculty Consultation in October of 2005. A planning team of the seminaries chief academic officers was convened. With the assistance of office of theological education staff, the team assembled more than fifty Presbyterian-related seminary faculty and five members of the Presbyteries' Cooperative Committee on Examinations for a three-day consultation. The consultation had three major outcomes: mutual enrichment of teaching approaches and strategies across seminaries, conversation with the Presbyteries' Cooperative Committee on Examinations to identify continuities and discontinuities between the manner in which candidates are being tested in the standard ordination exams, and clarification of strengths and weaknesses of distance education and educational technology that enables it. Next steps are now being considered to further this work.

The Office of the General Assembly, San Francisco Theological Seminary, and COTE continue to sponsor a class for seminarians entitled "Presbyterianism: Principles and Practices" during General Assembly each year. Each January COTE also sponsors, in cooperation with Louisville Presbyterian Theological Seminary and the General Assembly Council, a January-term course for seminarians entitled "Leaders for a Connectional Church: Congregations and the General Assembly." With the help of presbyteries and seminaries, the office of theological education has encouraged committees on preparation for ministry to urge candidates under their care to take advantage of these opportunities to learn firsthand about our denominational program and polity.

Some of the groups of faculty and staff representing the various schools that have come together for mutual planning and information sharing each academic year including the institutions' presidents, deans of student affairs, financial aid officers, continuing education staff and faculty, development officers, placement officers, communication directors, admission officers, field education directors, ethics and social witness faculty, urban ministry professors, and academic deans. There was also a consultation on racism in theological education sponsored by the PC(USA) office of justice and compassion.

b. Funding for Seminaries Related to the PC(USA)

Implementation and interpretation of the Theological Education Fund (1% Plan), which is the sole source of denomination-wide support for the ten PC(USA) seminaries and the Evangelical Seminary of Puerto Rico, continues to be an important task for COTE and the office of theological education. In 2004, approximately 20 percent of PC(USA) congregations made voluntary contributions to the Theological Education Fund (TEF). As a result, $2,362,983 in TEF moneys were distributed to eligible schools in 2005 according to a formula developed and monitored by the COTE Institutional Review Subcommittee on which only members-at-large sit. The TEF helps underwrite quality theological education at our seminaries for students who return to serve our churches in desperate need of pastors equipped for service.

"For Generations to Come: Seminaries and Churches Together" is the theme for interpretation of the seminaries on behalf of the Theological Education Fund. The Theological Education Funding Network is made up of more than 140 enthusiastic representatives from presbyteries and synods. Participation at network training conferences continues to grow. Three TEF area facilitators and sixteen regional representatives continue to work on a contract basis to make possible improved regional coordination for the TEF Funding Network. Pastors, clerks of sessions, and designated contact persons in PC(USA) congregations received interpretive materials about our seminaries and requests for support of the Theological Education Fund.

In cooperation with the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation, active promotion of the Theological Schools Endowment Fund has continued to grow at a modest pace. The Theological Schools Endowment Fund provides opportunity for individuals to contribute moneys to benefit our Presbyterian seminaries through gifts and bequests. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation manages this fund.

c. Charter Changes in Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Theological Institutions

One of the governance functions assigned to COTE by the Report of the Special Committee on Theological Institutions approved by the 198th General Assembly (1986) is the reporting of charter changes by the individual schools to the General Assembly. Two seminaries reported changes in the charters or other constitutional documents during 2005.

McCormick—Changes were made in the Constitution and Bylaws of McCormick Theological Seminary in ways to reflect changes in board committees to better reflect our Mission, to eliminate a mandatory retirement policy, and to strengthen the conflict of interest statement.

Johnson C. Smith—At its meeting on April 13, 2005, the Board of Johnson C. Smith Theological Seminary (JCS) approved a motion amending the bylaws to create the position of assistant treasurer and add the Audit Committee as a Standing Committee. These changes are intended to improve the operations of the seminary and to enable the board of trustees to better meet its fiduciary responsibilities.

d. Reports from Individual Institutions

The Committee on Theological Education brings to the assembly a narrative report from each of the ten seminaries related to the PC(USA), Auburn Theological Seminary, the Evangelical Seminary of Puerto Rico, and the Omaha Presbyterian Seminary Foundation.

(1) Austin Presbyterian Theological Seminary

Austin Seminary added three new faculty members: Monya Stubbs in New Testament studies; Jennifer Lord in homiletics; and David White as the C. Ellis and Nancy Gribble Nelson Associate Professor of Christian Education. Faculty members Ellen Babinsky and Timothy Lincoln became associate deans in the areas of student services and institutional effectiveness; James Currie assumed full-time leadership of the Houston Extension program. The 2005 President's Colloquiums discussed the PC(USA)'s consideration of divestment in companies in Israel, and the Theological Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church report. Two new faculty chairs were established: the Dorothy Vickery Chair in Homiletics and the Gene Alice Sherman Chair in Sacred Music. The Mabee Foundation issued a $2 million challenge grant to complete the seminary's five-year Centennial Campaign.

(2) Columbia Theological Seminary

Master of Divinity applications have increased 60 percent in four years. New students in 2005 include seven receiving Fund for Theological Education fellowships, four national Ministry Fellows, and three receiving Congregational-Based Recruitment fellowships. A $2 million gift has endowed a chair honoring professor emeritus Wade Huie. The endowment provides for a third professor in preaching and homiletics. The Doctor of Ministry program is offering courses at Montreat, and Lifelong Learning is offering youth ministry certification in partnership with the Presbytery of Greater Atlanta. Faculty and administrative appointments include Kathy Dawson, Christian education; Martha Moore-Keish, theology; David Bartlett, New Testament; John White, dean of students/vice president, student services (effective January 2006); Kim Richter and Charles Miller, interim directors of the Lay Institute of Faith and Life and the Spirituality program, respectively. Three professors were named to faculty chairs: Charles Campbell, preaching and homiletics; Kathleen O'Connor, Old Testament; and Marcia Riggs, Christian ethics. Shirley Guthrie, professor emeritus of systematic theology, died in October 2004. His book Christine Doctrine is considered one of the most important works in contemporary Protestant theology.

(3) University of Dubuque Theological Seminary

The University of Dubuque Theological Seminary is using distance learning to expand its efforts to nurture faithful lay leadership for the church. In the summer of 2005, the seminary, supported by a generous grant from the Luce Foundation, inaugurated the Native American Commissioned Lay Pastor Program. This program, working closely with presbyteries across the nation, is using both residential and distance learning to prepare commissioned lay pastors for Native American congregations. Similarly, the seminary, in the summer of 2006, will inaugurate a pilot Distance Learning Master of Arts in Religion Program. This program will use both residential and distance learning to provide graduate-professional education to laity to nourish their faith and encourage vibrant, joyful congregations.

(4) Louisville Presbyterian Theological Seminary

Following a 2005–06 enrollment of its largest incoming class in three years, Louisville Seminary is poised and encouraged to continue its endeavor toward nurturing this schoolhouse of the church into an interracial, interdenominational, international, and interdependent koinonia of reconciliation. Currently it is focused on three promising faculty searches, the diligence of strategic visioning, aggressive multicultural recruiting, filling the urgent need for small church pastors, and aiming our resources toward our core mission: educating men and women for the continued ministry of Jesus Christ. In these ways, Louisville Seminary continues to celebrate and reinforce its historic Presbyterian Heritage and Reformed Tradition.

(5) McCormick Theological Seminary

In May 2005, McCormick Theological Seminary's Board of Trustees adopted a comprehensive strategic plan that incorporated valuable input from a broad representation of stakeholders. At this same meeting, the board also approved a ten-year financial plan that calls for a continued decrease in the endowment's draw, enhanced fundraising efforts, and fiscal management goals to ensure long-term growth and benefits for McCormick. These efforts were conducted in conjunction with the institutional self-study process currently underway to prepare for the seminary's formal accreditation review in 2006. Also of note, Lilly Endowment awarded a grant of $1.9 million to McCormick in December 2004 for AADVENT, a new program to encourage, support, and challenge new generations of Asian American young adults to consider and pursue calls to Christian ministries.

(6) Pittsburgh Theological Seminary

Pittsburgh Theological Seminary has witnessed a transition in leadership. As of February 1, 2006, Carnegie Samuel Calian retired after twenty-five years of remarkable leadership. The seminary has welcomed William J. Carl III as its next president. Carl comes to the seminary after twenty-two years as pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in Dallas, Texas. The seminary renovated two key spaces on campus. The rare collections area of the Barbour Library was updated to both better preserve the resources and provide a pleasant research area. A central meeting room in Long Hall received air conditioning, a cosmetic facelift, and technological enhancements including equipment to deliver distance education.

(7) Princeton Theological Seminary

The Board of Trustees elected the Reverend Dr. Iain R. Torrance as sixth president of Princeton Theological Seminary, effective July 1, 2004, and completed a major governance review in May 2005. The review and revision of the curriculum begun in the spring of 2005 will continue into 2006, and an overhaul of the Ph.D. program is planned. Westminster John Knox Press becomes the publishing agent of Theology Today with the April 2006 issue, and Professors James Kay and Gordon Mikoski are the new editor and book preview editor, respectively. A major master planning process is underway, with the first steps to include the renovation of Speer Library and construction of an adjoining addition and the razing and replacement of the seminary's Charlotte Rachel Wilson apartments in West Windsor Township with new apartments.

(8) San Francisco Theological Seminary

At San Francisco Theological Seminary (SFTS) the new academic year brought a new curriculum into being. After several years of planning, the faculty has begun to implement an approach to teaching and learning that emphasizes and supports the integrative aspects of education. On both the San Anselmo and Pasadena campuses, the Master of Divinity curriculum has been strengthened to better reflect the SFTS Mission Statement's commitment to the "education of students in spiritual formation, critical theological reflection, and the skills and arts of ministry." The new curriculum builds on strength. Added courses in spirituality, vocational formation, and ministry underline and enhance SFTS' ability deliver on the promise of its tag line, training "whole leaders for the whole church."

(9) Johnson C. Smith Theological Seminary

Over the past several months, the seminary has been engaged in some interesting activities, which have been quite meaningful. At the May 2005 Commencement Service, we awarded The Reverend Donnie Rufus Woods the honorary Doctor of Divinity degree. Rev. Woods is a 1985 graduate of the seminary. Recently he was elected as the first African American to serve as the executive presbyter/stated clerk of the Presbytery of Charleston Atlantic (Charleston, S.C.). We celebrated the retirement of Dr. Melva Wilson Costen from the position of Helmar Emil Nielson Professor of Music and Worship. Dr. Costen is the widow of the late Reverend James H. Costen, a former dean of Johnson C. Smith Seminary and a former Moderator of the General Assembly, Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). Finally, the board of trustees voted to implement a fundraising campaign to raise $14 million for our first building on the campus of Interdenominational Theological Center, for scholarship aid, and for other endowments.

(10) Union Theological Seminary and Presbyterian School of Christian Education

The first students from Union-PSCE at Charlotte have completed studies and begun ministry in local congregations. One is Troy Braswell, who earned the Master of Divinity degree and was ordained and installed as pastor of Long Creek Presbyterian Church near Kings Mountain, N.C. In the three years since inception, enrollment at Union-PSCE at Charlotte has climbed to more than 85 students, under the care of 14 presbyteries. Together, Union-PSCE students in Richmond, Va., and Charlotte, N.C., number more than 400. The vast majority of students study in the Master of Divinity or Master of Arts in Christian education degree programs, which are offered at both campuses.

(11) Auburn Theological Seminary

Auburn Seminary's Center for the Study of Theological Education achieved a major milestone this year. With the help of a challenge grant from Lilly Endowment Inc., it raised $1 million for the endowment of the center's work. With grants from Lilly and other gifts, more than $4 million has now been raised and the goal of $5 million is in sight. The Auburn Center is the only research institute in the world that focuses its full attention on theological schools. Though it studies seminaries, rabbinical schools, and divinity schools of all kinds, Presbyterian institutions are a special focus and often are partners in the center's work.

(12) Evangelical Seminary of Puerto Rico

One of the most significant progresses at the Evangelical Seminary of Puerto Rico during 2005–2006 was our assessment for the Periodic Review Report to the Middle State Commission of Higher Education. It represented our effort to engage in areas very significant for the institution. The seminary was commended on completing this process in a comprehensive and candid way. Several areas were assessed:

(a) Governance and administrative affairs: we revisited our institutional and governance structures and their relationship to one another.

(b) Financial and budgetary issues: the seminary responded to several fiscal challenges and focused on fewer critical strategic plans. In light of its fiscal situation, the seminary reset its institutional strategic goals from 19 to 7 in order to project achievable goals.

(c) Enrollment management, academic planning, library and technology.

(d) Outcomes assessment. We hope that our effort to improve the multiple areas of theological education of the seminary prove helpful to further meet our challenges and build for the future.

(13) Omaha Presbyterian Seminary Foundation

The Presbyterian Theological Seminary at Omaha, which closed at the request of the General Assembly's Committee to Study Theological Institutions in 1943, continues as the Omaha Presbyterian Seminary Foundation (OPSF) in 2005. The purpose is similar to that of the former teaching seminary, though OPSF has no resident faculty, student body, or campus. The foundation today provides scholarships for seminary students; sponsors continuing education programs for ordained ministers, commissioned lay pastors, others in leadership positions in the Presbyterian church; and conducts an annual School for Pastors at Hastings College. The Mission of the Omaha Presbyterian Seminary Foundation is to seek, develop, and support excellence in Christian leadership through the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

In 2005, the Foundation contributed the following amounts to help underwrite leadership development programs for those serving in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.): Continuing education programs sponsored by PC(USA) entities and the foundation, $133,658; aid to students attending PC(USA) seminaries, $90,500; grants to seminaries and other church entities, $2,000; for a total of $226,158.

In the nearly 62 years of service to the church, the foundation has funded its programs with income derived from its endowment. In 1996 the board of directors voted to actively seek funds to strengthen and increase its ministry in addition to relying on endowment income. To that end, in 2004 a director of development was added to the staff.

C. Presbyteries' Cooperative Committee on Examinations for Candidates Agency Summary

The Office of Examination Services and the Presbyteries' Cooperative Committee on Examinations for Candidates (PCCEC) have been engaged in several interesting projects since the summer of 2004.

In June 2005, the staff and several members of the PCCEC joined forces with the Office on Church Leadership and Vocation and the Office on Theological Education to offer a conference for members of committees on preparation for ministry, members of committees on ministry, and presbytery staff members. The conference, which focused on ways to develop healthy churches and healthy pastors, was well-received, and plans are underway for another conference in July 2007.

Three members of the PCCEC and staff served on a joint task force with church leaders and other General Assembly staff to respond to a referral from the 212th General Assembly (2004). The referral asked the PCCEC and other offices involved with the preparation for ministry process to determine whether there is cultural bias in the process.

An exciting event was the first-ever joint meeting of faculty from PC(USA) seminaries and members of the PCCEC. The conference took place in October 2005, and conversations continue as to how seminaries and the PCCEC can work together.

The members of the Presbyteries' Cooperative Committee on Examinations for Candidates gathered in April 2004 in San Juan, Puerto Rico, and April 2005 in Austin, Texas, for their annual meetings. The Reverend Dr. James Goodloe IV continued his service as moderator of the PCCEC. David Cortes-Fuentes (San Francisco Theological Seminary - Southern Campus), Hewan Han (Salem Presbytery), Dean McBride (Union-PSCE in Richmond), and Fred Lyon (National Capital) completed their terms of service in 2004. Belinda Windham (New Covenant) and Stan Hall (Austin Seminary) completed their terms of service in 2005. Nancy Emerson (Wabash Valley) and Rick McClain (Mid-Kentucky) completed their service in 2006. Syngman Rhee (Union-PSCE in Richmond), Ernie Kimmel (New Brunswick), Mark Douglas (Columbia Seminary) and Michelle Bartel (Hanover College) were elected as new members of the committee through the General Assembly Nominating Committee process. Steve Ranney (Denver), Allen Fischer (The James), John Severson (Twin Cities), and Isaiah Phinisee (Charleston-Atlantic) were elected as new members of the PCCEC from four different reading groups.

At the request of seminaries and students, the schedule for the administration of the four written exams was changed. Beginning with the 2005–2006 school year, written exams are now offered in August (instead of September) and January (rather than in February). The Bible Content Examination continues to be administered on the first Friday of each February.

BIBLE CONTENT EXAMS:

In 2005, 654 individuals took the Bible Content Exam. The pass rate for the exam was 88 percent.

In 2006, 715 individuals took the Bible Content Exam. Six hundred thirty people received a satisfactory score, for a pass rate of 88 percent.

STANDARD WRITTEN EXAMS:

In September 2004, 628 inquirers, candidates, and ministers of other denominations wrote a total of 1,792 Standard Ordination Examinations, as follows:

Worship and Sacraments	64.3%

Overall % of satisfactory exams	65.3%

In September 2005, 540 individuals wrote a total of 1,492 Standard Ordination Examinations, as follows:

D. Presbyterian Publishing Corporation Agency Summary1. Mission Statement

“Building on the Reformed tradition, the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation seeks to glorify God by contributing to the spiritual and intellectual vitality of Christ’s church. To that end, PPC publishes resources that advance religious scholarship, stimulate conversation about moral values, and inspire faithful living.”

2. Introducing the Presbyterian Publishing Corporation

The Presbyterian Publishing Corporation (PPC) is a completely financially self-sustaining agency of the General Assembly. It receives no mission funding from the PC(USA). With a publishing heritage dating back more than 160 years, PPC publishes books and resources under its two imprints, Westminster John Knox Press and Geneva Press. It publishes books and resources for clergy and church professionals, congregations, scholars, students, and laity. PPC publishes approximately 75 new titles each year and has more than 1,100 titles that are sold throughout the world. These works are published with the intention of stimulating conversations and contributing to worldwide scholarship in the areas of biblical studies, theology, religion, and ethical issues of importance to the larger society.

In addition, PPC continues to publish, print, and mail more than 135,000 regular-print and 16,000 large-print editions of These Days, a daily devotional magazine, four times a year.

The corporation is governed by a board of directors whose members are nominated by the General Assembly Nominating Committee and elected by the General Assembly.

3. PPC Highlights in 2005

- Finished the year with net sales of $8.9 million.
- Published 75 new titles on time and within budget.
- Named Publisher of the Year by the Association of Theological Booksellers.
- Formed a partnership with Princeton Theological Seminary to publish Theology Today, a prestigious, leading journal for Protestant clergy. Princeton Theological Seminary will retain responsibility for the editorial content of the publication, while PPC will assume production, marketing, distribution, and customer service responsibilities. Theology Today has approximately 9,500 subscribers.
- Unveiled its Presbyterian Worship Planner, Version 2.0, an easy-to-use resource featuring worship preparation tools such as bulletin templates, a Pastor’s Notebook, electronic editions of popular Presbyterian worship resources and contemporary prayers, and The Presbyterian Hymnal at the National Pastors Retreat in Snowbird, Utah.
- Published Letters to a Young Doubter by William Sloane Coffin. (In 2004, PPC published Credo by William Sloane Coffin, which was named Book of the Year by the Association of Theological Booksellers.) More than 10,000 copies of the book were sold.
- Continued its more than forty-year tradition of publishing works that examine the intersection between religion and popular culture with The Gospel according to America and The Gospel according to Oprah.
- Expanded its Presbyterian Book Table Program to include a package for leaders in Presbyterian churches. The program allows pastors, educators, and leaders to purchase nine books on Presbyterian leadership for only $64.95. Free shipping is provided on all orders.

4. PPC Benevolence Programs

PPC administers several benevolence programs as a way of contributing to the larger mission of the PC(USA).

Through its Equipping the Saints Program, PPC provides newly ordained ministers of the Word and Sacrament with complimentary packages of books and resources.

Through its Disaster Relief Program, PPC provides churches suffering the effects of Hurricanes Katrina and Rita and other natural disasters with complimentary packages of books and resources.

Through its In the Beginning Program, PPC sends packages of resources to new church developments to help in the beginning stages of their ministry.

Through its Books without Borders Program, PPC donates a selection of free reference works and academic titles to seed the libraries at 25 seminaries in second- and third-world countries.

The Robert G. Bohl Racial Ethnic Internship Program enables a racial ethnic seminary student to participate in a ten-week summer internship program, allowing individuals to consider religious publishing as a ministry option.

5. Are You Thoughtful?

In 2005, PPC developed a new online resource center known as The Thoughtful Christian. The exciting new resource center is located at www.TheThoughtfulChristian.com and contains studies that will help Christians wrestle with difficult questions. The studies are grouped into five categories: contemporary issues, popular culture, Bible and theology, Christian living, and spirituality. The studies have from one to four sessions, with each designed for one hour. They can be used in discussion groups, new member classes, lay leader training, weekend retreats, and personal study and devotion.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC) recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) approve the following authoritative interpretation of G-13.0112d:

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC) provides advice directly to the General Assembly based upon requests to the ACC, received only from the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly. The ACC provides only advice to the General Assembly regarding questions of interpretation of the Book of Order. The ACC does not communicate directly with those who request advice nor make provisions for hearings on matters before it for consideration. The Advisory Committee may consult with General Assembly entities through the Stated Clerk.

Item 14-ACL R

[The assembly approved Item 14-ACL R. See p. 17.]

Report on the Review of the Advisory Committee on Litigation

That the following recommendations and report are approved.

1. That the ACL, in reporting its actions on amicus briefs, include a description of the origin of the request to join the brief.

2. That the ACL consider adding a seventeenth criterion for their evaluation of amicus briefs: Is there a significant or passionate constituency within the PC(USA) who might disagree with the position of the brief?

Report on Review of the Advisory Committee on Litigation

Introduction

This review was conducted according to the “Standards for Review of General Assembly Permanent, Advocacy, and Advisory Committees and Commissions” approved by the 216th General Assembly (2004) and in accordance with Standing Rule M.4.b of the Manual of the General Assembly.

Mission

The mission of the Advisory Committee on Litigation (ACL) is to advise the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly in connection with instituting or participating in legal proceedings. (See Appendix A.)

Membership

The ACL has six members elected by the General Assembly. They serve 6-year terms. The members of the committee are ordinarily attorneys, and are experienced in fields related to issues that may be the subject of legal proceedings in which the church is, or may become, interested.

Process

The ACL provided a self-study based on their work for the past five years. The Assembly Committee on Review of General Assembly Permanent Committees reviewed the self-study, and interviewed Justin M. Johnson (elected member of the ACL) and Clifton Kirkpatrick (Stated Clerk of the General Assembly). An open hearing was held, but no one spoke about the ACL at that hearing.

Findings

A. Fidelity to Mission and Partnership

Does the ACL, as it was created by the church, serve and support the church’s mission in a particular area? Does the ACL exhibit a constant faithfulness to and in fulfillment of its servant role in the life of the PC(USA)?

In 1988, the 200th General Assembly adopted the document God Alone Is Lord of the Conscience. It contains the following affirmation, which the assembly adopted:

The corporate entities and individual members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) are obliged by the religious faith and order they profess to participate in public life and become involved in the realm of politics.

The ACL provides the requisite legal counsel to aid the Stated Clerk in fulfilling this obligation.

Does the basic process of the ACL demonstrate fidelity to the mission and accountability procedures set forth in its establishing deliverance, charter, or mandate from the assembly? Does the ACL exhibit leadership in guiding the church in engagement with the work and resources in which the ACL acts?

The ACL has identified sixteen criteria for deciding when to file an amicus brief, and they report consistently shaping their advice based on those criteria.

Does the ACL exhibit practical cooperation with the other agencies or committees of the church in areas of overlapping responsibility and opportunity?

The ACL reports working collaboratively and well with a number of General Assembly committees. The church has been able to approve wiser and better policies because of these cooperative ventures.

Does the ACL provide timely responses to directives and requests from the General Assembly?

The ACL reports and the Stated Clerk affirm that all directives from the assembly have been responded to on a timely basis.

B. Effectiveness of Services

Does the ACL have a defined and consistent process for completing its work?

Yes. The ACL has established criteria for evaluating requests to join amicus briefs, and reports that it has consistently followed those criteria. The ACL has been available to advise the Stated Clerk either by email, conference call, or face-to-face meeting.

Does the ACL have a regular process of self-evaluation of its services?

Yes. The ACL completed the self-study process for General Assembly. They also report regularly assessing the judicial impact of the briefs filed.

Does the ACL employ a strategy for effective communication with the church-at-large?

Since ACL's primary charge is to advise the Stated Clerk, it does not have a major interpretive role. However, it has established a website (www.pcusa.org/acl) so that the whole church can be aware of its procedures, the briefs filed, and the results achieved.

Does the ACL utilize current and emerging technologies to enable it to fulfill its mission?

Yes. The ACL has a website, and regularly uses email and conference calls to save the cost of face-to-face meetings.

Does the ACL have a developed vision and plan for its work in light of its historic mandate and the emerging issues before and context of the PC(USA)?

Yes. As a result of reflecting on the whole of the General Assembly witness and current issues before the judicial system, ACL has advised the Stated Clerk to give priority to briefs on the issues of religious freedom, ending the death penalty, human rights, and justice for immigrants.

C. Commendations

The Assembly Committee on Review of General Assembly Permanent Committees offers the following statements of commendation to the ACL:

1. The Assembly Committee on Review of Permanent General Assembly Committees commends the ACL for their effective use of resources and economical use of current technology.
2. We commend the ACL for the excellent records they maintain for the benefit of the church's mission.
3. We commend ACL members for the high quality of their expertise.
4. We further commend their graciously donated time, commitment, and service, for which the church is grateful.

Appendix A

From the ACL website, www.pcusa.org/acl

Standing Rule G.2.e provides that the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly may retain legal counsel and institute or participate in legal proceedings in civil and criminal courts in support of decisions, actions and programs of the General Assembly.

One vehicle available to carry out that responsibility is the filing of amicus curiae briefs.

Amicus curii is a Latin term for a party that is not one of the active litigants in the case, but who speaks to the court as a friend. It also means to bring to the court's attention policy matters and issues which should be considered by the court before rendering its decision.

The process that leads to the filing of an amicus brief may begin internally when a presbytery or an entity of the church raises a concern involving religious liberty or personal and social issues, or externally when another denomination or organization asks the Stated Clerk to consider the issues in a case. Where the brief involves state or local issues, the presbytery involved is ordinarily notified and asked to comment.

The Advisory Committee on Litigation advises the Stated Clerk on matters of litigation for which the Stated Clerk is responsible. The committee evaluates the denomination's participation in amicus briefs on the basis of 15 criteria to guide them in determining whether a particular brief is of interest to the denomination.

When filing an amicus brief, the Stated Clerk speaks on behalf of previous assemblies and applies to the issues in a case the statements made by the Assembly. As an officer of the Assembly, the Clerk does not speak as an individual or for the whole Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), but for the Assembly.

Item 14-ACC R

[The assembly approved Item 14-ACC R. See p. 17.]

Report on the Review of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

That the following recommendations and report are approved.

1. Our committee suggests that the ACC implement the changes in accountability and communication identified in their self-study as appropriate.
2. Our committee recommends that the committee which is eventually appointed to review biennial General Assemblies include as part of its deliberations the effects of biennial assemblies on the workload of the ACC. (See Endnote #1.)
3. Our committee recommends that the ACC meet following each General Assembly, in the same calendar year. The purpose of this meeting is to orient new members, provide an opportunity to reflect on the actions of the past General Assembly, and increase the collegiality of the ACC. (See Endnote #2.)
4. Our committee recommends that if the ACC offers advice which differs from former ACC advice, it identify this change and, if practical and possible, give reasons for this change. It is our committee's intention that this identification and reasoning be very brief in nature. Our committee makes this recommendation to protect the integrity of the ACC and in the hope that this will foster trust between the ACC and the church at-large.

[Financial Implications: Assembly action: (2006): $8,565; (2008): $8,565 (Per Capita Budget-OGA)]

Report on Review of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

Introduction

This review was conducted according to the “Standards for Review of General Assembly Permanent, Advocacy, and Advisory Committees and Commissions” approved by the 216th General Assembly (2004) and in accordance with Standing Rule M.4.b of the Manual of the General Assembly.

Mission

The primary mission of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC) as stated in Standing Rule A.5.a. of the Manual of the General Assembly is to “... report to the General Assembly its findings along with its recommendations on all questions requiring an interpretation by the General Assembly of the Book of Order, including proposals for constitutional change.” The items are examined for clarity, consistency of language, and conformity with other provisions of the Constitution.

Membership

The ACC is composed of nine (9) voting members elected by the General Assembly, each serving a six-year term. They must be “former members of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the General Assembly, stated clerks or former stated clerks of synods or presbyteries, or other qualified persons with knowledge of and experience with the Constitution and polity of the church (G-13.0112a). The Stated Clerk of the General Assembly is ex officio and without vote.

Process

The ACC provided a self-study (February 2006) based on their work for the past two years. The Assembly Committee on Review of General Assembly Permanent Committees reviewed the self-study, examined the survey results from Presbyterian Research Services (May 2006), and interviewed a member of ACC, various persons in open hearing, and the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly. (See also Endnote 1, regarding an evaluation process conducted by Research Services.)

Findings

A. Fidelity to Mission and Partnership

1. Does the ACC, as it was created by the church, serve and support the church’s mission in a particular area? Does the ACC demonstrate a constant faithfulness to and fulfillment of its servant role in the life of the PC(USA)?

The ACC counsel to the General Assembly is expressed in a manner that is clear and understandable to the General Assembly commissioners and any audience present at the General Assembly committee meeting. Most importantly, the ACC strives to be neutral in political tone and does not advocate a position of any entity or group of the PC(USA)

2. Does the basic process of the ACC demonstrate fidelity to the mission and accountability procedures set forth in its establishing deliverance, charter, or mandate from the assembly? Does the ACC exhibit leadership in guiding the church in engagement with the work and resources in which the ACC acts?

The ACC is faithful to its mission as set forth in its mandate from the assembly. There is an obvious connection between the quality and credentials of the persons selected for service in the ACC and the nature and degree of steadfast personal dedication of the ACC’s membership.

3. Does the ACC exhibit practical cooperation with the other agencies or committees of the church in areas of overlapping responsibility and opportunity?

The work of the ACC is narrowly focused and advisory in nature and does not overlap the work of other committees or agencies of the General Assembly.

4. Does the ACC provide timely responses to directives and requests from the General Assembly?

Yes. The 120-day deadline for new business before the General Assembly prompts a timely but thorough and comprehensive response.

B. Effectiveness of Service

1. Does the ACC have a defined and consistent process for completing its work?

Yes. The “Manual of Procedures for the Advisory Committee on the Constitution of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (USA)” (January 2006) is very detailed and sufficient in its guidance.

2. Does the ACC have a regular process of self-evaluation of its services?

Yes. The ACC goes through biennial self-evaluations. Accountability and communication issues are being investigated by the ACC. The structure of how the ACC performs is under continuing study, and some changes may result.

3. Does the ACC employ a strategy for effective communication with the church-at-large?

The ACC’s advice is evident in most pieces of business brought before the General Assembly and in the annotated version of the Book of Order. The communication of the advice of the ACC is the responsibility of the Office of the General Assembly.

4. Does the ACC utilize current and emerging technologies to enable it to fulfill its mission?

Yes. The recommendations of the ACC to the various General Assemblies regarding overtures, requests, and referrals continue to be read—especially in the electronic version of the Annotated Book of Order. The ACC offers a website, www.pcusa.org/acc.

5. Does the ACC have a developed vision and plan for its work in light of its historic mandate and the emerging issues before and context of the PC(USA)?

The ACC consistently evaluates constitutional matters before the General Assembly with neutrality. It takes great pains to give careful and constructive critique to proposals.

C. Commendations

The Assembly Committee on Review of General Assembly Permanent Committees offers the following statements of commendation to the ACC:

1. Our committee affirms the important work of the ACC, their dedication to the Presbyterian Church (USA), and the collaborative manner in which they conduct their business. We commend the ACC for their work performed with integrity, neutrality, and commitment.

2. Our committee commends the ACC for their process of self-study and the excellent report they submitted to our committee. We appreciate that they have conducted a thorough self-study and have intentionally sought the input and reflections of current and previous members of the ACC, the Stated Clerk and the members of his staff, and leadership teams of select assembly committees of the 215th and 216th General Assemblies (2003) and (2004) respectively.

3. Our committee supports the autonomous and independent nature of the ACC. We affirm the ACC’s freedom to offer its guidance and opinions without having the explicit power to enact its interpretations.

4. We commend the ACC for its efforts to encourage and spur Presbyterians to read and study the Book of Order.

Endnotes

1. Survey Results

A survey of synod and presbytery clerks, synod and presbytery executives, and General Assembly commissioners was conducted in 2006 by the General Assembly Council’s Research Services. The survey covered familiarity, leadership in support of PC(USA) mission, fidelity to the denomination, and importance to the denomination. The ACC received the highest ratings from those closest to questions of polity, i.e., stated clerks, and lowest among General Assembly commissioners. In all areas, ACC ranks very high, generally in the 90+ percent range of satisfaction.

2. Budget

There have been budgetary overruns in both 2004 and 2005, even though every effort has been made to contain and curtail costs. Budgeting properly for the ACC is always problematic because it is impossible to anticipate what matters will arise that will require a number of ACC personnel—or the whole committee—to participate.

Year	Budget	Actual
2004	$37,420.62	($1,720.62)
2005	$12,015.43	($850.43)

3. Financial Implications for Recommendation #3

According to the financial implications desk of the Office of the General Assembly, the cost of this decision would be $8,565 ($7,965 for the meeting cost, $600 for administration) in both years 2006 and 2008 for a total of $17,130.

14-GACOR R

[The assembly approved Item 14-GACOR R. See p. 17]

Yes. The GACOR does exhibit a constant faithfulness to and fulfillment of its servant role in the life of the PC(USA) in conformity with its mandate.

3. Does the basic process of the GACOR demonstrate fidelity to the mission and accountability procedures set forth in its establishing deliverance, charter, or mandate from the assembly?

4. Does the GACOR exhibit leadership in guiding the church in engagement with the work and resources in which GACOR acts?

B. Effectiveness of Services

1. Does the GACOR have a defined and consistent process for completing its work?

Yes. The GACOR has a defined and consistent process for completing its work in adherence with requirements stated within the Book of Order.

2. Does the GACOR have a regular process of self-evaluation of its services?

This self-study was the first experience of self-evaluation the GACOR has undergone and they have committed to self-study process in the future.

3. Does the GACOR employ a strategy for effective communication with the church-at-large?

The GACOR communicates with the General Assembly Nominating Committee (GANC); enters into dialogue with and engages in cooperative processes with synods, the General Assembly Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC), and the General Assembly Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC). Information is also communicated through the General Assembly Committee on Representation website, www.pcusa.org/cor.

4. Does the GACOR utilize current and emerging technologies to enable it to fulfill its mandate?

Yes, the GACOR demonstrated to the review committee utilization of current and emerging technologies to fulfill its mandate such as creating a training DVD presentation in three different languages (English, Spanish, Korean), and by providing information and resources through the General Assembly Committee on Representation website.

5. Does the GACOR have a developed vision and plan for its work in light of its historic mandate and the emerging issues before and context of the PC(USA)?

Yes, the work of the GACOR as outlined in the Book of Order, is unchanging. The GACOR has, however, demonstrated a commitment to continue that same work in innovative ways.

C. Commendations

1. We commend the GACOR for excellence in its work. The commitment of GACOR to inclusiveness and fairness is admirable.

2. We commend the GACOR for its active role in the face of changing national demographics as the GACOR leads the PC(USA) in embracing the emerging multicultural facets of this church.

Item 14-ACWC R

[The assembly approved Item 14-ACWC R. See p. 17.]

Report on the Review of the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns

The following recommendations and report are approved.

1. We recommend that ACWC develop a strategy for increasing effective communications with synods.

2. Recognizing that G-4.0403 encourages full participation of persons of diverse theological perspectives, and that the ACWC committee membership requirements, according to the ACWC Manual of Operations, do not specifically require theological diversity, we recommend that the desirability of theological diversity in the membership composition of the ACWC be referred to the GANC for report back to the 218th General Assembly (2007).

Report on Review of the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns

Introduction

This review was conducted according to the "Standards for Review of General Assembly Permanent, Advocacy, and Advisory Committees and Commissions" approved by the 216th General Assembly (2004) and in accordance with Standing Rule M.4.b of the Manual of the General Assembly.

Purpose

The General Assembly, in establishing the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC), defined its mission broadly. The three primary purposes of this mission (as stated in the Design for Mission) include:

...serving as a voice of advocacy on existing and emerging issues of justice both within the church and society; evaluating and monitoring policies, procedures, programs and resources regarding the way in which they impact the status and position of women; and giving the General Assembly and the General Assembly Council advice and counsel on overtures, resolutions, reports and actions recommending policy direction or action on issues of justice.

Membership

Ten persons are elected by the General Assembly upon nomination by the General Assembly Nominating Committee (GANC), in rotating classes.

The ACWC is to consist of:

- Two clergy women
- One woman church lay employee
- The Presbyterian Women's Churchwide Coordinating Team's (PW/CCT) vice moderator for peace and justice
- Seven at-large members, chosen to balance the committee geographically, racially, and ethnically, and with consideration to age and expertise
- One GAC Executive Committee member (This voting member fulfills the responsibility of liaison between GAC Executive Committee and ACWC.)

At least four of the twelve members will be racial ethnic women. At least two, but not more than three, of the twelve members will be men.

Process

The ACWC established a self-study task group to evaluate the work over the last five years (2001–2005).

Findings

A. Fidelity to Purpose

1. Does the ACWC, as it was created by the church, serve and support the church's mission in a particular area? Does ACWC exhibit a constant faithfulness to and in fulfillment of its servant role in the life of the PC(USA)?

The ACWC does serve and support the church's mission to be advocates for women, evaluate the church's actions, and advise and counsel the General Assembly and GAC in conformity with its purpose. The ACWC does exhibit a constant faithfulness to and fulfillment of its servant role in the life of the PC(USA) in conformity with its purpose, as supported by the results shown in their survey entitled Clergywomen's Experiences in Ministry: Realities and Challenges, 2003, published in 2005.

2. Does the basic process of the ACWC demonstrate fidelity to the mission and accountability procedures set forth in its establishing deliverance, charter, or purpose from the assembly? Does the ACWC exhibit leadership in guiding the church in engagement with the work and resources in which ACWC acts?

Yes. The ACWC does demonstrate fidelity to the missions and accountability procedures set forth in its establishing resolution. The ACWC routinely reports to the General Assembly Council Executive Director through the GAC Deputy Executive Director. The ACWC also exhibits leadership in guiding the church in addressing issues of vital concern to women in the church and society.

3. Does the ACWC exhibit practical cooperation with the other agencies or committees of the church in areas of overlapping responsibility and opportunity?

Item 14-InfoA. Advisory Committee on Litigation Agency Summary

1. Assigned Responsibilities

The Advisory Committee on Litigation is composed of six Presbyterian attorneys. Each year the General Assembly elects one member to a six-year term. Each member is eligible for reelection to an additional term, but in no case may a member serve for a period exceeding twelve consecutive years of service. The General Assembly Nominating Committee nominates persons for the ACL who fit the criteria for eligibility. The Advisory Committee on Litigation was established by the 200th General Assembly (1988) to advise the Stated Clerk on matters relating to litigation.

The consultations typically take place via telephone conference calls after committee members have been provided copies of all pertinent pleadings, orders, and information. The committee ordinarily meets face-to-face at least once each year. It is normally consulted whenever the Stated Clerk is asked to participate in litigation involving matters of civil and religious liberty, church and state relations, and other matters related to the mission and interests of the church.

2. Disposition of Cases Reported in 2004

a. Glassroth v. Moore, U.S. Court of Appeals, 11th Circuit

On April 28, 2003, Clifton Kirkpatrick, as the Stated Clerk of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), joined in an amicus curiae brief in Glassroth v. Moore in the 11th Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals. The brief argued that a display in the Alabama State Judicial Building was unconstitutional under the First Amendment religious Establishment Clause of the U.S. Constitution and was harmful to religious liberty. In 1988 the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) took action opposing “the permanent or unattended display of religious symbols on public property as a violation of religious neutrality required of government.” Additionally the same assembly stated that:

Religious expression by the government itself or sponsored by the government threatens religious liberty and is forbidden by the establishment clause [of the U.S. Constitution]. On the other hand, religious expression by private citizens and organizations, initiated by private citizens and organizations, is protected by both the free speech and free exercise clauses [of the U.S. Constitution] and cannot be banned from public places. (God Alone Is Lord of Conscience, Minutes, 1988, Part I, p. 567).

The 11th Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals held on July 1, 2003, that the display did indeed violate the First Amendment dictate that prohibits the Congress from enacting any law respecting the establishment of religion. The court reiterated the U.S. Supreme Court interpretation that the First Amendment prohibits the government from “promoting or affiliating itself with any religious doctrine or organization, may not discriminate among persons on the basis of their religious beliefs and practices, may not delegate a governmental power to a religious institution, and may not involve itself too deeply in such an institution’s affairs” (492 U.S. 573). The U.S. Supreme Court refused to hear an appeal of the case and let the 11th Circuit decision stand as the final opinion in the case.

b. CEF of Md v. Montgomery County, U.S. Court of Appeals, 4th Circuit

On June 10, 2003, the Stated Clerk, Clifton Kirkpatrick joined an amicus curiae brief in the 4th Circuit Court of Appeals in Child Evangelism Fellowship of Maryland, Inc. v. Montgomery County Public Schools. The brief argued that the county unconstitutionally discriminated against Child Evangelism Fellowship (CEF) contrary to First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution’s prohibition against governmental establishment of religion and the right of individuals to free expression of religion when it refused to extend to CEF the same right to distribute and post flyers and participate in back to school nights that secular community organizations enjoyed. In 1988 the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) took action stating that:

Religious expression by the government itself or sponsored by the government threatens religious liberty and is forbidden by the establishment clause [of the U.S. Constitution]. On the other hand, religious expression by private citizens and organizations, initiated by private citizens and organizations, is protected by both the free speech and free exercise clauses [of the U.S. Constitution] and cannot be banned from public places. (God Alone Is Lord of Conscience, Minutes, 1988, Part I, p. 567)

The U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit ruled on June 30, 2004, that the refusal by Maryland’s Montgomery County Public Schools (MCPS) to distribute materials promoting an after-school “Good News Club” run by the Child Evangelism Fellowship of Maryland (CEF) constituted impermissible viewpoint discrimination in violation of CEF’s free speech rights. The MCPS elementary school teachers and students distributed materials for other groups, such as the Four-H and the Boy Scouts. The Fourth Circuit rejected MCPS’s argument that including CEF flyers and permission slips in the informational folders young children take home to parents would violate the Establishment Clause. School officials denied the request on the ground that involving students and teachers in distributing religious materials would imply government endorsement of religion. The CEF sued, seeking a preliminary injunction while the case was pending. The district court denied the motion, and CEF filed an interlocutory appeal. The Fourth Circuit, relying on Good News Club v. Milford Central School, 533 U.S. 98 (2001), concluded that MCPS could not demonstrate a compelling governmental interest, based on Establishment Clause concerns, justifying its viewpoint discrimination. Addressing MCPS’s contention that the classroom distribution “would create a perception of endorsement or coercion by government officials,” the court held that the fact that the flyers would be distributed during “non-instructional” time at the end of the school day obviated any suggestion that the distribution is part of the curriculum or is integrated into the teacher’s instruction. Turning to the issue of whether distribution would have an unconstitutional coercive effect on students, the court pointed out that such coercion would occur only if the “government is granting preferential treatment to a religious organization” and if the activity can be characterized as a religious exercise or religious worship. CEF would receive no preferential treatment because it would be just one of many organizations whose materials are distributed. The flyers cannot be characterized as religious exercise or worship because they are merely invitations. The court rejected MCPS's argument that the teachers' active participation raises endorsement and entanglement concerns. The teachers' role would be a minimal administrative activity that treats a variety of school-related and non-school-related materials equally.

c. Locke v. Davey U.S. Supreme Court

On September 8, 2003, Clifton Kirkpatrick, as the Stated Clerk of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), joined in an amicus curiae brief in support of Joshua Davey before the U.S. Supreme Court in Locke v. Davey. The brief argued that the State of Washington violated the Free Exercise, Equal Protection, and Free Speech Clauses of the U.S. Constitution when it offered a state scholarship to everyone except individuals who pursue degrees in theology. The brief argued that the otherwise neutral statute, unfairly imposed a discriminated classification based upon religion. The 200th General Assembly stated that:

Government payments on behalf of individuals, under programs such as ... scholarship assistance, should without exception be available to ... students at church-sponsored agencies and institutions on exactly the same terms as if those ... [students] were receiving their services from secular agencies... Government must be neutral in matters of religion. (God Alone Is Lord of the Conscience, Minutes, 1988, Part I, p. 562)

The U.S. Supreme Court decided on February 25th, 2004, that the State of Washington's exclusion of the pursuit of a devotional theology degree from its otherwise inclusive scholarship aid program did not violate the Free Exercise Clause. The court found that the case revolved around state action permitted by the Establishment clause and not required by the Free Exercise clause. The Court found that the state's interest in not funding the pursuit of devotional degrees was substantial and that the exclusion of such funding placed a relatively minor burden on the recipients of the scholarship.

d. Westchester Day School v. Village of Mamaroneck, U.S. Court of Appeals, 2nd Circuit

On January 14, 2004, Clifton Kirkpatrick as the Stated Clerk of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) joined an amicus curiae brief in the 2nd Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals in Westchester Day School v. Village of Mamaroneck. The case involved the interpretation of the Religious Land Use and Institutional Persons Act (RLUIPA) when a village denied a permit for a new classroom building to an Orthodox Jewish school. The brief argued the constitutionality of RLUIPA and that the statute's "substantial burden" test of the burden of a governmental regulation on a religious institution's free exercise right should be liberally interpreted so as to maximize the institution's free exercise of religion. As of the date of this report, the court has not made a decision in the case.

On September 27, 2004, the 2nd Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals decided that there are outstanding factual questions precluding a finding in favor of Westchester Day School at this time. It did not address the constitutionality of RLUIPA. The court ordered that the case proceed to trial before the lower court to resolve these questions.

e. In Support of Rodi Alvarado Pena Appeal Before the Attorney General

On January, 2004, the Stated Clerk, Clifton Kirkpatrick joined an amicus curiae brief to the Attorney General, John Ashcroft, in support of asylum seeker Rodi Alvarado Pena. The brief requested that the attorney general affirm the decision of the immigration judge granting her application for political asylum based on an undisputed record reflecting years of severe domestic violence and the failure of the government of Guatemala to respond to Ms. Alvarado's repeated efforts to obtain protection from the abuse. The brief was consistent with PC(USA) policies on immigration and domestic violence. The brief was limited to the finalization of a standing rule interpreting asylum based on membership of a particular social group. This brief addressed only the question of Ms. Alvarado's eligibility for asylum based on her membership in a particular social group defined by her gender, her marital status, and her status as a victim of domestic violence.

After taking the asylum request of Rodi Adali Alvarado Peña, a domestic violence survivor, under advisement and delaying a decision for years, Attorney General John Ashcroft left office without deciding the case.

f. Sosa v. Alvarez-Machain, U.S. Supreme Court

On February 27, 2004, Clifton Kirkpatrick as Stated Clerk of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) joined with the Presbyterian Church of Sudan to file an amicus curiae brief in support of Alvarez-Machain before the Supreme Court of the United States in Sosa v. Alvarez-Machain. The case involves the interpretation of the Alien Tort Claims Act (ATCA) enacted in 1789 to provide jurisdiction and a substantive cause of action for an alien to file a claim based upon a tort (an avoidable injury) committed in violation of the law of nations or a treaty of the United States. The brief argued that the act was enacted in conformity with U.S. foreign policy including the promotion and protection of international religious freedom. The brief was consistent with the many policies approved by the General Assembly regarding religious freedom, human rights, and due process. The co-amici, the Presbyterian Church of Sudan, is a plaintiff in a separate class action suit brought under the ATCA against Talisman Energy, Inc. The plaintiff's allege that Talisman collaborated with the government of Sudan to commit gross violations of customary international law including genocide, war crimes, extrajudicial murder, religious genocide, forcible displacement, torture, and other crimes against humanity including and targeting religious congregations and ministers.

On June 29, 2004, the U.S. Supreme Court entered an opinion dismissing the underlying cause of action in Sosa v. Alvarez, however affirming that the Alien Tort Claims Act (ATCA) is a jurisdictional statute that provides jurisdiction for foreign nationals to sue U.S. nationals (corporations and individuals) for violations of the “law of nations” or a treaty of the United States. The Court was clear that the ATCA does not create a cause of action but simply provides standing for the foreign complainant to bring a civil action against a U.S. citizen in U.S. courts. However, the Court went on to say that the “law of nations” was defined in 1789 as including international common law such as piracy, violation of safe conducts, and offenses against ambassadors. The Court goes on to describe the growth of the narrow definition of “law of nations” in the 21st century that might include genocide and torture. The court also mentions the statute as being a possible jurisdictional statute providing a cause of action in the Guantanamo Bay cases alleging indefinite detention and/or torture. Constitutional law scholars consider this one of the most important decisions for human rights to be decided in decades.

The separate class-action suit brought under the ATCA by the Presbyterian Church of Sudan against the Talisman Energy, Inc. is still in the discovery phase and has not yet proceeded to trial. If the Presbyterian Church of Sudan succeeds in proving on the merits that the Talisman Energy, Inc. colluded with the Sudanese government to commit genocide and religious cleansing, a question on appeal will be: Does the ATCA provide a cause of action for foreign citizens to sue U.S. citizens (corporations and individuals) for religious cleansing under the definition of the “law of nations”?

g. Roper v. Simmons, U.S. Supreme Court

On March 31, 2004, Stated Clerk Clifton Kirkpatrick joined an amicus curiae brief to the U.S. Supreme Court in Roper v. Simmons. The case requests that the U.S. Supreme Court define the use of the death penalty as punishment for a crime committed by a juvenile defendant as a violation of the Eighth Amendment guarantee against cruel and unusual punishment.

Beginning in 1959, the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A. and its predecessors declared the church theologically and ethically opposed to the use of capital punishment. “Believing that capital punishment cannot be condoned by an interpretation of the Bible based upon the revelation of God’s love in Jesus Christ, and that as Christians we must seek the redemption of evil doers and not their death, and that the use of the death penalty tends to brutalize the society that condones it, the 171st General Assembly (1959) declares its opposition to capital punishment.” The 1966, 1977, 1978, and 1985 General Assemblies reaffirmed this statement and called upon the church to work for abolition of the death penalty calling capital punishment an expression of vengeance which contradicts the justice of God on the cross. The 212th General Assembly (2000) called for an immediate moratorium on all executions in all jurisdictions that impose capital punishment. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has been consistently opposed to capital punishment and does not distinguish between categories of defendants.

By a vote of 5–4, the U.S. Supreme Court on March 1, 2005, held that the Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments forbid the execution of offenders who were under the age of eighteen when their crimes were committed.

Justice Kennedy, writing for the majority (Kennedy, Breyer, Ginsburg, Souter, and Stevens), stated:

When a juvenile offender commits a heinous crime, the State can exact forfeiture of some of the most basic liberties, but the State cannot extinguish his life and his potential to attain a mature understanding of his own humanity.

The Court reaffirmed the necessity of referring to “the evolving standards of decency that mark the progress of a maturing society” to determine which punishments are so disproportionate as to be cruel and unusual. The Court reasoned that the rejection of the juvenile death penalty in the majority of states, the infrequent use of the punishment even where it remains on the books, and the consistent trend toward abolition of the juvenile death penalty demonstrated a national consensus against the practice. The Court determined that today our society views juveniles as categorically less culpable than the average criminal.

3. Cases Joined (2004–2006)

a. Crawford, US Immigration and Customs v. Sergio Suarez Martinez, Clark v. Sergio Suarez Martinez, U.S. Supreme Court, No. 03–878. Argued October 13, 2004—Decided January 12, 2005

On August 2, 2004, Stated Clerk Clifton Kirkpatrick joined a variety of denominational leaders on an amicus brief in the Supreme Court of the United States, Crawford, US Immigration and Customs v. Sergio Suarez Martinez.

Under U.S. immigration law, an alien seeking immigration status must be inspected by an immigration officer at a port of entry and unless he is found “clearly and beyond a doubt entitled to be admitted” must either be removed immediately under expedited removal or undergo removal proceedings in order to determine whether he or she is admissible into the U.S. While in the removal proceedings, the alien may be detained unless the secretary of the Department of Homeland Security has agreed to parole the alien into the U.S. If the alien has been determined to be inadmissible to the U.S., the secretary of the Department of Homeland Security must deport the alien within ninety days.

Martinez, a Cuban refugee, was paroled into the US in 1980 after arriving on the Mariel boatlift. Martinez was deemed inadmissible after several criminal convictions for which he served out his sentence and his parole was revoked in December 2000. He remained in detention until the District Court found that removal to Cuba was not reasonably foreseeable in October 2002. The government argued that Martinez could be detained indefinitely pending the government’s attempt to remove him from the country. Amici argued that moral and religious concerns dictate that an individual should not be held in detention indefinitely absent a meaningful opportunity to be heard and that all persons have dignity and worth and the right to due process. The Courts applied these immigration statutes differently to different persons and the amici argued that governmental regulation of migration should be fair and humane.

This brief is consistent with the policies adopted by the General Assembly regarding immigrant persons living and working within the United States. The 216th General Assembly (2004) approved the following resolution:

Diversity testifies to the glory of God’s creation. ... In a Christian vision, diversity no longer divides and separates or serves as a basis for injustice, but is embraced and transformed through Christ’s reconciling activity.

... Genuine reconciliation [takes place through] doing justice; namely ensuring that immigrants’ personhood is fully respected, the immigrants’ presence is acknowledged and welcomed, the immigrants’ rights are fully protected, and immigrants are given the opportunity to be full participants in American life. (Minutes, 2004, Part I, p.746)

[We commit to] [a]dvocate [for] the reform of current immigration policies and procedures to ensure a more timely and humane process. (Minutes, 2004, Part I, p. 738)

On January 12, 2005, the Supreme Court of the United States held that under the statute the Secretary of Homeland Security may detain inadmissible aliens beyond the 90 day removal period, but only for as long as necessary to achieve reasonable removal. If the government is unable to enforce a removal order within six months, even inadmissible aliens, like Martinez, are entitled to release from immigration detention.

A current bill passed by the House in March, 2005, HR 4437, would overturn this decision.

b. Christ Universal Mission Church v. City of Chicago, (7th Cir. 2003), U.S. Supreme Court—Amici Brief in Support of Petition for Certiorari

On December 2, 2004, Stated Clerk Clifton Kirkpatrick joined a variety of denominational and religious leaders on an amicus brief filed in the Supreme Court of the United States asking the Supreme Court to issue a writ of certiorari in Christ Universal Mission Church v. City of Chicago. The brief highlighted a split in the circuits in which the 7th Circuit held in this case and an earlier case, CLUB v. City of Chicago, 342 F3rd 752 (7th Cir. 2003), that a land regulation creates a substantial burden on the religious use of land under the Religious Land use and Institutionalized Persons Act (RLUIPA) only when there is no other “a land-use regulation that imposes a substantial burden on religious exercise is one that necessarily bears direct, primary, and fundamental responsibility for rendering religious exercise—including the use of real property for the purpose thereof within the regulated jurisdiction generally—effectively impracticable.” Id. at 761 [emphasis added].

Under this “effectively impracticable” test, the court of appeals found that the plaintiffs could not show the zoning ordinance violated either the Free Exercise Clause or the “substantial burden” provision of RLUIPA. Despite the difficulties associated with finding suitable properties for churches, the ordinance, according to the majority, did not “render impracticable the use of real property in Chicago for religious exercise.”

Amici argued that the Seventh Circuit created such a high standard for establishing when land use decisions impose a substantial burden on religious exercise that the protections of the Free Exercise Clause and RLUIPA would often be rendered meaningless and would have nationwide adverse consequences on the ability of religious organizations to construct houses of worship. This standard conflicts with the decisions of other circuits and lower courts and violates the express intent of Congress in enacting RLUIPA.

This brief was consistent with the policies adopted by the General Assembly regarding the religious liberty guarantees of the First Amendment. The 200th General Assembly (1988) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) expressly addressed these issues:

14 ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON REVIEW OF GENERAL ASSEMBLY PERMANENT COMMITTEES

1. Churches have a right of autonomy protected by the Free Exercise clause of the First Amendment. Each worshipping community has the right to govern itself and order its life and activity free of government intervention.

2. The government must assert a compelling interest and demonstrate an imminent threat to public safety before the right of autonomy may be set aside [and create a substantial burden] in specific instances and government permitted to interfere with internal church activities. ... (Minutes, 1988, Part I, p. 555, God Alone Is Lord of the Conscience, a policy statement adopted by the General Assembly).

The Supreme Court of the United States denied the petition writ of certiorari. The circuits are still split on the standard to be applied when deciding whether or not a governmental regulation imposes a substantial burden on the religious exercise of the owner and user of land.

c. Cutter v. Wilkinson, U.S. Supreme Court, 125 S.Ct. 2113 (2005)

On December 20, 2004, the Stated Clerk, Clifton Kirkpatrick joined a Coalition of religious entities and individuals on an amicus brief to the Supreme Court of the United States in Cutter v. Wilkinson. The brief brought together a coalition of entities that gathered under the umbrella of Coalition for the Free Exercise of Religion (CFER) to defend the constitutionality of the Religious Land Use and Institutionalized Persons Act (RLUIPA). The Circuit held that RLUIPA violated the Establishment Clause and was an impermissible legislative accommodation of religion. The Amicus Brief argued that RLUIPA did not violate the Establishment Clause because it satisfied all three requirements of the establishment clause test: (1) RLUIPA has a secular purpose, to minimize government interference with religious exercise; (2) it does not have the primary effect of advancing religion, because alleviating substantial government burdens on religious exercise—even exclusively, as religious accommodation laws do—does not involve the government itself advancing religion; (3) and the statute entails no greater entanglement problem than the ordinary application of Free Exercise doctrine.

This brief is consistent with the policies adopted by the General Assembly regarding the religious liberty guarantees of the First Amendment. The 200th General Assembly (1988) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) expressly addressed these issues:

1. Churches have a right of autonomy protected by the Free Exercise clause of the First Amendment. Each worshipping community has the right to govern itself and order its life and activity free of government intervention.

2. The government must assert a compelling interest and demonstrate an imminent threat to public safety before the right of autonomy may be set aside [and create a substantial burden] in specific instances and government permitted to interfere with internal church activities. ... (Minutes, 1988, Part I, p. 555, God Alone Is Lord of the Conscience, a policy statement adopted by the General Assembly).

On May 31, 2005, the Supreme Court decided the Cutter v. Wilkinson case, reversing the 6th Circuit's opinion. In a decision written by Justice Ginsberg, the Court held that RLUIPA on its face does not violate the Establishment Clause. RLUIPA, the Court stated, fits within the "corridor between the Religion Clauses: On its face, the Act qualifies as a permissible legislative accommodation of religion that is not barred by the Establishment Clause." The Court recognized the need for prisons to maintain security, but said: "We have no cause to believe that RLUIPA would not be applied in an appropriately balanced way." Additionally the Supreme Court affirmed the feasibility of a case-by-case consideration of religious exemptions when a governmental regulation imposes a substantial burden on a sincere expression of religion. RLUIPA was enacted to establish a standard for such a case-by-case consideration when the regulation imposes a substantial burden upon the religious use of property or the sincere expression of religion of a person who is incarcerated by the government. The statute states that the government must prove that it has a compelling state interest in the regulation if the regulation substantially burdens the religious use of property or the sincere expression of religion of a person who is incarcerated by the government. The court stated in the UDV case below that they have no cause to believe that the compelling interest test would not be applied in an appropriately balanced way to specific claims for exemption from a generally applicable regulation which burdens the religious use of property or the sincere expression of religion of a person who is incarcerated by the government.

d. Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, et al. v. City of New York, et al U.S. Court of Appeals, Second Circuit

On April 25, 2005, the Stated Clerk, Clifton Kirkpatrick, joined on an amicus brief filed in the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, et al. v. City of New York, et al.

Plaintiffs, a religious corporation which owns and operates a church at the corner of Fifth Avenue and 55th Street in Manhattan, New York City (the "Church"), et al. brought this action to obtain a permanent injunction preventing the City of New York (the "City") from dispersing homeless persons sleeping, at the Church's invitation, in the landings at the tops of the staircases and on the Church's property along 55th Street adjacent to the Church wall (extending about five feet into the public sidewalk), as well as for a declaration that the dispersal of such persons from such areas has violated plaintiffs' rights.

The United States District Court, S.D. New York, decided on October 24, 2004, that the defendant had failed to prove that there was a compelling state interest in removing homeless persons sleeping on church property. The district court found that the reasons stated were not neutrally applicable to all entities and were individually assessed by the government thus the government had the burden to assert a compelling state interest in dispersing homeless persons sleeping on church property and substantially burdening the free exercise of religion of 5th Avenue Presbyterian Church.

The issue of when the strict scrutiny standard of review applies in Free Exercise cases has, at times, caused considerable confusion among state and local governments in the wake of the Supreme Court's decision in Employment Div. v. Smith, 494 U.S. 872 (1990). Amici submitted this brief to the 2nd Circuit to emphasize that the strict scrutiny standard of review which shifts the burden to the government to assert a compelling state interest when the government has substantially burdened the free exercise of religion continues to apply, post-Smith, where religious exercise is substantially burdened pursuant to a system of individualized assessments by government.

This brief is consistent with the policies adopted by the General Assembly regarding the religious liberty guarantees of the First Amendment. The 200th General Assembly (1988) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) expressly addressed these issues:

1. Churches have a right of autonomy protected by the Free Exercise clause of the First Amendment. Each worshipping community has the right to govern itself and order its life and activity free of government intervention.
2. The government must assert a compelling interest and demonstrate an imminent threat to public safety before the right of autonomy may be set aside [and create a substantial burden] in specific instances and government permitted to interfere with internal church activities. ... (Minutes, 1988, Part I, p. 555, God Alone Is Lord of the Conscience, a policy statement adopted by the General Assembly).

This matter is currently under consideration by the U. S. Court of Appeals, Second Circuit.

e. Alberto R. Gonzales, Attorney General, ET AL v. O Centro Espirita Beneficiente Uniao Do Vegetal, ET AL, U.S. Supreme Court

On September 9, 2005, the Stated Clerk, Clifton Kirkpatrick, joined a large variety of denominational leaders on an amicus brief filed in the Supreme Court of the United States, Alberto R. Gonzales, Attorney General, ET AL v. O Centro Espirita Beneficiente Uniao Do Vegetal, ET AL. The Religious Freedom Restoration Act of 1993 ("RFRA") generally prohibits the federal government from imposing a substantial burden on a sincere exercise of religion without first showing that the regulation furthers a compelling governmental interest in the least restrictive way. A small North American sect of the Brazilian group, "O Centro Espirita Beneficiente Uniao Do Vegetal" ("UDV") challenged the government's enforcement of a ban on DMT, a Schedule I narcotic and principle ingredient of "hoasca" a tea imported from South America that is central to UDV's religious rituals. The government asserted that the compelling governmental interest was the protection of the health and safety of the UDV members and the potential for diversion from the church use to recreational use. The district court required the government to prove the underlying facts of the asserted compelling state interest in this case: that sacramental consumption of hoasca posed a serious health risk to the UDV members and that it would lead to a significant increase in nonreligious use. The district court found that the government failed to prove a compelling state reason to restrict the sacramental use of hoasca under RFRA and issued a preliminary injunction against governmental restriction. The 10th Circuit upheld the finding that the government failed to build an adequate record demonstrating that the sacramental use of hoasca presented a danger to the members of the UDV church and thus the government failed to show a compelling state interest in the regulation which imposed a substantial burden on a sincere exercise of religion.

The amici argued that although RFRA was found unconstitutional when applied to the states, the government can and did choose to provide a standard that allowed for a case-by-case review of a generally applicable federal regulation when the regulation provides a substantial burden on a person's right to exercise their religion. The amici argued that RFRA is consistent with the Establishment clause and is within the authority of the legislature to require a case-by-case analysis when a generally applicable federal regulation is a substantial burden on an individual's sincere exercise of religion.

This brief is consistent with the policies adopted by the General Assembly regarding the religious liberty guarantees of the First Amendment. The 200th General Assembly (1988) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) expressly addressed these issues:

1. Churches have a right of autonomy protected by the Free Exercise clause of the First Amendment. Each worshipping community has the right to govern itself and order its life and activity free of government intervention.
2. The government must assert a compelling interest and demonstrate an imminent threat to public safety before the right of autonomy may be set aside [and create a substantial burden] in specific instances and government permitted to interfere with internal church activities. ... (Minutes, 1988, Part I, p. 555, God Alone Is Lord of the Conscience, a policy statement adopted by the General Assembly).

On February 21, 2006, the U.S. Supreme Court, with Chief Justice Roberts writing the opinion, upheld the preliminary injunction against the federal government and affirmed the lower courts' interpretation of RFRA.

B. Advisory Committee on the Constitution Agency Summary

1. Assigned Responsibilities

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC) is composed of nine voting members as established by the Book of Order, G-13.0112 and G-18.0301. The nine voting members must be former members of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the General Assembly, stated clerks or former stated clerks of synods or presbyteries, or other qualified persons with knowledge of and experience with the Constitution and polity of the church (G-13.0112a). The Stated Clerk of the General Assembly is a member ex officio without vote.

With regard to questions requiring an interpretation of the Book of Order, the advisory committee's responsibilities are set out in G-13.0112c and d as follows:

c. All questions requiring an interpretation by the General Assembly of the Book of Order arising from governing bodies of the church or from individuals shall be communicated in writing to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly no later than 120 days prior to the convening of the next session of the General Assembly.

d. The Stated Clerk shall refer all such questions of interpretation to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, except those pertaining to matters pending before a judicial commission. The Advisory Committee shall report its findings to the General Assembly along with its recommendations. Such recommendations may include proposals for constitutional change. The General Assembly shall vote on the recommendations, and may amend or decline to approve them.

With regard to proposed amendments to the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), the advisory committee's mandated responsibilities are set out in G-18.0301b, as follows:

b. The Stated Clerk shall refer all such proposed amendments to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution (G-13.0112), which shall examine the proposed amendment for clarity and consistency of language and for compatibility with other provisions of the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). The advisory committee shall report its findings to the General Assembly along with its recommendations, which may include an amended version of any proposed constitutional changes as well as advice to accept or decline the proposals referred to the committee. The General Assembly shall not consider any amendment until it has considered the report and any recommendation from the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

2. Process and Procedures, Responsibilities and Relationships

The advisory committee does not interpret the Constitution. The role of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, as its title suggests and as its constitutional mandate clearly establishes, is to advise the General Assembly. The committee's advice has no authority until and unless it is approved by the General Assembly. With respect to proposed amendments to the Constitution, the advisory committee focuses on clarity of proposed language, and consistency of the proposed amendment with the remainder of the Constitution. The advisory committee occasionally finds that the intent of the proposal is already inherent in other provisions of the Constitution or that it could be achieved by slight changes in language, by placing the amendment in a different section, or by different language entirely. The advisory committee sometimes has recommended such changes in order to avoid inconsistencies within the Book of Order, and also to make as few changes as possible in existing paragraphs and in section numbering.

With respect to requests for interpretation, as well as comments on overtures, the advisory committee seeks to provide advice that is based on constitutional issues, not on the substance of the issues at hand. In many circumstances, the question has been answered by earlier interpretations and does not require action by the General Assembly. In these cases, the inquirer is notified of the standing interpretation.

All overtures and reports containing proposed amendments and all requests for interpretation of the Book of Order by the General Assembly must be communicated in writing to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly no later than 120 days prior to the convening of the next session of the General Assembly (G-13.0112c). This 120-day time period allows the advisory committee the time carefully to consider and research each proposed amendment and request. Those requests that the advisory committee brings to the General Assembly are those that it believes meet the constitutional criterion.

The advisory committee completed its preparatory work for the General Assembly in two meetings. At its three-day fall meeting, held in conjunction with the OGA Fall Polity Conference, we were able to orient one new member, begin work on our task of preparing for the 217th General Assembly (2006), offer preliminary evaluation of some proposals made by the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly, and advise the General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations concerning its proposals for amending the Book of Order. At its spring five-day meeting the Advisory Committee on the Constitution concluded its work of preparing responses to constitutional issues to be considered by the 217th General Assembly (2006).

After it has received and considered the advice of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, the General Assembly is free to take whatever action it deems wise on proposed amendments, requests for interpretations, and referrals.

The primary focus for the advisory committee is to fulfill its constitutional function to provide advice to the General Assembly concerning overtures that seek to amend the Constitution, and concerning requests for interpretation of the Constitution. During the past two-year period since the last meeting of the General Assembly, the advisory committee has also consulted and developed advice regarding a referral from the 216th General Assembly (2004) regarding compliance with permanent judicial commission decisions, consulted with the Office of the General Assembly concerning the proposed revision of Chapter XIV of the Form of Government, and prepared its self-study review for the General Assembly committee that will review the work of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

3. Editorial Corrections

The Standing Rules of the General Assembly provide, at G.2.f., that the Stated Clerk shall prepare editorial changes in the Book of Order, which should be reviewed by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, provided the changes do not alter the substance of the text approved by the presbyteries. The following changes have been made by the Stated Clerk and approved by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution:

a. An editorial change in G-14.0501d of the Book of Order was requested by the manager of polity guidance and training in Office of the General Assembly. The request stated that references to “assistant pastors” were dropped in 2002 when it was determined that no assistant pastors were still serving in PC(USA) churches. However, the word “either” was inadvertently left in the sentence, even though it referred originally to an associate pastor and an assistant pastor. Ross further stated: “The current wording is exactly the same except for the deletion of ‘or assistant’ throughout the paragraph. Now it appears the antecedents of ‘either’ are ‘associate pastor’ and ‘pastor,’ which is clearly not the original intent.”

Therefore, the following editorial change to G-14.0501d has been made:

“d. The official relationship of an associate pastor to a church is not dependent upon that of a pastor, but an associate pastor is not eligible to succeed immediately the pastor in a church which they have served together, nor may ~~either~~ the associate pastor be called as pastor to serve as co-pastor of that church, except in churches which currently have a co-pastor model which has been in effect for at least three years and the congregation desires to continue such model....”

b. The director of the Department of Communications and Technology, Office of the General Assembly contacted the Advisory Committee on the Constitution to inform them that the following three errors in the text of the 2005–2007 Book of Order had been discovered:

(1) “In G-9.0404d, the first sentence of the paragraph includes the word “annually,” which should not have appeared in the paragraph.

(2) In G-11.0409, the text that is bolded in that paragraph, “designated pastor, designated co-pastor, designated associate pastor,” “or organizing pastor,” and “G-14.0501,” should not have been included in the text.

(3) In the Scriptural Allusion Index at the end of the book, the word “Acts” is omitted in the second line of the reference to G–11.0101 following “1 Cor. 16:8, 9, 19;” so that the reference now reads:

“G–11.0101 a. Acts 6:1,6; 9:31; 21:20; 2:41, 46, 47; 4:4; 15:4; 11:22, 30; 21:17, 18; 6:1–7; 19:18–20; 1 Cor. 16:8, 9, 19; Acts 18:19, 24, 26; 20:17, 18, 25, 28, 30, 36, 37; Rev. 2:1–6”

Rev. Clements further informed the Advisory Committee on the Constitution of the steps taken to notify readers of the 2005–2007 edition of the Book of Order of these errors by putting an errata notice on the OGA website near the link to the online Book of Order. These corrections were noted by the Stated Clerk and approved by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution: Corrections will be made in the 2007–2009 Book of Order.

c. Editorial Correction to G-14.0402 in the Annotated Book of Order: The Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of Missouri River Valley sent a communication in which he called attention to a discrepancy between the Book of Order and the Annotated Book of Order in the first sentence of G-14.0402. The discrepancy concerned the phrase “in which” instead of “and.” Upon researching the inconsistency, it was determined that the word “and” in the Annotated Book of Order was in error. The correction has been made in the Annotated Book of Order by the Stated Clerk and approved by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution so the sentence now reads:

“G-14.0402a. The candidate shall appear before the presbytery ~~and in which~~ he or she shall make a brief statement of personal faith and of commitment to the ministry of the Word and Sacrament except as provided in G-14.0314. . . .”

d. Editorial Correction to D-11.0502 in the Book of Order: The manager of polity guidance and training in the Office of the General Assembly contacted the Advisory Committee on the Constitution calling attention the fact the D-11.0502 was not changed last year to correspond with the new equivalent wording at D-13.0102, concerning who may file an appeal at the first level.

Ross suggested that the wording at D-11.0502 be corrected editorially as follows [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added is shown in italics.]:

“~~Only a person found guilty~~ Either party may initiate the first level of appeal. Either party may initiate an appeal of the appellate decision. Rules of appeal are found in D-13.0000.”

4. Special Thanks

On behalf of the 217th General Assembly (2006), the Advisory Committee on the Constitution expresses its thanks and appreciation to the Reverend Kim Leech and Elder Margy Wentz for their dedicated service to the church through membership on the Advisory Committee on the Constitution. Each of them has served two full three-year terms on the committee and has given extraordinary service. They are not eligible for reelection.

The advisory committee is grateful for the staff assistance of the Reverend Mark Tammen, Associate Stated Clerk and director for the Department of Constitutional Services, Elder Mary Ruth Phares and Joanne Green, administrative assistants for the Department of Constitutional Services.

C. Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC) Agency Summary

“The Lord is a stronghold for the oppressed, a stronghold in times of trouble” (Ps. 9:9).

“The Spirit told me to go with them and not to make a distinction between them and us” (Acts 11:12).

“...[B]e doers of the word, and not merely hearers ...” (Jas. 1:22).

1. Agency Description

The context of women’s advocacy is a human situation where women experience injustice because they are women. Grounded in communal faith in “God [who] liberated the people of Israel from oppression ... [and] covenanted with Israel ... that they might do justice ...”(Book of Order, G-3.0101b) and motivated by painful recognition of sexism within and without, the church explicitly articulated in the Articles of Agreement its commitment to work against gender-based discrimination. The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC) is a contemporary fulfillment of this commitment. Created by the mandate of the 205th General Assembly (1993) at the recommendation of the Report of the Task Force on Shape and Form, ACWC is charged with the responsibility of assisting the church to “... give full expression to the rich diversity of its membership as specified in the Book of Order, G-4.0403 . . . monitor[ing] and evaluat[ing] policies, procedures, programs, and resources regarding the way in which they impact the status and position of women in the church...and advocate[ing] for full inclusiveness and equity in all areas of the life and work of the church in society [as a whole]” (Minutes, 1994, Part I, p. 262).

The ACWC’s assigned functions are delineated in the GAC Manual of Operations (Appendix I, EV, Section VIII.B.), and they include:

- ❖ Preparing policy statements, resolutions, recommendations, reports, and advice and counsel memoranda on women’s concerns to the General Assembly at the request of the General Assembly, the General Assembly Council, or on its own initiative.

- ❖ Advising the General Assembly Council on matters of women’s concerns including statements concerning pressing issues that the council may wish to consider between meetings of the General Assembly.

- ❖ Providing advice and counsel to the General Assembly and its committees on overtures, commissioners’ resolutions, reports, and actions before the General Assembly that impact issues of women’s concerns.

- ❖ Assisting the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy in maintaining an up-to-date and accurate compilation of General Assembly policy on women's concerns and provide information to the church as requested.
- ❖ Providing the Stated Clerk, the Moderator of the General Assembly, and the Executive Director of the General Assembly Council with information as they fulfill their responsibilities to communicate and interpret General Assembly policies on women's concerns.
- ❖ Monitoring the implementation of women's policies and programs relative to women's concerns.
- ❖ Through advocacy maintaining a strong prophetic witness to the church and for the church on existing and emerging issues of women's concerns.

The ACWC is a function of the Office of the Deputy Executive Director, General Assembly Council, although staffing is provided by the Women's Ministries program area, National Ministries Division. The committee has direct access to the General Assembly and the ACWC chair has corresponding member status with GAC and with the General Assembly. The ACWC has ten members nominated by the General Assembly Nominating Committee and elected by the General Assembly. They are chosen based on their individual qualifications and do not represent any constituencies. Current members are Karen Breckenridge (co-chair), Sarah A. Colwill (co-chair beginning in August 2005), Adeline S. deCastro, Dean E. Foose, Jerri Rodewald, Aleida Jernigan, R. Ann (Ani) Lelea, F. William (Bill) Gray, Terry Alexander, and Nancy Neal (co-chair until August 2005). In addition, Lillian Oats (co-chair) is a full voting member of the committee, representing Presbyterian Women. Allison Seed is a full voting member elected to the advocacy committee by the General Assembly Council and also sits on the GAC Executive Committee.

Recognizing the complex ways in which gender inequality manifests itself differently because of class, race, ethnicity, education, age, status in employment, disability, sexual orientation, marital status, and culture, ACWC invites liaisons from other entities of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to sit with the committee at its regularly scheduled meetings. Those entities are the Advocacy Committee on Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC), the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP), the National Network of Presbyterian College Women (NNPCW), the Racial Ethnic Young Women Together (REYWT), the Presbyterian Health, Education, & Welfare Association (PHEWA), the Congregational Ministries Division (CMD), the Presbyterian United Nations Office (PUNO), and the Worldwide Ministries Division (WMD). In turn, liaisons from the ACWC attend the meetings of the ACSWP, ACREC and the Committee on Mission Responsibility Through Investment (MRTI). In 1999, the ACWC began to work with the Board of Pensions (BOP) and, in 2002, with the Presbyterian Health, Education, & Welfare Association (PHEWA).

2. Accomplishments

During the years 2004 and 2005, ACWC met three times each year—January 22–24, 2004, in St. Petersburg, Fla.; July 22–24, 2004, in Seattle, Wash.; October 14–16, 2004, in Princeton, N.J.; and January 20–22, 2005, in San Francisco, Calif. (concurrent with the ACSWP and ACREC); August 10–13, 2005, in Sioux Falls, S.Dak.; and October 6–8, 2005, in Tempe, Ariz.

3. Meeting Summary—2004

January 22–24, 2004, in St. Petersburg, Fla.: The January meeting included guests Vernon Carroll (chair of General Assembly Council), Mary Elva Smith (associate director, Women's Ministries and Collegiate Ministries, National Ministries Division), and guest speaker, Dianne Tennis (author of "Is God the Only Reliable Father?"). Considerable working time was spent preparing advice and counsel for issues before and referral items to the 216th General Assembly (2004). The site visit for the January meeting was to the Beth-El Farmworkers Mission, serving the rural populations of Hillsborough, Manatee, and Sarasota counties in Florida. Beth-El helps farm workers move toward self-sufficiency through education, worship, and outreach. It is a coordinated ministry of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church and the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). At this meeting the committee approved (by consensus) the following mission statement:

"The Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC) is called by [the] General Assembly to be a voice of justice and advocacy for women in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and around the world; in order to give full expression to the rich diversity within its membership (Book of Order, G-4.0403). To this end, we advocate for full inclusiveness and equity in all areas of life and work in the Church and society. "Does not wisdom call, and does not understanding raise her voice?" Proverbs 8:1"

July 22–24, 2004, in Seattle, Wash.: When the committee met in July 2004, guests included Kathy Lueckert, Deputy Executive Director, General Assembly Council (GAC); Flora Wilson Bridges, Seattle University professor and pastor of Madrona Presbyterian Church; and Elizabeth Stanhope, student, Fuller Theological Seminary (and intern working with Rev.

Bridges). Work of this meeting centered on discussing the Mission Work Plan (2005–2006), the effects of downsizing national staff especially in Women’s Ministries (2004), a restructuring of ACWC to a non-hierarchical structure where leadership duties are shared among three co-chairs serving different functions (described below), and a guided discussion with the guests from Seattle Pacific University around issues for women clergy in the church.

The leadership will be a leadership team made up of three co-chairs with differing functions, as follows:

- Co-chair for General Assembly Relations and that person would be identified as the corresponding member to General Assembly and serve as Advice and Counsel chair;
- Co-chair for General Assembly Council Relations and that person would have corresponding member status; and,
- Co-chair for Committee Relations and that person would oversee the internal work group relations and ACWC’s relationships with other committees, particularly where we have liaisons.

The three co-chairs would share moderating duties during regular meetings. This model was chosen after several meetings consideration because it encourage participation of all ACWC members; allows work to be completed without a hierarchy of leadership; and, provides leadership development for members. Liaisons from the committee were designated for Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC), Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP), Board of Pensions (BOP), Mission Responsibility Through Investment (MRTI), National Association of Presbyterian Clergywomen (NAPC), National Network of Presbyterian College Women (NNPCW), and Presbyterian Health, Education, & Welfare Association (PHEWA). A final edit of the clergywomen report was completed and approved for printing (in 2005). The committee generated a list for new work of ACWC and the following were accepted and assigned working groups (recognizing the 216th General Assembly (2004) would generate additional work for the committee): human sexuality, violence (Juarez murders/border issues), status of women in PC(USA), including immigrant churches, and, ordination of Christian educators. The site visit in Seattle was to the Church of Mary Magdalene, a program for women who are struggling to be free from multiple difficulties including homelessness, poverty, and abuse. It is for women who have been robbed and raped emotionally, spiritually, and physically. The Church of Mary Magdalene was founded in 1991 by Presbyterian clergywoman, Jean Kim, who was called in a dream to “plant the cross” for homeless women of Seattle.

October 14–16, 2004, in Princeton, N.J.: The October meeting was situated at the seminary to continue responding to the concerns of clergywomen and female seminarians in the process of ordination. Guests to this meeting were Abigail Rian Evans and Katharine Doob Sakenfeld, professors at Princeton Theological Seminary and fifteen Princeton Seminary female students. The speakers, Professor Evans and Professor Sakenfeld, talked about the experiences of Princeton Theological Seminary in graduating women interested in pastoral leadership. In a later session, the Princeton students and ACWC members had an informal discussion about the students’ experiences with the use of inclusive and expansive language at the seminary. An informational exchange took place regarding pastors’ first calls and moving from seminary to a church. Current campus concerns include: sexual harassment, networking, and social justice issues. In addition to the working groups and assigned topics, a draft of the ACWC Manual of Operations was reviewed by the committee and accepted by consensus. The status of women working group presented five issues before women in leadership positions. They are: leadership—lay pastors; pay equity/benefits—staff, clergy, full-time, part-time; power to influence or make decisions (authority); perceptions of women (attention to or criticism of their speaking manner, appearance, etc.); and, mission priorities (sexual harassment, inclusive/expansive language, etc.). The working group on inclusive/expansive language distributed a draft of the Trinity report being written by a task group in collaboration with the Office of Theology and Worship to the entire committee for consideration and feedback at a future meeting.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC) fulfilled the responsibility to prepare statements, reports, recommendations, and advice and counsel to the General Assembly on issues that impact the status and well being of women in the following ways:

- Prepared thirty-two advice and counsel memoranda on nineteen overtures, two commissioner resolutions, and one report, affecting women and their children coming before the 216th General Assembly (2004). Several were written in consultation with the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns and the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy. Additionally, ACWC resourced six committees. The ACWC also participated in the Women’s Orientation Breakfast and in the Women’s Ministries Luncheon.

- Held an open consultation at the 216th General Assembly (2004) to hear ongoing concerns of clergywomen in the church. This was in response to 2003 Referral: Item 04-01. Report, Clergywomen’s Experiences in Ministry: Realities and Challenges, Recommendation 10. That the General Assembly Instruct the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC) to Provide a Forum at Future General Assemblies for Clergywomen to Comment on Issues Raised in the 2002 ACWC Survey and Offer Continuing Feedback to the Church (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 62, 293).

- Continued, in partnership with others, an ongoing review of the church's policies on sexual misconduct by the clergy.
- Continued work assisting the church in use of inclusive and expansive language.
- Adopted a continual process for discerning future work for the committee.
- Led the effort to produce a post-abortion pastoral resource and published the resource, Problem Pregnancy: When Pregnancy Involves Loss (2004). This series provides support to those providing spiritual guidance and counseling to women and men who are dealing with issues of problem pregnancy in their lives. The brochure was received by the 216th General Assembly (2004).
- Delivered an advice and counsel memorandum to the Executive Committee of the General Assembly Council regarding the then proposed changes to the Women's Ministries program area (May 2004).
- Addressed all referrals from previous General Assemblies (individual reports contained in the following section of this document); submitted ACWC's narrative report to the 216th General Assembly (2004).
- Received the Mission Work Plan (2005–2006) approved by the 216th General Assembly (2004) and began to describe committee work in compliance with the goal areas and objectives.

Networking, Monitoring and Communication—In addition to the exposure to local advocates in areas where ACWC's regular meetings are held, the very make-up of the ACWC allows for networking, monitoring, and evaluating procedures, policies, and programs among General Assembly entities and program areas. Through staff to the ACWC, networking around public policy issues is carried out through the Public Policy Advocate Team (PPAT) made up of GAC staff, representing several program areas; the Cross-Caucus meetings of the Racial Ethnic Ministries; and through involvement in issue oriented inter-staff meetings and conferences. The ACWC moved toward stronger partnership and more open communication with ACSWP and ACREC in planning joint meetings in January 2005.

In these ways a monitoring of broad concerns related to women of color, immigrant women, and working parents (child care) can be more efficiently affected. Likewise, such issues as domestic violence and other examples of violence against women, sexual misconduct policies, economic concerns as pay equity, women and health, and many other gender-related concerns can be lifted up and addressed in concert with other program entities of the church, making new partnerships possible.

The ACWC was invited to be a consulting partner to listen and be a resource for participants at the National Consultation of Racial Ethnic Women in the PC(USA) in October 15–17, 2004. The consulting partners, in partnership with the consultation organizers, developed a strategic plan (released in 2005) to address issues identified by the women of color. This event is recognized later in this report as the Women of Color Consultation. Appropriate issues will be considered by ACWC for future advocacy work. [See Other Actions section for information regarding the joint resolution from ACWC and ACREC.]

4. Meeting Summary—2005

January 22-24, San Francisco, Calif.: The ACWC, ACSWP, and ACREC all convened in San Francisco for their meetings. All three committees spent January 21 (before their meeting) in a joint education session about cultural proficiency led by the Reverend Kikanza Nuri Robins. The next day, ACWC and ACREC met jointly and focused on immigration issues in the California context. The speaker was Betty Canton-Self, executive director for the Interfaith Coalition for Immigrant Rights (ICIR). Discussing issues of citizenship, farm workers, home services, and federal issues, the committees explored ways they can continue working in a coordinated way on their mutual concerns and identified important areas of potential collaboration. As a result, ACWC and ACREC acted on items to increase their future collaboration on issues of mutual concern, intentionally meeting together once a year, and have their leadership and liaisons meet by conference call twice a year. Helen Locklear, Deputy Executive Director, GAC, met with the ACWC to discuss the Mission Work Plan and its critical role in directing the committee's work. Work groups discussed continuing issues from the 216th General Assembly (2004) and projected projects. The ACWC wrote a letter to the GAC personnel committee regarding the dismissal of two employees in late 2004 and elected the Reverend Sarah Colwill as a member of the Leadership Team replacing Nancy Neal beginning at the August 2005 meeting.

August 10-14, Sioux Falls, S.Dak.: The meeting was delayed until August to accommodate the harvest season and to make meeting in Sioux Falls with farmers possible. The ACWC went to Sioux Falls to discuss the We Are What We Eat report with the persons involved in its prompting and writing and to explore issues for rural churches and women in farming communities around globalization and food security. Guest speakers included: Kathryn Baker, Presbyterian Women (PW); Jerilynn Bakken; Bernetta and Dick Burghardt; Holly Butrum; Kathy Callies; Marion Cramer; Wendy Figland; the Reverend Peter Funch; Cal Hansen; Florence Hoff; Marian Judy; Dianne Larson; Paula Larson; Vi Leonard; Crystal Page; Julie Pearson; Carolyn Petik; the Reverend Tom Pickles; the Reverend Richard (Dick), Linda, and Ann Poppen; Diana Stephen, associate, Network Support/Rural and Small Church Ministries, NMD; the Reverend Carolyn Visser; Vicky Wahl; and Delores Walter. Diana Stephen highlighted in her presentation that “there is an economic crisis within rural communities and thought must be given to how policies affect these rural communities. There is a deep hurt—this (farming/ranching) is a vocation that is becoming industrialized. Large companies are exhausting the land, the animals, the water, etc. and accepting no responsibility for the damage they do. This is a global issue.” She went on to note that women serve as pastor for many small and rural churches. The salaries are very low, however, there are many opportunities. She and Kathryn Baker raised other issues in the area: domestic violence, prevalence of depression, and a high suicide rate. Health care is an issue as the closest (physical or mental) health care can be more than 100 miles away. This was the context for the field exploration and interviews with local pastors, elders, and community members. The ACWC extended the meeting by one day to include extensive field trips into the surrounding communities. This was an eye-opening meeting, renewing ACWC members to raise issues of the local effects of globalization on communities and women in particular.

October 6-8, Tempe, Ariz.: The ACWC located their October meeting at Cook College and Theological School, a Presbyterian racial ethnic school, in Tempe, Arizona, to re-familiarize themselves with concerns regarding Presbyterian racial ethnic schools. The committee stayed in the conference center and met on-campus for all their meetings. The ACWC spoke with Larry R. Norris, president; Vivian Winter Chaser, director of Public Relations; Minta McIntosh, volunteer in mission and coordinator for the Conference Center; and Maramlyen Tokeak, student body president. Our hosts shared cultural stories, songs, and hospitality in addition to explaining history, describing the student body, and financial/survival concerns of racial ethnic schools, in general, and Cook College, in particular. Racial ethnic schools was a topic of concern raised at the 216th General Assembly (2004).

The ACWC fulfilled the responsibility to prepare statements, reports, recommendations, and advice and counsel to the General Assembly on issues that impact the status and well-being of women in the following ways:

- Prepared advice and counsel memoranda regarding draft reports, policies and staffing concerns, and/or delivered letters of concerns with GAC entities.
- Delivered a letter to the Office of General Assembly recommending to all General Assembly entities, presbyteries, and synods that 10 percent of what people spend on meetings should be spent locally.
- Delivered an advice and counsel memoranda to the Governance Task Force, GAC, expressing concerns over the proposed changes in the structure of the General Assembly Council.
- Delivered two letters, raising the committee’s concerns with the Office of Theology and Worship regarding staffing/hiring and in response to a draft of the Trinity report and inclusive/expansive language.
- Delivered a letter enclosing the brochure, Well Chosen Words (2005), to all Presbyterian seminaries to promote the importance of using inclusive/expansive language in theological education.
- Monitored issues and concerns before the PC(USA) in reports from ACSWP, ACREC, Working Group on the Trinity, Theological Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church, Presbyterian Washington Office, Presbyterian United Nations Office, and other entities that address women’s concerns.
- Delivered a letter to the GAC personnel committee regarding employee dismissals in late 2004.
- Continued, in partnership with others, a review of the church’s policies on sexual misconduct by the clergy.
- Received a report from ACWC staff who attended the Association for Women’s Rights in Development (AWID) Forum in Bangkok, Thailand, through the Office of Women’s Advocacy.
- Moved to a non-hierarchical structure of having a leadership team of three co-chairs with differing functions.
- Produced, through collaboration with Women’s Ministries and the Women’s Advocacy Office, an updated version of Well Chosen Words (2005 revised document, PDS #72-839-05-003) and the Clergywomen’s Experiences in Ministry: Realities and Challenges 2003 (revised document 2005 available online at www.pcusa.org/womensadvocacy/clergywomen/clergywomen-report05.pdf).

- Submitted the ACWC Manual of Operations for approval and comment by the GAC.
- Collaborated with the Stated Clerk and Moderator in writing a letter to all presbyteries and synods in response to the referral item from 216th General Assembly (2004) in regard to problem pregnancies.
- Received and endorsed the report (2005) from the Women of Color Consultation(2004).
- Formed a working group with ACREC that will work on responding to the recommendations from the consultation and monitor the church’s response to the report. The full report is included in the ACREC report as Appendix A: Report and Recommendations from the Women of Color Consultation.
- Designated two members and two former members to serve on a self-study committee and began the process of preparing for ACWC to be reviewed at the 217th General Assembly (2006).
- Submitted ACWC’s annual narrative report to the General Assembly Council (March 2005).

Networking, Monitoring and Communication—The very make-up of the ACWC allows for networking with General Assembly entities and program areas. Through staff of ACWC and of the Women’s Advocacy Office, networking around public policy issues is carried out through the Public Policy Advocate Team (PPAT) made up of General Assembly Council staff, representing several program areas; the Immigration Table made up of GAC staff; the Sexual Misconduct table; and the Cross-Caucus meetings of the Racial Ethnic Ministries. Staff also collaborates strongly with Presbyterian Women, especially the Justice and Peace committee of the Churchwide Coordinating Committee (CCT) and the Racial Ethnic Dialogue group.

The ACWC issue reports, approved by past General Assemblies, are made available through the Office of Women’s Advocacy in the Women’s Ministries program area. These reports serve as a means of communicating with the larger church and are available through the Presbyterian Distribution Service (PDS). Report information is also available on the web at www.pcusa.org/womensadvocacy/acwc/reports. Recent reports include:

- Clergywomen’s Experiences in Ministry: Realities and Challenges (available from the Office of Women’s Advocacy) 2003 (revised 2005).
- Sisters of Mercy, Daughters of Grace: Presbyterians and Prostituted Women (PDS #095814) 2001.
- Women & AIDS: A Global Crisis (PDS #72 710 01 003) 2001 (made available online in January 2006).

D. General Assembly Committee on Representation Agency Summary

1. Assigned Responsibilities

The General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR), in its constitutional mandate, shall advise, advocate, resource, review, recommend, and consult with the General Assembly committees, councils, and Ministries Divisions in order to ensure that the principles of inclusiveness are implemented. Its main function shall be to advise the governing bodies with respect to their membership and to that of their committees, boards, agencies, and other units in implementing the principles of participation and inclusiveness to ensure fair and effective representation in the decision making of the church. The committee shall advise the General Assembly on the employment of personnel in conformity with the Churchwide Plan for Affirmative Action and Equal Employment Opportunity.

2. Accomplishments

The GACOR has the responsibility to assist the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to realize that it needs its diverse membership to participate fully in leadership and that their contribution is important and must be sought out and acknowledged. The GACOR presented a report to the 216th General Assembly (2004) regarding the selection/election of commissioners to General Assemblies. The committee's recommendations were approved, and a letter was sent to all synods and presbyteries providing information and guidance on the need of the presbyteries to make greater efforts toward achieving diversity when selecting/electing commissioners to General Assemblies, particularly with respect to increased representation of racial ethnic groups, younger elders and ministers, and persons with disabilities.

Orientation for new members on GACOR continues to be provided by members and staff of GACOR in conjunction with executive committee meetings so new members can rapidly familiarize themselves with the workings of the committee.

As part of its efforts to promote equal employment opportunity and affirmative action, GACOR continues to circulate and publicize job postings in order to reach a more inclusive pool and continues to assign GACOR members to serve as liaisons to, and attend meetings of, cross caucus and racial ethnic caucuses.

It is through training, worship, strategies, study, and sharing that the GACOR equips and challenges synod CORs to achieve, accomplish, realize, endorse, and preserve the commitment of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to inclusiveness in their synods and presbyteries.

The GACOR's Training Subcommittee provides both training and developmental opportunities for GACOR members and synod CORs. In October 2005, GACOR sponsored a biennial training event for synod COR staff and chairpersons in Daytona Beach, Florida. The event was attended by forty-four people and fourteen synods were represented. The theme of the training was "Guess Who's Coming to Dinner," and the purpose of the workshop was to equip and challenge synod CORs to achieve inclusiveness in their synods and presbyteries. The Reverend Robert E. Jones, pastor of the College Hill Community Presbyterian Church in Dayton, Ohio, was the worship leader for the workshop. Valerie Small, Assistant Stated Clerk and manager for General Assembly Nominations and Moderatorial Staff Services, was the keynote speaker. The presentation by Presbyterians for Disability Concerns (PDC) lifted up the challenges and experiences faced by persons with disabilities. A presentation by the Reverend Anna Pinckney Straight, member of the General Assembly Nominating Committee (GANC), highlighted the nominating process and the need for CORs and nominating committees to work together. An examination of the evaluation forms from the training event revealed that all participants received familiar information from a new perspective. Many commented that the training provided new ways to work with synod and presbytery CORs.

Training for GACOR members was accomplished during 2004/2005 meetings by inviting guest speakers to full committee meetings. The Reverend Belinda Curry, associate for Policy Development and Interpretation for the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy; the Reverend Gradye Parsons, director of Operations, Office of the General Assembly, and the Reverend Robina Winbush, director of the Department of Ecumenical and Agency Relations, Office of the General Assembly, were guest speakers at committee meetings, and their presentations were educational and informative. General Assembly Committee on Representation Manager Joan E. Richardson provided training for members on "Cultural Proficiency." A presentation entitled, "Change Management," was given by GACOR member Angelica Michail to help members adjust to the many changes taking place in their churches and communities. A report on the National Council of Churches in Christ (NCCC) was given by the Reverend Dr. Stanley Bhasker, GACOR member, which provided insight into the work of NCCC.

Over a two-year period, the GACOR Program Subcommittee evaluated COR reports from fifteen synods, which is an indication of the increased interest and concern at the synod level for the committee on representation. There are isolated instances where synods still need to pay closer attention to their makeup, but on the whole there is improvement in many areas across the church. [Note: The Synod of Rocky Mountains has not submitted a report to GACOR for two years.]

Many synod CORs have increased their interface with their respective presbyteries by sponsoring training sessions and heightened representation. Also, there seems to be an increase of synod COR representation on synod nominating committees. There have been increased requests for instructional materials for their presbyteries to enhance their revitalization of the work of COR.

The Program Subcommittee received requests to make the synod annual report form more user friendly on the PC(USA) website for downloading. Efforts are still underway that hopefully will enable respondents to enter data directly on the web. The form is also available in Microsoft Word, which is e-mailed to synods upon request.

The new GACOR Manual of Operations is revised and printed. Copies were distributed to GACOR members and synod COR staff and chairpersons. The new manual is available for synods and presbyteries to use as a model when updating and creating their own manual of operations.

The Synod of the Northeast held a COR training event in September 2005 at the Presbyterian Center in Holmes, New York. The theme of the training was, "There Is No They." It was very fruitful to learn what COR is and what our responsibilities are as a result of the COR training session. Joan E. Richardson, GACOR manager, participated in the training, and the following topics were covered:

- Biblical base for the work of COR
- Unpacking committee responsibilities
- Building relationships between COR and nominating committees
- Activating inactive committees
- Doing COR work in a new way

The synod of Southern California and Hawaii presented “Everything You Wanted to Know About COR ... To Do COR Work” in February 2005. There are eight presbyteries in the synod and all but one were represented. Angelica Michail spoke on the work of GACOR and explained the brochure, “How to Start or Revive Presbytery CORs.” General Assembly Committee on Representation buttons, bookmarks, toolboxes, and various brochures were distributed. The retreat was a wonderful venue for training and establishing better communication between synod and presbytery COR members.

The Synod of Lakes and Prairies Nominating Committee and the committee on representation (COR) met in joint session in April 2005. This was an excellent opportunity for COR to see first hand the processes, challenges, and outcomes of the work that is done by the nominating committee. It also was a great opportunity for the nominating committee to hear observations, comments, and suggestions from COR members. Topics of interest to both committees were discussed:

- For recruitment for positions in presbyteries, synods, General Assembly—what criteria, expertise is needed?
- What is the role of synod COR and nominating committee in recruitment, training, and modeling effective work?
- What is/should be our relationship with presbytery counterparts, General Assembly, and each other?

Synods of Mid-Atlantic, Trinity, and Mid-America had COR meetings and training events also. Joan Richardson, GACOR manager, participated in the meetings and shared training materials and resources.

The 216th General Assembly (2004) approved a recommendation that permanent, advocacy, and advisory committees and commissions of the General Assembly would be reviewed to evaluate their work to fulfill the mandates given to them by the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) based on a six-year schedule. The General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR) will be reviewed at the 217th General Assembly (2006). The GACOR established a Self-Study Task Group to evaluate the work of the committee over the previous six years. The task group established a process for self-evaluation, reviewed materials and statistics, and will be presenting its results to the Assembly Committee for Review at the 217th General Assembly (2006).

3. Membership

The GACOR’s commitment to inclusiveness is reflected in the diversity of its membership from the sixteen synods as follows:

E. Advisory Committee on Litigation Self-Study Report for the 217th General Assembly (2006)History

In 1987, The Office of the General Assembly joined with the office of the Advisory Council on Church and Society to carry out a consultation on involvement in litigation in civil courts. Guidelines were prepared to assist the Stated Clerk in carrying out responsibilities in connection with possible participation in litigation in civil courts. In 1988, the Office of the General Assembly recommended that the General Assembly establish an Advisory Committee on Litigation to advise the Stated Clerk on various matters of litigation for which the clerk is responsible under Standing Rule M.2.b.(2). This body was anticipated to strengthen the work of the Office of the General Assembly in dealing with matters such as the filing of briefs—amicus curiae (friend of the court briefs), and other, more direct forms of participation in litigation in secular civil and criminal courts.

Purpose and Form

The Advisory Committee on Litigation is made up of six elected persons who are members of a PC(USA) governing body and ordinarily attorneys-at-law. These six elected persons are experienced in legal fields that relate to issues that may be the subject of legal proceedings in which the church is, or may become, interested. The committee advises the Stated Clerk regarding participation in litigation related to matters of civil and religious liberty, relations between church and state, and any other matters related to the mission and interest of the church. The Advisory Committee on Litigation also advises the Stated Clerk regarding the establishment and maintenance of a resource file of legal documents as a means of assisting the governing bodies and agencies of the church in initiating or participating in litigation in the areas within the concerns of the committee.

Occasionally an issue will arise in a presbytery or synod where it will be appropriate for that governing body to join, or even draft, an amicus curiae brief in support of religious liberty or a position of interest to the governing body. An amicus curiae brief is literally a “friend of the court” brief. It may raise an issue not explicitly raised by the parties, but one quite relevant to the case. Usually such briefs are filed only with leave of the court. They are almost always limited to appellate level filings.

The Standing Rules of the General Assembly gives the General Assembly Stated Clerk authority to join in such briefs on behalf of the General Assembly (Standing Rule M.2.b.(2)). Since 1988, the Advisory Committee on Litigation has advised the clerk on whether to join or file particular amicus curiae briefs. The Advisory Committee has developed sixteen criteria for use in determining whether to file a particular brief (see below).

When a case arises, the Advisory Committee on Litigation reviews all the case material and any policy or procedure of the PC(USA) that may pertain to the case. They then apply the criteria listed below in deciding how to advise the State Clerk. This process can take many hours of intense evaluation and may result in a recommendation that the Stated Clerk participate in, either directly as a party or by filing an amicus brief in the litigation. The ACL may also advise that the Stated Clerk not participate in the particular litigation for a variety of reasons.

Over the years, the General Assembly has also twice requested that the Advisory Committee on Litigation be a resource in the development of social policy when that social policy may have secular legal implications. As such, the General Assembly requested that the ACL advise the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy in the development of policy or resolutions regarding late-term abortions, takings, and clergy confidentiality.

The Standing Rules state that the Advisory Committee on Litigation shall also advise the Stated Clerk regarding the establishment and maintenance of a resource file of legal documents as a means of assisting the governing bodies and agencies of the church in initiating or participating in litigation in the areas within the concerns of the committee.

When the General Assembly Stated Clerk is invited to join or file a brief that would have regional or local implications, the Assistant Stated Clerk will normally contact the Stated Clerk of the affected governing body. She will provide, upon request, copies of legal pleadings, relevant scriptural, confessional, or policy statements on the substantive issue. If there is a draft amicus, she will normally share that as well.

A presbytery or synod may join the General Assembly Stated Clerk on briefs if that fits within the social witness of the presbytery (G-11.0103c, and G-11.0103aa) or synod (G-12.0102c and G-12.0102t). The appropriate signatory on such a brief is typically the Stated Clerk as the ecclesiastical representative of governing body. A presbytery may provide by rule for some other person (such as an executive presbyter) who bears that responsibility. It is advisable for the governing body to develop a process and identify responsible officers or employees. If legal issue arises within a presbytery or synod that would benefit by the filing of an amicus brief, the General Assembly Stated Clerk will often join the presbytery upon request.

Self-Evaluation

1. In developing and consistently using the criteria for evaluation of litigation, the Advisory Committee on Litigation has a thorough definition of its work and process for completing its work. Because of the nature of litigation, this usually is applied in a short time frame for each particular case involvement; however, the application and evaluation process happens continually for as long as the Stated Clerk is involved in a particular litigation.

2. The Advisory Committee on Litigation regularly self-evaluates its services to the Stated Clerk as it applies to evolving civil law and evolving social policy of the PC(USA). This is done at the annual meeting of the ACL. However, the Advisory Committee on Litigation is always on call for use by the Stated Clerk. The Stated Clerk regularly participates in conference calls and meetings of the Advisory Committee on Litigation. The Stated Clerk additionally engages an Assistant Stated Clerk as a liaison with the Advisory Committee on Litigation.

3. Since the Advisory Committee on Litigation advises the Stated Clerk, the Committee itself does not employ a strategy for communication with the church-at-large. The Stated Clerk and the Office of the General Assembly do have a strategy for communication of any litigation in which the Stated Clerk participates through amicus briefs or as a direct party. The OGA has created a webpage that includes copies of all briefs filed by the Stated Clerk as an amicus or a direct party. (www.pcusa.org/acl)

4. The Advisory Committee on Litigation utilizes technology made available to them through the Office of the General Assembly. They additionally utilize their professional expertise to advise the Stated Clerk on any needs they may have to fulfill their function as an advisory committee.

5. The Advisory Committee on Litigation meets face-to-face annually and reviews its mission as well as any potential litigation or social issue that may be emerging that is of interest to the PC(USA). This meeting typically consists of a review of current, past, and future civil legal issues of interest to the PC(USA) and their evolving civil legal precedents and church social policy.

6. The Advisory Committee on Litigation had an annual budget of approx $16,000 in 2005, $18,000 in 2006, $17,000 in 2007, and $18,500 in 2008. This budget includes the annual meeting, legal research fees, brief preparation, conference calls, copying, legal resources, and representation to General Assembly.

Criteria for Evaluation of an Amicus Brief in Litigation

1. Does the case raise a significant religious or ethical issue of concern for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)?
2. Has the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), through the General Assembly, the church Constitution, or accepted biblical, confessional, and theological principles, advocated or adopted a position that is relevant to the issue or issues raised in the case?
3. Can the church's position on the issue or issues be persuasively and effectively communicated in the amicus brief?
4. Does the amicus brief enunciate statements inconsistent with policies and positions approved by the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) through the General Assembly or inconsistent with accepted theological principles? If such an inconsistency exists, can the church's position be expressed in such a way as to accurately reflect the church's position without compromising that position or the integrity of the amicus brief or should a separate amicus brief be prepared?
5. Is the proposed amicus brief well-written and practically and legally well-reasoned and persuasive?
6. Has the committee and the Stated Clerk been provided with adequate time to evaluate any proposed amicus brief and the issues presented?
7. Are the issues raised in the case based on a properly developed record and have key pleadings and lower court decisions been supplied?
8. What other organizations, including other religious entities, have been requested to join as amici?
9. Who has prepared the draft amicus brief and for what purpose?

10. Are there issues in the case that will need interpretation to presbyteries and congregations? Should pastors and governing bodies be notified of the case so that they may be able to answer questions? If yes, staff are instructed to notify.

11. Are the issues raised in the case of sufficient importance to justify participation?

12. Does the proposed amicus brief really add anything to the court's consideration of the issues presented?

13. Within the judicial system, is the level appropriate for the church's participation?

14. What positions or views will other proposed amici take with respect to the issue or issues raised?

15. Is there a legislative remedy?

16. Criteria 1–5 are guidelines and in each case the committee will exercise its best judgment, but may also consider other factors in making its decision.

Stated Clerk's Comments of the Advisory Committee on Litigation

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution plays a unique, narrow, but very important niche in the life of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). In addition to witness in the public arena, the General Assembly has long recognized the need and value of making witness to our theological, moral, and social justice concerns through the judicial system in our country. Given that this requires not only knowledge of General Assembly policy but also an understanding of the implications of particular judicial actions or inaction on how they are lived out in our society, skilled legal insight is crucial for this work.

To provide that expertise the Advisory Committee on Litigation was created. It is composed of six Presbyterian attorneys who advise the Stated Clerk on the legal and judicial implications of potential amicus briefs that the church is invited to enter from time to time to promote religious freedom, human rights, and social justice. As the only "client" of the committee, I am extremely grateful for the competence, dedication, and insight that this committee offers. They have greatly enhanced our witness in the judicial sphere and enabled the church to make an important witness in a number of areas about which the General Assembly cares deeply.

Below is my brief response as the "client" of Advisory Committee on Litigation in relation to the criteria that the assembly has specified for the evaluation of its permanent committees. (Note: The Stated Clerk's responses are listed in italic type.)

Assessment Criteria

A. Fidelity to Mission and Partnership

1. Each committee or commission was created by the church and exists to serve and support the church's mission in a particular area. Each committee or commission is expected to exhibit a constant faithfulness to and in fulfillment of its servant role in the life of the PC(USA).

Without something like the ACL [Advisory Committee on Litigation] there would be no way that the assembly could faithfully assess the right intersection between the witness of the assembly and the judicial process. The committee has stayed clearly focused on this charge and has carried it out well.

2. The basic process of the committee or commission should demonstrate fidelity to the mission and accountability procedures set forth in its establishing deliverance, charter, or mandate from the assembly. The committee or commission should exhibit leadership in guiding the church in engagement with the work and resources in which the committee or commission acts.

The assembly has identified sixteen criteria for deciding when to file an amicus brief, and the ACL has consistently shaped its advice based on those criteria.

3. The committee or commission should exhibit practical cooperation with the other agencies or committees of the church in areas of overlapping responsibility and opportunity.

The ACL has worked collaboratively and well with a number of General Assembly committees. On instruction of the assembly, the committee has collaborated with the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy in areas such as "takings" and clergy confidentiality. The church has been able to approve wiser and better policies because of these cooperative ventures.

4. The committee or commission should provide timely responses to directives and requests from the General Assembly.

All directives from the assembly have been responded to on a timely basis.

B. Effectiveness of Services

The services of the committee or commission are consistent with its assembly or constitutional mandate.

1. The committee or commission has a defined and consistent process for completing its work.

The committee has established and followed its criteria and has always been available to advise the Stated Clerk either by email, conference call, or face-to-face meeting.

2. The committee or commission has a regular process of self-evaluation of its services.

Both this self study and a regular assessment of the judicial impact of the briefs filed have been part of the committee's process.

3. The committee or commission employs a strategy for effective communication with the church-at-large.

Since the committee's primary charge is to advise the Stated Clerk, it does not have a major interpretive role. However, it has established a website so that the whole church can be aware of its procedures, the briefs filed, and the results achieved.

4. The committee or commission utilizes current and emerging technologies to enable it to fulfill its mission.

The ACL makes regular and effective use of technology in its work.

5. The committee or commission has developed a vision and plans for its work in light of its historic mandate and the emerging issues before and context of the PC(USA).

One of the actions taken when the committee holds annual face-to-face meetings is not only to advise the Stated Clerk on particular cases, but also look at the whole of General Assembly witness and current issues before the judicial system and advise the Stated Clerk on areas in which we should seek opportunities to judicially make our witness. This has led to giving priority in our briefs to issues of religious freedom, ending the death penalty, human rights, and justice for immigrants.

“(5) The committee shall be funded through the per capita budget of the Office of the General Assembly, receive staff services as provided by the Stated Clerk, and designate a representative to the annual session of the General Assembly (see Standing Rule B.3.).

“(6) The committee shall report to each session of the General Assembly.”

F. Advisory Committee on the Constitution Self-Study

CHAPTER I

THE ADVISORY COMMITTEE ON THE CONSTITUTION: ITS UNIQUE AND ESSENTIAL ROLE IN THE LIFE OF THE CHURCH

A. A Brief History

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC) was created with the reunion of The United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America and the Presbyterian Church in the United States in 1983. Prior to that, the predecessor denominations had relied upon the respective General Assembly stated clerks to do several of the functions now assigned to the ACC. In The United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, it was the General Assembly’s Stated Clerk—who was charged with interpreting the denomination’s constitution—who would draft the opinions and polity advice pertaining to any overture that sought to amend the constitution. This overture counsel from the Stated Clerk was summarily presented to the General Assembly’s polity committee for assembly action at the time of the annual General Assembly meeting.¹ The Presbyterian Church in the United States utilized a different mechanism in regard to proposed overtures that sought to change the constitution. Predictably, the Stated Clerk was the primary ecclesiastical officer; however any overtures submitted to the Office of the Stated Clerk were duly presented to the Permanent Judicial Commission for action.²

The original 1983 formula for ACC membership, in G-13.0112a, set the number of members at six, but this did not last long, undoubtedly due to the flood of overtures to the next assembly, which was more than six persons could reasonably handle, and an amendment to the Book of Order, setting the number of members at nine, was approved by the assembly in 1985.

Over the years since 1985, an intriguing dynamic has continued to flow within the ACC and its nine persons. As specified in G-13.0112a, the scope of persons eligible to become members is not only narrow and technical, i.e. persons with specific skills regarding The Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), but also of quite varied backgrounds and credentials. The result, continually, is a fascinating mix of persons, with attendant personalities, that act and react with each other in a sometimes unpredictable fashion. For instance, a typical meeting of the ACC may feature strong disagreement over a portion of the Book of Order. Thus, the notion of church law being a dull and boring subject is belied by the ongoing work of the ACC. Persons that have recently populated the membership of the ACC include credentials and occupations of being a judge, presbytery executive, attorney, author, teacher, pastor, stated clerk, scholar, et. al. The results have been both amazing and alarming to some. Serendipitous creativity in the form of proposed new law has sprung from the corporate well of the ACC; and, the willingness to suggest to an assembly the expansion of the conventions and traditions of Presbyterian history has also made its mark. The committee of nine is just enough—enough to ensure stability, chemistry, and competence. The emotional and practical bedrock of constitutional law, for the members of the ACC, is a source of strength and nurture. And, the law can free and inspire. In that vein the Constitution contains a sober and serious mandate for the members of the ACC to be faithful students of the rich heritage so generously bequeathed.

B. Organization and Responsibilities

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC) is established by the Book of Order (G-13.0112a and G-18.0301). (See Appendix #1 for all of the Book of Order citations that outline the constitutional mandate for the ACC.) The committee is composed of nine voting members, in rotating classes, who “are former members of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the General Assembly, stated clerks or former stated clerks of synods or presbyteries, or other qualified persons with knowledge of and experience with the Constitution and polity of the church” (G-13.0112a). The complete and comprehensive description of committee and member responsibilities is in the Manual of Procedures for The Advisory Committee on the Constitution of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). (See Appendix #2.) The life-center of the ACC revolves around the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and its role in the life of the church. For instance, any questions requiring an interpretation of the Book of Order are referred to the ACC by the Stated Clerk (G-13.0112c, d). It is the role of the Stated Clerk to routinely make decisions about referring matters that arrive at the Office of the Stated Clerk.³ (See Appendix #3 for the Standing Rules that describe the role of the Stated Clerk.) In many respects, the ACC is directly related to the Stated Clerk and the Office of the General Assembly, but is an independent entity of the General Assembly. The Stated Clerk is an ex-officio member of the ACC, but the actions of the ACC are not subservient to the Stated Clerk. The ACC does not have the authority to interpret the Constitution regarding requests for interpretation of the Constitution, but rather it makes recommendations (advice) to the General Assembly for action, which may be to approve, disapprove, or modify the counsel of the ACC. Preceding the meeting of the General Assembly, the bulk of the ACC’s endeavors involve overtures to the General Assembly, which chiefly are proposed amendments to the Book of Order (G-18.0301b). As a permanent committee of the General Assembly, the ACC offers advice on overtures, many of which are controversial. However, only the assembly’s final action has any constitutional authority.

Requests for interpretation (G-13.0112c, d), often received from stated clerks, typically assume a low profile in the life of the General Assembly until they surface as a routine part of the ACC’s report to the assembly through a General Assembly committee. At that time the assembly must act upon the recommendations of the ACC regarding each request. Sometimes the request is groundbreaking regarding some aspect of our polity. Request 04-09, which was presented to the 215th General Assembly (2003), dealt with the very sensitive topic, “Regarding Administrative Leave in Cases Alleging Sexual Misconduct.” The result was approval, with amendment, of the ACC’s recommendation. However, this proposed amendment to the Book of Order did not survive the necessary ratification by vote of the presbyteries. But the seed for change had been planted and a whole new section of the Book of Order (D-10.0106a, b) was approved by the 216th General Assembly (2004), ratified by the presbyteries; and deals with administrative leave when sexual abuse has been alleged in the life of the church. Another routine aspect of the work of the ACC is to respond to referrals from the General Assembly itself or one of its entities. In the summer of 2004, the ACC addressed a referral from the 216th General Assembly (2004) regarding “Compliance with PJC Decisions.”

C. The ACC’s Call to Mission

It is precisely in the meetings of the General Assembly (GA) that illumine, underscore, and even dramatize the mission of the ACC to the GA and the church. The ACC prepares thoroughly for the meetings of the GA and welcomes its singular role and the responsibilities that unfold in each assembly. (See Appendix #4 for a full description of the duties of the ACC at the meetings of the General Assembly.) The ACC worked comprehensively and cooperatively with the Independent Committee of Inquiry Work Group subcommittee of the General Assembly Council in its preparations for recommendations to the 216th General Assembly (2004). Prior to any GA meeting, the ACC expresses its partnership role by consulting with various entities that will be making significant reports to the GA. The ACC expresses partnership in mission by consulting, in an as-needed basis, with the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly and the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission. Upon request and need, the ACC continues its servant function by working with various other entities, including governing bodies of the PC(USA). In particular, the ACC serves and supports the church’s mission by assisting the GA in making choices about the interpretation and amendment to the Constitution, and more commonly the Book of Order by providing the context of choices and the consequences of proposed actions. At the GA, the primary arena for the ACC’s advice is with the various GA committees that have business related to some aspect of the Constitution. The ACC members are then assigned to resource the GA committees that have business coming to the assembly. The role of the ACC members who staff GA committees is very carefully sculpted: the ACC counsel to GA committees should faithfully provide information on those items being designated for the assembly that require a constitutional interpretation or amendment. That advice is to be expressed in a manner that is clear and understandable to the GA commissioners and any audience present at the GA committee meeting. Most importantly, the ACC's recommendations, because of its focus upon its understanding of the Constitution, shall be neutral in political tone and shall not advocate a position of any entity or group of the PC(USA).

D. The ACC's Significance in a Time of Increasing Tension and Polarization

The ACC consistently attempts to neutrally evaluate constitutional matters before the assembly. It takes great pains to give careful, and always constructive, critique to proposals. The ACC endeavors to be particularly sensitive to the sometimes volatile sentiments and beliefs expressed in our theologically diverse denomination. "The ambiguities of our day require a new intensity of theological and ethical conversation across the church."⁴ The ACC views these realities as an opportunity for further educating and reminding the church of the principles and beliefs expressed in our Constitution. The fundamentals of our polity continue to guide and inspire the church when they are applied in the decision-making process. A good example of this approach has been the continuing scholarship and counsel of the ACC regarding the controversy centering upon G-6.0106b and the ongoing issue of the standards required for ordaining church officers. The ACC views its work as a model for others because it sees itself serving Jesus Christ in a manner of great personal integrity and deep commitment to the principles of our Constitution and the Reformed tradition. The devastating, difficult, and complex issue of sexual misconduct by pastors was provided with comprehensive attention by the ACC at the 216th General Assembly (2004). Perhaps the best illustration of the ACC's encompassing devotion to the issues facing the assembly and the church was the ACC's series of actions at the 216th General Assembly (2004) regarding the lack of understanding of how our polity and Constitution works in regard to compliance with judicial orders. Not only did the ACC provide generous and comprehensive resources on overtures on this issue to the 216th General Assembly (2004) and address as a committee salient matters that arose on this topic during the assembly, but also as a result of questions that surfaced during the GA plenary session, provided recommendations to the assembly (G-13.0112e). Further, following the 216th General Assembly (2004), as a GA referral, the ACC contacted the Presbyteries of Mississippi, Redstone, and Shenango to discuss the presbyteries' concerns regarding compliance with PJC decisions. The Presbytery of Redstone responded to the ACC stating a meeting was not necessary and the Presbytery of Shenango did not respond to the ACC's inquiry. However, two members of the ACC met with representatives of the Presbytery of Mississippi. The results of these inquiries and consultations were reported to the ACC at its 2005 fall meeting.

E. The ACC's Faithfulness in Its Servant Role

Thanks to the Book of Order formula for membership on the ACC (G-13.0112a), and the good work of the General Assembly Nominating Committee, there seems to be a logical connection between the quality and credentials of the persons selected for service in the ACC and the nature and degree of steadfast personal dedication of the ACC's membership. Members of the ACC are happiest when they are in the field working with General Assembly commissioners, entities of the General Assembly, and the governing bodies of the church. "Does the ACC 'serve, exhibit faithfulness and constancy'—without a doubt and to as great or greater an extent than any other entity."⁵

F. The Interface Between the ACC's Constitutional Mandate and Being Equipped to Respond to the Needs of the Church

Looming large over the ACC and its members is a profound awareness that the ACC historically has demonstrated a fierce fidelity to its constitutional mandate while engaging in its ongoing work in a manner that reflects a sensitivity to the ever-changing needs and demands upon the church. The ACC's primary function is to be reactive and responsive to the business that is routinely placed before the committee. The Book of Order places some rather stringent parameters on what the committee can and cannot do. The committee has learned that one of the key components to being visionary in its work is to cherish the past and use it to reflect upon the future. Frequently, when the ACC has crafted its written response to an overture to the General Assembly (GA), the recommendation will cite (and remind the Assembly) of historic events that shaped the denomination as well as drawing attention to GA past decisions that are still relevant and helpful.

The ACC is keenly aware of and concerned about emerging issues in the church—especially the issues that have a polemic and divisive nature. Ordinarily, the ACC addresses these issues in the context of an ACC response to an overture or a concern that arises in the assembly's plenary session. And, the ACC continues to discipline itself about not being perceived as having a position on any matter before the assembly.

At appropriate times, the ACC authors a "trend paper" or research paper that endeavors to be "ahead of the curve" on matters that are underway in the church. These papers are for internal use only. Several years ago such a document was prepared on commissioned lay pastors (CLPs), (G-14.0801). Two years ago an especially timely trend paper, "Enforcing Compliance with Judicial Decisions" was penned by former ACC moderator James MacKellar. In an effort to address a long-standing hue and cry by many throughout the church, the ACC will soon consider the need for a shorter, less complicated, Book of Order.

CHAPTER II

SELF-STUDY STRATEGIES AND PROCESSES

A. Self-Study Goal

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC) welcomes this invitation from the 216th General Assembly (2004) to thoroughly examine and reflect upon its purpose, quality of work, and effectiveness. This self-study endeavors to provide an objective and illuminating portrait of the ACC's inner and outer life; its spiritual quest and the public demonstration of its standards of ethical and institutional integrity; and its devotion to its foundational principles.

It was at the ACC's 2004 fall meeting that the ACC was introduced to the task of doing a self-study. Gradye Parsons, director for Operations, Office of the General Assembly, was present at that meeting and oriented the committee regarding the review process and content. He also distributed a paper entitled "Review of General Assembly Permanent Committees & General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission" to the ACC. A full explanation of this important project generated considerable interest and discussion, which resulted in a complete commitment to do the self-study in a manner that truly and fully reflected a thorough self-examination by the ACC; achieving a comprehensive description of the ACC's work and performance; and addressing all of the self-study criteria indicated in the document provided to the ACC. There was a clear consensus by the ACC members that the ACC should endeavor to be objective by providing an absolutely transparent portrait of itself. Feedback and criticism were deemed desirable because they are the humus and stimulus for organizational growth and improvement. Thus, the basic premise of the self-study would be that it would provide two things: (1) a firm and focused sense of the ACC's mission in the life of church, and (2) establish clear and specific ways to improve the performance and effectiveness of the ACC. With the discussion about the self-study complete, ACC Moderator Margy Wentz appointed two of its members, Kim Leech (chair) and Frances Pitts, to perform as a subcommittee for the self-study project.

B. Strategy and Processes

A primary principle for this self-study is that there should be a conspicuous alignment between the self-study strategy and processes if the desired results were to be obtained. Largely, there are two parties in this study: (1) ACC members and former members, and (2) Persons who are "consumers" of the ACC's advice. Because the intent was to not only provide a self-study, but also to solicit perceptions of the ACC from important others, several self-study survey instruments were designed that would generate the information that would be honest, objective, and fair. Clear candid data was the goal of the survey instruments. Herewith the self-study survey instruments utilized:

ACC Survey #1 - Fidelity to Mission and Partnership (Appendix #5)

ACC Survey #2 - Effectiveness of Service (Appendix #6)

ACC Survey #3 - The Work of the Committee (Appendix #7)

ACC Survey #4 - The Work of the Committee at Assembly (Appendix #8)

ACC Survey #5 - The Performance of the Committee (Appendix #9)

Recipients of the surveys were:

ACC Self-Study Surveys #1, #2, #3 went to ACC members; ACC alumni, years 2002–2004; Clifton Kirkpatrick, Stated Clerk and member of the ACC, ex-officio; Mark Tammen, director of the Office of Constitutional Services (ConServ), Office of the General Assembly; and Mary Ruth Phares, ConServ administrative assistant.

ACC Self-Study Survey #4 went to the leadership teams of the Assembly Committee on Church Polity and the Assembly Committee on Church Orders and Ministry for the General Assemblies in 2003 and 2004; to the moderators of the Assembly Committee on Church Polity and the Assembly Committee on Church Orders and Ministry for the 2000–2002 General Assemblies.

ACC Self-Study Survey #5 went to persons who made requests to the ACC for an interpretation of the Book of Order (G-13.130112c) that would be answered by the 216th General Assembly (2004).

Mary Ruth Phares was designated the recipient of the completed surveys. She created compilations of each category of survey. The final compilations were sent to Kim Leech and Frances Pitts for study, evaluation, and reflection. Subsequently, as each chapter was written it was sent to Mary Ruth Phares for editing. When the self-study writing was completed, Mary Ruth Phares graciously prepared the full draft, which was sent to the ACC members for their study and criticism before the ACC's fall meeting, which commenced October 28, 2005. At that meeting, the self-study draft was fully discussed and changes were implemented.

CHAPTER III

EFFECTIVENESS AS A TRADEMARK

The dictionary defines effective as, "...producing the intended or expected result."

This self-study will explore the performance and role of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC) within the context of the larger institutional environment of the General Assembly (GA) and the spiritual lives of members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). In a strenuous effort to derive objective and honest information, the surveys targeted several levels and arenas of persons that have felt the impact of the ACC's work. The harvest of the survey information provides a keen portrait of the ACC's worth, precisely because the ACC is uniquely effective in the manifestation of its constitutional mandate. By definition, i.e., the description of the functions of the ACC in the Book of Order and the Standing Rules of the General Assembly, the primary orientation of the ACC is the meetings of the General Assembly. However, the data are clear that the impact and effectiveness of the ACC is felt throughout the church, in numerous ways and on multiple levels such as lower governing bodies, and in the daily lives of Presbyterians.

A. On the General Assembly Level

In preparation for a meeting of the General Assembly, the most conspicuous and common tasks before the committee are the preparation and research of the written responses to requests for interpretation of the Book of Order (G-13.0112c) and the committee's recommendations to the assembly regarding overtures that seek to change the Constitution (G-13.0112d). The Book of Order requires that the ACC meet prior to each session of the General Assembly and submit its recommendations to the Stated Clerk no later than sixty days prior to the convening of the assembly (G-13.0112b). When the ACC's recommendations are submitted to the Stated Clerk, they are the result of arduous toil, both by individual members of the ACC, as well as the full committee. Some overtures, in particular, require extensive research and study that is labor intensive. These recommendations soon enter the public arena, initially and especially as Reports to the General Assembly are distributed to elected commissioners prior to the General Assembly meeting. The ACC recommendations become part of the printed record of the General Assembly in the Minutes of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), Part I, which are available to every stated clerk and governing body in the PC(USA).

By the time the General Assembly convenes, the ACC has made extensive and thorough preparations for each item of business that requires ACC presence and assistance in General Assembly committees, such as the Assembly Committee on Church Polity. Because the General Assembly committee structure is set months before the assembly convenes, each ACC member has been given his/her GA committee assignments, which may include several different committees. It is the responsibility of the ACC member to be fully prepared to interpret in full to the GA committee the rationale for the ACC's recommendations. It is the responsibility of any ACC member assigned to a General Assembly committee to introduce oneself to the committee's leadership team prior to the convening of that committee for business. At that time, ACC members will request a moment of time on the committee's agenda to briefly interpret the role of the ACC. Comments from the survey underscore the importance of an early working relationship between the leadership team and the ACC member(s). Because some of the most volatile issues before any assembly are constitutional matters, the common perception in the surveys of the GA committee key leadership teams (ACC Self-Study Survey #4) is that the ACC is very effective, "We were very pleased—had 2–4 people, depending on the topics—each had their expertise—all worked together well."⁶ In those committees with controversial business items, it is not uncommon for the ACC representatives to be called upon by the committee leadership, as well as by individual members of the committee, a number of times. The ACC members, in preparation for the General Assembly, are trained to utilize those times in GA committees when questions arise for the ACC as opportunities to further educate persons about our polity and Constitution.

Perhaps the best indicator of ACC effectiveness at the General Assembly meetings, whether it is regarding the written recommendations on business items or the oral interpretations in GA committees, is the relative absence of complaints or criticisms of the ACC. One of the most meaningful experiences for ACC members is to hear, during the GA plenary discussion, a commissioner echoing verbatim written recommendations of the ACC. One of the most important indicators of ACC effectiveness at GA is the esteem and appreciation expressed by GA commissioners of the ACC; and, at recent assemblies, there has been considerable praise for the ACC. Unfortunately, this conclusion is not the product of a survey; rather, it is gleaned from observations, countless conversations, and other oral feedback to the ACC.

B. The ACC as Communicator

The ACC's constitutional responsibilities require it to be primarily reactive, not proactive in its communications. It is an advisory committee and should not initiate discussion of issues before the PC(USA). The constraints of the Book of Order and the Standing Rules of the General Assembly have successfully prevented the ACC from becoming tainted by or accused of having any political agenda. The ACC, therefore, is not charged with or expected to communicate to the church at large.

In a more common, but extremely important fashion, the ACC is literally on the record regarding constitutional issues that have come to the General Assembly for action. Not only do the Minutes contain the ACC recommendations, but also the electronic version of each General Assembly's Annotated Book of Order contains ACC advice on overtures that sought to amend the Book of Order. At each meeting of the General Assembly, the ACC makes a formal agency report, which is also included in the Minutes. Typically, the ACC report provides general information about the nature of the ACC and its constitutional mandate of service to the General Assembly and the church; and it also renders specific comments on the nature of the business before the assembly that has constitutional implications. For instance, the report for the 215th General Assembly (2003) included a very important and timely section entitled, "Constitutional Concerns and the Nature of Judicial Process"⁷ Commissioners to that assembly who read that section were further prepared for business coming to that assembly. Moreover, the public at large would profit from such excellent information. There is a major and ongoing concern within the ACC in regard to a widespread ignorance and a poor understanding by Presbyterians of the Book of Order and PC(USA) polity. Perhaps the ACC should work more intensely within the context of the Office of the General Assembly to seek ways to encourage and spur Presbyterians to read and study the Book of Order. The recommendations of the ACC to the various General Assemblies regarding overtures, requests, and referrals continue to be read—especially in the electronic version of the Annotated Book of Order—and provide new insight and understanding about various portions of our polity. The ACC endeavors and persists in communicating in appropriate ways, but with the hope that its counsel will be ingested by a wider audience.

The ACC often communicates in unseen and yet important ways typically within the context of General Assembly entities. "When directed by the General Assembly or when requested by an agency or committee of the General Assembly, the committee may consult with said agencies or committees on constitutional matters."⁸ The ACC sees itself as having a small, yet significant role as being servant to the General Assembly and the church as well as being in partnership with various key GA entities. See page 1189–91, Chapter I, for a more detailed account of these kinds of communication. There is a strong "comfort zone" for the ACC members in its role as communicator because of the power and wisdom of the Constitution and the Scriptures, "Your [statutes] are my delight; they are my counselors" (Ps. 119:24).

C. Fidelity to Mission

The ACC has always been quite fastidious in completing its work in a timely, but thorough and comprehensive manner. Of more significance is the ACC's awareness of its responsibility in providing a high quality of performance in every venue. Individually and corporately, the ACC has a strong sense of call and faithfulness to Jesus Christ in the fulfillment of its required work.

The mission of the ACC is not lofty or lustrous. Rather perhaps the most primary and fundamental task of the ACC is to the commissioners of any General Assembly by providing clear and succinct information about constitutional matters before the assembly that require an informed and intelligent vote. ACC advice should always weigh the potential gains and dangers in the matter requiring GA action. Being a commissioner to the General Assembly is a daunting and frequently confusing responsibility. It is the goal and hope of the ACC to lighten that load a bit.

The advent of biennial meetings of the General Assembly has raised questions about rendering formal ACC counsel between meetings of the GA. Clearly the Book of Order does not render such authority to the ACC; and, after discussing this concern, the ACC stands firm in its conviction that it would not be wise to seek any such change in its constitutional mandate.

CHAPTER IV

STRENGTHS and CHALLENGES

A. Strengths

The primary source for information about the strengths of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC) was from current and former members of the ACC, using Survey #3. As mentioned earlier in Chapter II, page 1192, Clifton Kirkpatrick, Mark Tammen, and Mary Ruth Phares also provided answers to Survey #3. Clearly Survey #3 hooked into the interests and passions of all of the responders, with the total responses summarized in seventeen pages of detailed comments.

Key information was also obtained via former General Assembly (GA) committee leadership (ACC Self-Study Survey #4) and from persons who had requested an interpretation of the Book of Order from the 216th General Assembly (2004) (ACC Self-Study Survey #5).

High praise and an extremely large number of survey respondents mentioned the people that populate the ACC as an enormous strength. Specifically, the caliber and wide diversity of persons was a key factor; the knowledge, skills, and unique credentials create a powerful dynamic when the committee is in action together, in particular. Further, many pointed to G-13.0112a, "...The nine voting members shall be former members of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the General Assembly, stated clerks or former stated clerks of synods or presbyteries, or other qualified persons with knowledge of and experience with the Constitution and polity of the church." In a similar vein and an extension of this sentiment, was the social and professional dynamic at work among the ACC members. The ACC members hold each other in mutual regard and respect, which is coupled with a strong work ethic in a meeting setting that is collegial in tone and attitude. The ACC is living proof of the significance of a truly Christian environment. Much credit for the mood, style, and healthy norms for this community of constitutional and Presbyterian polity scholars is directly the result of the PC(USA) staff leadership to the committee, especially Mark Tammen, director of the Constitutional Services Department. Leaders set mood, norms, and expectations; and Mark does this in a style that is straightforward, gracious, and effective.

Standards of performance for the ACC, especially in regard to the written recommendations of the ACC to the General Assembly, are both a daunting and challenging dimension of the scholarship expected and silently required. The history and continuity of ACC achievements are of major significance. Whereas many would expect the ACC to perform in a rather orthodox, even wooden, manner because laws are perceived as rigid and conventional, in many situations the ACC purposely has endeavored to pursue creative solutions to complex issues. On every overture or issue that the ACC addresses, it is the ACC's practice to point out the "upside" and "downside" for adopting an amendment to the Constitution, for instance. It is the responsibility of the ACC to educate and elucidate the General Assembly with its recommendations. A dramatic illustration of how the ACC endeavors to provide an array of quality information and potential polity issues on a matter before a meeting of the General Assembly was at the 213th General Assembly (2001) regarding the highly controversial issue of the ordination of gay and lesbian persons to office. The focus of many overtures before that assembly was proposed amendments to G-6.0106b (the standards for ordained office), which, for many, was the flashpoint of the controversy. The ACC, in its agency summary to the 213th General Assembly (2001) rose to the occasion and focused upon what was clearly the major constitutional issue before the assembly—proposed amendments to G-6.0106b.⁹ The initial intent of the agency report was to provide the constitutional framework that commissioners must understand; and then to further elaborate upon possible options for the assembly's action on this matter. This approach equipped the Assembly Committee on Church Orders and Ministry in its deliberative and decision-making process, as well as saving valuable time in its difficult task. The agency report also therefore rendered valuable information to all commissioners to the assembly.

A recent and yet rather pedestrian example of how the ACC endeavors to bring fresh, helpful, and knowledgeable responses to the mind and heart of the typical GA commissioner would be the ACC's response to a request for interpretation that came to the 216th General Assembly (2004).¹⁰ The advice was approved by the assembly.

A conspicuous demonstration of the ACC's strength is its consultative role with GA committees. The ACC Self-Study Survey #4, which sought honest, objective reflections about the ACC and the work of ACC members in the various committees, furnished considerable comments to support this conclusion. Typically, much of the work of the ACC is referred to the Assembly Committee on Church Orders and Ministry and the Assembly Committee on Church Polity. The responses lauded the ACC in general, highlighted the ACC's concise written reports, and commented upon the ACC members being knowledgeable. "They were supportive—educated without being patronizing, showed the strengths of the Constitution and its usefulness. Knowing that they were there to answer questions either publicly or privately was great. Being on the podium and seeing them at Mic. 6 was awesome."¹¹

Perchance it is the invisible, unseen character of the ACC that is its bold, yet humble, strength. The committee is deeply cognizant that undergirding its work is the commitment to "Seek the Lord and his strength" (Ps. 105:4a). Unspoken norms prevail. One example is that one's personal political views are not appropriate for the arena of the ACC. Most members have no idea of the personal opinions of other members on issues such as ordination standards. Intriguingly, the glue that holds the committee together is the ACC's constitutional mandate coupled with a personal respect, regard for each other, and a commitment to committee harmony and unity. Deep friendships have been forged among members; and it is precisely these friendships that foster keen commitment to the ideals of the committee. All of this leads to a high quality of dialogue—even healthy, exciting, argument—when the committee is in full session, working on the overtures and other matters that come before the committee. The caliber of work that is dispensed from the ACC is not a convenient quirk of luck. Rather, it is the product of the wisdom of our faith, polity, and commitment to the church.

The nature of the work and mission of the ACC has deeply affected and strengthened the faith and commitment to the mission of the PC(USA) of its members. Some sample comments from members of the ACC:

“Emphatically, however, my personal faith in Christ and my confidence in the church have been nurtured, challenged, bewildered, clarified, and a whole string more of things as I have served the church in its polity structures” George Adams, class of 2010.

“I am hopeful that we will continue to respond to the Lord of the Church who calls us into His future (G-3.0400)” Bill Chapman, class of 2008.

“I have come to find Christ in the Book of Order and to find there a structure for church life that is a model which grows directly out of the Pauline vision in 1 Cor. 12 of the church as the body of Christ” Clifton Kirkpatrick, Stated Clerk, ex-officio member.

“Our theology and polity are a marvelous mix! I am very proud to be a Presbyterian. Because my knowledge and understanding of the mission of the PC(USA) has expanded and deepened, I am very supportive of the core beliefs and the subsequent GA structure that implements our mission” Kim Leech, class of 2006.

“We seek in our polity to discover the will of Christ for the church. His will gives us our mission. That seeking has called me repeatedly to a renewed intention to be a faithful disciple” James MacKellar, ACC alumnus, class of 2003.

“It deepens my faith to know that, given information, the church will listen to the Holy Spirit and will discern the will of Christ” John Matta, class of 2008.

“I have seen how the PC(USA) is engaged in a great work and the underlying unity that carries it forward. This experience has blessed and enriched my faith journey in ways I never expected” Bill Newcomb, ACC alumnus, class of 2002.

“Working as a member of the ACC has first of all deepened my regard for the orderly way the Presbyterian Church has structured itself. The fundamental basis for self-governance is to be admired” Margy Wentz, class of 2006.

“This work convinces me that the Holy Spirit is at work, that the mission of the denomination will prevail over and through our differences and that the PC(USA) can really be, and already is, in mysterious ways we do not fully understand, claiming the victory that Jesus has already won” Jim Wilson, class of 2010.

The self-study surveys noted a few singular strengths that deserve mention:

“The joy and importance of working with Stated Clerk Cliff Kirkpatrick” Alyson Janke, class of 2010.

Expressed as general themes:

The staff of the Department of Constitutional Services deserves high praise and kudos. Mary Ruth Phares, in particular, was affirmed for her high quality work and dedication to the mission of the ACC.

The utilization of the best of electronic tools has been the norm for the committee. Praises are appropriate for the ConServ staff utilizing and encouraging the ACC members to employ the advantages of modern electronic technology.

B. Challenges

The most common source of frustration and challenge echoed by ACC members via the self-study surveys focused upon the complexities of nine individuals working on common projects—typically overtures to the GA—and maintaining a quality of information with each other and yet obtaining high standard of results in a timely fashion. Because the pre-assembly work usually divides the ACC members into a configuration of three work teams, it is very difficult indeed to be individually and corporately effective in the accomplishment of the common goals of successful completion of tasks. The ACC has identified and addressed the multiple issues therein by an initial thorough discussion, which resulted in a new design and business model that places benchmarks and new structure for the team work process and places a premium value upon the need for persistent communication among ACC team members and with the ConServ office. Moreover, because of the ongoing need to evaluate ACC performance, an integral part of the post-GA and ACC meeting fabric will be feedback and commentary that will lift up issues or concerns that require attention with the attitude of “always seeking to improve quality and effectiveness.” Accordingly, there is a strong commitment to eagerly embrace any challenge that occurs so that the standards of ACC craftsmanship will not be diminished.

There were a number of scatter-shot concerns expressed in the ACC self-study surveys that did not converge into themes or patterns. As stated previously, the composition of the ACC is an incalculable science within the parameters of the Book of Order prescription (G-13.0112a), but one member mentioned the ongoing need for former members of the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission (GAPJC); while another member articulated the need to always have attorneys in the mix of ACC membership. Whereas the GANC is keenly aware of it, the ACC has typically not had the desired ethnic/racial representation. A sharply felt challenge occurs at every GA for the ACC: namely providing adequate resources through its members to the various GA committees. The villain is easily identified as the restriction of its membership size.

Concerns submitted by General Assembly committee leadership team members which have been noted and pro-active plans are on the proverbial drawing board:

“There were times that I thought it [the advice given by the ACC member] could have been clearer or more succinct, but the advisory members were uniformly committed to being helpful.”

“We could have benefited from more in depth discussion of the issues during the leadership briefing.”

“... it would be helpful to know which person will be the lead person on each Business Item. This helps in preparation of our Annotated Agenda and who to call regarding a response.”

Committee Concerns as Result of the ACC Self-Study Surveys:

The ACC should meet at least annually because the development of personal friendships within the committee also forms an emotional and spiritual bond that enhances committee performance.

Considerable forethought needs to be established for General Assembly meetings regarding the advice to be given at committee meetings, as well as to who the committee presenters shall be for each business item.

At plenary sessions of the GA there should be pre-selection of the committee member that would rise to speak, upon request of the Moderator, on known controversial issues.

Budgeting properly for the ACC is always problematic because it is impossible to anticipate what things will arise that will require ACC personnel—or the whole committee—to participate. For example, in October 2004, the ACC’s executive committee had to meet with the GAPJC on a mutual concern, in St. Louis. Summer 2005 called for unplanned ACC member visits to the Presbyteries of Mississippi, Redstone, and Shenango as a direct result of the controversy generated at the 216th General Assembly (2004) regarding compliance with judicial orders. In sum, sometimes the ACC budget can be in almost literal ruins, even though every effort has been made to contain and curtail costs. (See Appendix #10 for the ACC Financial Report.)

At the ACC spring meeting of the year that a General Assembly is to meet, the ACC needs to place items that are major issues on its agenda for early initial attention.

Additional communication among writing teams via conference calls would be very helpful during their preparation for an ACC meeting.

CHAPTER V

SURVEY LEARNINGS

A. Scope of the Surveys

The self-study surveys employed were intentionally designed to meet the criteria suggested in the self-study survey guide published by the Office of the General Assembly. Therefore the scope was broad and yet specific. In the spirit of the criteria, the surveys endeavored to provoke in-depth, thoughtful, and candid responses. The scope of the surveys pinpointed key aspects of our life together as Presbyterians:

PC(USA) Constitution

Faith

Polity

Mission

Theology

Dedication to the PC(USA)

Meetings of the General Assembly
Welfare of the church

The intent of the surveys was to more than glean simple statements. Rather, the desire was to measure the Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC) against the above hallmarks in a very personal and inspiring manner. The ACC is at its best when its Christian humanness shines through when writing, presenting, and meeting; and the surveys tried to establish this with a somewhat clinical means. The subtitles of the five self-study surveys reveal categories of inquiry that are specific and probing. (Please remember that the recipients of the surveys were targeted groups, differing in responsibility.):

ACC Self-Study Survey #1 - "Fidelity to Mission"

ACC Self-Study Survey #2 - "Effectiveness of Services"

ACC Self-Study Survey #3 - "The Work of the Committee"

ACC Self-Study Survey #4 - "The Work of the Committee at Assembly"

ACC Self-Study Survey #5 - "The Performance of the Committee"

B. Participation

For the first three self-study surveys, which sought responses by the ACC, former ACC members, the Stated Clerk, the director of Constitutional Services, and the ACC's administrative assistant, the response was outstanding, excellent. Of the persons noted, only one person did not participate, due to massive scheduling difficulties. General Assembly committee leadership team personnel (ACC Self-Study Survey #4) did not respond in high numbers, probably due to the voluntary nature of the request to participate. Two-thirds (six) of the persons requesting interpretation of the Constitution (ACC Self-Study Survey #5) responded, which was a pleasant surprise.

Participation by persons answering ACC Self-Study Surveys 1, 2, and 3, generally expressed enthusiasm and furnished high-quality comments. All of the questions in these surveys received a large quantitative response. It was question one in Survey #1 that evoked an impressive four and one half pages of narrative: "Does the committee as it was created by the church serve and support the church's mission in a particular area? Does the committee exhibit a constant faithfulness to and in fulfillment of its servant role in the life of the PC(USA)?" It is not coincidental that this committee of church law/polity wonks sees itself as in ministry to the mission of the church. As mentioned in an earlier chapter, it was Self-Study Survey #3, which centered on the work of the ACC, that resulted in an amazing seventeen pages of material. Members of the ACC and ACC alumni, in particular, wanted to express considerable feedback as well as constructive criticism. Easily the most evocative question in Survey #3 was the final question, "As you have worked to interpret the Constitution of the PC(USA) to the General Assembly and the church, how has it affected your understanding of the mission of the PC(USA) and deepened your faith in Jesus Christ?" The answers provide a powerful testament to the Spirit at work in each member and the ACC.

C. Portrait of the Committee

Perhaps the most significant feature of the ACC is its integrity. "The word "integrity" comes from the same Latin root as the word "integer" and historically has been understood to carry much more the same sense, the sense of wholeness: a person of integrity, like a whole number, is a whole person, a person somehow undivided."¹² There is not the slightest inkling in the surveys that the ACC has violated the trust of the General Assembly and the church. In an eerie, but wonderful sense, the respect, health, and wholeness of the ACC is a mirror image of the Constitution itself. This is the result of an almost mantra-like theme within the committee of respect for the constitutional boundaries and the fastidious refusal to yield to the temptation of taking a position on any matter or issue before the church. There is frequent mention within the committee of the political boundaries on any piece of business before the committee. The importance of ACC integrity was a heritage bestowed upon its current members by predecessors. It is therefore a norm that must be continually earned and upheld by successor committee members.

A study of the individual answers of the members (and alumni) of the ACC reveals a rather predictable result. Whereas a glimmer of each person's personality shines through the various documents produced by the ACC, the corporate image of this assortment of persons yields images of strong personalities with strong convictions about the work of the ACC and its mission to and with the church. Just as the Book of Order criteria suggest (in G-13.0112a), the ACC is composed of a wide array of individuals with impressive credentials, but with a common mission. Their answers are knowledgeable, thoughtful, succinct, and sometimes blunt and penetrating. Sometimes, in a healthy sense, the answers could be perceived as intimidating. No faint hearts here.

Surveys #4 and #5 are extremely important because the portrait revealed therein is not tainted by any notion of bias or being self-serving. Unfortunately many of the typical answers given were very brief, such as, "Yes." Yet the surveys are not entirely impoverished. The perception of the ACC provided is generally very positive and pleasant, "By and large they were received well by the committee.”¹³ These surveys do establish that the public performance of the ACC can be a bit uneven. While affirming the theology of gifts (Rom. 12:3–8), the ACC loses some of its luster when a member speaking to a committee is not prepared, comfortable, or effective in that role. Accordingly the ACC needs to be more intentional and thoughtful about the selection of persons to have a significant speaking role before GA committees and the assembly plenary sessions.

CHAPTER VI

EMBRACING CHALLENGES AND CHANGES

Perchance every institution has a certain amount of nagging frustrations and unresolved inner conflict regarding its lifestyle and performance. Typically many of these notions are vague and slippery to identify with precision. For the ACC, the self-study surveys put content and objectivity into exactly those things that had pestered it over recent years. For instance, whereas it was commonly felt that the personal relationships fostered by working together were a delightful and meaningful byproduct of ACC life, the surveys made it abundantly clear that solid and rich Christian relationships are the bedrock for this committee as it tackles significant issues. The specific result was the decision and priority of having at least one ACC meeting per year. Relationships cannot flower without the intimate nurture of time together.

The self-study surveys also provided a succinct blueprint for “to do” aspects of the ACC in its role of resourcing GA committees. The surveys contained several very practical and helpful suggestions that will be easy to implement. In different manner, via the self-study surveys, the ACC was informed of the accuracy and depth of what it was doing right with GA committees. Hooray.

As mentioned earlier, the ACC has already changed and restructured the way it does its pre-assembly work, thanks to the comments of the surveys. Accountability and communication issues are being enhanced. The structure of how the ACC performs is under continuing study and some changes—nothing radical—will surely result.

Perhaps the most important and yet simple challenge being addressed is the ACC’s new plan to review and evaluate each occurrence when the ACC meets with an eye on performance, effectiveness, and its core standards as expressed in the Book of Order. Ongoing scrutiny of how one does its business is the hallmark of an open, flexible, and healthy organization. This change will make the ACC function in an even more upbeat fashion. It’s a matter of simply applying principles that are taken for granted but not officially embedded in the work ethic.

Surely the ultimate challenge for the ACC, spurred by the ACC’s self-study, is to never be content: content with its effectiveness, performance, attitude, organizational structure, and, most of all, mission and ministry to the church of Jesus Christ.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC) has always understood its role as providing neutral advice to the General Assembly on constitutional questions. This self-review process has provided the occasion for the ACC to think about recent correspondence submitted by individuals under G-13.0112c that have advocated that the ACC give particular advice to the General Assembly on particular items of business. The ACC has come to believe such advocacy belongs in the open hearings of the General Assembly, not in the form of seeking to influence a committee charged with giving the assembly the best neutral advice it can give concerning the constitutional implications of proposed actions. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution is concerned that such attempts to influence the framework for consideration by an assembly of a particular issue have the potential to usurp the assembly commissioners’ responsibility to follow the leading of the Spirit in addressing the issues presented them.

The ACC is recommending that the 217th General Assembly (2006) approve the following authoritative interpretation of G-13.0112d:

“The Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC) provides advice directly to the General Assembly based upon requests to the ACC, received only from the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly. The ACC provides advice to the General Assembly regarding questions of interpretation of the Book of Order. The ACC does not communicate directly with those who request advice nor make provisions for hearings on matters before it for consideration. The Advisory Committee may consult with General Assembly entities through the Stated Clerk.”

9. C. Ordination Standards

The covenant community we know as the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is bound together by government, worship, and discipline. The long-standing, continuing debate and struggle in our shared community over ordination standards have created turmoil, confusion, division, and brokenness in the church's government, worship, and discipline.

As the most inclusive governing body of the church, the General Assembly has the burden and opportunity to interpret the Constitution in current form authoritatively, and to present to the wider church guidance to the presbyteries in their efforts to change the Constitution.

The 211th General Assembly (1999) recommended that the church observe a sabbatical period in its consideration of any further changes surrounding the issue of sexual practice as an essential determinative factor for those seeking ordination. During this two-year sabbatical period, presbyteries, synods, and other Presbyterian groups were encouraged to offer opportunities to enter into dialogue seeking deeper understanding and increased clarity about the nature of our unity in the midst of our diversity. This sabbatical period is now at an end.

God has given the church everything it needs. Among those gifts are salvation by the grace of Christ received by faith; the gifts of the Holy Spirit, the Word of God expressed in the Scriptures, the creeds and confessions of the church; the Book of Order by which we govern ourselves; the example and decisions of our predecessors in the service of Christ.

If we desire to resolve our present conflict, we must use the many and varied gifts God has provided.

For several years, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution has sought to make the following salient points:

1. There are three sources of constitutional law for the PC(USA).
 - a. Constitutional amendment,
 - b. Judicial decision case law,
 - c. Action of the General Assembly when it deliberately interprets the Constitution on the advice of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.
2. The standards of the church on ordination cannot be changed by a General Assembly authoritative interpretation alone.
3. The process of constitutional amendment is carefully defined in the Book of Order, and the position of the church on ordination cannot be changed by an amendment to the Form of Government alone.
4. The constitutional structure of the church is not modeled on the United States federal system with the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission as a supreme court and final authority in constitutional matters.

The 205th General Assembly (1993) adopted an authoritative interpretation that identified the three sources of constitutional law mentioned above, and declared as authoritative interpretation the 1978 policy statement and recommendations on the church and homosexuality (Minutes, UPCUSA, 1978, Part I, pp. 261–67).

Since 1993, many presbyteries have submitted overtures seeking change in the Constitution concerning ordination standards (G-6.0106b was approved in 1997). The Advisory Committee on the Constitution observes that deletion of G-6.0106b alone is insufficient to effect the change sought by the overtures because of the authoritative interpretations predating the inclusion of that section in the Book of Order. The overtures submitted to the 213th General Assembly (2001) indicate that the presbyteries understand this stricture and are seeking ways to address their issues in a constitutional and orderly way that may help them achieve their purpose and provide a way for the whole church to resolve its differences in a way that will retain the church's unity. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 213th General Assembly (2001) to study these overtures in light of the insights they provide into the possibilities for present and future actions of the General Assembly to resolve our present disagreements.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that the overtures for 2000 and 2001 related to ordination standards may be grouped into several areas of possible change:

1. Exemption Waiver: Overtures seeking change through amending the Book of Order to permit waiver from the requirements of the ordination standards do not, in the opinion of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, accomplish the purpose of the presbyteries that have proposed these overtures. The concept of "waiver" is inconsistent with other sections of Chapter VI and the vows as they appear in Chapter XIV. These conflicts are detailed in the Advisory Committee on the Constitution's advice attached to each of these overtures (Overture 00-48, Overture 01-27, and Overture 01-28).
2. Inclusion Lists: A group of overtures now and in the past have attempted change by including the words, "sexual orientation" in one or more of the lists of inclusions throughout the Book of Order. These overtures have been clear, concise, and compatible with the Constitution. There is no impediment should the General Assembly choose to approve them. However, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution has not found this approach to be helpful, as it believes all lists to be exclusive, rather than inclusive, and has discouraged their use throughout the Constitution (Overture 00-40 and Overture 01-32).
3. Governing Body Discretion: Some overtures propose in one way or another to allow sessions and presbyteries to operate with standards that vary from those adopted by the whole church. Constitutional standards for ordination are important to the unity of the church and to the mandate of the Book of Order, “to warn or bear witness against error in doctrine or immorality in practice in or outside the church” (G-13.0103p). Proponents of this type of overture are advised to note the distinction between the constitutional standards themselves and the interpretation and implementation by the ordaining governing bodies of how candidates meet these standards. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution has pointed out problems related to this approach in its advice on those overtures (Overture 01-06, Overture 01-12, and Overture 01-29).

4. Amend or Delete G-6.0106b: Several overtures propose amendment to the Book of Order by deletion of G-6.0106b and/or insertion of new words elsewhere in the text. Deletion of G-6.0106b may have the effect of changing future authoritative decisions derived from decisions of the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission or from authoritative interpretations issued by the General Assembly. However, this does not affect authoritative interpretations prior to the inclusion of G-6.0106b. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution has commented on the relative merits of these overtures and their effectiveness in dealing with the difference of opinion before the church (Overture 00-13, Overture 01-3, Overture 01-8, and Overture 01-22).

5. New Authoritative Interpretation: Several overtures propose either the rescinding of previous authoritative interpretations and/or adopting a new authoritative interpretation, which would allow the church to rethink its position and start over. In most instances, a new authoritative interpretation is not effective unless derived from an amendment to the Book of Order (Request 00-3, Overture 00-41, Overture 01-08, Overture 01-14, and Overture 01-19).

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution is aware that many presbyteries find the present ordination standards appropriate. These presbyteries need not seek change in the Constitution. The Book of Order, with its attendant authoritative interpretations, is sufficient to maintain present standards. However, many presbyteries do seek change in the constitutional standards for ordination. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the latter that a combination of two or more approaches, as illustrated by some of the 2001 overtures may be useful.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution has not advised approval of any of the overtures dealing with ordination standards, but rather has commented on the strengths and problems of each overture in terms of maintaining and strengthening the integrity of the Constitution.” (Minutes, 2001, Part I, pp. 655–57)

10. “ACC Request Regarding Interpretation on Whether an E-mail Vote Is Permissible—From Stated Clerk, Presbytery of Winnebago.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) answer Item 04-14 (ACC Request 04-2) with the following response:

This request asks whether it is permissible for a governing body to vote by e-mail, and if so, what guidelines are appropriate.

The Book of Order is not silent on how governing bodies vote.

“The Church and Its Unity

“G-4.0301e

“e. Decisions shall be reached in governing bodies by vote, following opportunity for discussion, and a majority shall govern;”

Governing Bodies

G-9.0302b

b. Meetings of governing bodies, commissions, and committees shall be conducted in accordance with the most recent edition of Robert’s Rules of Order, except in those cases where this Constitution provides otherwise. (Book of Order, G-7.0302c states the same regarding all meetings of congregations.)

Robert’s Rules of Order Newly Revised (10th Edition), in outlining in Chapter One, the characteristics of a deliberative assembly, notes the following:

Efforts to conduct the deliberative process by postal or electronic mail or facsimile (fax) transmission—which are not recommended—must be expressly authorized by the bylaws and should be supported by special rules of order and standing rules as appropriate, since so many situations unprecedented in parliamentary law may arise and since many procedures common to parliamentary law are not applicable.”

Robert’s Rules of Order Newly Revised states on page 482 that “The opportunity for simultaneous communication is central to the deliberative character of the meeting, and is what distinguishes it from attempts to do business by postal or electronic mail or by fax.”

On pages 409 ff., Robert’s Rules of Order Newly Revised provides guidance for a vote by mail that would be applicable to a vote by electronic mail.

The request correctly makes the distinction between the deliberative process and the vote that follows. A governing body could provide in its rules that e-mail polling is permissible in instances where the deliberative process has previously occurred. Such an instance might occur if a governing body has debated a matter at a meeting, but lacks certain information such as specific prices, or a consultant’s opinion. Upon receipt of the information, a vote by e-mail could be provided for by rule. It is difficult to conceive of a situation in which vote by e-mail could assure the principles of a deliberative assembly, if such deliberation has not previously taken place. Meetings by conference call are often provided for in governing body bylaws, and with care can provide for the characteristics of a deliberative body that are outlined on pages 1 and 2 of RONR.

If a governing body wishes to provide by rule for voting by e-mail, it is advisable to consider the following areas: (1) The nature of any vote that may be conducted by e-mail should be clearly defined. (2) Care must be taken that all qualified to vote are included. (This is particularly important with an e-mail vote, as there may be individuals qualified to vote who do not have access to e-mail.) (3) If the vote is to be by secret ballot, additional provisions are required. (4) There should be provision for a member to object to the vote being taken by electronic means. As technological advances are made in electronic communication, the rules should be revised to accommodate such technology.

A governing body that is incorporated should ensure that there are no legal impediments to voting by e-mail.

14 ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON REVIEW OF GENERAL ASSEMBLY PERMANENT COMMITTEES

In summary, voting by e-mail is permissible only if there has been provision for deliberation, and the governing documents of the governing body provide for vote by mail or e-mail.

Letter of Request Received by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

Two questions:

1. Is it permissible for a governing body, e.g., a Session, to vote on a motion via email polling?
2. If this is permissible, what guidelines would seem to be appropriate to make sure that a motion is fairly and fully considered and that respect for other considerations in our deliberative process is maintained, e.g., confidentiality in voting.

As electronic communication within decision-making groups becomes increasingly popular and evident, the question emerges whether decisions can be made electronically, via email, in order to capitalize on its efficiency and speed. Since this is clearly understood to be supplemental to a governing body's usual (stated) meetings for discussion and interaction rather than a replacement for such meetings and discussions, is it feasible to use email polling in order to confirm actions where general intent has already been approved but where final details need ratification, e.g., confirmation of negotiated terms of contract or names on a committee or commission? This implies that a set of guidelines would need to be developed in order to frame the appropriate use of such email polling.

6. Shall in cooperation with the secretary develop forms and procedures to facilitate the work of the Committee.

7. Shall perform such other services for the Committee as may be assigned by the Office of the Stated Clerk or at the request of the Committee.

E. Procedures for Handling Requests for Interpretation

1. The Office of the General Assembly receives a request for an authoritative interpretation.

2. The Office of Constitutional Services makes an initial judgment as to whether the request "requires an interpretation" by the General Assembly.

a. If Constitutional Services believes that the provision is adequately interpreted by other provisions of the Constitution or past authoritative interpretations, it will respond to the request, with a copy to the Moderator, Vice Moderator and Secretary of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

(1) If the Moderator, Vice Moderator and Secretary agree that the request needs no further response, they will recommend to ACC that the reply of Constitutional Services be affirmed. When ACC agrees, this is an ACC determination that the provision does not "require interpretation." The requesting entity is informed of this action and the request does not appear in the record of the General Assembly. If ACC does not agree, the request will be assigned to a writing team.

(2) If the Moderator, Vice Moderator, and Secretary do not agree with the judgment of Constitutional Services or its response, the request will be assigned to a writing team for the development of a recommended response for the General Assembly's consideration.

b. If Constitutional Services believes that the request requires an ACC response, the Moderator and Secretary will assign it to a writing team for the development of a recommended response for the General Assembly's consideration.

3. Once ACC approves a recommended response, it is included in its report to the General Assembly. Upon action by the General Assembly the provision will have been authoritatively interpreted.

F. The Roll of the ACC Between General Assemblies

The question of the role of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution between meetings of the General Assembly has been prompted by the move to biennial Assembly meetings. Some have suggested that the ACC should be able to give opinions of Constitutional Interpretation with some sort of “preliminary” or “limited” standing between meetings.

The role of the ACC has been, as its name implies, to advise the General Assembly. It is only the General Assembly which interprets the Constitution, apart from judicial process. The ACC makes no pronouncements of its own, but submits to the General Assembly its recommendations regarding various matters which have been referred to it. (G-13.0112)

For the ACC to release opinions which would potentially guide the work of governing bodies and various entities of the church between General Assembly meetings would be to assume an entirely new role, with an authority which has never been granted. It creates the possibility of establishing an adversarial relationship with the General Assembly it is to advise. It could also lead those requesting the provisional opinion in a direction contrary to a subsequent adopted opinion of the General Assembly. In either event, such preliminary opinions might create confusion or harm.

The ACC believes that it should continue to write and submit its advice to the General Assembly, without interim, provisional opinions.

This is not to say that the ACC would have no work in the “off” years. Any requests that have been received could be addressed and prepared for the next General Assembly. In the year between Assemblies, a fall meeting could be a time to orient and train new members. It also would be an excellent time for the ACC to be proactive on a number of issues and concerns. ACC members might be assigned topics central to its work in such areas as:

- Trend papers
- Study and reflection papers
- Research
- Other

GENERAL RULES FOR MEMBERS

1. All members are expected to be in attendance throughout each and every meeting of the Committee.
2. All members of the Committee shall be in attendance at the session of the General Assembly.
3. To insure their availability for the work of the Committee at the General Assembly meeting, members of the Committee should be free of any other responsibilities at the General Assembly.
4. At the General Assembly the members of the Committee will be expected to serve as resource persons to Assembly committees and especially those committees to which recommendations from the Advisory Committee have been assigned by the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures.
5. Members of the Committee are not authorized to speak for the Committee and thus are expected to show restraint in responding to any request for constitutional interpretation.
6. The actions of the Committee have no authority until acted upon by the General Assembly. It is therefore improper for any Committee member to disseminate any actions taken by the Committee before they have been made public by the Office of the General Assembly.
7. In preparing responses to communications to the Committee, those members assigned responsibility for review and recommendations should use the document identification number assigned to that document.
8. When directed by the General Assembly or when requested by an agency or committee of the General Assembly, the Committee may consult with said agencies or committees on constitutional matters. The only authoritative interpretations of the Constitution are those recommended by the Committee as a whole and approved by the General Assembly.

Action Statements

1. That the overture (or recommendation, or commissioners' resolution, or response, or narrative) be approved.

No other wording is necessary.

2. That the overture (or recommendation, or commissioners' resolution, or response or narrative) be disapproved.

Again, no other wording is necessary.

3. That the overture (or recommendation, or commissioners' resolution, or response or narrative) be approved with comment:

Comment: The 216th General Assembly (2004) thanks the Presbytery of the Twin Cities Area for their concerns and urges them to continue their advocacy with governmental officials and educational efforts related to this matter.

4. That the overture (or recommendation, or commissioners' resolution, or response or narrative) be disapproved with comment:

Comment: We commend the Presbytery of Alaska for bringing this situation to the attention of the General Assembly.

If the committee primarily takes action as listed above, your work is a piece of cake. However, not everyone will be so lucky, so you need to become familiar with the following additional possible actions:

5. That the overture (or recommendation, or commissioners' resolution, or response) be approved with amendment.

Amendment: Shall the "Resolved" section be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with an underline.]

*"Resolved, That the Presbytery of Hanmi overture the 216th General Assembly (2004) to translate into Korean the Book of Common Worship, which was printed in English in 1993, and publish as funds become available."*

14 ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON REVIEW OF GENERAL ASSEMBLY PERMANENT COMMITTEES

6. In response to this overture (or recommendation or commissioners' resolution), that the 216th General Assembly (2004) approve the following resolution:

Shall G-11.00404c be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with an underline.]

“c. A minister of the Word and Sacrament of another denomination in correspondence with the General Assembly, whose ecclesiastical relations have been certified by that denomination, who is serving a Presbyterian congregation in a temporary, noninstalled pastoral relationship (G-14.0513) other than organizing pastor, who has become a minister of a congregation or larger parish composed of denomination units. . . .” [The rest of the section remains the same.]

[Here the assembly committee wants to do away completely with the original recommendation and replace it with a completely new recommendation.]

7. That the overture (or recommendation, or commissioners' resolution, or response) be referred to _____.

[Here you just need to fill in the blank. FYI: If the assembly committee recommends that something be referred to any of the entities of the General Assembly Council, the phrase should read as follows:

That the overture be referred to the General Assembly Council, for consideration by the National Ministries Division (or whichever division the assembly committee prefers).]

8. That the overture (or recommendation, or commissioners' resolution, or response) be referred to with comment:

[Fill in the blank and add the comment. This is basically the same as the above action statement, but it is for a general comment.]

9. That the overture (or recommendation, or commissioners' resolution, or response) be answered by action taken on Item III.A. (place roman numeral and alphanumeric identifier of the item that answers this item) of this report, (paragraph/overture/ commissioners' resolution/communication number—RGA identifier).

[Note that the action that answers this item is listed by the assembly committee alphanumeric identifier and by the RGA identifier.]

10. This overture became moot as a result of the affirmative vote by presbyteries on amending G-6.0106.

[This action statement is used in the rare case of an overture that recommends an amendment to the Constitution that depends on presbytery action on a proposed amendment.]

III. PRINCIPLES OF REPORT WRITING

For a number of years, commissioners have reacted negatively to the sheer volume of business that they are asked to act upon responsibly. While this is a topic that will continue to be considered by the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly, we also recognize that commissioners have asked us to create a package of business for consideration at the assembly meeting that is manageable and concise. The Office of the General Assembly has, therefore, refined the structure for the Reports to the General Assembly. It is built on the following principles:

- ▶ Brevity in a report can often be quite effective, especially since long reports often go unread. State the recommendation or resolution, and then write one or two important points to support the approval of the recommendation/resolution.
- ▶ Information in reports should be organized in a manner that makes it possible to quickly find materials.
- ▶ Information should not only be conveyed in the written narratives, but through the use of charts, format, and graphic elements.
- ▶ Recommendations should clearly reveal the action that the assembly is being asked to take. Choose action words that spell out exactly what you want done and who is to accomplish the action.
- ▶ Recommendations should be followed by a brief statement that outlines the rationale for the request(s) made in the recommendation.
- ▶ Other materials (i.e., narrative and information on the activities of the agency during the last year) should be available for readers, but shall not be included in the rationale or recommendations upon which the assembly is asked to take action.

IV. BREAKDOWN OF THE REPORT

A. Recommendations

This section is for recommendations brought to the assembly by your agency. Put each recommendation (or set of recommendations) into its own file. The recommendation can be followed by a brief rationale. Included in this section are referrals containing recommendations and reports that include recommendations. In all instances, the recommendations are to appear at the beginning, with the rationale and/or report following the recommendation. If the recommendation is from a referral, the referral title must appear as the first paragraph in the rationale text, as follows:

This recommendation is [or These recommendations are] in response to the following referral: 1999 Referral: 25.037. Response to Recommendation Directing ACSWP to Develop Resolution Addressing Need for Advocacy on Behalf of Uninsured Persons, Especially with Low Incomes, with Necessary Funding, for Presentation to the 213th General Assembly (2001)—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 1999, Part I, pp. 41, 308).

If there is more than one referral, set up the referral title in the rationale as follows:

These recommendations are [or This recommendation is] a final response to the following referrals:

2001Referral: 25.223. E. Resolution on the International Year of Mobilization Against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance (2001) and the World Conference on Global Racism (2001), Recommendation 3. That the 213th General Assembly (2001) Call Upon the United States to Give Its Full Support to the World Conference on Racism and the Ongoing Efforts of the United Nations to Address Past and Present Racial and Ethnic Injustices and to Establish Methodologies for Resolving Present and Preventing Future Trouble and Dismantling Racism—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 2001, Part I, pp. 55, 285).

All recommendations are to be in boldface type. Recommendations should be worded with specific, concise directives so that the General Assembly can make a clear, informed decision, and so that financial implications, if any, can be accurately assigned. If there are financial implications, these must be reported to the General Assembly. Avoid words such as commend, urge, affirm, reaffirm. Choose action words that spell out exactly what you want done and who you want to do it.

Recommendations from agencies are formed in the following manner:

“A. The [agency] recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) _____.”

If more than one recommendation is required for a specific topic, the construction should be as follows:

“A. The [agency] recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006)

- 1. direct . . . ;
- 2. authorize”

Rationale

A rationale is a brief statement that provides insight into the reason(s) for this recommendation. The background information will be appended to the recommendation to which it refers. If the recommendation is the result of a referral, the referral citation should be the first paragraph in this section to give the reader background as to the origins of the recommendation. Note: The material included in the rationale is for information only and is not part of the action, nor does it become the policy of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

Some issues of importance regarding recommendations:

1. Other related papers that an agency seeks to make available to an assembly committee is coordinated through the committee's resource coordinator and requires the approval of the committee's moderator or leadership team. Such material shall be reproduced by the agency in sufficient number for distribution to the assembly committee. The Office of the General Assembly will not reproduce this material.

2. Do not include a recommendation that calls for the approval of reports or minutes.

3. No recommendation(s) should be buried in narratives.

4. Any letter that the Stated Clerk is requested to send must be submitted at the time the General Assembly acts. The letter must include the names and addresses of the persons to whom the letter is to be sent. The Office of the General Assembly urges you to submit this letter with your report.

5. The Office of the General Assembly will not print appendixes to reports in the Minutes of the General Assembly unless specifically directed by the General Assembly.

6. Study guides will not be presented to the General Assembly, nor will they be printed in the Minutes. When recommendations requesting the use of study guides are made, drafts must be available for presentation to the assembly committee that will review the report.

7. All recommendations to amend the Book of Order must be postmarked no later than midnight, February 15, 2006, and sent to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution. These recommendations must be submitted separately to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, c/o staff of the Stated Clerk.

8. All recommendations to amend the Standing Rules of the Manual of the General Assembly, if they are to be reported in the Report of the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly, must be received by the General Assembly Committee on the Office of the General Assembly on or before February 15, 2006. These recommendations must be submitted separately to Kerry Clements in the Office of the General Assembly.

9. If there is a rationale to be attached to a recommendation, or to a set of recommendations, that will contain more than 1,500 words, the Office of the General Assembly asks that the agency submitting the report write a summary of the rationale. The summary will be appended to the recommendation. The summary is to be no more than 800 to 1,000 words. If the agency wishes, the actual report will be put on the PC(USA) website. This will be a voluntary action again this year.

B. Agency Summary

Most agency summaries will be published in one annual report. The format will be determined by the associate director of communications and Davis Perkins, president and publisher of Presbyterian Publishing Corporation. This should be saved in a file by itself.

C. Referrals in Progress

These are referrals from previous General Assemblies that were sent to your agency. This section is divided into two parts. Each part should be saved under its own file name.

1. List of Referrals in Progress

If the referral is in progress and not yet complete, it will be included in a chart that will be considered by the plenary of the assembly. (Special accommodation is made for referrals that, by act of the assembly, require an annual written report. See below.) The chart will contain only the referral title, the entity responsible for the response, and the anticipated year of final response. This section will go directly to the plenary floor. Do not make any response to a referral in progress unless instructed to report annually.

2. Referrals in Progress, Progress Report Mandated by Assembly

Informational reports only. There are to be no recommendations in this section. This section will go directly to the plenary floor.

D. Final Responses to Referrals

This section is for final responses to referrals that do not include recommendations. This section will also go directly to the plenary floor and should be in a separate file. The response may contain a brief summary to the assembly outlining what occurred as a result of the referral of that item of business.

14 ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON REVIEW OF GENERAL ASSEMBLY PERMANENT COMMITTEES

Note: If there is a final response to referral that contains recommendations, list only the title and a listing of where the final response (with recommendations) can be found.

E. Reports

The Reports section contains only reports without recommendations. As in the past, these reports will go to the assembly as information. Each report should be saved to a separate file name.

V. COMMUNICATIONS

Communications may be directed to the General Assembly by agencies of the General Assembly that desire to comment on a single item of business coming before the General Assembly from any source, but which do not introduce new business, and by organizations that have no regular access to the General Assembly through established procedures. Comments by one agency regarding another agency's report or regarding an overture should come as a communication. The communication will be referred to the assembly committee that is reviewing the report.

Please Note: Communications cannot contain recommendations for action. (See Standing Rule B.5.d.)

Comments, including Advice and Counsel Memoranda, regarding material printed in the Reports to the General Assembly must be received by the 45-day deadline. However, agencies can prepare comments (Advice and Counsel Memoranda) on new business (e.g. commissioners' resolutions) received by the assembly after the 45-day deadline.

Resource material (except for previously published books or interpretive brochures), including advice and counsel memoranda from advocacy and advisory committees . . . , shall be prepared as necessary by entities of the General Assembly and shall not exceed 1,000 words on each item of business referred. This material shall be submitted to the Stated Clerk, postmarked no later than forty-five days before the convening of the assembly meeting, who shall then publish and distribute the material to all commissioners prior to the assembly.

Resource material . . . , including advice and counsel memoranda, that provides background or advice on items of new business, including commissioners' resolutions, shall be prepared as necessary by entities of the General Assembly and shall not exceed 1,000 words on each item of business referred. This material shall be submitted to the assembly committee leadership team prior to presentation to the assembly committee to which the business has been referred (see Standing Rule C.4.c.). A hard copy of this resource material, accompanied by a disk copy, shall be submitted to the Stated Clerk. The Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures shall consider any request that is made to distribute this resource material to the full assembly in accordance with Standing Rule C.6.d. (Standing Rule B.5.d.).

Note: The forty-five day deadline is May 1, 2006.

VI. COPYRIGHT

Permission must be obtained in writing if there are any quotations from sermons, poems, songs, or short works, or if there are large sections of a work being quoted. The author is responsible for securing this permission. Brief quotations from periodicals, books, or other copyrighted material do not need permission, but should be accurately referenced using the exact source of such material. When in doubt, seek permission from the holder of the copyright. A copy of quoted material and title page of publication (if title is not printed on the original page of quote) must be provided to the Office of the General Assembly at the time of submission of the report.

VII. REPORT FORM

Documents must be in Word.

Set up each Recommendation and each Report Without Recommendations in a separate file. Submit a separate file for Final Responses to Referrals (1 file), Referrals in Progress (1 file), Agency Summary (1 file). All of these files can be submitted on one disk, if space permits. The only agencies from which the OGA will directly receive an agency summary will be ACC, ACL, ACSWP, ACWC, ACREC, GACER, GACOR, and GANC. The rest of the agencies will send a report to the associate director of communications, Office of Communications, for inclusion in the Annual Report.

Set margins as follows: Top—.75; Bottom—.75; Left—.75; Right—.75. Do not use headers/footers. Set default tabs at .25.

Type—Times New Roman, 11 point. Recommendations are bold; everything else is lightface.

VIII. FINANCIAL INFORMATION

Reports after the 207th General Assembly (1995) should provide "per capita impact . . . to assist commissioners' decisions in committee and in plenary sessions" (Minutes, 1995, Part I, p. 96).

A copy of the "Financial Implications Cover Sheet for Reports to the General Assembly" must be submitted with each Report to the General Assembly, even if the report does not contain financial implications.

14 ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON REVIEW OF GENERAL ASSEMBLY PERMANENT COMMITTEES

. . . An entity, commission, or committee submitting a report with a recommendation that affects the work or budget of another entity(ies) shall submit evidence that a consultation has been held with the affected entity(ies).

Committees, agencies, or corporations presenting reports shall provide the appropriate background information necessary to interpret or understand the recommendations or responses to referrals to the members of the General Assembly committees to which the business is referred. Any and all documents or publications referred to in these reports which require approval by the assembly for publication and distribution to the church, including but not limited to curriculum, study papers/guides, position papers, and program resources, shall be made available to commissioners at the time the reports are published. A. Comprehensive Strategy for Ministries with Native Americans: 2002 Supplemental Recommendations of the General Assembly Special Task Force on Native American Ministries

The General Assembly Council, upon recommendation of the National Ministries Division, Special Task Force on Native American Ministries, recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) approve the following:

1. Encourage every presbytery and synod with Native American congregation(s) to evaluate the potential for revitalizing and expanding Native American ministry in consultation with Native American congregations and communities, the Native American Consulting Committee, and appropriate General Assembly entities, looking at the leadership potential, financial resources needed, and the roles of governing bodies in achieving the goals and objectives of the PC(USA) Native American Ministry Churchwide Policy Statement, the Racial Ethnic/Immigrant and Evangelism Church Growth strategy, and other PC(USA) policies applicable to Native American ministry.

2. Encourage the Board of Pensions to consider the urgent pension and related benefit needs of Native American pastors. Encourage every presbytery and the Board of Pensions to consult regarding the urgent pension and benefit needs of Native American commissioned lay pastors.

3. Instruct the General Assembly Council, in partnership with presbyteries and synods, to make available adequate funding for a Churchwide Consultation on Native American Ministries involving Native American Presbyterians, the Native American Consulting Committee, the Office of Native American Congregational Enhancement, and other General Assembly representatives and middle governing body staff, no later than 2004, to do the following:

a. review and evaluate churchwide policy on Native American ministries and developments in Native American ministry; and

b. foster better dialogue between Native American Presbyterians and middle governing bodies. The report on this consultation will be made to the 217th General Assembly (2005).

4. Request that a report on implementation of the recommended strategies be presented to the 219th General Assembly (2007), in coordination with Native American Consulting Committee and appropriate General Assembly entities. The report should include consideration of the policies set out in the UPCUSA, Native American Ministry Churchwide Policy Statement, 191st General Assembly (1979) (Minutes, 1979, Part I, pp. 91, 401–4).

5. Grant an extension for the completion of the Comprehensive Statistical Report until the 216th General Assembly (2004), which will be completed by Research Services, in partnership with the Native American Congregational Enhancement Office of the National Ministries Division.

6. Dismiss the Special Task Force on Native American Ministries with thanks and appreciation.

Rationale

These recommendations are a final response to the following referral: 2000 Referral: Alternate Resolution to 22.232. Recommendation to Further Discuss and Develop Specific, Measurable Recommendations to the 214th General Assembly (2002)—From the 212th General Assembly (2002) (Minutes, 2000, Part I, p. 26).

Pursuant to General Assembly action on Paragraph 22.232 (2000), the report entitled “Comprehensive Strategy for Ministries with Native Americans” was referred to the General Assembly Council, Special Task Force on Native American Ministries, “for further discussion and the development of specific, measurable recommendations to the 214th General Assembly (2002) . . .” (Minutes, 2000, Part I, p. 26). The report was to be printed and distributed to the entire church. Additionally, a historical report prepared by the task force entitled “Mission and Ministry with Native American Peoples: A Historical Survey of the Last Three Centuries,” was included in the Minutes of the 212th General Assembly (2000) (Minutes, 2000, Part I, pp. 216ff).

The Special Task Force on Native American Ministries (hereinafter “task force”) was appointed in response to Overture 95-34, submitted to the 207th General Assembly (1995) by the Presbytery of Grand Canyon. Overture 95-34 directed the task force to “study and review missions and ministries with Native American tribes and peoples and to develop a comprehensive strategy for ministries with Native American tribes and peoples and to report no later than the 212th General Assembly (2000) its findings and recommendations as [a] comprehensive strategy for Native Americans for the next century” (Minutes, 1995, Part I, pp.99, 682–83). Membership on the task force included Native American and non-Native American clergy, Native American laypersons, middle governing body staff, PC(USA) educational institution faculty, and moderators of the Native American Consulting Committee (NACC).

In 2000, the task force reported numerous findings and recommended strategies to the 212th General Assembly (2000), highlighting the following areas of Native American Ministries:

1. The need for new patterns of connection between Presbyterian churches and middle governing bodies, and Native American churches and ministry projects, with the additional focus on urban and off-reservation Native American populations.
2. Extend support of developing Native American congregations beyond the traditional model of five years.
3. Develop and produce an outline and overview for commissioned lay pastor training to be used in preparation for ministry with Native American communities.
4. Increase recruitment of and maintain adequate funding for scholarship assistance for Native American seminary students.
5. Develop opportunities for Native American volunteer service in Native American communities.
6. Conduct an inventory of Native American church properties.
7. Funding for youth and young adult ministries.
8. Support for the Vision Quest Endowment Fund for Native American Ministries.

G. General Assembly Committee on Representation Self-Study Report

I. WHO WE ARE

Introduction

The decision-making bodies of the General Assembly come from east and west, and north and south, and sit at the table ... to discuss the issues and make decisions that affect Presbyterians across the United States. And as the church gathers, so does the General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR). In one sense, we are stories. Stories of our various cultures—of the northeast or deep south or Pacific coast, of large city or rural town, of the 30s or 60s or 90s, of Native American, African American, Hispanic, Asian, Middle Eastern, or Caucasian heritage, or new immigrant, of different sized congregations, of work in the church as lay or clergy, of experiences of persons with disabilities. Some of us come from a culture of exclusion that has lasted for centuries and is only now being addressed. Some us come from a culture of inclusion and are having “aha!” moments as we realize the depth of exclusion others have experienced. And others are still wrestling with being able to even get to the table so their voices might be heard.

As a church, Presbyterians have taken a bold step to ensure that voices too long excluded from the leadership table have an opportunity to be heard. At the formation of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), a new idea was written into the Articles of Agreement and the committee on representation was born. The purpose of this committee was to help us as a denomination be intentional about the church's commitment of diversity and inclusiveness. What other committees of our denomination address in terms of our society at large, the GACOR addresses within our denomination. We advise, advocate, review, consult, and provide resources related to ensuring that the leadership of our denomination's governing bodies, committees, boards, agencies, and other units reflect the wondrous diversity of its members and the denomination's commitment to diversity and inclusiveness in all that it does.

The General Assembly Committee on Representation is rooted biblically, historically, and constitutionally. The GACOR serves Christ's mission of bringing everyone together and accepting one another in the bond of love and peace. Representation, according to the American Heritage Dictionary of the English Language, is "the state of serving as an official delegate, agent, or spokesman." It's a privilege conferred on a person to represent and express one's voice in the authoritative body.

- Representation Is Biblical:

Representation has a deep-rooted meaning in our biblical tradition. Jesus Christ affirms the unity of strangers coming to the banquet, "... people will come from east and west, from north and south, and will eat in the kingdom of God" (Luke 13:29). Paul's calling the believers in Ephesus to a fundamental unity in Christ saying, "with all humility and gentleness, with patience, bearing with one another in love, making every effort to maintain the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace. There is one body and one Spirit, just as you were called to the one hope of your calling, one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of all, who is above all and through all and in all" (Eph. 4:2–6). Paul illustrates a new vision of the Church as Christ's body, where every individual—Jew or Greek, slave or free—is represented and thus interdependent. It reveals the baptismal unity in Christ as heirs of the promise in Abraham (Gal. 3:25–29). The body's unity in diversity is God's own creation plan (1 Cor. 12:12–20, 27–31).

The outpouring of the Holy Spirit on the young and old in Joel's prophesy is evidenced in the fulfilling of this promise on the day of Pentecost upon the church (Joel 2:28–29; Acts 2:16–18). The gift of the Holy Spirit was not limited only to the chosen. Those who are young like Samuel and Josiah (1 Sam. 16:10–12; 2 Kings 22:1–3) and old like Abraham and Sarah, Elizabeth and Zechariah (Gen. 12:1–4; Luke 2:36–37); women (Deborah, Esther, Priscilla) and men (Judg. 4:4–5; Esth. 4:12–16; Acts 16:1–15); people who differ in their theological views such as those seen in the early Christian council in Jerusalem (Acts 15:22–35; Acts 11:1–11); racial ethnics and Gentile converts like Cornelius and his family (Acts 8:26–40; Acts 10; Rom. 16:1–15); those with disabilities as seen in Moses, Jacob, and Paul (Ex. 4:10–12; Gen. 32:25,31; 2 Cor. 12:7b–10); and to the end of the earth. The gift of the Holy Spirit gives us the scope of including every individual on this earth who believes in our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

- Representation Is Historical

With great historical grandeur, the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) was organized on May 21, 1789, in the Second Presbyterian Church of Philadelphia as "the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America." It is one of the denominations organized on a national basis following the American Revolution.

The Presbyterian church has seen both divisions and unions. In 1810, the Cumberland Presbyterian Church was formed as a separate denomination. Old School and New School factions were seen within the family of the faithful in 1837. The tragedy of the United States Civil War had an impact on these factions. The Old School Presbyterians in the South formed the Presbyterian Church in the Confederate States of America and renamed it later as the Presbyterian Church in the United States (PCUS). The New School Presbyterians in the South, who split in 1857, formed the United Synod of the South in 1858.

Various factors were underlying reasons for the split, but unity was a major progressive factor in bringing the church together. Before the end of the war in 1864, the United Synod of the South joined the Presbyterian Church in the Confederate States. The end of the Civil War brought the New School Presbyterians together in the North. Most of the Cumberland Presbyterians returned to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in 1906. In a parallel note, the Associate Reformed Presbyterian Church and the Associate Synod of North America united for the United Presbyterian Church of North America in 1858. After a century in 1958, that body of Presbyterians joined with the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A. as the United Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A. (UPCUSA). In 1920, the Welsh Calvinistic Methodist Church united with the United Presbyterian Church in the USA.

Healing of the major split within the Presbyterian family was evidenced by the two denominations coming together in 1983. The Presbyterian Church in the United States and the United Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A. were reunited to form the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). It is the largest and most diverse member of the Reformed family of churches on the continent.

During the historical reunion discussions in the 1970s and early 1980s, the Presbyterian Church in the United States (PCUS) and the United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America (UPCUSA) insisted upon maintaining and protecting the integrity and unity of the churches. Concerns expressed were:

- The UPCUSA churches in the southeastern United States were predominately small racial ethnic churches.
- Members of those churches predominately grew up in a segregated environment.
- They lived in towns totally governed by people of European descent with little voice in local government.
- The national church provided financial support to many of the churches.

14 ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON REVIEW OF GENERAL ASSEMBLY PERMANENT COMMITTEES

—Churches often could not afford paid presbytery staff. In several instances, office staff was provided by groupings of several presbyteries. With these groupings, they had, however, a voice in their own governance.

—Members of these churches saw many of their beloved high schools and middle schools closed and their dedicated teachers of African descent were fired when schools in the south were integrated.

—There was fear of the same trend when racial ethnic church strength was diluted by separating the churches from their presbyteries and placing five or six of them in presbyteries of 50 and 60 majority churches.

As a guard against this occurrence, Articles of Agreement (found in the appendix of the Book of Order) called for a committee on representation to be formed for each governing body above the session. Thereby, the committee on representation has not only constitutional mandate but also a mandate from the inception of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

- Representation Is Constitutional

Church division, splits, and reunions have brought many changes in the life and mission and ministry of the church. Committee on representation has been a vital sign of the church's mandate through its constitutional provision to protect and preserve the unity of wholeness in diversity. This strong commitment enhances the vision of the church and the power of the Holy Spirit to invite people of various backgrounds as representatives in the decision making of the church.

Article 8 of the Articles of Agreement calls for the creation of committees on representation at all governing bodies of the church above the session. Section G-9.0105 in the Book of Order mentions the functions of the committee on representation.

Section G-9.0105a–c reads as follows:

a. Each governing body above the session shall elect a committee on representation, whose membership shall consist of equal number of men and women. A majority of the members shall be selected from the racial ethnic groups (such as Presbyterians of African, Hispanic, and Asian descent and Native Americans) within the governing body, and the total membership shall include persons from each of the following categories:

- (1) majority male membership
- (2) majority female membership
- (3) racial ethnic male membership
- (4) racial ethnic female membership
- (5) youth male and female membership
- (6) persons with disabilities.

b. Its main function shall be to advise the governing bodies with respect to their membership and to that of their committee, boards, agencies, and other units in implementing the principles of participation and inclusiveness to ensure fair and effective representation in the decision making of the church.

c. The committee on representation shall serve both as an advocate for the representation of racial-ethnic members, women, different age groups, and persons with disabilities, and as a continuing resource to the particular governing body in these areas. The committee on representation shall review the performance of its own governing body in these matters and shall report annually to it and to the next higher governing body with recommendations for any needed corrective action. The committee on representation shall consult with the nominating committee of its own governing body.

- Representation Is Important in the Life of the Church

It is the role of the committee on representation (COR) to ascertain the importance of the wholeness of the church by inviting people of diverse backgrounds to be a part of the decision-making bodies of the church.

—Leadership: By inviting people of diverse backgrounds, the committee on representation encapsulates a perfect model in the mission of Christ. It facilitates and empowers an opportunity for these people to participate in leadership opportunities where their voice is clear and loud. It sets the tone and condition of Christ's calling his disciples and the children of God into the mission and ministry. Leadership is not to govern but to serve.

—Equal Employment Opportunities and Affirmative Action: Living in a world of discrimination and alienation, COR guards the rights of the people who otherwise can be all too easily ignored and neglected. Through constitutional mandate, the committee on representation advises the General Assembly and other entities on the employment of personnel in conformity with the churchwide plan for affirmative action and equal employment opportunity.

II. WHY WE ARE IMPORTANT

The General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR) becomes more important as time goes by and as our country becomes more diverse than when the committee on representation was mandated in the Articles of Agreement at the reunion of the northern and southern streams of the church.

- Mission-Minded Church

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has been a mission-minded church from its beginning in this country. We took Jesus' command, "Go therefore and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit and teaching them to obey everything that I have commanded you" (Matt. 28:19–20), and opened up more mission fields than any other denomination. Today our mission field is still active. Our denomination continues to be a welcoming church, striving to live out the kingdom of God on earth. "Whoever welcomes you, welcomes me, and whoever welcomes me, welcomes the one who sent me" (Matt. 10:40), and "I was a stranger and you took me in" (Matt. 25:35).

- Church's Hospitality

Hospitality to the stranger in our midst is Jesus' command. The committee on representation is the guardian of the welcoming process that assures representation and participation in the decision-making of the church. At present the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has approximately 300 multicultural churches with more than 20 percent racial ethnic membership. The PC(USA) has approximately 1,900 churches whose outreach programs are multicultural, and the immigrant program has 54 fellowships and eight congregations at this time. The PC(USA) has set a goal of 10 percent racial ethnic membership by 2005 and 20 percent by 2010. The church's hospitality seeks to be inclusive of persons with disabilities and desires to benefit from the gifts of all members in the service and leadership of the church.

- Purpose of the Committee on Representation (COR)

The purpose of the committee on representation is to give a voice and equality to all members for representation and participation in the leadership of the church. The CORs have often been referred to as "bean counters," and there is some truth to that. Diversity and inclusiveness involve more than gender, whether ordained or lay, and one's racial ethnic background. For example, one presbytery that began collecting statistics discovered that the committee responsible for developing the annual budget was comprised solely of persons associated with large and medium membership congregations. As a result of that "bean counting," there is now someone on the committee who can say, "If we make this decision, this is how it will affect my congregation and others like it." Yes, the decision may need to be made anyway; however, the voice will have been heard. Statistics help the members of GACOR to recommend persons of diverse backgrounds to participate in the life and governance of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). Another example of diversity in leadership: a synod in the church has elected a Hispanic as moderator and a Korean as vice moderator.

- Benefits of Inclusive Representation

The study guide to the video developed by GACOR, "Motivated by Gospel, Not by Law," begins: "The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is committed to giving full expression to the rich diversity within its membership and to providing means to assure a greater inclusiveness, leading to wholeness in its emerging life. Persons of all racial ethnic groups, different ages, both sexes, various disabilities, diverse geographical areas, different theological positions consistent with the Reformed tradition, and different marital conditions shall participate fully in the decision making of the church. (Book of Order, G-4.0403) The church's constitution mandates that 'each governing body above the session shall elect a Committee on Representation ... to insure fair and effective representation' (Book of Order, G-9.0105a,b). Inclusive representation benefits the whole church which functions best when all parts are working together." The committee on representation, and thus the General Assembly Committee on Representation, is called to seek representation for everyone equally in God's image.

- Social Justice and Equality Within the Leadership of the Church

The mission of GACOR is one of social justice and equality within the leadership of the denomination, just as there are other groups whose primary objective is to seek social justice and equality outside the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). While much has been accomplished over the years since Reunion, there are still areas where "gaps" exist, where there are too few whose voices are represented, and the work of COR is essential to ensure that these voices are heard.

- Fruitfulness of Representation

Jesus Christ commands everyone to love one another. In a multicultural society and church, we are called to serve faithfully with open minds and hearts for the Kingdom of God. We encounter the image of God in our relationships with one another.

—Representation Brings Relationships: In our faith journeys we meet a number of people from different walks of life and develop friendships and relationships. Committees on representation provide opportunities for unique relationships by bringing people together in multicultural communities. These experiences will help build bridges to understanding one another at the same time encouraging diversity and inclusiveness.

—Representation Respects One Another: Christian faith teaches us to be humble and to serve others in humility. Jesus Christ's life and ministry have set an example for us to follow. With mutual respect for one another, we invite others who are different in their outlook with respect, love, and justice to build our church and thereby challenge others to enter into the Kingdom of God.

—Representation Is to Serve: Jesus Christ came into this world not to be served but to serve. As believers in Christ, we are called to serve one another. In doing so, we bring people together to serve one another. Our love and teaching help others to gain momentum for understanding and create an environment to serve in the church. Through our serving model, we truly represent Christ and demonstrate Christ's love in service to the world.

—Representation Is Integrity: Our identity is not who we are but who are we in Christ? Representation brings a broader perspective for Presbyterians to claim that we, who are many, are one in Christ. As baptized children of God, we are clothed with Christ.

“As many of you as were baptized into Christ have clothed yourselves with Christ. There is no longer Jew or Greek, there is no longer slave or free, there is no longer male and female; for all of you are one in Christ Jesus” (Gal. 3:27, 28).

So we are called out by God to be the Church of Jesus Christ, a sign in the world today.

—Representation Respects One’s Identity: We are individually different but it is the same Spirit that works in all. We are all called into the Church of Jesus Christ through baptism, and marked as Christ’s own children by the Holy Spirit. With great admiration of our calling, we meet God’s children as they are in their struggle, identification, hope, ideas, joys, and traditions, and invite them to participate and share the vision of the Church as one body of Jesus Christ. This journey involves risk, but with the strength of the Holy Spirit, lets us build the community of the Church.

III. WHAT WE HAVE ACCOMPLISHED

The function of GACOR is to guide governing bodies toward implementing the principles of participation and inclusiveness to ensure effective participation in decision making in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). For the years 1998–2004, GACOR continued to focus its efforts to achieve this goal.

The main activities of GACOR members’ involvement:

- Biennial Training Workshops: Conduct two-day training events for synod COR staff and synod COR chairpersons.
- Development and Distribution of COR Resources: Develop resource materials for synod CORs and presbytery CORs.
- Reports and Recommendations to the General Assembly: Present a report to each General Assembly. Make recommendations to the General Assembly on an “as needed” basis.
- Interaction With Various Groups (racial ethnic, youth/young adults, persons with disabilities): Appoint liaisons to attend meetings sponsored by racial ethnic groups, youth/young adults, and persons with disabilities in the PC(USA) to learn about issues related to COR objectives.
- Review of Annual Synod COR Reports: These reports show the extent of diversity in the synod governing bodies and staff as well as highlight the work of synod CORs.
- Regular and Special Meetings: The GACOR full committee and the executive committee meet regularly to discuss the items listed above, receive various reports, and participate in training sessions on subjects relevant to its work. Special meetings are joint meetings with the General Assembly Nominating Committee (GANC) to discuss issues of mutual interest.

In 1998–2005, GACOR members accomplished the following:

- Biennial Training Workshops:

GACOR conducted biennial training sessions in 1999, 2001, 2003, and 2005. Themes explored were “The New Millennium: Is COR Ready?,” “Diversity . . . Let’s Walk the Talk,” and “Can These Bones Live?” For 2005, the theme was “Guess Who’s Coming to Dinner.” The evaluations confirmed that the participants found the training informative, relevant, spiritually-based, and motivational. Keynote speakers invited to each training event included clergy and laypersons, and workshops and other activities were conducted by GACOR members and staff.

- Development and Distribution of COR Resources

The video “Motivated by Gospel, Not By Law” was produced and widely distributed to presbyteries, synods, and resource centers. Subsequently, Spanish and Korean versions were produced and made available. Companion study guides were also produced and translated. General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR) buttons and bookmarks have been distributed to generate attention.

The GACOR has developed a traveling display that can be requested for meetings and trainings.

During the 2001 biennial training session, the “COR Tool Box,” was introduced. The Tool Box is a compilation of materials describing the history and work of COR, as well as a collection of resources on how to carry on COR work and conduct training sessions. Since then, the Tool Box has been a popular resource.

Fixings, the GACOR newsletter, is produced to highlight special happenings within COR. It is widely distributed to synod and presbytery CORs and to various constituencies that could benefit from the COR articles.

One of the issues GACOR faces is the lack of activity at the presbytery COR level. In 2004, GACOR developed a trifold brochure, “How to Start or Revive a Presbytery COR.” These brochures were distributed at the 2005 biennial training event.

Today, many of these resources (except for the video) are available through the GACOR website, www.pcusa.org/cor. (See Attachment B.)

- Reports and Recommendations to the General Assembly

The GACOR provided reports to all the General Assemblies that occurred in 1998–2004.

At the 216th General Assembly (2004), GACOR recommended the following: (1) to instruct presbyteries to work on issues of diversity and inclusiveness when selecting/electing commissioners to the General Assembly, (2) to ask presbyteries to consider cultural sensitivity as an opportunity for growth in leadership, and (3) to ask presbyteries to continually address the issues that impede youth participation throughout the church. The action of the 216th General Assembly (2004) regarding the above recommendation was as follows: That Item 03-06. Instruct Presbyteries to Work on Diversity and Inclusiveness When Selecting/Electing Commissioners to General Assembly (Minutes, 2004, Part I, p. 45) was approved. With the varied responses and information received, GACOR sent a correspondence to executive presbyters, stated clerks, synod executives, and synod COR staff and chairpersons with the following recommendations:

—Review the standing rules/guidelines used by presbytery to select/elect commissioners to General Assemblies.

—Work with nominating committees of local churches to assist presbytery in developing a more diverse pool of persons willing to be of service to the presbytery as well as be elected as commissioners to synod/General Assembly.

—Recognize that diversity includes gender, racial ethnicity, age, and persons with disabilities.

—Train commissioners and youth advisory delegates so that they understand the importance of the work they are called to do and the time commitment they agree to interpret following the assembly.

—Be deliberate in ensuring that more than gender is represented when selecting/electing commissioners.

- Interaction With Various Groups (racial ethnic, youth/young adults, persons with disabilities)

The GACOR continues its liaison relationship with cross caucus and racial ethnic caucuses and synods. The members assigned as liaisons often attend meetings sponsored by the various groups to learn about issues related to COR objectives. The presence of GACOR members at these meetings also provides opportunities to highlight connections and to present COR resources and concerns. Written and oral reports of these meetings are received at each of the full committee meetings.

On many occasions, some GACOR members and staff attend such meetings as speakers or workshop leaders and sometimes set up a GACOR booth exhibiting various COR resources.

- Review of Annual Synod COR Reports

Every year, each of the synod CORs submits a report to GACOR. The reports are reviewed to determine if the principles of participation and inclusiveness are reflected in the membership of the various committees and staff positions. In several instances, some synods were informed of any discrepancies.

All sixteen synods have CORs. Approximately 10 percent of the 173 presbyteries do not have CORs. Overall, synod leadership of all committees has about 23 percent racial ethnic, 2 percent persons with disabilities, and 4 percent youth representation. Synod COR leadership has approximately 50 percent racial ethnic, 4 percent persons with disabilities, and 8 percent youth representation. Synod COR leadership may reflect more diversity because diversity is sought intentionally and required by the Book of Order. Individual synods do not necessarily mirror the diversity shown by the overall numbers. For example, Synod of Puerto Rico is all Hispanic. These numbers do not indicate that COR work at all governing body levels is done nor can the CORs take total credit for the apparent diversity shown by the numbers. Credit must be given to the various nominating committees that implement the principles of inclusiveness and participation. The COR exists to ensure that all church governing bodies reflect the diversity of their members. (See Attachment A for most recent report summaries.)

- Regular and Special Meetings:

The GACOR full committee meets three times a year, and the executive committee meets one time each year to conduct business and for training and orientation of new members. The committee gives and receives reports and participates in training sessions on subjects relevant to COR.

Training sessions have included such topics as: Goal Setting, Antiracism, Conflict Management, Change Leadership, and Cultural Proficiency. Depending on the topic, invited speakers and GACOR members may do the presentations. The GACOR members are composed of a diverse group of individuals with a variety of talents, education, and career experiences.

Special meetings with the General Assembly Nominating Committee (GANC) covered topics such as child and adult care, persons with disabilities, racial ethnic participation, and youth/young adult participation.

- Comment

The 208th General Assembly (1996) affirmed the goal of increasing the racial ethnic membership of the PC(USA) to 10 percent by the year 2005 and to 20 percent by the year 2010. The Justice and Compassion goal area, National Ministries Division, General Assembly Council, is working on a statistical report relative to this racial ethnic/immigrant church growth strategy. It is believed that the 10 percent goal has been met, but the statistical data is not available at this time. A report is expected to be presented to the 217th General Assembly (2006) in Birmingham, Alabama.

IV. AREAS FOR IMPROVEMENT

In many respects, GACOR is on the threshold of fulfilling its potential as a voice encouraging the inclusions of the too long silenced in the leadership of the PC(USA) at all levels. There are, however, areas where improvement would help in achieving this goal.

- One area that needs strengthening is the partnership of the work of committees on representation (CORs) and nominating committees at all governing body levels, and at the General Assembly level. The General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR) and the General Assembly Nominating Committee (GANC) can serve as a role model. Often across the PC(USA), nominating committees are not only deeply involved in their important work of discerning who God is calling to serve in the leadership of the church, but also in collecting and analyzing statistical information that is important where representational gaps exist.

—Part of the work of GACOR is to be a support system to the work of GANC in addressing our shared concern that leadership in the church includes the diverse cultures and gifts of Christ’s disciples. In its role as advocate, advisor, resource, and consultant, GACOR can be a valuable partner through review of statistical information and making recommendations to GANC on areas where representation could be strengthened. The GANC does an admirable job of considering representational issues as it seeks the best qualified candidates for positions within the General Assembly. Yet thorough review takes time away from consideration of potential candidates. The GACOR could provide support to GANC by providing more regular and timely information on the representational needs for the makeup of leadership bodies, thus allowing GANC to spend more time in considering the candidates themselves.

—Throughout the year, GACOR members encounter and seek individuals whose names can be submitted to the nominating committee process to meet particular representational needs. These names are part of the pool of resources that GACOR provides in support of the work of GANC. The better our understanding of the needs of the GANC, the better our ability will be to support the ministry of discerning God’s calling.

—As previously noted, much good has been accomplished when GACOR and GANC have met to discuss obstacles to service in the church at all governing body levels. Examples include making meetings more accessible for persons with disabilities, overcoming language and geographical distances, and addressing issues related to youth/young adult participation at all governing body levels. Continued work together will strengthen our mutual ministries and will provide a good role model. This will provide a light to others in our global community in the ways we can live out Christ’s vision of “I in them and you in me, that they may become completely one, so that the world may know that you have sent me and have loved them even as you have loved me” (John 17:23).

- It is important that we continue our liaison work with synod CORs in the area of training by developing resources to meet emergent needs and by helping those synods whose CORs have not reached their potential to redevelop. In turn, synod CORs will be able to continue this work within their presbytery CORs.

- Communication is essential to the work of GACOR, for it is our stories and experiences of how the work of COR impacts all areas of the work of the PC(USA) through its advocacy of diverse leadership that opens us to considering new possibilities for expressing our faith. Progress has been made in this area, yet there is still room for growth. Our video, newsletter, brochures, and website are good starting places for sharing information about our ministry. The information is available. Our task now is to encourage a broader spectrum of PC(USA) members to gain an awareness of the value of ensuring that the leadership of our church reflects its membership.

- The GACOR actively assists in seeking diverse, qualified candidates for employment by the PC(USA); however, it has had limited involvement in determining the current representation in personnel. One of our Book of Order tasks is to advise the General Assembly on the employment of personnel in conformity with the churchwide plan for affirmative action and equal employment opportunity. This is one area where the committee could work more collaboratively with the church in fulfilling its task and continue to support our commitment to inclusiveness within our denomination.

- Encourage and advocate for meeting styles that are more inviting to cultures which are not as familiar or comfortable with Robert’s Rules of Order style of decision-making, as is appropriate. Becoming more inviting in our meeting styles, whenever that is possible, would encourage some who might bring additional valuable leadership gifts to the table and participate in the decision-making process of the church, when they might otherwise avoid such leadership. Our rich heritage would be diminished if such potential candidates turned our nominating committees down because of the way we go about the business of the church. Advocacy within our leadership ranks is part of the task of COR.

- Engage more actively in examination of the stumbling blocks that make participation in leadership roles difficult, and encourage utilization of emerging technologies to enhance communication and shorten the distances that may make participation difficult for some qualified potential candidates. Much is happening which will allow us to economically and more easily interact with each other over distances. Of course, face-to-face meetings continue to be important. One can share so much of one’s culture during the down time between sessions when we are face-to-face. However, it is becoming more and more possible for us to be present to each other while still in different places. Encouraging the use of these assets would enable some potential candidates for service (such as young adults with children, persons with disabilities, or those who simply are unable to take time off from work to travel to a General Assembly level meeting) to say “yes” when asked to serve.

V. ADEQUACY OF OUR MANDATE

The mandate for the General Assembly Committee on Representation initially comes directly from the Articles of Agreement, Article 8, Racial Ethnic Representation, Participation and Organizations:

8.1

... Its main function shall be to guide the governing bodies with respect to their membership and to that of their committees, boards, agencies and other units, in implementation of the principles of participation and inclusiveness, to ensure effective representation in the decision making of the church.

8.2 Governing bodies of the church shall be responsible for implementing the church's commitment to inclusiveness and participation which provides for the full expression of the rich diversity within its membership. All governing bodies shall work to become more open and inclusive and to correct past patterns of discrimination on the basis of racial ethnic background.

Since this mandate comes from the document that enabled the formation of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), the mandate for the existence of GACOR is inherent in the establishment of the denomination. As well, the mandate of the PC(USA), which CORs are attempting to implement and monitor, appears in G-4.0403, which says that persons of varying backgrounds, gender, marital status, diverse geographical areas, ages, and theological positions consistent with the Reformed tradition "shall be guaranteed full participation and access to representation in the decision making of the church." Thus, the question becomes, "Does our Constitution establish an adequate basis for the continuing ministry of the committee on representation?"

The Book of Order outlines the expectations of the committee on representation in G-9.0105. In terms of the provisions of G-9.0105, the general work of the committee is supported through the expectation that the committee be available in an advisory capacity and serve as advocate and resource concerning the membership of the General Assembly's decision-making bodies.

The review function of GACOR anticipates a review of the membership of the General Assembly committees and other decision-making bodies, as well as a review of the reports of synod CORs, and then report to the General Assembly.

One other area that needs some specific guidelines is that of advising on the employment of personnel, "in accordance with the principles of participation and representation and in conformity with a churchwide plan for equal employment opportunity." There is currently no mechanism for review of personnel statistics before major personnel decisions are made, thus making it difficult for GACOR to provide useful advice in terms of fulfilling this aspect of its responsibilities.

VI. PROCESS OF SELF-STUDY

The 216th General Assembly (2004), approved a recommendation that permanent, advocacy, and advisory committees and commissions of the General Assembly would be reviewed to evaluate their work to fulfill the mandates given to them by the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) based on a six-year schedule. The General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR) will be reviewed at the 217th General Assembly (2006). The GACOR established a Self-Study Task Group to evaluate the work of the committee over the previous six years. Following are the members of the task group:

The Reverend Carol Tompkins, moderator, Class of 2008, Female, White, Adult, Synod of the Sun;

The Reverend Dr. Stanley Bhasker, Class of 2008, Male, Asian, Adult, Synod of the Trinity;

Angelica Michail, Class of 2008, Female, Asian, Senior Adult, Synod of Southern California and Hawaii;

Ms. Beulah Townsend, co-opted member, Female, White, Senior Adult, Disabled, Synod of the Rocky Mountains.

The self-study group reviewed minutes from the six-year period, examined synod and caucus reports and statistics, reviewed the accomplishments of GACOR through evaluations of trainings and meetings, reviewed the newsletter, "Fixings," and examined GACOR reports to the General Assembly. In preparing this report, the self-study group decided to include several attachments that represent the work of GACOR over the six years of the review.

Since Research Services will be conducting a survey that will be sent to a sampling of members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), as well as members of CORs and various constituents who have completed their terms of service. GACOR has participated in the preparation of some of the questions that will be addressed in the survey to be distributed.

Throughout the process, the self-study group kept the full committee informed of the progress, and the final report will be available for their review. The members of the self-study group will attend the 217th General Assembly (2006) for presentation of the report to the Review Committee of the General Assembly.

Preface

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (referred to as the “Committee” or “ACWC”) has been in existence in its current form since 1993. This is its initial self-study. This report details the Committee’s work between January 2001 and December 2005.

As with the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) and the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP), ACWC emerged out of the Report on Shape and Form to the 205th General Assembly (1993). The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has a long history of working on gender equity and justice for women. The General Assembly in establishing ACWC, defined its mission broadly. The three primary purposes of this mission include

*...serving as a voice of advocacy on existing and emerging issues of justice both within the church and society; evaluating and monitoring policies, procedures, programs and resources regarding the way in which they impact the status and position of women; and giving the General Assembly and the General Assembly Council advice and counsel on overtures, resolutions, reports and actions recommending policy direction or action on issues of justice.*¹

The elected members (past and present) serving on the steering committee for this review wish to make a note about terminology before the substance of this report. Advocacy committees serve distinct functions from their advisory counterparts within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). While there are many similarities to the other General Assembly entities, advocacy committees are expected to be a prophetic voice for the church and society and are called to speak out (even against the policies of the church) after prayerful consideration when appropriate to do so. Like their advisory counterparts, ACWC is not programmatic and has full voice with corresponding member status to the General Assembly Council and General Assembly. Advocacy committees can submit actions to the General Assembly and General Assembly Council that recommend new policy to the church or introduce new topics for policy direction. Advisory committees study and interpret existing policy and develop new policy at the instruction of the General Assembly and/or General Assembly Council. The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) works closely with ACWC and the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC). ACWC serves as a servant of Christ acting as a sentry for the Church and society working toward full inclusion and gender equity.

Although this is the first review of this nature the Committee benefits from ongoing internal review. The reader will find in this report’s Appendix the following resources:

1. Appendix A: Item 04-19, from the 216th General Assembly (2004). Adding Standing Rule E.11 to the General Assembly, Manual of Operations, establishing the independent review process for permanent, advocacy, and advisory committees and commissions of the General Assembly.
2. Appendix B: The Description of the work of the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns from the GAC Manual of Operations, Appendix 1, EV, Section VIII.B. (p. 29)

The results of the above “program of ongoing self-study and review” will help define the coming years of ACWC and improve its service to the Body of Christ. The steering committee that wrote this self-study, the members and leadership teams whom forward it, and the General Assembly Review Committee have a unique opportunity. We continue to work toward the vision of God's justice-seeking love enacted through shared leadership written into our Book of Order. Together we can form a vision for the next six years so that God's community can extend its reach and witness and do so realizing God's kingdom come as we are called to help reconcile a broken church and world.

We continue working toward full equality and recognition of women as fully human members of and leaders within the Body of Christ, welcome to the journey.

Blessings to you in your work,

Concerns (ACWC), Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)

A Short Pre-HerStory

Women's advocacy is a historic function of the Body of Christ in the Reformed and Presbyterian tradition in the United States as attested to by the existence of similar entities to Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns in both the northern and southern streams of the church prior to reunion. As noted in Appendix F, which excerpts Chapter nine of the Presbyterian Social Witness Policy Compilation, "The Status of Women in Church and Society,"

...In 1967, the UPCUSA General Assembly's concern with the status of women in society took a big step as it directed that a study be prepared on "Women in Society and in the Church" (UPCUSA, 1967, p. 392). A subsequent study was approved by the 1969 UPCUSA Assembly (UPCUSA, 1969, p. 349). ... The PCUS Assembly in 1972 declared: "... God calls upon the church to act in society to end discrimination on the basis of sex and to challenge anything which interferes with women's full development and wholeness..." (PCUS, 1972, p. 178).²

ACWC's predecessors existed in both the Presbyterian Church in the United States (PCUS) and United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America (UPCUSA). Both the Justice for Women committee and the General Commission on Women focused their work on power sharing within the Presbyterian Church in a gender equitable manner. Protected within the Articles of Agreement in the reunion was a concern for women's advocacy articulated in Article five.³ The reunited church recognized four women's constituency groups: the Council on Women and the Church, the Third World Women's Coordinating Committee, the National Executive Committee of United Presbyterian Women, and Women Employed by the Church.

When the newly reunited PC(USA) met for the first time at the 195th General Assembly (1983) they reiterated the strong concerns for women and women's rights.

...The General Assembly affirmed "... the urgency of the issue of the lack of economic justice for women and ... recognize[d] and affirm[ed] the women's constituency groups [the Council on Women and the Church, the Third World Women's Coordinating Committee, the National Executive Committee of United Presbyterian Women, and Women Employed by the Church] as they give priority attention to this issue..." (PC(USA), 1983, p.87, 475).⁴

Appendix F to this report has a more complete list of past assembly actions regarding women and society. ACWC was born of a rich history in both parent denominations for women's advocacy work both in the church and in society. As in God there is no east or west, the church is called to witness to God's reconciling love throughout the world. Therefore, the Church has long addressed both domestic and international issues of women's concerns through advocacy with ecumenical partners and governments as well as congregations, presbyteries and synods, with individuals and in gathered communities.

HerStory of ACWC

ACWC is called to and understands its work in the context of a human situation where women experience injustice because they are women. Grounded in communal faith in "God [who] liberated the people of Israel from oppression... [and] covenanted with Israel... that they might do justice" (Book of Order, G-3.010b.) and motivated by painful recognition of sexism within and without, the church explicitly articulated in the Articles of Agreement its commitment to work against gender-based discrimination. The Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC) is a contemporary fulfillment of this historic commitment. Created by the mandate of the 205th General Assembly (1993) at the recommendation of the Report of the Task Force on Shape and Form, ACWC is charged with the responsibility of assisting the church to give full expression to the rich diversity of its membership as specified in the Book of Order, G-4.0403 . . . monitor(ing) and evaluat(ing) policies, procedures, programs, and resources regarding the way in which they impact the status and position of women in the church...and advocat(ing) for full inclusiveness and equity in all areas of the life and work of the church in society [as a whole]. (Minutes, 1994, Part I, p. 262)

ACWC's assigned functions are delineated in the GAC Manual of Operations (Appendix I, EV, Section VIII.B.), and they include:

- a. Preparing policy statements, resolutions, recommendations, reports, and advice and counsel memoranda on women's concerns to the General Assembly at the request of the General Assembly, the General Assembly Council, or on its own initiative.
- b. Advising the General Assembly Council on matters of women's concerns including statements concerning pressing issues that the council may wish to consider between meetings of the General Assembly.
- c. Providing advice and counsel to the General Assembly and its committees on overtures, commissioners' resolutions, reports, and actions before the General Assembly that impact issues of women's concerns.
- d. Assisting the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy in maintaining an up-to-date and accurate compilation of General Assembly policy on women's concerns and provide information to the church as requested.
- e. Providing the Stated Clerk, the Moderator of the General Assembly, and the Executive Director of the General Assembly Council with information as they fulfill their responsibilities to communicate and interpret General Assembly policies on women's concerns.
- f. Monitoring the implementation of women's policies and programs relative to women's concerns.
- g. Through advocacy, maintaining a strong prophetic witness to the church and for the church on existing and emerging issues of women's concerns.

ACWC is a function of the Office of the Executive Director, General Assembly Council, although staffing is provided by the Women's Ministries program area, National Ministries Division. The committee has direct access to the General Assembly and the appointed ACWC co-chair has corresponding member status with GAC and with the General Assembly. ACWC has ten members nominated by the General Assembly Nominating Committee (GANC) and elected by the General Assembly. They are chosen based on their individual qualifications and do not represent any constituencies. Current members are Terry Alexander, Karen Breckenridge (Co-Chair), Sarah A. Colwill (Co-Chair beginning in August 2005), Adeline S. deCastro, Dean E. Foose, F. William (Bill) Gray, Aleida Jernigan, R. Ann (Ani) Lelea, Nancy Neal (Co-Chair until August 2005), and Jerri Rodewald. In addition, Lillian Oats (Co-Chair) is a full voting member of the Committee, representing Presbyterian Women. Allison K. Seed is a full voting member elected to the Advocacy Committee by the General Assembly Council and also sits on the GAC Executive Committee.⁵

Recognizing the complex ways in which gender inequality manifests itself differently because of class, race, ethnicity, education, age, status in employment, disability, sexual orientation, marital status, and culture, ACWC invites liaisons from other entities of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to sit with the committee at its regularly scheduled meetings. Those entities are the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC), the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP), the National Network of Presbyterian College Women (NNPCW), the network of Racial Ethnic Young Women Together (REYWT), the Presbyterian Health, Education, & Welfare Association (PHEWA), the Congregational Ministries Division (CMD), the Presbyterian United Nations Office (PUNO), and the Worldwide Ministries Division (WMD). In turn, liaisons from the ACWC attend the meetings of ACSWP, ACREC, the Board of Pensions (BOP), and the Committee on Mission Responsibility Through Investment (MRTI). In 2001, ACWC began to send a liaison to the Presbyterian Health, Education, & Welfare Association (PHEWA) and the National Association of Presbyterian Clergywomen (NAPC).

In the Organization for Mission, a description of the General Assembly, the General Assembly Council and the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), the committee is described in this way:

The Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns shall assist the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to give full expression of the rich diversity of its membership as specified in the Book of Order, G-4.0403. The committee shall monitor and evaluate policies, procedures, programs, and resources regarding the way in which they impact the status and position of women in the church and the world; and shall advocate for full inclusiveness and equity in all areas of the life and work of the church in society as a whole.

From this broad mandate, ACWC finds itself evaluating the work before it on an annual basis and organizing itself for the work assumed. The evaluative function provides ACWC the reputation as the sentry. Each function recognizes that the church falls short of full inclusion of women and equitable power sharing. When asked to describe the work of the committee for potential nominees, the General Assembly Nominating Committee puts it succinctly, ACWC is a function of the GAC Executive Director's Office, and the National Ministries Division provides its staff support. ACWC has direct access to the General Assembly Council and the General Assembly. ACWC's three primary responsibilities include serving as a voice of advocacy on existing and emerging issues of justice both within the church and society; evaluating and monitoring policies, procedures, programs and resources regarding the way in which they impact the status and position of women; and giving the General Assembly and the General Assembly Council advice and counsel on overtures, resolutions, reports and actions recommending policy direction or action on issues of justice. The committee carries out these advocacy and monitoring functions in collaboration with the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns and Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy. One ACWC member serves on the Committee on Mission Responsibility Through Investment. ACWC is not programmatic.⁶

Reports and actions recommending policy directions are part of the important work of the committee and are more visible than some of its work. Issue reports approved by past General Assemblies are made available through the Office of Women's Advocacy in the Women's Ministries Program Area. These reports serve as a means of communicating with the larger church and are available through the Presbyterian Distribution Service (PDS). A common practice of the committee is to encourage a recent report's use by distributing to presbytery resource centers and others deemed appropriate to the subject of the report. Most reports are available on the ACWC web site at www.pcusa.org/womensadvocacy/acwc/reports. Recent past reports include:

- Clergywomen's Experiences in Ministry: Realities and Challenges, 2003, revised and expanded with an executive summary in 2005

The Platform for Action coming out of the 1995 Fourth World Conference on Women in Beijing, China, was a fundamental marker for human rights work for and with women both internationally and within the United States. The flurry of papers created by ACWC in the late 1990s reflects this vitality. The Beijing+5 conference, held in 2000, showed the resistance demonstrated all over the world to women's rights and the systematic nature of deeply embedded sexism throughout most cultures. There is no country in the world that can claim women have achieved equality. Now the energetic conversations about gender revolve about achieving the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) and the eradication of poverty. The PC(USA) has historically endorsed UN actions when they agree with Presbyterian policy and Reformed theology and after prayerful consideration and review. These gender justice actions have included endorsing: the Beijing Platform for Action; the international treaty, the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women (CEDAW); and the Millennium Development Goals.

A Note about Staffing

The staffing of the committee has gone through a long period of transition. The Rev. Unzu Lee staffed the advocacy committee from its inception in 1993 to June of 2000. Since then, a series of five persons have served as primary staff for the committee. June Ramage Rogers was appointed the first Interim Coordinator in 2000 and served until Kay Goodman was hired for the Coordinator position in 2002. Ms. Goodman left in April of 2004 and the position was then shared by Ann Crews Melton, who was appointed Interim Associate in the Office of Women's Advocacy, and Dora G. Lodwick, Ph.D., who was hired as staff consultant for the committee during the transition. Ann and Dora served in these positions until July 2005. The two positions were again integrated into one when Molly Casteel was hired as Associate for Women's Advocacy in September 2005.

The Last Five Years: 2001-2005

2001 – Accomplishments

ACWC's annual report for 2001 noted the feedback of the Beijing+5 meeting in 2000, which noted the increasing resistance to the Platform for Action from the 1995 Fourth World Conference on Women held in Beijing, China. That conference preceded the celebration in December 1998 of the World Council of Churches' Decade of Churches in Solidarity with Women, and expressed the determination in ecumenical circles to push ahead with the women's agenda in both church and society. In June 2000, the Rev. Unzu Lee, staff to ACWC and Coordinator of the Office of Women's Advocacy for seven years, resigned. This placed ACWC in a temporary situation under the leadership of Interim Coordinator June Ramage Rogers in August 2000.

Meetings

1. Louisville, KY, January 18 – 20, 2001. ACWC took the opportunity of being in Louisville to meet with many staff members. Extensive briefings were provided by Jennifer Butler (the Presbyterian United Nations Office), Sharon Youngs (CMD), Valerie Small (GANC) and a team of WMD staff in regard to a third draft of the Women and AIDS report. On Saturday, ACWC met with John Detterick, Executive Director of the GAC, to discuss the relationship of ACWC to GAC and the appointment of one of its members. The prostitution report was discussed in draft form for the 214th General Assembly (2002).
2. San Francisco Theological Seminary, San Anselmo, CA, July 19 – 22, 2001. Following the pattern of previous years, one meeting was dedicated to study of women's issues. At the San Francisco meeting, ACWC heard from The Rev. Glenda Hope of San Francisco Network Ministries about issues surrounding prostituted women, and Father Labbib, priest of an Arabic speaking congregation, concerning women in the conflict between the Israelis and Palestinians. A discussion of concerns about women not making their voices heard at the 213th General Assembly (2001) followed a report by a member of the tracking of speakers from the floor. Gerry Tayler reported the following categories of persons (as noted in the minutes):
 - a. Male = 109
 - b. Female = 59 (with at least 15 of these happening during speak outs)
 - c. Clergy = 62
 - d. Elders = 32 (not all identified themselves)
 - e. Youth Advisory Delegates (YADs) = 29
 - f. Racial/Ethnic persons = 14 male and 1 female; 9 clergy, 2 elders (not all identified themselves)
 - g. Theological Seminary Advisory Delegate (TSAD) = 1
 - h. Ecumenical Advisory Delegate (EAD) = 3

Concerns were raised with how persons are recognized, encouraged to speak, and methods of how to increase the visibility of women at future assemblies.

3. New York, NY, October 18 – 21, 2001, in a joint meeting with ACREC (Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns) and ACSWP (Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy). Joint business sessions centered on mutual concerns such as the "Changing Families" report, the problem pregnancy work being done by ACSWP with the Advisory Committee on Litigation (ACL), work of interest from the United Nations office and discussion of the value of continuing to meet jointly occasionally. At the New York meeting, the group heard from the National Council of Churches of Christ concerning their initiative "Poverty Mobilization & Economic Justice" and a presentation entitled "Class, Gender and Race Intersections - Commonalities in Issues and Advocacy Education" presented by Kimberle Crenshaw, Ph.D., Columbia and UCLA Schools of Law. The group also visited Ground Zero, the ruins of the World Trade Center, and toured the United Nations.

ACWC fulfilled the “responsibility to prepare statements, reports, recommendations, and advice and counsel memoranda to the General Assembly on issues that impact the status and well-being of women” in the following ways in 2001:

- ☑ Prepared Advice and Counsel memoranda for overtures and commissioners’ resolutions to the meeting of the 213th General Assembly (2001).
- ☑ Prepared the ACWC Report, Sisters of Mercy, Daughters of Grace: Presbyterians and Prostituted Women, to be presented to the 214th General Assembly (2002).
- ☑ Continued the study of emerging issues for clergywomen. Scheduled the final paper to be submitted as a report to the 215th General Assembly (2003).
- ☑ Continued a review of the church’s policies on sexual misconduct by clergy.
- ☑ Prepared for monitoring the church’s use of inclusive/expansive language.
- ☑ Submitted ACWC’s annual narrative report to the 213th General Assembly (2001).
- ☑ Printed the report, Women & AIDS: A Global Crisis (PDS # 72 710 01 003) 2001, and made it available through the Presbyterian Distribution Service(PDS). This report was prepared in close consultation with the Presbyterian United Nations Office (PUNO) and the AIDS Task Team in the Worldwide Ministries Division (WMD).

In addition to the exposure to local advocates in areas where the regular meetings of the ACWC are held, the very make-up of the ACWC allows for networking, monitoring and evaluating procedures, policies and programs among GA entities and program areas. In addition through staff to the ACWC, networking around public policy issues is carried out through the Public Policy Advocacy Team (PPAT) made up of GAC staff, representing several program areas; the Cross-Caucus meetings of the Racial Ethnic Ministries; and through involvement in issue-oriented inter-staff meetings and conferences.

Growing partnerships on global economy and environmental concerns have emerged from the Women’s Advocacy Conference on Economic Justice in March 2000. In these and other ways the monitoring of broad concerns related to women of color, immigrant women, working parents (child care) was effected. Likewise, such issues as domestic violence and other examples of violence against women, sexual misconduct, pay equity, women and health, and many other gender-related concerns were lifted up and addressed in concert with other program entities of the church, making new partnerships possible. The Chair of the ACWC met regularly with the General Assembly Council and reported ACWC concerns and actions to them.

213th General Assembly (2001), June 9-16, 2001, in Louisville, KY

ACWC prepared Advice and Counsel memoranda for seven overtures and two commissioners’ resolutions to the 213th General Assembly (2001). In addition to this work, the advocacy committee also submitted the following:

Referrals in Progress

1. 2000 Referral: 27.004. Recommendation 3. That the 212th General Assembly (2000) Direct the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns, in Collaboration with the Office of the General Assembly, Churchwide Personnel Services, and Research Services to Look at the Emerging Issues Related to Clergywomen Serving in Parish Ministry, Including the Decreasing Numbers of Clergymembers Available for Service, Proportionately Lower Numbers of Women Serving Congregations, and the Increasing Numbers of Clergy women Leaving Parish Ministry, and Report Back to the 214th General Assembly (2002) From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (Minutes, 2000, Part I, pp. 53, 317)

ACWC requests the postponement of its report on emerging issues related to clergywomen serving in parish ministry, including the decreasing numbers of clergy members available for service, proportionately lower numbers of women serving congregations, and the increasing numbers of clergy women leaving parish ministry from the 214th General Assembly (2002) until the 215th General Assembly (2003). More time is needed to differentiate between issues that have faced clergywomen throughout their almost 50 years of serving the church and emerging issues such as mobility (approximately 50% of clergywomen are married to clergymen), economics, especially related to the compensation of single parent clergywomen, and nature of calls accepted by clergywomen (women serving as pastors are disproportionately concentrated in smaller-membership congregations. Are these issues evidence of discrimination or matters of personal choice? Current available data and interpretation of that data doesn't allow us to make a determination and thus complete our report.

Final Response to Referrals

1. 1999 Referral: 32.003. Recommendation 2. That the 211th General Assembly (1999) Encourage the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to Find Specific Ways to Increase Acts and Programs of Solidarity With Women, and Particularly Work on Behalf of Women in the Struggle Against Sexual Exploitation and Violence, With a View of Reporting these Measures, Through the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns, to the 213th General Assembly (2001) From the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Delegation to the Eighth Assembly of the World Council of Churches (Minutes, 1999, Part I, pp. 20, 519).

ACWC answers this referral with the following action: "We feel that the request is fulfilled with the projects underway, including, but not limited to, the report on prostituted women, the clergywomen report and the sexual misconduct initiative. We understand that this is not, by any means, complete, but given our budget restraints, we feel that it meets the request. Our very existence shows that this is happening!" October 2001

2. 1999 Referral: 27.005. Recommendation 4. That the 211th General Assembly (1999) direct the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns, in consultation With the General Assembly Council, to Appoint a Five-Member Work Group of Women and Men From the Church at Large to Work With Appropriate Staff Persons From Women's Ministries, Men's Ministries, and Church-wide Personnel Services to Study the Status of How the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Is Addressing the Issues of Sexual Exploitation, Sexual Addiction, Prostitution, and Their Root Causes and Report to the 213th General Assembly (2001) From the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (Minutes, 1999, Part I, pp. 78, 473).

Report

ACWC's report, Sisters of Mercy, Daughters of Grace: Presbyterians and Prostituted Women, February 2001, was included in the annual report to the 213th General Assembly (2001).

2002 – Accomplishments

ACWC published a brochure (PDS # 72 710 03 001) describing the committee's work and a magnet for distribution with contact information. These were created to increase awareness of the committee's work and existence.

Meetings

1. Louisville, KY, January 24-27, 2002. At the meeting the committee heard presentations from the PC(USA) project "Enough For Everyone," Rosa Chol from Sudan, Africa, and Lee Welsh, the Director of Kentucky Refugee Ministries. During their time they also heard from the PC(USA) Controller on new policies and from Mary Elva Smith on the Women's Ministries Program Area. Further work included the draft of the prostitution report in discussion with the GAC feedback. The ad hoc nominating committee made nominations and the election of officers was accomplished within committee business. The leadership positions for 2002 were as follows:

- Chair: Joanne Sizoo
- Chair Elect / Vice Chair: Ernestine Cole
- Advice and Counsel Team Chair: Nancy Neal
- Chaplain: Charlene Heaton

The long-range planning group discussed with the whole committee the tenth anniversary of the creation of ACWC, including celebration plans as well as guided discussions about next steps and visioning for the committee's future. The final prostitution report, Sisters of Mercy, Daughters of Grace: Presbyterians and Prostituted Women was adopted and prepared for printing. A letter was written to GAC affirming the importance of and use of inclusive language.

2. Los Angeles, CA, July 25-28, 2002, held concurrently with the Racial Ethnic Convocation. While in Los Angeles we visited Mary Magdalene House, a Presbyterian sponsored residence program designed to help women leave prostitution. Extra time was scheduled for the Clergywomen working group to continue their work in support of the report. The committee discussed a review of the recently completed assembly and discussed the two consultations held – “Emerging Issues Facing Clergywomen” and “Sexual Misconduct Policies.” The committee responded to the two comments included in the approved ACWC report to the 214th General Assembly (2002), Sisters of Mercy, Daughters of Grace: Presbyterians and Prostituted Women, other referrals from the assembly were also discussed. Liaisons were assigned to ACSWP, ACREC, MRTI, BOP, GAC, and PHEWA. To ACWC custom, working groups were also assigned for the next year and the Manual of Operations was reviewed. The committee spent some time with Fahed Abu-Fakel, elected Moderator of the 214th General Assembly (2002).
3. Boston, MA, October 17-20, 2002. During the Boston meeting ACWC visited Rosie’s Place, a street shelter for women, and Casa Myrna Vasquez, a shelter for victims of domestic violence. In addition to hosting a visit with Barbara Renton, GAC Chair, the committee received a packet on inclusive language and participated in a module with a discussion and exercise. Several referrals from the 214th General Assembly (2002) were discussed including: commissioner resolution 02-20, on sexual misconduct; item 13-05/13, for advocacy on behalf of low-income and fixed income persons who lack health insurance; and overture 02-52, on pastoral resources for women who have experienced abortion. Extensive work surrounded domestic violence, the new liaison relationship with PHEWA, and the report from Lillian Oats from the 9th International Forum on Women’s Rights in Development, “Re-Inventing Globalization” in Guadalajara, Mexico.

ACWC fulfilled the “responsibility to prepare statements, reports, recommendations, and advice and counsel memoranda to the General Assembly on issues that impact the status and well-being of women” in the following ways in 2002:

- Prepared Advice and Counsel memoranda on overtures, commissioners’ resolutions and actions for the meeting of the 214th General Assembly (2002).
- Prepared the ACWC Report entitled Clergywomen’s Experiences in Ministry: Realities and Challenges to be presented to the 215th General Assembly (2003).
- Continued a Review of the Church’s Policies on Sexual Misconduct by Clergy.
- Launched an initiative for monitoring the church’s use of inclusive/expansive language.
- Corresponded with GAC affirming the use of inclusive language.
- Submitted ACWC’s annual narrative report to the 214th General Assembly (2002).
- Submitted the ACWC Report, Sisters of Mercy, Daughters of Grace: Presbyterians and Prostituted Women to the 214th General Assembly (2002).
- Continued to distribute and promote the report, Women & AIDS: A Global Crisis (PDS # 72 710 01 003) 2001.

Every ACWC meeting has a local component to expose committee members to grassroots advocates in the communities where the meetings are held. ACWC is composed of levels of diversity, which allows for networking, monitoring and evaluating procedures, policies and programs among GA entities and program areas. In addition through its staff, networking around public policy issues is carried out through the Public Policy Advocacy Team (PPAT) made up of GAC staff, representing several program areas; the Cross-Caucus meetings of the Racial Ethnic Ministries; through involvement in issue-oriented inter-staff meetings and conferences; and, conference calls, additional meetings and special events designated for participation by an ACWC member. The Chair of the ACWC met regularly with the General Assembly Council and reported ACWC concerns and actions to them.

Issue reports approved by past General Assemblies are made available through the Office of Women's Advocacy in the Women's Ministries Program Area. These reports serve as a means of communicating with the larger church and are available through the Presbyterian Distribution Service. Recent reports include:

- The Fourth World Conference on Women, Beijing, China (PDS #72710 98 005) 1996
- Report on the Girl Child (PDS #72710 98 003) 1997
- The Plight of Women and Children Forced into International Prostitution (PDS#72 710 98 004) 1997

- Women & AIDS: A Global Crisis (PDS # 72 710 01 003) 2001

The ACWC report, Sisters of Mercy, Daughters of Grace: Presbyterians and Prostituted Women, approved by the 214th General Assembly (2002) will be prepared for distribution in the same manner after having a section of worship resources completed and added.

214th General Assembly (2002), June 15-22, 2002, in Columbus, OH

At this assembly the vote was taken to move to Biennial assemblies after 2004. As a result some of the work of the advocacy committee, especially that which is in collaboration with other partners, shifted timelines. This assembly approved the late-term abortion policy by a vote of 394-112-4.

ACWC prepared Advice and Counsel memoranda for seven overtures and two commissioners' resolutions to the 214th General Assembly (2002). In addition to this work, the advocacy committee also submitted the following:

Referrals In Progress

2002 Referral: Item 13-08/ Overture 02-052 Recommendation on Pastoral Resources for those in need of compassionate and restorative ministry of the gospel when dealing with abortion. The Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns, The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy, and The Office on Theology and Worship are instructed to research the availability of resources on this topic, using related organizations within the denomination and outside sources, assess them and report back on their findings with recommendations concerning the need to develop new resources. (Minutes 2002, Part 1, pp 70, 654)

The referenced groups have recruited materials from some 15 sources. As lead entity, The Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns reports this work in progress with anticipated completion of assessment and recommendations for the 216th General Assembly (2004).

4. Final Response to Referrals

2002 Referral: Item 13-05/13. Recommendation on Advocacy on behalf of the uninsured. Urge the Advocacy Committee on Women's Concerns and the Advocacy Committee on Racial Ethnic Concerns to advocate on behalf of low-income and fixed-income persons who lack health insurance. (Minutes, 2002, Part 1, pp 70, 634)

The Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns affirms their continued attention and efforts in this matter in their work on behalf of victims of domestic violence, prostituted women, minimum wage workers, and clergywomen. The Web page of the Office of Advocacy for Women contains links to educate and enable involvement in this arena.

2000 Referral: 27.004. Recommendation 3. That the 212th General Assembly (2000). Direct the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns, in Collaboration with the Office of the General Assembly, Churchwide Personnel Services, and Research Services to Look at the Emerging Issues Related to Clergywomen Serving in Parish Ministry, Including the Decreasing Numbers of Clergymembers Available for Service, Proportionately Lower Numbers of Women Serving Congregations, and the Increasing Numbers of Clergy Women Leaving Parish Ministry, and Report Back to the 214th General Assembly (2002)-From the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (Minutes, 2000, Part I, pp. 53, 317)

The issue report, Clergywomen's Experiences in Ministry: Realities and Challenges, was attached to the ACWC annual report to the 214th General Assembly (2002). More extensive information on survey results is available through the Office of Women's Advocacy.

5. Recommendations to the 215th General Assembly (2003)

The Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns calls upon the church at every level to raise awareness about gender-discrimination in the church and makes the following recommendations to the 215th General Assembly (2003).

1. Instruct General Assembly entities and request middle governing bodies and seminaries to encourage congregations to call clergywomen from various racial/ethnic backgrounds as well as Caucasian clergywomen.
2. Instruct ACWC to research current programs and support for clergywomen, particularly racial ethnic and single clergywomen and to bring recommendations to the 216th General Assembly (2004).
3. Instruct Church-wide Personnel Services and request middle governing bodies, seminaries, and congregations to address the difficulties frequently encountered in the position of associate pastor.
4. Request that presbyteries and congregations review their policies and practices in relation to clergywomen including salaries, pension, Social Security, health insurance, dependent care, family-leave and other benefits and correct any deficiencies or inequities found.
5. Request Committees on Ministry, Committees on Preparation for Ministry, and congregations to emphasize the importance of integrating self-care and care of family with the demands/expectations of the practice of ministry, for clergy and for candidates.
6. Call congregations to new openness in considering clergywomen for positions of pastoral leadership, especially as solo pastors and heads of staff.
7. Call upon PC(USA) seminaries to develop courses addressing the importance of holistic health as it relates to the demands/expectations of the practice of ministry.
8. Affirm the biblical and theological background and policy proposals incorporated in the study papers "All the Live Long Day: Women and Work" (1995) and "Vocation and Work" (1990).
9. Instruct the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns and the Women's Ministries Program Area to partner with the Committee on Representation and the Racial Ethnic Caucuses to monitor clergywomen's call processes and equity issues related to terms of call.
10. Instruct ACWC to provide a forum at future General Assemblies for clergywomen to comment on issues raised in the 2002 ACWC survey and offer continuing feedback to the church.
11. Instruct the Stated Clerk's Office to make this report and any follow-up information available to the church electronically.

2003 – Accomplishments

Meetings

1. Louisville, KY, January 23-25, 2003. At the January meeting in Louisville, KY, the committee heard a presentation from the National Network of Presbyterian College Women (NNPCW) about their history and present work. The committee approved the revised clergywomen's report by consensus. The ad hoc nominating committee made nominations and the election of officers was accomplished within committee business. The leadership positions for 2002 were as follows:
 - a. Chair: Ernestine Cole
 - b. Chair Elect / Vice Chair: Karen Breckenridge
 - c. Advice and Counsel Team Chair: Charlene Heaton
 - d. Chaplain: Dean Foose

The advocacy committee began an extended conversation about developing a procedure for choosing future work or projects and created a preliminary list of criteria and methods.

2. Sacramento, CA, July 24-26, 2003 (held concurrently with ACSWP and ACREC). ACWC hosted Charie Bowman Reid, Moderator of the National Association of Presbyterian Clergywomen (NAPC), who asked to strengthen connections between ACWC and NAPC in light of the Clergywomen's Report. ACWC also reviewed procedures for new work and referrals emerging from the 215th General Assembly (2003). ACWC drafted a process for discerning and prioritizing emerging issues and agreed upon the following working groups for the following year: abortion resources; advice and counsel; clergywomen report; GA strategy on abortion issues; inclusive language; and, sexual misconduct. Liaisons were appointed to the following groups: ACREC; ACSWP; BOP; MRTI; PHEWA; NNPCW; NAPC; and, the Women of Faith Awards selection committee. Ernestine Cole was elected Vice-Chair for the current term GA 2003 to GA 2004. ACWC wrote a letter to James Henderson, in regard to the cancellation of a conference on Domestic Violence planned for Montreat Conference Center in 2003. ACWC corresponded with area heads of divisions in GAC staff to inquire about existing programs and support for clergywomen, additional letters were planned for NAPC, presbyteries, conference centers, seminaries and stated clerk meetings.
3. Chicago, IL, October 16-18, 2003. While in Chicago, we began our time together with Dr. Anna Case-Winters, Professor of Theology at McCormick Theological Seminary, for a lecture and discussion around liberation theology. Also in Chicago the committee received guests from the local presbytery's Committee on Women and heard about their work, and visited the Mayor's office for a look at their extensive domestic violence help-line program and the faith community's part in that work. The business meeting had ACWC receive the resignation letter (effective October 3, 2003) from Ernestine Cole. A discussion of the vacancy was required as she served as Vice-Chair. Dean Foose was asked to serve as Interim Vice Chair until elections would be held in January 2004. Valerie Small addressed the committee in light of the changes in terms required by the change to biennial assemblies. Two classes were announced for current members so as to accommodate this necessary change. Kathy Lueckert, Deputy Executive Director of the General Assembly Council presented the GAC Mission Work Plan (2005-2006) and explained the changes in the budgets and strategic plans. Shin Kim, planning team member of the National Consultation of Presbyterian Racial Ethnic Women, presented their work and invited ACWC to join them as a partner for the event by:
- a. sending two members of ACWC to participate in the consultation in Atlanta;
 - b. bringing to the 217th General Assembly (2006) a report on the Consultation including its recommendations; and,
 - c. monitoring the work of various ministry offices and entities on behalf of women of color.
- After discussion, ACWC began a process to investigate further collaboration on the event. NNPCW requested a liaison position to ACWC to raise awareness of ACWC among PC(USA)-engaged college women and provide a connection to young adults. Five recommendations from the inclusive language working group were discussed by the committee. ACWC accepted and affirmed the report "We Are What We Eat" but as a non-programmatic entity they continued to investigate possibilities in following up to the referral item. ACWC did decide to meet in summer 2004 in a rural location to explore the issues raised in the report.

The Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC) has a responsibility to prepare statements, reports, recommendations, and advice and counsel to the General Assembly on issues that impact the status and well being of women. The ACWC fulfilled this responsibility in the following ways in 2003:

- Prepared advice and counsel memoranda on Overtures and Commissioners' Resolutions affecting women and their children coming before the 214th General Assembly (2003);
- Continued, in partnership with others, a review of the Church's policies on sexual misconduct by the clergy;
- Continued work on an initiative for assisting the Church in use of inclusive language;
- Adopted a process for discerning future work for the committee;
- Led the effort to produce a post-abortion pastoral resource;
- Addressed all referrals from previous General Assemblies (individual reports contained in the following section of this document); and,
- Submitted ACWC's annual report to the 214th General Assembly (2003).

In addition to the exposure to local advocates in areas where ACWC's regular meetings are held, the very make-up of the ACWC allows for networking, monitoring and evaluating procedures, policies and programs among GA entities and program areas. Through staff to the ACWC, networking around public policy issues is carried out through the Public Policy Advocate Team (PPAT) made up of GAC staff, representing several program areas; the Cross-Caucus meetings of the Racial Ethnic Ministries; and through involvement in issue oriented inter-staff meetings and conferences.

In these ways a monitoring of broad concerns related to women of color, immigrant women, working parents (child care) can be affected. Likewise, such issues as domestic violence and other examples of violence against women, sexual misconduct, pay equity, women and health, and many other gender-related concerns can be lifted up and addressed in concert with other program entities of the Church, making new partnerships possible. ACWC's chair meets regularly with GAC and reports ACWC concerns and actions to them.

The ACWC report, Sisters of Mercy, Daughters of Grace: Presbyterians and Prostituted Women, (2001), approved by the 214th General Assembly (2002) was assigned the PDS #095814, printed and made available for distribution.

215th General Assembly (2003), May 24-31, 2003, in Denver, CO

ACWC prepared Advice and Counsel memoranda for five overtures and one commissioners' resolution to the 215th General Assembly (2003). In addition to this work, the advocacy committee also submitted the following:

Final Response to Referrals

2002 Referral: Item 13-08. Overture 02-52. On Pastoral Resources for Women Who Have Experienced Abortion—From the Presbytery of Donegal (Minutes, 2002, Part I, pp. 70, 654).

After reviewing available materials and in keeping with current PC(USA) policy and in consultation with other PC(USA) entities as well as the broader religious community this resource has been written and will be available after June 15, 2004.

2002 Referral: Item 11-01, Report: We Are What We Eat, Recommendation F., Direct the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns and Request Presbyterian Women to Identify Food Production/Consumption Issues as a Priority in Their Mission and Education Program—From the General Assembly Council (Minutes, 2002, Part I, pp. 23, 535).

The ACWC is not a programmatic entity; however, ACWC has requested that the Office of Women's Advocacy fulfill this request. That office will do so in planning specific workshops and conferences, i.e., Women's Advocacy Conference and Economic Justice for Women Conference, and by producing resources and Action Alerts.

2003 Referral: Item 04-01. Report, Clergywomen's Experience in Ministry: Realities and Challenges, Recommendation 10. That the General Assembly Instruct the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC) to Provide a Forum at Future General Assemblies for Clergywomen to Comment on Issues Raised in the 2002 ACWC Survey and Offer Continuing Feedback to the Church—From the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 62, 293).

ACWC has scheduled such a consultation to be held at the 216th General Assembly (2004) and will continue to provide means for regular collection and consideration of feedback.

Recommendations to the 216th General Assembly (2004)

A. ACWC recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004):

1. Recognize and acknowledge that there is a prevailing myth that the work of supporting and sustaining clergywomen in the ministries of the PC(USA) is completed;
2. Acknowledge the need for ongoing, structured support on the part of all of our 173 Presbyteries for all clergywomen;
3. Ask the Office of the Committee on Ministry to review resources currently available to meet the particular needs of clergywomen of all ethnicities in the call process and in pastorates as stated above and to report its findings to ACWC; and,
4. Request that ACWC make recommendations, following that review, which will contribute to a proactive, health-giving ministry to and relationship with our clergywomen.

Rationale

This resolution, with recommendations, is in response to the following referral: 2003 Referral: Item 04-01. Report, Clergywomen’s Experience in Ministry: Realities and Challenges, Recommendation 2. That the General Assembly Instruct the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns to Research Current Programs and Support for Clergywomen, Particularly Racial Ethnic and Single Clergywomen, and to Bring Recommendations to the 216th General Assembly (2004)—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 62, 293).

ACWC sent a survey to executive presbyters, stated clerks, committees on ministry chairpersons, PW moderators and PW enablers in September 2003. That survey showed the following:

*Support and programs for clergywomen are few. They range from formal and structured instituted by presbyteries, to informal meal gatherings and networking at presbytery meetings and other occasions arranged by clergywomen themselves. The structured programs included a monthly meeting of clergywomen in one presbytery and an annual clergywomen breakfast/brunch hosted by PW in another.

*“Top down” or presbytery-sponsored programs and implemented structure were rare. One program for racial ethnic clergywomen was reported; and, none for single clergywomen. Most presbyteries reported that their COMs were not actively involved in women’s advocacy training. And, education and the programs or structure appears to be a continuation of Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity requirements.

*One presbytery had all PNCs meet with a “clergywomen interpreter” before COM approved the CIF for circulation. Another presbytery challenged pastors (especially in the mountain regions) to include at least one woman in the list of supply pastors. One presbytery used an interim placement program to support racial ethnic clergy and clergywomen. Mentors, retreats, justice for women committees and newsletters were part of the formal structure of support in a few presbyteries.

*Informal support listed in the survey responses included networking on the part of individual clergywomen, Bible studies and self arranged clergywomen gatherings. Geography limited interaction in some presbyteries. In some predominately rural presbyteries support came from ecumenical groups.

ACWC commends presbyteries that have implemented specific programs of support for clergywomen and especially any that have programs to assist and sustain racial ethnic and single clergywomen.

- B. ACWC recommends that the 216th General Assembly (2004) encourage all Committees on Ministry to conduct gender and racial ethnic awareness training with its Nominating Committees for all clergy.

Rationale

This resolution with a recommendation is in response to the following referral: 2003 Referral: Item 04-01. Report, Clergywomen’s Experience in Ministry: Realities and Challenges, Recommendation 9. That the General Assembly Instruct the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns and the Women’s Ministries Program Area to Partner with the General Assembly Committee on Representation and the Racial Ethnic Caucuses to Monitor Clergywomen's Call Processes and Equity Issues Related to Terms of Call—From the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 62, 293).

In consultation with Women's Ministries Program Area, General Assembly Committee on Representation and the Racial Ethnic Caucuses, ACWC reports for all parties that the information on specific calls is private, thus unavailable for comparison purposes.

2004 – Accomplishments

April 2004 brought profound changes in the staffing of ACWC. With those changes temporary restructuring was necessary. Dr. Dora G. Lodwick was hired as a consultant to staff the committee. Ann Crews Melton was hired as Interim Associate for the Office of Women's Advocacy. ACWC and the programmatic Advocacy Office continued to coordinate their efforts consulting with each other regularly. Plans were formulated to hire one full-time staff person for ACWC/Office of Women's Advocacy in the summer of 2005.

Additionally, the committee members restructured the leadership of ACWC to better represent a non-hierarchical structure and style. The committee selected three co-chairs who are responsible for the tasks of relating to General Assembly Council, to General Assembly, and to members and liaisons of the committee. Varying functions and responsibilities were written and these and other changes were made to the Manual of Operations & Procedures of the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns to better reflect the operations of the committee.⁷ Primary impact was that the leadership changes allowed for sharing of the corresponding member functions to various entities so that no one was asked to attend a great deal more meetings than any other.

ACWC collaborated with Women's Ministries and the Office of Women's Advocacy to produce the fourth installation in the Problem Pregnancy series of brochures, When Pregnancy Involves Loss: Helping Others Face Problem Pregnancies in 2004 and published a promotional bookmark for the resource.

Meetings

1. St. Petersburg, FL, January 22-24, 2004. Dianne Tennis, author of Is God the Only Reliable Father? spoke to ACWC. Then the group discussed the relationship between feminism and theology. The ACWC visited Beth-El Farmworker Mission that helps farm workers move toward self-sufficiency through education, worship and outreach. It is a ministry of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church and the Presbyterian Church (USA). The ad hoc nominating committee made nominations and the election of officers was accomplished within committee business. The leadership positions for 2004 were as follows:
 - a. Chair: Karen Breckenridge
 - b. Chair Elect / Vice Chair and A+C Chair: Nancy Neal
 - c. Chaplain: Lillian Oats

The committee was presented with two options for ACWC's mission statement. They approved by consensus the following:

The Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC) is called by General Assembly to be a voice of justice and advocacy for women in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and around the world; in order to give full expression to the rich diversity within its membership (Book of Order, G-4.0403). To this end, we advocate for full inclusiveness and equity in all areas of life and work in the Church and society. "Does not wisdom call, and does not understanding raise her voice?" Proverbs 8:1

2. Seattle, WA, July 22-24, 2004. Rev. Dr. Flora Wilson Bridges, pastor of Madrona Presbyterian Church and Seattle University professor, spoke to ACWC about issues clergywomen face. The committee worshiped with the Church of Mary Magdalene and shared a meal with women who found safe haven from the violence of homelessness, poverty and abusive treatment, sharing their lives in this community of believers. Presbyterian Clergywoman Jean Kim founded this Church in 1991. Kathy Lueckert, ⁷ See Appendix I for the attached Manual of Operations & Procedures of the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns.

Deputy Executive Director, GAC, distributed the GAC Mission Work Plan (2005-2006), adopted by the 216th General Assembly (2004). ACWC expressed concern in those conversations for staff eliminations made to the Women's Ministries Program Area and deployed Synod staff. The Chair, Karen Breckenridge, presented the proposed restructuring of ACWC's leadership and the changes necessary in the Manual of Operations. The leadership was described as:

- a. Co-Chair for General Assembly Relations = identified as the corresponding member to GA and serve as Advice and Counsel Chair;
- b. Co-Chair for General Assembly Council Relations = with corresponding member status; and,
- c. Co-Chair for Committee Relations = overseeing the internal work group relations and ACWC's relationships with other committees, particularly where there are liaisons.

The three Co-Chairs would share moderating duties during regular meetings. The new model would encourage participation by all ACWC members, allow work to be completed with less hierarchy of leadership, and provide leadership development for members. Each year would see the election of one Co-Chair to the team and the Chairs would determine job duties among the leadership team. Liaisons were selected for the following entities: ACREC, ACSWP, BOP, MRTI, NAPC, NNPCW, and PHEWA. New working groups were formed to address abortion policy/sex education, Juarez murders/border issues, the status of women in the PC(USA), and ordination of Christian Educators, with a short-term group working on changes to the Manual of Operations. Being the first meeting under the new style of leadership, the committee assessed the process before adjourning and decided they will continue with the consensus model of decision-making and new leadership structure.

3. Princeton, NJ, October 14-16, 2004. Drs. Abigail Rian Evans and Katharine Doob Sakenfeld, professors at Princeton Theological Seminary, talked about the experiences of clergywomen graduates of the Seminary. About fifteen women joined ACWC to share their experiences as seminary students and to explore how ACWC might advocate for the use of inclusive language and for other issues of concern. Current student concerns included: sexual harassment, networking and social justice issues. At the urging of the inclusive language working group, ACWC sent letters with inclusive/expansive language materials to the following persons: the Moderator and Vice-Moderator of the 216th General Assembly (2004); Presbyterian Women (PW) Moderators; Presbytery Moderators; and, PW Synod Moderators. Members were encouraged to review the current draft of the Trinity paper available online and get back to Jerri Rodewald who would draft a letter containing ACWC's feedback to the Office of Theology and Worship in January 2005. The committee reviewed a draft of the Manual of Operations for considered final amendments in 2005. Member, Lillian Oats, was absent for the meeting attending the Women of Color National Consultation on behalf of ACWC. Evaluation forms are now distributed at every meeting for member feedback.

ACWC fulfilled the "responsibility to prepare statements, reports, recommendations, and advice and counsel memoranda to the General Assembly on issues that impact the status and well-being of women" in the following ways in 2004:

- Reviewed and responded to 19 overtures, two commissioner resolutions, and one report, with 32 advice and counsel memoranda for the meeting of the 216th General Assembly (2004);
- Submitted the ACWC Report entitled Clergywomen's Experiences in Ministry: Realities and Challenges to the 215th General Assembly (2003) and prepared it for publication;
- Continued, in partnership with others, a review of the Church's policies on sexual misconduct by clergy;
- Continued work on an initiative for assisting the Church in use of inclusive/expansive language;
- Revised the leadership structure of the committee to reflect a more non-hierarchical structure and style;
- Adopted a process for discerning future work for the committee;
- Adopted an amended mission statement for the advocacy committee;
- Compiled and posted inclusive language resources on the ACWC web site;
- Addressed all referrals from previous General Assemblies (individual reports contained in the annual narrative report);

- ☑ Member, Ani Lelea, and staff consultant, Dora Lodwick, joined ACSWP in a trip to the Middle East in October 2004, exploring women's issues in the region and published a written report on the ACWC web site that included photos (www.pcusa.org/womensadvocacy/acwc/middleeasttrip);
- ☑ Collaborated with the Office of Theology and Worship, the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy, Presbyterian Women, the Women's Advocacy Office and Women's Ministries, and produced the fourth brochure in the "Problem Pregnancy" series called When Pregnancy Involves Loss. This series provides support to those providing spiritual guidance and counseling to women and men who are dealing with issues of problem pregnancy in their lives. The brochure was received by the 216th General Assembly (2004);
- ☑ Collaborated with Women's Ministries and the Women's Advocacy Office, revised and updated Well Chosen Words! (due mid-2005);
- ☑ Corresponded with GAC affirming the use of inclusive language;
- ☑ Delivered an advice and counsel memoranda to the Executive Committee of the General Assembly Council regarding the proposed changes to the Women's Ministries Program Area (May 2004);
- ☑ Submitted ACWC's annual narrative report to the 216th General Assembly (2004); and,
- ☑ Collaborated with Women's Ministries and the Office of Women's Advocacy to produce the fourth installation in the Problem Pregnancy series of brochures, When Pregnancy Involves Loss: Helping Others Face Problem Pregnancies in 2004 and published a promotional bookmark for the resource.

Every ACWC meeting has a local component to expose committee members to grassroots advocates in the communities where the meetings are held. ACWC is composed of levels of diversity, which allows for networking, monitoring and evaluating procedures, policies and programs among GA entities and program areas. In addition through its staff, networking around public policy issues is carried out through the Public Policy Advocacy Team made up of GAC staff, representing several program areas; the Cross-Caucus meetings of the Racial Ethnic Ministries; and through involvement in issue-oriented inter-staff meetings and conferences. The Chair of the ACWC met regularly with the General Assembly Council and reported ACWC concerns and actions to them.

The Advice and Counsel work group of ACWC reviewed and responded to 19 overtures, two commissioner resolutions, and one report, with 32 advice and counsel memoranda. Several were written in consultation with the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns and the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy. Additionally, ACWC resourced six committees. ACWC also participated in the Women's Orientation Breakfast and in the Women's Ministries Luncheon.

The committee held an open consultation to hear ongoing concerns of clergywomen in the church. This was in response to 2003 Referral: Item 04-01. Report, Clergywomen's Experiences in Ministry: Realities and Challenges, Recommendation 10. That the General Assembly Instruct the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC) to Provide a Forum at Future General Assemblies for Clergywomen to Comment on Issues Raised in the 2002 ACWC Survey and Offer Continuing Feedback to the Church (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 62, 293).

In response to mandates from General Assembly, to voices of women gathered in consultations and through direct requests, and through a process of discernment held at the July 2004 meeting, the members of ACWC selected the following advocacy issues. Working sub-groups address advocacy and monitoring strategies for each of the issues for the following year.

1. Clergywomen Working Group: This group is editing Clergywomen's Experiences in Ministry: Realities and Challenges for publication. Additionally, an Executive Summary is available from ACWC and eventually on the ACWC web site. The work group continues to develop responses to the mandates of the 216th General Assembly (2004):

- ☑ Item 05-03/01 & 02: To recognize and acknowledge the prevailing myth that the work of supporting clergywomen in ministries in PC(USA) is completed; and acknowledge the need for ongoing support of all presbyteries for clergywomen.
 - ☑ Item 05-03/03 & 04: To work with the Office of the Committee on Ministry to review resources available to meet the needs of clergywomen of all ethnicities in the Call Process and make recommendations following the review to the 217th General Assembly (2006).
 - ☑ Item 05-05/04: Encourage all committees on ministry to conduct awareness training for gender, racial ethnic, and disabilities concerns with all pastor-nominating committees.
 - ☑ Item 14-09: Monitor the Board of Pensions calculations of salary for churches with a clergy couple installed to one position.
2. Inclusive/Expansive Language Working Group is dedicated to helping the church look at how its language helps shape how people view God and women's leadership. Currently it has collaborated with Women's Ministries and the Office of Women's Advocacy to revise Well Chosen Words that provides guidelines for speaking and writing about God and God's people.
- In 2004, the Office of Women's Advocacy surveyed the Presbyterian seminaries and all who responded (eight out of ten) asserted that they have inclusive language policies that are implemented. However there is great variation in accountability procedures. Therefore ACWC plans to:
- ☑ Develop liaison relationships with the seminaries and provide inclusive/expansive language resources information to incoming seminary students.
 - ☑ Provide inclusive/expansive language resources on the web page.
 - ☑ Continue to advocate for the use of inclusive/expansive language in the publications of the church.
3. Reproductive Options Working Group focuses on addressing ways to educate the church about the church's policies. It is focusing on identifying the resources currently available to the church and exploring what is most helpful to congregations.
4. Sexual Misconduct Working Group developed in response to the work of the General Assembly on the sexual misconduct amendments. It is currently exploring next steps in advocacy and assessing what presbyteries are currently doing.
5. Ordination of Christian Educators Working Group is seeking to learn more about the issue. This is an area that has been brought to the attention of ACWC by the Association of Presbyterian Church Educators for a number of years. The committee is seeking to determine how to respond to this concern.
6. Juarez Working Group was formed in response to concerns about the murder of young women in Juarez, Mexico, who are working in border industries. Members of ACWC have sought to educate themselves on the issue through participation in the Social Justice Biennial Conference in Tucson, AZ. ACWC advocated for educational efforts through networks of Presbyterian Women, Women's Advocacy Office, and the Office of Young Women's Ministries.
7. Status of Women in PC(USA) Working Group was formed in response to numerous past studies of PC(USA) and other denominations, such as the Episcopal Church, that have indicated that women are still disadvantaged in their work for the Church. This work group is developing a proposal for further study to determine the current status of women in PC(USA). The hope is knowing the landscape better, the committee's work can be in celebration of the victories and dogged pursuit of the obstacles to women's full inclusion in church and society.
- ☑ Overture 99-17: ACWC is collaborating with the Advisory Committee for Social Witness Policy in addressing pay equity issues within the church (211th General Assembly (1999) mandate, Minutes pp. 80 and 591). ACSWP has had to delay the project because of their congested workload. ACWC anticipates we will be able to pick this up in Fall 2006.

Additional topics that have not yet developed into work groups are the outcomes of the National Consultation of Racial Ethnic Women in the PC(USA), potential collaboration with the Office of Young Women's Ministries, and work that is to be led by the Advisory Committee for Social Witness Policy on a "Resolution on the Disenfranchisement of People of Color in the U.S. Electoral Process" (2004. Item 10/02)

The very make-up of the ACWC allows for networking with General Assembly entities and program areas. Through staff of ACWC and of the Women's Advocacy Office, networking around public policy issues is carried out through the Public Policy Advocacy Team (PPAT) made up of General Assembly Council staff, representing several program areas; and the Cross-Caucus meetings of the Racial Ethnic Ministries. A staff person also sits on the National Council of Churches Justice for Women working group. ACWC was invited to be a consulting partner to listen and be a resource for participants at the National Consultation of Racial Ethnic Women in the PC(USA) in October 15-17, 2004. Currently the consulting partners, in partnership with the Consultation organizers, are developing a strategic plan to address issues identified by the women of color. Appropriate issues will be considered by ACWC for future advocacy work. A report with recommendations is expected in 2005. ACWC will determine when they receive the report what further action they will take.

2005 – Accomplishments

Staffing changes continued to impact the work of the committee. Dr. Dora G. Lodwick continued as a consultant to staff the committee until July 15, 2005 when Ann Crews Melton also completed her work as Interim Associate for the Office of Women’s Advocacy. It was not until September 19, 2005, that Molly Casteel was hired as the Associate for Women’s Advocacy and took over coordination duties for ACWC. Leigh Harper continued as the Senior Administrative Assistant, a position she assumed in 2003.

The new leadership structure of three co-chairs has worked well and better serves the committee’s work in an inclusive, non-hierarchical style. The Manual of Operations & Procedures of the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns was submitted for review and small, suggested revisions were accepted at the January (2006) meeting to bring it into full compliance with the GAC manual.

Meetings

1. San Francisco, CA, January 22-24, 2005 ACWC, ACSWP and ACREC all convened in San Francisco for their meetings. All three committees spent January 21 (before their meeting) in a joint education session about cultural proficiency led by the Rev. Kikanza Nuri Robins. The next day, ACWC and ACREC met jointly and focused on immigration issues in the California context. The speaker was Betty Canton-Self, Executive Director for the Interfaith Coalition for Immigrant Rights (ICIR). Discussing issues of citizenship, farm workers, home services and federal issues, the committees explored ways they can continue working with one another and identified important areas of potential collaboration. As a result, ACWC and ACREC acted on items to increase their collaboration on issues of mutual concern, intentionally meet together at regular intervals and have their leadership and liaisons meet by conference call twice a year. Helen Locklear, Deputy Executive Director, GAC, met with the ACWC to discuss the Mission Work Plan and its critical role in directing the committee work. Work groups discussed continuing issues from the 216th GA (2005) and discussed future projects. ACWC wrote a letter to the GAC personnel committee regarding the dismissal of two employees in late 2004 and elected the Rev. Sarah Colwill as a member of the Leadership Team replacing Nancy Neal beginning at the August 2005 meeting. The committee voted to extend an invitation for a liaison position to REYWT (Racial Ethnic Young Women Together) to strengthen its work with young and racial/ethnic women.
2. Sioux Falls, SD, August 10-14, 2005 The meeting was delayed until August to accommodate the harvest season and to make meeting in Sioux Falls with farmers possible. ACWC went to Sioux Falls to discuss the We Are What We Eat report with the persons involved in its prompting and writing and to explore issues for rural churches and women in farming communities around globalization and food security. Guest speakers included: Kathryn Baker, Presbyterian Women (PW), Jerilynn Bakken, Bernetta and Dick Burghardt, Holly Butrum, Kathy Callies, Marion Cramer, Wendy Figland, Rev. Peter Funch, Cal Hansen, Florence Hoff, Marian Judy, Dianne Larson, Paula Larson, Vi Leonard, Crystal Page, Julie Pearson, Carolyn Petik, Rev. Tom Pickles, Rev. Richard (Dick), Linda and Ann Poppen, Diana Stephen, Associate, Network Support/Rural and Small Church Ministries, NMD, Rev. Carolyn Visser, Vicky Wahl, and Delores Walter. Diana Stephen highlighted in her presentation that “there is an economic crisis within rural communities and thought must be given to how policies affect these rural communities. There is a deep hurt – this (farming/ranching) is a vocation that is becoming industrialized. Large companies are exhausting the land, the animals, the water, etc. and accepting no responsibility for the damage they do. This is a global issue.” She went on to note that women pastor many of the small and rural churches. The salaries are very low, however, there are many opportunities. “Fuel costs are devastating this area.” She and Kathryn Baker raised other issues in the area: domestic violence, prevalence of depression and a high suicide rate. Health care is an issue as the nearest (physical or mental) health care can be over 100 miles away. This was the context for the field exploration and interviews with local pastors, elders and community members. ACWC extended the meeting by one day to include extensive field trips into the surrounding communities. This was an eye-opening meeting, renewing ACWC members to encourage greater rural representation in their midst (in conversation with the GANC) and to raise concerns about the local effects of globalization.

3. Tempe, AZ, October 6-8, 2005 With the Washington, DC, meeting location coinciding with the Washington Office anniversary cost-prohibitive, the ACWC determined to locate the October meeting at Cook College and Theological School, a Presbyterian Racial-Ethnic (RE) school, in Tempe, Arizona to re-familiarize themselves with concerns regarding Presbyterian RE schools. The committee stayed in the conference center and met on-campus for all their meetings. ACWC spoke with Larry R. Norris, President; Ms. Vivian Winter Chaser, Director of Public Relations; Ms. Minta McIntosh, Volunteer in Mission Coordinator for Conference Center; and Ms. Maramlyen Tokeak, Student Body President. Our hosts shared cultural stories, songs and hospitality in addition to explaining history, describing the student body and financial/survival concerns of racial ethnic schools, in general, and Cook College, in particular. RE schools were topics of concern raised at the 216th GA (2004). This meeting was located to help the ACWC better understand the issues.

ACWC fulfilled the “responsibility to prepare statements, reports, recommendations, and advice and counsel memoranda to the General Assembly on issues that impact the status and well-being of women” in the following ways in 2005:

- Continued, in partnership with others, a review of the Church’s policies on sexual misconduct by clergy;
- Continued work on an initiative for assisting the Church in use of inclusive/expansive language;
- Revised the leadership structure of the committee to reflect a more non-hierarchical structure and style;
- Delivered an advice and counsel memorandum to the Executive Committee of the General Assembly Council regarding the then proposed changes to the Women’s Ministries Program Area in response to the reduction in force of GAC staff in May 2004;
- Delivered a letter to the Office of General Assembly recommending to all GA entities, presbyteries and synods that 10% of what people spend on meetings should be spent locally. This action came from the learning generated in the August meeting and study of the We Are What We Eat paper;
- Delivered two letters to the Office of Theology and Worship, raising the committee’s concerns with the office regarding staffing/hiring and in response to a draft of the Trinity report in regard to the use of inclusive/expansive language. These are explicit functions of the committee for monitoring and correspondence;
- Distributed Clergywomen’s Experiences in Ministry: Realities and Challenges (PDS # 72 710 01 003) 2003, revised 2005, to presbytery resource centers and during women’s ordination events held throughout the country in celebration of ordination anniversaries;
- Revised and printed, with Women’s Ministries (NMD), Well Chosen Words! (2005);
- Included Well Chosen Words and Definitions and Guidelines on Inclusive Language in a PW quarterly mailing as well as the mailing to Resource Centers;
- Prepared a letter enclosing the brochure, Well Chosen Words!, to all Presbyterian seminaries to promote the importance of using inclusive/expansive language in theological education;
- Distributed the brochure, Well Chosen Words!, to all CPMs to promote the importance of using inclusive/expansive language in preparation for ministry;
- Explored feasibility of conducting ACWC Self-Study and Evaluation in time for the 217th General Assembly (2006);
- Placed ACWC member, Aleida Jernigan, on ACSWP’s “social insurance” task force;

- ☑ Placed ACWC member, Bill Gray, on ACSWP’s study paper revision of “The Nature and Value of Human Life” (PCUS, 1981);
- ☑ Distributed a report on “Women in the Middle East” to all ACWC members and published it and photos from the 2004 trip to the Middle East on the ACWC web site;
- ☑ Facilitated representation of NNPCW young woman to the NNPCW conference;
- ☑ Drafted letter sent with problem pregnancy pamphlets and policy statements, to all Resource Centers since the Stated Clerk’s Office decided to only have the brochures on the web site;
- ☑ Consulted about continued work for clergywomen report with Committees on Ministry;
- ☑ Reviewed the Manual of Operations and sent it to the Procedures Subcommittee of GAC, to Helen Locklear, Deputy Executive Director, to Mary Elva Smith, Associate Director of Women’s Ministries, and to ACREC and ACSWP;
- ☑ Submitted ACWC’s annual narrative report to the General Assembly Council and compiled the report to the 217th General Assembly (2006); and,
- ☑ Revised, expanded and printed the report, Clergywomen’s Experiences in Ministry: Realities and Challenges (PDS # 72 710 01 003) 2003, and added an executive summary in 2005.

Expanded Working Groups

In response to mandates from General Assembly, to voices of women gathered in consultations and through direct requests, and through a process of discernment held at the August 2005 meeting, the members of ACWC selected the following advocacy issues. Working sub-groups address advocacy and monitoring strategies for each of the issues for the following year. In 2005, the committee determined the following issue foci:

1. Clergywomen Working Group
2. Inclusive/Expansive Language Working Group
3. Human Sexuality Working Group
4. Sexual Misconduct Working Group
5. Christian Educators Working Group
6. Juarez/Gender-based Violence Working Group
7. Status of Women in PC(USA) Working Group
8. Additional topics that have not yet developed into working groups are the outcomes of the Women of Color Consultation in the PC(USA), a potential collaboration with the Office of Young Women’s Ministries, and work that is to be led by the Advisory Committee for Social Witness Policy on a “Resolution on the Disenfranchisement of People of Color in the U.S. Electoral Process” (2004. Item 10/02). After the August (2005) meeting, ACWC monitored food and trade issues with an eye to assisting 217th GA (2006) commissioners around these topics in collaboration with the Presbyterian Hunger Program. The January 2006 joint meeting with ACREC in Louisville will have significant discussions of collaboration on issues of immigration and the Women of Color Consultation report and recommendations.

The Work

ACWC patterns of work 2001-2004

For the time covered in this self-study, ACWC held three meetings per year, generally in January, July and October. Until 2005 every year saw a General Assembly, providing a very firm cycle to the work of the committee. Every year there was GA prep and GA responses in addition to the issues studied and the monitoring work assigned the committee. With new members joining every year, new member orientation always occurred in the first meeting after GA, when members begin their terms in the summer meeting (generally July or August). Officer Elections generally take place within the January meeting and terms go from GA to GA.

Seasonal cycles of ACWC work

July (Summer)

- Orientation of new members
- Review of GA action and Responses, evaluation of Advice and counsel team (A+C) and ACWC resourcing of committees
- New business outlined and working groups realigned accordingly
- Continuing work on reports and studies

October (Fall)

- Lengthy site visit and/or speaker, with a consultation
- Significant drafting of reports for GA
- GANC discussion of possible nominees or re-nominations

January (Winter)

- Officer elections
- Final drafts of reports to GA, including agency description
- A+C team selected, meeting(s) scheduled, drafts pending
- Celebration of members ending their terms on the committee at this meeting
- Joint meeting with ACREC and/or ACSWP or concurrent meeting in same location to facilitate collaboration and communication

Regular Tasks of the committee

- Worship and maintaining a reformed theological framework for advocacy work
- Hospitality to guest(s)
- Reports from Liaisons and staff
- Housekeeping items like minutes and budget review
- Working group meetings and reporting back to committee
- Speaker(s)/site visit(s)
- Research of women's issues or concerns
- Monitoring of GA entities and offices
- Assignments for committee tasks or correspondence responsibilities
- Voting on action items
- Evaluation of procedure and committee work
- Assisting ACSWP in maintaining an up-to-date and accurate compilation of General Assembly policy on women's concerns and provide information to the church as requested
- Maintaining a prophetic voice for gender justice within the church and in the world

The Emerging Pattern, 2005+

2005 was the first year without a General Assembly in the history of ACWC. In the absence of the assembly and without new members joining the group, there was not need to have an orientation session. Instead the committee had to reconsider the patterns of their work and used the time to examine the ways it goes about doing things and evaluating its processes. As a result, ACWC restructured its leadership style and made adjustments to its Manual of Operations. In 2005, at the same time the committee was made aware of its selection in the first group of GA committees to do a self-study and be under review for the 217th General Assembly (2006), it had already begun to incorporate regular self evaluation to every meeting. What is emerging is still developing and with the staff transitions complicating matters clarity is still elusive. What we know is that the pace of biennial assemblies allows the committee to pay closer attention to the scope of its mandate instead of concentrating its work on the annual assembly and the cycle of preparation and response.

Seasonal cycles of new ACWC work in 2005+July (Summer)

- Orientation of new members (in GA year only)*
- Review of GA action and Responses, evaluation of Advice and counsel team (A+C) and ACWC resourcing of committees (in GA year only)*
- Open discussions of women's concerns with an interest toward areas of special concern to the church that need attention
- New business outlined and working groups realigned accordingly
- Continuing work on reports and studies
- Lengthy site visit and/or speaker with consultation

- Two-year cycle allows for non-GA year to have ecumenical partners (and others) be invited to meetings to foster better collaboration.
- Long-term planning for committee work. Example thinking at least two GAs in the future, to allow for adequate study, time to make the request and time to do the work and make a report to a subsequent GA.

October (Fall)

- Lengthy site visit and/or speaker with consultation
- Extended staff consultation with WMD and CMD, the Presbyterian Washington Office and UN Offices
- Significant drafting of reports for GA
- Correspondence frequency is greater because committee members have more time to consider these kinds of actions.
- GANC discussion of possible nominees or re-nominations
- For Example: in 2005 greater attention was paid to GAC actions including the restructuring of the council, the Mission Work Plan (2007-2008), and the pending reduction in force for GAC staff (this will be particularly true in non-GA years)

January (Winter)

- Officer elections
- Final drafts of reports to GA, including agency description (in GA year only)*
- A+C team selected, meeting(s) scheduled, drafts pending (in GA year only)*
- Celebration of members ending their terms on the committee at this meeting (in GA year only)*
- Joint meeting with ACREC and/or ACSWP
- Evaluation of the first year of the cycle could be reviewed at this meeting in non-GA years and adjustments made in the long-range plans.

The constant tasks stay about the same but the slower pace of the meetings allow for greater time to explore the regional issues to the meeting locations. ACWC has taken the added reflection time to invite new partners to the table and explore liaison relationships with those that help the committee do its work more effectively. For example: In an interest to address the 2005-2006 Mission Work Plan concerns about young adults, ACWC has extended liaison invitations to both NNPCW (the National Network of Presbyterian College Women) and REYWT (Racial Ethnic Young Women Together).

Constant Tasks of the committee

- Worship and maintaining a reformed theological framework for advocacy work
- Hospitality to guest(s)
- Reports from Liaisons and staff
- Working group meetings and reporting back to committee
- Speaker(s)/site visit(s)
- Housekeeping items like minutes and budget review
- Keeping up to date in matters of women's concerns allowing for extensive research of women's issues or concerns
- Advocating for inclusive and expansive language at every level of government, including the congregation, but especially in documents, presentations and meetings and in worship services therein.
- Monitoring of GA entities, offices, and resources
- Assignments for committee tasks or correspondence responsibilities
- Voting on action items
- Evaluation of procedure and committee work
- Assisting ACSWP in maintaining an up-to-date and accurate compilation of General Assembly policy on women's concerns and provide information to the church as requested
- Maintaining a prophetic voice for gender justice within the church and in the world

Looking Toward the Future

At the beginning of this report we shared the list of the advocacy committee's assigned functions as they are delineated in the GAC Manual of Operations (Appendix I, EV, Section VIII.B.).

- a. Preparing policy statements, resolutions, recommendations, reports, and advice and counsel memoranda on women's concerns to the General Assembly at the request of the General Assembly, the General Assembly Council, or on its own initiative.
- b. Advising the General Assembly Council on matters of women's concerns including statements concerning pressing issues that the council may wish to consider between meetings of the General Assembly.
- c. Providing advice and counsel to the General Assembly and its committees on overtures, commissioners' resolutions, reports, and actions before the General Assembly that impact issues of women's concerns.
- d. Assisting the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy in maintaining an up-to-date and accurate compilation of General Assembly policy on women's concerns and provide information to the church as requested.
- e. Providing the Stated Clerk, the Moderator of the General Assembly, and the Executive Director of the General Assembly Council with information as they fulfill their responsibilities to communicate and interpret General Assembly policies on women's concerns.
- f. Monitoring the implementation of women's policies and programs relative to women's concerns.
- g. Through advocacy, maintaining a strong prophetic witness to the church and for the church on existing and emerging issues of women's concerns.

The items on this list have been most decidedly accomplished by the committee members past and present who have faithfully served the PC(USA) and the Body of Christ on the advocacy committee since 2001. Committee membership and staffing change but the mission and work of the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns continues to be necessary and essential for Presbyterians to live out the love of God in our broken communities. Women do not yet fully share in the leadership of church and/or society. Women continue to suffer because of their gender. The justice work of the church endures. As we look to what the future of our work may bring we raise up the recommendations ACWC makes to the 217th General Assembly (2006). One is a joint resolution with ACREC growing out of the collaboration with the Women of Color Consultation, held in October 2004. The other is a recommendation for the study of the status of women in the PC(USA). The denomination has never comprehensively studied the status of women and without it we have difficulties celebrating when we have achieved or knowing where our best efforts are needed. The hopes are that the study will allow us to draw the map for the work the committee takes on in coming years. We need to know where light services are not located and where they have simply been turned off. Our call is one to carry the light into the darkness and illumine corners the church needs to see. We can do that better when we better know ourselves.

Recommendations to the 217th General Assembly (2006)

Both the Joint resolution from ACWC and ACREC and the recommendation from ACWC for a study of the status of women in the PC(USA) emerged from the work of the committee in consultation with partners in recent years.

I. Joint Resolution from ACWC and ACREC Regarding the Women of Color Consultation Report and Recommendations

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) and the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC) recommend that the 217th General Assembly (2006) do the following:

1. Create a task force to respond to the recommendations in the Women of Color Consultation (WoCC) report (see Appendix A to the ACREC report). This task force should include representation from ACREC and ACWC, as well as members identified from Presbyterian Women and the National Cross Caucus. As part of the response to the recommendations, the task force will design a mechanism to monitor the implementation of the recommendations in the WoCC report. This task force will report to the 218th (2008) and 219th (2010) General Assemblies.

2. Direct the General Assembly Council (GAC) to provide sufficient funding and staff support for the ACREC/ACWC joint task force.

3. Direct the GAC to provide sufficient funding and staff support to ensure a regularly recurring Women of Color Consultation.

4. Equip all GAC staff to be responsive to the needs of women of color as part of their continuing commitment to valuing the gifts that all people bring to the PC(USA). GAC staff should continue to be encouraged to reflect on and incorporate the values articulated in the Report on Creating a Climate for Change Within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) approved by the 216th General Assembly (2004).

5. Encourage all members of the Presbyterian Church (USA) to read, study and respond to the WoCC report and recommendations.

Rationale

The Women of Color Consultation occurred in October 2004 in Atlanta, Georgia. Nearly 200 women of all ages and many racial ethnic backgrounds gathered to share their experiences as in the PC(USA) and in society. The report and recommendations from those gathered at the Women of Color Consultation highlight the ways in which the PC(USA) has failed to give “full expression to the rich diversity within its membership” and has not provided the “means which [would] assure a greater inclusiveness” (Book of Order, G-4.0403) for women of color.

In particular, they found that women of color lack structural support at all levels of the PC(USA) – congregation, presbytery, synod and General Assembly – and have yet to be included in decision-making bodies beyond mere token representation. Some support exists (albeit at a bare minimum) for people of color, and for women, but within the institutional structure of the PC(USA) there is no built-in mechanism that can respond to the complex intersection of “race, gender, class and other identities” that merge in the experience of women of color.⁸ As such, the PC(USA) remains ineffective in creating an environment in which racial ethnic women feel welcome to participate as full partners in the ministry of Christ in and through the PC(USA).

Through this report, the women gathered at the consultation have voiced their yearning to see the PC(USA) become the church it has committed to become, one in which women of color are seen as equal children of God and partners in Christ. ACREC and ACWC honor the contribution that women of color are to the PC(USA), and exhort the Church to give ear to the concerns and dreams they have voiced in the Report and Recommendations from the Women of Color Consultation.

The report examines every aspect of the life of the church in order to present ways in which the PC(USA) can strengthen its work in Evangelism and Witness, Justice and Compassion, Leadership and Vocation, and Spirituality and Discipleship. As these touch on all the programs of the GAC, it is essential that GAC staff remain proactive in developing their own ability to hear and adequately respond to the needs of women of color. Taking full advantage of the training for cultural proficiency that has been provided through the recommendation of the previous General Assembly is a valuable beginning in this process.

The recommended joint task force would ensure that all the concerns voiced in the report, in particular the ones directed to the above committees, would be given full consideration. As the recommendations also involve the cooperation of bodies beyond the two committees, the task force would design mechanisms to accurately evaluate and hold accountable other bodies within the PC(USA) with regards to the needs of women of color.

⁸ Report and Recommendation from the Women of Color Consultation (2005), p. 1. (see Appendix A of the ACREC report to the 217th GA (2006))

ACREC and ACWC also call on the General Assembly to support a regularly recurring Women of Color Consultation to strengthen our sisters in Christ in the life of the church. The relationships, insights, mission and vision that emerge from these consultations would be essential in assessing the effectiveness of the PC(USA)'s ministry to our sisters, and for envisioning ways in which the witness and ministry of women of color could be given fuller expression in the PC(USA).

II. A Recommendation to Study the Status of Women in the PC(USA)

ACWC recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006):

- 1. Request ACWC to assess the status of women, in elected and staff positions, in decision-making and leadership positions in the PC(USA) at all levels through surveys and other data collection and evaluation;
- 2. Report progress and initial findings to the 218th General Assembly (2008) to measure the extent to which gender justice has been achieved in the church, measuring presence and acceptance of women, to get the facts on the current status of women in leadership positions in an effort to support and further the inclusion of women in leadership positions in the PC(USA), at all levels. The primary areas of this first ever such survey for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) will focus on:
 - a. The extent of women in leadership positions at all levels of the PC(USA) in elected and staff positions, in decision-making and leadership positions.
 - b. Attitudes about women in leadership – including how women in leadership positions are perceived and accepted, by both members and staff..
 - c. Describing how women in leadership positions are treated, including compensation, in comparison with male colleagues, by both members and staff.
- 3. Prepare a final report to the 219th General Assembly (2010) to include recommendations for action, qualitative and quantitative data describing women in the various decision-making and leadership positions, and identifying patterns of women's participation in the church and factors influencing positively and/or negatively upon their participation.
- 4. Direct the GAC to provide sufficient funding and staff support to ensure the research and analysis for a complete measurement of the status of women in the PC(USA).
- 5. Equip all GAC staff and members to be responsive to the needs of all women as part of their continuing commitment to valuing the gifts that all people bring to the PC(USA). GAC staff and members should continue to be encouraged to reflect on and incorporate the values articulated in the Report on Creating a Climate for Change Within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) approved by the 216th General Assembly (2004).

Rationale

This year marks three significant anniversaries for women in ordained leadership within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). Therefore, the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC) believes this requested study to be particularly timely. There has not been a comprehensive study of the status of women within the denomination. ACWC is charged with the responsibility of assisting the church to live out its commitment to justice for women by "monitoring and evaluating policies, procedures, programs, and resources regarding the way in which they impact the status and position of women in the church, . . . and advocating for full inclusiveness and equity in all areas of the life and work of the church in society."⁹

⁹ ACWC report to the 208th General Assembly (1996)

This survey will be a way for the Committee to carry out its mandate, provided on its creation by the 205th General Assembly (1993), to ensure advocacy and monitoring of justice for women throughout the church. Describing the qualitative and quantitative realities of women leaders in all levels of the church, the report will set the context of ACWC's work for years to come.

It is especially important to know the extent to which the church is responding to the following two sections of the Book of Order:

G-40403 which states that the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) shall give full expression to the rich diversity within its membership and shall provide means which will assure a greater inclusiveness leading to wholeness in its emerging life. Persons of all racial ethnic groups, different ages, both sexes . . . shall be guaranteed full participation and access to representation in the decision making of the church.

G-9.0104 a, which states that governing bodies of the church shall be responsible for implementing the church's commitment to inclusiveness and participation as stated in G-4.0403. All governing bodies shall work to become more open and inclusive and shall pursue affirmative action hiring procedures aiming at correcting patterns of discrimination on the basis of the categories listed in G-4.0403.

This study will reaffirm past General Assemblies' commitments to the inclusion of women in decision-making and leadership in all levels of the church and their equitable treatment. It will also show how far we have come and how far we have left to go in fully realizing and reflecting that “. . . In sovereign love God created the world good and makes everyone equally in God's image, male and female, of every race and people, to live as one community.”¹⁰

The reports will show areas for celebration. It is also expected to identify specific areas needing more attention, including identifying specific barriers that need to be addressed to bring about the full acceptance and equitable treatment of women in the PC(USA)'s leadership. The final report will contain recommendations for action.

The value of "including the rich diversity of God's people in the leadership" of the PC(USA) at all levels was the subject of (2005) "Open Letter to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) regarding "Creating A Climate for Change Within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)." The signers included the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly and the Executive Director of the General Assembly Council. This survey will further the acceptance and support of women in the decision-making and leadership positions of the PC(USA).

The Mission Work Plan (2007-2008)

In February 2006, the General Assembly Council adopted the 2007-2008 Mission Work Plan [MWP] consisting of four goal areas and eight objectives.¹¹ The breadth of the plan will require ACWC to look carefully at our work. In our first conversations it is clear that gender and women's advocacy are essential in meeting these objectives. For example, in the Justice and Compassion goal area poverty is one of the objectives where our work intersects in important ways. Women are paid on average $0.76 for every dollar a man earns for the same job expectations and experience. These numbers fall when you factor in race and income levels in an American context for working women. The anticipated project with ACSWP on pay equity will be a way we can address this specific concern to women. The important work of the Office of Women's Advocacy and the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns finds connections throughout the goal areas. This way of describing the work of the GAC helps each entity find new partners and strengthens collaborations across the various concerns. We know women's concerns will not be adequately addressed until we recognize women's rights are human rights and improving women's realities improves families, communities and congregations.

¹⁰ A Brief Statement of Faith, lines 29-32

¹¹ See Appendix J of this report for a full description of these goals and objectives.

The Holy One who declared all creation, women and men who are equally created in the image of God, as “good,” still abides with those who are considered the least of these. Fundamental inequalities are exhibited at both systemic levels as well as on individuals—experiences of violence and discrimination; the intersectionality of race, gender and class; marginalization; the oppression of poverty; health disparities and lack of access to health care; a lack of participation in decision-making; the realities of human trafficking; and globalization which brings competition pressures home to rural farms and inner-city neighborhoods from around the world. The hurricanes in the gulf and the tsunamis half a world away equally demonstrated the shared vulnerabilities of women in the global community. As Reformed Christians we understand that confession and recognition of our complicity is an important step toward working for God’s kindom come. The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns hopes to be a voice in the wilderness of gender inequality for the church and society. Committed to the radical nature of God’s justice, having the eyes of faith to see every person as a neighbor and called to respond in love, ACWC looks forward to the work ahead, confident in God’s accompaniment and eager to venture forward with fear and trembling and hope.

Rationale

These recommendations are in response to the following referral: 2002 Referral: Item 02-09, Recommendations 1 and 2. OGA and GAC, in Consultation with Permanent, Advocacy and Advisory Committees. Develop a Process for GA Permanent, Advocacy, and Advisory Committees; Present to the 215th GA (2003) (Minutes, 2002, Part I, pp. 27, 171).

The 214th General Assembly (2002) approved the following recommendations:

1. That the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly and the General Assembly Council, in consultation with General Assembly permanent, advocacy, and advisory committees, develop a process and propose language for the Standing Rules of the General Assembly that would create an independent review process for all General Assembly permanent, advocacy, and advisory committees.
2. That the proposed recommendations be presented to the 215th General Assembly (2003) for consideration and approval.
3. That the standards for the review of agencies that were established by the 213th General Assembly (2001) be carefully considered by COGA and GAC as they develop the review process for permanent, advocacy, and advisory committees of the General Assembly.

The basic principles of Presbyterian government are found in Chapter IV of the Form of Government of the Book of Order. One of those principles is that a higher governing body shall have the right to review those for whom it is responsible (G-4.0301f.). The nature of those reviews can be as simple as the reading of the minutes of a governing body. The review can also be general administrative review required of congregations or governing bodies (G-9.0407a and b). In the Minutes of the 209th General Assembly (1997), the definition of those requiring review by a congregation included any group or organization whose activity “affects theological instruction, spiritual development, mission programs, raises money, uses property, or purports in any way to represent the congregation to the public.”

The ministry of the permanent, advocacy, and advisory committees of the General Assembly is an important part of the mission of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). They encompass ministries from the Department of History to the General Assembly Committee on Representation. The review process will provide an opportunity to allow the General Assembly and an individual permanent or advisory committee to engage in a dialogue about its mission. The result will be continual confidence by the membership of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in the work of the committees. The review can be the opportunity to make recommendations for the improvements, suggestions for ministry developments, and commendations for achievements.

The 213th General Assembly (2001) approved an independent review process for the agencies of the General Assembly (see Minutes, 2001, Part I, p. 67 ff). That process encompasses the development of standards for the review. Those standards were based on standards used for the accreditation process of institutions of higher learning and in consultation with the agencies to be reviewed. The review process will begin in 2002 and will serve as a model for the review process for the permanent, advocacy, and advisory committees (Minutes, 2002, Part I, pp. 171-172).

ARTICLE 5. TRANSITIONAL COMPOSITION AND WORK OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY COUNCIL AND AGENCIES

5.1 During the period immediately following reunion, the General Assembly Council shall consist of the Moderator of the General Assembly, the Moderators of the two immediately preceding General Assemblies of each Church, and forty-eight members elected by the General Assembly as provided in 5.2 below. In addition to the voting members, the stated clerk of the General Assembly, and such staff persons as the General Assembly on the recommendation of the General Assembly Council may from time to time designate, shall be corresponding members, with the right to speak but not to vote.

5.2 The first General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) shall elect forty-eight members of the General Assembly Council. Twenty-four shall be nominated by the last General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, twenty-one from the membership of the General Assembly Mission Board and three from the Committee on Assembly Operations upon recommendation of those bodies. One half of those elected shall be ministers of the Word, one half laypersons. Care shall be taken to comply with the provisions of G-9.0104 and G-9.0105. The members so elected shall serve for five years without change except that vacancies occasioned by resignation or death may be filled through election by the General Assembly upon nomination of its Nominating Committee. At the end of the five years, the General Assembly Council shall assign its members to three classes of equal size, expiring at the end of one additional year, two additional years, and three additional years. Thereafter, members shall be elected in accordance with G-13.0202.

5.4 The General Assembly Council shall have the responsibilities enumerated in G-13.0201, and in addition shall provide the necessary coordination, management and consolidation of the functions, divisions, agencies, councils, commissions and institutions of the General Assemblies of the reuniting Churches. Upon adjournment of the first General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), the General Assembly Mission Council of The United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America will cease to exist. The General Assembly Mission Board of the Presbyterian Church in the United States (consisting of the members remaining after election of the General Assembly Council) and the Program Agency, the Support Agency, and the Vocation Agency of The United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America will continue to administer the programs, previously conducted by each of them, for five years unless earlier terminated by action of the General Assembly. The General Assembly Council shall develop and propose to subsequent General Assemblies a design for the work of the General Assembly which will effectively relate the functions, divisions, agencies, councils, commissions and institutions of the General Assemblies of the reuniting Churches not otherwise provided for in these Articles of Agreement, except an agency for pensions which is hereinafter provided for in Article 11. Agencies whose functions will be served by other bodies or in other ways in the reunited Church will not be continued.

5.5 The General Assembly Council shall carefully review the continuing mission directions and priorities approved by both General Assemblies prior to reuniting, and prepare means to harmonize the programmatic work of its agencies.

The General Assembly Council shall ensure the continuance of an organized approach in the areas of world mission, evangelism, education, church renewal, church extension and social-economic justice within the context of the unity of Christ's Church throughout the world.

The General Assembly Council shall take particular care to design agencies and to commit major resources, both human and financial, to put into action with other Churches and agencies, in this land and other nations, ministries that serve the purpose of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to confront men and women, structures and principalities, with the claims of Jesus Christ.

5.6 The General Assembly Council in its development of a design for the work of the General Assembly shall also ensure the continuance of the advocacy and monitoring functions of the existing Councils on Church and Race (both denominations), Committee on Women's Concerns (Presbyterian Church in the United States) and Council on Women and the Church (The United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America). Until such time as the design for work of the General Assembly is completed and these functions are ensured, the existing structures and functions of these bodies shall be maintained.

5.7 As the various boards, agencies, councils and offices of the General Assemblies of the reuniting Churches continue to function within the life of the reunited Church, or as new agencies are created at the time of reunion, and especially as consideration is given to the location or locations of General Assembly offices and agencies, care and sensitivity shall be shown employed personnel. The General Assembly Council shall ensure continuity of employment at comparable levels insofar as possible. As staff vacancies occur, they shall be filled in accordance with the church-wide plan for equal employment opportunity (G-13.0201b) and the principle of full participation (G-4.0403). The General Assembly Council shall provide for an equitable termination policy.

"Chapter 9, The Status of Women in Church and Society"

Women in Society

ACSWP Introduction

In 1967, the UPCUSA General Assembly's concern with the status of women in society took a big step as it directed that a study be prepared on "Women in Society and in the Church" (UPCUSA, 1967, p. 392). A subsequent study was approved by the 1969 UPCUSA Assembly (UPCUSA, 1969, p. 349). Then, in 1970, public policy recommendations began to come forward. In 1970, the UPCUSA Assembly endorsed the Equal Rights Amendment (UPCUSA, 1970, p. 437). The Assembly in 1971 voted to recommend ". . . that local congregations, being sensitive to the needs of working mothers, establish day care centers, working ecumenically where feasible . . ." (UPCUSA, 1971, p. 301).

The PCUS Assembly in 1972 declared: ". . . God calls upon the church to act in society to end discrimination on the basis of sex and to challenge anything which interferes with women's full development and wholeness . . ." (PCUS, 1972, p. 178). That same Assembly threw its support behind the passage of the Equal Rights Amendment. Later PCUS Assemblies reaffirmed their support for the amendment (PCUS, 1974, p. 161; 1975, p. 121; 1977, p. 347; 1979, p. 190; 1981, p. 159). Meanwhile, the 1972 UPCUSA Assembly urged the support of all women in the time of pregnancy and motherhood (UPCUSA, 1972, p. 266). The UPCUSA General Assembly reaffirmed its support for the E.R.A. frequently (UPCUSA, 1974, p. 104; 1975, p. 47; 1977, p. 122; 1978, p. 360; 1979, p. 82).

The 1975 UPCUSA Assembly decried sexism in the military (UPCUSA, 1975, p. 478). In 1976 the PCUS Assembly expressed support for the continuing goals of the International Women's Decade -- equality, full integration of women into international development efforts, and recognition of women's contributions to peace among nations. The 1979 UPCUSA Assembly passed two resolutions which are excerpted below. One was on sexual and domestic violence and the other concerned sexual harassment.

The early 1980's experienced an increase in advocacy for women's issues as the 1981 PCUS General Assembly passed a reaffirmation of equal rights for women in church and society (PCUS, 1981, p. 159); the 1982 UPCUSA Assembly considered the special problems faced by women immigrants and the adverse effects of federal budget cutting on women (UPCUSA, 1982, p. 430); the UPCUSA Assembly also acted to oppose the "Family Protection Act" and its more than 30 provisions which would have eliminated federally funded legal aid for divorce and custody cases, denied funds for textbooks which portrayed women in roles other than the traditional family one, jeopardized the health, reproductive, and privacy rights of women by eliminating funding of contraceptive and abortion services, and limited support of legal services in areas of discrimination (UPCUSA, 1982, p. 110).

The 1983 General Assembly, the first meeting of the new PC(USA), was particularly active as a supporter of women's rights. The General Assembly affirmed ". . . the urgency of the issue of the lack of economic justice for women and . . . recognize[d] and affirm[ed] the women's constituency groups [the Council on Women and the Church, the Third World Women's Coordinating Committee, the National Executive Committee of United Presbyterian Women, and Women Employed by the Church] as they give priority attention to this issue . . ." (PC(USA), 1983, p.87, 475). It recognized the problems of female sexual slavery and violence, affirming the ". . . Council on Women and Church in its plan to study these issues . . ." (PC(USA), 1983, p. 87, 475) The General Assembly voted to ". . . support vigorously, through program and advocacy, equal legal rights for women and economic justice for women . . ." (PC(USA), 1983, p. 475). The General Assembly also adopted a statement on respect and non-violence, particularly with regard to sexual exploitation (see citation below).

A key concern for the General Assemblies throughout the 1980's was the phenomena known as the "feminization of poverty." On the basis of evidence that women not only were subject to employment discrimination, but also were the victims of structural economic problems, the General Assemblies endorsed a range of specific economic proposals designed to benefit women. The 1983 General Assembly adopted a "Resolution in Support of the Economic Equity Act" which is cited below. In 1984, the General Assembly adopted a "Resolution on the Feminization of Poverty," which noted the increased numbers of families led by single women, and that many of these women were either already or perilously close to poverty, and urged adoption of the Economic Equity Act of 1984 and the Earnings Sharings Proposals for the Social Security Program. Both of these programs were intended to improve the pensions received by women, particularly widows, homemakers, and divorced women (PC(USA), 1984, p. 326-328).

The same General Assembly (1984) also endorsed the concept of equal pay for jobs of comparable worth (see below), and called upon Congress and the Administration to authorize the entitlement of the WIC program (a program providing an adequate diet for women and children at nutritional risk), so that all who needed such services could receive them (PC(USA), 1984, pp. 508, 742). The 1984 Assembly also called upon Congress to once again initiate the passage of the Equal Rights Amendment in its "Resolution on the Equal Rights Amendment to the United States Constitution" (PC(USA), 1984, p. 329). The 1984 General Assembly also took note of the pending conclusion of the United Nations Decade for Women in 1985, commending it ". . . for its ongoing efforts to address the problems affecting women the world over," and urging the ". . . United States Department of State to send a delegation to the 1985 United Nations Conference on the International Women's Decade that reflects the ethnic, cultural, educational, and economic diversity of women in our country . . ." (PC(USA), 1984, p. 330-331).

In 1985, the General Assembly adopted a major statement on women which included concerns about the gender related aspects of poverty, excerpted below. It also adopted a statement on "Aid for Families with Dependent Children," which reviews much of the information cited in previous papers on the undue burden of poverty on women and children, and adopted recommendations urging action to buttress AFDC benefits and those who desperately need them (PC(USA), 1985, p. 574-576). The Assembly of 1986 addressed other facets of women's economic reality as it called attention to the critical lack of day care services and urged congregations to become care providers, and reaffirmed its opposition to sex-based wage discrimination (PC(USA), 1986, pp. 573, 639).

The Assembly of 1986 also returned to the issue of sexual exploitation of women and addressed prostitution, sex tourism, and practices related to military bases in Third World countries (PC(USA), 1986, p. 645). In 1987, the General Assembly urged the ratification of the United Nations Convention against Sexism (PC(USA), 1987, p. 583).

The 1988 General Assembly adopted two major papers affecting women for study. The first, "All the Livelong Day: Women and Work," reviewed the issues facing women in the workplace, and urged further development of policy (PC(USA), 1988, p. 624). It also reaffirmed ". . . the urgency and critical importance of issues related to women, work, and economic justice. . ." (PC(USA), 1988, p. 643). The General Assembly also adopted a study paper on "Pornography: Far From the Song of Songs," cited in Chapter Ten.

In 1991, the church passed a "Study Paper on Family Violence," urging ". . . the churches to study the paper on domestic violence and establish programs to respond to domestic abuse in their communities," and authorizing ". . . the Stated Clerk to print the [paper] and distribute it to each church" (PC(USA), 1991, pp. 796-801). The Assembly also adopted a Policy and Procedures on Sexual Misconduct. The policy is binding only on the General Assembly and its entities, but is ". . . guidance in behavior that is appropriate and to suggest procedures or accountability when allegations of misconduct are made . . ." (PC(USA), 1991, pp. 78-92). The 205th General Assembly (1993) adopted the Sexual Misconduct Policy and Procedures, saying that ". . . the policy and its procedures apply to all General Assembly entities, and for moral and legal reasons, [urging] all governing bodies and institutions to use this model as a guide in the development of their own sexual misconduct policy and procedures. . ." (PC(USA), 1993, p. 570). This policy replaces that adopted in 1991 and supercedes it.

In recognition of factors that indicate that the teachings of some organizations and churches have unintentionally been a factor in fostering a climate of acceptance for the subjugation and oppression of women, culminating in acts of violence against women, the 211th General Assembly (1999) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) adopted a resolution that renewed its commitment to stand in solidarity with women. The 1999 Assembly also approved a new policy statement, "Building Community Among Strangers," which was submitted by the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy. A section of the policy statement included gender-based injustices, which appears below. For the full text of the policy statement on "Building Community Among Strangers," see Minutes, PC(USA), 1999, pp. 401–434. Finally, the 211th General Assembly (1999) adopted a resolution regarding prostitution, which appears below.

On the Church and the condition of prostituted women, the 214th General Assembly (2002) received and approved

...the report Sisters of Mercy, Daughters of Grace; Presbyterians and Prostituted Women, a report without recommendations was prepared in response to the 1999 Referral (27.005. Recommendation 4), which directed the Advocacy Committee for Women's concerns, in consultation with the General Assembly Council, to Appoint a Five-Member Work Group of Women and Men from the Church at Large to Work with Appropriate Staff Persons from Women's Ministries, Men's Ministries, and Churchwide Personnel Services to study the status of How the PC(USA) Is Addressing the Issues of Sexual Exploitation, Sexual Addiction, Prostitution, and their Root causes and Report to the 213th

General Assembly (2001) (Minutes, 1999, Part I, pp. 78, 473). The report was to include examples of current models of ministry, as well as a proposal for how the individual churches and committees on ministry can respond faithfully.

The 214th General Assembly (2002) approved this final response to referral from the Advocacy for Women's Concerns with comments.

Comment #1: "That the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns consider adding the additional resources provided by the National Coalition for the Protection of Children and Families and One by One, Inc."

Comment #2: "That the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns consider removing the resources identified with Miriam Therese Winter and James B. Nelson." (Minutes, 1999, Part I, p. 75)

1972 Statement – UPCUSA, p. 267

[The General Assembly] urges the church to demonstrate its concern for women with small children by encouraging (1) the support of prenatal care for all pregnant women, (2) The principle that all children are legitimate at birth, (3) the establishment of support groups for single women who elect to keep their children, and (4) the formation of high quality child-development centers.

1974 Statement – UPCUSA, p. 104

... the Assembly Committee on Women in Church and Society recommends that the 186th General Assembly (1974) reaffirm the action of the 182nd General Assembly (1970) in endorsing the Equal Rights Amendment, encourage the judicatories within its bounds to communicate with their state legislators urging an affirmative action on the proposed Constitutional Amendment where not yet ratified, and additionally direct the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly to communicate this action to the legislatures of every state. . .

1975 Statement – UPCUSA, p. 478

[The General Assembly] expresses to the Department of Defense our conviction that sexism and rigid sex-stereotyping, especially during basic training when the recruit is most vulnerable and especially that which degrades women and which equates maleness with violence and conquest, is contrary to the development of a whole, mature person and should be vigorously eliminated.

1979 Statement – UPCUSA, 1979, pp. 80-81

Whereas recorded crimes of sexual and domestic violence are rapidly increasing in the United States;

Whereas our Christian Biblical witness requires compassionate and active response to the needs of victims;

Whereas the dynamics involved in our understanding of sexual and domestic violence are complex and rooted in societal patterns, and whereas our traditional attitudes towards sexuality, pain, failure, and denial block . . . the realistic appraisal and confrontation of the magnitude of the problem;

Whereas the church needs to strengthen its response to the issues of sexual and domestic violence;

Whereas clergy are frequently called upon and less frequently trained to counsel and otherwise support victims and their families and friends:

Therefore the 191st General Assembly (1979) [votes to:]

1. Receive the report of the Council on Women and the Church entitled "Rape and Violence Against Women" and to commend it to the church for study;
2. Urge the church -- its judicatories and its members -- to examine their attitudes toward sexual and domestic violence and the victims of such assault with the aim of removing existing blocks to direct confrontation of the issue;
3. Urge ministerial relations committees or another appropriate continuing committee to accept their responsibility for ensuring the ability of clergy to counsel in all aspects of sexual and domestic violence.

1979 Statement – UPCUSA, p. 86

Whereas women and men are beginning to come to an awareness that sexual harassment is a major problem in this society; and

Whereas sexual harassment is a violation of the personhood and integrity of its victims; and

Whereas those victims are primarily, although not exclusively, female; and

Whereas there are increasing numbers of women being employed by the church;

Therefore, the 191st General Assembly (1979) requests that the Council on Women and the Church study the problems of sexual harassment, explore ways of involving the church in ministering to victims of sexual harassment, and report its work and recommendations to the 192nd General Assembly.

1982 Statement – UPCUSA, p. 430

Economic Justice for Women

Whereas justice issues for women and minorities have been General Assembly concerns for the past decade; and

Whereas increasing numbers of women are sole heads for families with reduced support services for child care, housing, education, and employment; and

Whereas many elderly people, particularly women, are living on fixed incomes that are inadequate for today's inflationary cost of food, housing, heating, and health care; and

Whereas the stress caused by the current economic situation has contributed to the increase in manifestations of deep-rooted racism in our society; and

Whereas the inaction of the current administration in implementing policies of racial and social justice seems to give official sanction to racist attitudes; and

Whereas the budget priorities of the current administration have resulted in social program cuts that disproportionately affect the elderly, women, and children, especially those of racial backgrounds; and

Whereas there is a movement on the part of the administration to shift responsibility for meeting human needs to church and other private organizations;

Therefore, the 194th General Assembly (1982) calls upon the United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America to: . . .

2. Direct the Stated Clerk to communicate to the President of the United States and the Congress that this 194th General Assembly (1982) calls for a reordering of priorities so that the basic human needs of all our people are adequately met.

1982 Statement – UPCUSA, pp. 430-431

Therefore, be it resolved that the 194th General Assembly (1982) calls upon The United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America to address the unique needs of women immigrants, refugees, and migrants by facilitating women's potential for self-help.

Recognition of World's Dislocated Persons

The 194th General Assembly (1982) recommends:

1. That the judicatories of The United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America commit themselves to developing and publicizing information on women immigrants, refugees, and migrants -- their origin, present location, employment, and resources.
2. That information about the plight of women refugees, immigrants, and migrants be included in denominational statements and education materials.
3. That federal, state, and local legislation, which makes services flexible to fit the needs of women, especially child care, family planning, and English lessons, be developed.
4. That when engaging in global mission, the United Presbyterian Church study the effect on women who are left behind by male migration.

1983 Statement – PC(USA), p. 624

Recommendation 4

That the 1983 General Assembly adopt the following statement and directives:

- A. The 1983 General Assembly affirms the principle of respect and non-violence among all persons and deplores all sexual exploitation of women in media . . .
- B. . . [and] requests the Mission Board and the Program Agency to:
 1. Research the issue of sexual exploitation in video games;
 2. Investigate possible steps which would lead to the elimination of sexual exploitation in video games . . .

1983 Statement – PC(USA), pp. 359-360

RESOLUTION IN SUPPORT OF THE ECONOMIC EQUITY ACT

1. Whereas American women, 53 percent of the population, are still not guaranteed equal treatment in many areas subject to law; and
2. Whereas in the last fifty years the number of families headed by women has tripled until one in three families is headed by a woman; and
3. Whereas one out of three of these families, which depend on women for their sole support, live below the poverty line; and
4. Whereas older women, the fastest-growing poverty group in America, suffer under inequitable social security and pension laws; and
5. Whereas despite their tremendous contribution to home and family, homemakers have no legal or economic status and little or no protection upon retirement or disability . . .

Therefore, the 195th General Assembly (1983) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), [endorses] the goal of equity in economic life and particularly expression support for economic justice for women:

1. Endorses the purpose and provisions of the Economic Equity Act of 1983 . . .
2. Urges Presbyterians to support the adoption of the Economic Equity Act of 1983 . . .

1984 Statement – PC(USA), pp. 327-328

RESOLUTION ON THE FEMINIZATION OF POVERTY

. . . Whereas children, who are victims alongside women of the unequal treatment afforded to women in our society, comprise the poorest segment in America, receiving inadequate health care, child care, and education; and

Whereas our Christian commitment calls us to be advocates for the poor and oppressed and to work for justice for all; and . . .

Therefore, the 196th General Assembly (1984) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.):

1. Reaffirms the urgency of issues related to women and economic justice . . .
2. Supports the concept of the Earnings Sharing Proposals in the House and Senate and the goals of economic equity for homemakers, divorced women, and widows.
3. Reaffirms endorsement for the Economic Equity Act . . .
4. Expresses support for additional direct services for children in the areas of health care, child care, and education. . .

*1984 Statement – PC(USA), p. 508*A. Resolution on Equal Pay for Work of Comparable Worth

Whereas the Reformed tradition views God as a creator who desires justice and equity for all people; and

Whereas the 195th General Assembly (1983) decried the assumption that men need more money than women on which to live and reaffirmed its support of economic justice for women; and

Whereas equal pay for equal jobs was an important first step toward justice, the fact remains that the average woman's salary is about 60 percent of the average man's salary; . . .

. . . the 196th General Assembly (1984):

1. Endorse[s] the concept of equal pay for jobs of comparable worth as a particularly effective means of obtaining economic justice for women. . .

1985 Statement – PC(USA), pp. 571-572

[39.059] For the modest gains women have made within the church, there have been significant losses for them in society. Cuts in Federal programs in the early 1980's have resulted in the increased feminization of poverty. Poverty has become overwhelmingly a woman's issue. Two out of three older Americans living below the poverty line are women. The National Advisory Council on Economic Opportunity in Washington, D.C. predicts that if this rate continues, by the year 2000 virtually all the people living in poverty will be women or families headed by women. The issue of economic justice for women is thus raised to the forefront of Christian concerns for the decade to come.

[39.060] Increased violence against women is also symbolic of the seismic disturbances in American society. In growing numbers, women are victims of sexual harassment in the workplace and abuse in their own homes as well as in danger in the streets. The connection between prostitution and tourism is an issue affecting impoverished women in Asian and Caribbean nations feeling the impact of multinational corporations. A church committed to peacemaking cannot avoid its responsibility to address the issue of domestic and international violence against women.

[39.061] Other symptoms of cultural upheaval affecting women include: questions of medical ethics and bioethics; jeopardy to women's legal abortion and contraceptive rights; stress and addiction (with cancer and cardiac rates rising dramatically among females in the U.S.); issues touching single-parent families and households headed by working mothers; concerns affecting gay and lesbian persons, and socioeconomic concerns of single women.

[39.062] In all these arenas, it is urgent that questions of faith constantly be posed relating to the concrete social issue of our time -- questions that call the church to risk and struggle with the meaning of Christian faith in the world.

[39.065] Claiming the heritage of women of faith, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is called to renewed faithfulness to Jesus Christ, and to action and witness to:

Support the work of women's advocacy groups in presbyteries and synods and to encourage the establishment of groups where none exist;

Encourage and empower the work of committees on representation across the church;

Become "in fact as well as in faith a community of women and men of all ages, races, and conditions. . . providing inclusiveness as a visible sign of the new humanity;"

Embrace the ever-evolving and rich dimensions of language by which the Word is communicated;

Model a new openness to diversity of lifestyles;

Envision and implement methods of decision-making and administration that are non-hierarchical;

Consider more thoroughly the ministry of the whole people of God;

Continue to pursue peacemaking and economic justice for all persons;

Work for justice in employment within and outside the institutional church;

Call upon the gifts and skills of racial/ethnic women;

Be in active dialogue with our international partners, for mutual support and resourcing;

Remember that "the church is called to undertake this mission even at the risk of losing its life"

1986 Statement – PC(USA), pp. 653-654

The 198th General Assembly (1986):

[35.175] (1) Declares that sexual exploitation of women in any form is not to be condoned, disregarded, or treated lightly.

[35.177] (3) Urges all ministers and local congregations to identify and study the problems of sexual exploitation that exist in their own communities, as well as in other countries, which contribute to sexual exploitation through prostitution, tourism, military presence, and the activities of transnational corporations, and seek to effect change through their own circles of influence.

[35.179] (5) . . . Urges all members of the denomination who travel abroad in any capacity to follow the example of Jesus by affirming the holiness of every person and place, to follow the "Code of Ethics for Tourists," and to engage the services of only those travel agents who promote responsible tourism and the needs of people in the host country.

[35.184] (10) Urges all Presbyterians to seek ways to bring about changes within the military establishment which will eliminate practices that economically and sexually exploit women and children near military bases and installations.

[35.185] (11) Affirms and continues the church's commitment to study and provide funds for economic justice and self-development projects for women inasmuch as the roots of exploitation are often found in economic injustice.

1986 Statement – PC(USA), p. 573

The 198th General Assembly (1986):

[31.497] Urges congregations to respond to the critical lack of day-care services by opening their doors to weekday programs and working for quality child day care in their communities.

(31.498) Urges congregations to take responsibility for the quality of child day-care programs within their facilities, whether or not the programs are independently incorporated, and to advocate compensation and benefits for child day-care providers commensurate with their professional status.

1991 Statement – PC(USA), pp. 76-92

Policy and Procedures on Sexual Misconduct

. . . In writing this policy we are concerned with offering guidelines that will assure appropriate intervention to alleged incidence of misconduct, care for all involved, and provide information to help prevent future instances of abuse . . .

. . . The necessity for a denominational policy on sexual misconduct by those in positions of religious leadership is painfully apparent. The incidence of reported cases is sobering. Some presbyteries have multiple cases pending. Statistical evidence suggests between 10 and 23 percent of clergy nationwide have engaged in sexualized behavior of sexual contact with parishioners, clients, employees, etc. within a professional relationship. The toll of suffering such behavior exacts is staggering. The legal consequences for the denomination are enormous. We are facing a crisis terrible in its proportions and implications . . .

The purpose of a policy on sexual misconduct is not to police religious leaders but to offer guidance in behavior that is appropriate and to suggest procedures or accountability when allegations of misconduct are made as well as to assure appropriate care for all involved.

In this policy we have understood sexual misconduct to be sexualized contact in ministerial, professional, or employment relationships. It may range from covert and subtle harassment to quite overt use of force against children, adolescents, or other adults . . .

II. Preface

A. Policy Statement

It is the policy of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) that all church members, church officers, non-member employees, and volunteers of governing bodies and entities of the Church are to maintain the integrity of the ministerial, employment, and professional relationship at all times. Sexual misconduct is not only a violation of the principles set forth in Scripture, but also, of the ministerial employment and professional relationship and is never permissible.

B. Purposes

The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) adopts this policy on sexual misconduct for the use of all governing bodies and entities of the Church. Its purpose is as follows:

1. To set and enforce standards of ethical behavior consistent with Scripture and secular law.
2. To provide procedures for inquiry and effective response to allegations of the breach of duty of the emotional, spiritual and physical care . . .
4. To recommend personnel policies for the administration of employer/employee relationships within the governing bodies and entities.
5. To serve as a guide for the prevention of sexual misconduct.

IV. Standards of Conduct

A. Principles of Conduct

The basic principles guiding this policy are as follows:

1. Sexual misconduct is a violation of the role of pastors, employees, volunteers, counselors, supervisors, teachers, and advisors of any kind who are called upon to exercise integrity, sensitivity, and caring in a trust relationship. . . .
2. Sexual misconduct is a misuse of authority and power which breaches Christian ethical principles by misusing a trust relation to gain advantage over another for personal pleasure in an abusive, exploitive, and unjust manner. . . .
3. Sexual misconduct takes advantage of the vulnerability of children and persons who are less powerful to act for their own welfare. It is antithetical to the gospel call to work as God's servant in the struggle to bring wholeness to a broken world. It violates the mandate to protect the vulnerable from harm.

*1993 Statement – PC(USA), pp. 572-574, 582III. Meeting the Needs of All Involved

In cases of sexual misconduct there are needs that have to be met for the good of all persons, groups, and entities. To ensure that the governing body is ready to meet the variety of needs present, an independent response coordination team shall be named and its membership clearly publicized. This team will not investigate the allegation or in any way function as a special disciplinary committee, but should confine itself to coordinating a process that will meet the specific needs of the situation. In cases of sexual misconduct, these are the needs of accuser/victims and their families (if any), the accused and family (if any), employing entities, congregations, and governing bodies:

A. The Needs of the Accuser/Victim

The governing body, employing entity, and response management team shall assure that adequate treatment and care are available for alleged victims of sexual misconduct and their families. . . Above all the church should not act in a self-protective manner by ignoring the accuser/victim and their families.

The following are some of the needs of the accuser/victim:

- To be heard and taken seriously. . . .
- To receive pastoral and therapeutic support. . . .
- To be informed about church process and progress
- To receive legal advice. The response coordination team should suggest that the accuser/victim might benefit from independent legal advice. . . .
- To receive restitution. . . .
- To be assured that justice will be pursued. . . .

B. The Needs of the Accused

The governing body or entity shall offer treatment and care for the accused as well as alleged victims and families. If the accused is a minister, this is the responsibility of the committee on ministry (Book of Order, G- 11.0501).

When a person is acquitted of charges, it is important for the governing body or entity to see that the acquittal is disseminated as widely as possible within their power, unless doing so would further injure the person falsely [accused].

A church member or officer accused of sexual misconduct (the accused) usually has need of the following under this policy and its procedures document:

1. Information About the Charges
2. Legal Advice and Assistance
3. Personal Care
4. Assistance in Relating to Session and Congregation
5. Economic Security and Care for Family of Accused

V. Educating and Training

Since the issue of sexual misconduct has become an evermore present reality, there is an emerging need to educate and train a wide variety of persons. Persons needing this specific education include: ministers; volunteers; officers; nonprofessionals and professional staff; ministerial candidates; professions who will be working with this issue within the denomination; members of the congregation; and governing body staff including supervisors, employees, and stated clerks; and particularly response coordination team members (RCT).

Theological institutions should include material in their existing curriculum on sexual ethics including the appropriate use of ministerial power, the General Assembly policy and its procedures on sexual misconduct, and other resources. It is further urged that the appropriate presbytery committee(s) include training for inquirers, candidates, newly ordained pastors, and new pastors to their presbyteries regarding sexual misconduct, especially including education on their specific policy and procedures.

Employing entities need to make sure all employees are well acquainted with, understand, and abide by their policy and procedures. Employing entities should offer additional training and resources, such as: a workshop during staff meeting; lunchtime discussion group; articles and books made available; etc.

ACSWP Commentary

The 207th General Assembly (1995) approved the recommendations of the United Nations sponsored conference called "The World Summit for Social Development (WSSD)." This conference brought together member states to address interrelated global problems: poverty, unemployment and the marginalization of peoples. Included in the various Human Rights resolutions of the conference were recommendations regarding women's rights. The conference called on member states to:

"strengthen policies and programmes that improve, ensure and broaden the participation of women in all spheres of political, economic, social and cultural life, as equal partners, and improve their access to all resources needed for the full exercise of their fundamental rights".

ACSWP Commentary

The 210th General Assembly (1998) addressed the issue of Female Genital Mutilation (FGM) by approving adopting a resolution which declared total and absolute disapproval of the practice in the United States and throughout the world. In denouncing the practice of FGM, the Assembly urged the PCUSA to "work through its existing structures and partnerships toward the abolition of female mutilation in this and other countries," and directed the Stated Clerk "to communicate this resolution to appropriate United States and United Nations authorities." Further, the Assembly called on "state legislatures in the United States . . . to enact legislation which imposes penalties on health professionals who perform female genital mutilation," and called on "the United States government to ratify the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the Convention on the Elimination of all Forms of Discrimination against women, in order to provide a universal legal sanction regarding FGM." (PC(USA), 1998, p. 681)

1998 Statement - PC(USA), p. 93

[The 210th General Assembly (1998) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.):]

1. Denounces the practice of female genital mutilation (FGM) in the United States and throughout the world.
3. Calls on state legislatures in the United States that have not done so to enact legislation which imposes penalties on health professionals who perform female genital mutilation, as defined by the World Health Organization;

4. Calls on the United States government to

a. ratify the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the Convention on the Elimination of all Forms of Discrimination Against Women, in order to provide a universal legal sanction regarding FGM;

b. ensure adherence to U.S. law opposing international loans to countries where FGM is practiced and where governments have not carried out educational programs to prevent it; and fund health and development projects that seek to eradicate the practice of FGM by working in partnerships with grassroots educational efforts; and

c. to continue to recognize fear of FGM as legitimate grounds for granting asylum status to women, and to ensure appropriate training for immigration personnel and judges responsible for dealing with these issues.

ACSWP Commentary

The 1998 Assembly also approved a report on Sexual Exploitation and the Military. "While rape and the sexual exploitation of women by invading military personnel have long been a part of military history, little international attention or sustained outrage has been directed at the occurrence of such violence. In fact, the rape of women in war and the use of brothels by military personnel have been mistakenly construed as a necessary by-product of war. Some have even considered rape and prostitution as necessary to contain the sexual urges of men in combat situations." (PC(USA), 1998, pp. 516 - 517) The background to the report, which can be found in PC(USA), Minutes, 1998, pp. 516 - 520, included sections on rape in war, prostitution, and sexual harassment. The recommendations that were adopted include directing the Stated Clerk to communicate with the United Nations about this important issue, including expressing that rape is a human rights violation. Further the Stated Clerk was directed to correspond with the President of the United States regarding adult and child prostitution around U.S. bases, and to send copies of the report to the Armed Forces Chaplains Board, the joint staff chaplain, and the Army, Navy, and Air Force chiefs of the Chaplains Office.

1998 Statement – PC(USA), p. 516

1. Direct[s] the Office of the Stated Clerk to send a communication to the United Nations high commissioner for human rights, expressing the church's position that rape is a human-rights violation and that rape in time of war should be considered a crime of war.
2. Direct[s] the Office of the Stated Clerk to send a communication to the U.S. ambassador on war crimes, the chief prosecutors and presidents of international criminal tribunals for the former Yugoslavia and Rwanda, and the registrar for the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda, expressing the church's position that rape in time of war is a war crime and form of torture, and, therefore, should never be used as a tactic of war or disregarded and treated lightly when it occurs.
3. Direct[s] the Office of the Stated Clerk to send a letter to the president of the United States and to the secretary of defense expressing the church's concern that there have been cases of U.S. military involvement in adult and child prostitution around U.S. bases, and the practice of taking military personnel to rest and recreation (R&R) locations that offer prostitution as a major form of entertainment to military personnel.
4. Directs the Office of the Stated Clerk to send a communication to the office of the deputy assistant secretary of defense in the Department of Defense (DOD) to commend the DOD for actions taken to address the problems of commercial sexual exploitation of children, and to call for the DOD to

a. take strong measures to end the sexual exploitation of both women and girls by implementing policies and training programs that will prevent rape in war and prevent military personnel from being involved in prostitution; and

I. INTRODUCTION

A. Purpose

The Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC) is called by General Assembly to be a voice of justice and advocacy for women in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and around the world; in order to give full expression to the rich diversity within its membership (Book of Order, G-4.0403). To this end, we advocate for full inclusiveness and equity in all areas of life and work in the church and society. "Does not wisdom call, and does not understanding raise her voice?" Proverbs 8:1.

ACWC does the following:

- Through advocacy maintains a strong prophetic witness to the church and for the church on existing and emerging issues of women's concerns.
- Prepares policy statements, resolutions, recommendations, reports, and Advice and Counsel (A&C) Memoranda on women's concerns to the General Assembly (GA) at the request of the GA, the General Assembly Council (GAC), or on its own initiative.
- Advises GAC on matters of women's concerns including statements concerning pressing issues that the Council may wish to consider between meetings of GA.
- Provides advice and counsel to GA and its representative committees on overtures, commissioners' resolutions, reports and actions before GA that impact issues of women's concerns.
- Assist the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy-(ACSWP) with policy compilation and other denominational materials to ensure an up-to-date and accurate reflection of GA policy on women's concerns.
- Provides the Stated Clerk, the GA Moderator and the GAC Executive Director with information as they fulfill their responsibilities to communicate and interpret GA policies on women's concerns.
- Monitors the implementation of policies and programs relative to women's concerns.

Evangelism and Witness (goal)

We are called to invite all people to faith, repentance, and the abundant life of God in Jesus Christ, to encourage congregations in joyfully sharing the Gospel, and through the power of the Holy Spirit to grow in membership and discipleship.

By the 217th General Assembly (2006) the General Assembly Council will seek to achieve these objectives:

1. Provide resources, models and networks for church development and congregational transformation.
2. Encourage and support new church development that emphasizes racial-ethnic and new immigrant groups, through program support and special efforts like the Mission Initiative: Joining Hearts and Hands Campaign.
3. Engage in witness and evangelism internationally where there is a need to share the gospel for the first time, where witness to the gospel is endangered, and where the church is dealing with dynamic growth.
4. Make available a Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) awareness campaign focused on youth and young adults and racial-ethnic persons.
5. Support and facilitate networks in small church and rural ministries.
6. Raise awareness of camps and conference centers as contexts for evangelism.

Justice and Compassion (goal)

We are called to address wrongs in every aspect of life and the whole of creation, intentionally working with and on behalf of poor, oppressed, and disadvantaged people as did Jesus Christ, even at risk to our corporate and personal lives.

By the 217th General Assembly (2006) the General Assembly Council will seek to achieve these objectives:

1. Respond to poverty, disasters and the impact of economic globalization through compassionate ministries, community health initiatives and support for the self-help efforts of people who are poor.
2. Advocate for social, environmental and economic justice in accordance with GA policy and direction and assist other governing bodies in advocacy efforts.
3. Advocate for peace and nonviolence in accord with GA policy and direction, and aid other governing bodies in peacemaking efforts.

Spirituality and Discipleship (goal)

We are called to deeper discipleship through scripture, worship, prayer, study, stewardship and service, and to rely on the Holy Spirit to mold our lives more and more into the likeness of Jesus Christ.

By the 217th General Assembly (2006) the General Assembly Council will seek to achieve these objectives:

1. Create and provide to the church educational resources for people of all ages that under gird our work together.
2. Promote experiences of the worldwide church that opens us to God's transforming love for more faithful lives of witness and mission.
3. Recognize, celebrate and practice different styles of Christian spirituality within the Reformed tradition.
4. Provide stewardship resources, models and training to encourage a spirit of generosity.

Leadership and Vocation (goal)

We are called to lead by Jesus Christ's example, to identify spiritual gifts, and to equip and support people for faithful and effective servant leadership in all parts of the body of Christ.

By the 217th General Assembly (2006) the General Assembly Council will seek to achieve these objectives:

1. Provide and promote resources for leadership development of Ministers of Word and Sacrament, church officers, commissioned lay pastors, and church educators.
2. Develop, nurture and empower leaders for international mission in partners churches, especially those that are emerging or that are experiencing dynamic growth.
3. Provide support for congregations and governing bodies in the identification and placement of pastoral leadership and other church staff.
4. Encourage Christian vocation, especially among young people.
5. Develop and maintain an Internet clearinghouse for best practices and shared ministries.
6. Collaborate with other General Assembly entities in providing assistance to congregations and governing bodies finding it difficult to call (obtain) pastoral leadership.
7. Engage with seminaries in a two-year period of discernment and discussion about strengthening the relationship between the GAC and the PC(USA) seminaries.

Mission Work Plan (2007-2008)

During the 2007-2008-budget cycle, the General Assembly Council will offer services, resources, programs, advocacy or gatherings that will:

Evangelism and Witness

EVANGELISM

Equip Presbyterians, governing bodies and others to witness locally and globally to the Gospel of Jesus Christ with an emphasis on those with no active religious affiliation.

RATIONALE: Go therefore and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit, and teaching them to obey everything that I have commanded you. And remember, I am with you always, to the end of the age. (Matthew 28:19-20)

MULTI-CULTURAL

Support presbyteries' efforts to develop congregations and fellowships that will enable them to reflect the multicultural makeup of our society.

RATIONALE: After this I looked and there was a great multitude that no one could count from every nation, from all tribes and peoples and languages, standing before the throne and before the Lamb, robed in white, with palm branches in their hands. (Revelation 7:9.)

Justice and Compassion

POVERTY

Enable partnerships with governing bodies and others to actively address the causes and effects of poverty locally, nationally and globally.

RATIONALE: Give liberally and be ungrudging when you do so, for on this account the Lord your God will bless you in all your work and in all that you undertake. Since there will never cease to be some in need on the earth, I therefore command you, "open your hand to the poor and needy neighbor in your land." (Deuteronomy 15:10-11.)

PEACE

Encourage and support presbyteries and congregations to be active in seeking non-violent solutions to conflict in their own communities and in the communities of the world.

RATIONALE: Blessed are the peacemakers, for they will be called children of God. (Matthew 5:9.)

Spirituality and Discipleship

REFORMED IDENTITY

Encourage and support presbyteries and congregations to further develop their members' ability to appreciate and understand their Reformed identity and apply it in today's world.

RATIONALE: In (its) confessional statements the church declares to its members and to the world who and what it is, what it believes, and what it resolves to do... Central to the Reformed tradition is the affirmation of the majesty, holiness and providence of God who creates, sustains, rules and redeems the world in the freedom of sovereign righteousness and love. ... Related to this central affirmation of God's sovereignty are ... the election of the people of God for service as well as for salvation (and) covenant life marked by a disciplined concern for order in the church according to the Word of God. (Book of Order, G-2.0100, 2.0500.)

FAMILIES

Enable presbyteries and congregations to ground families, in all their manifestations, in Christian discipleship that helps them confront and resist the idolatries of society today.

RATIONALE: The sovereign love of God, the gracious lordship of Jesus Christ, and the empowering fellowship of the Holy Spirit ground our lives as Christians; yet we are also rooted in family structures that evidence the corrosive pressures around and within us, as well as the failed relationships among us, even as they remain sites of God's gracious presence and activity. Our family lives, like the other spheres of our existence, need transformation by the Holy Spirit; and our world needs the transformative agency of families that understand the breadth of their vocation as disciples of Jesus Christ. ("Transforming Families," adopted by the 216th General Assembly (2004).)

Leadership and Vocation

VOCATION

Equip presbyteries and congregations to help members discern that their vocation is a call from God to Christian witness in society and the church.

RATIONALE: The Lord bids each one of us in all life's actions to look to God's calling ... The Lord's calling in everything is the beginning and foundation of well-doing. And if there are any who will not direct themselves to it, they will never hold to the straight path. . . (Calvin, Institutes, 3.10.6)

SMALL CHURCHES

Facilitate the exchange and development of alternative models for pastoral and mission leadership in small churches.

RATIONALE: A small membership congregation is healthy when it is open to a variety of models of pastoral leadership and cares and is willing to make changes in ways that help it meet the needs of the people in worship, education, nurture, fellowship, evangelism and mission. (Partners in Small Church Strategy, report approved by the 201st General Assembly (1989))

Item 15-01

[The assembly approved Item 15-01. See p. 10.]

The Board of Pensions recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) approve the amendment of Section 8.4 of the Benefits Plan of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) (the “Plan”), as set forth in Appendix A hereto, effective January 1, 2007. (For Appendix A, see p. 1384.)

Item 15-02

[The assembly approved Item 15-02. See p. 10.]

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) direct the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation to

1. continue its churchwide gifts program, as well as utilize the Foundation’s subsidiary, New Covenant Trust Company, N.A., for the benefit of churches, church organizations, and individuals who wish to use the foregoing to make gifts as an expression of Christian faith and stewardship;
2. continue promoting appropriate investment in New Covenant Funds, a family of mutual funds organized with participation by the Foundation in July 1999, which are managed in a way that is consistent with the social-witness principles of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), through New Covenant Funds Distributors, Inc.; and
3. explore and initiate ways to enhance its expertise and capacity in support of planned and deferred giving (including wills emphasis) and to explore the services of New Covenant Trust Company, N.A. and New Covenant Funds, that will allow these programs and entities to be ever more effective contributors toward the fulfillment of the Great Commission for the Glory of God.

Rationale

Each year, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation trustees ask the General Assembly to endorse the Foundation’s work in support of mission and ministry throughout the church. This unbroken series of affirmations allows the Foundation to confidently pursue its ministry among congregations, presbyteries, synods, related organizations, and individual Presbyterians. General Assembly validation of our vital work on behalf of mission and ministry is essential to our effectiveness throughout the church.

In 2005, $72.3 million was made available through the Foundation for mission. Additionally, as a ministry of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), the Foundation’s efforts to nurture the accumulated resources of Presbyterians to further the mission of the church, call us to grow the resources that support mission giving for the future. New gifts and accounts amounting to almost $36 million, including $18.1 million in life income plans, and $17.5 million in current gifts were received over the course of the year.

These striking results are a testament to the power of giving witnessed by the Foundation as it lives its goal of bringing people and mission together. Because of the generosity of faithful Presbyterians, over the past five years the Foundation has made available more than $369.2 million for the work and mission of the church.

Item 15-03

[The assembly approved Item 15-03. See p. 10.]

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) confirm the following directors for New Covenant Trust Company, N.A. that have been elected for the year 2006, consistent with the Deliverance for New Covenant Trust Company, N.A., as approved by the 211th General Assembly (1999) and amended by the 212th and 214th General Assemblies (2000) and (2002), and subject to applicable law:

Lynwood L. Battle Jr. (retired, black, male, single, lay, over 50, Synod of the Covenant);

B. Cary Tolley III, (tax attorney, white, male, married, lay, over 50, Synod of the Northeast);

Bruce K. Dudley, (estate planning attorney, white, male, married, lay, over 50, Synod of Living Waters);

Charles H. Self III, (investment manager, black, male, married, lay, under 50, Synod of Lincoln Trails).

Susan R. Ingram (manager, treasury, white, female, married, lay, under 50, Synod of the Mid-Atlantic)

On Pension and Medical Insurance Needs of Small Churches—From the Presbytery of Long Island.

The Presbytery of Long Island overtures the 217th General Assembly (2006) to direct the Board of Pensions to study the pension and medical insurance needs of particular churches served by part-time pastors such as tentmakers, and to consider new guidelines to allow flexibility for participation of churches served by these pastors.

Rationale

One-third of all Presbyterian congregations have fewer than 100 members. Most of these small churches have limited financial means and are not able to have full-time pastoral leadership.

Clergy leadership is provided in numerous ways, including that of yoked parishes, stated supplies provided by clergy serving other institutions (universities, seminaries, prisons, hospitals, etc.), retired pastors, lay pastors, and tentmakers.

Some pastors receive their income from both church and non-church employment. The wide variety of salary and benefits packages offered in the private/public sector calls for a great deal of flexibility from both employers.

The Board of Pensions will study the issues that are identified in the overture and will report to the 218th General Assembly (2008).

Response Regarding Minutes of the New Covenant Trust Company

2003 Referral: 13-NB(01). Direct OGA to Rep. to 216th GA Whether Minutes of New Covenant Trust Company & New Covenant Annuity should be Submitted to the GA for Review; OGA Also Report on Provisions that Must be Redacted Because of Federal Law (Minutes, 2003, Part I, p. 50).

Response: The Office of the General Assembly consulted with the president and general counsel of the New Covenant Trust Company in response to this referral. Out of that consultation comes the following understanding:

That New Covenant Trust Company report “all its proceedings and actions” to the Foundation Board and that the Foundation Board include a notation, at least annually, that it has received and reviewed such reportings by New Covenant Trust Company on behalf of the assembly.

General Assembly Committee on Review of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Board of Pensions

I. Introduction

The General Assembly Committee on Review presents to the 217th General Assembly (2006) this written review of the Board of Pensions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). In the balance of the report the initials BOP will be used to refer to the Board of Pensions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). This review process resulted from the action of the 213th General Assembly (2001) that put in place a regular review of agencies related to the General Assembly. The purpose of the review process is “to evaluate the relationship of their individual [agency] ministry with the mission of the whole Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)” (Minutes, 2001, Part I, p. 67, addition of Standing Rule E.10., Agency Review [new Standing Rule M.4.a.]). The instructions to the General Assembly Committee on Review (Review Committee) were that the committee must conduct the process according to predetermined standards and present a written report to the next General Assembly (Manual of the General Assembly, pp. 83–84).

Fundamental to the review process is that each agency of the General Assembly shall participate in a self-study review process with a review committee elected by the General Assembly. The General Assembly Committee on Review will then interact with the agency in a study and evaluation process to determine how the agency is related to and contributing to the mission of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). The review process is not an attempt to look for problems, but to evaluate current practices and offer affirmations and recommendations for improvement where appropriate.

In accordance with Standing Rule M.4.a., the following persons were elected by the 216th General Assembly (2004) to serve as the Review Committee: Elder Barbara Campbell Davis, moderator; the Reverend Nancy Becker; Gabriela Canepa; the Reverend Anna Case-Winters; Elder James Henderson; the Reverend John Hougen; Elder Charles W. Kim; Elder William A. Longbrake; the Reverend J. Oscar McCloud; the Reverend Deborah McKinley; and the Reverend Edward McLeod Jr.; and ecumenical representative William Cobb, Episcopal Church.

The Review Committee was composed of individuals with a wide variety of skills and experience related to the BOP and its work. These ranged from those within the church, such as pastors and executive presbyters to those whose work makes them familiar with medical and pension programs. Each member of the Review Committee approached the review process with energy, imagination, intelligence, and love. All of the members were united in a common faith and desire for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to advance the mission of Jesus Christ.

This report is the result of numerous meetings of the Review Committee, on-site interviews with BOP staff and members of the board of directors, an examination of the self-study conducted by the BOP as well as other written materials of the BOP, interviews with General Assembly Council Executive Director John Detterick and the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly, the Reverend Clifton Kirkpatrick, and the wonderful guidance of our resource people from the Office of the General Assembly: the Reverend Gradye Parsons and Kay Moore. We would like to express our deep appreciation to Gradye and Kay for orientating us to the task and providing us with timely help when we needed it. We also want to commend the BOP on a very well-written, instructive, and honest self-study that greatly benefited this review process and will serve the BOP well in its continuing work. We especially wish to thank President Rob Maggs and the entire staff of the BOP and the BOP's board of directors for their cooperation and help in the development of this report and for their ongoing effective service to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

This report was prepared at the end of 2005 and does not reflect any developments beyond that date. During the course of the review, several of the Review Committee's recommendations were addressed.

II. Church Relatedness

The mission statement of the BOP reads: "Our mission is to provide to qualifying members who serve the community of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) pension, healthcare, death and disability benefits as well as financial assistance." In 1717, the Fund for Pious Uses was established to support Presbyterian frontier missionaries and to provide assistance to their widows and children. Since that time the responsibility for assistance programs has resided with the BOP and its predecessors. The General Assembly in 1923 officially designated the organization's name as the "Board of Pensions." In the early 1950s the responsibilities expanded to include medical benefits for Plan members and their families. Today, with a staff of more than 200 people, the BOP seeks to fulfill the following responsibilities:

- Design and administer a comprehensive program of retirement, death, disability, medical, and optional benefits for ministers, missionaries, and other church workers.
- Design and administer a program of financial assistance to help meet needs that are beyond the scope of the pension and benefits program.
- Establish and operate a retirement housing program for eligible retirees and their spouses.
- Receive, invest, and disburse the funds required to support these plans and programs for the sole and exclusive benefit of members and beneficiaries of the Benefits Plan of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and other beneficiaries of the assistance and retirement housing programs.

The Review Committee had the opportunity to examine the work of the BOP and to meet and interview numerous members of the BOP staff as well as members of the board of directors. Clearly the BOP possesses the expertise to accomplish the task that has been assigned to it. From President Rob Maggs to the individual representatives on the regional service teams, the Review Committee was impressed with the level of expertise and high commitment to service. This expertise and commitment also extends to the Board of Directors of the BOP. The people serving on the board of directors bring a wealth of professional experience and expertise to oversee and set directions for the BOP. The Review Committee was well satisfied that the BOP has both the competence and resources necessary to fully meet the needs of Plan members and their families.

The Review Committee was particularly impressed with the ability of the BOP staff and board of directors to articulate a sense of mission. In different ways, each person expressed a sense of being part of an important ministry to the servants of the church within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). Among the staff are several persons from other communions who share the same strong sense of mission. They possess a high level of commitment to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and are clearly proud of the work that they do. Their focus goes beyond just providing a service to their members. They demonstrate a genuine concern and compassion for the members of the Plan and the churches they serve. The BOP is very concerned about maintaining high standards of ethics, stewardship, and service as well as keeping the confidence of its constituencies.

The Review Committee was well satisfied that the BOP is fulfilling its mandate from the General Assembly, doing all that has been asked of it and more. They are taking a leadership role within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in a variety of areas. For example, the BOP in an effort to lower healthcare costs, is actively engaging in a number of programs that seek to create healthier lifestyles in its members. The BOP is taking a leadership role in other areas as well. Recently the BOP completed and published the Report on Clergy Recruitment and Retention. This report has become a valuable resource not only for BOP but also for other General Assembly agencies. The Review Committee observed that the BOP may be extending itself into a number of areas that might be considered beyond its mandate. The reality is that they have both the resources and expertise to do this on behalf of the church. We made inquiry as to whether this is in any way a problem for other agencies. Overall, other General Assembly agencies appreciate the leadership of the BOP and are thankful for these initiatives that contribute to the work of the larger church.

The Review Committee wants to lift up and affirm the BOP's relatedness to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). Our review revealed that the BOP has a strong working relationship with the General Assembly Council and that it seeks to maintain strong relationships with middle governing bodies. The Board of Pensions' regional representatives stay in contact with and are available to all middle governing bodies and they meet regularly with synods, presbyteries, and churches to work with issues and answer questions. The Board of Pensions also hosts executive presbyter forums three times a year and hosts three regional benefits consultations for middle governing bodies and church leaders to obtain feedback and deal with issues of mutual interest. The BOP is also represented on the Chairs and Executives Group comprised of the chairs and executives of the various General Assembly agencies. The Board of Pensions also supports the mission of the church through the Committee on Mission Responsibility Through Investment (MRTI). Lastly, the leadership of the BOP works closely with General Assembly Nominating Committee (GANC) to ensure that persons nominated to the board of directors have both the expertise that is needed to oversee the BOP and a commitment to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

Overall the Review Committee wants to commend the leadership and staff of the BOP for its commitment to the mission of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), its relationships with the General Assembly and its agencies, and the concern and compassion it has for Plan members and their families.

III. Policies and Practices

The Committee on Review examined the current policies and practices of the BOP, which serves the members of the Benefits Plan, including ordained ministers and missionaries of the church, as well as many lay persons employed in various capacities in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

A. Relationship to the Governing Bodies within the PC(USA)

The BOP is an agency of the General Assembly accountable to the General Assembly. Under the Book of Order, the BOP is not an agency supervised by or subject to oversight of the General Assembly Council (GAC). The BOP is included as a General Assembly related corporate body in “Organization for Mission”(1994) to promote a close cooperative relationship between the BOP and the GAC [“Memorandum Defining the Relationship between the BOP and the GAC”]. One member of GAC is elected as a voting director of the BOP to represent the General Assembly Council in regard to churchwide policies and matters affecting both the GAC and the BOP. The chair and president of the BOP may speak at meetings of the GAC but have no vote. The chair and president of the BOP are members of the Chairs and Chief Executives Group of General Assembly Agencies.

The BOP’s regional representatives meet regularly with synods, presbyteries, and churches to identify individuals in need and arrange for assistance funds. The BOP hosts executive presbyter forums and regional benefits consultations and maintains liaisons with many agencies and programs of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

B. Summary of Elements of the Plan

The stated mission of the BOP is “to provide to qualifying members who serve the community of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) pension, healthcare, death and disability benefits as well as financial assistance.” The Benefits Plan is funded by employing organizations and is designed to ensure portability of benefits for members who move from one call to another within the denomination. An underlying principle of the Plan is its “community nature.” The church as a community shares the cost of benefits for all Plan members and their families. Dues are assessed based on the member’s compensation, subject to minimum and maximum amounts that vary by type of benefit, generating dedicated funds from which the needs of all participants may be met. Because of the community nature, there is no direct correlation between contributions made on behalf of a member and the benefits that member will receive. Minimum retirement benefits are based on the median Effective Salary for the employee classification. Minimum death and disability benefits, medical deductible and co-payment limits are also linked to Effective Salary. Each Plan and program is designed, funded, and accounted for separately.

The Pension Plan provides a monthly defined benefit pension payment to each participant for life and a monthly survivor’s pension payment to an eligible survivor, based on credits accrued by a member during his/her service with the church. For those members whose annual Effective Salary is below the median salary for the denomination, the credits accrue based on the median salary. The value of the pension may increase through experience apportionments paid as permanent increases in pension credits.

Death Benefits are paid to eligible beneficiaries when an active member dies in the form of Lump Sum Death Benefit, Survivor’s Pension, Salary Continuation Benefit, and a Children’s Educational Benefit.

Disability Benefits are designed to provide members with a source of income while they are disabled and until they can return to work.

The Medical Plan is self-funded. Claims administration and management services are provided by Blue Cross and Blue Shield organizations, a pharmacy benefit manager, and several managed care organizations. The Medical Plan reimburses members and their families for covered medical expenses after applicable deductible and co-payment amounts.

In addition, optional plans include Optional Dental Benefits, Supplemental Disability, Optional Death benefits, Retirement Savings Plan, long-term care insurance, Medical Continuation Program, and a Medicare Supplement Program.

C. The Board of Directors

Management and control of the BOP is vested in the board of directors, members of which are nominated by the General Assembly Nominating Committee (GANC) and elected by the General Assembly. Under the bylaws of BOP, the board of directors is comprised of no fewer than twenty-seven and no more than thirty-six members elected for a term of four years and serving for a total of no more than eight consecutive years. No more than 40 percent of the board may be ordained ministers of the Word and Sacrament, so that the majority shall always be laypersons. The principal committees of the board of directors are Assistance and Retirement Housing, Health Care, Investment, Audit, and Pensions. All of the committees have charters. The directors oversee the investment of Plan funds; the management and administration of pension, death, and disability, and medical benefits; and the operation of the board's housing and assistance programs. They are responsible for oversight of the management of the BOP. The bylaws of the BOP were last amended March 1, 2003, to conform to biennial assemblies. Amendments were approved by the 215th General Assembly (2003).

Public regulatory policies require the corporation to have directors with expertise in applicable subject matter, including financial expertise. This requirement, coupled with the church's commitment to diversity, which entails balancing for gender, race, ethnicity, region, ministers/elders, etc., necessitates a thoughtful composition of the board of directors. The move to biennial General Assemblies has created some problems in board succession. Currently the board is facing a loss of thirteen to fourteen of its members at the same time due to expiring terms, which could dilute the experience and leadership of the board.

Cooperation between the board and the GANC is good. The pool of qualified people is small, and the board sometimes needs to ask for persons with special expertise, competence, or prominence to serve as 'co-opted' members of board committees to provide specialized advice and counsel to a committee or to represent the BOP to other groups within the denomination. The chair generally appoints co-opted members to a one-year term. Co-opted members do not have a vote on official actions of the board or of any committee acting on behalf of the board.

Education and integration of new board members is a high priority for the board, which is also committed to the personal and professional development of the staff. Activities fall into several categories: in-house education for management and staff, technical training, external seminars and workshops, tuition reimbursement, and an in-house degree program sponsored by Drexel University.

The board is properly constituted, clearly identified, and fully conversant with the mission of the agency, the current overall condition of the agency, its specific responsibilities as directors, the legal relationship with the church, and its relationship to the president and chief executive officer. The chair and the officers are confident that the board continues to function at a high level of competence.

D. Annual Audit and Compliance with External Regulatory and Accrediting Agencies

The BOP has an internal audit department and also employs an external audit firm. The most recent audit was for the year ending December 31, 2004, completed in March 2005 by Deloitte & Touche LLP. The report noted "no matters involving the Board of Pension's internal control and its operations that we consider to be material weaknesses...."

Deloitte & Touche recommended that formal policies and procedures be created for implementing system software and network changes. In response, the BOP Information Technology Team developed and implemented a policy and procedure template for implementing system software and network changes. This was completed in February 2005

Also noted in the audit were problems created by incorrect reporting of member salary information by the employing organizations. This is an ongoing issue. The BOP in 2003 implemented monthly billing, which increased the number of times member salary information was communicated from employing organizations. The BOP is developing additional ways to improve the accuracy of salary data collected from employing organizations.

Of the many layers of public, governmental and legal issues relating to pension and health plan administration, only a few apply to the BOP because it is not a publicly traded company and is not for profit. The policy of the BOP is to meet or exceed those standards nonetheless, and they have done so. For example, the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 added requirements specific to publicly traded companies and organizations. It does not directly impact the BOP, which is not a publicly traded corporation, yet the organization meets or exceeds all applicable standards as set forth in the act.

E. Process for Selection and Review of the President and Chief Executive Officer

The president is elected by the board of directors with confirmation by the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). The president is the chief executive officer of the corporation and reports to and is responsible to the board of directors for overall management of the corporation. The BOP has in place a process for the selection and review of its president and chief executive officer. The formal job description for the president and CEO calls for initial evaluations and feedback to be made after the first three months, then every six months for the first two years. Formal evaluations are to be made every year thereafter in accordance with a detailed policy of the executive committee. An evaluation by the full board of directors is to be made every three years, beginning in 2005. This process has been closely followed.

F. Long- and Short-Range Planning Processes

The BOP has both long- and short-range planning processes in place. They include periodic reviews of strengths and weaknesses, surveys, demographics, external trends, and the results of various consultations with church leaders.

Recent long-range studies have included an Enterprise Risk Assessment and the development of a new Business Continuity/Disaster Recovery Plan. A strategic review of the Medical Plan was completed in 2005. The Funds Development Team recently developed a five-year plan.

The directors also conduct periodic asset and liability studies. A comprehensive asset-liability study was completed during 2005 in which the present value of Pension Plan obligations and the long-term probable performance of investment assets were determined. One of the outputs of this analysis was to determine the average level of the experience apportionment that is expected to prevail over a long time frame. Another output was the adoption of new experience apportionment guidelines in October 2005.

In terms of short-range planning, the BOP conducts an annual process to identify specific initiatives and develops an annual Business Plan around these initiatives. Managers develop initiatives based on guidance from directors and senior management. The senior management team then discusses all the plans and establishes priorities for the following year.

G. Financial Condition

The Financial condition of the BOP is sound. Reserves of the various components of the Benefits Plan currently are at or above minimum target levels. Particular elements of the Plan will be evaluated here separately.

1. Pension Plan

Churches and other employing organizations fund the Pension Plan by paying dues of 11 percent of a member's Effective Salary. The Pension Plan has been in existence for more than seventy-five years and, at present, there are more beneficiaries than active contributing members. Current pension benefit payments are three and one-half times current dues income. Therefore, the investments need to generate significant income and capital appreciation to pay benefits.

The BOP uses the independent actuarial firm Towers-Perrin to establish the value of the promised benefits (liabilities). Current and future liabilities are forecast using actuarial techniques and discounted to the present reporting date.

Reserves over and above the present value of promised benefits are necessary to mitigate the effects of volatile capital markets; to meet the benefit objective of providing members with 'experience apportionments,' (regular permanent benefit increases); and to protect against the possibility of having to seek significant additional funding from the church. In the event of a funding crisis in the Pension Plan, there is no reasonable probability of securing adequate additional funding from the denomination in the way that might be possible in a corporate environment. Therefore, the BOP continues to refine its approach to determining appropriate reserve levels. Between 2000 and 2002, reserve levels decreased almost $2 billion and temporarily fell below the policy limit guideline because of three consecutive years of adverse investment markets.

Over the long term, favorable returns have allowed the directors to grant regular experience apportionments. When an experience apportionment is granted, Pension Plan liabilities are permanently increased to reflect the present value of its full cost (currently about $44 million for each percentage point). While reserves currently are above the lower policy limit, the BOP continues to rebuild Pension Plan reserves to a more prudent long-term level. [See Exhibit C1—"Financial Soundness of the Pension Plan of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)" in Appendix C.]

2. Medical Plan

Management decisions in the past with regard to dues and benefits have maintained the Medical Plan on a sound financial basis even with increasing healthcare costs. The financial health of the Medical Plan is measured by two tests: first, there must be sufficient revenue from dues to cover the costs of claims and administration (since this Plan is not endowed); second, reserves should be adequate to cover claims that have been incurred but not yet been reported and unexpected potential catastrophic claims. In consultation with external actuaries, the BOP has established a range for reserves between 20 and 33 percent of expected annual Medical Plan claims and expenses. The cost of administration of the Medical Plan is controlled by adherence to national best practice benchmarks for the health insurance industry. By outsourcing claims administration to a third party processor, Highmark, and taking advantage of Blue Cross Blue Shield discounts, the Medical Plan has managed to save close to 50 percent off “retail price” for non-drug expenses. Those savings equated to more than $96 million for 2004.

The Medical Plan has a “pay-as-you-go” funding model. The dues collected each year for the Medical Plan must pay for the expected claims and related expenses for that year. The BOP engages independent actuaries (Milliman, Inc, formerly Milliman USA) to estimate claims and expenses for the ensuing year and value the dues increase and/or benefits reduction options to maintain Plan solvency.

During the interviews of the staff and board of directors, the members of the Review Committee heard from almost everyone that the major challenge facing the BOP is the continued escalation in medical costs. The rapidly increasing healthcare costs and increased use of prescription medication in recent years has forced both dues increases and benefit reductions. Dues have increased from 15.5 percent of Effective Salary for 2001 to 19 percent of Effective Salary for 2005. The BOP began a comprehensive study of the Medical Plan and dues structure in 2004 and is continuing to develop alternative strategies for future Plan management.

To set dues levels far enough in advance so that sessions and other dues-payers can build the cost into their budgets for the coming calendar year, the medical actuaries project the cost of healthcare coverage and the resulting required dues approximately six months in advance. Setting dues so early may expose the Plan to significant risk that actual experience will differ from the projections and result in the need for large or unforeseen dues increases. To provide some cushion for these variances, the Plan attempts to keep a reserve of between 20 percent and 33 percent of expected annual claims and expenses. The BOP has been able to maintain adequate reserve levels for the past several years and, as of spring 2005, expected to be able to maintain the required levels at least through 2005.

As an active member of and leader in the Church Benefits Association, an association of denominational benefit plans, the BOP has been able to organize joint purchasing agreements with other denominational Medical Plans resulting in annual cost savings of about $2.5 million (2004).

3. Death and Disability Plan

Churches and other employing organizations partially fund the Death and Disability Plan by paying dues of 1 percent of a member’s Effective Salary. The dues for the Death and Disability Plan are not sufficient to meet the current benefit payments and the Plan depends on invested assets to cover benefit costs. The amount of the benefit payable under the Death and Disability Plan is not earned through term of service, but is a fixed amount that is set by the board of directors. Both management of the benefit cost and long-term investment returns are key to the success of the Plan. Independent actuarial advisor Tower-Perrin establishes the value of the promised benefits of the Plan. The current and future liabilities are forecast using actuarial assumptions. As of December 31, 2004, the Death and Disability Plan had been able to rebuild its reserves through strong investment performance. The BOP is in the process of evaluating the funding of the benefits available under this Plan and the actuarial assumptions used to value the liabilities of this Plan.

4. Medicare Supplement Program

The Medicare Supplement covers Medicare-eligible retirees for medical expenses and prescription drugs not covered by Medicare. It is funded by contributions from the retirees (more than 85 percent) and churches (less than 15 percent) through vacancy dues and post-retirement service dues. The Medicare Supplement Plan is a “pay-as-you-go” funding model. As in other BOP Plans, increasing healthcare costs and increased use of prescription medication have forced subscription dues increases and benefit reductions. Individual subscription dues have increased from $132 per month per person in 2001 to $194 per person per month in 2005. Medicare Supplement subscription dues are set based on recommendations from the medical actuary, Milliman, Inc., in October of the year prior to the effective date. The plan attempts to keep a reserve of between 20 percent and 33 percent of annual claims and expenses to provide a cushion for variances.

Beginning in 2006, as required by the Medicare Prescription Drug Modernization and Improvement Act, Medicare will offer prescription drug coverage, Part D to beneficiaries. To encourage plan sponsors like the BOP to continue their Medicare Supplement programs, the law provides that subsidies linked to the value of the new drug benefit should be provided to qualified plan sponsors. The BOP was able to satisfy the requirements for qualification for the subsidy for 2006. This subsidy enabled the BOP to reduce the required monthly subscription dues by $20 per individual, effective January 1, 2006. In the absence of this development, a monthly increase of almost $30 per individual would have been required.

5. Optional Retirement Savings Plan

The Retirement Savings Plan is a 403(b)(9) plan that offers members the opportunity to save for retirement on a tax-advantaged basis. Fidelity Investments administers individual accounts using Fidelity mutual funds, socially screened proprietary funds and other mutual funds as investment vehicles. Members choose the funds in which to invest and bear the risk of gain or loss on their investments. Employing organizations may elect to contribute on behalf of employees or match employee contributions within limits established by Internal Revenue Service Regulations. In spite of volatile investment markets, total assets of the Retirement Savings Plan have grown substantially over the last five years. The average account balance for a participant in the Retirement Savings Plan increased from about $13,000 in 2000 to about $18,500 in 2004. There are no participant fees levied for administration of this plan.

6. Optional Death Benefits Plan

The Optional Death Benefits Plan offers participants the opportunity to purchase coverage for the loss of life of the member, the spouse, or children in varying amounts for prices based on the age of the participant. Reserves currently are considered adequate for the unanticipated needs of this plan.

7. The Assistance Program—Christmas Joy Offering

The Christmas Joy Offering is equally divided between the Assistance Program of the BOP and the racial ethnic schools related to the church. Approximately $2,700,000 is annually received from the offering. It funds the Income Supplement, Shared and Emergency Grant programs, and supports individuals in the Nursing Home Care Assistance Program. Proceeds from the offering have been declining in recent years, but endowments and reserves provide a safety-net. While current funding and reserves are sufficient to pay for the current Assistance Program, recent studies by the BOP have identified significant unmet needs among active clergy that cannot be met with the present level of funding and reserves. To try to help meet these needs, the BOP has established a funds development office and is building the infrastructure to seek additional funding.

H. Investment Policy and Practice

The BOP Balanced Investment Portfolio had a market value of approximately $6.5 billion on December 31, 2004. The investment objective of the BOP Balanced Investment Portfolio is to provide a long-term total return that can sustain and increase the promised benefits to Plan members, while maintaining a stable dues level and appropriate contingency reserves.

The asset allocation of the BOP Balanced Investment Portfolio is based on the long-term liability of promised benefits. Each asset class has a specific role in the portfolio. U.S. equities provide dividend income and capital appreciation for a total return based on the profitability and growth of U.S. companies. International equities provide a similar total return but also provide portfolio diversification through investment in global economies and markets. Fixed income or bonds provide current income and can provide capital appreciation during periods of deflation and falling interest rates.

To develop and maintain the asset allocation to meet the BOP's current and future liabilities, the Investment and Pension Committees of the Board work with the outside actuarial advisor Towers Perrin to complete periodically a comprehensive asset/liability study. These studies are generally done every five to six years. The most recent study was completed in 2005. This study forecast Plan member data and multiple economic and market scenarios over a fifteen-year time horizon, and provided fifteen-year probability distributions, or the likelihood of providing experience apportionments while maintaining the current dues level and appropriate contingency reserves under favorable and unfavorable economic conditions.

The Investment Committee of the Board of Pensions uses data presented in asset/liability studies to develop and recommend a strategic asset allocation or a long-term investment strategy for the portfolio. The strategic asset allocation provides the asset allocation range for each asset class used in the portfolio. The Investment Committee reviews the asset allocation ranges and current asset allocation at each meeting. Professional managers are hired by the Investment Committee to manage the investments in each asset class. The managers periodically review the performance of the asset classes and decide whether to retain or replace them. Each manager's results are calculated and reported quarterly and each year in the Annual Report.

The Board of Pensions uses multiple investment managers for each asset class. Staff and the Investment Committee evaluate, retain, and monitor managers for specific assignments within the total portfolio. Managers are responsible for the selection of individual securities for their portfolios subject to the divestment list and socially responsible screens of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

Asset allocation is monitored daily to assure adequate cash for payment of benefits. Staff rebalances the portfolio to reduce or increase investment in an asset class that has become significantly out of line with the long-term asset allocation as well as providing sufficient cash for payment of benefits.

The assets of the BOP Balanced Investment Portfolio are managed so that each participating plan and program owns units in the portfolio rather than individual securities, in order to reduce investment and custodial fees. The valuation of units is done monthly by Mellon Trust.

The BOP Fixed Income Portfolio, valued at $33.7 million on December 31, 2004, is used by those plans and programs with shorter investment horizons that require a different asset allocation than the long-term asset allocation of the Pension Plan.

I. Senior Management and Staff Policies and Relationships

The stated goal of the BOP is to maintain an employee work culture where the church's principles and values are evident and incorporated into its day-to-day dealings with employees and members. The organization's leadership strives to work with others in a manner that reflects respect, dignity, equity, honesty, and integrity, and recognizes the need for balance in spirituality, work, and life. [See Exhibit C2 "Mission and Primary Focus of the Human Resources Team" in Appendix C.]

In 2004, 56 percent of the 205 employees were exempt (salaried) and 44 percent were nonexempt (paid by the hour). Females comprise 67 percent of the workforce and racial ethnic persons comprise 37 percent. The committee noted, however, that there is a smaller percentage of racial ethnic persons in the four highest grade levels. As of December 31, 2005, there were six racial ethnic persons out of a total of forty in the four highest grade levels and it is anticipated that a seventh will be added during 2006.

[See Exhibits C3, C4, and C5 in Appendix C.]

1. Compensation

Base salary structure is modeled after that used by the other entities of the church, adjusted to reflect the Philadelphia marketplace, comparable church pension boards and other employers from whom employees are recruited. The structure consists of eleven grades, which are applicable to all but the top four executives. The exclusion of the top four executives is a tool for the directors to manage compensation. It allows the directors to establish pay for any top position without regard to the relative pay level of any of the other three positions. Because competition for employees in lower nonexempt level grades is highly competitive in the Philadelphia area, compensation typically is targeted between the 55th and 65th percentiles for lower level grades. Exempt professional grades are targeted at the 50th percentile. For executive management the BOP follows the church's compensation guidelines by targeting total cash compensation at the 25th percentile for similar church benefit boards and comparable secular positions. Executive compensation adopted by the Executive Committee of the Board of Pensions conforms to both denominational guidelines established by the General Assembly and intermediate sanction rules of the Internal Revenue Service governing compensation at not-for-profit organizations.

The staff undergoes an annual salary and performance review based on a "pay for performance philosophy," based on a newly developed comprehensive performance evaluation form for both staff and management. Annual overall salary increases are typically 3.5 percent to 4 percent.

The BOP utilizes a Variable Compensation Plan for most employees in Grade 9 and above (approximately nineteen or twenty people). The president recommends to the executive committee which employees should be included in the Plan. In practice, employees who have critical influence on decision making or have policy making aspects to their job responsibilities are included in the Plan. A percentage of salary is "at risk" depending on individual performance and corporate performance. Variable Compensation has five levels: base salary, base plus 10 percent, base plus 20 percent, base plus 30 percent, and base plus 35 percent. Determination of the amount of salary depends on individual performance against objectives and corporate performance of BOP as a whole. If an employee performs poorly, he/she would not receive the variable compensation. It is paid as a lump sum in January for the previous year. One objective is to motivate employees to have concern for the performance of the BOP as a whole, rather than just their own performance or that of their department.

In determining salary levels, a priority is "corporate stewardship" which is an assessment of (1) internal and external factors that have impacted the welfare of the BOP, and (2) how well management provided for the welfare of the BOP both in context of the organization itself and in the context of its mission for the denomination. In determining the compensation of the president and CEO, because his/her performance is so intertwined with successful performance of the BOP's mission, the "at risk" portion does not separate individual performance from BOP performance. [See Exhibit C6 "Executive Compensation Guidelines" in Appendix C.]

The Committee on Review noted a wide differential in some of the compensation for BOP executives as compared to executives at other General Assembly agencies, and to the "Salary Range Structure" [Exhibit C7 in Appendix C.] According to the "Executive Compensation Guidelines" adopted by the board in March, 2005, [Exhibit C6 in Appendix C], the Board of Pensions "recognizes that compensation for certain executives may from time to time exceed the target percentile due to years of experience, performance or extraordinary market conditions.....The Board recognizes the concept of 'sense of call' within the church community...However, the Board will not use either 'sense of call' or the compensation levels in other segments of the church for essentially different positions within different marketplaces, as a reason to deviate from its commitment to fair and equitable executive compensation for Board personnel."

2. Adequacy of Management

Throughout the interviewing and review process the Review Committee found a very high level of competence and performance among the staff of the BOP. Relationships appear to be warm and collegial. Staff development is a high priority and very much in evidence. The Review Committee commends the BOP on its performance in this area.

IV. Program Effectiveness

The final criterion is focused on an assessment of program effectiveness. It is the conclusion of this General Assembly Committee on Review that the programs and services of the BOP are consistent with its General Assembly mandate and highly effective in achieving it.

The Review Committee found BOP staff and management are strongly committed to the mission and work of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). The BOP staff approaches their jobs with a sense of ministry. They are very caring but also understand their role in governing fair, equitable, and efficient utilization of program services. This sense of mission commitment and morale is high at all levels of BOP staff. As one BOP staff member said, "We are part of the larger community and we are committed to serving the whole community—we're all in this together."

The General Assembly has assigned responsibility to the BOP to provide programs in four areas (described in Section II. "Church Relatedness"). The effectiveness of each of these programs is reviewed below in terms of (1) the extent to which there is a process for measuring the delivery of services and monitoring the effectiveness of those services with the BOP's constituencies, and (2) the extent to which policies and procedures exist and are sufficient to assure that BOP staff hold the necessary and appropriate skills, licenses, and experience to make it reasonable to anticipate that they can perform their work satisfactorily. Both of these factors contribute to the overall effectiveness of the program.

A. Survey Results

During the spring and summer of 2005, Research Services contributed to a review of the BOP's church relations, policies, and effectiveness by surveying Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Benefits Plan members currently serving Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) congregations or other Presbyterian-related organizations, retired Benefits Plan members, congregations, presbytery executives, and presbytery BOP liaisons. Response rates ranged from 60 percent for retired Plan members to 27 percent for congregations. While the response was on the low side, Research Services indicated to the best of its knowledge this did not bias survey results.

Generally, the survey results indicated that BOP programs are highly effective. A summary of key survey highlights is included in Appendix A.

The survey revealed two areas that appear to need improvement:

- Thirty-four percent of Benefits Plan members currently serving Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) congregations or other Presbyterian-related organizations are not very satisfied or not at all satisfied with the comprehensiveness of the pension benefits information in BOP mailings.
- A high percentage of Benefits Plan members currently serving Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) congregations or other Presbyterian-related organization are not very satisfied or not at all satisfied with certain interactions with the BOP or with BOP plan administrators on matters involving medical benefits. (See Table 3A in Appendix A.)

There were two other areas that comparatively received slightly higher adverse ratings:

- While presbytery executives generally gave high marks to the quality of BOP services, 11 percent gave fair or poor ratings to presentations by a regional representative or education specialist; 8 percent gave fair ratings to regional benefits consultation and 13 percent gave fair or poor ratings to communication with regional representatives.
- Ten percent of presbytery BOP liaisons gave fair ratings to financial planning seminars and retirement education seminars.

The survey instrument also permitted respondents to raise issues, the more pertinent of which are summarized below:

- Many respondents offered broad praise for the BOP's work—"I thank God every day for the BOP."
- Some respondents expressed concern about the inability of small congregations to afford BOP dues and the resulting inability of small congregations to call installed pastors.
- Some expressed concern for what they viewed as declining personal service by BOP staff.
- Some called for benefits coverage for part-time pastors, lay pastors, supply pastors, or part-time staff.
- Other suggestions included:
 - More detailed and/or more understandable financial statements.
 - Better vision or dental coverage options.
 - Education workshops in which laypeople with full-time jobs could participate after work or on the week-ends.
 - Changes in the way BOP policies treat clergy couples, survivors, and/or single people.

B. Benefits Plan

Issues and concerns focus primarily on the Medical Plan because of rising national health care costs. While the Review Committee found all BOP programs to be effective as currently structured and delivered, ongoing attention is needed to improve program substance, communication, and delivery, while simultaneously striving to contain costs. The Committee recognizes that this will not be an easy task and was impressed with the BOP's understanding of the tough issues and willingness to tackle them.

1. Pension Plan

The pension plan is a defined benefit program. Participation is mandatory for ministers of the Word and Sacrament. The program is stable and in excellent financial condition. The Review Committee noted there is a high level of satisfaction with the Pension Plan, as currently structured, and did not discern any compelling need for considering changes to the Plan. Actuarial work and legal requirements are outsourced to highly qualified experts. Professional staff and board members are well qualified to assess the qualifications and effectiveness of the work of these outside experts.

The Review Committee familiarized itself with pension programs in other denominations and concluded that the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)'s plan generally is broader based and provides a greater percentage of retiree income requirements than plans in most other denominations. [Exhibit B1, Church Benefits Association 2003 Benefits Plan Survey in Appendix B.] Mandated participation of ministers of the Word and Sacrament is foundational and assures the success of the Pension Plan for all participants. The committee concluded that there is no basis for considering alternatives. Notwithstanding this overall conclusion, the committee noted that the BOP is considering plan enhancements involving non-mandated participants.

Perhaps the most significant Pension Plan issue involves the annual experience apportionment. The objective of the Pension Plan investment management is to provide not only for retirement income but also to protect the purchasing power of retirees from the ravages of inflation. Over extended time periods, successful investment management increases the value of investments at a rate that exceeds the inflation rate. The BOP has been very effective in achieving this outcome. This provides the basis for annual experience apportionment grants. However, in the short run, financial markets can be volatile. If large experience apportionments are approved in times when investment returns are high, this could increase the possibility that subsequent inferior investment performance could put the adequacy of investment reserves into jeopardy. This happened a few years ago, and since that time the BOP has taken care to maintain a balance between adequate reserves and timely experience apportionments.

The BOP is committed to maintaining a stable dues structure, which has been 11 percent for at least the last forty years. This means that altering the dues levy is not an option for dealing with a potential shortfall in reserves. In turn this creates an explicit conservative bias in determining the annual experience apportionment in conjunction with the adequacy of reserves. In addition, the timing of experience apportionments affects, to an extent, the distribution of benefits to current retirees versus future retirees.

The BOP established an Ad Hoc Committee of the Board of Directors (Ad Hoc Committee) that completed a comprehensive Asset/Liability Study during 2005 that used revised investment return assumptions and developed a new approach to determining periodic experience apportionments and a new way of calculating, identifying, and using Pension Plan reserves. The Ad Hoc Committee concluded that “the proposed new approach to determining experience apportionments, embracing as it does different methodology and investment return assumptions, would be superior to the current approach in achieving the Board’s overriding objectives of maintaining the solvency of the Plan while protecting the benefits of Plan members against the impact of inflation in a way that is more fair and equitable to all generations of Plan members, active and retired.” The Ad Hoc Committee recommended that the BOP adopt the new approach as an Experience Apportionment Policy “... with all of the respect, stability, and continuity that the term connotes, as opposed to a guideline, which can be too easily disregarded.” The Ad Hoc Committee further recommended that should the BOP wish to deviate from the approved methodology in the future a two-vote process should be required. “The first vote would be a motion to set aside the apportionment policy for the one year in question. The second vote, to be taken only if the first motion was approved, would be on the size of the apportionment.”

The proposed policy involves a two-stage methodology beginning with the December 31, 2005, valuation. In Stage 1 the BOP would ascertain the solvency of the Plan and determine whether an experience apportionment may be granted. In Stage 2 the BOP would determine the size of the experience apportionment. Stage 2 would use a smoothed value of assets and would determine liabilities on the basis of a 7 percent investment return assumption. Had the proposed methodology been used to determine experience apportionments in the past, year-to-year volatility in the size of experience apportionments would have been reduced and the temporary decline in reserves below the minimum policy threshold could have been avoided.

The Review Committee concluded that the BOP has approached the study of experience apportionments thoughtfully and rigorously. The committee is sympathetic with injecting a greater degree of discipline in the determination of future experience apportionments. Current BOP directors remember the difficulties of the early 2000s well and are determined to avoid a similar situation in the future. However, as term limits result in a gradual turn over of directors, there is risk that this collective institutional memory will grow dim or be lost.

2. Medical Plan

Health care costs continue to skyrocket at the national level. The BOP has responded by (1) raising dues from 15.5 percent of Effective Salary in 2001 to 19 percent currently, (2) reducing benefits, (3) shifting some costs to plan participants, (4) aggressively cutting administrative expenses, and (5) greatly improving the efficiency of service delivery. The increase in dues places budgetary pressures on churches. This is increasingly problematic for smaller churches. Unfortunately, in some instances, increasing dues to cover rising health care costs has had the regrettable outcome of causing churches to limit pastor salaries and to opt out of benefit plan coverage for non-mandatory staff.

In the face of unabated increases in health care costs, there is increasing concern that the quality of the medical plans would be impaired by further benefit reductions and that raising dues further would exacerbate budgetary pressures in many churches. Short of a nationally based solution to the issue of rising health care costs, the BOP has limited options. It is mandated to recover the costs of benefits and administrative expenses through dues. This means that as health care costs continue to rise and efficiency initiatives are exhausted, the BOP may need to continue to raise dues.

Other alternatives are being explored. If a way could be found to encourage churches to raise salaries of Plan participants, particularly ministers of the Word and Sacrament, the need to raise dues would lessen considerably. There is also potential to reduce health-care expenses by helping Plan participants to find healthier life styles. Support mechanisms might be created that would reduce occupational stress that is a contributor to poor health. The BOP already sponsors educational programs, such as smoking cessation, but a frequent point of frustration that BOP staff expresses is that Plan participants do not take advantage of scheduled educational programs—those called to ministry are not necessarily good at self-care. One question is how to induce Plan participants to engage in programs and lifestyle changes that are in their own best interest. There is a coincidence of interests here in that these steps reduce costs, improve the quality of life of church employees, and may also serve the interest of the wider church as healthier church staff will improve retention and aid in addressing other issues that sap the energies of leaders in middle governing bodies.

There is general agreement that there are no easy answers to the rising cost of health care. The BOP is continuing to explore all available avenues. The BOP has taken some steps to develop initiatives that it hopes will lead to reduced health-care expenditures in the future. However, these programs require significant up front investments without a clear-cut ability to determine how effective they will be.

One such instance is the offer of financial incentives to Plan members for preventative services such as the annual physical.

Another example of an innovative program that has potential is CREDO—a program that would provide ministers of Word and Sacrament, who have about seven-to-ten years experience, time to explore financial planning, mental health, physical well-being and sense of call. This eight-day program of vocational preparedness and reflection is currently offered by the Episcopal Church and adaptation of the program for Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) use is under consideration. An initial retreat for approximately thirty-five pastors was held in November 2005. No measures yet exist to evaluate the extent to which the CREDO program will be effective in reducing long-term health care costs.

The BOP is also exploring mutual support clergy-colleague groups, which would be facilitated by a licensed professional. They have also urged that presbyteries look at financial viability of churches, and that the denomination should raise money for small churches as it does for missionaries.

Another program that is under development by Auburn Theological Seminary under the auspices of the Lilly Foundation, involves personal pastoral coaching. This program involves pairing trained coaches with pastors over an extended time period. The program has had documented success in reducing stress and occupational burnout. Although the study has not documented improved retention or reduced health-care costs, these benefits seem reasonably probable based on the documented positive personal impacts of coaching.

In light of national trends in health-care costs and the limited options available to the BOP, the Review Committee included a question in the survey that asked respondents what they thought the BOP should do in response to volatility in investment return rates, rising health-care costs, and declining church size. Respondents were given five options: reduce benefits; increase dues; expend more resources to educate Plan members to adopt more healthy behaviors and to be smarter health care consumers; other (please specify); and don't know. Respondents were permitted to check more than one category. Table 1 shows response rates for each of the five groups surveyed.

Table 1
How Should the BOP Respond To This Combination of Trends: Volatile Investment Return Rates, Rising Health Care Costs, and Declining Church Size?

	Benefit Plan Members Currently Serving	Retired Benefits Plan Members	Congregational Representatives	Presbytery Executives	Presbytery BOP Liaisons
Reduce benefits	6 %	5 %	18 %	19 %	37 %
Increase dues	10 %	39 %	23 %	32 %	51 %
Expend more resources to educate Plan members	48 %	51 %	45 %	74 %	64 %
Other	69 %	10 %	13 %	26 %	13 %
Don't Know	29 %	38 %	35 %	18 %	12 %

Not surprisingly Medical Plan members were not enthusiastic about reducing benefits and those responsible for dues—currently serving members and congregational representatives—were least enthusiastic about raising dues. A consistently large percentage of respondents want the BOP to expend more resources on educating Plan members to adopt more healthy behaviors and to be smarter health care consumers.

Survey respondents, particularly currently serving Plan members, offered a large number of suggestions:

- Provide financial incentives for behavioral health by, for example, covering health club costs or penalizing smokers.
- Allow spouses who have other options for coverage to opt out and, if they desire, to take on the dependent coverage under their policy. This would allow for a single coverage option for clergy, if they elected it.
- Allow different arrangements for clergy and laity in the coverage.

- Convert medical benefits partly into health savings accounts that would reward healthy individuals with few claims.
- Advocate for health care reform—including national health insurance and/or health-care cost reduction—and give Presbyterians information to advocate as individuals and congregations for reform.
- Make the dues structure more progressive, by raising or eliminating the cap on congregational dues, or make the dues structure less progressive, by shifting toward flat dues, irrespective of the dollar amounts of salaries, or reducing Assistance Program grants.
- Review the performance, cost, and service of outside vendors, especially Express Scripts and Value Options, the BOP’s pharmacy benefits manager and mental health services vendor, respectively.
- Identify and make available health-maintenance-organization options to Benefits Plan members and Affiliated Benefits Program participants outside of the metropolitan Louisville area.
- Amalgamate the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) medical benefits system with that of another denomination.
- Work with the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) partner church in Canada so that Plan members can buy prescription drugs at Canadian prices.
- Refocus the BOP’s investment policy on maximizing investment return rates instead of trying to influence policies (for example, in the Middle East). .
- Cut BOP overhead costs and the salaries of top BOP executives.

The Review Committee discussed these suggestions with staff of the BOP. While many of the suggestions have received some consideration, the committee believes that the BOP in some cases could benefit from more thorough and thoughtful study of many of these and other suggestions.

The Review Committee noted that the BOP has achieved efficiencies in recent years without compromising the quality of programs. The quality of delivery appears to have improved over time. Notwithstanding these improvements the BOP has been able to reduce its staffing numbers.

The Review Committee reached the following conclusions with respect to the Medical Plan: The BOP and its staff

- are knowledgeable;
- utilize outside experts effectively;
- understand rising national health-care costs;
- are sensitive to the impact of rising health-care dues, especially on small churches;
- strive to provide quality health-care programs at affordable costs;
- respond to the challenge of rising costs by developing educational programs;
- understand health care as a shared responsibility of Plan members and the BOP;
- are committed to the mission and ministry of the PC(USA);
- are dedicated to providing excellence in member services;
- have an appeals process that is fair and compassionate;
- are open to change and actively exploring possibilities to serve Plan members better.

3. Death and Disability Plan

Most participants in the Benefits Plans, according to survey results, are very satisfied, satisfied, or somewhat satisfied with the substance and delivery of the death and disability plan. About 10 percent of currently serving Plan members are not very satisfied or not satisfied at all with the comprehensiveness of the disability benefits information in BOP mailings. Sixty percent of currently serving Plan participants indicated that they “don’t know” about the Death Benefits Plan.

4. Assistance Programs

The Assistance Programs go to the heart of Christian discipleship: serving people in need in the name of Jesus Christ. The Assistance Programs provide emergency and on-going financial aid for members of the pension and health care plans and, for some programs, other employees of Presbyterian churches. The Assistance Programs also work to strengthen future leadership for the church by providing strategic assistance and support to pastors who need it.

Shared and Emergency Grants provide emergency financial assistance. For example, during the devastating hurricane season of 2004, the Assistance Program staff took initiative to contact presbyteries in Florida and offer important information regarding Shared and Emergency Grants so that those needing such grants could receive assistance quickly.

Taking the long-view of the financial viability of the Assistance Programs, the Board of Pensions recognizes that income from the Christmas Joy Offering is not keeping pace with growing need. Income from the Christmas Joy Offering is the primary funding source for the Assistance Programs. This funding source has been supplemented by direct contributions and income from endowments. To ensure that the Assistance Programs can continue to meet basic needs and, perhaps, expand in future years, the BOP recently reinstated a Funds Development Program to increase contributions.

The Assistance Programs are generally viewed as important and effective. These conclusions are supported by the survey results, although a very large percentage of Benefits Plan participants and congregational representatives checked the box "Don't Know", suggesting that knowledge and understanding of these programs is not widespread. Presbytery executives and presbytery BOP liaisons were much more knowledgeable and a large majority rated the effectiveness of the Assistance Programs as very effective, effective or somewhat effective.

Administration of the Assistance Programs is managed by qualified BOP staff experts. Regional representatives coordinate individual cases very effectively with presbyteries and professional BOP staff, often collecting relevant facts and advise individuals on program limitations and prospects for qualifying for financial assistance. Regional representatives also are responsible for educating presbyteries, eligible individuals and church officers about various assistance programs and eligibility requirements. In addition to the survey results, BOP staff advised the Review Committee that not withstanding these communication initiatives the level of knowledge about Assistance Programs is inadequate.

In 2001, the BOP initiated a Seminary Debt Assistance Program to support first call pastors with less than seven years experience and churches with fewer than 150 members and a budget of up to $100,000 (note that in 2005 the BOP increased the church budget criterion to up to $250,000). The program provides grants of up to $10,000 over four years to repay the education debt of Ministers of the Word and Sacrament. The intent of the program is to help strengthen the church by making it easier for small congregations to attract new leadership and it encourages graduates to pursue a career in the ministry. The BOP views this as an incubator program and intends, after five years, to transfer the program to an appropriate organization for continued administration. Incubator programs are part of a strategy to put ideas into successful practice before asking donors to support them. The BOP has formed the Seminary Debt Assistance Advisory Committee, which consists of representatives of the BOP, the General Assembly Council, seminaries and middle governing bodies, to advise it in implementing this program. The Review Committee noted that many constituencies benefit from this program and acknowledged the benefit of the informal program of consultation through the Seminary Debt Assistance Advisory Committee, but discussed whether the BOP might better coordinate involvement of other interested constituencies through a more structured consultation process.

The BOP decided in 2002 to reactivate fund raising activities and adopted a five-year plan in 2004. There have been some results already. The BOP intends to develop fund raising capabilities further over the next two years. The principal focus of fund raising is to continue current Assistance Programs and introduce new programs, such as the CREDO program and an adoption assistance program.

The fund raising initiative has raised the issue of the BOP's relationship with other General Assembly agencies and with middle governing bodies. The Review Committee was advised that the BOP has done a good job of communicating with other agencies and that the General Assembly Council has been involved in planning and implementing a variety of cooperative efforts. There was some concern that the level of involvement of presbyteries needs to be greater. The Review Committee concluded that the level of cooperation to date has been good but that the Chairs and Chief Executive Officers of the General Assembly agencies should be encouraged to partner better in planning and implementing cooperative fund raising efforts that involve middle governing bodies.

5. Retirement Housing

Because many ministers now own their own home the BOP has adjusted to real-world circumstances. Currently, fewer retirees need a house for their retirement living. So, the BOP has sold many real estate holdings, but assists with housing needs through financial assistance on an as needed basis. Over the longer term the BOP expects to cease owning and operating a retirement housing program for eligible retirees and their spouses, but it will provide financial assistance for retirement housing needs. The Review Committee concluded that the BOP's redirection of this General Assembly mandate is appropriate and resources should be redirected to other programs, such as the Assistance Programs.

C. Investment Management

The BOP manages approximately $6.5 billion in investments, about 98 percent of which support the obligations of the Pension Plan and the Death and Disability Plan. The investment objective is to provide a long-term total return (currently defined as 5 percent above the rate of inflation) that can sustain and increase the promised benefits to Plan members, while maintaining a stable dues level and appropriate contingency reserves for each Plan. The Review Committee determined that the BOP has been fully successful in achieving its investment objective. Furthermore, the Committee found investment policies, procedures and practices to be thorough and soundly grounded.

1. Mission Responsibility Through Investment (MRTI)

The Committee on MRTI of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is charged with implementing General Assembly policies on socially responsible investing by first engaging corporations in dialog and subsequently requiring divestment of investments in corporations that have not complied and are not likely to comply with General Assembly policies. The BOP has a Social Responsibility Committee encompassing eight directors with cross membership with the BOP's principal board committees. This committee is charged with advising the Committee on MRTI and overseeing implementation of decisions made by the Committee on MRTI. Board of Pension staff and two elected members of the BOP board participate in meetings of the Committee on MRTI.

In addition to the standard screens of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) (no investments in alcohol, gambling, or arms) the committee helps the church in its process of decision-making with regard to social responsibility in investment. The Committee on MRTI works with the Social Responsibility Committee of the BOP. It follows a carefully articulated process first of identifying potential companies to be placed on the divestment list and then of discovery and engagement with those companies before recommending to the General Assembly that the companies be placed on the divestment list. The Review Committee was assured by BOP staff that the process for placing a company on the divestment list is reasonable and thoughtfully carried out.

Once a company has been placed on the divestment list, all investment managers are notified with the expectation that investments in these companies will be disposed of over time in a way that does not compromise investment returns. Investment managers may formally request to be exempted from a divestment requirement for a specific company. The Investment Committee of the BOP approves the grant of any exception request.

The Board of BOP has approved a blanket divestment exemption pertaining only to commingled funds. The basis for this exemption is that such funds are typically indexed to market indices, such as the S&P 500 stock fund. While customized indexed funds could be constructed that exclude companies on the divestment list, the administrative and investment management fees would be much higher.

A BOP board member involved in the Committee on MRTI expressed a concern that the committee may be understaffed in the face of an increased workload stemming from General Assembly action pertaining to companies operating in the Middle East.

The Review Committee concluded that the BOP is faithfully carrying out General Assembly mandates and thorough and effective compliance procedures exist both for investment activities and proxy voting.

2. Investment Committee and Investment Management Governance

The Investment Committee meets three times a year to conduct its assigned responsibilities. During intervening time periods, staff administers investment activities consistent with delegations of authority which are summarized explicitly in the Investment Manual. Staff provides board members monthly reports. The chief investment officer (CIO) regularly consults with the chair of the Investment Committee. In nearly all respects, the Investment Manual is a best practices document. It guides staff and board activities, establishes precise guidelines, provides for regular and systematic review procedures and reporting and assigns explicit authorities and accountabilities. The Review Committee noted that the infrequency of full committee meetings and conference calls is not a "best practices" approach. While the committee concluded that governance and oversight of investment activities appears adequate and there are no obvious deficiencies, the BOP should conduct a peer review of investment management oversight governance practices and consider whether adjustments in current processes would enhance governance effectiveness.

The Review Committee also noted that there have been nine Investment Committee chairs in the last fifteen years. This lack of continuity has not proved to be troublesome due to the thoroughness of procedures codified in the Investment Manual and because of investment staff continuity. While frequent rotation of the position of chair is not of current concern, it could become so, if the CIO leaves.

3. Long-Term Planning and Investment Strategy

Long-term investment strategy and asset allocations can be described as solidly consistent with traditional pension plan investment management strategy. Nearly all investments are allocated to highly liquid equity and fixed-income securities. Equities comprise nearly 70 percent of overall investments, which is appropriate for managing Pension Plan assets where liabilities are of long duration. Diversification into international equities is also consistent with typical practice. This traditional asset allocation strategy and rigorous selection of well-established investment managers permits the BOP to oversee a very large investment portfolio with a lean staff of seven people.

Balanced Investment Portfolio Asset Allocation
December 31, 2004

Asset Class	Market Value ($ in Millions)	Actual Percentage	Asset Allocation Range
U.S. Equity	$3,203	49.7 %	35–55 %
International Equity	$1,201	18.6 %	10–20 %
Fixed Income	$1,950	30.2 %	25–45 %
Other	$96	1.5 %	0–10 %
Total	$6,450	100.0 %	100 %

The Investment Committee has authorized up to 10 percent of plan assets to be invested in nontraditional investments (see Table 2). As of December 31, 2004, only 1.5 percent had been allocated to such investments. During 2005 the Investment Committee executed commitments to invest in nontraditional investments equal to 7.5 percent of plan assets and by the end of the year actual funded investments rose to approximately $260 million, or 3.6 percent of plan assets. The CIO expressed the view that the percentage of nontraditional investments would probably not increase very much for two reasons. First, while alternative investments might enjoy higher long-term rates of return, they are less liquid. Second, such investments require much more study and analysis prior to acquisition and also require much more intense monitoring after acquisition. Existing staffing capacity and expertise is not sufficient to undertake prudently the risks inherent in alternative investments. The Review Committee concluded that while there may be merit to the CIO's position, it is generally not consistent with evolving large pension fund investment practice. Because Plan liabilities have a very long duration a degree of illiquidity should not be of concern. Furthermore, although alternative investments involve a higher degree of risk, the returns should compensate for the greater risk, if properly managed. The Review Committee believes the Investment Committee should plan how to accomplish such diversification of Plan assets into alternative investments with appropriate staff in a prudent manner.

4. Short-Term Planning—Asset Allocation Rebalancing Guidelines

Unlike most other aspects of investment management, procedures for rebalancing asset allocation in between Investment Committee meetings are not specified explicitly in the Investment Manual. This lack of procedural clarity is of concern because of the infrequency of Investment Committee meetings. Most rebalancing occurs because of the need to move funds out of investments to fund Pension Plan and other Plan payments. Rebalancing can also occur because changes in market performance and individual manager performance result in substantive changes in the asset allocation profile. Because of the high level of trust the Investment Committee has in the CIO, it has granted the CIO extensive discretion to rebalance asset allocations between Investment Committee meetings.

While the Review Committee agrees it is appropriate for the Investment Committee to delegate discretion to the CIO, best practice dictates that the limits of that discretion and reporting requirements on actions taken be explicitly articulated in the Investment Manual. Moreover, the Investment Manual should be a living document subject to change if, and when, circumstances dictate. For example, if the CIO is temporarily incapacitated, leaves or is replaced, the Investment Committee should determine whether the approved rebalancing discretion is still appropriate or should be modified. The Review Committee suggests that the Investment Committee of the BOP amend the Investment Manual to include explicit asset allocation rebalancing guidelines and staff authorities to implement rebalancing.

5. Investment Performance and Individual Manager Performance Assessment

Investment performance has consistently exceeded benchmark indices for the 3-, 5-, 10-, and 15-year periods. Returns have also consistently exceeded the average annual performance benchmark of the Consumer Price Index plus 5 percent by more than 1 percent over the last fifteen years. The Review Committee was impressed with investment performance.

Individual investment manager selection is governed by a rigorous analytical process that is documented in detail in the Investment Manual. Manager performance is reviewed systematically and in a timely manner, based upon a comprehensive set of criteria documented in the Investment Manual. When performance deteriorates or other investment manager attributes deviate significantly from those that were relied upon when the manager was originally engaged, the investment manager undergoes a rigorous review, which often leads to termination of the relationship. The Review Committee was impressed with the careful attention to manager selection, review of performance, and timely dismissal when circumstances warranted.

D. Assessment of Other Aspects of Program Effectiveness

1. Staff Development

The Review Committee reached the following conclusions:

- Strategies are in place to attract adequately skilled personnel.
- The BOP has a formal development program that is effective, including collaborative programs with Drexel University and a structured mentoring program.
- The BOP has been successful in attracting a diverse and engaged hourly-paid workforce.
- There is an unwavering commitment to diversity, and at the entry level a good degree of diversity has been achieved. However, this is not yet the case for the more highly skilled positions. [See Exhibit B2, Numbers of New Hires and Promotions at the BOP for 2002, 2003 and 2004 Classified by Race, Gender and Status (Exempt/Nonexempt) in Appendix B.] Because of this difficulty, the BOP has started an internal program geared to staff development with the intention of promotion to upper level positions.
- The Review Committee noted that there are no explicit management succession plans for top executives. The BOP's Executive Committee intends to complete development of a management succession plan in 2006.

2. Communication With Constituencies

A key component of the BOP's strategic plan is to develop an integrated program within the BOP for relations with constituencies that encompasses all points of contact, including the call center, regional representatives, education specialists and various forms of printed and electronic communications materials.

The BOP has established an executive presbyter forum that meets three times a year. This forum brings complaints and concerns to the attention of the BOP and gives BOP staff the opportunity to explore ideas with the presbyters. This forum provides a potential vehicle for developing responses to issues such as better cooperation with middle governing bodies in increasing healthy lifestyles, fund raising, and other initiatives.

The Review Committee noted that the current education seminars are valuable, but did not feel there is a clear vision or set of objectives for the seminars. The four current seminars focus only on retirement issues, financial planning, and tax management. A bolder/broader vision could include integration of healthy living education.

There is not a clear organizational alignment between the placement of the educational specialists within the BOP and the purpose of the educational programs. The committee noted that educational specialists currently report through the Pensions executive, which is the third organizational reporting arrangement in recent times. The BOP may wish to consider whether alignment with the Church Relations executive and the regional representatives might result in more effective linkage of these resources with educational needs and delivery of educational programs to Plan participants. The committee believes that presbyteries need to be more engaged in educational programs than they are at present. For example, the BOP, in scheduling seminars, does not currently use geographical boundaries of presbyteries.

The BOP established a new organizational unit for Church Relations in 2002 and hired a veteran pastor as the top executive. The regional representatives were increased in number and their job responsibilities have been restructured. About 60 percent of the time of regional representatives is now spent working with presbyteries and synods and with presbytery and synod leadership and committees. The remaining time is spent on planning and preparation and in a variety of other ways, including responding to member concerns, facilitation of individual needs for assistance, identification of potential donors for fund raising, meetings with retirees, and input into BOP program development. In addition, each regional representative has been assigned a national coordination role. For example, one relates to the national interim ministers group; another relates to church business, educational and music professionals.

The Review Committee believes the focus on Church Relations and the restructuring in regional representatives' jobs has been constructive and has helped improve communications. The committee believes that the BOP should give further consideration to how communications can be enhanced through appropriate use of regional representatives. One possibility, already under active consideration, would involve regional representatives visiting larger churches.

The Review Committee reached the following additional conclusions:

- The BOP is using emerging communications technologies, such as podcasts, effectively; however the challenge is in getting Plan participants to access available information.
- The cost of producing print materials has declined substantially but it is difficult to determine how effective printed materials have been.
- The BOP is wrestling with the challenges of people receiving, reading, and understanding communications.
- One possible communications approach that has not been explored is sending informational e-mails directly to those Plan participants who have e-mail addresses.

3. Attention to Current and Emerging Technologies

The Review Committee reached the following conclusions:

- The BOP has made effective use of technology to improve member services over time.
- The BOP is making appropriate investments in new technologies and recognizes the need to utilize technology more fully and better.
- The BOP is effective in providing security for personal information records of Plan participants but security remains an ongoing concern and point of focus.
- Information technology professionals are committed to supporting BOP objectives.
- A developing challenge is how to make the website more interactive and how to increase the utilization of the website.

V. Conclusions and Recommendations

The Review Committee reached the following conclusions and makes the following recommendations to the BOP. The recommendations are intended to help strengthen the programs and services of BOP. The Review Committee would like to thank Chair Earle Robbins, President and CEO Robert Maggs, BOP's Board of Directors, the staff of BOP and the Office of the General Assembly for their assistance and cooperation in completing this review. Members of the Review Committee are appreciative of the considerable planning and preparation that was done prior to each of their visits.

A. Cooperation with Other Agencies and Middle Governing Bodies

The Review Committee applauds the BOP for taking the initiative in areas such as clergy recruitment and retention and fund raising to support healthful living and financial assistance programs. The committee noted that the BOP seeks to coordinate these initiatives through meetings of the chairs and chief executive officers of the agencies. The committee recommends that the BOP work much more directly with other agencies and presbyteries in designing programs and developing appropriate fund raising mechanisms. The committee noted and affirms the role of the chairs and chief executive officers of all the General Assembly agencies in working collaboratively with each other to address church-wide issues and advance common programs. The committee recommends that the chairs and chief executive officers work directly with the BOP to coordinate their respective mandates and resources to achieve better outcomes and to engender effective working relationships with middle governing bodies.

For example, the most recent series of regional benefits consultations included a dialogue for persons involved with committees on ministry and committees on preparation for ministry. Other agencies of the church were invited to participate in the dialogue but were not included in the planning of it. While the Review Committee understands that the BOP has the resources to do things and that what it does is appreciated by the other agencies of the church, cooperation with other agencies should be strengthened in areas of overlapping responsibility and opportunity by working more closely with appropriate partners in the development stages of a project.

B. Promotion of Healthy Life Styles

The Review Committee commends the BOP for recognizing that promotion of healthy lifestyles and prevention measures offer the most potential for reducing medical expenses, and it applauds the education and incentive programs underway and/or under consideration. The Review Committee recommends that the BOP: (a) continue and expand these education and incentive programs, and (b) advocate for the position that the health of pastors is primarily the responsibility of the pastor, the session, and the presbytery and that the BOP is a supporting entity.

C. Medical Plan

The Review Committee recommends that the BOP give considered attention to suggestions it has already received from Plan members for addressing the challenges of rising cost of medical care and insurance.

D. Compensation

The Review Committee found that the BOP is honoring the General Assembly's compensation guidelines and that compensation philosophy and administrative procedures are appropriate. The committee noted that a wide differential in the compensation for some of the top ranking BOP executives, as compared to executives at other General Assembly agencies, exists. These differentials may have a demoralizing effect on staff in other agencies, may create a perception of insensitivity, and may obscure the good work the BOP is doing in other places. The Review Committee recommends that the Board of Directors of the BOP be cognizant of these potential perceptions, while recognizing the importance of attracting and retaining a highly qualified staff.

E. Governance

The Review Committee was advised that the board of the BOP established a new committee, the Board Development and Governance Committee, in February 2005. The committee's charter includes the following responsibilities: work with the GANC to recruit qualified directors, oversee board member education, advise on committee membership and designation of committee chairs, and assess committee and board effectiveness. The Executive Committee of the BOP is responsible, among other things, for management succession planning and long-term strategic planning.

The Review Committee concludes that the BOP has taken a very important step in strengthening board governance. In addition, the committee recommends that the board consider enhanced responsibilities for the Board Development and Governance Committee, which could include reviewing the effectiveness of board committee structure, establishing other board committees, and reviewing committee charters. The board of the BOP may choose to consider whether other responsibilities, such as management succession and long-term strategic planning, which are often part of such a committee's role in other organizations, should be added to the Board Development and Governance Committee's responsibilities.

F. Communications with Constituencies and Program Beneficiaries

The Review Committee noted frustration from BOP staff that key information is not always getting to, or being accessed by, program beneficiaries. The committee also noted that the regional representative program has been redesigned with the intent of improving communications. The committee affirms these efforts and recommends that the BOP look for ways to improve further the effectiveness of communications through the use of technology, educational programs delivered through educational specialists, further development of the role of regional representatives, and through coordination with general presbyters and committees and leadership of middle governing bodies.

G1. Investment Management—Short-Term Planning—Asset Allocation Rebalancing Guidelines

The Review Committee recommends that the Investment Committee of the BOP amend the Investment Manual to include explicit asset allocation rebalancing guidelines and staff authorities to implement rebalancing.

G2. Investment Management—Governance

The Review Committee noted that the infrequency of Investment Committee meetings and telephone conference calls is unusual, although no significant deficiencies are apparent. The committee recommends that the BOP conduct a peer review of investment oversight governance processes and consider adopting approaches that would enhance oversight effectiveness.

G3. Investment Management—Alternative Investments

The BOP generally has a thorough and sound asset allocation methodology for Plan assets. The Review Committee noted, however, that the Investment Committee has been slow to implement allocation of assets to alternative investments as permitted by policy guidelines. In this regard Pension Plan asset allocation is lagging evolving investment practice at other large pension fund managers. The Review Committee recommends that the Investment Committee of the BOP continue to explore over time greater diversification of Plan assets into alternative investments and establish a plan how to accomplish such diversification in a prudential manner.

H. Pension Plan Experience Apportionments

The board of the BOP recently completed a comprehensive long-term Asset/Liability Study. The Review Committee notes that in the past the BOP did not always follow its experience apportionment guidelines. When investment performance was consistently exceptional during the late 1990s, the BOP on several occasions approved experience apportionments that exceeded the guidelines. When market performance deteriorated in the early 2000s, the BOP was forced to make no experience apportionments for two consecutive years and investment reserves temporarily fell below the lower limit. The current board of the BOP is very cognizant of these issues. However, because of term limitations the institutional history and memory could be lost over time.

Accordingly, the Review Committee applauds the decision of the board of the BOP, in determining the annual experience apportionment, to adopt a formal policy, as recommended by the Ad Hoc Committee on Reserve Review, that takes into account both the long-term benefits to pension plan beneficiaries and the long-term risks to the adequacy of reserves of granting an annual experience apportionment and carefully document any decisions to deviate from board adopted policy. The committee recommends that, while administration of this policy need not incur the expense of a comprehensive annual updating of the asset/liability study, such a study should be done every few years, as has been past practice.

I. Diversity in Staffing

The Review Committee notes with concern that, although there is diversity of staffing at the entry level, this has not yet been achieved in the upper level positions. The Review Committee recommends that the BOP find a way to address this disparity.

VI. Referrals

This report of the Review Committee answers the concerns that came to the last General Assembly regarding the need for a review of the medical plan and a comparison with other similar medical plans in other denominations. The BOP has agreed to the recommendations contained in the report. Some of these changes are already underway, and the BOP will report as it accomplishes those that remain to be addressed.

* DC: Defined Contribution Plan
DB: Defined Benefit Plan

+ The Southern Baptist Convention also has an old DB plan which provides benefits to many retirees. Contributions are no longer being made to this program.

++ Prior to 1982--Floor Plan--Contributions and benefits vary by conference.

1982--2006--DC Plan while active, annuitized at retirement--Roughly 11 percent or 12 percent of pay or denomination average.

2007 on--DB primary with DC supplement--will vary by year, expected to be about 9.5 percent of denomination average.

As we compare the pension programs of other denominations, it is important to keep in mind that many of the other plans have an entirely different structure than the Pension Plan of the PCUSA. Many of the other plans are defined contribution plans while the PCUSA has a defined benefit plan. The payment from a defined benefit plan is a monthly pension payable for life. The defined contribution plan provides an individual account which the retiree can distribute in any way that he/she desires. Typically, these accounts are distributed in a single sum at the time of retirement, although some denominations do offer an annuity option to their retirees.

The Pension Plan of the PCUSA has several features that set it apart from the other defined benefit plans. These are the median salary calculation and the experience apportionment. The median salary calculation provided a benefit for lower paid ministers that is based on the median salary for all pastors serving churches. The experience apportionment helps pension payments keep pace with increases in the cost of living.

APPENDIX C—Self-Study Exhibits

Exhibit C1—Financial Soundness of the Pension Plan of the PCUSA

In 2003, Dr. Dan M. McGill, an elder in the Bryn Mawr Presbyterian Church in suburban Philadelphia, prepared a book for the BOP titled: Financial Soundness of the Pension Plan of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). This book is too long to include in this report. A short synopsis is provided below, but many details have been omitted. Copies of Dr. McGill's book may be obtained from the BOP.

This book is divided into several sections. It begins with a short history of BOP's predecessors, beginning with the establishment of the Fund for Pious Uses in 1717.

The second section describes the 'basic design' of the current pension plan, which has three objectives:

- Adequacy of retirement income;
- Protection of retirement income against loss of purchasing power from inflation; and
- Fulfillment of benefit promises.

The Pension Plan has three principal design features. First, the Plan is a defined benefit plan, which means that the Plan promises a definitely determinable benefit to a member upon retirement, which is paid in monthly installments for the member's remaining life span. And, in the event that the member's spouse survives the member, the spouse receives one-half of the determinable benefit for the remainder of his/her life. Other special features are described in the book.

Second, the benefit credited for any particular year is computed in terms of the member's effective salary for that year, or the relevant median effective salary, for that year, whichever is greater. Effective salary includes cash salary plus certain other benefits. Unlike some defined benefit plans, which may base pension benefits on a specified number of years prior to retirement, the Plan's pension benefits are determined using a career average benefit formula over the member's entire period of active service.

Third, again unlike many defined benefit pension plans, the Plan provides for periodic 'experience apportionments'. To the extent that the value of the Plan's assets exceed the value of benefits liabilities, a portion of that excess is returned to Plan members through 'experience apportionments'. This feature of the Plan has proved to be particularly valuable to members during periods of high inflation.

The third section of the book discusses the Pension Plan's funding policy. The plan adopted in 1927 was intended to be a fully funded plan in the sense that it would have enough assets at all times that if the plan should be discontinued for any reason it would be able to pay all accrued benefits in full. The fundamental principle is to provide funding in an amount such that its current value exceeds the present value of all future liabilities (benefits owed to Plan members). The BOP invests these funds with the objective of earning a long-term annualized rate of return of 5 percent above the rate of inflation. In practice the BOP tries to maintain contingency reserves, with a target level of 20 percent and a maximum of 33 percent, to guard against the possibility of a sustained period of poor investment performance. Such an event occurred in the early 2000's and the Plan's liabilities temporarily exceeded the value of its assets (by $110,000 in 2002, or about -2 percent of Plan assets at the time).

In section four, Dr. McGill describes how the BOP determines policies for contingency reserves and experience apportionments through the conduct of asset-liability studies. These studies are done approximately every five years. The most recent one was completed during 2005.

Section five describes the policies the BOP has adopted to invest Plan assets and the manner in which these policies are implemented. The policies specify the types and percentages of different types of eligible investments. Today, detailed procedures governing investment processes are enumerated in the Investment Manual which is approved and maintained by the Board of Directors.

Dr. McGill concludes the book with a critical assessment the BOP's management of contingency reserves and experience apportionment guidelines during the 1990's. Several years of extremely high stock market returns resulted in rapid growth in contingency reserves. This, in turn, led to pressure on the Board to increase experience apportionments above policy guidelines based on thorough actuarial asset-liability studies. However, the stellar market performance was followed by one of the worst periods of sustained decline since the Great Depression and resulted in Plan liabilities temporarily exceeding Plan assets and to three consecutive years when no experience apportionments were granted. Dr. McGill notes that, with the benefit of hindsight, experience apportionments probably should have been less generous during the good market years. While he does not come right out and state that the experience apportionment guidelines should not have been set aside, that conclusion seems to be implicit in his critique.

Exhibit C2—Mission and Primary Focus of the Human Resources Team

Reporting to the President of the Board of Pensions (Exhibit 1), the Human Resources Team of ten employees led by Hy Rudin, Vice President of Human Resources, supports the mission of the Board as a strategic partner by encouraging organization wide partnerships that promote a productive working environment committed to delivering quality service to Members and staff.

The Human Resources Team's primary focus is on the effective management and development of employees. The team deals with the human element in the organization – staff as individuals and groups, their recruitment, selection, organization, compensation, benefits, training, development, performance review, promotion, termination and retirement.

It is the desire of the Board of Pensions to maintain an employee work culture where Christian principles and values are evident and incorporated into its day-to-day dealings with employees and Members. The organization's leadership strives to manage others in a manner that reflects respect, dignity, equity, honesty and integrity, and recognizes the need for balance in spirituality, work and life.

In addition, these guiding principals govern our team's commitment to provide an environment with equal opportunity for learning and personal growth, where creativity and innovation are encouraged.

- Modeling and inspiring the core leadership values of integrity, trust, excellence, teamwork, vision and communication.
- Ensuring the women and men of the Human Resources team are given the tools, training and motivation to operate in the most efficient and effective manner.
- Promoting and recruiting the best-qualified people while recognizing and encouraging the value of diversity in the work place.
- Advocating for fair and equitable treatment of all employees, toward achieving the highest employee morale and productivity;
- Ensuring a diverse workforce in a safe and discrimination/harassment free environment by: maintaining compliance with employment laws and government regulations; providing management and employee training; and developing policies and procedures.
- Inspiring and encouraging a high level of employee morale through recognition, effective communication and delivery of constant feedback;
- Providing a competitive salary and benefit package and developing the full potential of our work force by providing training and development for career enhancement.
- Providing a work atmosphere that is safe, healthy and secure, and also conscious of long-term family and community goals.
- Establishing administering and effectively communicating sound policies, rules and practices that treat employees with dignity and equality while maintaining compliance with employment and labor laws.
- Retaining our valued employees by: assuring effective leadership qualities in our managers; furnishing technical, interpersonal and career development training and coaching; conducting exit interviews and supplying relevant feedback to management and enhancing two-way communication between employees and management.

Exhibit C6—Executive Compensation Guidelines

EXECUTIVE COMPENSATION PHILOSOPHY STATEMENT

The Board of Pensions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) (the “Board”) is the entity responsible for the benefits and assistance programs for PCUSA clergy, lay employees and their families. The Board’s mission is to provide to qualifying members who serve the community of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) pension, healthcare, death and disability benefits as well as financial assistance. The oversight and control of the Board is vested in its Board of Directors (the “Directors”). The Board employs executives and other personnel to accomplish its mission. The Directors have delegated to the Executive Committee the responsibility of determining compensation policy and the administration thereof, and determination of the appropriate compensation for executive personnel, as well as general oversight of the Board’s compensation programs.

This statement presents the philosophy the Board applies to executive compensation. The underlying principles of the Board’s executive compensation program are that executive compensation should support the accomplishment of the Board’s mission and reflect its vision and values as set forth in the Board’s Statement of Mission, Vision and Values (attached). To ensure this, annually the Executive Committee will review the Board’s goals (as reflected in its strategic and business plans), individual executive goals, as well as the measures of achievement of those goals. Accordingly, the Executive Committee reviews all elements of executive compensation and benefits annually, with advice of an independent third party consultant at appropriate intervals.

The Board’s objective is to ensure that executive compensation and benefits are designed and administered to attract and retain people with the skills and talents necessary to accomplish the Board’s mission, and to motivate them to perform to the best of their abilities. The Board is committed to fair and equitable compensation for all Board employees. Executive compensation is linked to individual performance, to achievement of the Board’s annual business plans, (as measured by financial and other measures), to management’s stewardship of the Board and to market practices for comparable organizations and positions. The Board recognizes that assessment of the performance of any individual executive must necessarily include a certain degree of inherently subjective judgment of the comparative contributions of executive personnel to the achievement of the overall goals of the Board (for example, the ability of executives to work together in the interest of the whole organization).

The Board’s compensation program is consistent with Guidelines adopted by the General Assembly Advisory Committee on Compensation in 1999.

The Board’s compensation program is also consistent with the advice of the General Assembly Advisory Committee on Compensation that the agencies and entities of the church view appropriate compensation to be, at a minimum, at the 25th percentile of market survey data of peer groups of employers with comparable positions. The Board recognizes that it recruits senior managers nationally, with special attention to the Philadelphia commercial marketplace (banks, insurance companies, and similar entities). Between 1999 and 2003 the Directors implemented an initiative to correct inequities in the level and design of executive compensation as reflected by the Philadelphia commercial marketplace and peer group surveys. As a result, Board’s compensation level for executives was targeted at the 25th percentile of a market survey of a peer group of employers with comparable positions. The peer group includes other church pension funds, not-for-profit entities, and the commercial marketplace. In the future, the total cash compensation level may approach the 50th percentile of the appropriate peer group survey, as dictated by demands of the marketplace for executive talent.

The Board recognizes the concept of “sense of call” within the church community. That recognition is built into the decision to target a range of the 25th to the 50th percentile, which is strategically lower than the middle of the market, as opposed to some higher percentile. However, the Board will not use either “sense of call,” or the compensation levels in other segments of the church for essentially different positions within different marketplaces, as a reason to deviate from its commitment to fair and equitable executive compensation for Board personnel.

The Board recognizes that most of its employees are recruited from the Philadelphia commercial marketplace, not the Church. The Board also recognizes that compensation for certain executives may from time to time exceed the target percentile due to years of experience, performance or extraordinary market conditions.

The Board’s executive personnel are compensated through a Variable Compensation Plan implemented in accordance with Guidelines for Administration effective at the time compensation is determined. The Variable Compensation Plan reflects the Board’s view that some portion of the total compensation of its executives should be “at risk,” and the portion “at risk” should be determined by the extent to which the performance of the executive position directly impacts success in accomplishing the Board’s mission. Base salaries (the portion of executive compensation not at risk) will be based on competitive market pay levels, individual performance and potential, and changes in duties and responsibilities. The variable component of total cash compensation (the portion of executive compensation at risk) is based on both individual and Board performance components. Thus, variable compensation of executive personnel, except the President-CEO, will be determined by an assessment of individual performance relative to individual goals set at the beginning of the fiscal year, as well as an assessment of overall Board performance of its mission-related goals and annual business plan. The Executive Committee annually determines who participates in the Variable Compensation Plan as well as the factors used to determine the variable component of executive compensation. For executives other than the President-CEO, variable compensation amounts are based on both individual and corporate performance factors. The President-CEO determines the compensation of executives other than himself/herself, subject to the review and approval of the Executive Committee.

The officers of the Board of Directors (Chair and Vice Chairs) recommend to the Executive Committee a percentage to be applied as a corporate factor applicable to all participants except the President-CEO. The recommendation and determination of the corporate factor will be based upon an assessment of the performance of the Board with regard to Business Plan priorities previously identified and weighted. A priority for each year shall be “Corporate Stewardship”. Corporate Stewardship is an assessment of (1) the internal and external factors which have impacted the welfare of the Board of Pensions; and (2) how well management provided for the welfare of the Board both in the context of the organization itself and in the context of its mission for the denomination.

The Executive Committee also annually determines the total compensation of the President-CEO. Because the performance of the President-CEO is so intertwined with the successful performance of the Board’s mission, in determining the “at risk” portion of his/her compensation, it is inappropriate to separate individual performance from Board performance. The officers of the Board of Directors will recommend to the Executive Committee the total compensation of the President-CEO (both the base salary and the portion of total compensation that is at risk). The officers’ recommendation will be based on an assessment of the President-CEO’s performance that includes such subjective factors as whether he/she has the vision and managerial capability to lead the Board’s operations successfully in the future, and his/her leadership ability both as to the Board and the greater church. The Executive Committee will determine the compensation of the President-CEO, in light of the officers’ recommendation.

General Assembly Committee on Review of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation

A. Introduction

The General Assembly Committee on Review (“Committee on Review”) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation (“Foundation” hereafter) is pleased to present the 217th General Assembly (2006) a written review of the Foundation. The Foundation actually encompasses three distinct operating entities: the Foundation itself, New Covenant Trust Company, N. A. (NCTC), and New Covenant Funds (NCF). The Foundation, founded in 1799, serves as the fiduciary corporation for the General Assembly, assists Presbyterians making gifts to support mission, and encourages gifts through estates. The New Covenant Trust Company, N.A., started in 1998, is a federally chartered, limited-purpose bank, which has trust powers and can serve as a corporate trustee in all fifty states. This subsidiary provides investment advisory services and trust services for individuals, churches, endowments, and charitable organizations. New Covenant Funds, an open-ended investment family of mutual funds, was formed in 1999 with moneys from the Foundation’s common trust funds. The NCF invests and manages money and endowments for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and associated organizations, individuals, churches, and other organization with missions related to that of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), which are looking for socially responsible investments.

This review is part of an evaluation process of the agencies related to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), established by the 213th General Assembly (2001). The purpose of the review process is “to evaluate the relationship of their individual [agency] ministry with the mission of the whole Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)” (Minutes, 2001, Part I, p. 67, Standing Rule E.10.—Agency Review [new Standing Rule M.4.a.]). The instructions to the Committee on Review were that the committee must conduct the process according to predetermined standards and present a written report to the next General Assembly (Manual of the General Assembly, pp. 83–84).

The review process is founded on the principle that an agency of the General Assembly shall participate in a self-study review process with a Committee on Review elected by the General Assembly. The Committee on Review, likewise, shall participate with the agency in a study process, the scope of which is limited to helping the assembly and its agency see that the mission of the church is being fulfilled according to certain standards. (See Manual of the General Assembly, pp. 83–84). It is not the intent of the review process to find fault, but rather to evaluate and offer recommendations for improvement.

It is important to note that the scope of the review is also limited by the amount of time and resources allocated for the review process. Initially, the members of the Committee on Review spent three days together to be trained for the task and to meet part of the Foundation’s staff who presented a short briefing and answered questions. The committee also arranged for the Research Services Office to conduct a survey, based upon an outline of information that would be useful in the review process. This survey was sent to congregations, presbyteries, synods, donors, Foundation and other General Assembly agency leaders, beneficiaries, life income recipients, and New Covenant Funds shareholders. Subsequently, the committee returned for four days to conduct staff and board member interviews and to hear the results of the survey (for a summary of the survey findings, please see Appendix C). A conference call was held to finalize the written report, which was then presented to the Foundation. The committee met for two days at the same location as the Foundation’s April 2005, board of directors meeting to discuss the report with the Foundation and to make final editorial revisions. After a final conference call to affirm editorial changes, the committee then submitted the report to the Office of the General Assembly for presentation at the next General Assembly in June 2006.

The following report is the result of the work of the Office of the General Assembly in developing an “Agency Review Manual,” the published Foundation Self-Study, and the work of the Committee on Review [for the Foundation]. Members of the committee possessed skills from all facets of church and society. They were versed in matters related to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) theology, polity, and ethos, as well as investment industry and business and legal communities. The Committee on Review relied on the common bond of the mission of the church and the common desire to be faithful to Jesus Christ to complete its task.

The committee also based the report on interviews with Elinor Hite, chairperson of the Foundation Board, Robert Leech, Foundation president and CEO, Ray Tanner, chair of the New Covenant Trust Company Board, William Precious, president of the New Covenant Trust Company (NCTC), John Detterick, the General Assembly Council Executive Director, and other staff and board members (see Appendix A for a list of persons interviewed in person or by telephone), as well as the results from the survey. The committee is grateful to the Foundation, NCTC, and NCF staff and board members, and the Office of the General Assembly for their helpfulness and cooperation in this process.

The Committee on Review organized its evaluation around three foci: church relatedness, policies and practices, and program effectiveness, each of which will be discussed in this report.

B. Staff Commitment to the Mission of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)

The committee found that all Foundation staff and board members have strong sense of call to the mission of Jesus Christ and his Church. They clearly understand that the church and the people in the pews are their clients. They work hard to serve them, whether their gifts or investments are large or small. Their services are invaluable to our numerous smaller congregations. The staff and board members are well qualified to work in the fiduciary arena, whether for the church or in secular business. Their communication with the General Assembly Council, Office of the General Assembly, Publishing Corporation, Presbyterian Investment and Loan Program, Inc., and the Board of Pensions continues to improve for the good of all.

The Foundation, NCTC, and NCF do not consider the Mission Responsibility Through Investing (MRTI) policy approved by the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to be an obstacle to their ability to produce a good return for the moneys invested. The committee also believes that the Foundation's commitment to the MRTI principles regarding investments in individual stocks is important from a policy point of view and should not be abandoned. The Committee on Review wishes to affirm the confidence of the Foundation in the MRTI policy and believes that many donors and investors will be attracted by such socially responsible policies.

Further, the development officers strive to create a larger pool of donors and investors, with the hope that other church organizations will share potential donors with them. The Foundation is currently recruiting more development officers with financial backgrounds who are committed Christians. The staff has also developed a good spending formula that enables all institutional beneficiaries to have a more predictable income each year. Regulatory agencies, such as the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency, the Securities and Exchange Commission, and the Internal Revenue Service, consistently find the Foundation, NCTC, and NCF in compliance with their many rules and regulations.

Members of the senior staffs of the Foundation, NCTC, and NCF are very effective in developing an excellent team of workers who are productive and appreciate the positive, family-friendly work environment. The organizations are cutting edge in areas such as their information support system and are working towards more user-friendly websites that would allow investors and donors to use credit cards. They realize that their church connection is not enough; they must be competitive with other investment products to attract more investors. They continue to evaluate their investment philosophy with the desire to improve the returns on their socially responsible investments.

C. Development Function of the Foundation

The development vision expressed by the senior staff of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation is clear. From the Strategic Plan (Appendix E of the Foundation Self-Study document, p. 75, reprinted as Appendix B of this report):

It is the goal of the Presbyterian Foundation to make 90 million dollars available annually for mission funding by the end of 2009. We believe that Presbyterians will continue to respond to mission needs at every level of the Church. Our task is to be faithful to our calling by making these needs known and presenting to Presbyterians a variety of opportunities to respond. In sum, our responsibility is to sow that seed. God will give the increase.

To put this goal in perspective, it is instructive to note that one of the findings of the Committee on Review, in conversations with both Foundation staff and staff of the General Assembly Council, was that there was shared concern about the funds available both to underwrite the development function of the Foundation and to support the mission initiatives of the GAC in response to decisions of the General Assembly. (The 2005 GAC mission budget includes about $17 million in distributions for restricted and unrestricted mission from income on funds held by the Foundation. The figure for the 2006 budget is about $16.3 million.) If one tracks distributions for mission since 1999, they were:

1999	$86.1 million;
2000	$79.8 million;
2001	$72.7 million;
2002	$78.2 million;
2003	$69.1 million;
2004	$75.0 million.

During the same period, new gifts to the permanent funds and life-income plans were flat after a decline from 1999 results:

1999	$43.5 million;
2000	$34.5 million;
2001	$35.1 million;
2002	$29.9 million;
2003	$30.4 million;
2004	$32.0 million.

(Source: Presbyterian Foundation Self Study, p. 17)

There is no way to track gifts given directly or through other intermediaries to local churches or other beneficiaries as a result of the encouragement to give that is a primary focus of the development staff of the Foundation.

While the section of this report that deals with investment strategy and performance focuses primarily on the effectiveness of that strategy, note is made of the fact that assets under management have decreased. Part of the reason for that was the major downturn in the market that affected virtually every investor, including large institutional investors. However, results of the survey conducted for the Committee on Review by the Research Services Department of the General Assembly Council (GAC) indicated that there was some dissatisfaction with both the costs to investors for management and the performance of investments held for churches and other investors.

While improving performance is one way of responding to investors, it has also been noted that few potential investors understand the range of services the Foundation offers. To some extent, this has resulted in an image problem. However, survey results suggest generally positive responses to the Foundation itself. Members of the Committee on Review applaud and encourage the Foundation efforts to improve and enhance its marketing and development efforts.

On the other hand, the Committee on Review heard from several of the Foundation's officers that the General Assembly's consideration of a policy to selectively divest church funds from those companies whose business in Israel is found to be directly or indirectly causing harm or suffering to innocent people, Palestinian or Israeli, may adversely affect the Foundation's ability to attract new funds and to manage existing funds effectively. The committee viewed those concerns with understanding and hopes that the General Assembly Council and the General Assembly will reconsider implementation of the decision of the 216th General Assembly (2004) in light of its potential impact on the Foundation.

The goal for the development function to help the Foundation meet its mission support goal is to attract additional gifts to the church and additional clients for the services of the Foundation. The Foundation essentially has three different avenues of service for the denomination and potential clients.

- Encourage additional giving (often by individuals). This service is often associated by people across the church primarily with the Wills Emphasis approach. However, this is a time in which it is important to encourage a whole new generation of givers (those identified as Boomers) to consider the church. The Committee on Review is encouraged that there is a joint GAC-Foundation task force looking at creating a unified, full-spectrum approach to seeking support for the mission of the church. However, it remains to be seen what will come of that effort. Identification of a few highly marketable foci in mission should be considered in this effort. Meanwhile this is a main focus of the development staff. Each field officer has goals for new gifts (for 2005, that goal is 2.2 million dollars, for 2009, 5 million dollars). If the 2009 goal is met, that will mean 125 million new dollars for mission support across the church in 2009. It should be noted that this is an ambitious goal, given the reality that in the past the new gifts to the Foundation have actually been flat in recent years after declining from a high of $43.5 million in 1999. The development staff is working with churches in the Presbytery of Charlotte on a pilot project related to this goal.

- Encourage organizations and individual church members to invest assets through the Foundation. Increasing assets under management provides the revenue that the Foundation needs to support its work for the church. If the investment strategy is effective, that leads to benefits for the mission of those organizations or, in the case of individuals, provides financial security to them and, in the longer term, allows them to be increasingly generous in the support of causes in which they believe.

- Encourage individual church members to become clients of the trust services provided through the New Covenant Trust Company (NCTC). A partnership with the Presbyterian Homes of Florida to provide services on-site for residents has resulted in new relationships. Bill Precious, as an experienced trust banker, is able to provide assistance to those residents.

Almost inevitably, some or many of those clients will also consider investment through the Foundation and additional gifts to the church through the Foundation. The results will only build slowly, but success in the early projects will allow the addition of additional trust officers. The committee has reached the conclusion that the trust company was a good extension of the work of the Foundation.

The development function of the Foundation has undergone significant change in the last two and a half years. A number of field offices have been closed and the field staff has been redeployed. Some development officers are no longer with the Foundation. The development staff went from a high of thirty-eight regional representatives to a low of fifteen in 2003, but will soon be at its new design size of twenty-nine representatives, including four regional vice-presidents.

Mark Klemm, senior vice president for development, acknowledged in an interview that it remains to be seen whether the deployed staff will be able to meet the goals for their development work. Robert Leech has reported to this committee that, in many ways, the current strategy is an experiment. It will take three to five years to determine whether it works effectively. Field staff who were interviewed were also cautiously optimistic about reaching the goals that have been set for their work. Some concern was expressed by the field staff that the goal for securing new gifts applies uniformly to field staff, despite different demographics in the different regions. In terms of accountability, the goal for new gifts is only one of several parameters.

D. Investment Policy and Effectiveness

During the meeting of the Committee on Review with the Foundation's senior officers, its members were repeatedly advised that to more effectively accomplish its mission, the Foundation would require additional funds. This results from the fact that approximately 90 percent of the operating budget of the Foundation and its subsidiary corporations is generated from fees on funds under management, including the permanent funds of the church. Indeed, as demonstrated by Table 1, funds under management (by New Covenant Funds) at the Foundation have declined from $1.929 billion in 1999 to $1.856 billion in 2004. A major cause for the decline (reflected in the low in 2003) was the significant decline in the stock market in 2000–2002. In addition, assets under management decrease automatically because of the mandated spending formula for the support of the mission of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). Such payments have averaged $75 million per year for the last six years. However, the fact remains that the total of funds under management is currently below the 1999 level.

The committee believes that prudent but immediate steps should be taken to increase the funds under management by the Foundation. It is fundamental that growth in the Foundation's assets will be achieved either by enhanced development efforts or by improvement in investment performance, or both. In this section of its report, the committee comments on the Foundation's investment performance. Recommendations follow in the next section.

The Foundation's investment performance is portrayed in Tables 2 and 3. During the most recent six years (the study by the Committee on Review was limited to 1999–2004), the Growth Fund (Table 2) exceeded the benchmark by modest percentages in four years. The investment performance in recent years generally fits the investment strategy of the Foundation, while perhaps not meeting the expectations of all investors.

The committee noted with approval the Foundation's entry into the field of alternative investments (i.e. hedge funds, REITS) as a means of softening the effects of market volatility.

Based upon interviews with Foundation officers, members of the Committee on Review have been persuaded that many potential investors, even those deeply committed to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), will invest significant new funds with the Foundation, either individually or corporately, if they can have reasonable expectations of highly competitive returns. Though many Presbyterians will continue to make investments out of loyalty to the church and because of the longevity and good works of the Foundation, additional investors will be attracted by more favorable rates of return. This appears especially to be true of large churches, which are more likely to have members with significant experience in investing.

Ironically, the Foundation finds itself at a moment in history when it is more important than ever to persuade investors to consider the Foundation as a safe and profitable haven for their assets. As the Foundation's president noted in an early presentation to the committee, the next twenty-five years will see an enormous transfer of wealth from one generation to the next. It is imperative then for the Foundation to be poised to take advantage of that transfer.

The Committee on Review noted with concern the relatively high costs associated with investments in both the Growth and Income Funds as compared with investing through index funds (a fairly common investment strategy). Of course, the comparison may not be entirely fair because the Foundation must employ development officers while index funds do not. Nevertheless, the fee differentials are substantial and potentially challenging to the Foundation's success.

Finally, the Committee on Review noted that the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has two distinct entities, the Foundation and the Board of Pensions, which safeguard its long-term financial interests. Although the specific investment objectives of these two entities may differ, the committee believes it would be both beneficial and appropriate for representatives of the Foundation to meet with persons with similar responsibilities from the Board of Pensions in order to compare notes on investment strategies and returns.

E. Tension of Expectations

The Committee on Review identified a concern that the General Assembly has created a tension among competing expectations. Simply put, the General Assembly needs additional gifts, including permanent funds, to support the mission of the whole church. It has effectively required the Foundation to assume the cost of the development function, without examining the effect on its investment performance.

Clearly, the General Assembly Council and the Foundation are committed to enhancing the mission of the church in obedience to Jesus Christ. The General Assembly Council would like to have more funds available from the work of the Foundation for its broad mission. The Foundation is committed to encouraging members of the church to make gifts that will fund the current and future mission of the church and to use the various investment opportunities of the Foundation as well.

The Foundation needs operating income for all of its work, including the development work led by the senior vice president for development, other development staff in the Foundation offices, four regional vice presidents, and the development officers in the field.

As the Foundation does not seek gifts for itself, the primary source of funds to support the Foundation's work is fees charged for managing the permanent funds of the church and other institutions within the church and for managing investments for institutions and individuals (New Covenant Funds). These fees make a direct comparison with a number of investment managers in the broader market somewhat unattractive, depending on the various fee practices. The Committee on Review is convinced, however, as is the Foundation, that many donors and investors do not choose to give or invest through the Foundation simply because of an expectation of the highest return on investments. They invest or give because they are committed to the ministry of the church and because they trust the Foundation to have appropriate investment practices, in light of the goals of the church. They also give directly to their churches and other institutions as a result of the stewardship focus of the Foundation.

Still, partially as a result of the expectations fueled by the rapid rise of the stock market until the slowdown mentioned earlier, and perhaps because of the new generation of church members who expect higher rates of return on investments, more potential gifts and investments would flow to the Foundation if the costs of development were not paid out of investment management fees. There is a joint General Assembly Council and Foundation task force working on this tension of expectations. There is a mission funding effort of the General Assembly, Joining Hearts and Hands, to raise new dollars for world mission and church development. However, the Committee on Review believes that the General Assembly should re-examine the effect on the work of the Foundation of this tension of expectations.

F. Recommendations to the Foundation and the General Assembly Council

The committee was impressed by the quality, commitment, and enthusiasm of the Foundation's senior managers and its board members. All expressed an understanding that the work of the Foundation is to be a good steward of the resources of the church and to encourage potential donors and investors to support the mission of the church. Additional gifts and investments will help make the ambitious goals for development of new gifts a reality. The $75 million in the current Foundation budget that supports the work of the church is very important to the work of the whole church. The commitment of the Foundation to increase that to $90 million for mission funding by 2009 is to be commended.

The committee also believes that the next few months will be an ideal interval for the trustees and officers of the Foundation to commit to a systematic, sustained effort to improve the Foundation's development, marketing, and investment results. Towards that goal, we therefore respectfully offer the following recommendations:

1. It is important that the Foundation track progress of the development effort on a monthly or quarterly basis and provide appropriate training and ongoing support for the field staff. The goals and objectives by which the work of the field staff is measured should be refined in light of experience on a regular basis.

2. Development officers should be encouraged to meet with presbytery and synod leaders and make appearances at meetings of presbyteries and other functions as time and funding allows. The committee believes that such a commitment will lead to the building of trust and will result in more opportunities to build relationships with those who might want to use the services of the Foundation.

3. It is important that the Foundation, in its current search for a senior vice president for marketing, find a person who will inspire and lead the marketing staff to provide fresh and effective materials, including regular updates to support the development staff and the New Covenant Trust Company. One of the values of the Foundation that appeals to those who make gifts or invest money with the Foundation is the Mission Responsibility Through Investment or Socially Responsible Investment commitment. The marketing materials of the Foundation, far from downplaying this commitment (despite the divestment controversy), should make it clear that MRTI is one of the distinctive commitments that separates the Foundation from standard investment firms.

4. It would be helpful for the Foundation to consider appropriate strategies by which to reward excellent performance by members of the development staff (e.g. merit raises, other benefits, as funds become available), although it is clear that the development staff, along with the senior staff with whom the committee talked, are with the Foundation because they believe in the church, the Foundation, and the values that underlie the work of the Foundation.

5. While this report does not directly address the General Assembly Council (GAC), it appears that it would be helpful to the joint GAC-Foundation task force and its goals if the GAC were able to identify four or five foci for mission that would be highly marketable to givers. The committee believes that the GAC will report progress on this project to the 217th General Assembly (2006).

6. Trustees and officers must commit to improved long-term investment performance, to wit: consistently meeting or exceeding the Foundation's selected benchmarks. In addition, the Foundation's leaders should commit to a goal of having the Foundation be a leader among socially responsible funds in terms of investment return every year from 2005 onward.

7. The Foundation should consider the use of a consultant to help evaluate its investment strategy, particularly the blend of investment styles used in both the Income and Growth Funds.

8. The Foundation's leaders, taking note that the leader of the Foundation's investment function will retire in the near future, should establish the qualifications and experience that will be required in a successor, conduct a broad search for a successor, and have a new chief investment officer in place by the time of his retirement.

9. Representatives of the Foundation should meet periodically with persons with similar responsibilities from the Board of Pensions in order to compare notes on investment strategies and returns. Although the specific investment objectives of these two entities may differ, the committee believes such meetings would be both beneficial and appropriate.

G. Concluding Comments

The following persons were elected by commissioners of the 216th General Assembly (2004) to serve as the General Assembly Committee on Review: the Reverend Linda "Kitch" Shatzer, chair; the Reverend Margie Boyd; the Reverend Zane Buxton; Rebecca Cavallucci; Brian Child; the Reverend Isaiah Jones; Joseph Kinard; the Reverend Michael Lindvall; Richard Lohrer; James Moore; the Reverend Paul Gregory Neel; and Martin Shell, in accordance with Standing Rule E.10. (2006 Standing Rule M.4.a.). Shell resigned from the committee due to scheduling conflicts. The members of the committee are grateful to all of the staff of the Foundation, NCTC, and NCF for their willingness to answer all the questions asked and to provide all the materials that were requested. Their cooperation enabled the committee to perform its work in an efficient manner.

The committee's task would have been impossible without the excellent support of the Office of the General Assembly, particularly the Reverend Gradye Parsons, Kay Moore, and Bobbie Montgomery, and the help of Perry Chang of the Research Office of the GAC.

Strategic Plan
 Presbyterian Foundation

Introduction

Like all organizations, the Presbyterian Foundation operates in a context of rapid change—change in the church, change in the cultural setting in which the church does its mission, change in the regulatory environment, and changes in the economy. The internal environment of the Foundation has also changed. There are new members of the board, new leadership in senior management positions, a restructuring of functions, etc. In the view of the board, this is a propitious time to look at what is going on, where it is we want to go and why.

Our recently adopted mission statement is: “A vital part of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), the Foundation, attracts, cultivates and manages financial resources of individuals and institutions to serve Christ’s mission.”

This mission is built on several core values:

- We are fundamentally a ministry. Our purpose is to serve the church by nurturing the stewardship of accumulated resources.
- Created by the General Assembly in 1799, we continue to work in partnership with the church at every level and with individual Presbyterians.
- Our uniqueness is a two-century long record of honoring the donor’s wishes in regard to her/his gifts to churches, institutions, and missions.
- We operate on prudent business principles—wise counseling and a variety of financial instruments that best suit the donor’s situation and the ministry the donor wishes to support.

Summary

The planning team’s major conclusion is as follows: we are not confused about our mission. It is to provide funds for the mission of Christ’s Church. This plan anticipates increasing funds for mission from $75 million in 2004 to $90 million in 2009. Our concerns are how to grow assets under management to a level sufficient to make that happen and how to pay for that effort. Traditionally, 90 percent of our budget comes from fees on funds under management. The decline in the stock market that began in early 2000 has markedly decreased that source of revenue. Additionally, the General Assembly found it necessary to substantially reduce its support to the Foundation. Reluctantly we have concluded that the gap left by these changes in funding sources cannot be filled by proceeds from the Foundation’s own permanent fund or gifts from trustees and other individuals. This budget problem is exacerbated by a decade long widening gap between the revenues produced by the development function (fees for funds under management) and the staffing template for that function. Our options included abandoning funds development altogether and retreating to simply managing gifts in hand and other gifts that might come our way, or to become very intentional about growing the magnitude of funds under management. We chose the latter option because the mission needs of the Church have never been greater. And, these needs present themselves at a time when opportunities for the kind of ministry we represent are compelling.

Hopes for the Future

The Presbyterian Foundation is the largest religious Foundation of its type in the country. It has an enviable and deserved image for integrity and performance. Providentially, the early years of the 21st century are a time when there will be an enormous transfer of wealth, which is estimated to peak in 2015 at around $300 billion. Statistical models suggest that a sizable amount of those resources belong to Presbyterians. Experience suggests, however, that the momentum for charitable giving, both current and deferred, has substantially diminished (in both church and society). The church is not “top of the mind” for estate planning or permanent current gifts for Presbyterians. We believe this is caused by a lack of awareness of the needs of the church and a lack of understanding about the competency of the church’s Foundation to provide high quality charitable gift planning services. We intend to address this lack of awareness and understanding head-on. For starters, we think we need to do a much better job of telling our story. We have a long history and an impeccable reputation. Our “niche,” to use a business term, is Presbyterians with a passion for the church and its mission and a willingness to consider a gift to the church. We get competitive results and we do so following principles of socially responsible investing as defined by our denomination. We have the ability to understand clearly a donor’s interest and work with the donor to design a program that meets that need. Our product variety allows us to meet the needs of individual donors within cost-effective parameters whether the gift is large or small, deferred or current. Financial consulting on a variety of trust services and products is available for those whose interests and financial situation make the Trust Company a good fit.

As we move into the future, we intend to tell our story with an unapologetic use of biblical metaphor and theological language. That language is true to who we are and what we do. We are a vehicle for a particular kind of stewardship. Our goal is to strengthen the work of Christ's Church that God may be glorified. While this is hard work, it is straightforward and unencumbered with ambiguity.

Specific Goals, Initiatives, and Programs

In all cases, except where noted, the assumption is that execution is the responsibility of the staff in consultation with the appropriate committee of the board.

Strengthening Partnerships

A core value of the Foundation has been and remains working in leadership and partnership with the whole church to fund its mission. The Foundation is committed to strengthening its partnerships with PC(USA) congregations, presbyteries, synods, the General Assembly, seminaries, colleges and universities, retirement communities, and other agencies of the church in order to support their mission by developing gifts and managing funds on their behalf.

The General Assembly of 1799 separated the trustee function from the commissioner function. The board of trustees accepts its responsibility for the policy and operation of the Foundation. We share with the whole church a common vision for undergirding the work of the church, and we are committed to initiating serious discussions with the church, beginning with the General Assembly Council, on the strategy we have adopted and the rationale behind it.

To this end, the Foundation intends the following:

- Take a leadership role with the General Assembly Council to create a broad strategy on funds development and stewardship education across the whole church and identify the unique position and role of the Foundation in carrying out that strategy, including how its role will be funded.
 - Implementation plan: a committee of GAC staff and Foundation staff and board has been formed and the first meeting held. The issue under discussion is the Foundation's role in development and stewardship education for the entire denomination. In the meantime, there are opportunities to clarify existing roles. The next meeting is scheduled for March. Elinor Hite, Richard Ray, Merle Arnold, and Bob Leech will represent the Foundation.
- Strengthen existing relationships with partners, ensure that they consider the Foundation essential to the fulfillment of their mission, and enhance the Foundation's visibility and presence throughout the church. Consider assigning a senior staff person and board representatives to a "strengthening partnerships" initiative, undertaken in conjunction with an advisory team of key partner representatives.
 - Implementation plan: Elinor Hite is presently leading the Advisory Leadership Team in gathering information.
- With its partners, identify ways in which the Foundation can develop and manage funds on their behalf, possibly undertaking a pilot project with one or more strategic partners to test new models for funds development consistent with the Foundation's and its partners' missions and goals.
 - Implementation plan: Mark Klemm is presently in discussions with a target group of presbytery executives. The plan is to be underway by the end of Q1 04. Synod executives will be kept informed.

Marketing

- Create a consistent "story line" on the Foundation. It should be designed to "connect" to those Presbyterians with a passion for God's work. The Foundation can assist Presbyterians in living out that passion.
 - Implementation plan: Stewardship committee (Martha Farmer, chair) will meet quarterly. Completion date is end of Q2 04.
- Create a separate strategy for charitable gifts, investment management and trust services.
 - Implementation plan: NCTC: Bill Precious/Bob Leech by end of Q2 04 NCF: Plan underway—Bob Leech by end of Q1 04 Foundation: see above assignment on "story line."
- Evaluate all possible and appropriate means of access to Presbyterians who should be made aware of the opportunity of giving to the church's mission through the Foundation. The Foundation is largely unknown by 60 percent of individual Presbyterians.
 - Implementation plan: The process of identifying prospects and clarifying performance objectives for development officers became effective January 1, 2004.
 - Next steps: Segment the list, make assignments and track contacts. Results to be reviewed quarterly at the Advisory Leadership Team meetings.—Mark Klemm,

Operations

- Create a cost effective strategy for cultivating and a system for tracking small gifts. Conventional wisdom suggests that there is a point where the cost of servicing an account exceeds the revenue the gift provides for mission. Guidance on this matter should be developed. In some cases, small gifts may portend larger ones. By the same token, sound management requires that transaction costs not eat into mission funding.
 - Implementation plan: A staff committee is presently reviewing recommendations and expects to report by the end of Q4 04—Greg Rousos.
- Create a donor-friendly and donor-accessible system for tracking financial results and uses of specific gifts. The system should allow donors to add to and/or make new gifts.
 - Implementation plan: Postponed until Q1 05 when funding becomes available—Greg Rousos.

Human Resources

- Task the CEO with responsibility of developing a succession plan for all key positions.
 - Implementation plan: Underway and continuing—Elinor Hite, Bob Leech.
- Evaluate periodically the effectiveness of the redesigned development function.
 - Implementation plan: The goal is 2 million dollars per year per development officer. Mark Klemm will review at the Advisory Leadership Team quarterly meetings.
- Ask the Advisory Leadership Team to name a task force composed of former trustees to explore a wider utilization of former trustees.
 - Implementation plan: Steve Martin—by the end of Q2 04.
- The Foundation intentionally addresses a broad range of diversity and inclusion issues in its work. These include board membership, staff and contractor representation and relationships with current and potential clients.
 - Implementation plan: to be continually monitored—Bob Leech.
- Task the Advisory Leadership Team and the Membership Committee to review the board nomination process and to consider a systematic board self-evaluation process.
 - Implementation plan: Richard Ray and Steve Martin—by end of Q4 04.

Finance: Policy

- Ask the Finance Committee to set a policy on reserves for the operation of the Foundation. The policy should include cash on hand, the revenue stabilization fund (principal and interest expendable) and the permanent fund of the Foundation.
 - Implementation plan: a draft plan to be reviewed at the March 25-27 meeting of the Finance Committee—Greg Rousos.
- Build capital of the Trust Company as required by the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency.
 - Implementation plan: Ray Tanner, chair of the Trust Company board.
- Set expectations for gifts from trustees as part of the recruitment process.
 - Implementation plan: Richard Ray, chair of the Membership Committee.

Investments

The Foundation's Board of Trustees, through the Investment Committee, has the fiduciary responsibility over the investment of all of the Foundation's assets. However, it intends to hire the New Covenant Trust Company and specifically the New Covenant Investment Committee to manage the day-to-day investment activity and report back to the Foundation trustees.

- The Foundation Investment Committee's role will be redefined. The Foundation Investment Committee, in conjunction with the NCTC, will define the new relationship so that responsibilities are clear and understandable.
- The Investment Committee will develop a process that creates continuity of thought in the investment process. The process will consider continuity in the context of board and staff turnover.
- The Investment Committee will develop an investment philosophy statement that reflects the specific requirements of the permanent fund. Part of this process will include a thorough examination of investments of a diverse nature including asset classes not currently part of the permanent fund investments. The committee will work with development staff to understand competitive issues involved in capturing new permanent funds. Those issues will be considered when developing the permanent fund philosophy.
 - Implementation plan: Fort Flowers, chair Foundation Investment Committee. Richard Seiwel, chair, New Covenant Trust Company Investment Committee.

New Covenant Trust Company

The NCTC will present to the Foundation trustees the NCTC five-year business plan. The plan should be a comprehensive explanation of the strategies in place or to be implemented that will accomplish the NCTC goals. This plan should address but not be limited to:

- Demonstrating the importance of New Covenant Trust Company's success to the success of the Foundation's mission.
- Discuss the marketing strategy and how that strategy will be coordinated with and a complement to the Foundation's marketing efforts.
- Discuss the capital requirements of the NCTC. Explain NCTC's plan to meet and/or exceed the current and future capital requirements of government regulators and the capital requirements of NCTC clients and potential clients.
- Provide a vision as to how NCTC will relate to the Foundation concerning Foundation investment functions.
- Demonstrate in the plan the profitability of NCTC in each of the five years 2004 – 2009.
- Articulate the strategic and marketing plans for New Covenant Funds.
 - Implementation plan: Bill Precious by end of Q3 04.

Conclusion

It is the goal of the Presbyterian Foundation to make 90 million dollars available annually for mission funding by the end of 2009. We believe that Presbyterians will continue to respond to mission needs at every level of the church. Our task is to be faithful to our calling by making these needs known and presenting to Presbyterians a variety of opportunities to respond. In sum, our responsibility is to sow that seed. God will give the increase.

Appendix I

Background

Presbyterianism in the United States of America did not arrive as a “denomination.” Groups of Calvinists from all over Europe settled in the colonies primarily for purposes of religious freedom. It was their zeal for mission that drove the need for structure and organization. The Presbyterian Foundation was the first entity established for that precise purpose. It was created by the General Assembly of 1799 with these words, “in as much as the General Assembly is assiduously laboring to promote the gospel throughout our extensive and growing frontiers, and in those places most destitute of the means of grace, it be earnestly enjoined on each presbytery to use their most diligent endeavors to collect voluntary and liberal contributions from every congregation, and to obtain pious donations and bequests in order to supply the funds which are absolutely necessary to carry on with advantage the great charitable work” (The General Assembly, Report on State of Religion, 1799).

Then, as now, the Foundation does not raise money for purposes of its own. It does not seek nor possess undesignated funds from which to make grants to applicants.

Local churches and institutions raise money annually for operating expenses and occasionally for capital causes. The Foundation’s role is to serve the whole church by encouraging current and deferred gifts that express the donor’s particular sense of mission. This requires that the Foundation offer wise counsel and a wide variety of financial instruments, which can be tailored to the needs of particular donors. These instruments in turn create competitive returns and are managed for competitive fees. Fee income is used to finance the work of the Foundation. Neither the board nor the staff of the Foundation understands themselves to be in a business for the sake of business results. We understand ourselves to be a ministry of the church that operates on prudent business principles while seeking to undergird the work of mission. Inevitably the interests of particular donors and the economic and regulatory environments change over time. In response, products and services are added or eliminated, and the structure and staffing templates of the Foundation are revised as sound stewardship requires. But the purpose of the Foundation is the same as it was in 1799.

We find no solace in naiveté. We monitor the markets, the results of other organizations who provide fund management services, the demographics and all the other tools available to managers and policy makers. But let it be clear, the decisions we make are driven by our vision of what we are called to do. We are confident that if we honor the vision that is given to us, God will continue to bless us in this work.

Themes from the Past

The history of the Foundation has been thoroughly recorded and cogently described by R. Douglas Breckenridge in The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation, A Bicentennial History 1799–1999. For purposes of planning several themes should be noted:

- A passive role: For most of its history, the Foundation’s function was to accept gifts to the General Assembly and its agencies, largely permanent funds, invest them and account for them. It was primarily a passive role. While the Foundation kept its separate identity as the sole incorporated body of the denomination, its funding was provided by the General Assembly.
- Advocacy role: During the 1950s, J. Howard Pew, one of the most successful and widely known Presbyterian laypersons of his time, chaired the board of trustees. He interpreted his responsibilities to include strong advocacy for stewardship throughout the church. Annually, he encouraged commissioners to the General Assembly to remember the church in their wills. He often spoke to congregations urging Presbyterians to create charitable life income plans to support the ongoing mission of the church. This advocacy role shifted the focus of the Foundation. With proceeds from a gift Pew made, the Foundation recruited development officers whose charge was to cultivate ministries of stewardship and to attract gifts. Appropriately, the expertise to consult on and manage a larger variety of financial vehicles was acquired. Many of the gifts were directed to local churches, middle governing body ministries, and validated ministries in addition to agencies of the General Assembly. In this era, stewardship began to take on meaning beyond the annual campaign and the capital campaign. Under Pew’s leadership, the Foundation became the spokesperson for the stewardship of accumulated resources.

The era of the 70s and 80s was marked by mergers and reunions. When the dust settled, the Foundation entered the 21st century stronger than ever. At the end of 1999 it had $1.9 billion under management on behalf of the church. That same year it distributed $86 million to the causes designated by the donors. Of this amount 16.1 percent went to local churches, 54.4 percent to General Assembly agencies, 2.8 percent to synod and presbytery ministries, 6.9 percent to seminaries, homes, and schools, 19.8 percent to validated mission. That same year, the Foundation had thirty-five full-time development officers in the field at an average cost of $145 thousand per year per officer.

- A changing role: In 1998 the New Covenant Trust Company was created and in 1999 the New Covenant family of mutual funds was added. The logic behind these decisions was product diversity to meet changing donor needs, and regulatory oversight by the Office of Comptroller of the Currency and the Securities and Exchange Commission. The transparency and resultant assurances that come from that oversight was and is viewed as a major asset. Additionally, adding the Trust Company made it possible to offer services to donors in all fifty states without having the transaction costs associated with compliance in fifty different states. Nonetheless, the creation of these entities required an initial investment of $968 thousand. Expenses were high and increasing immediately prior to a dramatic decline in the stock market and a consequent decline in fee income to the Foundation. This problem became apparent and pressing in the first quarter of 2001. Additionally, the General Assembly, feeling financial pressures of its own, reduced its support of the Foundation from a high of $500 thousand in 1991 to $87 thousand per year from 1996 forward. The Foundation has its own permanent fund accumulated by gifts, primarily from former and current board members whose desire is to support the ministry of the Foundation. Proceeds from this fund were, and remain, inadequate to cover operating costs. Raising management fees diverts funds needed for mission. Clearly, the only option is to build the base of assets under management while holding down operating costs. That is the plan articulated in this document.

Presbyterian Foundation Program Evaluation

Highlights

During the fall of 2004, Research Services contributed to a review of the Presbyterian Foundation’s church relations, policies, and effectiveness by surveying Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) congregations; presbyteries and synods; Foundation and other General Assembly (GA) agency leaders; New Covenant Funds (NCF) shareholders; and Foundation donors, beneficiaries, and life income recipients. Response rates ranged from 72 percent for Foundation and other GA agency leaders to 33 percent for congregations and NCF shareholders.

- Most PC(USA) congregations surveyed (85 percent) had assets, but only half (50 percent) had endowments.

- Five in six presbyteries and synods with assets (84 percent)—but only two in five congregations with assets (39 percent)—had any assets that the Foundation or New Covenant Funds manages.

- Three in five presbyteries and synods (60 percent)—but only one in six congregations (15 percent)—had received gifts made through the Foundation.
- Larger proportions of large congregations with 250 to 999 members (25 percent) and megachurches with 1,000 or more members (20 percent) than of small congregations with fewer than 100 members (8 percent) and medium-sized congregations with 100 to 249 members (14 percent) had received gifts through the Foundation.
- Larger proportions of large congregations with assets (48 percent) than of small congregations with assets (25 percent), medium-sized congregations with assets (38 percent), and megachurches with assets (36 percent) had assets that the Foundation or New Covenant Funds manages.
- Nearly all presbyteries and synods (96 percent)—but only two-thirds of congregations (68 percent)—indicated that they were very familiar, familiar, or somewhat familiar with the Foundation.
- Three in five megachurches (62 percent) and large congregations (57 percent) indicated that they believed that the Foundation is very effective, effective, or somewhat effective in serving congregations of their respective sizes. A third of congregations with 249 or fewer members (34 percent) believed that the Foundation is effective in serving congregations of their size.
- Majorities of presbyteries and synods believed that the Foundation is very effective, effective, or somewhat effective in serving presbyteries or synods with existing endowments (67 percent) and those with investment needs (60 percent). Smaller proportions of presbyteries and synods believed that the Foundation is effective in serving presbyteries without existing endowments and with and without charitable giving programs.
- More than half of congregations identified as among the Foundation’s strengths it’s a Presbyterian organization (56 percent), its reputation (54 percent), and it supports the mission of the church (51 percent). More than half of presbyteries and synods (54 percent) also selected it’s been around for a long time. Foundation and other GA agency leaders tapped as additional Foundation key strengths the Foundation’s integrity, honesty, and ethics and its expertise in charitable giving.
- Congregations that used the Foundation or New Covenant Funds to manage their assets identified the Foundation’s support for the PC(USA)’s mission and the security of their Foundation investments as reasons why they used the Foundation and NCF. Congregations with assets that did not use the Foundation or NCF to manage those assets identified their relationships with individual bankers or brokers as a primary reason for not using the Foundation.
- Nearly all presbyteries and synods (94 percent) and Foundation and other GA agency leaders (100 percent)—but only four in five congregations (79 percent)—believed the work of the Foundation is very important, important, or somewhat important to the denomination.
- Almost all Foundation and other GA agency leaders (96 percent) believed to a very great extent, to a great extent, or to some extent that the Foundation is effective in accomplishing its mission.
- Most Foundation donors described their most recent contacts with Foundation staff as excellent or good (84 percent) and said they would definitely or probably recommend the Foundation to others who want to make gifts (93 percent).
- Three-quarters of New Covenant Funds shareholders (74 percent) described their most recent contacts with NCF staff as excellent or good. Four in five shareholders (81 percent) would definitely or probably recommend NCF mutual funds to others.
- Three-quarters of Foundation beneficiaries (77 percent) described their most recent contacts with the Foundation as excellent or good. Three-quarters (78 percent) also would definitely or probably recommend the Foundation to others who want to make gifts.
- Half of Foundation life income recipients (56 percent) described their most recent contacts with Foundation staff as excellent or good. Seven in ten (70 percent) would definitely or probably recommend the Foundation to others who want to make charitable gifts.
- Foundation donors regarded as the Foundation’s greatest strengths the Foundation’s reputation and its integrity, honesty, and ethics. NCF shareholders and Foundation beneficiaries also regarded as among the Foundation’s greatest strengths the fact that it’s a Presbyterian organization.
- Larger proportions of donors (86 percent), NCF shareholders (90 percent), and beneficiaries (86 percent) than of life income recipients (71 percent) viewed the Foundation’s work as very important, important, or somewhat important to the denomination.

FOUNDATION COMMENT ON ITEM 15-B

Comment on Item 15-B—From the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation.

We appreciate the policy of the General Assembly that invites us to comment on the report of the review committee. We make three observations:

We regret our inability to persuade the committee to understand the Foundation as a ministry and to review us accordingly. Our calling is to nurture, for the church at every level, the stewardship of accumulated resources. Presbyterians respond to their local church's annual canvass for operating funds. They respond to capital campaigns for special needs such as buildings and endowment. The General Assembly of 1799 thought it prudent to create the Foundation for Presbyterians who wanted to make an investment in a particular ministry and wanted to be assured that the proceeds from such an investment would be used in perpetuity for the purpose intended. The committee, it seems to us, chose to look at us solely as a business, and in doing so did not adequately deal with the conundrum we now face in meeting the expectation that we should maintain a churchwide funds development effort even though the General Assembly is no longer able to assist us in funding that effort.

Even so, when the committee elected to evaluate us as a business, it concluded that, comparably speaking, we are under performing. While we concur that there is always the potential to improve our results, and we constantly look for such opportunities, we want the General Assembly to know that we are not dissatisfied with our comparable results in recent years. Among the donors surveyed by the committee, 94 percent were very satisfied or satisfied with the work of the Foundation; 94 percent of donors said they would recommend the Foundation to others interested in making a charitable gift. The following quotation is from Business Week: "GOOD MORALS, GOOD RETURNS: New Covenant, a Presbyterian Church-linked fund frowns on alcohol, weapons, and gambling. That hasn't stopped it from beating the S&P 500." In a Wall Street Journal article, we are listed as two of seven choices for "best-performing, least expensive SRI equity funds." The reason the review committee's opinion differs from that of professional observers is that the committee does not always use "apples to apples" comparisons. Because we seek consistent returns, we choose mid- to lower-risk investments. The vast majority of donors understands that strategy and agrees with it.

Recommendation Number 6 in the report states, "Trustees and officers must commit to improved, long-term investment performance, to wit: consistently meeting or exceeding the Foundation's selected benchmarks." If that is meant to imply the lack of such a commitment, it is simply wrong. The board, elected by the General Assembly, is composed of clergy and elders from all walks of life. Included in that group are investment managers, bankers, leaders of trust companies, and other "financial persons" with impeccable credentials. They regularly serve on the investment committees of the Foundation and its subsidiaries. It is their function to choose and supervise the performance of world-class investment advisors.

Thank you for the opportunity to comment on the report of the review committee. For all our shortcomings, we seek the forgiveness of God. For any successes, we give God the glory and the praise.

6. Section 10.1 of the Death and Disability Plan, as set forth in Appendix B [for Appendix B, see p. 1472] hereto, effective January 1, 2007.

Rationale

A. Benefits Plan Amendments

The process for amending the Plan is established in the Plan document (Article XIX). The Board of Pensions has the sole discretion and authority to adopt Plan amendments.

- Amendments to the Pension Plan (Articles VI, VII, VIII and IX) that are in the nature of a benefit reduction or a dues increase are only effective upon approval of the General Assembly. The Board of Pension must provide written notice of its intent to submit such Pension Plan amendments to the General Assembly and the Plan members, local churches, and presbyteries at least sixty (60) days prior to the commencement of the General Assembly.

- All other amendments to the Plan adopted by the Board of Pensions must be reported to the next succeeding General Assembly and to the members, local churches, and presbyteries in a reasonable manner.

Since the 216th General Assembly (2004), the Board of Pensions has adopted an amendment to Section 8.4 of the Pension Plan that requires the approval of General Assembly prior to becoming effective. Recommendation 1., above, seeks the approval of that amendment by the General Assembly.

Since the 216th General Assembly (2004), the Board of Pension granted experience apportionments and disability benefit increases for Plan Years 2004 and 2005 and adopted other amendments to the Pension, Death and Disability, Medical, and Retirement Savings Plans. Many of the amendments to the Plan were technical and clarifying in nature and did not change the benefits provided by the Plan. A few amendments made substantive changes to the benefits or the administration of the benefits. A complete copy of the amended and restated Benefits Plan is attached as Appendix A. The Board of Pensions also adopted Pension Plan and Death and Disability Plan amendments that will become effective as of January 1, 2007. A summary of the substantive amendments to the Plan is provided below. The effective date of the amendments is January 1, 2006, unless otherwise noted.

A notice letter and chart summarizing the substantive Plan amendments was to have been mailed to all members of the Plan on March 27, 2006. The letter, chart, and a complete copy of the restated and amended Benefits Plan of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) (2006) are available on the Web site of the Board of Pensions at www.pensions.org.

B. Pension Plan Amendments

1. Amendment to Survivor's Pension in the Event of Pre-retirement Death of Member

The Board of Pensions amended Sections 8.4 and 9.1 of the Pension Plan, effective January 1, 2007, to improve the survivor's pension payable to a surviving spouse under Section 9.1 in the event of a member's pre-retirement death so that it is equal to the larger of (a) the normal survivor's pension payable under Section 9.1 or (b) 75 percent of the adjusted pension the member's surviving spouse would be entitled to receive under joint and survivor option I based on a Benefit Commencement Date as of the date of death. The Board of Pensions eliminated a member's option under Section 8.4 to elect a joint and survivor annuity option in the event of a pre-retirement death and the penalty for cancellation of such pre-retirement election. This amendment eliminates some choice available to members. Accordingly, this amendment is submitted for approval of the 217th General Assembly (2006).

2. Experience Apportionment Grants

The Pension Plan provides in Section 7.3 that the Board of Pensions may determine, in its sole discretion, that sufficient Pension Plan assets have accumulated, due to favorable investment and actuarial experience, over and above those required for actuarial reserves, general contingency reserves, and other special reserves, to grant an experience apportionment.

The Board of Pensions is pleased to report to the 217th General Assembly (2006) that, in the judgment of the Board of Directors of the Board of Pensions, sufficient Pension Plan assets were in hand at the end of Plan Years 2004 and 2005 as a result of cumulative favorable investment and actuarial experience to permit experience apportionments. Therefore, at its meetings on March 5, 2005, and February 25, 2006, the Board of Pensions approved the following experience apportionment grants for the Pension Plan and the corresponding amendments of Appendix B of the Benefits Plan (the History of Experience Apportionment table):

For Plan Year 2004 (effective July 1, 2005):

- a 3 percent increase in retirement and survivor's pension benefits for members and eligible survivors receiving benefits as of December 31, 2004; and
- a 3 percent increase in accrued pension credits for active, disabled and terminated vested members in the Pension Plan as of December 31, 2004.

For Plan Year 2005 (effective July 1, 2006):

- a 3.6 percent increase in retirement and survivor's pension benefits for members and eligible survivors receiving benefits on July 1, 2006; and
- a 3.6 percent increase in accrued pension credits as of December 31, 2005, for active, disabled and terminated vested members in the Pension Plan on July 1, 2006.

3. Other Pension Plan Amendments

a. Small Pension Lump Sum Distribution Amounts

In 2005, the Board of Pensions adopted amendments to Section 8.5 of the Pension Plan in response to changes in the tax laws. The amendments decrease the amount of the mandatory involuntary cash-out of small pension amounts from $5,000 to $1,000 and adds a voluntary lump sum cash-out distribution option for members with accrued pension credits with a present value of not more than $5,000. The effective date of the amendments to Section 8.5 is March 28, 2005, the date the tax law changes became effective.

b. Top Heavy Rules

The Pension Plan is subject to certain "top heavy rules" imposed by the tax laws. In 2005, the Board of Pensions adopted amendments to the top heavy rules to conform the Plan provisions with current laws and regulations.

C. Death and Disability Plan Amendments

1. Disability Benefit Increases

The Death and Disability Plan provides in Section 11.3(h) that the Board of Pensions may determine, in its sole discretion, that sufficient Death and Disability Plan assets have accumulated, due to favorable investment and actuarial experience, over and above those required for actuarial reserves, general contingency reserves, and other special reserves, to grant a disability benefit increase.

The Board of Pensions is pleased to report to the 217th General Assembly (2006) that, in the judgment of the Board of Directors of the Board of Pensions, sufficient Death and Disability Plan assets were in hand at the end of Plan Years 2004 and 2005 as a result of cumulative favorable investment and actuarial experience to permit disability benefit increases. Therefore, at its meetings on March 5, 2005, and February 25, 2006, the Board of Pensions approved the following Disability Benefit Increases in accordance with Section 11.3(h) of the Benefits Plan of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.):

For Plan Year 2004:

- a 3 percent increase in disability benefits for those receiving such benefits on December 31, 2004, beginning July 1, 2005.

For Plan Year 2005:

- a 4 percent increase in disability benefits for those receiving such benefits on December 31, 2005, beginning July 1, 2006.

2. Other Death and Disability Plan Amendments

The Board of Pensions amended the Plan to increase the following benefits as of January 1, 2006:

- the maximum Disability Benefit Basis from $70,000 to $90,000 (Sec. 2.1);
- the maximum Lump Sum Death Benefit Basis for Plan members who die from $70,000 to $90,000 (Sec. 10.2);
- the Children's Education Benefit annual benefit from $6,000 to $9,000 and the aggregate benefit from $24,000 to $36,000 (Sec. 10.3).

The Board of Pensions also adopted amendments to the Death and Disability Plan that are effective January 1, 2007. The amendments to Section 10.1:

- provide a $6,000 lump sum salary continuation death benefit under Section 10.1 to any terminated vested member who meets the "Rule of Seventy" (i.e., who terminates service on or after age 55 with at least 5 years of Plan participation and age and Plan participation totaling at least 70) at the time he or she terminates pension coverage and who does not initiate retirement benefits under the Pension Plan prior to his or her death;
- eliminates the salary continuation benefit under Section 10.1 to any person who does not immediately commence his or her retirement pension upon termination of pension coverage and does not meet the "Rule of Seventy" at the time he or she terminates pension coverage;
- eliminates the salary continuation benefit under Section 10.1 for Affiliated Benefits Program retirees and small pension settlement recipients.

D. Medical Plan

Since the 216th General Assembly (2004), the Board of Pensions adopted several amendments to the Medical Plan in response to changes in vendors and federal law and the commencement of the Medicare Prescription Drug Program.

1. Changes to Administration of Mental Health Outpatient Treatment

When the Board of Pensions changed its behavioral health administrator from ValueOptions to CIGNA Behavioral Health, the Board of Pensions amended the Medical Plan to eliminate the fixed twenty visit outpatient care limit and flex benefit provision for psychiatric care. Under the new administrator, outpatient visits for mental healthcare will be managed by comparing diagnosis and treatment information (as reflected by the claims data) and intervening if care does not appear to meet the requirements of best practice and medical necessity for the member's particular circumstances. The Plan has the discretion to require certification from the behavioral health administrator before further care will be reimbursed under the Plan in appropriate cases [Secs. 13.7(f), 13.9(a)].

2. Dual Benefit Coverage

The Medical Plan's dual coverage provisions were updated in response to recently adopted model state law coordination of benefit (COB) provisions by the National Association of Insurance Commissioners (NAIC) (Sec. 13.11).

3. HIPAA Security Provisions

The Medical Plan HIPAA provisions were updated to add provisions required by the HIPAA electronic security regulations. The effective date of these amendments was April 20, 2005 [Secs. 13.12, 13.16(f)].

4. Medicare Part D—Prescription Drug Plan

In response to the commencement of the federal government's Medicare Prescription Drug coverage (Part D) on January 1, 2006, the Medical Plan was amended to permit retirees who qualify for the Federal government's Part D subsidies to subscribe for Medicare Supplement coverage without prescription drug coverage. The Plan was further amended to state that Medicare Supplement will not pay for outpatient prescription drugs if a member has enrolled for Part D coverage and to add other coordination of benefits provisions between the Plan and Medicare (Secs. 14.2(d), 14.3(f), 14.3(g)).

E. Optional Retirement Savings Plan

The Board of Pensions amended Section 8.6(e) of the optional Retirement Savings Plan to address recent changes in the tax laws relating to mandatory cash-outs of small benefits. The amendment decreased the maximum account value for a mandatory cash-out from the Retirement Savings Plan from $5,000 to $1,000. The effective date of the amendment is March 28, 2005. A copy of Section 8.6(e), as amended, is attached hereto as Appendix B) [for Appendix B, see p. 1472].

Item 15-D

[The Assembly Committee on Board of Pensions and Presbyterian Foundation approved Item 15-D. See p. 11.]

The Board of Pensions recommends that the 217th General Assembly (2006) receive the report of certain amendments to the Bylaws of the Board of Pensions, as set forth in Appendix C [for Appendix C, see p. 1476] hereto.

Rationale

The Board of Pensions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is a Pennsylvania nonprofit corporation established by the General Assembly to administer the Benefits Plan and Assistance Programs for the benefit of the ministers and lay employees of the church. The General Assembly reserved the authority to elect the directors of the Board of Pensions and approve amendments to the articles of incorporation and bylaws to the extent that they relate to the purpose of the Board of Pensions or the General Assembly's right to elect the directors. The Board of Pensions has the authority to approve any other amendments to the bylaws and report any such amendments to the next succeeding General Assembly.

In 2005, the Board of Pensions amended the bylaws to update the governance of the Board of Pensions in response to best practices that have evolved for nonprofit corporations in the wake of the passage of the Sarbanes Oxley Act and related legal developments that apply to publicly held corporations. The Board of Pensions' governance improvements include:

- Authorization for the nomination by the General Assembly Nominating Committee and election by the General Assembly of directors for different terms or extended service. This amendment was needed to address a misalignment in the number and classes of directors that resulted from changes in the election of directors that were made when the meetings of the General Assembly became biennial.
- The formation of a new committee, the Board Development and Governance Committee, from the existing Board Candidate and Officer Nominating Committees to focus on the recruitment and development of directors for service on the Board of Pensions and other governance matters.
- Clarifications of quorum requirements for committee actions that constitute Board of Pension actions.
- A provision providing for the removal of a director by a vote of a supermajority of the Board of Pensions. Any vacancy created by such a removal is to be filled by election by the General Assembly.
- Permission to provide notice of meetings by electronic media, including email.
- Express provisions relating to the directors' standard of care under Pennsylvania law.

A complete copy of the amended bylaws is attached as Appendix A [for Appendix A, see p. 1384]. The amended bylaws became effective on February 25, 2006.

Item 15-Info

A. The Board of Pensions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Agency Summary

Marking the 287th anniversary of the beginning of the work now carried on by this Board of Pensions and presented to the 217th General Assembly (2006) meeting in Birmingham, Alabama, June 2006.

This report incorporates by reference the 2005 Annual Report of the Board of Pensions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in which the financial information for the Board of Pensions and the Plans and Programs it administers is presented.

1. The Benefits Plan of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)

The Benefits Plan of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) provides pension, death, and disability benefits, medical benefits, optional benefits (additional death benefits, optional supplemental disability benefits, dental coverage, long-term care insurance, and a retirement savings plan), and a retirement and financial planning education program. Participation in the Benefits Plan is mandated for all ministers of the Word and Sacrament in installed positions. A church may also enroll other church employees in the Benefits Plan. The same benefits, including the Retirement Savings Plan but excluding the Pension Plan, are now offered to employing organizations for certain non-mandated employees of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) or affiliated organizations through the Affiliated Benefits Program.

The 215th General Assembly (2003) approved changes to the Benefits Plan amendment process to accommodate biennial meetings of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). The right to amend the Benefits Plan is reserved solely to the Board of Pensions. Amendments to the Plan that constitute a reduction in Pension Plan benefits or an increase in Pension Plan dues are effective only upon approval by the General Assembly. The Bylaws of the Board of Pensions require approval of a two-thirds majority of directors present at a duly constituted meeting to amend the Pension Plan except for a benefit reduction or a dues increase (which amendments require the approval of the General Assembly). The Board of Pensions must provide sixty-days notice to the General Assembly, Plan members, local churches, and presbyteries of any amendment requiring General Assembly approval and reasonable notice of any other amendment to the Benefits Plan.

2. The Community Nature of the Benefits Plan

The Benefits Plan of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), administered by the Board of Pensions, is designed to care for and protect the community of Benefits Plan members as a whole.

The employing organization's cost of providing benefits to its workers who are enrolled for pension, medical, death, and disability benefits is not based on marital status, gender, family size, or age of its employees. The dues contributed by an employing organization are based on a percentage of its participating members' salaries and represent that organization's share of the cost of protecting the entire community. The salaries used to determine the dues for the Pension Plan, the Death and Disability Plan, and the Medical Plan reflect both minimum and maximum salary amounts. (The level of medical coverage required is reflected in the Medical Plan dues only for Affiliated Benefits Program coverage.)

In the same way, the benefits are "leveled" with minimum benefits accruing to members paid less than the median salaries for their employment classifications (for example, ministers of the Word and Sacrament, exempt, nonexempt). In addition, there are caps on medical deductibles and copay expenses for higher paid members.

3. Pension Plan and Death and Disability Plan Amendments

a. Pension Experience Apportionment and Disability Benefit Increases

The designs of the Pension Plan and the Death and Disability Plan provide for the granting of pension experience apportionments and disability benefit increases respectively in years when the plans have favorable investment experience, favorable actuarial experience, and adequate contingency reserves. Effective August 1, 2004, a 2 percent experience apportionment and a 4 percent disability benefit increase were granted. Effective July 1, 2005, a 3 percent experience apportionment and a 3 percent disability benefit increase were granted. The directors of the Board of Pensions approved a 3.6 percent experience apportionment and a 4 percent disability benefit increase to be effective July 1, 2006. Towers Perrin, actuarial advisors for the Board of Pensions, reported that there continued to be sufficient funds on hand to meet the obligations to current and future retirees and disabled members, after recognizing the increased liability generated by the 2004, 2005, and 2006 apportionments and disability benefit increases respectively.

(1) History of the Pension Apportionments and Disability Benefit Increases

A major function of the experience apportionments is to help the pension credits of active members and the retirement income of pensioners keep pace with inflation. The disability benefit increases fulfill the same function for those receiving disability income payments. In Table I, the recent experience apportionments and disability benefit increases are compared to the Consumer Price Index (CPI), a measure of inflation in consumer goods and services.

	2000	2001	2002	2003	2004	2005
Pension*	3.0%	0.0%	0.0%	2.0%	3.0%	3.6%
Disability*	3.0	2.0	0.0	4.0	3.0	4.0
CPI	3.4	1.6	2.4	1.9	3.3	3.4
* Experience apportionments and disability benefit increases become effective the year following the year shown.

(2) Impact of Experience Apportionments

For the years 1996 through 2005, Table II shows the number of ordained minister Plan members (with at least fifteen years of service) retiring at or after age sixty-five and the average annual amount of their pension at the time of retirement. By applying the experience apportionments granted over the past ten years, the Benefits Plan has been able to fulfill its intent to shelter both pension credits and retirement income from the inroads of inflation. The average pension with an inflationary increase based solely on the CPI is shown for comparison.

Year of Retirement	Number of Retirements	Average Annual Plan Pension at Retirement	Value of Average Pension in 2005 Reflecting Inflationary Increases	Value of Average Pension in 2005 Reflecting Experience Apportionments
1996	192	$19,958	$24,798	$30,468
1997	145	23,370	28,552	33,657
1998	157	23,698	28,496	30,747
1999	168	27,110	31,742	31,976
2000	153	27,651	31,311	29,922
2001	173	31,661	35,287	33,263
2002	151	30,039	32,695	31,559
2003	172	32,015	34,196	33,635
2004	129	31,822	32,904	32,777
2005*	133	32,186
* Members who were part-time in 2004 are not included in the numbers for 2005.

b. Administrative Changes to the Pension Plan and Death and Disability Plan

During 2004, the Pension Plan was changed so that the Benefit Commencement Date is the first of the month following retirement. This change took effect July 1, 2005, and conformed the Plan to industry standards while facilitating an improvement in the administrative processes of the Board of Pensions. Between April and June 2005, responsibility for disability determinations and ongoing medical and rehabilitation management was transferred to Broadspire Services, Inc., a company specializing in disability management services. Final determination on each application and the calculation and payment of disability income benefits remain the responsibility of the Board of Pensions. The Board is now partnering with two other denominations in the use of these services in a purchasing coalition of the Church Benefits Association (CBA).

4. Medical Plan

In 2004 and 2005, Plan member use of network doctors and hospitals resulted in annual gross claims expense savings well in excess of $90 million and $100 million respectively. (Savings are shared between the Plan and the members with more than 80 percent of the savings accruing to the Plan and the balance resulting in lower costs for members.) These savings, and PPO savings in prior years, have helped to fund the contingency reserves and moderate the level of dues increase required each year.

Despite these savings, the Board of Pensions had to take additional dues and benefits measures for 2004 and 2005 given the apparently unending upward spiral in cost. Effective January 1, 2004, a number of changes were made. Minimum dues for Medical Plan participation became 65 percent of the churchwide median salary for pastors serving churches, up from 55 percent. Dues for part-time church workers are now determined on the greater of the minimum participation basis or the equivalent full-time salary, and the required dues percent increased to 18.5 percent for all participating positions. On the benefits side, the network office visit copay increased from $15 to $25 for a visit with a primary care practitioner and from $25 to $35 for a visit with a specialist. (The copay required for a network visit with a mental health professional remains at $25.) The Board of Pensions also decided to move responsibility for claims processing of all mental health/substance abuse claims from Highmark to ValueOptions, the organization that provided medical counsel to the Board of Pensions and its members on mental health/substance abuse treatment. By combining services, the Board of Pensions reduced some administrative complexity generated by having both Highmark and ValueOptions involved. Lessening the complexity has resulted in a lower administrative fee for Highmark services. In 2005, dues for the Medical Plan increased from 18.5 percent to 19 percent, but further benefit changes were not required. The benefit levels and dues requirements are unchanged for 2006.

Separately, the Board of Pensions has continued its efforts to partner with other denominations participating in the Church Benefits Association to negotiate more favorable financial arrangements through joint purchasing efforts. The first initiative focused on the contract with the pharmacy benefit manager (Express Scripts): by negotiating as part of a larger group, the Plan continues to save $1 million or more each year and is now in its second three-year contract period (2004-2006). In 2004, six denominations joined us in contracting for PPO access and administration services from Highmark; that coalition effort will improve both price and service over time. For 2006, the Board of Pensions has partnered with two other denominations (the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America and the Lutheran Church—Missouri Synod) in replacing ValueOptions with CIGNA Behavioral Health for mental health/substance abuse care management, network access, and claims processing services.

The Affiliated Benefits Program, introduced in August 2000, allows eligible employing organizations to offer medical or medical, death and disability benefits to non-mandated workers on slightly different terms from those applicable to the Benefits Plan. By January 1, 2005, about 2,100 members were enrolled in the Affiliated Benefits Program, by more than 500 different employing organizations, including Prairie Village Retirement Center, Columbus, Nebraska, and the Presbyterian Home in the Presbytery of Huntington, Pennsylvania. With the present rate of growth in healthcare costs, the Board of Pensions is particularly aware of the difficulties smaller employing organizations encounter in trying to continue to provide comprehensive medical coverage for their employees. The Affiliated Benefits Program has helped many Presbyterian-affiliated employers confronted by cost increases they could not otherwise absorb. While the Board of Pensions hopes to offer the Affiliated Benefits Program as a meaningful benefits alternative for the long-term, it is also mindful of the need to carefully monitor the financial aspects of this program in conjunction with the overall performance of the Medical Fund and is interested in measured, rather than rapid, growth.

In addition to maintaining benefit programs to help with medical expenses, the Board of Pensions is actively engaged in encouraging Plan members and their families to adopt healthy lifestyles and use appropriate preventive care services. As few as one-third of the participants may be responsible for as much as 97 percent of the claims. Members can increase involvement in their own health status, thus improving the quality of the care they receive and the care they take of themselves, thereby leading to improved health status and, longer-term, to reduced expense. In 2005, the Board of Pensions began to emphasize personal responsibility; the Board of Pensions' role is to provide the tools, education, and support to encourage and sustain Plan members and their families in pursuing healthier lifestyles and behaviors. The Board of Pensions' efforts in this area are now grouped under the heading of Personal Health Stewardship, which replaces the previous heading of Health Promotion. Supplementing the disease management programs first introduced in 2003 and the nurse advisory line and employee assistance program that have been in place for many years, the Board of Pensions now offers lifestyle modification programs targeted to tobacco use, stress management, and weight loss. Recognizing that appropriate use of preventive care services is one key to early detection and effective remedial action, the Board of Pensions launched its Preventive Incentive pilot program in October 2005. Installed ministers of the Word and Sacrament and middle governing body executives aged 50 and over may each qualify for $100 when they document compliance with the recommended preventive tests and screenings for their age. If successful in encouraging these members to use the services, the program will be extended to other groups. The Board of Pensions continues to fund clergy colleague support groups in presbyteries and is asking each presbytery to identify a health advocate who is willing to work with the Board of Pensions on a local basis to promote the Personal Health Stewardship message.

The 213th General Assembly (2001) asked the Board of Pensions to comment in its future reports about the parity of mental health benefits provided through the Benefits Plan by, "Urg[ing] the Board of Pensions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to evaluate, on an annual basis, issues of parity between coverage for mental health and medical and surgical benefits under plans offered by the Board of Pensions and include their evaluation in their annual reports to future General Assemblies” (Minutes, 2001, pp. 48–49). In 2004, to facilitate the separate processing of claims, mental health/substance abuse claims were given their own deductible and copay provisions. These requirements are coordinated with those for the balance of the Plan, excluding drugs, to make sure that the administrative change does not increase the total amount any family has to pay. The various internal limits or review points within the facility-based covered expense list have been removed, but medical necessity for the services must still be approved. The Board of Pensions believes that the parity standard is satisfied.

5. Assistance Program

a. Overview

The Assistance Program of the Board of Pensions values the commitment and sacrifice of the men and women who are called to serve the church. The programs act as a safety net to meet the urgent and emergency financial needs of church workers and their families consistent with the Board of Pensions’ mission in support of the ministry of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

The Assistance Program is designed to meet the financial needs of employees and retirees of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) that are beyond the scope of the Benefits Plan. No Benefits Plan dues are used for the Assistance Program.

The Assistance Programs include Income Supplements, Shared Grants, and Emergency Assistance Grants, the West Virginia Project, the Nursing Home Care Assistance Program, special groups assistance, Relief of Conscience Grants, and the Seminary Debt Assistance Program. Support for these programs includes gifts, legacies directed to the Board of Pensions, endowment income, and half of the Christmas Joy Offering.

b. Retirement Housing Programs

The Retirement Housing Programs were initiated in 1883 to provide housing for eligible ministers. This program consists of the Homes Program, which offers affordable housing in properties owned by the Board of Pensions, and the Housing Supplement Program, which gives financial assistance to help retirees maintain their own homes or move to retirement communities.

The Board of Pensions owns two individual homes and twenty-seven houses or apartments in four clusters. Homes related to various governing bodies of the church also provide services under contract with the Board of Pensions.

Persons who have served in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) for twenty years or more are eligible for this housing. The program is structured so that residents pay according to their ability, contributing for independent living 30 percent of their total annual income, excluding post-retirement earned income, or an appraised fair rental value of the home, whichever is less.

In recent years, the strategic direction of the Board of Pensions has been to move away from Board-owned homes and to provide financial support to those individuals who need housing assistance.

The Board of Pensions requested permission from the 200th General Assembly (1988) to change the Homes Program from one based solely on Board-owned homes to one based on housing assistance supplements. The General Assembly approved this strategic direction for the Homes Program and authorized the sale of properties then owned and received thereafter, with the proceeds going to the Housing Supplement Program. The General Assembly withheld approval for the sale of two housing communities operated by the Board of Pensions and instructed it to continue its “ownership and management of the clusters at Morganwood (Swarthmore, PA) and El Sombroso Oaks (Los Gatos, CA) with no further sale of these clusters without General Assembly Approval” (Minutes, 1988, Part I, p. 97).

The 214th General Assembly (2002) approved the sale of Morganwood, a cluster of twenty-nine housing units in Swarthmore, Pennsylvania. On October 29, 2003, an Agreement of Sale for Morganwood was signed with Swarthmore College, a Quaker-affiliated institution adjacent to the Morganwood property. Under the Agreement of Sale, the current residents will be entitled to continue living in their units until they vacate the unit or the expiration of twenty years from the closing date (January 14, 2004), whichever is earlier. The Board of Pensions will provide subsidy to the current residents of Morganwood to cover the differential between rental rates prior to the sale and the new rates established by Swarthmore College. This subsidy was about $200,000 for the year 2004 and $190,000 for 2005. The Board of Pensions will review this subsidy with the residents during the year to determine future needs. The proceeds from the sale will be used to support the Retirement Housing Programs of the Board of Pensions and the subsidies to current residents.

Westminster Gardens, Duarte, California, was established in 1949, by the Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A., to care for retired missionaries. The denomination assigned responsibility for the oversight of the affairs of Westminster Gardens to the Board of Pensions in 1972. Since its founding, this retirement community has been available for retired church workers and their spouses.

During 2002, the Board of Trustees of Westminster Gardens undertook a strategic study to consider the mission, management relationship and the long-term financial health of Westminster Gardens. As a result of that study, Westminster Gardens, Southern California Presbyterian Homes, and the Board of Pensions negotiated an agreement whereby the Southern California Presbyterian Homes would assume the control and operation of Westminster Gardens.

The 215th General Assembly (2003) approved the Affiliation Agreement between Southern California Presbyterian Homes and Westminster Gardens. The agreement was signed by all the parties and the Certificate of Authority was received from the Department of Social Services in California effective May 4, 2004.

As part of the Affiliation Agreement, the Board of Pensions has guaranteed a line of credit, obtained by Westminster Gardens, to a maximum of $3,500,000 for a period not to exceed five years. The line of credit is for the initial phase of rehabilitation work on the Westminster Gardens' property and is secured by a promissory note and deed of trust in favor of the Board of Pensions.

Also under the terms of the Affiliation Agreement, the Board of Pensions is providing rent subsidies to residents who are related to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and the Board of Pensions. The total amount of the subsidy was $410,000 in 2004 and $348,000 in 2005. These payments were in addition to the direct assistance provided to qualifying residents under the Board of Pensions' Income and Housing Supplements Programs.

c. New Program Development

During 2004, the Assistance and Retirement Housing Committee began to develop new programs to address issues identified through the committee's research and the Task Force on Clergy Recruitment and Retention. At the October 2004 meeting, the directors of the Board of Pensions approved two pilot assistance programs aimed at supporting active pastors:

- a grant program in partnership with middle governing bodies that will help ministers develop practical skills in congregational leadership, strategic planning, financial management, and conflict resolution; and
- the Presbyterian CREDO program that is modeled after a very successful program of the Church Pension Fund of the Episcopal Church and emphasizes wellness, vocation, spirituality, and finances. It provides a holistic and introspective way for pastors to evaluate their personal lives in the context of community and focus their energies for continuing ministry.

During 2006, the Assistance and Retirement Housing Committee will be developing, implementing, and evaluating these pilots as possible program models for strengthening pastoral leadership.

At the October 2005 meeting, the directors of the Board of Pensions approved a new Adoption Assistance Program effective January 1, 2006. A family adopting a child may be eligible for $3,000 for each child to help with adoption-related expenses. Parents who are active members of the Benefits Plan and employed by a local church, governing body, General Assembly agency, or an organization under the control or operation of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) at the time of the adoption are eligible for a grant. The grant of $3,000 for each adoption is to be available when the Board of Pensions receives the final legal adoption decree. The program is effective for adoptions that occur on or after January 1, 2006.

d. Funds Development

In response to the continuing and emerging needs of ministry and the challenges facing those who serve the church, the Board of Pensions entered a more deliberate phase in its funds development effort in 2005.

The Board of Pensions has determined that additional financial support, beyond half of the Christmas Joy Offering, is required to meet the increasing demands on existing programs and to fund new programs to meet emerging needs. (No Benefits Plan dues are used for the Assistance Program.)

In 2005, the Board of Pensions selected a theme for funds development communications ("Keeping Our Promises") and established the online capability for contributions through the Board Web site, www.pensions.org. It also established a planned giving initiative to encourage deferred gifts. A Gift Acceptance Policy is in place.

The Christmas Joy Offering remains a vital financial support to the Assistance Program, and the Board of Pensions continues to work with the racial ethnic schools and the staff of Mission Education and Promotion to promote this denomination-wide offering.

To ensure communication with other national entities of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) that are also seeking contributions, the Board of Pensions created and hosted an Executive Funds Development Forum to agree on and implement “Principles of Funds Development.” In 2003, the agency heads agreed to use these principles as a basis for coordinating efforts.

5. Transforming Families

The 216th General Assembly (2004) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) approved a policy statement, Transforming Families, developed by the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP). One recommendation was that the Board of Pensions “make presbyteries, sessions, and plan members more aware of the assistance that is available to facilitate adoptions by pension plan members.”

To increase awareness, the Board of Pensions has done the following:

- Publicized the new Adoption Assistance Grants available through the Assistance Program in the Board Bulletin, a newsletter about the directors meeting that is posted on the Board of Pensions Web site and mailed to those who request it. This newsletter is further promoted with an email to all middle governing bodies announcing its availability. The information was also included in the news article released by the PC(USA) News Service posted on the PC(USA) Web site and sent to email subscribers.

- Created and posted on the Web site a “product” sheet outlining the Adoption Assistance Grants.
- Informed all member service representatives and regional representatives about the program so they may in turn educate the members of the Benefits Plan.
- Included the program among the financial assistance programs on the Web site of the Board of Pensions.

7. Conflict of Interest and Ethics

The Board of Pensions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has policies covering conflicts of interest and ethics, and the directors and employees have complied with those policies.

B. Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation Agency Summary

As each year melds into the next, we have an opportunity to assess how well we have fulfilled our purpose: serving the church, its mission and its members. The Presbyterian Foundation, charged with funding Christ’s mission, takes that responsibility very seriously. Partnering with churches and their members to encourage lifetime giving options, we enable them to make a difference in the world with their accumulated assets. This year’s successes, as well as the challenges, have prepared us to reach even higher in the coming year.

Over the past year, Presbyterians proved to be very generous in support of mission. Examples range from a permanent endowment fund established by a church in Iowa to support a seminary in Cuba to a now-retired minister’s lifetime of efforts to establish permanent endowment funds in support of educational institutions and small churches. These funds, as well as thousands of others, are building a foundation for mission that is rock-solid.

As we move into the future, strong partnerships remain vital to the Foundation’s mission. Working in connection with the Joining Hearts & Hands staff, whose capital campaign raises funds for national church growth and the expansion of mission work abroad, the Foundation’s role is to assist those individuals who wish to make a lifetime gift using the services we provide.

We continue to devote our energies to a long-term pilot project in the Charlotte Presbytery to explore innovative ways to fund mission. Our focus is to encourage individuals to establish permanent endowment funds to support their local church and its mission. By communicating this message through local church leadership with the support of the presbytery, we provide development expertise backed by the full services of the Foundation.

New Covenant Trust Company, N.A., a subsidiary of the Foundation, has partnered with Westminster Retirement Communities in Florida to provide trust services to Westminster’s residents. The New Covenant Trust Company offers personal trust and investment management services while sharing the values of Westminster residents to be wise stewards of their accumulated resources.

The Presbyterian Foundation's presence and cooperation with the church and other entities on a variety of levels is evidenced by these partnerships to increase funds that will benefit the church and its mission.

While the controversy surrounding the divestment of certain investments that are related to the Israel and Palestine conflict has caused conflict in the church, it has provided the opportunity to clearly communicate the Foundation's socially responsible investing (SRI) position. Going beyond the General Assembly's Mission Responsibility Through Investment guidelines, the Foundation's SRI guidelines also include avoidance of companies involved in gambling, alcohol, and firearms-related issues. We have also taken a proactive direction with the creation of a Social Witness Committee at the board level to deal with these SRI issues. The new committee will concentrate on a continued, in-depth focus on these issues and will maintain a dialogue with our shareholders and the companies we wish to influence.

Despite 2005's rising interest rates and increasing fuel costs, the Foundation had a very positive year, recording no significant declines and outperforming the stock market average. True to our purpose, we added value to our donors' gifts and the investments we manage for churches by investing consistently, even at a time when such investing was difficult.

At the close of 2005, we bade farewell to Dennis Murphy, who served faithfully for twenty-four years as executive vice president and chief investment officer. He led us to a very enviable investment record and has been a great steward of the church. Dennis will serve in a consulting role in 2006 prior to his planned 2007 retirement, while George Rue has assumed the responsibilities of chief investment officer.

With a future goal to increase gifts received for mission, we have raised the bar and have targeted to distribute $90 million for mission in 2009. We expect church-sponsored socially responsible funds, such as the New Covenant Funds, to continue their expansion. By emphasizing the convergence of the mutual funds and a socially responsible agenda, we provide an avenue for individuals and institutions to pursue their long-term faith-based investing goals.

Most of all, we plan to dedicate ourselves completely to sound investment principles as a means of serving the church and its members. By safeguarding assets, we act as stewards in service and pursue mission in the spirit of love. We will continue to enable Presbyterians to take part in transforming the church, community and world around us through their gifts of accumulated resources.

Like good stewards of the manifold grace of God, serve one another with whatever gift each of you has received. 1 Peter 4.10

Mission Statement

A vital part of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), the Foundation attracts, cultivates and manages financial resources of individuals and institutions to serve Christ's mission.

Support for Mission

More than two centuries ago, Presbyterians dreamed of a vast church mission pursued in the name of stewardship and love. To support that goal, these visionaries created the Presbyterian Foundation, which is today one of the largest religious foundations in the United States. The Foundation and its subsidiary, New Covenant Trust Company, N.A., are accountable, on a consolidated basis, for $1.79 billion in charitable endowments, life income plans, trusts, and investment management accounts.

The Presbyterian Foundation is committed to strengthening congregations, presbyteries, synods, the General Assembly, and other agencies of the church by developing gifts and managing funds on their behalf. The Foundation follows a socially responsible, balanced investment approach and diligently meets its fiduciary responsibilities to invest and safeguard the assets entrusted to it. Managing endowment funds is a crucial part of that responsibility to act always in service to the denomination.

Generous Gifts That Last Forever

Permanent endowment funds are the most direct and enduring gifts, and they represent the core of the Foundation's existence. Whether it's the permanent fund established by a church in Iowa to support a seminary in Cuba or a lifetime of efforts to establish permanent funds by a now-retired minister, these funds are building a foundation for mission that is rock solid.

A permanent fund is a perpetual endowment given to the Foundation, the assets of which are held and invested by the Foundation for the benefit of the mission identified by the donor. As a result of the permanent fund established by the church in Iowa, much needed support will be provided for the seminary, whose students are called to serve as Christianity undergoes resurgence in communist Cuba. Meanwhile, the numerous permanent funds made by the minister in Pennsylvania have supported educational institutions and small churches that might not otherwise have had endowments to help them meet their mission needs.

Gifts come in all sizes and are designated for all purposes. The Foundation currently manages more than 6,700 permanent endowment funds supporting a variety of beneficiaries. All gifts are invested and proceeds distributed solely and specifically according to the instructions of the donors for ministries supported by the Presbyterian church.

Putting Faith in Action

Faithful Presbyterians have many other avenues to support the church through giving as well. Charitable gifts can include outright gifts of cash, stocks, bonds, or other property, or they can be established in the form of donor-advised funds and permanent endowment funds. Further options, such as charitable gift annuities, charitable trusts, offered by our subsidiary New Covenant Trust Company, N.A., and pooled income funds are available for donors who wish to support the Church while, in many cases, also offering support to their families and themselves.

Giving from the Heart

Churches everywhere have their own individual missions, and donors have their own personal wishes for the legacy they desire to create. Every day, the Presbyterian Foundation takes pleasure in uniting the two sides, donor and beneficiary, and witnessing the great transformations that can result. Churches are renewed, benefactors feel fulfillment and satisfaction, and mission grows. In 2005, the Foundation, and its subsidiary, gave witness to $7.23 million distributed to mission, thanks to the generosity and foresight of so many Presbyterians.

Mission's need is ever-changing, diverse, and universal. Conscientious Presbyterians respond with charitable giving that reflects their faith. The Foundation serves as a means to a personal legacy by managing funds that ultimately help churches and mission. Generous, thoughtful donors are the primary reason for the Foundation's success, and their foresight speaks to their good stewardship.

Creating a Legacy

New Covenant Trust Company, N.A. (NCTC), a wholly owned subsidiary of the Foundation, offers charitable trusts, personal trusts, and investment management services. Through NCTC, trust services can be provided in all fifty states providing Presbyterians with an organization that supports their values and concerns to care for loved ones while creating a legacy of faith.

New Covenant Trust Company can serve as trustee for charitable trusts that can help Presbyterians reduce their tax burden, increase current income, and ultimately provide for greater charitable gifts. The NCTC provides a wide range of trust administration and investment management services specifically tailored for individuals that include initial consultation and account set-up, asset diversification using various investment objectives, record keeping, and ongoing client service support.

Giving Through Wills and Estate Planning

Annually, the Presbyterian Foundation promotes the Legacy of a Lifetime program to churches throughout the denomination. At the program's beginning in the 1950s, wills were the main focus of gift development. Currently, that focus has shifted to remembering the church in estate planning. While simple bequests in a will are still important, now the Foundation can provide guidance for complex estate plans in coordination with an individual's tax and legal advisors.

To complement congregation-based bequest and planned giving efforts, available program resources include a leadership guide, bulletin inserts, bulletin covers, poster, and bookmarks. These materials are provided free of charge to any Presbyterian congregation, the only expense being the shipping and handling costs.

To find out more about program materials to support wills emphasis and planned gifts, visit our Web site at www.PresbyterianFoundation.org or call 800-858-6127, ext. 8919.

C. New Covenant Trust Company, N.A.

New Covenant Trust Company, N.A. (NCTC) was chartered January 2, 1998, as the first nationally chartered trust company owned by a not-for-profit foundation. The NCTC serves as back-office service provider for the Foundation and the endowment funds it holds as fiduciary for the benefit of the General Assembly, local congregations, and other Presbyterian-affiliated organizations. The company also serves as investment adviser to New Covenant Funds and trustee of various types of trust instruments in which there is a Presbyterian or Presbyterian-related beneficial interest. The NCTC's board has enacted policies and procedures to ensure compliance with banking and securities law and provides oversight of the delivery of trust services to the Presbyterian community.

Since the inception of the New Covenant Funds, the Foundation has contracted with broker dealers authorized by the New Covenant Funds to distribute its shares, to license Foundation and NCTC employees to offer the New Covenant Funds for sale to churches, presbyteries, Presbyterian-related organizations, and individuals. Since 2004, the distributing broker dealer for the New Covenant Funds, through whom the Foundation and NCTC employees have been licensed, has been New Covenant Funds Distributors, Inc. ("the Distributor"), a wholly owned subsidiary of BISYS Fund Services, Inc. Due to regulatory concerns, in April of 2005, BISYS advised the Foundation and NCTC that the cost for these services would increase by $250,000 annually. The BISYS also offered to permit NCTC to purchase the distributor for $25,000.

The 208th General Assembly (1996) had directed the Foundation "to take necessary actions (including, as required the formation of subsidiary corporations) to satisfy legal and regulatory requirements relating to its Planned Gifts and Investment Management Services programs" (Minutes, 1996, Part I, pp. 663-64). Moreover, the 211th General Assembly (1999) authorized the trust company to "provide custodial agency, administrative and corporate fiduciary services, and any other activities which a trust company is permitted by applicable law to perform and which the General Assembly or the Foundation directs the Trust Company Subsidiary to perform" (Minutes, 1999, Part I, p. 494). Therefore, because the distribution of the New Covenant Funds is incidental to activities already authorized by the General Assembly, in April of 2005 the Foundation directed NCTC, subject to appropriate due diligence and requisite regulatory approvals, to engage in limited purpose broker dealer activities only involving the sale of New Covenant Funds. The NCTC board acted upon the direction of the Foundation board and entered into an agreement to purchase the Distributor. Regulatory approval was obtained from the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency (NCTC's regulator) and the National Association of Securities Dealers (a self-regulatory securities body).

The Distributor, as a wholly owned subsidiary of NCTC, will be subject to oversight by the NCTC board and thus, ultimately the Foundation and the General Assembly.

The Foundation and its subsidiary consistently strive to deliver superior service to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and seek to enhance the vehicles available to Presbyterians to express their Christian faith and generous stewardship. We are also exploring ways to partner with Presbyterian and related organizations in the delivery of enhanced trust services, such as personal trusts, wholly charitable trusts, and charitable remainder trusts. These estate-planning devices provide an opportunity to care for loved ones while providing for planned giving opportunities.

The following individuals have been confirmed by former General Assemblies and continue in their service as directors of New Covenant Trust Company, N.A.:

D. Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Investment and Loan Program, Inc., Agency Summary

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Investment and Loan Program, Inc. is a corporation of the Church that is dedicated to providing low-cost loan funds to congregations who are building, expanding, or reshaping their space. The funds for these loans come from investments made by individual Presbyterians, churches and governing bodies. We call this group of participants the Presbyterian Investor Circle.

The Investor Circle is a group of Presbyterians who are helping churches change lives through their savings and investments. It is a circle of people, churches, presbyteries, and synods with a heart for church growth—a dedicated group from all walks of life and with different financial means.

These Presbyterians have put a portion of their savings and investments into Term Notes with the Investment & Loan Program. Their investments are used to make low-cost loans to Presbyterian Churches. They earn interest on their money and the churches get a low-cost loan.

1. They Are Making a Difference in the Lives of Churches

In the next 12 months, Presbyterian congregations will borrow about $300 million to finance building projects. Some are new churches needing a space to call their own. Some are existing churches making room for the spiritually hungry in their community. Still others are reshaping their space to accommodate new ministries.

This loan fund may be the only option for many churches. Banks can meet some of the borrowing needs, but for many, a loan from our fund may be their only choice. Imagine what would happen if each of us helped these churches get a lower-cost loan. Lower costs mean less of the church's resources will be used to pay interest and more could fund mission and ministry.

2. The Circle Is Widening

Each year, more people, churches, and governing bodies have become investors. The total amount invested reached $49.9 million by the end of 2005. Most participate by moving existing funds invested elsewhere, like savings and money market accounts or certificates of deposit, into the Investment & Loan Program's Term Notes.

3. More Churches Are Benefiting

More participants mean that we can serve more congregations.

Our investors provided new loans to existing churches like St. James Presbyterian Church in Jenks, Oklahoma and new churches like Sixes Presbyterian in Canton, Georgia.

Some years ago, St. James Presbyterian found itself losing steam and the congregation dwindling, while its community (just outside Tulsa, Oklahoma) was doubling in size. In 1995, the leaders and their then new pastor, Reverend Jane Huffstetler, began rebuilding and refocusing the mission of St. James. Membership is now over 300 and growing.

Today, with the help of participants in the Investor Circle, St. James is breaking ground on a new multipurpose building that will expand their ministry to surrounding families.

“We view ourselves as a community of welcome and of hope,” says Reverend Huffstetler. “We are reaching out to children, youth, and adults in our neighborhood, and this wonderful new project will give us the facilities to minister to the community in new ways.”

Sixes Presbyterian Church is a new church development in Canton, Georgia, north of Atlanta. In September 2002, the church started with only 22 members, and since then they have been meeting in a local elementary school. With membership now over 150, they have exceeded the functional capacity of the school. The Presbytery of Cherokee purchased a 10-acre horse farm on Sixes Road. The church is now developing the site and building their first multipurpose building, which will allow them to grow again.

Their multipurpose building will serve not only the church members but also the community at large. In this rapidly growing area, there is a lack of community meeting space for neighborhood organizations. The new building will be open for use to all types of community events.

The total amount of disbursed loan funds grew to $47.9 million in 2005.

4. Rebates Lowered Interest Cost by Over $170,000

Each investor is given an opportunity to support a particular church’s loan. This is a symbolic gesture and does not affect the investor’s risk or return on investment. As the amount of supporting investments grows for a particular borrower, they can earn rebates of the interest paid on the loan throughout the year. In fact, they can reduce their interest rate by as much as 1% through supporting investments.

In 2005, our borrowing congregations earned rebates totaling $170,000. That is $170,000 returned to the mission and ministry budgets of our borrowing congregations.

5. Coordinated Loan Services of the General Assembly

The Presbyterian Investment and Loan Program, Inc. also serves as the coordinating point for loan services of the General Assembly’s Church Loan Program. The Church Loan Program’s resources come from endowments that have been given to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) throughout decades.¹

Presbyterians can support the borrowing needs of our congregations through gifts and investments. The endowed loan funds of the Church Loan Program bring more than $193 million to support church growth. Today $105 million is disbursed and benefiting congregations.

Among the many uses of these funds are low-interest loans for churches that suffer damage from national disasters. A number of Louisiana, Texas, Mississippi, and Florida churches were devastated by the wave of hurricanes that hit both coasts and will be able to rebuild with the help of people who gave funds to support the Church as long as 160 years ago.

When combined with the support of investors in the Presbyterian Investment and Loan Program, the dollars at work in low-cost loans tops $153 million. That’s an increase in funds supporting growing churches of 4% in five years.

When your congregation needs to borrow, you have a single source ready to handle your needs—one number to call, one application, and one loan review process. The coordinated loan team will draw available funds from both the Church Loan Program’s endowed funds and the Investment and Loan Program’s investor funds to create the best package for each congregation.

ARTICLE VII

- (a) the Member's Pension Participation Basis for that year; or
- (b) the annual Employment Classification Median. Pension credits accrued under this Sec. 7.1(b) shall be reduced proportionally to the same ratio that the number of hours of employment of the Member during the Plan Year, which are less than one thousand eight hundred twenty (1,820) hours, bears to one thousand eight hundred twenty (1,820) hours.

Members participating in the Pension Plan under the Transitional Participation Coverage option of Sec. 4.4 shall accrue credits on the same basis as on which they are paying dues for Pension Coverage. No credits shall accrue to a Member for whom dues are not paid in full or who does not otherwise have Pension Coverage.

Sec. 7.2 Accrual of Credits During Disability. Notwithstanding Sec. 7.1 to the contrary, for any period during which a Disabled Member is entitled to Pension Coverage under Sec. 11.5, such Member shall accrue Pension Credits equal to the greater of one and one-quarter percent (1¼%) of:

Members who become Totally Disabled while participating in the Pension Plan under the Transitional Participation Coverage option of Sec. 4.4 shall accrue credits on the basis of their Transitional Participation Coverage, not their Effective Salary. ARTICLE VIII

RETIREMENT BENEFITS

Sec. 8.1 Normal Pension. A Member of the Pension Plan shall be entitled to initiate annual retirement benefits, payable monthly, equal to such Member's accrued Pension Credits provided that such Member has:

- (a) attained age sixty-five (65);
- (b) terminated Eligible Service except for (i) approved Post-Retirement Service under Sec. 8.8 or (ii) employment by an employing organization that has not elected to provide Traditional Coverage to employees in the Member's employment classification; and
- (c) executed in writing and filed with the Board a signed application on a form supplied by the Board for retirement benefits, which application has been accepted by the Board as being complete and evidencing entitlement to retirement benefits.

Sec. 8.2 Early Retirement Options. A vested Member who satisfies 8.1(b) and (c) above may elect to initiate early retirement benefits, payable monthly, at any time after attaining age fifty-five (55). Early retirement benefits are payable in one of the following forms:

- (a) STANDARD EARLY RETIREMENT. Under this option, the amount of the annual pension beginning as of the Benefit Commencement Date shall be (1) the Actuarial Equivalent of the Pension Credits that had accrued as of the Member's early retirement Benefit Commencement Date and that would be payable at Normal Retirement or (2) on such other basis as may have been applicable to Pension Credits accrued prior to December 31, 1986.
- (b) LEVEL INCOME BASIS EARLY RETIREMENT. A vested, Covered Member in the Pension Plan who has not attained age sixty-two (62) as of the date of early retirement and has not elected Joint and Survivor Options II or III under Sec. 8.4, may elect to initiate early retirement benefits on a level income basis, payable monthly. Under this option, the amount of the annual early retirement benefit (calculated in accordance with Sec. 8.2(a) above) payable beginning as of the Member's Benefit Commencement Date until the Member attains age sixty-two (62) shall be increased, and the amount of the annual early retirement benefit payable from age sixty-two (62) to the date of the Member's death shall be decreased. The adjusted early retirement benefit initially payable under this Sec. 8.2(b) will be approximately equal to the aggregate of:
 - (1) the Member's estimated Social Security Primary Insurance Amount if commenced at age sixty-two (62), calculated on the basis of the provisions of the federal Social Security Act in effect at the date of early Retirement ("the Estimated Social Security Benefit"), and

- (2) the Member's actuarially adjusted early retirement benefit payable at age 62 under the benefit option selected by the Member under Sec. 8.2 and 8.4 of the Pension Plan.

Upon attaining age sixty-two (62), the Member's annual early retirement benefit shall be reduced by the amount of the Estimated Social Security Benefit. The expected payments made under this option shall, in the aggregate, be the Actuarial Equivalent of the retirement benefit payable to a Member pursuant to 8.2(a) above. The survivor's pension payable under Sec. 9.1 shall not be affected by electing early retirement benefits on a level income basis. This option is not available to a Member if the adjusted retirement benefit that would be payable from the date of early retirement until attainment of age sixty-two (62) is less than the Estimated Social Security Benefit.

Sec. 8.3 Post-Normal Retirement Age Option. Under this option, a vested Member may defer commencement of his or her retirement pension benefits beyond the Normal Retirement Date but no later than the Required Beginning Date. The amount of the annual pension payable beginning on the post-Normal Retirement Age Benefit Commencement Date shall be the Actuarial Equivalent of the Pension Credits accrued as of the Member's post-Normal Retirement Age Benefit Commencement Date adjusted for the deferred Benefit Commencement Date.

Upon the death of a Member who has elected to commence his or her retirement pension under this Sec. 8.3, except to the extent an optional joint and survivor option was elected under Sec. 8.4, the annual survivor's pension payable monthly under Sec. 9.1 shall be equal to one-half (1/2) of the benefit being paid to the Member as of the date of death. If a Member elects to defer pension benefits under this Section and dies prior to commencing benefits, the survivor's pension payable under Sec. 9.1 shall be equal to one-half (1/2) of the Pension Credits accrued by the Member as of the date of death increased by the applicable factors for deferred Benefit Commencement Date (the date of death) set forth in Appendix A.

Sec. 8.4 Joint and Survivor Options (Combined Retirement Pension and Survivor's Pension Benefits Options).

- (a) ELECTION OF JOINT AND SURVIVOR COVERAGE. A legally married Member who has attained age fifty-five (55) and whose marriage occurred at least one (1) year prior to his or her retirement pension Benefit Commencement Date may elect one of the options set forth below, in substitution for both the retirement benefits described in Sec. 8.1, 8.2 or 8.3, and the survivor's pension described in Sec. 9.1, provided however that the election is made in writing on a form supplied by the Board, which election is complete and is accepted by the Board prior to the Member's retirement pension Benefit Commencement Date.
- (b) JOINT AND SURVIVOR BENEFIT OPTIONS. The expected payments made under any of the joint and survivor options described below shall, in the aggregate, be the Actuarial Equivalent of the combined retirement pension payable to a Member pursuant to Sec. 8.1, 8.2, or 8.3 above and survivor's pension payable to the Member's Surviving Spouse pursuant to Sec. 9.1.

Option I. An adjusted retirement pension shall be payable beginning upon the Benefit Commencement Date of a Member; and upon the death of the Member, a pension equal to seventy-five percent (75%) of such adjusted retirement pension shall be payable to such Member's Surviving Spouse for life.

Option II. An adjusted retirement pension shall be payable beginning upon the Benefit Commencement Date of a Member; and after the death of the Member or the Member's Spouse, whichever first occurs, a pension equal to seventy-five percent (75%) of such adjusted retirement pension shall be payable to the survivor of them for life.

Option III. An adjusted retirement pension shall be payable beginning upon the Benefit Commencement Date of a Member; and after the death of the Member or the Member's Spouse, whichever first occurs, a pension equal to sixty-six and two-thirds percent (66 2/3%) of such adjusted retirement pension shall be payable to the survivor of them for life.

Option IV. An adjusted retirement pension shall be payable beginning upon the Benefit Commencement Date of a Member; and after the death of the Member or the Member's Spouse, whichever first occurs, a pension equal to one hundred percent (100%) of such adjusted retirement pension shall be payable to the survivor of them for life.

- (c) EFFECTIVE DATE OF ELECTION. A Member's joint and survivor option election may designate an effective date for the coverage that is earlier than his or her Benefit Commencement Date, subject to the pre-retirement protection provisions described in (d) below.
- (d) PRE-RETIREMENT PROTECTION. Upon attaining age fifty-five (55), a Member may elect to subscribe for pre-retirement joint and survivor option coverage protection in the event that the Member should die prior to the Member's actual Benefit Commencement Date. If a Member who has elected pre-retirement protection dies after attaining age fifty-five (55) and after the designated effective date of the option, the Surviving Spouse shall be paid a pension for life equal to the larger of (a) the product of the percentage applicable to the survivor's pension of the elected option and the amount of the reduced retirement pension the Member would have received under the elected option had he or she retired on the date of death, or (b) the survivor's pension under Sec. 9.1. Upon commencement of Member's retirement or survivor's pension benefits, the Board shall actuarially adjust the vested Pension Credits of the Member to reflect the cost of the pre-retirement joint and survivor option coverage protection. If the Member elects to cancel the pre-retirement joint and survivor option protection prior to his or her Benefit Commencement Date or dies prior to his or her Benefits Commencement Date, the Board shall actuarially adjust the vested Pension Credits of the Member to reflect any cost of the pre-retirement joint and survivor protection during the period the coverage was in effect.

- (e) CANCELLATION OF ELECTION. A Member may cancel a joint and survivor option election at any time prior to the Member's Benefit Commencement Date, subject to the cancellation adjustment to the Pension Credits described in (d) above. Any cancellation must be made in writing on a form supplied by the Board, which cancellation must be complete and accepted by the Board on or before the last date allowable for cancellation. A Member's joint and survivor option election shall be canceled automatically upon the death of the Member's Spouse prior to the Member's Benefit Commencement Date.

Sec. 8.5 Small Benefit Distribution.

- (a) MANDATORY CASH-OUT. Notwithstanding any other provision of the Pension Plan, if the Actuarially Equivalent single-sum present value of a Terminated Vested Member's accrued Pension Credits is not greater than one thousand dollars ($1,000), the Board shall distribute the Actuarially Equivalent single-sum present value of the accrued Pension Credits in a single lump sum.
- (b) VOLUNTARY CASH-OUT. With the consent of the Member, the Board shall distribute the Actuarially Equivalent single-sum present value of a Terminated Vested Member's accrued Pension Credits in a single lump sum distribution if such value is not more than five thousand dollars ($5,000).
- (c) LUMP SUM DISTRIBUTION. Any lump sum distribution paid under this Sec. 8.5 shall be made as soon as practicable after termination of Active Membership in the Pension Plan. Upon payment of such lump sum, neither Member nor his or her eligible survivor(s) shall be entitled to any further benefits under the Pension Plan.
- (d) SMALL PENSION SETTLEMENT. Where the amount of a given monthly pension payment to a person hereunder is less than an amount which the Board may fix from time to time as being large enough to effectively administer, the Board may pay the Actuarial Equivalent of all future retirement pension and survivor's pension benefits payable on account of such Member's vested Pension Credits in one lump sum in lieu of the continuing monthly payments. Upon payment of such lump sum, neither Member nor his or her eligible survivor(s) shall be entitled to any further benefits under the Pension Plan.

Sec. 8.6 Maximum Annual Benefit. Notwithstanding anything in this Benefits Plan to the contrary, in no event shall benefits under the Pension Plan violate the limitations set forth in Section 415 of the Code or the regulations thereunder, which limits are incorporated by reference herein.

Sec. 8.7 Temporary Suspension of Retirement Pension. In the event a Retired Pensioner returns to Eligible Service with an employing organization providing Pension Coverage to employees in the Member's employment classification, except in the case of approved Post-Retirement Service under Sec. 8.8, further pension benefits payments shall be suspended until such Member again meets the eligibility requirements for the payment of a retirement pension.

During such a period of Eligible Service, such Member shall be a Covered Member of the Pension Plan and accrue additional Pension Credits. For a Member who has elected a retirement option under Sec. 8.2, the annual pension beginning as of the Member's subsequent initiation of retirement benefits from the Pension Plan will be actuarially adjusted to reflect the pension payments previously made to the Member.

Sec. 8.8 Post-Retirement Service. In certain limited special situations in which it would be beneficial to both the Church and a Retired Pensioner for the Retired Pensioner to return to Eligible Service, the Board may, pursuant to special rules which may from time to time be adopted by the Board and approved by the General Assembly, approve a return to certain designated Eligible Service by the Retired Pensioner without causing a temporary suspension of the Retired Pensioner's retirement pension under Sec. 8.7 for the period of time during which such Retired Pensioner is engaged in the approved designated Eligible Service. Such Member shall not accrue Pension Credits during such approved Post-Retirement Service.

Sec. 8.9 Payment of Benefits. All benefits payable under the Pension Plan, other than lump sum distributions pursuant to Sec. 8.5, shall be paid monthly at the beginning of each month. Payment of Pension Plan benefits shall commence as of the first day of the month consecutive with or next following the satisfaction of the applicable requirements of Sec. 8.1 or 8.2 by a Member, an eligible survivor as defined in Sec. 9.2, or an Alternate Payee as defined in Sec. 18.2.

Sec. 8.10 Sole and Exclusive Benefit. The Board shall administer the Pension Plan and the assets attributable thereto solely in the interest and for the exclusive benefit of the Members of the Benefits Plan with Pension Credits, Members receiving retirement benefits and other persons entitled to receive benefits under the Pension Plan.

Sec. 8.11 Top Heavy Rules. The rules set forth in Appendix D shall apply to the Pension Plan pursuant to their terms.

ARTICLE IX

SURVIVOR'S PENSION

Sec. 9.1 Survivor's Pension. Except to the extent an optional form of benefit was elected under Sec. 8.4 in lieu of the survivor's pension payable under this Sec. 9.1, upon the death of a Member who is vested, an annual survivor's pension shall be payable monthly in the amount of one-half (1/2) of the annual Pension Credits accrued to such Member at the time of his or her death (or such other amount as appropriate under Sec. 8.3) to the survivors of such Member in one, and only one, of the classes set forth in Sec. 9.2 below in the order of numerical priority set forth therein.

Sec. 9.2 Classes of Survivors. For purposes of Sec. 9.1 above, the survivor's pension shall be divided equally only among all of those eligible survivors in the first class listed below in which there are eligible survivors. Upon termination of payments to the last survivor in such class, the survivor's pension benefits shall be paid to the Dependent(s) in the next subsequent class, provided that the beneficiary was a Dependent on the date of the Member's death.

To such of the Member's unmarried Dependent Children under age twenty-one (21) (including unmarried Totally Disabled Children age twenty-one (21) or over) who were Dependent during the twelve (12) months immediately preceding and on the date of the Member's death, until age twenty-one (21) or earlier marriage; or in the case of an unmarried Totally Disabled Child, until marriage or the Board in its sole discretion determines that such individual is no longer Totally Disabled.

Class IV. To such of the Member's unmarried Dependent siblings under age twenty-one (21) (including unmarried Totally Disabled siblings age twenty-one (21) or over) who were Dependent during the twelve (12) months immediately preceding and on the date of the Member's death, until age twenty-one (21) or earlier marriage; or in the case of an unmarried Totally Disabled sibling, until marriage or the Board in its sole discretion determines that such individual is no longer Totally Disabled.

Sec. 9.3 Survivor's Small Pension Settlement. Where the amount of the monthly survivor's pension payment is less than an amount which the Board may fix from time to time as being large enough to administer effectively, the Board may pay the Actuarial Equivalent of all future survivor's pension benefits due to such survivor in a single lump sum payment in lieu of continuing monthly benefits. Upon payment of such lump sum, no survivor of any class shall be entitled to any further benefits under the Pension Plan.

ARTICLE XI

Sec. 11.1 Eligibility for Disability Benefits. A Member shall be entitled to disability benefits under this Article XI following certification by the Board or its medical counsel that such Member became Disabled while a Covered Member of the Death and Disability Plan and approval by the Board of the Member's disability application as timely filed and complete.

Sec. 11.2 Certification of Disability. The Board may, in its sole discretion, require an independent medical or psychiatric examination or case review to determine whether a disability should be certified or continued to be certified as a Disability. In applying for disability benefits, the Member shall furnish such evidence of Disability as the Board shall deem necessary. The Board shall have the right to require evidence of continuing Disability from time to time.

Sec. 11.3 Amount and Duration of Disability Benefit.

- (a) BEGINNING DATE. Disability benefits under this Article XI are intended to provide for a long-term disability and are only payable for a Disability that continues for more than ninety (90) consecutive days. Disability benefits shall be payable to the Member beginning on the 91st day of the period during which the Member is Disabled except that no disability benefit shall be paid to a Member for any disability arising during the first twelve (12) months of a Member's coverage under the Death and Disability Plan from a condition (physical or mental) for which a Member received a diagnosis, medical advice, treatment or medication, within the twelve (12) month period immediately preceding the date of the Member's enrollment for Death and Disability Plan coverage.
- (b) AMOUNT. The initial annual amount, payable monthly, of the disability benefit shall equal sixty percent (60%) of the Member's Effective Salary (excluding the portion of such salary in excess of the Maximum Disability Benefits Basis on the date the Disability began, as determined by the Board), less any payments received on account of the Disability, as such phrase is defined in Sec. 11.3(c). The total annual amount of the disability benefit paid under the Death and Disability Plan, including all payments on account of the Disability from all other sources, shall not be less than sixty percent (60%) of the Employment Classification Median, except that in no event shall such initial total annual amount of the disability benefit exceed the Member's Effective Salary on the date the Disability began.
- (c) OFFSETS FOR PAYMENTS RECEIVED FROM THE PENSION PLAN AND OTHER SOURCES. The total annual amount of the disability benefit paid under the Death and Disability Plan shall be offset by any amount received by the Member from other sources on account of the Disability, including but not limited to the following: monthly retirement pension benefit payments under Article VIII hereof; individual benefits under the Social Security disability income program and Social Security retirement income program; individual benefits under Workers' Compensation; Veterans' and other governmental programs for which the Member becomes eligible on account of the Disability; any disability benefit (group or individual) provided by the Member's employing organization on a non-contributory basis unless it is to cover the portion of Effective Salary in excess of the Maximum Disability Benefits Basis; any compensation, judgment, or settlement paid by any motor vehicle insurance coverage, including but not limited to uninsured/under-insured coverage carried by the Member; or any payments made to the Member by a third party as a result of the Disability other than a disability benefit payment made to a Member under other disability coverage purchased by a Member.

- (d) COST OF LIVING INCREASE IN PAYMENTS RECEIVED FROM OTHER SOURCES. In the event a Member receiving a disability benefit becomes eligible to receive a cost of living increase in benefits from Social Security, Workers' Compensation, Veterans', or any other governmental benefit program after the commencement of disability benefits hereunder, such increase shall not reduce the sum the Member is receiving as a disability benefit from the Death and Disability Plan.
- (e) IF DISABLED MEMBER IS NOT PARTICIPATING IN SOCIAL SECURITY OR ELECTS TO DEFER INITIATION OF RETIREMENT BENEFITS. If the Disabled Member is not participating in Social Security and is therefore ineligible to receive Social Security disability or retirement income benefits, the amount of the disability benefits shall be reduced by the benefit which the Board determines would have been payable under the Social Security disability or retirement income program had the Member participated thereunder based on the record of Effective Salaries on which FICA or SECA taxes would have been paid on behalf of the Member. If the Disabled Member elects to defer initiation of payment of the retirement pension under Article VIII or Social Security retirement income benefits beyond the attainment of Normal Retirement Age, the amount of the disability benefit shall be reduced beginning the first month after the Member attains Normal Retirement Age by an amount equal to the sum of the monthly retirement benefit the Member would have received as a Normal Pension Benefit payment and the Social Security retirement income benefit if the Member had initiated the benefits upon attaining Normal Retirement Age.
- (f) PAYMENTS TO DISABLED MEMBER DURING THE DISABILITY. Notwithstanding the provisions in Sec. 11.3(c), a Disabled Member may receive salary payments and/or a Manse or housing allowance from an employing organization or earned compensation from other organizations while receiving disability benefits provided that the work is approved by the Board, as required under Sec. 11.7, and the earnings are reported to the Board. If the total annual payments received by the Member from these sources exceeds forty percent (40%) of the Member's Effective Salary on the date the Disability began, the Board may reduce the Member's disability benefits by the amount that the payments exceed the forty percent (40%).

If the employing organization of a Disabled Member makes a salary payment to the Member and/or provides a Manse or housing allowance during the Disability, the amount of the disability benefit shall be reduced only by the amount in excess of any such employer compensation over forty percent (40%) of the Member's Effective Salary on the date the Disability began. If the Disabled Member has other earned income which, together with any such employer compensation, exceeds forty percent (40%) of the Member's Effective Salary on the date the Disability began, the Board may reduce the disability benefit by all or part of such excess.

- (g) DURATION OF DISABILITY BENEFIT. Payment of a disability benefit shall continue as long as a Member remains Disabled but not beyond the date or duration specified below:
 - (1) The first day of the month following the date on which the Disabled Member attains age sixty-five (65), if the disability benefit commenced prior to the Member's attainment of age sixty-two (62);

- (h) DISABILITY BENEFIT INCREASES. Should Death and Disability Plan assets, due to favorable investment and actuarial experience, be accumulated over and above those required for actuarial reserves, general contingency reserves, and other special reserves, as determined by the Board, such funds may, in the sole discretion of the Board, be allocated among the Members of the Death and Disability Plan in the form of increased benefits in such manner as to equitably distribute such increases among those persons who on the date of such increases are receiving disability benefits (a “Disability Benefit Increase”). No person shall have a right to any such increase unless and until it has been authorized, and such authorization, availability of funds, determination of eligibility and manner of distribution shall be solely within the discretion of the Board. Disability Benefit Increases granted by the Board since the adoption of the Benefit Plan in 1987 are listed in Appendix C.

Sec. 11.4 Minimum Annual Disability Benefit. Regardless of any payments on account of the Disability from sources other than the Death and Disability Plan, the annual disability benefit payable pursuant to Sec. 11.3 shall not be less than six hundred dollars ($600).

Sec. 11.5 Waiver of Dues and Accrual of Pension Credits. Pension Coverage under this Section shall only continue until the Member’s Normal Retirement Date and no additional Pension Credits shall accrue to such Disabled Member thereafter.

Sec. 11.6 Protection for Survivors. - (b) The Board in its sole discretion may continue to pay all or a portion of the disability benefits, or continue eligibility for coverage under the Medical Plan only, for limited rehabilitation or trial work periods provided the Disabled Member continues under the regular care of his or her duly licensed Physician. Any reduction in disability benefits will be made in accordance with Sec. 11.3(f).

Sec. 11.8 Time Limit for Application for Disability Benefits. A disability benefits application must be received by the Board within twelve (12) calendar months after the date the Disability initially occurred unless it can be shown that an earlier filing was not reasonably possible and that the disability application was furnished as soon as it was reasonably possible.

No credit shall be given for any period of creditable coverage if after such period and before the enrollment date there was a sixty-three (63) day period during all of which that Member or Eligible Family member was not covered under any creditable coverage.
- (20) Charges by a Hospital for non-emergency admissions on a Friday or a Saturday. This does not apply if surgery is performed within 24 hours of admission.
- (21) All charges for treatment or supplies for (a) weak, strained, flat, unstable or unbalanced feet, metatarsalgia or bunions, except open cutting operations, or (b) corns, callouses or toenails, except foot orthotics prescribed for the treatment of metabolic, peripheral-vascular disease or other medical condition under Sec. 13.1(j)(19). Charges for orthopedic shoes or orthopedic prescription devices to be attached to or placed in shoes are not covered except as provided in Sec. 13.1(j)(19).
- (22) Charges for outpatient prescription drugs that were not purchased in accordance with the provisions of the Medical Plan's Prescription Drug Program. See Secs. 13.1(w), 13.4, 13.5, 13.6 and 13.7(h).
- (23) Charges for routine maintenance of medical equipment.

Sec. 13.10 Rights of Subrogation and Reimbursement.

- (a) Medical Costs otherwise reimbursable by the Medical Plan shall not be payable to or for a Member or an Eligible Family member or anyone acting on behalf of a Member or Eligible Family member covered under the Medical Plan when such Medical Costs are subject to recovery from another source including, but not limited to, reimbursement for damages caused from the act or omission of a third party or reimbursement from other insurance coverage (other than another group health plan subject to the Dual Coverage provision set forth in Sec. 13.11) maintained by or on behalf of the Member or Eligible Family member.
- (b) However, the Board may, in its sole discretion, advance sums from the Medical Plan to a Member or Eligible Family member or anyone acting on his or her behalf for eligible Medical Costs that are excluded under Subsection (a) of this Section until such time as the Member or the Eligible Family member or person acting on behalf of the Member or Eligible Family member recovers the reimbursement from the other source, if the Member or Eligible Family member or person acting on behalf of the Member or Eligible Family member agrees in writing, by signing an agreement in a form acceptable to the Board:

- (1) to repay the Board in full all sums advanced by the Board for Medical Costs relating to the injury or illness from any judgment, settlement or reimbursement he or she receives regardless of how the proceeds of the judgment or settlement are characterized and without deduction for any costs or fees of any nature therefrom;
 - (2) to subrogate any right of recovery he or she may have against the other source; and
 - (3) to cooperate fully with the Board in assisting it to protect its legal rights under the agreement and this Section.
- (c) The rights of reimbursement and subrogation granted under this Section shall constitute a lien and first priority claim against any person or entity, to be paid before any other claims are paid, whether or not the Member or an Eligible Family member has been made whole or has recovered the total amount of damages incurred. The entire amount of any damages recovered, not only the part specifically allocated to Medical Costs, shall be made available by the Member or Eligible Family member for the repayment of the reimbursement and subrogation obligation under this Section.

Sec. 13.11 Dual Coverage. Reimbursement of Medical Costs under the Medical Plan shall be limited to the extent that other coverage is available to the Member or his or her Eligible Family. The Medical Plan shall take into account any coverage such person has under any other group and nongroup insurance contract, health maintenance organization contracts, closed panel plans or other forms of group or group-type coverage (whether insured or uninsured); medical care components of long-term care contracts, medical benefits under group or individual automobile contracts and Medicare or any other federal governmental plan, as permitted by law. The benefits under the Medical Plan shall be coordinated as provided in Subsection (a) below. For purposes of this Section, benefits provided in the form of services rather than cash payments shall be assigned a reasonable cash value, and benefits which may be payable but for which no claim has been made shall be taken into account.

- (a) ORDER AND PRIORITY OF BENEFITS. The primary plan shall pay its benefits according to its terms of coverage and without regard to the benefits under any other plan. If coverage under this Medical Plan is secondary, the Medical Plan shall coordinate benefits on a maintenance of benefits basis. In such event, the Medical Plan shall pay an amount equal to the reimbursable amount under the Medical Plan (as if the Medical Plan were primary) less any amount actually paid by the primary plan. If the Medical Plan is both the primary and secondary plan by reason of direct coverage by multiple Members in an Eligible Family (as defined in Sec. 13.1(d)), the Medical Plan shall pay on a coordination of benefits basis. In such event, the Medical Plan shall pay an amount equal to the reimbursable amount under each plan as if each were primary but in no event shall the total of all benefits paid or payable under all plans exceed the total reimbursable Medical Costs actually incurred.

The following rules in the order listed below shall apply to the paying of benefits:

- (1) A plan which does not have a coordination of benefits provision shall be primary.
- (2) The benefits of a plan which covers the person as an active employee shall be considered primary, however in the event the person is a Medicare beneficiary and, as a result of federal law, Medicare is secondary to the plan covering the person as a dependent and primary to the plan covering the person as an active employee, then the plan covering the person as an active employee is the secondary plan and the other plan is the primary plan.
- (3) The benefits of a plan which covers the person other than as a Dependent shall be considered primary, however in the event the person is a Medicare beneficiary and, as a result of federal law, Medicare is secondary to the plan covering the person as a dependent and primary to the plan covering the person as other than a Dependent, then the plan covering the person as other than a Dependent is the secondary plan and the other plan is the primary plan.
- (4) The benefits of a plan which covers the person as a Dependent Child whose parents are married or are living together, whether or not they have ever been married, the plan of the parent whose birthday falls earlier in the calendar year is primary or if both parents have the same birthday, the plan that has covered a parent longest is primary.
- (5) The benefits of a plan which covers the person as a Dependent Child whose parents are divorced or separated or not living together, whether or not they have ever been married, shall be paid in the following order:
 - (a) If a court decree has established financial responsibility for the health care expenses of the Child and the plan of that parent has actual knowledge of those terms, the plan of the parent responsible shall be primary for those plan years commencing after the plan is given notice of the court decree.
 - (b) If a court decree states that both parents are responsible for the Dependent Child's health care expenses or health care coverage or if a court decree states that the parents have joint custody without specifying that one parent has responsibility for the health care expenses or health care coverage of the Dependent Child, the provisions of Sec. 13.11(a)(4) shall determine the order of benefits.

- (c) If there is no court decree allocating responsibility for the Dependent Child's health care expenses or health care coverage, the order of benefits for the Dependent Child are as follows:
 - (i) The plan of the parent with custody shall be primary.
 - (ii) The plan of the step-parent married to the parent with custody shall be primary.
 - (iii) The plan of the parent not having custody shall be primary.
 - (iv) The plan covering the spouse of the parent not having custody shall be primary.
- (6) For a Dependent Child covered under more than one plan of individuals who are not the parents of the child, the provisions of Sec. 13.11(a)(4) or (5) shall determine the order of benefits as if those individuals were the parents of the Dependent Child.
- (7) When rules (1) through (6) above do not establish an order of benefit determination, the benefits of a plan which has covered the person for the longer period of time shall be primary.
- (8) When rules (1) through (7) above do not establish an order of benefit determination, the allowable expenses shall be shared equally between the plans, however, the Medical Plan will not pay more than it would have paid had it been primary.
- (9) In the case of Disabled Members and Dependent Totally Disabled Children who are eligible for Medicare under the Social Security Disability Insurance benefits program, the Medical Plan shall be secondary to Medicare coverage.
- (10) In the case of a health maintenance organization type plan or other form of plan with fixed maximum fees for providers, this Medical Plan shall not cover any charges in excess of what that participating provider has agreed to accept as payment.
- (11) When the Medical Plan is secondary, it shall not recognize a reduction of the allowable expense by the primary plan if the reduction is taken because the covered person does not comply with the primary plan's provisions concerning second surgical opinions or precertification of admissions or services or because the covered person has a lower or no benefit because the covered person did not use a preferred provider.
- (12) When the Medical Plan is secondary, it may reduce its benefits so that the total benefits paid or provided by all plans during a plan year are not more than the total allowable expenses. The Medical Plan shall credit to its deductible any amounts it would have credited to its deductible in the absence of any other health care coverage.

- (b) FACILITY OF PAYMENT. The Board in its sole determination shall have the right to repay any party for a benefit payment made by that party when the payment should have been made by the Board. Amounts so paid shall be deemed benefits paid under this Medical Plan.
- (c) RIGHT OF RECOVERY. The Board shall have the right to recover from the Member any sum paid by the Board which should have been paid by another plan.

Sec. 13.12 Exchange of Health Plan Information. Subject to the Administrative Simplification provisions of the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996, as amended, and the regulations promulgated thereunder, as they may be amended from time to time (collectively, “HIPAA”) and, in particular, the rules under HIPAA pertaining to the privacy of Individually Identifiable Health Information (“Protected Health Information”) and the security of electronic Protected Health Information as set forth in 45 C.F.R. Subtitle A, Part 164, Subpart E, as it may be amended from time to time (the “HIPAA Rules”) and any more stringent state law applicable to the Benefits Plan, the Board shall have the right to give and receive such information as it, in its sole discretion, deems necessary to administer the Medical Plan and any other benefits plan or program administered or sponsored by the Board without notice to or obtaining the consent of any person. The Member shall be required to furnish to the Board such information as the Board or the plan’s agents may require in connection with any medical or dental benefit claim. The Board’s use of the information shall be subject to the provisions of Sec. 13.16. All other uses and disclosures of information by the plan shall be as set forth in the plan’s Notice of Privacy Practices provided to Members under the HIPAA Rules.

Sec. 13.13 Termination of Coverage. Active Medical Program coverage shall terminate upon the occurrence of any one of the events described in (a) through (e) below. Upon termination of Active Medical Program coverage upon the occurrence of any one of the events described in (a) through (d) below, an affected Member and/or his or her Eligible Family members may be eligible for continued coverage under the Medical Continuation Program or the Medicare Supplement Program as set forth in Secs 13.14, 13.15, 14.1 and 14.2. Active Medical Program coverage shall terminate upon:

- (a) The retirement of a Member.
- (b) The date of termination of Eligible Service of a Member, except that Members who become Retired Pensioners and the Eligible Family members who were enrolled in the Traditional Program on the date of termination of Eligible Service shall continue to be covered under Active Medical Program coverage (or Medicare Supplement coverage if Medicare eligible) for thirty (30) days after one (1) year of Plan Participation by the Member. Such continuation of Active Medical Program coverage, at no additional dues to the Church, employing organization or Member, shall commence on the date of termination of Eligible Service. Thereafter, the Member and the Eligible Family members may be eligible for Medical Continuation Program (for Terminated Vested Members) or Medicare Supplement coverage (for Retired Pensioners) under Secs. 13.15, 14.1 and 14.2.

- (c) The date of death of a Member except that the Eligible Family of such Member may be eligible for Active Medical Program Coverage under Secs. 13.13(b) and 13.14 and, thereafter, Medical Continuation Program or Medicare Supplement coverage under Secs. 13.15, 14.1 and 14.2.
- (d) The last day of the period for which a dues payment for Active Medical Program coverage has been made if the next subsequent dues payment is not received by the Board by the date required.
- (e) The date the employing organization terminates Active Medical Program coverage and withdraws its employees or a class of its employees from Medical Plan participation.

Sec. 13.14 Extension of Active Medical Program Coverage on Traditional Program

Member's Death or Divorce. If a Traditional Program Member dies or becomes divorced while enrolled in the Active Medical Program, the same coverage shall be continued for the Member's Surviving or divorced Spouse and/or the Member's Children who were covered under the Active Medical Program on the date of such Member's death or divorce for a period of twelve (12) months from the date of death and ninety (90) days from the date of divorce of such Member. No payment of dues or other subscription charges shall be required during this free coverage period. Thereafter, the Member's Surviving or divorced Spouse and/or the Member's Children who were covered under the Active Medical Program may subscribe for Medical Continuation Program coverage under Sec. 13.15 and Sec. 14.1 or the Medicare Supplement under Sec. 14.2 as appropriate.

Sec. 13.15 Medical Continuation Coverage. On or before the expiration of Active Medical Program coverage, those persons for whom coverage was in effect on the date prior to the occurrence of an event described in Sec. 13.13(a) through (d) or on the date of death or divorce of the Member shall have the option of subscribing for continued Medical Plan coverage under the Medical Continuation Program for the duration specified below. To be eligible for Medical Continuation Program coverage, a Member or Eligible Family member must complete and forward the appropriate application form for continuation of coverage to the Board prior to the expiration of coverage, and pay to the Board monthly in advance, or at such other time or times as may be specified by the Board, such amount as the Board may establish from time to time for Medical Continuation Program coverage. Any minor children born to, adopted by or placed for adoption with a Member, Spouse, Surviving Spouse or divorced Spouse subscribing for Medical Continuation Program coverage shall also be eligible for coverage for the duration of the parent's subscription period.

Medical Continuation Program coverage is not available to a Member and his or her Eligible Family members if the termination of Active Medical Program coverage is due to an event described in Sec. 13.13(e) (relating to termination of participation by employing organization).

Except as otherwise provided herein, Medical Continuation Program coverage shall be available for the following periods, unless otherwise provided by applicable law:

- (a) A Surviving or divorced Spouse may subscribe from the last date of Active Medical Program coverage until the first day of eligibility for Medicare;
- (b) Eligible Children may subscribe from the last date of Active Medical Program coverage for a period of time that is the greater of thirty-six (36) months or the attainment of age twenty-one (21) (or age twenty-five (25) if the Child is a full-time student);
- (c) A Dependent Totally Disabled Child may subscribe from the last date of Active Medical Program coverage for such period that the Child remains Totally Disabled;
- (d) If a Member or Eligible Family member is or becomes totally disabled (as defined by the Social Security Act) at any time during the first sixty (60) days of Medical Continuation Program coverage, the subscription period shall be extended from eighteen (18) months to twenty-nine (29) months; and
- (e) Members terminated from Eligible Service and their Eligible Family members may subscribe for a period of eighteen (18) months from the last date of Active Medical Program coverage. Notwithstanding the foregoing sentence, if the Member, on the date active coverage terminated, either satisfied the Rule of Seventy or met the requirements for retirement of the employing organization that enrolled the Member in the Affiliated Benefits Program with the retiree medical coverage option, the Member and his or her Eligible Family members (as long as they continue to remain Eligible Family members) may subscribe for Medical Continuation Program coverage until the first day of eligibility for Medicare.

Failure to pay any subscription amount required by Sec. 13.15 when due shall terminate coverage.

If a Surviving Spouse, divorced Spouse or a Terminated Vested Member who meets the requirements of the Rule of Seventy maintains enrollment in the Medical Continuation Program coverage through the date of eligibility for Medicare, or obtains a waiver of the continuous coverage requirement from the Board as set forth in Sec. 14.1 below, such Surviving Spouse, divorced Spouse or Terminated Vested Member is eligible to subscribe for Medicare Supplement Program coverage under Sec. 14.2.

Sec. 13.16 Use of Protected Health Information by Board. The provisions of this Section are intended to comply with the HIPAA Rules relating to use by and disclosure of Protected Health Information (as defined in the HIPAA Rules) to plan sponsors.

- (a) Definitions. Each capitalized term used in this Section that is not otherwise defined in the Benefits Plan shall have the meaning ascribed to it under HIPAA.

- (b) Required Uses and Disclosures of Protected Health Information. Except as otherwise set forth herein, the Medical Plan, and any other health plan that is part of the Benefits Plan's Organized Health Care Arrangement (individually and collectively referred to herein as "Health Plan") or any Health Insurance Issuer may disclose Protected Health Information of the Health Plan to the Board in its capacity as plan sponsor for the following uses and disclosures:
- (1) for disclosure to the Secretary of Health and Human Services, when required by the Secretary for its investigation or determination of the compliance of the Health Plan with the HIPAA Rules;
 - (2) for disclosure to a Member, Spouse or Dependent of that individual's Protected Health Information upon the individual's written request or in appropriate response to an exercise by the Member, Spouse or Dependent of any other of his or her individual rights with respect to Protected Health Information, all in accordance with the requirements of the HIPAA Rules; and
 - (3) for use or disclosure to other persons, as required by applicable law other than HIPAA, provided that nothing in this Section shall permit or require the use by or disclosure of Protected Health Information to the Board to the extent such disclosure is prohibited by HIPAA.
- (c) Permitted Uses and Disclosures of Protected Health Information. Except as otherwise set forth herein, the Protected Health Information created or received by the Health Plan or any Health Insurance Issuer providing benefits under the Health Plan shall be permitted to be disclosed to the Board (upon receipt from the Board of a certification that it shall comply with the restrictions as to the use of Protected Health Information and the other provisions set forth in this Section) for purposes of the Health Plan's administration functions that the Board performs on behalf of the Health Plan, or as otherwise required by HIPAA, including without limitation:
- (1) for treatment, payment or health care operations;
 - (2) for other wellness, prevention and disease management programs;
 - (3) for benefits appeals and complaints;
 - (4) for purposes relating to subpoenas and other court orders; and
 - (5) pursuant to and in accordance with a valid authorization under the HIPAA Rules.

Nothing in this subsection shall permit or require the disclosure of Protected Health Information to the Board to the extent such disclosure is prohibited by HIPAA.

- (d) Requirements of Board. The Board shall:
- (1) not use or disclose Protected Health Information received from the Health Plan or any Health Insurance Issuer providing benefits under the Health Plan, other than as permitted by the Health Plan document, for Health Plan administration, or as otherwise required by law;
 - (2) ensure that any agent (including a subcontractor) to whom the Board provides Protected Health Information received from the Health Plan or any Health Insurance Issuer providing benefits thereunder, agrees to the same restrictions and conditions with respect to Protected Health Information as they apply or applied to the Board under this Section;
 - (3) not use or disclose Protected Health Information received from the Health Plan or any Health Insurance Issuer providing benefits under the Health Plan, for employment-related actions or decisions or in connection with any employee benefit plan or benefit provided by the Board other than the Health Plan or a health benefit provided under the Health Plan;
 - (4) report to the Health Plan or Health Insurance Issuer providing benefits thereunder, as applicable, any use or disclosure of Protected Health Information received from the Health Plan or Health Insurance Issuer providing benefits under the Health Plan, that is inconsistent with the uses or disclosures required or permitted under this Section and of which the Board becomes aware;
 - (5) make the Protected Health Information of a Member, Spouse or Dependent available to that individual, upon the individual's written request, in accordance with the requirements of the HIPAA Rules;
 - (6) incorporate amendments of Protected Health Information of a Member, Spouse or Dependent as, and to the extent, required by the HIPAA Rules;
 - (7) make available to a Member, Spouse or Dependent upon the individual's written request, the information necessary to provide an accounting of the disclosures of Protected Health Information as, and to the extent, required by the HIPAA Rules;
 - (8) make the Board's internal practices, books and records relating to the use and disclosure of Protected Health Information received from the Health Plan or any Health Insurance Issuer providing benefits under the Health Plan, available to the Secretary of Health and Human Services for determinations as to the compliance of the Health Plan with HIPAA;
 - (9) if feasible, return or destroy all Protected Health Information received from the Health Plan or any Health Insurance Issuer providing benefits under the Health Plan, that the Board maintains and retain no copies thereof; or, if such return or destruction is not feasible, limit further uses and disclosures of Protected Health Information to the purposes that make the destruction or return infeasible; and

- (10) ensure that the requirements set forth in subsections (e)(i) and (ii) are satisfied with respect to Protected Health Information.

(e) Access to Protected Health Information.

- (1) Access. Access to and use of Protected Health Information shall be limited to employees or agents of the Board who perform the functions relating to Health Plan administration on behalf of or in connection with the Health Plan, as described in subsections (b) and (c), in order to perform such activities.
- (2) Minimum Necessary. Except as to a use or disclosure of information related to the treatment of an individual, when using or disclosing Protected Health Information or when requesting Protected Health Information from another entity, the Health Plan or any individual acting on behalf of the Health Plan, including the Board, must make reasonable efforts to limit Protected Health Information to the minimum necessary to accomplish the intended purpose of the use, disclosure or request. Adherence to policies established by the Health Plan with respect to the use, disclosure, or request of Protected Health Information shall be deemed to constitute such an effort. Employee(s) of the Board responsible for such Health Plan administration activities include employees from:
 - (a) Healthcare Benefits;
 - (b) Member Services;
 - (c) Information Technology;
 - (d) Mailroom/Fax Delivery;
 - (e) Finance/Treasury;

 - (h) Accounting; and
 - (i) Audit.

- (f) Security of Electronic Protected Health Information. With respect to electronic Protected Health Information, Board shall
- (1) implement administrative, physical and technical safeguards that reasonably and appropriately protect the confidentiality, integrity and availability of electronic Protected Health Information that it creates, maintains or transmits on behalf of the Plan;
 - (2) ensure that the adequate separation of the members of its Workforce who have access to electronic Protected Health Information pursuant to Section 5(i) is supported by reasonable and appropriate security measures;
 - (3) report to the Plan any security incidents of which it becomes aware; and
 - (4) ensure that any agent, including a subcontractor, to whom it provides electronic Protected Health Information agrees to implement reasonable and appropriate security measures to protect the information.
- (g) Non-compliance. If the Health Plan becomes aware of any issues relating to non-compliance with the requirements of this Section, the Health Plan's privacy or security official shall undertake an investigation to determine the extent, if any, of such non-compliance; the individuals, policies, or practices responsible for the non-compliance; and appropriate means for curing or mitigating the effects of non-compliance and preventing such non-compliance in the future. Any individual or entity who is determined by the Health Plan to be responsible for such non-compliance, shall be subject to disciplinary action, as determined by the Health Plan and Board, in their sole discretion, including, but not limited to, one or more of the following: termination of Health Plan-related responsibilities, required additional training and education with respect to the use or disclosure of or request for Protected Health Information, limitations on or revocation of access to Protected Health Information, reprimand, diminution of duties, suspension, disqualification for bonus or other pay or promotion, demotion in pay or status, removal from position or discharge.
- (h) Authorized Representative. The Health Plan shall recognize an individual who is the personal representative or an authorized representative of a Member, Spouse or Dependent as if the individual were the Member, Spouse or Dependent himself or herself, provided that the individual has designated the personal representative in accordance with state law or an authorized representative in accordance with the procedures established by the Health Plan.
- (i) Action by the Board. The Board may act as prescribed in this Section or may delegate, in writing and in its sole discretion, any and all of its functions under this Section to a committee, to the Health Plan's privacy and security officials, privacy contact person responsible for receiving complaints, or other officer or employee, or to a group of officers or employees of the Board. - (c) WAIVER OF CONTINUOUS MEDICAL PLAN REQUIREMENT. A Member, on behalf of the Member and/or the Member's Spouse and/or Eligible Family members, Surviving Spouse or divorced Spouse may apply for a waiver of the continuous Medical Plan coverage requirement described in Sec. 14.1(b) (including the subsequent waiver of Medicare Supplement) if other comparable employer group medical coverage is in effect for such person (including retiree coverage). Such person may apply for a waiver of the continuous Medical Plan coverage requirement by filing a written application with the Board on a form supplied by the Board, together with evidence of the other coverage, which application is subject to the approval of the Board.

Sec. 14.2 Post-Retirement Medicare Supplement Coverage Following Eligibility for Medicare. Members who satisfy the Rule of Seventy and their Spouses, Surviving Spouses, divorced Spouses and/or Eligible Family members shall each have the option to subscribe for the Medicare Supplement Program benefits as set forth in Sec. 14.3. An eligible individual may continue an existing waiver or apply for a waiver of the continuous coverage requirement if other comparable employer group medical coverage is in effect for such person (including retiree coverage). Coverage will commence as of the latest of the date of termination of Active Medical Program coverage, the cancellation of any Waiver of Continuous Coverage, or the first day of the month during which such person becomes eligible for Medicare, provided that the person is enrolled in both Part A and Part B of Medicare and:

- (a) The Member and eligible Dependents were participants in the Group Medical Plan for Retired Personnel and their Families administered by the Board of Annuities and Relief of the Church on December 31, 1986;

- (d) Medicare Supplement Program coverage shall not be available to any person enrolled in a Medicare Advantage program.
- (e) Medicare Supplement Program coverage may also be offered to a Terminated Vested Member, retired Member, Spouse of a Terminated Vested Member or retired Member and Dependent Totally Disabled Child who is eligible for and participating in Part A and Part B of Medicare and who does not otherwise qualify under Sec. 14.2 upon payment of such subscription charge and under such administrative rules and regulations as the Board may establish from time to time.

Sec. 14.3 Medicare Supplement Program. Medicare Supplement Program coverage for those subscribing persons eligible under Sec. 14.2 shall be a supplement to the benefits provided by Medicare. Medicare Supplement Program coverage shall not be available to a subscribing person for any period of time during which such subscribing person is not enrolled in both Part A and Part B of Medicare.

- (a) MEDICARE SUPPLEMENT REIMBURSEMENT. Subject to the managed care provisions of Sec. 13.7, the limitations in Sec. 13.9, the provisions of Sec. 14.3(b) and the Medicare Supplement deductible and maximum copayment provisions of Sec. 14.3(c) and (d), the Medical Plan shall reimburse a person covered hereunder for eighty percent (80%) of the Medical Costs allowable under Medicare, other than Prescription Drug Program charges, as defined in Sec. 13.1(w), less any amount reimbursable by Medicare for such Medical Costs regardless of whether or not such allowable amount is reimbursed by Medicare. Prescription Drug Program charges shall be reimbursed as set forth in Secs. 13.4, 13.7(h), 14.3(b)(4) and (5), 14.3(c)(2), 14.3(d) and 14.3(g).

(b) MEDICARE SUPPLEMENT REIMBURSEMENT LIMITATIONS. The Medical Costs reimbursed under Sec. 14.3(a) shall not include charges:

- (1) exceeding one hundred dollars ($100.00) in any one day made by a registered nurse or by a licensed practical nurse if prescribed by a Physician;
- (2) exceeding the following limits for mental health treatment:

Inpatient care - The maximum benefits payable for charges for treatment of nervous and mental disorders if confined to a Hospital or licensed treatment facility shall be limited to fifty thousand dollars ($50,000) in any one calendar year and to two hundred thousand dollars ($200,000) for each covered person's lifetime.

Outpatient care - Charges for treatment provided by a psychiatrist, clinical psychologist Ph.D., Diplomate or Fellow Member of the Association of Pastoral Counselors, clinical marriage counselor or family therapist who is either state licensed or a clinical member of the American Association for Marriage and Family Therapy, licensed clinical social worker, or psychiatric nurse specialist on an outpatient basis shall be limited to two thousand dollars ($2,000) per person in any one calendar year.

These limits apply to Medicare Supplement subscribers instead of the limitations set forth in Sec. 13.7(f).

- (3) of a provider that has elected not to participate in the Medicare program,
- (4) for outpatient prescription drugs incurred when the Medicare Supplement subscriber is enrolled in a Medicare Part D Plan; or
- (5) incurred when the Medicare Supplement subscriber is enrolled in a Medicare Advantage program.

(c) ANNUAL MEDICARE SUPPLEMENT DEDUCTIBLES. No benefits under Sec. 14.3 shall be paid until the reimbursable Medical Costs of an individual exceed the Annual Deductibles set forth below:

- (2) The Annual Deductible for payment of Medical Costs through the Prescription Drug Program shall be one hundred dollars ($100).

(d) ANNUAL MEDICARE SUPPLEMENT MAXIMUM COPAYMENT LIMITS. In the event that during a given calendar year the twenty percent (20%)

copayments of reimbursable Medical Costs incurred by an individual under Sec. 14.3(a), when combined with the applicable deductible under Sec. 14.3(c)(1), exceed four percent (4%) of the Pastors' Median, such excess of Medical Costs for the balance of the calendar year shall be reimbursed at one hundred percent (100%). In the event that during a given calendar year the Prescription Drug Program copayment charges paid by an individual, when combined with the applicable annual deductible, but exclusive of copayment charges for non-formulary brand-name drugs, exceed two thousand dollars ($2,000), no further copayment shall be required for the balance of that calendar year and all reimbursable Prescription Drug Program charges (other than copayments for non-formulary brand-name drug charges) in excess thereof shall be paid to the Member on the basis of one hundred percent (100%) reimbursement, subject to the managed care provisions of Sec. 13.7(h).

- (e) SUBSCRIPTION CHARGE FOR MEDICARE SUPPLEMENT. The charges to provide coverage under Sec. 14.3 shall be payable monthly in advance or at such other time or times as may be established by the Board and shall be in such amounts as the Board, in its sole discretion, deems necessary to provide such coverage. The subscription charge for a person who becomes eligible under Sec. 14.2 for coverage provided by this Sec. 14.3 shall be waived for the remainder of the month in which the Member retires provided the subscription charge for Medical Plan coverage for such person has not been previously waived under Sec. 13.14 or 14.1. ARTICLE XVII

OPTIONAL RETIREMENT SAVINGS PLAN

Sec. 17.1 Retirement Savings Plan. The Board shall, from time to time, adopt such provisions and rules and regulations applicable thereto as it, in its sole discretion, deems necessary or appropriate for the administration of a Retirement Savings Plan of the Church to be offered to the Members of this Benefits Plan as an optional benefit.

ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS

ARTICLE XVIII

ADMINISTRATION

Sec. 18.1 Administration of Benefits Plan. The Board shall administer the Benefits Plan and have the sole and exclusive discretion and authority to interpret its provisions. It shall be the fundamental obligation of the Board to maintain the financial and actuarial soundness of the Benefits Plan at all times and to administer the Benefits Plan and the Benefits Plan assets solely in the interest of the Members and their eligible Dependents in accordance with its terms.

Sec. 18.2 Assignment of Benefits. The interest of Members and all other persons entitled to receive any benefit or payment under the Benefits Plan shall not be subject to anticipation, assignment, attachment, or to voluntary or involuntary alienation except as provided hereinafter. A Spouse, former Spouse, Child or other Dependent of a Member (“Alternate Payee”) may, in the event of a divorce or legal separation (in states where recognized) between a Member and such Member’s Spouse, become entitled to receive a portion of the Member’s retirement, survivor’s pension or disability benefits. Such a benefit, or portion thereof, shall only be payable to an Alternate Payee pursuant to a domestic relations order issued by a court of competent jurisdiction and accepted by the Board, provided however that no such order shall be valid and binding upon the Board if such order entitles an Alternate Payee to receive a benefit which (a) requires any type or form of benefit, payment or option not permitted by the Benefits Plan; (b) requires the acceleration of any benefit payment hereunder except that an Alternate Payee shall be permitted to initiate payment of his or her retirement pension benefits at the earliest retirement date of the Member permitted by the Pension Plan; (c) requires the Benefits Plan to provide increased benefits (determined on the basis of an actuarial valuation of the Actuary of the Benefits Plan) or (d) requires the payment of benefits which are being paid to another Alternate Payee pursuant to a previous domestic relations order issued by a court of competent jurisdiction. Any such entitlement paid to an Alternate Payee shall reduce the amount of any benefit that would otherwise, absent the entitlement paid to the Alternate Payee, have been payable to the Member or any succeeding Spouse or Dependent of the Member, as the case may be, to the extent of the entitlement paid to the Alternate Payee. Determinations of the Board’s Appeals Board shall be conclusive and binding.

Sec. 18.3 Payments to Incapacitated Payee. If any payee hereunder is, in the judgment of the Board, legally, physically, or mentally incapable of personally receiving and receipting for any payments due hereunder, or is deceased, the Board may make payments thereof to such other person, persons or institution as, in the Board’s sole opinion, are then maintaining or have custody of such payee, until a guardian, committee, or other legal representative of such payee shall be duly appointed and claim made by such appointee, or in the case of a deceased Member or payee, to any person or persons appearing to the Board to be equitably entitled to the same. Such payment shall constitute a full discharge of the liability of the Board to the extent thereof.

Sec. 18.4 Payees Who Cannot Be Located. In the event that any person who is entitled to a benefit or payment under the Benefits Plan cannot, after a reasonable search, be located within six years after becoming entitled to such benefit or payment, the full commuted value or amount of said benefit or payment shall be paid into the reserve funds of the Plan and no person shall have a further right or claim to the same.

Sec. 18.5 Comity Agreements. Comity agreements between the Church and other denominations may be made by the Board and will become effective only when approved by the General Assembly. The purpose of such comity agreements will be to establish an equitable basis for the maintenance of accrued Pension Credits for those ministers who leave the Church while in good standing to become ministers of another denomination and for the maintenance of similar Pension Credits by another denomination for those of its ministers who transfer to the Church.

Sec. 18.6 Notices. Any notice required by the terms of the Benefits Plan shall be in writing and, if sent by U.S. Mail, postage pre-paid to a Member or other payee to his or her last known address as shown on the records of the Board, or to the Board at its registered office, shall be conclusively presumed to have been given to such party for all purposes under the Benefits Plan.

Sec. 18.7 Rules Applicable to Specialized Ministries and Other Church Groups. The Board shall, from time to time, make such rules and regulations as it, in its sole discretion, deems necessary or appropriate to administer the Benefits Plan with regard to seminary students, Members engaged in a validated ministry beyond the jurisdiction of the Church, and other groups within the Church.

Sec. 18.8 Administrative Rules. The Board shall, from time to time, make such rules and regulations as it, in its sole discretion, deems necessary or appropriate to administer the Benefits Plan or any part thereof. The determination of any amount due or eligibility for any benefits pursuant to the Benefits Plan shall be conclusive and binding.

Sec. 18.9 Appeals. The Board shall establish a process by which a Member or a Member's duly authorized representative may obtain a review of any denial of all or a portion of a claim for benefits by a Member or a Member's beneficiary, or an adverse eligibility determination. The initial request for a review of a claim denial or adverse eligibility determination must be made by the Member or the Member's authorized representative in writing within one hundred eighty (180) days of the date of the Board's notice of denial of the claim or adverse eligibility determination.

The appeal process shall provide that prior to any final denial of a claim for benefits or adverse eligibility determination, the Board shall furnish notice to the Member setting forth:

- (1) the specific reasons for the denial;
- (2) the specific reference to the Plan provision on which the denial is based;
- (3) a description of any additional information necessary for the Member to perfect the claim and an explanation of why such information is necessary; and

- (4) appropriate information as to the steps to be taken if the Member wishes to submit the claim for further review.

The appeals procedure adopted by the Board pursuant to this Section shall be the exclusive means for contesting a decision denying benefits or eligibility under the Plan. Determinations of the Board's appeals Board shall be conclusive and binding.

Sec. 18.10 Recoupment of Benefit Overpayments.

The Board may suspend payment of or offset the benefits payments to a Member, Spouse, former Spouse, beneficiary, or estate of a Member, Spouse, former Spouse or beneficiary, to recover any overpayment of benefits made by the Board on account of a Member of the Plan.

ARTICLE XIX

ALTERATIONS OR AMENDMENTS

Sec. 19.1 Right to Alter or Amend Plans. The right to alter or amend the Benefits Plan is reserved solely to the Board. Notice of any amendment to the Benefits Plan shall be provided by the Board to the General Assembly, Members, local churches and Presbyteries in such manner as the Board deems reasonable and appropriate based on the nature of the amendment.

Sec. 19.2 Amendment of Pension Plan. The Board, in its sole discretion, shall have the right, from time to time, to amend the Pension Plan except that any alteration or amendment that is in the nature of a benefit reduction to the Members shall be effective only with the approval of the General Assembly of the Church. Any amendment to the Pension Plan, other than a benefit reduction or a dues increase (which amendments require the approval in advance of the General Assembly of the Church), shall require an affirmative two-thirds majority vote of the directors of the Board present at a duly constituted meeting. Notice of any proposed alteration or amendment to the Pension Plan requiring the approval of General Assembly of the Church shall be given by the Board to Members, local churches and Presbyteries at least sixty (60) days prior to the date of the meeting of the General Assembly of the Church at which such alteration or amendment will be considered.

Sec. 19.3 Amendment of Medical Plan. The Board, in its sole discretion, taking into consideration claims experience, administrative expenses, changes in the health care industry, and other relevant factors, shall have the right, from time to time, to amend the Medical Plan and report any such amendment to the next succeeding General Assembly of the Church.

Sec. 19.4 Amendment of Death and Disability Plan. The Board, in its sole discretion, shall have the right, from time to time, to amend the Death and Disability Plan and report any such amendment to the next succeeding General Assembly of the Church.

Sec. 19.5 Amendment of Optional Benefits Plans. The Board, in its sole discretion, shall have the right from time to time to amend the Optional Benefits Plans or adopt such other additional optional benefits as it deems in the best interest of the Members of the Benefits Plan.

Any such amendment or additional optional benefit provision shall be reported to the next succeeding General Assembly of the Church.

Sec. 19.6 Right to Terminate Plans. The Board, in its sole discretion, shall have the right from time to time to terminate the Benefits Plan in its entirety or to terminate one or more of the Medical Plan, the Death and Disability Plan or any of the Optional Benefits Plans. Such termination shall be reported to the next succeeding General Assembly of the Church. The Board, in its sole discretion, shall have the right from time to time to terminate the Pension Plan with the approval of the General Assembly of the Church and subject to the terms of the Pension Plan Trust.

APPENDIX A ACTUARIAL ASSUMPTIONS

Single-Sum Factors

Benefits payable on an actuarial equivalent, single-sum basis will be determined based on the following assumptions and procedure:

Interest: 4.5%

Mortality: 1983 Table a-Individual Annuity Mortality Table, Male and Female Tables. Table a was developed by the Society of Actuaries for individual annuity valuation.

Form of Benefits:

Retirement: Joint and 50% Survivor

Survivor: Life Annuity

Spouse Age:

Active: For a married Member, the factors are based on the Member's age and spouse's age on their birthdays nearest to the determination date. For an unmarried Member, the factors are based on the Member's age on the birthday nearest to the determination date and a spouse the same age as the member.

Inactive: For inactive Members, the spouse is assumed to have the same birth date as the Member.

Unisex Procedure: To determine the single-sum factors on a unisex basis, two factors are calculated:

- 1) Factor based on 1983 male Table a for member and 1983 female Table a for survivor
- 2) Factor based on 1983 female Table a for member and 1983 male Table a for survivor

The two factors are averaged.

Joint and Survivor Option Factors

Benefits payable under an actuarially equivalent joint and survivor option will be determined based on the following factors and procedures:

APPENDIX D TOP-HEAVY RULES

The Pension Plan in Sec. 8.11 provides that this Appendix D shall apply for purposes of determining whether the Pension Plan is a top-heavy plan under Section 416(g) of the Code for Plan Years beginning after December 31, 2001, except as otherwise set forth herein, and whether the Pension Plan satisfies the minimum benefits requirements of Section 416(c) of the Code for such years. The following provision shall apply automatically to the Pension Plan and shall supersede any contrary provisions for each Plan Year in which the Pension Plan is a Top-Heavy Plan (as defined below).

- (a) Definitions: The following definitions shall supplement those set forth in Sec. 2.1 of the Plan:

“Aggregation Group” means, for any Plan Year, each qualified retirement plan (including a frozen plan or a plan which has been terminated during the 60-month period ending on the Determination Date) of an employing organization in which a Key Employee is a participant, each other qualified retirement plan (including a frozen plan or a plan which has been terminated during the 60-month period ending on the Determination Date) of an employing organization which enables any plan in which a Key Employee participates to meet the requirements of Sections 401(a)(4) and 410 of the Code (to the extent applicable to a church plan), and any or all other qualified retirement plans (including a frozen plan or a plan which has been terminated during the 60-month period ending on the Determination Date) of an employing organization if (a) the plans in the Aggregation Group would be Top-Heavy Plans if each such plan were not included in the Aggregation Group but are not Top-Heavy Plans when such plan is included in the Aggregation Group, and (b) the Aggregation Group, including such plan, meets the requirements of Sections 401(a)(4) and 410 of the Code (to the extent applicable to a church plan).

“Determination Date” means, for any Plan Year, the last day of the preceding Plan Year.

“Key Employee” means, with respect to any Plan Year, any employee or former employee (including any deceased employee) of an employing organization participating in the Pension Plan who at any time during the Plan Year that includes the Determination Date was an officer of the employing organization having annual compensation greater than $130,000 (as adjusted under Section 416(i)(1) of the Code for Plan Years beginning after December 31, 2002). For this purpose, “annual compensation” means compensation within the meaning of Section 415(c)(3) of the Code. The determination of who is a Key Employee will be made in accordance with Section 416(i)(1) of the Code and the applicable regulations and other guidance of general applicability issued thereunder.

“Key Employee Ratio” means, for any Determination Date, the ratio of the amount described in Paragraph (1) of this subsection to the amount described in Paragraph (2) of this subsection, after deducting from each such amount any portion thereof described in Paragraph (3) of this subsection, where:

- (1) the amount described in this paragraph is the sum of (A) the present value of all accrued benefits of Key Employees under all qualified defined benefit plans included in the Aggregation Group, (B) the balances in all of the accounts of Key Employees under all qualified defined contribution plans included in the Aggregation Group, and (C) the amounts distributed from all plans in such Aggregation Group to or on behalf of any Key Employee during the one-year period ending on the Determination Date, except any benefit paid on account of death to the extent it exceeds the accrued benefits or account balances immediately prior to death; however, in the case of a distribution made for a reason other than separation from service, death or disability, this subsection shall be applied by substituting “five-year period” for “one-year period;”
- (2) the amount described in this paragraph is the sum of (A) the present value of all accrued benefits of all participants under all qualified defined benefit plans included in the Aggregation Group, (B) the balances in all of the accounts of all participants under all qualified defined contribution plans included in the Aggregation Group, and (C) the amounts distributed from all plans in such Aggregation Group to or on behalf of any participant during the one-year period ending on the Determination Date; however, in the case of a distribution made for a reason other than separation from service, death or disability, this subsection shall be applied by substituting “five-year period” for “one-year period;” and
- (3) the amount described in this paragraph is the sum of (A) all rollover contributions (or fund to fund transfers) to the Pension Plan by a Member after December 31, 1983 from a plan which is not sponsored by an employing organization; (B) any amount that is included in Paragraphs (1) and (2) of this subsection for a person who is a Non-Key Employee as to the Plan Year of reference but who was a Key Employee as to any earlier Plan Year; (C) for Plan Years beginning after December 31, 1984, any amount that is included in Paragraphs (1) and (2) of this subsection for a person who has not performed any services for any employing organization during the Plan Year that includes the Determination Date; and (D) for Plan Years beginning after December 31, 2001, any amount of an individual who has not performed services for an employing organization during the one-year period ending on the Determination Date.

The present value of accrued benefits under any defined benefit plan shall be determined on the basis of the assumptions described in Appendix A or, otherwise, the slowest accrual method permitted under Section 411(b)(1)(C) of the Code.

“Non-Key Employee” means, for any Plan Year, (1) a Member or former Member who is not a Key Employee with respect to such Plan Year; and (2) a beneficiary of an individual described in Paragraph (1) of this subsection.

“Super Top-Heavy Plan” means, for any Plan Year, each plan in the Aggregation Group for such Plan Year if, as of the applicable Determination Date, the Key Employee Ratio exceeds ninety percent (90%).

“Top-Heavy Compensation” means, for any Member for any Plan Year, the average of his or her annual compensation over the period of five consecutive Plan Years (or, if shorter, the longest period of consecutive Plan Years during which the Member was in the employ of any employing organization) yielding the highest average, disregarding compensation for Plan Years after the close of the last Plan Year in which the Pension Plan was a Top-Heavy Plan.

“Top-Heavy Plan” means, for any Plan Year, each plan in the Aggregation Group for such Plan Year if, as of the applicable Determination Date, the Key Employee Ratio exceeds sixty percent (60%).

“Year of Top-Heavy Service” means, for any Member, a Plan Year in which he or she completes 1,000 or more Hours of Service, excluding (1) Plan Years commencing prior to January 1, 1984 and (2) Plan Years in which the Plan is not a Top-Heavy Plan.

(b) Minimum benefits

- (1) If the Pension Plan is a Top-Heavy Plan in any Plan Year, each Member who is a Non-Key Employee in such Plan Year (other than a Member who was a Key Employee as to any earlier Plan Year) shall have a minimum Accrued Benefit. Such Accrued Benefit shall be the lesser of:
 - (i) two percent (2%) of the Member’s Top-Heavy Compensation multiplied by the Member’s Years of Top-Heavy Service, or
 - (ii) twenty percent (20%) of the Member’s Top-Heavy Compensation.
- (2) If a Non-Key Employee described in this subsection participates in both a defined benefit plan and a defined contribution plan, the member shall have the minimum Accrued Benefit described in this subsection, offset by the benefit provided by the defined contribution plan. In making the offset calculation for a given Plan Year, the employer-derived interest of the Member in the defined contribution plan shall be valued as of the last valuation date preceding such Plan Year. This defined contribution plan interest shall be converted into a defined benefit by use of the assumptions described in Appendix A.

- (3) Contributions under other plans. The employing organization may provide in an election filed with the Board specifying the name of the other plan, the minimum benefit that will be provided under such other plan, and the names of the Plan members who will receive the minimum benefit under such other plan.

(c) Adjustment to Maximum Benefit Limitation

For Limitation Years beginning before January 1, 2000:

- (1) For each Plan Year in which the Pension Plan is (1) a Super Top-Heavy Plan or (2) a Top-Heavy Plan and the Board does not make the election to amend the Pension Plan to provide the minimum benefit described in Subsection (b) and for which a similar election has not been made as to another plan in the Aggregation Group, the 1.25 factor in the defined benefit and defined contribution factors described in Section 415(e) of the Code shall be reduced to 1.0. The adjustment described in this subsection shall not apply to a Member who earns no additional accrued benefit under any defined benefit plan and has no employer contributions, forfeitures or voluntary nondeductible contributions allocated to his or her accounts under any defined contribution plan.
- (2) If, in any Plan Year in which the Pension Plan is a Top-Heavy Plan but not a Super-Top-Heavy Plan, the Aggregation Group also includes a defined contribution plan, the Board may elect to use a factor of 1.25 in computing the denominator of the defined benefit and defined contribution factors described in Section 415(e) of the Code. In the event of such election, the minimum benefit described in Subsection (b) for each Non-Key Employee who is not covered under a defined contribution plan providing the minimum benefit described in the following sentence shall be increased as follows:
 - (i) “three percent (3%)” shall be substituted for “two percent (2%)” in Subsection (b)(1)(i), and
 - (ii) Subsection (b)(1)(ii) shall be deemed to read, “the Participant’s Top-Heavy Compensation multiplied by the sum of (A) twenty percent (20%) and (B) one percent (1%) for each Year of Top-Heavy Service, up to a maximum of 10 such Years of Top-Heavy Service.”

The minimum benefit in the preceding sentence shall not apply to any Non-Key Employee who is covered under a defined contribution plan (as described in Subsection (b)) providing a minimum contribution for such Non-Key Employee of seven and one-half percent (7½%) of the Non-Key Employee's annual compensation.

(d) Suspension of Benefits

Notwithstanding the other provisions of the Pension Plan, the payment of a Member's benefits shall not be suspended during the Member's reemployment during any period in which the Pension Plan is a Top-Heavy Plan.

Section 5.1. Standard of Care: Justifiable Reliance. Director shall stand in a fiduciary relation to the Corporation and shall perform his or her duties as a Director, including duties as a member of any committee of the Board upon which the Director may serve, in good faith, in a manner the Director reasonably believes to be in the best interests of the Corporation and with such care, including reasonable inquiry, skill and diligence, as a person of ordinary prudence would use under similar circumstances. In performing his or her duties, a Director shall be entitled to rely in good faith on information, opinions, reports or statements, including, without limitation, financial statements and other financial data, in each case prepared or presented by any of the following:

- (1) One or more officers or employees of the Corporation whom the Director reasonably believes to be reliable and competent in the matters presented;
- (2) Counsel, public accountants or other persons as to matters which the Director reasonably believes to be within the professional or expert competence of such person; or
- (3) A committee of the Board upon which the Director does not serve, duly designated in accordance with law, as to matters within its designated authority, which committee the Director reasonably believes to merit confidence.

A Director shall not be considered to be acting in good faith if the Director has knowledge concerning the matter in question that would cause his or her reliance to be unwarranted.

Section 5.2. Presumption. Absent breach of fiduciary duty, lack of good faith, or self-dealing, actions taken by the Board, committees of the Board, or by individual Directors, or any failure to take any action, shall be presumed to be in the best interests of the Corporation.

Section 5.3. Notation of Dissent. A Director who is present at a meeting of the Board, or of a committee of the Board, at which action on any corporate matter is taken shall be presumed to have assented to the action taken unless his or her dissent is entered in the minutes of the meeting or unless the Director files a written dissent to the action with the Secretary of the meeting before the adjournment thereof or transmits the dissent in writing to the Secretary immediately after the adjournment of the meeting. The right to dissent shall not apply to a Director who voted in favor of the action. Nothing in this Section shall bar a Director from asserting the minutes of the meeting incorrectly omitted his or her dissent if, promptly upon receipt of a copy of the minutes, the Directors notifies the Secretary, in writing, of the asserted omission or inaccuracy.

ARTICLE VI

LIMITATION OF LIABILITY, INDEMNIFICATION AND INSURANCE

Section 6.1. Limitation of Liability. A Director of the Corporation shall not be personally liable for monetary damages for any action taken, or any failure to take action, unless such Director has breached or failed to perform the duties of his or her office under Subchapter B of Chapter 57 of the Pennsylvania Nonprofit Corporation Law of 1988, as amended (the "Act"), as from time to time amended, or any successor provision, and the breach or failure to perform constitutes self-dealing, willful misconduct or recklessness. This provision shall not apply to the responsibility or liability of a Director pursuant to any criminal statute or the liability of a Director for payment of taxes pursuant to local, state or federal law. Any repeal or amendment of this Section shall be prospective only and shall not increase, but may decrease, a Director's liability with respect to actions or failures to act occurring prior to such change.

Section 6.2. Mandatory Indemnification of Directors and Officers. The Corporation shall indemnify and defend, to the fullest extent now or hereafter permitted by law (including but not limited to the indemnification provided by Subchapter D of Chapter 57 of the Act, each Director or officer (including each former Director or officer) of the Corporation who was or is made a party to or a witness in, or is threatened to be made a party to or a witness in, any threatened, pending or completed action, suit or proceeding, whether civil, criminal, administrative or investigative, by reason of the fact that he or she is or was an authorized representative of the Corporation, against all expenses (including attorneys' fees and disbursements), judgments, fines (including excise taxes and penalties) and amounts paid in settlement actually and reasonably incurred by him or her in connection with such action, suit or proceeding if he or she acted in good faith and in a manner he or she reasonably believed to be in, or not opposed to, the best interests of the Corporation and, with respect to any criminal proceeding, had no reasonable cause to believe his or her conduct was unlawful. The termination of any action or proceeding by judgment, order, settlement, or conviction or upon a plea of nolo contendere or its equivalent shall not of itself create a presumption that the person did not act in good faith and in a manner that he or she reasonably believed to be in or not opposed to, the best interests of the Corporation and, with respect to any criminal proceeding, had reasonable cause to believe that his or her conduct was unlawful.

Section 6.3. Mandatory Advancement of Expenses to Directors and Officers. The Corporation shall pay expenses (including attorneys' fees and disbursements) incurred by a Director or officer of the Corporation referred to in Section 6.2 hereof in defending or appearing as a witness in any civil or criminal action, suit or proceeding described in Section 6.2 hereof in advance of the final disposition of such action, suit or proceeding. The expenses incurred by such Director or officer shall be paid by the Corporation in advance of the final disposition of such action, suit or proceeding only upon receipt of an undertaking by or on behalf of such Director or officer to repay all amounts advanced if it shall ultimately be determined that he or she is not entitled to be indemnified by the Corporation as provided in Section 6.5 hereof.

Section 6.4. Permissive Indemnification and Advancement of Expenses. The Corporation may, as determined by the Board of Directors from time to time, indemnify to the fullest extent now or hereafter permitted by law, any person who was or is a party to or a witness in or is threatened to be made a party to or a witness in, or is otherwise involved in any threatened, pending or completed action, suit or proceeding, whether civil, criminal, administrative or investigative, by reason of the fact that he or she is or was an authorized representative of the Corporation, both as to action in his or her official capacity and as to action in another capacity while holding such office or position, against all expenses (including attorneys' fees and disbursements), judgments, fines (including excise taxes and penalties), and amounts paid in settlement actually and reasonably incurred by him or her in connection with such action, suit or proceeding. The Corporation may, as determined by the Board of Directors from time to time, pay expenses incurred by any such person by reason of his or her participation in any action, suit or proceeding referred to in this Section 6.4 in advance of the final disposition of such action, suit or proceeding only upon receipt of an undertaking by or on behalf of such person to repay such amount if it shall ultimately be determined that he or she is not entitled to be indemnified by the Corporation as provided in Section 5.5 hereof.

Section 6.5. Scope of Indemnification. Indemnification under this Article shall not be made by the Corporation in any case where a court determines that the alleged act or failure to act giving rise to the claim for indemnification is expressly prohibited by law or any successor statute in effect at the time of such alleged action or failure to take action.

Section 6.6. Insurance. The Corporation shall purchase and maintain insurance on behalf of each Director and officer against any liability asserted against or incurred by such Director or officer in any capacity, or arising out of such Director's or officer's status as such, whether or not the Corporation would have the power to indemnify such Director or officer against such liability under the provisions of this Article. The Corporation shall not be required to maintain such insurance if it is not available on terms satisfactory to the Board of Directors or if in the business judgment of the Board of Directors, either (i) the premium cost for such insurance is substantially disproportionate to the amount of coverage, or (ii) the coverage provided by such insurance is so limited by exclusions that there is insufficient benefit from such insurance. The Corporation may purchase and maintain insurance on behalf of any person referred to in Section 6.4 hereof against any liability asserted against or incurred by such person in any capacity, whether or not the Corporation would have the power to indemnify such person against such liability under the provisions of this Article.

Section 6.7. Funding to Meet Indemnification Obligations. The Corporation may, in lieu of or in addition to the purchase and maintenance of insurance referred to in Section 5.6 hereof, establish and maintain a fund of any nature or otherwise secure or insure in any manner its indemnification obligations, whether arising under or pursuant to this Article or otherwise.

Section 6.8. Miscellaneous. Each Director and officer of the Corporation shall be deemed to act in such capacity in reliance upon such rights of indemnification and advancement of expenses as are provided in this Article. The rights of indemnification or advancement of expenses provided by this Article shall not be deemed exclusive of any other rights in which any person seeking indemnification or advancement of expenses may be entitled, shall continue to a person who has ceased to be an authorized representative of the Corporation, and shall inure to the benefit of the heirs, executors and administrators of such person. Indemnification and advancement of expenses under this Article shall be provided whether or not the indemnified liability arises or arose from any threatened, pending or completed action by or in the right of the Corporation. Any repeal or modification of this Article by the Board of Directors of the Corporation shall not adversely affect any right of protection existing at the time of such repeal or modification to which any person may be entitled under this Article.

Section 6.9. Definition of Corporation. For purposes of this Article, references to the "Corporation" shall include, in addition to the resulting corporation, any constituent corporation absorbed in a consolidation or merger which, if its separate existence had continued, would have had power and authority to indemnify its authorized representatives so that any person who is or was an authorized constituent corporation shall stand in the same position under this Article with respect to the resulting or surviving corporation as he or she would have with respect to such constituent corporation if its separate existence had continued.

Section 6.10. Definition of Authorized Representative. For purposes of this Article, the term "authorized representative" shall mean a Director, officer, employee or agent of the Corporation or of any subsidiary of the Corporation, or a trustee, custodian, administrator or fiduciary of any employee benefit plan established and maintained by the Corporation or by any subsidiary of the Corporation, or a person serving another corporation, partnership, joint venture, trust or other enterprise in any of the foregoing capacities at the request of the Corporation.

ARTICLE VII

Papers to Be Considered

a. The General Assembly shall consider only those papers delivered to the Stated Clerk in compliance with Standing Rule A and any other papers whatsoever that have been delivered to the Stated Clerk. Ordinarily, such papers shall have been forwarded to the Stated Clerk post-marked no later than sixty days prior to the convening of the General Assembly.

Received Less Than 60 Days Prior to General Assembly

b. All papers intended for consideration by the General Assembly that are forwarded to the Stated Clerk and postmarked less than sixty days, but no later than forty-five days prior to the convening of the General Assembly, shall be reviewed by the Stated Clerk, who shall determine whether or not to refer them to the Assembly Committee on Business Referral. The Stated Clerk shall report to the committee regarding those papers not referred.

2. Reports of Entities, Commissions, and Committees

Reports Deadline

a. All reports from entities, commissions, and committees of the General Assembly shall be delivered to the Stated Clerk on or before 120 days prior to the convening of the General Assembly. The Stated Clerk shall publish these reports (print or electronic) and distribute them so that they shall reach the commissioners thirty days before the convening of the General Assembly.

Budget Consultation

b. An entity, commission, or committee submitting a report with a recommendation that affects the work or budget of another entity(ies) shall submit evidence that a consultation has been held with the affected entity(ies).

Appropriate Background Information

c. Committees, agencies, or corporations presenting reports shall provide the appropriate background information necessary to interpret or understand the recommendations or responses to referrals to the members of the General Assembly committees to which the business is referred. Any and all documents or publications referred to in these reports that require approval by the assembly for publication and distribution to the church, including but not limited to curriculum, study papers/guides, position papers, and program resources, shall be made available to commissioners at the time the reports are published.

Report Length

d. All reports shall be limited to ten thousand words except the report of the General Assembly Council, the length of which shall be determined by the Stated Clerk and the Executive Director of the General Assembly Council. A request for an exception to the length of a report shall be submitted to the Stated Clerk no later than forty-five days prior to the deadline for the submission of the report and shall include the anticipated length of the report. The Stated Clerk may assess a fee of the entity or committee whose report exceeds ten thousand words for the costs incurred in printing and distributing the excess pages. Payment of the fee shall be submitted to the treasurer of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation. If the Stated Clerk and the representatives of any body are unable to agree, the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly shall determine the length of the report.

3. Overtures

Definition

a. Overtures are items of business that must have been approved by a presbytery or a synod and shall request the General Assembly to take a particular action, or approve or endorse a particular statement or resolution. (See Book of Order, G-11.0103t(3).)

Writing Overtures

b. The stated clerk of a presbytery or synod considering an overture to the General Assembly shall:

(1) Examine the most recently published Minutes of the General Assembly to determine if a similar overture has already been passed.

(2) Consult with the Office of the General Assembly to determine whether the desired action has been voted by any previous General Assembly.

(3) Consult with the Office of the General Assembly to determine whether a similar overture has already been proposed in order that the presbytery or synod may concur with the existing overture.

(4) Draft the overture in the following form:

“The Presbytery of _____ overtures the [# of the assembly] General Assembly [(year)] of the PC(USA) to [state the specific action the General Assembly is asked to take].”

To this shall be appended a rationale, stating the reasons for submitting the overture.

Submitting Overtures

c. Submitting Overtures

(1) Overtures proposing an amendment to the Constitution or requiring an interpretation by the General Assembly of the Book of Order (see Book of Order, G-18.0301a and G-13.0112c) must be delivered in writing to the Stated Clerk postmarked no later than 120 days prior to the convening of the General Assembly, and shall be promptly referred to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution (see Book of Order, G-13.0112d and G-18.0300).

(2) All overtures that have financial implications for current or future years' budgets must be delivered in writing to the Stated Clerk postmarked no later than sixty days prior to the convening of the General Assembly. Overtures with financial implications not received within the designated time limit shall not be considered, but shall be returned to the originating governing body.

(3) All other overtures intended for consideration by the General Assembly shall be forwarded to the Stated Clerk, postmarked no later than forty-five days before the convening of the General Assembly.

(4) Overtures not received within the designated time limits shall not be considered, but shall be returned to the originating governing body for reconsideration.

(5) Presbyteries or synods submitting overtures with a recommendation(s) that affects the work or budget of a General Assembly entity(ies) shall submit evidence that the affected entity(ies) has (have) been consulted. If such evidence is not submitted, the Stated Clerk shall recommend that the overture be received and referred to a future session of the General Assembly so that consultation may take place.

(6) In the event that the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly receives an overture similar to one already proposed (excluding the rationale), she or he shall inquire of the presbytery or synod in question whether it would be willing to concur with that existing overture or desires to withdraw the overture. A presbytery or synod concurring with an overture may submit additional rationale for its action, provided that it does not duplicate the rationale provided by the overturing body. The concurrence and any additional rationale will be printed with the original overture in the Reports to the General Assembly.

Distributing Overtures

d. Overtures that do not propose constitutional amendment or interpretation, and that are postmarked at least sixty days prior to the convening of the General Assembly, shall be published (print or electronic) in the reports distributed by the Stated Clerk. Overtures received in the same manner, postmarked no later than forty-five days prior to the convening of the General Assembly, shall be distributed to the commissioners before the convening of the General Assembly.

Overture Advocate

e. Overture Advocate

(1) Each presbytery or synod that submits an overture shall notify the Stated Clerk of the name of a commissioner or some other person in attendance at the General Assembly who has been designated as the advocate for the overture. The overture advocate shall be available to provide information on the background and intent of the overture to any assembly committee to which the overture may be referred. (See Standing Rule E.2.)

(2) In the event that the assembly refers an overture to a General Assembly entity for further consideration (and not simply for implementation), the presbytery or synod submitting the overture shall be invited by the Stated Clerk to designate an overture advocate for the assembly meeting at which the entity's response to the overture is presented. The overture advocate shall be available to provide information on the background and intent of the overture to any assembly committee to which the overture may be referred. (See Standing Rule E.2.)

4. Communications and Resource MaterialProvide Comment or Advice

a. Communications and resource material provide comment or advice on business already under consideration by the assembly and shall neither contain nor constitute business to be considered by the assembly. Communications may be directed to the General Assembly

(1) by entities of the General Assembly that desire to comment on a single item of business coming before the General Assembly from any source other than their own entity, but which do not introduce new business,

(2) by organizations in which the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) holds membership, and

(3) by other denominations in correspondence with the General Assembly.

Forty-five Day Deadline

b. All communications intended for consideration by the General Assembly shall be forwarded to the Stated Clerk, postmarked no later than forty-five days before the convening of the General Assembly.

Resource

c. Resource material (except for previously published books), including advice and counsel memoranda from advocacy and advisory committees, shall be prepared as necessary by entities of the General Assembly and shall not exceed 1,000 words on each item of business referred. This material shall be submitted to the Stated Clerk, postmarked no later than forty-five days before the convening of the assembly meeting, who shall then publish (print or electronic) and distribute the material to all commissioners prior to the assembly.

Advice and Counsel Memoranda

d. Advice and counsel memoranda are resources prepared by the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy, Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns, and the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns for the purpose of providing information about existing policy, current work on specific topics, recent developments, and other factors useful to commissioners as they consider issues before the assembly.

5. Advisory Committee on the Constitution Report

Report

a. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution shall report to the General Assembly its findings along with its recommendations on all questions requiring an interpretation by the General Assembly of the Book of Order, including proposals for constitutional change. “The General Assembly shall vote on the recommendations, and may amend or decline to approve them” (Book of Order, G-13.0112d). The Advisory Committee on the Constitution shall report any editorial changes made to the Book of Order since its last report to the General Assembly.

Presented Directly to General Assembly

b. The report of the committee shall be presented directly to the General Assembly. The General Assembly may take action on the recommendations immediately, or it may refer them to an assembly committee for consideration by that committee and report to the General Assembly for action later during the same session of the General Assembly.

6. Entity and Synod Minutes

Submit for Review

a. Entities and synods required to submit minutes for review by the General Assembly shall submit such minutes on a calendar year basis so as to present minutes of all meetings for the calendar year (from January 1 through December 31) preceding the year in which is held the session of the General Assembly to which such minutes are submitted. The minutes shall contain the attestation that they have been approved by the entity or synod submitting them in the manner regularly in use within that body.

Review Process

b. Minutes of General Assembly entities will be reviewed in accordance with the “Guidelines for Preparation of Minutes of Agencies” as printed in the Manual of the General Assembly. Minutes of the synods will be reviewed in accordance with “Guidelines for Reviewing Synod Records” as printed in the Manual of the General Assembly. In addition, the provisions of Book of Order, G-9.0409, shall apply, including whether:

- (1) The proceedings have been correctly recorded;
- (2) The proceedings have been regular and in accordance with the Constitution;
- (3) The proceedings have been prudent and equitable;
- (4) The proceedings have been faithful to the mission of the whole church;
- (5) The lawful injunctions of the General Assembly have been obeyed. (Book of Order, G-9.0409)

7. Presbytery Reports

Each presbytery shall act upon all papers sent to the presbytery to be voted upon in ample time to permit the stated clerk of the presbytery to mail the results to the Stated Clerk so that they are received no later than two weeks before the convening of the General Assembly. The response of the presbytery shall be mailed to the Stated Clerk by certified mail.

8. Commissioners' Resolutions

- Who May Propose a. Any two commissioners may propose an item of new business, known as a commissioners' resolution, for assembly consideration by delivering it in writing to the Stated Clerk or the Stated Clerk's designee. No commissioner may sign more than two resolutions.
- Deadline b. The Stated Clerk shall determine and announce at the first meeting at which business is conducted the deadline for receipt of commissioners' resolutions. The deadline shall not be earlier than twenty-four hours after the assembly has convened.
- Existing GA Policies c. In the preparation of a resolution, commissioners are urged to be aware of existing General Assembly policies relevant to their proposal and, where appropriate, to make reference to these policies.
- May Not Amend Book of Order Already Before Assembly d. Commissioners' resolutions shall not contain business that requires an amendment to or interpretation of the Constitution (see Book of Order, G-18.0301(a)).
- e. The Stated Clerk shall not transmit as new business any resolution that deals with matters of business already before the General Assembly, nor transmit any resolution whose purpose can be achieved by the regular process of amendment and debate.
- Same Issues as Previous Assembly f. Should the commissioners' resolution deal with substantially the same issue considered by one of the two previous sessions of the General Assembly, the Stated Clerk shall recommend that the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures take one of the following actions on the commissioners' resolution: "refer to a subsequent assembly," "decline for consideration," or "take no action."
- Referral g. If the proposed resolution does deal with new business, the Stated Clerk shall transmit it to the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures with a recommendation for its referral.
- Referral Declined h. The Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures may decline to refer proposed items of new business if it decides that the matters proposed are already before the assembly or that the purpose of the proposals can be reached by the process of amendment and debate. Proposed items of business not referred, whether declined by the Stated Clerk or the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures, shall be identified in the first report of the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures distributed to commissioners after the period docketed for committee meetings, with a brief description of the content and a statement of the reasons for declining the proposed business. Twenty-five percent of commissioners present and voting is required to overturn action of the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures to decline, take no action, or refer a commissioners' resolution to a subsequent assembly. If a commissioners' resolution affects a substantial change in an existing social witness policy, the Stated Clerk should recommend to the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures that it be referred to the next General Assembly.

1. Assembly Committee Structure

Number and Designation of Assembly Committees

a. The Stated Clerk shall propose the number and designation of assembly committees to the General Assembly. The Stated Clerk shall present the proposed committee structure to the General Assembly for consideration and ratification at the first assembly meeting at which business is transacted. In making these proposals, the Stated Clerk shall consult with the appropriate General Assembly entity or entities, and may consult with other persons.

Committee Assistants

b. The Stated Clerk shall propose to the General Assembly for appointment the names of persons to serve as committee assistants for the duration of the General Assembly. The Stated Clerk shall consult with the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly before recommending persons to serve as committee assistants. Persons proposed shall not be commissioners to the General Assembly or staff members of entities of the General Assembly or any person who is a member of the General Assembly Council or any person who is a member of any other entity of the General Assembly. A committee assistant shall be appointed to provide staff services to each assembly committee. The appointments shall be made in accordance with Book of Order, G-4.0403.

Assembly Committee Moderator and Vice Moderator

c. The Moderator of the preceding General Assembly shall appoint a commissioner to be moderator and a second to be vice moderator of each committee. Final appointment shall be made only after consultation with the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly, and then also with representatives of the General Assembly Committee on Representation regarding the inclusivity mandated in the Book of Order, G-4.0403 and G-9.0104. The moderators of at least one-half of the assembly committees, including any committees dealing with finance and budgets, shall be elders. The moderators of at least one-half of the assembly committees should be women. No more than one person from any one presbytery may be appointed to serve as a moderator or vice moderator. All synods shall be equitably represented.

Assembly Committee on Business Referral

d. The moderators and vice moderators of the assembly committees, as a group, shall function as the Assembly Committee on Business Referral. The moderator and vice moderator of the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures shall function as the moderator and vice moderator of this committee as well. This committee shall report to the assembly for its action at the first meeting of the General Assembly for the transaction of business.

Orientation e. The Stated Clerk shall conduct an orientation for moderators, vice moderators, and committee assistants of assembly committees no less than three weeks prior to the convening of the General Assembly. The orientation shall include information regarding business likely to be referred to each committee; suggested procedures for dealing with business referred to committees, especially the use of Robert's Rules of Order, Newly Revised; utilization of available resources, both persons and materials; and preparation and presentation of assembly committee reports. The Stated Clerk, following consultation with the General Assembly Council, may invite persons designated by the council as General Assembly resource coordinators to participate in the orientation. During this orientation, the Assembly Committee on Business Referral shall meet and carry out the duties given it by these rules. The Assembly Committee on Business Referral shall also meet, if necessary, just prior to the convening of the assembly and its function shall end at the convening of the assembly.

2. Assigning Commissioners to Assembly Committees

Committee Assignments a. Forty-five days before the convening of the General Assembly, the Stated Clerk shall assign each commissioner and advisory delegate to one of the assembly committees by the random selection process described in this standing rule.

Notification of Assignment b. No later than thirty days before the convening of the assembly, commissioners shall receive the number and designation of committees. At the same time that the number and designation of committees is communicated, the Stated Clerk shall notify each person of the assignment, the time of their first meeting, and the necessity to confirm appropriate housing and travel arrangements.

Assignment List Provided c. The Stated Clerk shall provide a list of the assignments to those who need it to facilitate the work of the General Assembly.

Random Selection Process d. Commissioners and advisory delegates shall be assigned to assembly committees by random selection as follows:

(1) The Stated Clerk shall divide the presbyteries into six regional districts. Each district shall be composed of one or more presbyteries so arranged that, insofar as possible, the presbyteries in the district have contiguous boundaries and the numbers of commissioners in the several districts are approximately equal. Within each district the presbyteries shall be arranged alphabetically. The commissioners from each presbytery shall be listed alphabetically in two parallel lists: the first containing the names of the ministers of the Word and Sacrament; the second, the elders. In those cases where the presbytery has not designated commissioners, the position shall be listed as vacant so that the name may be inserted later when the Stated Clerk is notified. The names of moderators and vice moderators of assembly committees shall be removed from the list and the names below them shall be moved up to fill the vacated positions. The minister commissioners and vacant positions for minister commissioners shall be numbered in sequence. The list of elder commissioners in each district shall be rotated downward so that no elder commissioner is opposite a minister commissioner from the same presbytery. Separate lists of groups identified in Book of Order, G-4.0403, shall be prepared, insofar as it may be practical, to assure the most equitable distribution of such commissioners to the various committees in accordance with Book of Order, G-4.0402.

(2) The Stated Clerk shall list the youth advisory delegates in one list arranged in the alphabetical order of the presbyteries that designated the delegates. In any case where the presbytery has not designated a youth advisory delegate, the position shall be listed as vacant so that the name may be inserted later when the Stated Clerk is notified.

(3) The Moderator shall pick by lot a number from one to ten. This number shall identify the number of the name in the first column of names in each district in which the assignment will begin. It will also identify the number of the youth advisory delegates in which assignment will begin.

(4) The Moderator shall then pick by lot a second number equal from one to the number equaling the total number of committees. This number shall identify the assembly committee in the order in which the committees are arranged in the standing rules to which the first assignment of members shall be made.

(5) The assignment of members of the assembly committees shall then proceed in sequence. When initial assignments have been made to all committees in sequence so that the committees with the fewest number of commissioners are full, additional assignment shall be made to the other committees in the same manner, until all commissioners and youth advisory delegates have been assigned to committees.

(6) The Stated Clerk shall assign missionary advisory delegates and ecumenical advisory delegates to assembly committees in consultation with those delegates. Ordinarily not more than two persons in each of these categories shall be assigned to any one assembly committee.

(7) Theological student advisory delegates will be assigned to committees at the same time and in the same way as are commissioners to ensure their full participation and attendance.

(8) Names of commissioners and advisory delegates received after these assignments have been made shall be inserted in the appropriate position in the original list and assigned to the committee to which that position was assigned.

3. Referring Business

Recommendation for Referral of Business

a. The Stated Clerk shall submit to the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly a recommendation for the referral of all items of business coming before the General Assembly.

General Assembly Action on Referrals

b. After making any necessary changes, this committee shall present the prepared referrals to the Assembly Committee on Business Referral so that it may recommend referrals to the first meeting of the General Assembly for the transaction of business. Ordinarily, this committee shall recommend referrals to the General Assembly for its action. When the General Assembly is not scheduled to meet in time to act on its recommendation, the committee may refer business. Such referrals shall be reported to the General Assembly at its next business meeting.

How Referred

c. Items of business to be considered by the General Assembly shall be referred in one of the following ways:

(1) for consideration by an assembly committee and recommendation for action by the General Assembly;

(2) for consideration and action by an assembly committee with a report of the action to the General Assembly;

(3) for consideration by the General Assembly through its inclusion in a consent agenda;

(4) for consideration by the General Assembly in a plenary business session.

Referral Considered by One Committee

d. Each item of business referred to a committee shall ordinarily be considered by only one assembly committee, but in no case should there be more than one committee making a recommendation on an item of business. Business of a related nature shall be assigned to a single committee insofar as possible.

Referring Overtures to Committees

e. The Stated Clerk shall present such items of business to the Assembly Committee on Business Referral, along with a recommendation for their referral. In the event that the presbytery or synod disagrees with the referral recommendation, this procedure shall be followed: The presbytery or synod shall be entitled to submit a written statement regarding the background and intent of the overture at the time the overture is initially being considered for referral by the Assembly Committee on Business Referral. If, after that committee makes its recommendation, the presbytery or synod still disagrees with the referral recommendation, the presbytery or synod shall notify the Stated Clerk, in writing, of its disagreement. The overture advocate will then be entitled to speak to the background and intent of the overture at a special meeting of the Assembly Committee on Business Referral that shall be held no more than twenty-four (24) hours prior to the convening of the assembly.

4. Tentative Docket

a. The Stated Clerk shall submit to the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly a tentative docket. After making any necessary adjustments, this committee shall present a proposed docket to the Assembly Committee on Business Referral so that it may recommend the docket to the first meeting of the General Assembly for the transaction of business.

b. The reports and recommendations of the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly regarding the initial docket of the General Assembly and referrals of business shall be referred to the Assembly Committee on Business Referral, along with any items of business not included in them (see Standing Rules I.4.b.(3) and I.4.b.(4)). Review of the minutes of the synods pursuant to G-13.01031 and of statement(s) of compliance with decisions of the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission by governing bodies, reported by the Stated Clerk pursuant to Standing Rule M.2.b.(4), shall be assigned to the same assembly committee. Following the convening of the assembly, such matters shall be directed to the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures.

After any needed corrections have been made, the Stated Clerk shall announce whether or not a quorum is present (see Book of Order, G-13.0105). Coordination Between Committees

b. This committee shall keep itself informed of the subjects being considered by the other assembly committees, and, when any subject is taken up by more than one committee, this committee shall advise the moderators of those committees regarding ways to avoid redundant or inconsistent recommendations.

Distribution of Materials

c. This committee shall determine whether or not particular materials may be distributed to the commissioners and delegates to the General Assembly, and specify the time and manner of distribution of any authorized by it. Particular materials distributed in assembly committees shall not be distributed to the full assembly without the approval of the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures, including the time and manner of distribution.

1. Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures Reports

Report at Beginning of Each Meeting

a. The Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures shall report at the beginning of each meeting, recommending any necessary changes in order of business and any referrals it may have considered since its last report.

Limits on Debate/Changes in Docket

b. The Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures may, at any time, recommend limits on debates or changes in the docket to facilitate the handling of business. The reports of the committee shall take precedence over any other business, including orders of the day.

Review Minutes c. This committee shall review the minutes of the General Assembly daily, report to the General Assembly any suggested corrections, and recommend approval of the minutes. The minutes shall be posted on the church’s website and two printed copies of the minutes shall be posted in different places during the following day for examination by commissioners. The minutes of the meetings of the General Assembly during the last two days of its session shall be submitted for review and approval within ten days after the adjournment of the General Assembly to a subcommittee of the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures.

Requests for Communicating with Assembly d. Requests for the privilege of communicating with the General Assembly shall be referred to this committee, which shall confer with persons making such requests about the time and the manner in which their concerns may be brought to the attention of the General Assembly. The Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures shall recommend to the General Assembly a response regarding any possible presentation to the assembly. At the time any such recommendation is acted upon, any commissioner may request that an opposing view be heard, and the assembly shall consider and act upon the matter.

Referral of Protests e. Protests expressing disagreement with an action or failure to act on the part of the General Assembly shall be referred to the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures, which shall decide whether or not the protest is decorous and respectful. Should the committee decide the protest is decorous and respectful, the protest shall be entered in the Minutes. The committee may prepare an answer to be printed with any protest so entered (see Book of Order, G-9.0304).

2. Reports of Assembly Committees

Distribution a. Copies of the reports of assembly committees (print or electronic) shall ordinarily be distributed to commissioners no later than the close of the meeting prior to the one at which they are to be considered. The Stated Clerk shall arrange for the reproduction and distribution of reports.

Adequate Docket Time b. The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly, in consultation with the Stated Clerk, shall docket adequate time for the reports of committees, including ample time for debate and action. If a report requires more time than docketed, the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures shall consult with the committee for additional time to complete consideration of the report.

Committee Moderators c. Committee moderators should move the approval of recommendations with minimum comment, and material in the commissioners’ printed resources shall not be read.

Financial Implication d. The financial effect of each recommendation on budgets previously approved or under consideration shall be clearly presented at the time that the recommendation is considered by the assembly.

3. Minority Reports

Must Stand as Full and Complete Substitute a. In order to be considered by the assembly, a minority report shall not only set aside the majority report but also be able to stand as a full and complete substitution for the majority report recommendations. A minority report shall be moved as a substitute only after the majority report has first been moved. When this happens, the assembly shall first consider (and may amend) the majority report. When consideration of the majority report is completed, the assembly may then consider (and may amend) the minority report. Further efforts to perfect each report shall be held to a minimum in order that the assembly can concentrate instead on the issue of whether to make the proposed substitution.

Reasons Supporting Committee’s Recommendation b. The moderator of the committee, or another member of the committee, shall present reasons supporting the committee’s recommendation. They may be presented before any minority report is moved or presented during the narrative report of the committee, or presented during debate on the question of whether or not the substitution shall become the main motion. (See also Standing Rule E.7.h.)

4. Committee Reports on the Budget

Per Capita Budget

b. On the final day of the assembly, an amended per capita budget that incorporates the financial implications of actions taken by the assembly shall be presented to the assembly for approval.

5. Plenary Meeting Procedures

a. In debate on any pending matter, no commissioner or delegate shall be allowed to speak more than three minutes until all other commissioners or delegates who desire to speak on the pending matter have been heard.

Voting Methods

b. The General Assembly shall ordinarily decide questions by electronic voting. The Moderator may also call for unanimous consent by voice vote or show of hands. Assembly committees may recommend the use of a consent agenda for portions of their reports. In all cases, the right of any commissioner to call for one of the other forms of voting or to remove any item from the consent agenda shall be preserved.

Mindful of Effort Required to Fulfill Recommendations

c. In view of the relative ease in which studies and programs may be approved, commissioners and other assembly committee members are cautioned to be mindful of the effort required of staff and elected members to carry out the General Assembly's instructions.

Constitutional Questions

d. When the General Assembly is in plenary session, questions that touch upon constitutional matters, including rulings on questions of order involving constitutional matters requested by the Moderator, shall be handled in accordance with Book of Order, G-13.0112e. These questions shall be referred in writing by the Moderator to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, which shall consider each matter referred and make recommendations directly to the General Assembly through the Moderator.

Cellular Telephones

e. Use of cellular telephones is prohibited during meetings of the General Assembly and meetings of the assembly committees. During these meetings, pagers may be used only in the silent mode.

Emergency Messages

f. Emergency messages will be relayed to a commissioner or advisory delegate during plenary meetings by way of a written message delivered by one of the Stated Clerk's designated staff or assembly assistants.

May Decline to Submit Nomination

b. The General Assembly Nominating Committee may decline to submit a nomination(s) to a particular vacancy(s) when requested to do so by the affected entity because of an expected merger of entity or a transfer of duties between entities in order to reduce the number of persons serving on a particular entity(s).

Nominating from the Floor

c. Nominating from the Floor

(1) Nominations by commissioners shall be in order unless the vacancy is required to be filled upon nomination from some other source.

(2) When any nomination for service on a General Assembly committee, council, or board comes from the floor of the assembly, the commissioner making the nomination will provide the General Assembly Nominating Committee, at least twenty-four hours in advance of the nomination being made from the floor, with pertinent information about the person whose name is being presented, as well as the name of the particular person nominated by the nominating committee whose nomination is being challenged. Such information shall be provided on the “Nomination by Commissioner Form” provided for use at the assembly and available from the Stated Clerk.

(3) In the event that there are nominations from the floor, the election shall proceed as follows:

(a) The General Assembly will deal with one challenged position at a time.

(b) The name of the General Assembly Nominating Committee’s nominee shall be placed in nomination by its moderator. The Moderator of the General Assembly shall call upon the commissioner who is placing a nomination from the floor to put that name in nomination.

(c) Once the names are placed in nomination, the order of speaking shall be first, the commissioner or a designee speaking on behalf of the floor nominee and second, the General Assembly Nominating Committee member or a designee speaking to its nominee. Both the commissioner (or designee) and the General Assembly Nominating Committee member (or designee) shall speak from the platform. Such speech shall not exceed three minutes in length. Assignment of Docket Time

b. The placing of this greeting on the docket will be assigned by the Stated Clerk.

8. Announcements and Nonofficial Printed Materials

Nonofficial Printed Material

b. Printed materials that are not official business before the General Assembly may be distributed at authorized booths in the General Assembly Exhibit Hall. Other distribution is permitted in the mailboxes provided for commissioners and advisory delegates, and also can be handed out twenty-five feet or more from entrances to the building in which the General Assembly meets.

9. Distributing Study Documents

Distribution

a. Whenever the General Assembly itself shall require the distribution of a document for study (whether the proposal originates through the recommendation of an entity, the presentation of an overture or resolution, or arises during the conduct of the assembly's business) with a request for a response (whether the response is sought from individuals, congregations, governing bodies, organizations of any kind, or any combination of these), the study document shall be accompanied by resource materials, bibliography, and aids as set forth in the document "Forming Social Policy," Section 5, printed in the Manual of the General Assembly. Along with a response instrument and the resource materials, bibliography, and aids, the document shall be distributed on a schedule that provides for the study guide and all accompanying material to be in the possession of the proposed respondents for a minimum of twelve months before the due date of the response.

Responsible Entity Identified

b. The entity to be responsible for receiving the responses and reporting to the General Assembly the summary of the responses shall be identified in the material. The report on the responses to the study may be presented no earlier than to the General Assembly that convenes in the second year after the session of the General Assembly that approves the study.

10. Forming Social Policy

The entities of the General Assembly, including its committees, commissions, and special committees, shall be governed by the document, "Forming Social Policy" printed in the Manual of the General Assembly, when that entity is considering making a social witness policy.

Where Allowed

a. Peaceful demonstrations shall be allowed twenty-five or more feet outside of the entrances to the building in which General Assembly meets.

Prohibited in Building

b. Spontaneous or planned demonstrations by individuals or groups are prohibited inside the building where the General Assembly meets. The Moderator of the General Assembly shall declare all demonstrations that occur in plenary session out of order and, if demonstrators fail to immediately disband and desist, may recess the General Assembly to a fixed time and place. This rule does not prohibit the spontaneous or planned celebration of an action of the General Assembly or of any event in the life of the church.

The Office of the General Assembly shall provide resourcing and orientation for Moderatorial candidates.

(ii) If the assembly votes to use paper ballots, the Stated Clerk shall provide ballots and assign no fewer than ten commissioners to act as tellers, collecting and counting the ballots. The results shall be given to the Stated Clerk who shall report the totals to the Moderator who shall announce them to the assembly.

Election

b. Election of the Stated Clerk

(1) The Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) requires the election of a Stated Clerk and the standing rules describe the procedures for the election. The Stated Clerk of the General Assembly shall be elected for a term of four years and is eligible for reelection to additional four-year terms. The Stated Clerk is accountable to the General Assembly for the performance of the assigned functions.

(2) The Stated Clerk of the General Assembly shall be elected in the manner described in this standing rule. No member of the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly or other persons involved in this procedure as a member of the search committee or as a person providing staff services to the committee may be considered for nomination as Stated Clerk. The incumbent Stated Clerk may not participate in any way in the election process described in this standing rule. In the year there is an election of a Stated Clerk, the Moderator shall appoint a temporary Stated Clerk during the period of the election at the General Assembly.

(3) The General Assembly that meets prior to the end of the term of a Stated Clerk shall elect a Stated Clerk Nomination Committee.

(a) The slate of nominees for the review/nomination committee shall consist of the following: three members of the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (nominated by the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly, one of whom shall serve as moderator of the committee), one member of the General Assembly Council (nominated by the General Assembly Council), and five at-large members nominated by the General Assembly Nominating Committee in the following categories: one governing body stated clerk and four persons (two elders and two clergy) from among commissioners who have attended an assembly in the past six years. The General Assembly Nominating Committee shall present to the assembly for election the slate of nominees for the Stated Clerk Nomination Committee. The slate presented shall reflect the denomination's commitment to inclusiveness.

(b) Nominations from the floor for the nomination committee shall be in order following the distribution of the printed list of proposed nominees by the General Assembly Nominating Committee and a declaration by the Moderator that the names are in nomination. Names placed in nomination from the floor shall be in opposition to a particular name of an at-large member placed in nomination by the General Assembly Nominating Committee, and must be in the same category (H.2.b.(3)(a)). More than one person may be placed in nomination from the floor in opposition to an at-large nominee.

(c) The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly shall be responsible for providing the nomination committee with an up-to-date position description.

(d) The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly will ensure that an adequate budget for the nomination process is provided in the Office of the General Assembly and shall designate staff services for the Stated Clerk Nomination Committee.

(e) The nomination committee shall begin its work no later than 300 days before the start of the assembly that will elect the Stated Clerk.

(f) The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly shall be responsible for conducting the end-of-term evaluation of the Stated Clerk.

(g) The nominating committee shall announce that persons seeking the position of Stated Clerk shall file a completed application form and a resume or personal information form (PIF) with the committee 180 days before the opening of the General Assembly.

If the incumbent wants to be considered, he or she will notify the committee in writing and submit a current resume or PIF 180 days before the opening of the General Assembly. The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly shall provide a copy of the end-of-term evaluation to the Stated Clerk Nominating Committee.

(h) Additional written material may be requested by the committee. No one may be nominated to serve as Stated Clerk who has not provided an application to the committee.

(i) The committee shall review and evaluate all applications to determine the constitutional eligibility of the candidates. Any candidate who is determined to not be eligible will be notified in writing within forty-five days of receipt of their resume or PIF.

(j) The committee shall interview all eligible candidates using the same methodology and select one as the committee's recommendation. All members of the committee shall ordinarily participate in the interview. The committee shall declare its nominee no later than sixty days before the opening of the General Assembly.

(k) Any of the applicants for the position of Stated Clerk, including the incumbent Stated Clerk if not the nominee of the committee, who wish to be placed in nomination against the nominee of the committee shall declare their intention to the committee to do so no later than forty-five days before the opening of the General Assembly.

(l) At the convening of the General Assembly, the Office of the General Assembly shall distribute to commissioners and advisory delegates an information packet containing the following material regarding each candidate for Stated Clerk who wishes to be included:

(i) A photograph, a biographical sketch, a personal statement by the candidate, including a statement regarding the candidate's sense of call to the office,

(ii) The responses of the candidate to a questionnaire developed by the committee based upon issues that will be before the church as presented in business to be considered by the General Assembly.

(iii) The material submitted shall be typewritten on paper 8-1/2 x 11 inches in size. The layouts for the presentation under this standing rule (as outlined above) may be chosen by the candidates, but the copy submitted for each presentation shall be provided in one color on one side of one sheet. The material shall be submitted to the Office of the General Assembly no less than thirty days before the convening of the General Assembly for reproduction and distribution and shall be accompanied by a statement indicating the willingness of the candidate to serve as Stated Clerk, if elected.

(m) The candidates may not distribute any other materials, print or electronic, including flyers, buttons, tokens or other objects that would denote a campaign for the office of Stated Clerk.

(n) Other organizations supporting the candidacy of a particular candidate may not distribute materials electronically, through the mail, or at the General Assembly with the knowledge, support, or permission of that candidate. Should a candidate discover that an organization is advocating or campaigning for him or her, it is expected that the candidate will request that organization to cease its activities. The same expectation will be true of organizations that are critical of a particular candidate for Stated Clerk.

(o) Each candidate will be provided a place to meet and talk with commissioners and advisory delegates two days before the election. Only information provided by the Office of the General Assembly may be distributed in those rooms. Other materials, apart from that packet, are not permitted. Each candidate for Stated Clerk will be allowed to post the times when he/she will be available for conversation in that room.

(p) Any questions concerning interpretation of the election process outlined in H.2.b. shall be determined by the Stated Clerk Nomination Committee.

(4) The General Assembly, by majority vote, shall elect the Stated Clerk in the following manner:

(a) Within forty-eight hours of the convening of the assembly, the Stated Clerk Review/Nomination Committee shall place in nomination a single nominee.

(b) The Moderator shall then invite other nominations from those who have completed the nomination process. Only one speech, made by a commissioner or a member of the Stated Clerk Nomination Committee not to exceed five minutes in length, shall be made to nominate each nominee. There shall be no speech seconding any nomination. Each person nominated from the floor shall reaffirm a willingness to serve as Stated Clerk, if elected.

(c) In the event there are no other nominations, the election shall proceed immediately as follows:

(i) The nominee for Stated Clerk shall be given an opportunity to address the assembly for a time not to exceed five minutes, expressing the nominee's views regarding the functions and work of the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

(ii) The Moderator shall inquire of commissioners whether there are questions to be asked of the Stated Clerk Nomination Committee. Time allocated shall not exceed fifteen minutes. The Moderator shall inquire of commissioners whether there are questions to be asked of the nominee for Stated Clerk. The time allocated should not exceed fifteen minutes, after which the voting shall take place.

(d) In the event there are other nominations, the election shall proceed as follows:

(i) The election of the Stated Clerk shall take place as the first order of business on the next to last day of the assembly's session.

(ii) Each nominee shall be given an opportunity to address the assembly for a time not to exceed five minutes, expressing the nominee's views regarding the functions and work of the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly. The nominees shall speak in the same order as the presentation of nominating speeches.

(iii) The Moderator shall inquire of commissioners whether there are questions to be asked of the nominees for Stated Clerk. The first question shall be addressed to the nominee who was nominated first and the same question shall then be put to the other nominees in the same order in which they were nominated. The second question shall be directed to the second nominee in this order and then to each of the other nominees in sequence. Each nominee shall be afforded an opportunity to answer each question. This process shall continue for a period not to exceed the number of nominees times fifteen minutes, or for one hour, whichever is shorter, unless terminated earlier by vote of the General Assembly, after which the voting shall take place.

(5) Should there be a vacancy in the office of the Stated Clerk, the General Assembly Nominating Committee shall propose to the assembly, if the assembly is in session, members for the Stated Clerk Nomination Committee, or shall propose to the Moderator for appointment, if the assembly is not in session, to a Stated Clerk Nomination Committee. This committee shall be composed of members as outlined in Standing Rule H.2.b. and begin the process of a search for a candidate for Stated Clerk. The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly shall designate an acting Stated Clerk until such time as a Stated Clerk is elected.

(6) The Stated Clerk Nomination Committee shall be dismissed at the adjournment of the session of the General Assembly at which the committee presents a nominee for Stated Clerk.

(7) A new Stated Clerk shall normally assume office thirty days after the adjournment of the assembly. A longer period of transition between Stated Clerks may be negotiated by the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly, but shall not exceed ninety days.

c. Acting Stated Clerk

The person so designated may be one of the Associate Stated Clerks or another person eligible for election as Stated Clerk.

Associate Stated Clerks

d. Associate Stated Clerks

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly shall recommend to the General Assembly for its action the date and place of meeting six years hence and any necessary changes in dates and places of meetings previously set. Criteria

c. The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly shall determine the criteria that render a place an eligible site for a meeting of the General Assembly, including the requirement that all meeting arrangements shall be made to facilitate full participation by persons with disabilities. The total of the payments to the two persons shall not be larger than payment to a single commissioner attending the full assembly. The Office of the General Assembly shall reimburse either the original commissioner or the alternate who replaced the original commissioner for the costs of transportation and other approved expenses, but not both. It shall be the responsibility of the two individuals, with the assistance of the presbytery that elected them, to determine an appropriate division of the costs, whether reimbursement was in cash or a prepaid ticket was provided. Both persons shall be listed in the Journal as commissioners, with an indication of the period during which they served.

1. Commissions and Special Committees

Purpose

a. Unless otherwise specified in the assembly’s action, any body or group established by the General Assembly to carry out decisions of the assembly, or instructed to report to the assembly, or make recommendations to the assembly, or both, shall be known as a commission or special committee (see Book of Order, G-9.0500). The purposes of a special committee must be ones that cannot be undertaken by the work of an existing corporation or entity under its assigned responsibilities. Due to the financial and staffing implications, before authorizing the establishment of a special committee, the assembly shall hear a report from the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures, which shall have consulted with the most closely related entity and a member designated from the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly, as to whether the work to be assigned to the special committee could more effectively and economically be assigned to that entity.

Considerations for Creating

b. The Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures shall be notified by any assembly committee whenever there is discussion about the creation of a special committee. In discussing the possible creation of a special committee, the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures shall hear from related corporation or entity representatives as well as representatives from the assembly committee considering the proposal. Financial implications of special committees should accompany any recommendation for action by the assembly. The written comment of the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures must be incorporated as background in the report of the assembly committee containing a recommendation to create a special committee.

Appointed by Moderator

c. Any commission or special committee authorized by the General Assembly, unless otherwise designated, shall be appointed by the Moderator. The Moderator is also authorized to fill by appointment any vacancies that may occur in any of such commissions or committees. No minister, elder, or other person shall be appointed to serve on more than one such commission or committee except by consent of the General Assembly.

Length of Existence and Reports

d. Special committees shall complete their work within two years unless the General Assembly that authorized its establishment specifies a different period. Special committees shall submit a written report to the General Assembly that shall include a recommendation to extend its existence (if beyond the period authorized), or, at the conclusion of its work, a recommendation for dismissal. Special committees shall also publish interim reports, no less than annually, by electronic or print means. Such interim reports shall indicate the progress made by the special committee on its assigned tasks and offer a timeline and process for completing its work. When a special committee requests an extension of its existence, the request shall be referred to the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly. After consultation with the most closely related assembly entity, the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly will recommend to the assembly whether the project shall be reassigned to the entity, remain with the special committee, or be terminated. Any extension to its existence shall require a two-thirds vote of the commissioners.

Review

e. The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly shall review the work of each special committee and include in its report to each session of the General Assembly a summary of the work being carried out by each special committee, including any recommendation to transfer the work assigned to a special committee elsewhere, or to dismiss the committee. A special committee shall not consider matters currently referred to another special committee or entity.

Representation at General Assembly and Funding

f. The expenses of one member of a special committee or commission to attend the General Assembly session to make any oral presentation of the report of the committee or commission that may be docketed, and to respond to questions concerning that report shall be paid by the General Assembly through the regular budget of the committee or commission. This member shall be designated as the corresponding member. The exceptions to this rule are as follows:

(1) At the General Assembly meeting in which the final report of the committee or commission is presented, the moderator, who shall serve as the corresponding member of the committee or commission, and one other designated member of the committee or commission shall attend to present the report and serve as resource to the committee considering the report. Unless otherwise approved in advance by the Moderator of the preceding General Assembly in consultation with the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (due to special circumstances), only the expenses of these two authorized representatives shall be reimbursed by the General Assembly through the regular budget of the committee or commission.

(2) In the event of a minority report, a designated member of the committee's or commission's minority shall also be invited to attend. The expenses of this member shall be reimbursed by the General Assembly through the regular budget of the committee or commission.

(3) Other members of special committees or commissions, not otherwise referred to in this standing rule, shall be reimbursed for attendance at a General Assembly session only if they are individually involved in hearings or other official purposes.

Coordination

g. Any such commission or committee shall consult with and advise the General Assembly Council on the progress of its work in order to assist the council in its responsibility for coordinating the work of the entities of the General Assembly and the work of presbyteries and synods.

Staff Services

h. The Stated Clerk shall provide staff services and other assistance to such commissions and committees in order to facilitate and coordinate their work. The work of commissions and special committees shall be funded through the per capita budget of the Office of the General Assembly.

2. Special Administrative Review of SynodsThree Ways to Review

a. The General Assembly has authority to undertake special administrative review of synods (Book of Order, G-13.0103k). There are three ways the General Assembly could be requested to consider such review:

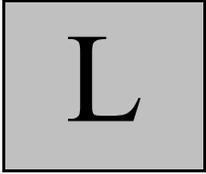

(1) by an overture from a presbytery or synod (G-11.0103t(3); G-12.0102o(2); Standing Rule A.3.;

(2) by request from one of the General Assembly entities (Standing Rule A.2.); or

(3) By a commissioners' resolution (Standing Rule A.8.). If such overture, request, or resolution is acted on favorably by the General Assembly, the General Assembly could undertake Special Administrative Review (G-9.0408–.0410) through commission or special committee as provided for in Standing Rule K.5. and G-9.0501–.0503.

Written Request for Review

b. Special administrative review of an alleged synod irregularity or delinquency may occur when a written request for such review is received by the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly from another synod or a presbytery within the synod of the alleged irregularity or delinquency. If the request relates to an alleged delinquency, the request can only be filed with the Stated Clerk after the failure or refusal of the synod to cure the alleged delinquency at its next meeting, having been requested to do so in writing prior to the meeting. When the request for special administrative review is received, the Stated Clerk shall convene a meeting of the Moderator of the General Assembly, the moderator of the General Assembly Council, and the moderator of the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly. If the request is in order and all the moderators agree that for the good of the church the special administrative review needs to be undertaken before the next meeting of the General Assembly (when the request could be considered by the whole General Assembly), the Moderator of the General Assembly shall appoint a special committee (Standing Rule K.5.) to conduct a special administrative review in accordance with G-9.0408–.0410 and report its findings and recommendations to the next General Assembly.

Amendment or Suspension of the Standing Rules

1. Recommending Amendments to the Standing Rules
 2. Amending the Standing Rules
 3. Suspending the Standing Rules

Recommending Amendments to the Standing Rules

1. In consultation with the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly, the Stated Clerk shall recommend to the next session of the General Assembly any changes in the Standing Rules of the General Assembly deemed necessary. The Stated Clerk shall consult with the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly before proposing to the General Assembly any amendment to the standing rules.

Amending the Standing Rules

2. The Standing Rules of the General Assembly may be amended by a two-thirds vote of the total enrollment of the commissioners. A motion to amend the rules is debatable.

Suspending the Standing Rules
