MEMORIAL MINUTE FOR BENJAMIN LACY ROSE

Moderator Reyes-Chow assumed the chair. Moderator Reyes-Chow recognized Vernon Broyles for a Memorial Minute for Ben Lacy Rose, Moderator of the 111th General Assembly (1971) of the Presbyterian Church in the United States. Broyles read the text of the memorial minute written by George M. Conn Jr.

Moderator, 111th General Assembly (1971), PCUS

Born Fayetteville, North Carolina, Davidson College, BA 1935, Union Theological Seminary in Virginia, BD 1938, ThM 1955, ThD 1955. Wife, Anne; Children, Anne, Irene, Lucy, Benjamin Jr. Ordained October 12, 1938. Pastor Chinquapin and Bethel Churches, Chinquapin and Beulaville, North Carolina, 1938–41; chaplain, U.S. Army 1941–46; pastor, Central Church, Bristol, Virginia, 1946–55; pastor, First Church, Wilmington, North Carolina, 1955–56; professor of homiletics and pastoral care, Union Theological Seminary in Virginia, 1956–78; Honorably Retired 1978.

Those are the somewhat soulless statistics. Between 1914 and 2007, the span of his life, there is a “dash”(-). It is within that “dash” that one finds the richness of Benjamin Lacy Rose’s life.

I remember Ben Rose the preacher. It was under his ministry that as a young man on a spiritual pilgrimage I first heard the Gospel preached in a way that was evangelically warm, intellectually respectable, and always understandable.

I remember Ben Rose the pastor. A man who had time for all who came seeking his advice, support or understanding. I remember him coming to his office after 11:00 on a Saturday night to sit with and listen to a frightened and tearful young man who was trying to make sense out of what he was afraid was a call to the ministry. I remember notes and phone calls of encouragement over the next fifty years.

I remember Ben Rose the patriot. Quoted more than once in books like D-Day, The 6th Of June, and A Bridge Too Far, he was a man of fierce pride in his country and deep compassion for the soldiers he served. After the end of WWII, he remained in the Reserves and continued to serve as a the frequent retreat leader for army chaplains stationed all over the world, in war and peace.

I remember Ben Rose the prophet. I was privileged to hear him preach the sermon in the mid 1950s staking out his unwavering support for an open church that welcomed all people and stood for racial justice. The General Assembly of the PCUS ordered that sermon printed and sent to every church within that denomination.

I remember Ben Rose the professor. Not content simply to teach young seminarians the fundamentals of preaching, how to officiate at a wedding, conduct a funeral, and how to make a hospital call, he insisted on testing himself against the changing realities within the church by serving as the Stated Supply of the Lake Waccamaw, North Carolina, and as the “in-parish-resident-professor” at the Little Chapel on the Boardwalk Church, Wrightsville, North Carolina, 1973–78.

I remember Ben Rose, preacher, pastor, prophet, professor, and, over the years, mentor, friend, and always, my “Father in the faith.”

Broyles concluded with prayer.

“Introduction

“The purpose of the General Assembly Council (the “GAC”), the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) A Corporation, and the Presbyterian Foundation (the “Foundation”) is to serve our Lord by strengthening the mission of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

“The GAC and the Foundation have presented to this General Assembly their disagreement on issues concerning the appropriate expenditure of restricted funds for the mission of the church. The GAC and the Foundation have come to the General Assembly seeking direction and the hope for reconciliation.

“The Assembly Committee on Mission Coordination and Budgets, with the concurrence of the General Assembly Council and the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation, recommends that General Assembly answer Item 08-21 by providing a mechanism to resolve disputes and enhance collaboration between the two agencies as follows:

“A. The Foundation and the GAC

“1. The Foundation and the GAC covenant to work together in good faith to continue to resolve disputes with respect to the restricted nature of particular funds or other disputes pertaining to intended or planned use and expenditures of restricted funds in compliance with the procedures set forth in Section 39.019 of the 1996

Joint Report. The final sentence of Section C of 39.019 shall not apply. If the process set forth in Section 39.019 does not result in resolution, then the issue shall be promptly referred by the Foundation president or the Executive Director of the GAC to the Restricted Funds Resolution Committee (RFRC) as defined below. Both agencies will be afforded the opportunity to present information in support of their respective positions to the Restricted Funds Resolution Committee for its consideration. The RFRC will analyze the issue raised and will have the ability to seek the input of outside resources. The Foundation and the GAC shall each bear their own expenses associated with the RFRC process and shall equally share the expenses of the committee's work.

“2. It is essential for the agencies of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to model Christ-like behavior for the church. Requiring the General Assembly to make broad policy decisions to manage discrete and particular issues is not healthy or appropriate. We instruct both boards to thoroughly explore ways to improve collegiality and require that the staff of both agencies honor the jointly agreed business processes.

“B. *The Restricted Funds Resolution Committee (RFRC)

“1. The Moderator of the 218th General Assembly (2008) shall appoint a Restricted Funds Resolution Committee (RFRC) comprised of:

- two representatives designated by the Foundation Board;
- two representatives designated by the General Assembly Council; and,
- three persons appointed by the Moderator who are not involved in either agency, and have an understanding of the applicable principles in both Reformed theology and civil law.

“2. Guiding Principles: In conducting its review, the Restricted Fund Resolution Committee will be guided by the following principles. Pursuant to the 1986 Deliverances, the missional responsibility and the fiduciary responsibility under civil law rests with the General Assembly. Thus, all the agencies of the General Assembly (GA) are bound to follow the directives and priorities of the GA. The GA vests the responsibility for implementation of program-related mission with the GAC, and the Foundation pledges to respect that role. The GA vests the responsibility for fiduciary review in the Foundation, and the GAC pledges to respect that role. Both the Foundation and the GAC must comply with applicable laws.

“3. The Foundation and the GAC recognize and celebrate that the substantial majority of funds which they together disburse to beneficiaries for the mission of the church are handled cooperatively, collegially, and efficiently and without disagreement.

“4. The RFRC shall create a process to be used should an issue not be resolved in accordance with the 1996 agreement. The RFRC shall specifically recognize and address the fiduciary responsibilities by which the Foundation and the GAC are required to operate under civil law, and where issues remain disputed, the Foundation and the GAC shall file a cy pres or other equivalent action in the appropriate court.

“C. The need for the RFRC to continue, the resolution of the respective roles and responsibilities of the Foundation and the GAC, as well as the manner in which they are carried out shall be included as items of business for the Six Agency Review Committee (see Item 08-22) to handle.

“D. The Foundation and GAC, with the RFRC, shall jointly report their progress in reconciling these issues to the 219th General Assembly (2010).”

Item 08-22. Recommendation for Six-Agency Review—Approved as amended. (See page 727.)

Item 08-23. On Evaluating the “Standards of Review” and the Manual before the Next Cycle of Review Commences—Approved. (See page 728.)

Item 08-24. Mission Budget—Approved. (See page 729.)

Item 08-25. On Investigating Opportunities for Group Wind and Hail Insurance Policies for Presbyteries Located on the Atlantic and Gulf Coasts—From the Presbytery of South Louisiana—Disapproved with comment. (See page 750.) Comment: Although the committee wished to respond with compassion to the needs expressed in the overture from the Presbytery of South Louisiana, the overture advocate asked us to defeat their overture because the presbyteries mentioned have agreed to work together and take the lead in discovering solutions for these problems and bringing these proposed resolutions to the next General Assembly. We appreciate their willingness to do this, and we continue to pray for all those affected by natural disasters and the resulting human and financial costs. [Original Fi-

1. The February 7–11, 2006, meeting for the GAC was not convened with prayer.
2. The May 23, 2006, Executive Committee meeting was not opened or closed with prayer.
3. A quorum was not reported for the Executive Committee meeting on February 7, 2006.
4. A quorum was not reported for the Executive Committee meeting on December 18, 2006.
5. A quorum was not reported for the Executive Committee meeting on June 12, 2007.

Item 08-B. Minutes, PC(USA), A Corporation.—Approved with comment. (See page 22.) Comment: Receive the report of Crowe Chizek and Company LLC, that “In our opinion, the consolidated financial statements referred to above presently fairly, in all material respects, the consolidated financial position of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), A Corporation, as of December 31, 2007, the changes in its net assets and its cash flows for the year then ended, in conformity with all accounting principles generally accepted in the United States of America.”

Item 08-C. Audit—Approved. (See pages 22, 820.)

Item 08-D. Committee on Review of the General Assembly Council Report—Approved. (See pages 22, 751.)

REPORT OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY NOMINATING COMMITTEE

Moderator Reyes-Chow recognized Janet Schlenker, moderator of the General Assembly Nominating Committee, for a continuation of the report from the committee (see pages 17–18 for first part of report). Schlenker withdrew Items 00-01X and 00-01Y, as the committees to which they pertained will not be formed. Schlenker placed in nomination those listed in Item 00-01Z. The assembly elected the persons nominated in Item 00-01Z. See p. 67

This concluded the report of the General Assembly Nominating Committee and the committee report is as follows:

Report on Review of the Advisory Committee on Racial Ethnic Concerns

Introduction:

The review of General Assembly permanent committees was conducted according to the provisions in the Standing Rules and the standards in the Manual of the General Assembly.

Mission:

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC), along with the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC), was created by the 205th General Assembly (1993) to ensure representation and an active voice for advocacy at the General Assembly level for people of color in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). The goal of this committee is to ensure the full access and participation of people of color within the life of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and the maintenance of a strong prophetic witness of the church on issues of racial justice in our nation and the world.

Membership:

The ACREC has twelve voting members nominated and elected through the General Assembly Nominating process, with the exception of one, who is elected by the General Assembly Council (GAC). Members are elected to four-year terms and may serve a total of eight years. The composition of the committee is outlined in the (GAC) Manual of Operations, as follows:

- 2 African Americans
- 2 Asian Americans
- 2 Hispanic/Latino Americans
- 2 Middle Eastern Americans
- 2 Native Americans

1 Member-at-Large elected with consideration for special expertise, fast-growing racial ethnic communities, geographic diversity, and ethnic balance.

1 General Assembly Council Executive Committee member

Process:

The ACREC provided a self-study based on their work for the past six years (2001–2006). The General Assembly Committee on Review of General Assembly Permanent Committees reviewed the self-study, examined the survey results, and interviewed the executive committee and the related staff of ACREC.

Findings:

Fidelity to Mission and Partnership

1. Does the ACREC as it was created by the church serve and support the church's mission in a particular area? Does the ACREC exhibit a constant faithfulness to and fulfillment of its servant role in the life of the PC(USA)?

The ACREC continues to do its work with passion and dedication. The committee has fulfilled its duties. It has been faithful to its mandate.

2. Does the basic process of the ACREC demonstrate fidelity to the mission and accountability procedures set forth in its establishing deliverance, charter, or mandate from the assembly? Does the ACREC exhibit leadership in guiding the church in engagement with the work and resources in with the ACREC acts?

The ACREC has provided leadership and guidance for the General Assembly and its programmatic entities in their work in order to provide advocacy for racial ethnic concerns. The ACREC is held accountable through annual and regular reports to GAC, which also reviews its minutes. Further, ACREC submits a biannual agency summary to the General Assembly.

3. Does the ACREC exhibit practical cooperation with the other agencies or committees of the church in areas of overlapping responsibility and opportunity?

The chair of ACREC sits as a corresponding member of both General Assembly and GAC. The ACREC consults regularly with the Washington Office, Project Equality, ACWC (Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns), ACSWP (Advisory Committee for Social Witness Policy), MRTI (Mission Responsibility Through Investment), and the five racial ethnic caucuses, as well as other denominational groups.

4. Does the ACREC provide timely responses to directives and requests from the General Assembly?

The ACREC reports to each GA and the chair sits as a corresponding member of General Assembly and GAC.

Effectiveness of Services

1. Does the ACREC have a defined and consistent process for completing its work?

Yes. The ACREC has a clearly understood process by which the committee is able to respond to the variety of issues before it with flexibility.

2. Does the ACREC have a regular process of self-evaluation of its services?

Yes. The ACREC normally reviews the Strategic Vision Plan in the Summer and Fall meetings following an assembly. It assesses on-going work, new work assigned by the assembly, and new areas of concern it wants to address based on input from committee members, liaisons, and staff.

3. Does the ACREC employ a strategy for effective communication with the church-at-large?

Yes. As an advocacy committee of the General Assembly, the ACREC communicates effectively with the church at large indirectly through its advocacy work with programmatic entities and the General Assembly, as well as through a print newsletter (The Torch) and through the PC(USA) Website.

4. Does the ACREC utilize current and emerging technologies to enable it to fulfill its mission?

Yes. In 2004, the committee launched a Website with support from the GAC staff. The Website is linked to the Office for Racial Justice & Advocacy, Racial Ethnic and Women's Ministries, ACWC, ACSWP, Peacemaking, and the Washington Office. The Website is designed to give the committee more visibility on an on-going basis. In the six-month period preceding the assembly, it focuses on communicating with commissioners and others interested in assembly business.

5. Has the committee or commission developed a vision and plans for its work in light of its historic mandate and the emerging issues before and context of the PC(USA)?

Yes. The ACREC initiated a strategic vision plan, which identifies areas of concern, to assist it in setting goals and prioritizing its work. The committee normally reviews this plan annually.

Item 14-Report 2. Report on the Review of the Advisory General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission—Approved. (See page 1338.)

1. Commends the GAPJC for its work and insights gained in providing a self-study.
2. The GAPJC is cognizant of the importance of using new technology to communicate its work; however, case history is not currently recorded in electronic-digest form. Given that the GAPJC has identified in its self-study the importance of precedence in the adjudication of future cases, the Assembly Committee on the Review of General Assembly Permanent Committees recommends that the GAPJC and the Office of the Stated Clerk compile an electronic digest of all cases adjudicated from 1983 to the present.
3. The GAPJC should be encouraged to move forward to provide adequate information and technology support for the commission to do its work.
4. The self-study recognized the limits of judicial process and expressed concern for potential future increase in caseload; the commission therefore encouraged greater use of Alternative Forms of Resolution (AFR) beginning at the presbytery level. In keeping with Matthew 5:25, the review committee recommends that the Office of the General Assembly, in cooperation with the Office of the Stated Clerk, develop a process for using AFR starting at the presbytery level and present its recommendation to the 219 General Assembly (2010) for action.
5. That the following report on Review of the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission be approved.

Report on Review of the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission

Introduction

The review of the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission (GAPJC) was conducted according to the provisions in the Standing Rules and the standards in the Manual of the General Assembly as far as this committee is aware.

Mission

The GAPJC is a commission of the General Assembly and is a reactive body as opposed to a committee that generates its own work.

As quoted in their self study: “The Rules of Discipline describe the judicial processes of the Church, of which the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission (GAPJC) is a part. The GAPJC has both original and appellate jurisdiction as prescribed in the Rules of Discipline. Primarily an appellate court, the Commission hears and decides both remedial and disciplinary cases; however, GAPJC may conduct trials in cases of original jurisdiction.”

The mission of the GA PJC is stated as follows in the self-study:

“Judicial process is the means by which church discipline is implemented within the context of pastoral care and oversight. It is the exercise of authority by governing bodies of the church for

“a. the prevention and correction of irregularities and delinquencies by governing bodies, the General Assembly Council, or an entity of the General Assembly (Remedial Cases, D-6.0000);

“b. the prevention and correction of offenses by persons (Disciplinary Cases, D-10.0000).” (D-2.0101).”

Membership

As stated in the self-study:

The membership of the GAPJC is composed of ministers and elders (as nearly equal as possible) from each of the synods (D-5.0100). Thus there are sixteen commissioners from the sixteen synods; currently, however, there are two vacancies. Members are elected by the General Assembly and ordinarily serve for six years (D-5.0103). The change to biennial assemblies necessitated the adjustment of the terms of some of the current commissioners.

The commission elects its moderator, vice-moderator, clerk, and assistant clerk, who constitute the executive committee. Officers serve terms of two years and may be reelected. The responsibilities of the executive committee are delineated in the Manual of the GAPJC, which is appended to the self-study.

Process

The Assembly Committee on Review of General Assembly Permanent Committees received a self-study based on the work of the GAPJC for the last six years. The committee would like to commend the GAPJC for an excellent self-study, which was informative and thorough. The committee was disappointed that an external survey form, which the committee had prepared, had not been distributed and completed. The committee requests that a survey be included in the next GAPJC self-study.

Findings:Fidelity to Mission and Partnership

1. Does the GAPJC, as it was created by the church, serve and support the church's mission in a particular area? Does the GAPJC exhibit a constant faithfulness to and in fulfillment of its servant role in the life of the PC(USA)?

In the presentation of the self-study, the committee was impressed by the commission's commitment to the task given to them by the GA and the quality of their faithfulness to the task. The GA PJC goes above and beyond its constitutional mandates to ensure this faithfulness (e.g., not only opening meetings with prayer but opening with daily corporate worship).

2. Do the basic processes of the GAPJC demonstrate fidelity to the mission and accountability procedures set forth in its establishing deliverance, charter, or mandate from the assembly? Does the GAPJC exhibit leadership in guiding the church in engagement with the work and resources in which the GAPJC acts?

The GAPJC demonstrates fidelity to its mission and accountability to establishing deliverance by self-limiting its review of cases presented to it. It perceives itself as deliberately not legislating through judicial review.

3. Does the GAPJC exhibit practical cooperation with the other agencies or committees of the church in areas of overlapping responsibility and opportunity?

The GA PJC exhibits cooperation with those agencies with which it is mandated to work with and report (e.g., the Office of the Stated Clerk).

4. Does the GAPJC provide timely responses to directives and requests from the General Assembly?

Given the caseload, the GAPJC is timely in their responses to the General Assembly. It averages eleven cases per year and average 7.4 months from receiving a case to final adjudication. (2–3 cases per meeting ... 4 meetings).

Effectiveness of Services

1. Does the GAPJC have a defined and consistent process for completing its work?

Yes

2. Does the GAPJC have a regular process of self-evaluation of its services?

Yes. At the conclusion of each meeting the commissioners complete an evaluation form.

3. Does the GAPJC employ a strategy for effective communication with the church-at-large?

Yes, through the office of the Office of the Stated Clerk. Since 2002 the commission has written Headnotes which summarize salient points of their decisions.

4. Does the GAPJC utilize current and emerging technologies to enable it to fulfill its mission?

Yes, to the best of its ability given the budget constraints (see recommendations).

5. Does the GAPJC have a developed vision and plan for its work in light its historic mandate and the emerging issues before the PC(USA)?

Yes; however, because the GAPJC is a reactive body and the vision and scope of its work is proscribed by the Book of Order, the vision pertains only to its process and work.

Item 14-Report 3. Report on the Review of the Presbyteries' Cooperative Committee on Examination of Candidates—Approved. (See page 1353.)

Report 3: Report on Review of the Presbyteries' Cooperative Committee on Examinations of Candidates

1. This committee would like to commend the PCCEC for a thorough self-study. The committee wants to affirm the PCCEC commitment to the Theological Standard of The Reformed Faith while at the same time seeking to address the interpretative barriers of racial ethnic candidates. We recommend in the future that the communication links between the PCCEC and CPMs be continued and significantly strengthened. As the demographics of the denomination continue to change, we encourage the committee to engage in continual reassessment. We further recommend that the General Assembly continue to support the work of the PCCEC.

2. That the following report on Review of the Presbyteries' Cooperative Committee on Examinations of Candidates be approved.

Report on Review of the Presbyteries' Cooperative Committee on Examinations of Candidates

Introduction:

The review of the General Assembly committees was conducted according to the provisions in the Standing Rules and the standards in the Manual of the General Assembly.

Mission

The Presbyteries' Cooperative Committee on Examinations for Candidates (PCCEC) has responsibility for the written exams that are among the requirements for ordination to the office of minister of Word and Sacrament.

Membership:

The committee has twenty-four members, half of whom are elected by the General Assembly, and half of whom are elected by six regional reading groups that meet annually to grade the exams. The committee recruits two additional, nonvoting members whose primary responsibility is preparation of the Bible Content Examination.

Process

The PCCEC provided a self-study based on their work and the General Assembly Committee on Review of General Assembly Permanent Committees reviewed the self-study, examined the survey results, and heard a presentation from the PCCEC.

Findings:

A. Fidelity to Mission and Partnership

1. Does the PCCEC exhibit a constant faithfulness to and in fulfillment of its servant role in the life of the PC(USA)?

Yes

2. Does the basic process of the PCCEC demonstrate fidelity to the mission and accountability procedures set forth in its establishing deliverance, charter, or mandate from the assembly? Does the PCCEC exhibit leadership in guiding the church in engagement with the work and resources in which the PCCEC acts?

Yes

3. Does the PCCEC exhibit practical cooperation with the other agencies or committees of the church in areas of overlapping responsibility and opportunity?

Yes, The PCCEC communicated its desire to cooperate with other agencies dealing with ordination such as seminaries and CPMs.

4. Does the PCCEC provide timely responses to directives and requests from the General Assembly?

Yes. The committee was realistic about their timeline. It expressed a willingness to expedite the process when possible.

B. Effectiveness of Services

1. Does the PCCEC have a defined and consistent process for completing its work?

Yes. The self-study reflects a thorough analysis of its work to date and a well-thought out pilot program to strengthen the program in four areas: (1) Examination content and format; (2) Grading procedures; (3) Timing of when candidates take examinations; (4) Racial ethnic representation in the composing and grading of examinations.

2. Does the PCCEC have a regular process of self-evaluation of its services?

Yes. The committee keeps track of their own internal statistics and evaluates the results.

3. Does the PCCEC employ a strategy for effective communication with the church-at-large?

Based on the self-study, it is unclear to us if and how the committee communicates with the church-at-large, including the CPMs, and especially racial ethnic sessions.

4. Does the PCCEC utilize current and emerging technologies to enable it to fulfill its mission?

Yes.

5. Does the PCCEC have a developed vision and a plan for its work in light of its historic mandate and the emerging issues before and within the context of the PC(USA)?

In response to Item 04-18, the 218th General Assembly (2008) approved the following resolution:

While the Advisory Committee on the Constitution has offered some relief to these concerns by proposing new language that would allow the General Assembly to determine which of its permanent committees shall have permanent representation from each of the synods or have rotating representation from among the synods, the General Assembly Nominating Committee believes that the former advice of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution provided to the 217th General Assembly (2006) is a more effective response. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution formerly advised the 217th General Assembly (2006) that

4. Proposed amendments to G-13.0107: The proposed revision of this section should be assessed to determine whether all permanent committees of the General Assembly require representation from each synod. The term “permanent committees” is not specifically defined by the provision, but presumably would include all committees whose membership is not otherwise defined by Book of Order. The assembly should consider whether the size of permanent committees should be defined by the mission of the committee rather than a formalistic approach. (Section G-9.0402a: “Mission determines the form of structure and administration. All structures should enable the church to give effective witness to the Lordship of Christ in the contemporary world.”) [Underline added for emphasis.]

If the 217th General Assembly (2006) agrees with the restructuring of membership being proposed and wishes to address these concerns, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution suggests the following alternative resolution be presented to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative vote:

- a. Shall G-13.0107 be stricken.
- b. Shall G-13.0108 be amended as follows: [Text to be added is shown as italic.]

“The General Assembly shall establish a permanent Committee on Representation as required by G-9.0105, which shall advise the General Assembly Nominating Committee of any need for nominations in particular categories needing increased representation. The Committee on Representation shall report to each meeting of the General Assembly (other than special or adjourned meetings) regarding progress toward fair representation of the categories of persons listed in G-4.0403. The committee shall consist of members equal in number to the synods of the church, each member resident in a different synod, and members distributed so that there are one third ministers (both women and men), one third laymen, and one third laywomen.”

- c. Add to the proposed revision to G-13.0202 as proposed by this Item the following text:

“The membership, terms of office, and officers of the General Assembly Council shall be approved by the General Assembly as provided for in the manual of operations of the General Assembly Council. The Council shall include members from each of the synods of the church.” (Minutes, 2006, Part I, p. 644)

The General Assembly Nominating Committee supports the 2006 advice of the ACC and suggests that the 218th General Assembly (2008) consider approving it.

Therefore, the 218th General Assembly (2008) directs the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendments to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

1. Shall G-13.0107 be stricken.
2. Shall G-13.0108 be amended as follows: [Text to be added is shown as italic.]

“The General Assembly shall establish a permanent Committee on Representation as required by G-9.0105, which shall advise the General Assembly Nominating Committee of any need for nominations in particular categories needing increased representation. The Committee on Representation shall report to each meeting of the General Assembly (other than special or adjourned meetings) regarding progress toward fair representation of the categories of persons listed in G-4.0403. The committee shall consist of members equal in number to the synods of the church, each member resident in a different synod, and members distributed so that there are one third ministers (both women and men), one third laymen, and one third laywomen.”

3. Shall G-13.0202a be amended as follows:

“The membership, terms of office, and officers of the General Assembly Council shall be approved by the General Assembly as provided for in the Manual of Operations of the General Assembly Council. The Council shall include members from each of the synods of the church.”

*Item 04-19. W-4.4003, “Minister” or “Moderator”—Approved. (See page 272.)

Item 09-07. Homelessness to Hope: Just, Sustainable Communities for All People—Answered with an alternate resolution, with floor amendment. (See page 866.)

In response to this recommendation, that the 218th General Assembly (2008) approve the following resolution:

The 218th General Assembly (2008) approves the recommendations below and receives the study paper that was attached to the original item of business, which provides rationale and resources for social policy, social service, and education:

The purpose of these recommendations is to provide information and guidance for governing bodies and direction for denominational advocates. These recommendations affirm the complexity of issues surrounding homelessness and the need for a holistic approach that (1) addresses ministry to those experiencing or at risk of homelessness and (2) the structural components necessary for a comprehensive solution.

The historical witness of the PC(USA) affirms the following principles, as foundational to faithful ministry with persons who are homeless:

- Universal access to safe, decent, accessible, affordable, and permanent housing is a measure of a just society and a sign of the coming Reign of God.
- The church is called to create communities of hospitality that assure all members of society, including persons experiencing homelessness, a right to basic economic and social well-being, including safe, affordable housing.
- The church is called to honor God's gift of the earth and to create, through personal lifestyle choices and the structures of society, sustainable communities where people can be securely housed in just relationship with one another and the earth.
- The church is called to challenge society to provide safe, decent, accessible, affordable, and permanent housing for all persons who cannot secure such housing through their own means.

1. Commend the ongoing witness, commitment, ministry and advocacy of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), its General Assembly and agencies, the Presbyterian Washington Office, the Presbyterian Network to End Homelessness, and the more than 3,500 Presbyterian congregations reporting hands-on engagement in housing and homeless ministries. We commend previous Presbyterian commitments to actions aimed at preventing poverty, e.g. education, job development, day care, living wage, health care, and gambling toward strengthening individuals and families and individuals in their efforts to avoid homelessness.

2. Encourage congregations, presbyteries, synods, and other church-related entities to pursue comprehensive responses to the crisis of homelessness and affordable housing. The General Assembly Council ministries of Compassion, Peace and Justice will develop and provide resources (including this report) to help these entities in this task, covering such actions as:

- Shelters, transitional housing programs, mixed-income communities, and affordable housing in their communities;
- Links with service providers in the community;
- The impact of employment practices, including sustainable wages and benefits, employment of youth and adults reentering the workforce after being homeless or institutionalized;
- Links with local, regional, and national coalitions that advocate for worker justice and sustainable wages, green design in homes and communities, permanent affordable rental housing;

- Supporting residents of public housing in their efforts to organize and have voice in their communities;
- The application of stewardship strategies in the area of homelessness, such as allocating physical space for services for persons in need of housing assistance, tithing capital campaign proceeds;
- General Assembly resources available to congregations, such as the Presbyterian Investment & Loan Program, Inc. (PILP).

3. Affirm that the church is called to offer its diverse resources in response to the crisis of homelessness and affordable rental housing, but also insist that faith communities cannot and should not be expected to address this crisis in isolation from governmental and private sector partnerships. Therefore, we advocate initiatives such as:

a. Policy Affecting Housing and Housing Services

(1) Preservation and development of housing programs at all governing levels that target households with low incomes and persons with special needs, especially the federal Section 8 Housing Choice Voucher program.

(2) Restoration and expansion of “Project-Based Section 8” and other federal subsidy and incentive programs that promote the construction of affordable housing, and revitalization of the 2.5 million units of affordable housing funded under this program.

(3) Development of Housing Trust Funds at municipal, state, and national levels, to make significant funding available to both urban and rural communities for the development of permanent, “green,” affordable housing.

(4) Enactment of inclusionary zoning policies and support for other strategies to achieve mixed-income communities, with attention to replacing housing units for persons with extremely low income when displaced through community development initiatives.

(5) Improved enforcement of existing nondiscrimination laws with regard to housing and home financing.

b. Policy Affecting Services for Persons Experiencing Homelessness or at Risk of Homelessness

(1) Revision of municipal zoning codes to include the temporary housing of persons (e.g. shelters, transitional housing, or supportive housing) as a permitted use, to facilitate the development of affordable rental housing, and to prohibit discrimination against persons based on their housing status.

(2) Increased funding for the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development and the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services and other departments to progress toward the goal of ending chronic homelessness, such as:

(a) Expansion and adequate funding for Supportive Housing (housing plus services) for all people who have little or no income, are disabled, are formerly homeless, or are living with mental illness, to aid them in living independent, healthy, and fulfilling lives, and to prevent persons from recycling among the streets, the shelters, the jails, and the prisons.

(b) Continuation of and increased investment in the McKinney-Vento Act and related legislation, which provide funding for many services for persons who are homeless or at risk of homelessness, including amendments that would increase flexibility in program administration and make programs more performance-based.

(c) Expansion of Veterans Administration (VA) programs for veterans who are homeless or at risk of becoming homeless to include funding for permanent housing and the creation of innovative new models for service, including programs to help reintegrate returning veterans into the community, encourage partnerships between the VA and community-based organizations, and link permanent housing for veterans and their families with supportive services.

(d) Renewal and expansion of federal funding to help communities prevent homelessness among youth and young adults, as well as persons with special needs as they reenter communities from jails and prisons, and to provide housing and supportive services.

(e) Restoration of funding for mainstream programs that have been utilized by states, cities, and counties to provide housing and services as part of their comprehensive plans to prevent and end homelessness. These include but are not limited to HUD’s Community Development Block Grant Program, the Home Investment Partnership Program (HOME), Supportive Housing for the Elderly Program (Section 202), and Supportive Housing for Persons with Disabilities (Section 811) as well as Medicaid, and other grants to states and localities.

c. *Policies Affecting Lending Practices

- (1) Development of foreclosure prevention strategies and programs to benefit households at risk.
- (2) Restrict predatory and abusive lending practices, in consultation with the 217th General Assembly (1996)'s recommendations regarding "A Reformed Understanding of Usury in the 21st Century" (Minutes, 2006, Part I, p. 805).

d. *Policies Affecting Taxation

- (1) Support of fiscally responsible federal budget priorities and adequate revenues to ensure long-term funding for critical housing assistance and other safety net programs for families with low income.
- (2) Advocacy for budget priorities at all levels of government that utilize incentives and tax credits to encourage "smart growth" and the development of sustainable communities.

(3) Increase tax benefits for those living at lower income levels, so as to achieve a more equitable distribution of tax benefits for the purpose of achieving greater economic stability for individuals and families at risk of homelessness such as:

- expansion of the Earned Income Tax Credit to include workers not raising children
- expansion of the refundable Child Tax Credit by making it available to more low-income workers, and
- development at the state or federal level of a refundable tax credit targeted to low-income renters, similar to the subsidy provided to homeowners through the federal mortgage interest deduction.

4. That the General Assembly urge the Presbyterian Foundation, in collaboration with the General Assembly Council, the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy, and the office on Mission Responsibility Through Investment, to expand its Creative Investment Program to invest meaningfully in the Local Initiatives Support Corporation (LISC) to create a revolving loan fund available to Presbyterian congregations, presbyteries, synods, and coalitions in which church entities are involved, for predevelopment loans to support the construction and rehabilitation of permanent rental housing for individuals and families with low income and/or a history of homelessness.

5. Direct the communication and distribution of this resolution:

a. Direct the Office of the General Assembly, in collaboration with the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy, to publish this report in its entirety online and in hard copy, making copies available to each presbytery, resource center, synod, and requesting session, as well as colleges and seminaries related to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), and for distribution throughout the church through Presbyterian Distribution Services; and to notify the church of its availability through the PC(USA) Website.

b. Direct the General Assembly Council to facilitate the development of a portion of its website to make information, resources, and advocacy suggestions related to this resolution easily accessible to the church at all levels.

c. Urge the Office of Small Church and Community Ministries, in collaboration with the Presbyterian Washington Office and other church entities, to develop and/or make available resources to educate individual Presbyterians and congregations on the nature and extent of the crisis in homelessness and affordable housing, the types of housing that can address the needs of those caught in the cycle of homelessness, and ways to respond to and advocate for public policy directives.

6. Request that all PC(USA) members forgo one meal per week (if one is able) as an act of worship and humility. The value of that meal is to be pledged (in a manner of the donor's choice) to feeding those in need

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Stated Clerk Clifton Kirkpatrick announced the details of meetings of the Assembly Committee on General Assembly Procedures and the Assembly Committee on Mission Coordination and Budgets that took place immediately following the business meeting.

RECESS

Moderator Reyes-Chow recognized Robert Austell, commissioner from the Presbytery of Charlotte, who led the assembly in prayer. The assembly recessed at 11:35 p.m. to reconvene at 8:30 a.m. on Saturday, June 28.

Saturday, June 28, 2008, 8:30 A.M.

The 218th General Assembly (2008) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) was reconvened at 8:30 a.m. with Moderator Bruce Reyes-Chow presiding. Moderator Reyes-Chow recognized Clara Sanders, youth advisory delegate from the Presbytery of Indian Nations, who led the assembly in the opening prayer.

REPORT OF THE ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON BILLS AND OVERTURES

Moderator Reyes-Chow recognized Adebisi Shofu, vice-moderator of the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures, for a report from the committee.

Shofu reported that the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures examined the minutes of the General Assembly of Thursday, June 26, 2008, and found them in order. The assembly approved Item 02-05. (See page 137.) Shofu reported that the minutes of Friday, June 27, 2008, and Saturday, June 28, 2008, would be mailed to a subcommittee of the Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures for approval.

Protests found to be in decorous language are recorded in the Minutes as follows:

Protest of Item 05-12—From Ron Oldenkamp, commissioner from the Presbytery of Sacramento: “I protest against the action taken on Item 05-12, as I believe the action is a de facto amending of our Book of Order without going through the constitutional amendment process (sending an amendment to the presbyteries for their ratification).”

Protest of Item 07-02—From Rebecca Lee, commissioner from the Presbytery of Boise: “I was prepared to offer an amendment to 7-02. I had waited by the microphone for a considerable time, my number was entered, the amendment form submitted & sent to the podium. The item was announced and I was overlooked, a quick vote taken and the next item announced. I found that there was a failure of the machinery so that my number did not appear on the podium and of course being a short woman it is easy to not see me. Once the GA moved pass the item it is almost impossible to garner interest again in a prior item. An oral vote to take up 7-02 was defeated perhaps by 1/3 to 2/3 of the house. My amendment would have clarified 2 things: 1) Affirm our Stated Clerk’s Oct. 15, 2007 letter on the subject and 2( “receive” the Invitation to dialogue Common Word in lieu of “supporting” the document. This would have generated notice that response to a 132 Cleric document of 28 pages with one sentence might be more appropriately answered by affirming (and being consistent with) S.C. Kirkpatrick’s letter.”

Protest of Item 13-06—From Anne Weirich, commissioner from the Presbytery of Lake Michigan: “Minority report for Heidelberg Confession was allowed even though it was a report that recommended maintaining the status quo. I proposed a similar minority report on a completely different overture and was told – quite correctly – that it was not allowed to submit a minority report recommending the maintenance of the status quo. Therefore, I’m registering a complaint and would like this minuted and addressed.”

Protest of Committee 16 process—From Robert Austell, commissioner from the Presbytery of Charlotte; John Barlow, commissioner from the Presbytery of Carlisle; Christine Bohn, commissioner from the Presbytery of Detroit; LaVerne Davenport, commissioner from the Presbytery of Blackhawk; David Grove, commissioner from the Presbytery of Cherokee; David Jenkins, commissioner from the Presbytery of Coastal Carolina; William Teng, commissioner from the Presbytery of National Capital; and Saunda Thomas, commissioner from the Presbytery of Cayuga-Syracuse: “We, members of Committee 16 (Worship and Spiritual Renewal) are deeply concerned about certain erroneous process information and action by the leadership team including the associate stated clerk, Gradye Parsons, which we believe made our work together as a committee ineffective. Three examples: a) We were specifically told by the associate stated clerk that we could not generate new business even in the area of worship and spiritual renewal but discovered Wednesday that there is a process to do that as evidenced by comm. 17’s report. b) We were told we could not add comment reflecting the effectiveness of the communal discernment process and discovered Wednesday during Com 17’s report that there is a procedure to do this. c) There were numerous occasions where the body itself was denied the opportunity to decide its own way forward and that decision was made for it by the leadership team and in many cases, the resource personnel.”

Protest of 08 GA—From Steve Aeschbacher, commissioner from the Presbytery of Seattle; Lisa Baker, commissioner from the Presbytery of Southern New England; Laureen Bodnar, commissioner from the Presbytery of Pittsburgh; Jean Boisubin, commissioner from the Presbytery of New Covenant; George Bones, commissioner from the Presbytery of New Covenant; Bruce Bush, commissioner from the Presbytery of Stockton; Deena Candler, commissioner from the Presbytery of Missouri River Valley; Greg Carter, commissioner from the Presbytery of Inland Northwest; Maurice Caskey, commissioner from the Presbytery of San Diego; Nancy Cormack-Hughes, commissioner from the Presbytery of Utah; LaVerne Davenport, commissioner from the Presbytery of Blackhawk; Bob Davis, commissioner from the Presbytery of San Diego; Leslie Day-Ebert, commissioner from the Presbytery of Los Ranchos; Sylvia Dooling, commissioner from the Presbytery of Plains and Peaks; Mark Evans, commissioner from the Presbytery of Beaver-Butler; Paul Fandl, commissioner from the Presbytery of Stockton; Jack Foley, commissioner from the Presbytery of Cherokee; David Freehling, commissioner from the Presbytery of Pueblo; Douglas Garrard, commissioner from the Presbytery of Riverside; Paul Granstrom, commissioner from the Presbytery of Nevada; David Grove, commissioner from the Presbytery of Cherokee; John Hamilton, commissioner from the Presbytery of Blackhawk; Kenneth Hetzel, commissioner from the Presbytery of Lake Huron; Jay Hull, commissioner from the Presbytery of Nevada; Mark Hunt, commissioner from the Presbytery of Charleston-Atlantic; Tim Hunt, commissioner from the Presbytery of San Francisco; Erma Jones, commissioner from the Presbytery of Cherokee; Mike Lambert, commissioner from the Presbytery of Los Ranchos; Conway Lanford, commissioner from the Presbytery of New Hope; Freda Lawther, commissioner from the Presbytery of Lake Huron; Rebecca Lee, commissioner from the Presbytery of Boise; Charlie Little, commissioner from the Presbytery of Santa Barbara; Jesse Mabanglo, commissioner from the Presbytery of Seattle; Steven Matthies, commissioner from the Presbytery of Whitewater Valley; Catherine McGowen, commissioner from the Presbytery of South Louisiana; Henry Meeuwse, commissioner from the Presbytery of Charleston-Atlantic; James Moelk, commissioner from the Presbytery of Lake Erie; Todd Mulford, commissioner from the Presbytery of South Louisiana; Louis Paradise, commissioner from the Presbytery of San Joaquin; James Park, commissioner from the Presbytery of San Gabriel; Doris Pate, commissioner from the Presbytery of San Diego; Mark Patterson, commissioner from the Presbytery of Santa Barbara; Gary Pichon, commissioner from the Presbytery of Cherokee; Gene Price, commissioner from the Presbytery of New Covenant; Terry Simm, commissioner from the Presbytery of Prospect Hill; Ben Ray, commissioner from the Presbytery of Southern Kansas; David Reimer, commissioner from the Presbytery of Newark; Won-Jong Rhee, commissioner from the Presbytery of Eastern Korean; Stephen Roosa, commissioner from the Presbytery of Plains and Peaks; Lawrence Ruby, commissioner from the Presbytery of Pittsburgh; Frederick Seay, commissioner from the Presbytery of South Louisiana; John Sheldon, commissioner from the Presbytery of West Jersey; Archie Smith, commissioner from the Presbytery of San Joaquin; Betsy Straeter, commissioner from the Presbytery of San Gabriel; Thomas Straeter, commissioner from the Presbytery of San Diego; William Teng, commissioner from the Presbytery of National Capital; Paul Terry, commissioner from the Presbytery of Southern New England; Burfoot Ward, commissioner from the Presbytery of Lake Erie; Bob Welsh, commissioner from the Presbytery of Central Washington; and Warren Wilkewitz, commissioner from the Presbytery of Mid-South: “We, the undersigned, protest and grieve the decision of the majority of our fellow commissioners at this General Assembly. This body has inflicted deep wounds on the Presbyterian Church (USA) that threaten to undo us. This General Assembly told our congregations and the world by its actions here that it rejects the Scripture’s teaching and our Reformed confessions’ affirmation that sexual relations outside the covenant of marriage of a man and a woman does not comport with Christian faith. The majority of the General Assembly has recommended the removal of the requirement that our pastors and elders commit themselves either to a lifelong union of a man and a woman or chastity in singleness, and has acted to strip the church of its ability to set any binding standards for the behavior of its officers. We, the undersigned, mourn and protest the affront to the Church’s Savior that suggests that God blesses forms of sexual behavior which he has clearly said are sinful. We stand against these decisions and vow to join with the many thousands of our fellow Presbyterians who will resist these actions and remain faithful to the Lord of the Church, in whom we put our trust and our hope.”

Protest of Debate on Belhar Confession—From David Hicks, commissioner from the Presbytery of Grand Canyon: “The debate for the Belhar Confession was glossed over. The chair of the committee was waiting to speak to the overture but was ignored by the Moderator. Thus, the GA was unable to discuss this important legislation.”

Protest of Action of the GA—From Jon Faraone, commissioner from the Presbytery of Western Kentucky: “It is tragic that this stacked deck G.A. did what it did. They have split the church wide open leaving no hope at this time for any Peace Unity & Purity in our church which truly saddens & breaks my heart.”

Protest of Confrontation after Committee Testimony—From Gary Green, commissioner from the Presbytery of Grand Canyon: “Following my testimony before committee 11 on the evening of Tues. June 24th, 2008, I was followed out of the committee conference room and confronted by a Mr. Glenn Dickson and verbally assaulted with charges of being a liar, but no specifics as to what he thought was a lie were mentioned. I believe that this needs to be brought to the attention of the Stated Clerk.”

Protest of Action Taken on Item 05-09 and 05-12—From Betsy Straeter, commissioner from the Presbytery of San Gabriel; and Tom Straeter, commissioner from the Presbytery of San Diego: “I protest the action taken by the 218th General Assembly as it pertains to actions 5-09 and 5-12 as in my opinion they are in violation of our vows as elders and ministers of the word and sacrament. These actions, though they may be in order according to our polity, violate our vow to be guided by scripture. In my opinion that sets up a situation where by, as a church, we will begin to act in violation of the scripture principles regarding the ordaining elders, ministers and deacons. As such they also set one portion of our constitution (our Book of Order) against another (our Confessions and Scripture). If ratified by our presbyteries our constitution will be significantly different than the one my church and I initially volunteered to follow.”

Protest of 08 GA—From Lisa Lani Esterling, commissioner from the Presbytery of South Louisiana: “We, the undersigned, protest and grieve the decision of the majority of our fellow commissioners at this General Assembly. This body has inflicted deep wounds on the Presbyterian Church (USA) that threaten to undo us. This General Assembly told our congregations and the world by its actions here that it rejects the Scripture’s teaching and our Reformed confessions’ affirmation that sexual relations outside the covenant of marriage of a man and a woman does not comport with Christian faith. The majority of the General Assembly has recommended the removal of the requirement that our pastors and elders commit themselves either to a lifelong union of a man and a woman or chastity in singleness, and has acted to strip the church of its ability to set any binding standards for the behavior of its officers. We, the undersigned, mourn and protest the affront to the Church’s Savior that suggests that God blesses forms of sexual behavior which he has clearly said are sinful. We stand against these decisions and vow to join with the many thousands of our fellow Presbyterians who will resist these actions and remain faithful to the Lord of the Church, in whom we put our trust and our hope. To approve an AI to prevent the local churches to fully study and discuss this does a disservice to our polity. In addition how this was seemingly ‘railroaded’ by leadership is unconscionable. It was apparent that little or no thought was given to the wounds this will inflict in presbyteries who are struggling to find a path toward unity.”

Protest of 08 GA—From Frederick Seay, commissioner from the Presbytery of South Louisiana: “We, the undersigned, protest and grieve the decision of the majority of our fellow commissioners at this General Assembly. This body has inflicted deep wounds on the Presbyterian Church (USA) that threaten to undo us. This General Assembly told our congregations and the world by its actions here that it rejects the Scripture’s teaching and our Reformed confessions’ affirmation that sexual relations outside the covenant of marriage of a man and a woman does not comport with Christian faith. The majority of the General Assembly has recommended the removal of the requirement that our pastors and elders commit themselves either to a lifelong union of a man and a woman or chastity in singleness, and has acted to strip the church of its ability to set any binding standards for the behavior of its officers. To approve an AI to prevent the local churches to fully study and discuss this does a disservice to our polity. In addition how this was seemingly ‘railroaded’ by leadership is unconscionable. It was apparent that little or no thought was given to the wounds this will inflict in presbyteries who are struggling to find a path toward unity. Agreed-I am deeply disturbed that the 1978 ‘AI’ was discussed with no opportunity for the presbyteries and local churches to study, pray, discuss, and discern. These actions work against fostering a climate across the PCUSA for prayerful discernment of God’s will for the church in this matter.”

Protest of 08 GA—From William Stepp, commissioner from the Presbytery of Tropical Florida: “We, the undersigned, protest and grieve the decision of the majority of our fellow commissioners at this General Assembly. This body has inflicted deep wounds on the Presbyterian Church (USA) that threaten to undo us. This General Assembly told our congregations and the world by its actions here that it rejects the Scripture’s teaching and our Reformed confessions’ affirmation that sexual relations outside the covenant of marriage of a man and a woman does not comport with Christian faith. The majority of the General Assembly has recommended the removal of the requirement for ordination that our pastors and elders commit themselves either to a lifelong union of a man and a woman or chastity in singleness. We, the undersigned, mourn and protest the affront to the Church’s Savior that suggests that God blesses forms of sexual behavior which he has clearly said are sinful. We stand against these decisions and vow to join with the many thousands of our fellow Presbyterians who will resist these actions and remain faithful to the Lord of the Church, in whom we put our trust and our hope.”

Protest of Report of the Church Orders and Ministry Committee—From Bruce Bush, commissioner from the Presbytery of Stockton; Paul Fandl, commissioner from the Presbytery of Stockton; Paul Granstrom, commissioner from the Presbytery of Nevada; Kenneth Hetzel, commissioner from the Presbytery of Lake Huron; Jay Hull, commissioner from the Presbytery of Nevada; and Terry Simm, commissioner from the Presbytery of Prospect Hill: “We the undersigned protest the action of the 218th General Assembly during the report of Committee 5, Church Orders and Ministry. Our conscience was violated by the procedure employed to change the PC USA practice and governance regarding ordination without the participation of the larger church through presbytery action.”

Report of the Stated Clerk Nomination Committee

The Stated Clerk Nomination Committee unanimously and enthusiastically recommends that the 218th General Assembly (2008) approve that the Reverend Gradye Parsons be elected as the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

Rationale

Gradye Parsons has many spiritual gifts, experiences, and skills to serve most effectively as the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly. These include a strong and abiding faith, a deep love for the church, demonstrated ability to use a vision of the church and a sense of mission in planning and decision making, leadership in new and creative thinking in serving the church of the future, and a breadth of experience at all levels of the church.

In our interview with Gradye, the committee was excited to hear about Gradye's vision of a church with a missional focus, where polity is a helpful means to that end, and where elders are trained and equipped to take a leadership role alongside ministers of the Word and Sacrament. Gradye was instrumental in bringing about the National Elders Conference in 2007.

His references (colleagues from several positions of leadership in the church) confirm a practical theologian with a solid knowledge of Reformed tradition and a leader with an ability to see the big picture and also offer concrete proposals, a collaborative working style, a pastor's heart, a calming presence, and a good sense of humor. He has built strong relationships with middle governing body leaders and people across the theological spectrum of the church.

Gradye Parsons has the breadth and depth of experience at all levels of the church to take on the many and varied responsibilities of the Stated Clerk. Gradye has served the church as parish pastor (fifteen years), executive presbyter and stated clerk (six years), and Associate Stated Clerk of the General Assembly (eight years). His responsibilities as Associate Stated Clerk have included General Assembly meeting planning and implementation, staff resource to several General Assembly committees, and general supervision of the management of the Office of the General Assembly.

Gradye Parsons had brought his creative leadership to challenges such as encouraging the church to explore new tools of discernment and other innovative ways of decision making, revitalizing elder leadership in the church, moving to biennial assemblies, and developing a review process for the six national agencies of the church.

The members of the committee joyfully and without reservation recommend to you the Reverend Gradye Parsons as our nominee for Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

Background

The Stated Clerk Nomination Committee was elected by the 217th General Assembly (2006). The nine members include four past General Assembly commissioners: Elders Tom Adger (Atlanta, Georgia) and Joan Fong (Fremont, California); ministers: Anna Case Winters (Chicago, Illinois) and Lyle Hillegas (Santa Barbara, California); three persons from the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly: Elder Steve Grace (Beulah, Michigan, moderator), and Ministers Helen Baily Cochrane (Bethlehem, Pennsylvania) and John Purcell (Dallas, Texas); a representative from General Assembly Council: Elder Pamila Deichmann (Winterset, Iowa), and a middle governing body staff representation: Minister Donnie Woods, executive presbyter and stated clerk of Charleston-Atlantic Presbytery (Charleston, South Carolina). The Reverend Carol McDonald, Synod of the Lincoln Trails co-executive, served as staff to the committee.

We were guided in our work by the section in the Standing Rules of the General Assembly related to the Election of the Stated Clerk (H2b(3) and (4)). Our nomination process was carried out in three segments: a churchwide application process (September–December 2007), a review and interview process (January–February 2008), and a selection and announcement process (March–May 2008).

We met face-to-face three times: May 21–23, 2007; January 19–21, 2008; and March 28–30, 2008, with other numerous telephone conference call meetings.

Application Process: Following our meeting in May 2007, the committee established a Web page containing the Stated Clerk job description, Stated Clerk responsibilities, and other background materials. We developed an application form that included biographical information and general background questions as well as six supplemental questions. The committee issued a churchwide invitation to encourage persons (elders and ministers of Word and Sacrament) to submit an application. This was published in a number of print and electronic media.

As specified in the Standing Rules, applications had to be submitted by December 23, 2007 (180 days before the start of the General Assembly). The committee received fourteen applications. The committee sought and received 3–5 letters of reference for each applicant.

Review and Interview Process: At its meeting in January 2008, the committee thoroughly reviewed all the applications and letters of reference and decided to conduct a telephone interview with each applicant. Interview format: After brief introductions and opening prayer, the committee moderator presented three questions and the interviewee was given fifteen minutes to respond to all three—a format which somewhat parallels the Q&A period for Stated Clerk candidates at General Assembly. All committee members were present for all the telephone interviews.

Selection and Announcement Process: To assist the committee in making a recommendation of a nominee to the General Assembly, the committee invited five applicants for a personal interview. Those interviews were held on March 28–29, 2008. All committee members participated in the interviews. Following the interviews, it was clear to all the members of the committee that the person God was calling to serve the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) as Stated Clerk of the General Assembly was the Reverend Gradye Parsons. After confirming Gradye's willingness to serve if elected, the committee announced its selection to the church through a press release on April 3, 2008.

The committee informed the other applicants that they had until May 7, 2008 (forty-five days before the start of the General Assembly) to inform the committee that they intend to stand against the committee's nominee for Stated Clerk. Three applicants submitted declarations of intent to the committee by May 7: the Reverend Dr. Winfield Jones (Pearland, Texas), the Reverend Edward Koster, (Detroit, Michigan), and the Reverend Dr. William Tarbell (Saluda, South Carolina).

The committee prepared and gave to each candidate five questions, the answers to which are included in the information packet for commissioners and advisory delegates. The packet of information (including biographical information and a personal statement prepared by each candidate) was published by the Office of the General Assembly on PC-biz and in print.

The committee will present its report and its nominee, the Reverend Gradye Parsons, on Sunday afternoon, June 22, during the 5–6 p.m. session of the meeting of the 218th General Assembly (2008).

Progress Report: The Mission Initiative Steering Committee, chaired by Joanna Adams and Dave Peterson, has met regularly since the last assembly. David York provided leadership until July 2007, when Robert Thompson became interim director of Funds Development and assumed direction of the campaign.

In November of 2006, Tom Gillespie was named honorary campaign chair for the conclusion of the campaign.

In December of 2006, the General Assembly Council Executive Committee, acting on behalf of the General Assembly Council, voted to extend the campaign by twelve months through the close of the 218th General Assembly (2008), so that the campaign cycle would coincide with the schedule for biennial assemblies.

An analysis of campaign status and campaign activities conducted in the last half of 2007 resulted in a reduction of more than $7,000,000 from the $27,560,000 in cash and pledges reported as of June 30, 2007. This adjustment was due primarily to unrealistic commitments by several presbyteries and presbytery campaigns that did not reach commitment objectives.

In October of 2007, the General Assembly Council Executive Committee, acting on behalf of the General Assembly Council, adopted revised parameters to guide the conclusion of the campaign:

01 ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON BUSINESS REFERRALS

Resolution

Where the following eight (8) requirements are met, as they may apply to a particular gift, the funds generated will be counted towards the $40 million funds development goal of the Mission Initiative: Joining Hearts and Hands (MIJHH) in support of international mission personnel and church growth:

1. The donor may be an individual member of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) (PCUSA) or an individual not a PCUSA member. The donor may be a PCUSA governing body, a PCUSA-related or supportive agency or corporation, or a non PCUSA affiliated foundation, corporation, or other entity.

2. The donor will have been informed about MIJHH prior to making the gift and the donor will express in writing an intent that the gift is for MIJHH.

3. The gift may be made in the form of immediately available monies, an irrevocable endowment established and dedicated for the benefit of a MIJHH eligible purpose, or a signed pledge commitment.

4. The gift must be fully paid by December 31, 2012, except in cases of endowments created in accordance with requirement number 3, herein that may extend in perpetuity.

5. The gift may or may not flow to the General Assembly Council (GAC). The gift may remain with other PCUSA governing bodies. The gift may flow to other PCUSA-related agencies or church partners. An acceptable irrevocable endowment may be made through the PCUSA Foundation or other institutions approved by the GAC as to purpose, security and suitability of the investment.

6. The gift must advance either PCUSA international mission personnel or PCUSA church growth as those terms are defined below:

A. International mission personnel means personnel whose primary work is outside the U.S. and advances the global witness and service of the PCUSA, whether or not the personnel are sent by the GAC. To further clarify the intent of this paragraph:

i. International mission personnel may be sent by all PCUSA governing bodies or other PCUSA-related agencies. If the personnel are being sent by other than the GAC's World Mission Program Area (World Mission), then the sending entity and World Mission must be in agreement that the proposed position is consistent with and supportive of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)'s work and witness in the place to which the personnel are being sent and such personnel must attend a World Mission orientation for mission personnel prior to deployment;

ii. At the GAC, international mission personnel must be new positions. That is a position that has not existed previously or has not been filled in the past 3-5 year term. A person with missionary experience is not excluded from candidacy;

iii. Donors may give for the purposes of PCUSA international mission personnel generally or for a particular PCUSA mission personnel position;

iv. International mission personnel is also understood to include projects related to a PCUSA mission personnel position, as described above; and,

v. The Agreement between the Mission Initiative: Joining Hearts and Hands and the Worldwide Ministries Division (predecessor to the current PCUSA World Mission area) on funding International Mission Personnel and dated April 27, 2005 is hereby incorporated by reference. In the event any of the provisions of that Agreement should conflict with those otherwise stated herein, the explicit provisions of this Resolution shall apply.

B. Church growth means providing funding for:

i. grants for new church development, especially in racial ethnic, Immigrant, and Gen-X new church developments;

ii. grants for church redevelopment for existing congregations;

iii. grants for racial ethnic and immigrant fellowships;

iv. grants for specialized ministries such as day care centers, youth outreach programs, and parish nurses;

v. grants and loans for "bricks-and mortar" projects, including property acquisition, building construction, building repair, and expansion; and,

vi. grants and loans for technology upgrades to assist worship;

7. In reporting gifts, the following financial reporting standards shall apply:

A. Campaign total will consist of:

i. Face value of outright gifts and pledges from individuals, foundations or other entities received and payable within the campaign period and post campaign accounting period and no later than December 31, 2012;

ii. Face value of outright gifts and pledges from congregations and middle governing bodies received and payable within the national campaign period and post campaign accounting period and no later than December 31, 2012. It is understood that said gifts and pledges may also be counted as commitments and contributions to local fund raising efforts.

B. To be reported, all pledges shall be in written form with signature by the individual donor, the donor's legal representative or trustee: All pledges from congregations require written verification by the clerk of session or the stated clerk of the presbytery. The date of recording for financial reporting purposes shall be the date of the vote by the session or the middle governing body, if verification is received within 5 working days past the end of the quarter.

C. Outright gifts shall be recorded when assets are transferred irrevocably to the PCUSA or the Presbyterian Foundation. Deferred gifts will be reported only when assets are transferred, or in the case where no assets are transferred, when the donor consummates a legally binding pledge agreement or other irrevocable document with the PCUSA or the Presbyterian Foundation.

8. If questions arise regarding whether or not the requirements set forth above have been met, a request for clarification will be presented in written form to the full Steering Committee of MIJHH for its review and validation, and the full committee is hereby authorized to determine whether the funds generated are within the campaign or not. Further, upon its review and validation, the Steering Committee of MIJHH shall immediately report such determination to the GAC or if the GAC is not in session, to the GAC Executive Committee.

Further, and recognizing that certain commitments and agreements have been made relative to that certain gift from Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church which does not fall within all the parameters set forth above and while still honoring the commitments and assurances made to previous MIJHH donors, a one-time exception will be made to treat the MAPC as counting toward the goals of MIJHH to the extent that: i. funds generated from its quasi endowment shall be used consistent with item 6.A.i., above; and, ii. gifts shall be recorded only in an amount equivalent either to a signed pledge to fund such position(s) or in the alternative, in the amount(s) actually received by MIJHH prior to December 31, 2012, as such gifts are received.

Campaign activity has focused on a limited number of potential prospects within high potential congregations. A Leadership Task Force of Steering Committee members has been actively engaged in the campaign, identifying and contacting these congregations. Many of these congregations will not take action before June 30, 2008, but they are being reintroduced to the good work of Presbyterian World Mission, and this has been one of the primary aims of the campaign: “Renewing the Church for Mission.”

Financial reports of campaign pledges and receipts are posted quarterly on the Web site www.pcusa.org/missioninitiative.

As directed by the 217th General Assembly (2006), the PPC will bear the expenses of the hymnal committee, all other development costs, publication, and marketing/promotion expenses, but will work in consultation and collaboration with PAM and OTW.

The PPC, PAM, and OTW worked in consultation to develop a job description to enlist applicants for the hymnal editor position. Eicher joined the staff of Presbyterian Publishing Corporation on January 1, 2008.

The PPC, PAM, and OTW are currently accepting and reviewing candidates for the hymnal committee. The hymnal committee will be chosen based on skills, experience, and in light of the directions of the 217th General Assembly (2006) to be a group of eight–twelve people with at least two members being under age twenty-five. Response: Among the survey results for the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC) review at the 217th General Assembly (2006), synods and presbyteries showed limited familiarity with the work of the committee. The primary role of ACWC is in relating to the General Assembly and General Assembly Council (GAC). The focus of the committee with presbyteries and synods is in how the General Assembly and GAC support, resource, and relate with regard to items and issues of women’s concerns. Regular monitoring and review of presbyteries and synods is not a primary responsibility.

Regarding its assembly work, ACWC primarily relies on available mechanisms to report the work of the General Assembly. The ACWC maintains a Website and prints its reports for publication and distribution. The ACWC, recognizing the need to improve its communications, has (1) created a subcommittee to direct the content of its Website and provide for regular updates, (2) commissioned a new logo, (3) written and designed a new brochure to introduce and interpret the committee’s mission, (4) evaluated the quality and quantity of communications, (5) gathered data, hosted consultations and open forums, and analyzed input to share with the whole committee, and (6) developed strategies of how to share materials with middle governing bodies.

D. Board of Pensions

1. 2006 Referral: Item 08-01. On Clarifying the Practice of Our Theology of Call for Those Serving General Assembly Entities—From the Presbytery of Santa Fe (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 36, 623–26).

The Board of Pensions has reviewed its policies and procedures and certifies that they fully comply with G-11.0410 and General Assembly policies.

2. 2006 Referral: Item 10-06. Report, Living into the Body of Christ: Towards Full Inclusion of People with Disabilities, Recommendation 2.j.(2). That the Board of Pensions Be Sensitive to, Reasonable in Its Requests, and Timely in Its Actions Regarding Disabilities—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 49, 50, 923).

Response: The 217th General Assembly (2006) approved Item 10-06, a paper from the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) called Living into the Body of Christ: Towards Full Inclusion of People with Disabilities. In this item, the Board of Pensions (BOP) was urged to ... continue to be

(a) sensitive to and thoughtful about the time demands that compliance with Benefits Plan requirements for documentation of medical status and medical needs place on families already strained by a disabling condition;

(b) reasonable in its requests for medical documentation and proactive in assisting families with compliance;

(c) timely in its actions and communications, so that Plan members and their families are well-informed about their participation status with the Board of Pensions;

(d) in direct communication with Plan members living with disabilities, so that the Board of Pensions may have a full appreciation of their particular circumstances and needs, leading to holistic care for the person and the family; and

(e) in partnership with employing organizations and national and local church leadership in coordinating the scope of the Medical Plan and the Assistance Program in order to offer appropriate care for all Plan members.

Since the 217th General Assembly (2006), in response to this referral and feedback from disabled members and the larger church community, the BOP made significant administrative changes to the disability plan.

Because of the disappointing performance of Aetna (formerly Broadspire Services, Inc.) in providing care management services to our disabled members, the BOP initiated a search for a more qualified and service centric vendor partner. In concert with the Lutheran Church (Missouri Synod), the BOP's benefits team evaluated several disability management firms and collectively determined to engage Liberty Mutual, effective April 1, 2008.

Liberty Mutual is a highly qualified vendor partner, sensitive to the unique needs of our disabled population and committed to supporting the BOP's part of the church's mission in caring for these most vulnerable members and their families. Together we have established contractual performance standards that address:

- Timely decisions;
- Sensitive and appropriate care management by licensed and trained clinicians;
- Vocational support and training where appropriate;
- Member advocacy with government-sponsored entitlement programs.

The quality of support expected in this partnership relationship with Liberty Mutual is designed to permit BOP staff to engage more fully in supportive relationships with disabled members, ensuring that they understand and have access to the full range of BOP sponsored programs. These programs include, but are not limited to, the Medical Plan, the Employee Assistance Program, behavioral health benefits, and various assistance programs.

Our objective for members suffering disabilities is exactly the same as for all plan members: to ensure that they have their unique needs met in an integrated and holistic way.

3. 2006 Referral: Item 12-12. Report of the Older Adult Task Force. Recommendation 1.a.(4), Encourage Ongoing Relationship Between PC(USA) Board of Pensions and Office of Older Adult Ministries—From the General Assembly Council (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 14–15, 1069).

Response: The 217th General Assembly (2006) approved Item 12-12, the Older Adult Ministries Task Force Report. In the report, the General Assembly “encourage[d] the ongoing relationship between the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Board of Pensions and the Office of Older Adult Ministries to ensure the long-term financial viability of the Association of Retired Ministers, Their Spouses or Survivors.”

The following response has been jointly approved by the General Assembly Council and the Board of Pensions:

Where there are active chapters of the Association of Retired Ministers, Their Spouses or Survivors (ARMSS), the Board of Pensions includes them in any retiree events sponsored by the Board of Pensions. Some retiree events at the presbytery level are jointly sponsored by the Board of Pensions and ARMSS. Additionally, the Board of Pensions is supportive of the ministries of ARMSS by providing a staff liaison to the organization. This relationship promotes good communications between the Board of Pensions and ARMSS.

4. 2006 Referral: Item 15-04. On Pension and Medical Insurance Needs of Small Churches—From the Presbytery of Long Island (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 10, 1320).

As approved by the 217th General Assembly (2006), Item 15-04 directed the Board of Pensions “to study the pension and medical insurance needs of particular churches served by part-time pastors such as tentmakers, and to consider new guidelines to allow flexibility for participation of churches served by these pastors.”

In the overture, the concerns of clergy leadership in particular churches were raised, focusing primarily on small churches whose limited resources make it impossible for them to call full-time pastors. Their leadership needs then must be met in a variety of ways; the overture cites yoked parishes, stated supplies, and tentmakers as examples. Given that some of these part-time pastors have other employment and perhaps access to other benefit programs, the overture suggests that greater flexibility is required in the structure of the Benefits Plan designed and administered by the Board of Pensions (BOP), if the needs of these pastors are to be met.

Tentmaker is not a tightly defined category. Taking its name from the biblical model of Paul, who made his tents to support himself and his ministry, generally the term tentmaker is used to describe those who serve a congregation less than full time and have other employment as their primary source of income. Some are employed in academic settings; others have lay, secular employment.

The church has long understood that ministry does not easily lend itself to traditional definitions of “hours of service.” In studying those tentmakers who are members of the BOP’s Benefits Plan, we note that some report working as few as ten hours per week, others more than thirty. While there is a large disparity in their formal number of hours worked, there is no doubt that a minister will respond to a call from a hospital whether they have already worked the number of hours for which they are paid or not. Nevertheless, the Benefits Plan funding and benefits design is premised on certain assumptions. The assumptions currently used to define levels of service are based on the prevailing industry and government standards.

During its study, the BOP considered these concerns and notes the following:

- Benefits Plan participation in the Traditional Program (Pension, Medical and Death and Disability plan membership, with dues based on 31.5 percent of effective salary) is mandated by the Book of Order (G-14.0534) only for those ministers of the Word and Sacrament serving as pastors in called and installed positions. As noted in the overture, a church can be served in many different ways. For some churches, choosing to be served by someone other than a called and installed pastor may solve the benefit cost problem in that participation in the Traditional Benefits Plan is not required.
- Through the BOP’s Affiliated Benefits Program (ABP), a minister of the Word and Sacrament not serving in a called position, a commissioned lay pastor or another church worker may be eligible for enrollment in the Medical Plan, with or without Death and Disability Plan enrollment, but excluded from the defined benefit Pension Plan. In this circumstance, retirement income benefits could be funded through the Retirement Savings Plan, a 403(b)(9) defined contribution program, which allows contributions from employing organizations, employees, or both. The ABP option, approved by the 212th General Assembly (2000) and available since 2001, was specifically designed to provide the flexibility in plan selection that the overture seeks.
- Because all components of the Benefits Plan, including the ABP, are designed to conform with legal standards for employment-based coverage, there needs to be a permanent employment relationship between each member and his or her employing organization for participation. The twenty hour per week eligibility requirement is a government and industry standard used to establish the existence of such a permanent relationship for any optional coverage. The Book of Order (G-14.0534) mandates that those serving in called and installed pastoral positions be enrolled in the Traditional Benefits Plan.

There currently exists significant flexibility in how to structure pastoral service arrangements to provide congregations with the options they need. In addition to the existing structural flexibility, the BOP also notes that it continues to study Plan design and eligibility issues in the context of the church community, with the 2008 Business Plan including “a forward-looking review of the Medical Plan, its membership, finances, funding and underlying principles in the context of emerging developments in healthcare plan design, legal changes and denominational resources” (Board of Pensions 2008 Business and Financial Plans, p. 5).

In other conversations with an advocate of the original overture, a number of specific requests for changes to present Benefits Plan provisions were outlined and the BOP studied and considered each of these in turn, as described below.

Overture advocate’s request: Lower the fifty percent rule to forty percent as regards pensions with the understanding that the full payment as presently in place regarding medical insurance be continued for those engaged at the new forty percent level.

BOP response: The “fifty percent rule” refers to the Benefits Plan eligibility requirement of twenty hours per week (or one thousand hours per year) for benefit coverage. As noted above, this is the prevailing government and industry standard for employer-based coverage requirements. The BOP has determined this to be a reasonable and uniform measure of a permanent employment relationship that qualifies for employment-based coverage and has based all of its funding and benefits formulas on this standard. The BOP realizes that church employers and presbyteries may have adopted other standards in connection with their minimum terms of call. The BOP must have a single standard to use as an assumption for its funding and benefit design. Any significant departure from the twenty-hour assumption could adversely impact the median salary benchmarks and result in a decrease in benefits for other members or an increase in dues percentages for the larger community.

The twenty-hour requirement is reasonable because the BOP assumes in most cases employment of less than twenty hours represents neither an individual’s primary employment relationship, nor the primary source of support for a person or household. It has long been the BOP’s position that medical coverage and other benefits should flow from an individual or household’s primary employment relationship.

Overture advocate’s request: Separate pension and medical insurance for tentmaker clergy so that they may be able to choose between medical plans of their other employment or of their spouses’ employment and that of the Board of Pensions.

BOP response: For those part-time clergy for whom ministry is the primary employment relationship, the Affiliated Benefits Program is available as described in the second bulleted point above.

However, to separate the components of the Traditional Benefits Plan would be inconsistent with the community nature of its design and funding. In the design of the Traditional Benefits Plan, individuals do not “buy coverage.” Rather, the community nature of the Plan stretches across all its benefit components with dues paid on each participating position for the good of the whole, again across all programs. In consultation with the larger church, the directors of the BOP have reviewed these core principles a number of times and, although there are drawbacks to them, consistently determined that they continue to provide the best infrastructure for the Plan and its members as a whole. Any change to allow members to retain pension coverage while declining medical benefits would have to apply to all and could not be limited to a subset of members. A member who is part of a dual-income family or retired military, for example, might prefer to take advantage of other medical coverage if that option existed.

If a particular church does not want to participate in the community of the Traditional Benefits Plan, it has the option to seek pastoral service in ways other than a called and installed pastor. Then, in most instances, there is no obligation to enroll those who serve the particular church in the Benefits Plan. What is not offered is the opportunity to enroll an individual member for only those portions of the Traditional Benefits Plan that the individual believes will provide direct personal benefit.

Overture advocate’s request: Allow tent maker clergy to participate in the defined contributions plan instead of the defined benefits plan of the Board of Pension when they are not eligible for inclusion in the present pension plan.

BOP response: This option is already available to those employed for twenty or more hours per week. The defined contribution plan (called the Retirement Savings Plan) is an employment-based program and the BOP uses the government and industry standard of twenty hours per week as the determinant of a permanent employment relationship.

2006 Referral. Item 06-01. Rec. 4. Direct the COGA, and Urge Those Who Plan and Moderate Meetings of other Governing Bodies, to Explore the Use of Alternate Forms of Discernment (Minutes, 2006, Part I, p. 514).

Response: The Office of the General Assembly (OGA) has partnered with the Peacemaking Program to produce a booklet on discernment for use by congregations and middle governing bodies. In addition, discernment practices have been taught at the OGA’s Fall Polity Conference, the Moderators’ Conference, and in several presbyteries.

1. 2004 Referral: Item 07-06. Report of the Special Offerings Review Task Force. Recommendation 6. That the General Assembly Council Develop and Propose a Conceptual Framework for a New Mission Funding Strategy for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)—From the Special Offerings Review Task Force (Minutes, 2004, Part I, pp. 50, 494).

Response: This referral is answered by Item 08-12, Funding Christ’s Mission Throughout the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

2. 2004 Referral: Item 07-08. Report, Creating a Climate for Change in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), Recommendation 3.d. That PC(USA) Corporate Agencies Adopt for Utilization and Implementation, the Tools of Cultural Proficiency, Proceeding in Light of and According to the Confessional and Biblical Witness of the PC(USA)—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns Task Force to Examine GA Entities (Minutes, 2004, Part I, pp. 51, 541).

Response: The Office for Cultural Proficiency is an available resource for PC(USA) corporate agencies in providing a holistic approach to climate change and development through the utilization and implementation of the tools of cultural proficiency. This office is poised to work collaboratively with agencies in its mission to transform the organizational culture to one that is an open, inclusive, compassionate, and healthy church corporation.

3. 2006 Referral: Item 10-06. Report, Living into the Body of Christ: Towards Full Inclusion of People with Disabilities, Recommendation 2.c.(2). That the General Assembly Council Facilitate, with the Middle Governing Bodies, a Strategy to Invite and Encourage People Living with Disabilities to Seek Leadership and Employment Positions Throughout the Church—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 49, 50, 921).

Response: The General Assembly Council (GAC) supports presbytery committees on preparation for ministry (CPM) and committees on ministry. In all aspects of that work, the Office of Vocation encourages committees and search committees to consider all persons for leadership. The Office of Vocation works to educate the church about the gifts and calling of all baptized Christians. Through resources and training events, presbytery CPM's are urged to provide reasonable accommodations for persons under care who have disabilities, especially in the ordination exam process. In order to participate in the national call system, search committees are required to affirm intention to follow the commitment to diversity as articulated at G-4.0403. Committees on ministry are asked if they have counseled with the pastor nominating committee regarding equal opportunity.

4. 2006 Referral: Item 12-12. Report, Older Adult Ministries Task Force, Recommendation 2.e. That an Appropriate Connecting Point (or Points) Be Clearly Identified Within the Mission Work Plan Structure That Will Relate to the Needs and Issues of the Older Adult Ministry Networks, and That These Connecting Points Be Identified Within the Existing G.A.C. Staff—From the General Assembly Council (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 14–15, 1070).

Response: See coordinated response to the recommendations from 2006 Referral, Item 12-12, F. General Assembly Council Final Responses to Referrals, Referral 6, below.

5. 2006 Referral: Item 11-01 On Rescinding and Modifying Certain Actions of the 216th General Assembly (2004) Regarding the Israeli-Palestinian Conflict, Recommendation 5. Recognizing That the Situation on the Ground in the Israel-Palestine Area Is Rapidly Changing, the General Assembly Council (GAC) Is Directed to Carefully Monitor Ongoing Developments of the Situation in the Middle East and to Examine the Policies of the PC(USA) Related to the Middle East, in Order to Make a Comprehensive Report to the 218th General Assembly (2008). (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp 44, 943–48)

In consideration of the above, the General Assembly Council is monitoring developments of the situation by:

- a. Remaining in communications with church partners in Israel/Palestine and the wider Middle East region;
- b. Hearing reports from various program offices at GAC meetings regarding the situation on the ground and the church's ongoing engagement with the Middle East and receiving accounts of progress on the implementation of actions of earlier assemblies;
- c. Praying for and celebrating the witness of the Christians of the Middle East in the midst of situations of hardship, conflict, and hope;
- d. Capitalizing on the commitment and energy of the GAC-related Israel/Palestine Mission Network that has been a vital resource of information, education, partnership, and advocacy for the church, as well as other denominational and ecumenical/interfaith organizations that work tirelessly for peace in the Middle East (e.g., Churches for Middle East Peace, the National Inter-religious Leadership Initiative for Peace in the Middle East, and the Presbyterian Peace Fellowship,);
- e. Participating in dialogue and conversations with Jewish and Muslim leadership in the United States and in Israel/Palestine;
- f. Participating in a delegation that visited Israel/Palestine in January 2007, represented by the GAC chair and Executive Director, along with the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly, the director of the Peace & Justice program area, and the coordinator of the Office for the Middle East; and in other ways, individually and collectively.

Recognizing that the situation on the ground in Israel-Palestine is rapidly changing, the 217th General Assembly (2006) directed the General Assembly Council (GAC) to “carefully monitor ongoing developments of the situation in the Middle East and to examine the policies of the PC(USA) related to the Middle East, in order to make a comprehensive report to the 218th General Assembly (2008).” A preliminary response to that referral was made in the February 2008 GAC meeting, citing several ways the GAC has been monitoring the situation. The response also promised the submission of a more comprehensive report with recommendation(s) to the April 23–25 meeting of the GAC, (thereby meeting the forty-five-day deadline of materials to be forwarded to the 218th General Assembly (2008)). The following paragraphs summarize a review of PC(USA) policy in light of developments on the ground<sup>1</sup> and the PC(USA)'s concern for the dwindling presence of Christians in Israel/Palestine and other parts of the region. Mentioned as well are signs of hope, the meaning of which remains ambiguous for both the church here and in the Middle East.

Policy Summary

Presbyterian involvement and investment in the region dates back to the early 19th century. Educational institutions established by the PC(USA) in Lebanon and Egypt continue to this day. The PC(USA) also supports educational institutions in Israel/Palestine and elsewhere in the Middle East. The PC(USA) is present through faithful and enduring mission and ecumenical relationships.

The Middle East contains not only ancient cultures and active warfare, but also intensified religio-political ideologies and increasingly pivotal oil supplies. In the 1950s and 60s, the church's mission policies affirmed post-colonial development, a process then affected by the struggle between Cold War power blocs. In the 1970s and 80s, democracy, religious freedom, and human rights became continuing concerns, this last especially visible in annual General Assembly human rights updates. More recently, immigration from and within the Middle East has made its countries more visible to U.S. eyes; broad currents in Islamic thought also respond to globalization and less-welcomed elements of modernity. A resolution on the Iraq war also submitted to the 218th General Assembly (2008) looks at particular developments in that country, but can only suggest the various dimensions of struggle among Sunni and Shi'a Muslims, Arabs and non-Arabs, and religious and secular nationalist elements that exist across the region.

With regard to Israel/Palestine, since 1948 the church, through a pattern of regular General Assembly statements, has expressed concern for the fate of refugees displaced by the formation of the State of Israel, for the security of Israeli citizens, and for the establishment of peace and security with justice in the region. In 1974, the church completed a major policy statement examining the changed realities of West Bank occupation after the 1967 and 1973 wars. In 1997, an extensive Resolution on the Middle East explored the 1980 Camp David peace agreement between Egypt and Israel, the first Intifada, the Madrid Conference in 1991, the 1993 Israeli-Palestinian Declaration of Principles, and the Oslo Accords. Resolutions since 1997 have focused on human rights, the continued expansion of settlements (now accommodating more than 400,000 settlers), the cessation of the peace process from September 2001 to November 2007, and the ongoing violence perpetrated by various Palestinian organizations as well as the government of Israel.

The 216th and 217th General Assemblies (2004) and (2006) expressed more intense concern for the dwindling Christian population in the Holy Land. In response to the Second Intifada and the beginning of construction of the "wall" or "separation barrier," the 216th General Assembly (2004) called for initiating "a process of selective, phased divestment." In 2006, the assembly urged that financial investments of the PC(USA) as they pertain to Israel, Gaza, East Jerusalem, and the West Bank, be invested only in peaceful pursuits. The assembly also affirmed the customary corporate engagement process of MRTI to be the proper vehicle for achieving that goal.

The Situation on the Ground

During the past two years, the news media, as well as organizations that monitor the situation on the ground, have reported the continued deterioration of relations between Israel and the Palestinians, despite initiatives of neighboring states (such as Saudi Arabia and Egypt) and of the United States (e.g., the Annapolis Conference of November 2007, and President Bush's December 2007 visit to Israel and the Occupied Palestinian Territories). Violence has increased. There are more suicide bombings and rockets hurled by Palestinian groups into southern Israel. Israeli armed forces continue their attacks inside Gaza, killing both militants and unarmed civilians including children and women. Humanitarian aid and relief organizations have reported that living conditions for the 1.5 million persons living in Gaza are the worst in 40 years.<sup>2</sup> In the West Bank and East Jerusalem, the government of Israel continues to implement the policies of Palestinian home demolitions, the expansion of Israeli settlements, and the restriction of movement of Palestinians. Whether through the roadblocks and checkpoints, the "Israeli-only" routes, the continuing construction of the Separation Barrier on confiscated land, or imprisonment and administrative detention, the situation on the ground is continually changing, mostly for the worse.<sup>3</sup> News reports, however, still indicate that the majority of Israelis and the majority of Palestinians hunger for a peaceful settlement of the conflict. Many are still crying "peace, peace, when there is no peace" (Jer. 6:14 NRSV).

Signs of Hope?

In the broader Middle East region overall, there are also some positive changes. Cells of suicide bombers are small in comparison with the number of reformers demanding change through attempted legislative petitions and mass protest. One quarter of Lebanon's population took to the streets in 2005, peacefully insisting that Syria withdraw its troops and Syria did, after years of de facto occupation. Egyptians who have been living under unrelenting martial law since Sadat's assassination are also protesting peacefully, creating organizations to monitor government corruption and excess. International access to information has increased and this helps greatly. Due to new technologies, people are able to exchange ideas more. In Israel/Palestine itself, more Palestinians are developing nonviolent spiritual and cultural programs and projects to resist the occupation without being destroyed themselves by rage or resentment. When abuse occurs, it is more widely known.

While the transition from autocratic government to more open processes may be long, difficult and unpredictable, we must rejoice in the change that is happening.

What this change means for the church, as well as other aspects of diverse Middle Eastern cultures, remains unclear.

Messages from Partners

On the eve of the Annapolis conference last November, following a meeting of Christian, Jewish, and Muslim leaders in Jerusalem, where a common commitment was made to work together toward reconciliation and peace, one of our partner churches in the Holy Land sent a message expressing their hope to the political leaders gathered in Maryland. In part it said,

It is our responsibility to find the right way to live together in peace rather than to fight and to kill. We believers from three religions have been placed in this land—Jews, Christians and Muslims—among one another. Palestinians yearn for the end to occupation and for what they see as their inalienable rights. Israelis long for the day when they can live in personal and national security. Together we must find ways of reaching these goals ... If we, faith leaders steeped in the religious sensitivities of the land, can take an unprecedented move toward reconciliation, then you can, too. We urge the Americans, the European countries, the Quartet and Arab countries to seize the momentum ...<sup>4</sup>

In another message<sup>5</sup> from the Latin Rite (Catholic) Patriarch of Jerusalem, His Beatitude Michel Sabbah reminded the world of the Holy Land's "universal vocation"—for Jews, Christians, Muslims, and Druze. For Christians, who are "few in number," the reality of the land is "linked to the mystery of Jesus." He then called upon them to love God in every human person, "for it is God whom we love in the friend or the enemy. ..."

Jewish, Christian, and Muslim leaders, members of the Council of Religious Institutions of the Holy Land, were in Washington in early November 2007 to meet with U.S. lawmakers and their American co-religionists to express both their yearning and their shared commitment to work for peace. In a public statement<sup>6</sup> the clerics pledged to "find the right way to live together in peace" and promised cooperation related to the Holy Sites that "respects their integrity and independence and avoids any act of desecration, aggression or harm." On the issue of Jerusalem the leaders said they will "work to secure open access to the Old City for all communities, and seek a common vision for this city which all of us regard as holy."

The consistent message of our Christian, ecumenical, and interfaith partners is a message of reconciliation, hope, peace, and love, even though violence, terror, enmity, demonization, fear, suspicion, oppression, and injustice prevail.

The cry for solidarity, support, advocacy, and—above all—prayer resounds from our partner churches.

9. 2006 Referral: Item 11-27. On Appointing a Special Committee to Explore the Radical Reduction of the Impact of Malaria in Sub-Saharan Africa—From the Presbytery of Northern New York (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 43, 45, 1000–1002).

Response: Item 11-27 mandates an initiative (with no specified activities) aimed at reducing the toll of malaria in sub-Saharan Africa. This is to be developed by a special committee appointed by the Moderator, to “create a framework for collaboration” by PC(USA) partners and secular organizations. The resolution calls for the creation of an Extra Commitment Opportunity Account to accept donations designated for the expenses of the special committee.

The core mandate of the resolution, the development of “an international plan of action” by a special committee, has not progressed due to the lack of minimum required funding. As of November 30, 2007, $8,062.79 had been donated to the designated account for this resolution. A minimum of $16,000 in additional funding must be in ECO 053503, and substantial future funding committed before this effort can get off the ground.

Implementation of the resolution began with the establishment of ECO Account 053503 and with a meeting of staff of the GAC International Health Ministries office (Bob Ellis and Gail Bingham), the primary author of Item 11-27 (the Reverend Fred Garry, First Presbyterian Church, Watertown, N.Y.), and representatives of the sponsor of Item 11-27, the Presbytery of Northern New York and its Malawi Partnership Committee. At that meeting it was agreed that a minimum of $24,000 was necessary to begin the work of the special committee. A list was created at that meeting of potential special committee candidates, based on their knowledge, experience, and interest related to the issue of malaria prevention.

To build awareness of and financial support for the resolution, International Health Ministries promoted it on the PC(USA) Website, in issues of the IHM quarterly newsletter, in presentations before PC(USA) mission networks, and through IHM-related mission personnel. The IHM contacted persons on the list of potential special committee members, to inform them of the resolution and determine their willingness to be considered by the Moderator for appointment. The manager of General Assembly Nominations and Moderatorial Staff Services, Valerie Small, advised IHM that the list of candidates could not be submitted to the Moderator, nor could other suitable candidates be identified for her consideration until at least $24,000 was in ECO 053503.

In April 2007, Bob Ellis, Gail Bingham, and Valerie Small held a conference call with Moderator Joan Gray to discuss the status of the resolution. In May 2007, Vice Moderator Bob Wilson conferred with Gail Bingham on the resolution prior to a visit by Bob to the Presbytery of Northern New York.

In July 2007, a congregation in California donated $5,000 to E053503. There have been no contributions to the account since then. Given that $24,000 is considered “start-up funds” and the total financial implication reported to the General Assembly for this resolution was $75,000, it appears unlikely that substantial progress on implementation will be reported to the 218th General Assembly (2008).

10. 2002 Referral: Item 11-05. Commissioners’ Resolution 02-10. On Affirming the Church Growth Strategy Report (Minutes, 2002, Part I, pp. 25, 565–66).

Response: The Vision for Church Growth for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and the Racial Ethnic/Immigrant Evangelism and Church Growth Strategy have been foundational works in the reorganization of the General Assembly Council’s Evangelism and Church Growth ministry area.

The first ever General Assembly Council National Presbyterian Evangelism Conference was held in Nashville, Tennessee, in the fall of 2007, with more than 500 Presbyterians attending. There were sixty workshops on a myriad of subjects and engaging worship through out the conference.

Training for new church development (NCD) pastors, coaches, and presbytery staff has increased to an all-time high. Currently there are fifty NCD coaches that are trained and working in the denomination with another thirty-five NCD projects waiting for a coach.

Multicultural churches are growing in the denomination and the Evangelism and Church Growth ministry area was able to add field staff in 2007 to accompany churches on their transition to becoming a multicultural church.

Mission Program Grants office funded 205 new and ongoing projects across 101 presbyteries in 16 synods being supported by General Assembly Council Mission Program Grants. Projects funded include new church developments and helping to transform existing congregations.

Response: The General Assembly Council's Evangelism and Church Growth ministry area through the Small Church and Community ministries office has a plan that works in partnership with other GAC ministries like Racial Ethnic Congregational Enhancement offices, the Self-Development of People program, the Hunger program, the Presbyterian Peacemaking Program, and the Presbyterian Health Education and Welfare Association to resource and fund ministries that reach out and tell the Good News of Jesus Christ to racial ethnic persons and persons with limited economic resources.

12. 2006 Referral: Item 12-08. On Combating the Decline in Members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)—From the Presbytery of Eastern Virginia (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 14–15, 1064–66).

Response: The restructure of the General Assembly Council focused the work of an entire ministry area on evangelism and church growth. The GAC also made combating the decline of members a priority in the councils mission work plan for 2007–2008.

In 2007, the GAC completed a research survey looking at the factors that were consistent in the fastest growing congregations in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). In addition, the Evangelism and Church Growth area also published and distributed a resource named the Vital Signs of Urban Congregations, a book that promoted models of ministry, which highlight communities of faith that are actively growing in discipleship and numbers.

Response: The Evangelism and Church Growth ministry area of the General Assembly Council called an associate for Collegiate Ministries in August of 2007. The Colligate Ministries office, Association of Presbyterian Colleges and Universities, and the Committee on Theological Education have communicated with colleges, universities, and presbyterian seminaries on the issues of Christian Zionism and Eschatological theology. If there is evidence of value in further conversations, those three entities will continue to collaborate in educating Presbyterian students on these matters.

Response: The study guide is posted on www.pcusa.org/reparations/.

18. 2004 Referral: Item 10-03. Report of the Task Force to Study Reparations, Recommendation 11. That the United Nations Office Monitor and Support International Efforts Related to Reparations, Renewal, and Reconciliation, and Report Their Efforts to the 217th General Assembly (2006)—From the General Assembly Council Task Force to Study Reparations (Minutes, 2004, Part I, pp. 57, 705).

Response: The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), through the Presbyterian United Nations Office, has monitored and supported international efforts related to reparations, renewal, and reconciliation through the following UN processes:

a. 19–20 November 2007. A two-day panel meeting was held in Freetown, Sierra Leone, under the auspices of the United Nations and the country's main human rights body as part of efforts to implement the findings of Sierra Leone's Truth and Reconciliation Commission (TRC). The commission had made a number of recommendations to deal with past abuses and violations and foster reconciliation, which included the payment of reparations by the government to amputees and other wounded victims, those who were sexually violated, and the widows and children who suffered deprivation, displacement, or worse between 1991 and 2002. The panel recommended meeting victims' needs in health, housing, pensions, education, skills training and micro-credit, community reparations, and symbolic reparations. The reparations program was identified as a priority area for assistance for the UN Peace Building Fund, which provides funding to help address the root causes of conflict and facilitate the consolidation of peace.

b. 6 May–20 June 2007. The UN Committee Against Torture considered reports submitted by States Parties under Article 19 of the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment. In particular, the government of Bosnia and Herzegovina committed to establish a comprehensive reparation program for victims of harsh violations of human rights that would address restitution, compensation, satisfaction, and rehabilitation.

c. 27 July 2006. The United Nations Compensation Commission, which settles the damage claims of those who suffered losses due to Iraq's 1990 invasion of Kuwait, announced the disbursement of about $396.5 million, bringing the total paid out to date to nearly $21 billion. With this payment, the commission said all claims of individuals had been paid in full for death or personal injury. Forty-nine other claims, including environmental claims, remain to be paid.

d. 27 January 2006. At its forty-first session, the UN Committee on the Rights of the Child welcomed the report of the Truth and Reconciliation Commission (CVR) presented to the President of the Republic of Peru in August 2003, as well as the fact that among its recommendations there was the establishment of an Integral Plan of Reparations for the victims of violence. However, it remained concerned that the recommendations had been only partly implemented and that, so far, only few victims have been granted reparations.

e. November 10, 2005. Sixtieth UN General Assembly, Third Committee, 38th & 39th Meetings. Principles on the Right to Reparations for Victims of Gross Human Rights Violations were approved. The principles were negotiated over a fifteen-year period. The principles will help victims and their representatives, as well as states design and implement public policies on reparations.

19. 2006 Referral: Item 08-06. On Funding the Fight Against HIV/AIDS and Diseases of Poverty—From the Presbytery of Ohio Valley (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 36–37, 632–34).

Response: The Peacemaking Offering promotional material encouraged congregations, presbyteries, and synods to use all or part of their share of the offering to go for work with AIDS-related ministries. A fact sheet on AIDS and Peacemaking was included in the offering packet. The resource "25 Ways your congregation can enhance its commitment to peacemaking using its 25 percent of the peacemaking offering" included two ideas for AIDS-related ministries. Connections between peacemaking, the Peacemaking Offering, and the response to HIV/AIDS pandemic were made through a travel/study seminar to South Africa and Malawi in partnership with the Office on International AIDS Ministries and the Presbyterian AIDS Network. Information on HIV/AIDS regularly appeared in Peacemaking Program publications.

20. 2006 Referral: Item 09-09. Report: Economic Security for Older Adults, Recommendation 13. Call on the Presbyterian Washington Office to Keep Abreast of Pending Legislation Affecting Social Security, Medicare, Medicaid, and Health Insurance, and to Alert Elected Officials and Church Members About These Policies and Recommendations—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 50, 51, 815).

Response: The Washington Office has been following the issues of Social Security, Medicare, Medicaid, and other social insurance programs. Fortunately, the movement to privatize Social Security has lost momentum for the time being, but during the short time that the issue was on the Congressional agenda, the Washington Office worked with other members of the faith community to produce updated Principles on Social Security, sent action alerts when appropriate, and wrote articles alerting Presbyterians to the situation in Washington. The Washington Office accessed some resources outside the faith community including through its relationships with the AARP, the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities, and the National Committee to Preserve Medicare and Social Security. A Washington Office staff person presented on these issues at the Presbyterian Association of Homes and Services for the Aging's spring conference in 2006. Additionally, in the past, the PC(USA) has been represented at the National Coalition on Aging, a delegate council of the National Council on Aging.

On issues of Medicare, Medicaid, and other social safety-net programs for older adults, the Washington Office has been active among the ecumenical and interfaith community working on these issues. The Washington Office has further participated with the Families USA Medicaid Coalition, which provides information and suggests legislative strategy on these issues. The Washington Office continues to follow legislation concerning regulatory changes and funding levels for Medicaid, Medicare, and Medicare Part D, the prescription drug benefit.

Also with respect to the safety net for older adults, the Washington Office has been active in calling for reform of the 2007 Farm Bill, which includes funding for nutrition programs, such as the Emergency Food Assistance Program (TEFAP), that target poor, aging beneficiaries with food assistance. The Washington Office has devoted considerable time and resource to advocating for preservation, protection, and expansion of Medicare, Medicaid, TEFAP, and other programs, also producing action alerts to Presbyterians and presenting on these issues at local Presbyterian churches, where invited.

21. 2006 Referral: Item 09-10. Report: Resolution on Just Globalization: Justice, Ownership, and Accountability, Recommendation D.1. in Order to Support Fair Exchange in International Trade, Call Upon the United States and Other Developed Country Governments to Abandon the Use of Tariffs and Other Trade Barriers that Favor the Exports of Advanced Economies and Discriminate Against Those of Poor Countries and to Participate in Systematic Debt Relief for Poorer Nations—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 50, 51, 827).

Response: The Washington Office, in coalition with other faith-based groups and denominations in the Interfaith Working Group on Trade and Investment (IWGTI), advocated for a new framework for negotiating trade deals that would lead to just trade agreements. The office published articles on the issue of trade and trade agreements calling for opposition to the U.S. Peru Free Trade Agreement, the U.S. Colombia Free Trade Agreement, the U.S. Korea Free Trade Agreement, and the U.S. Panama Free Trade Agreement. Action alerts were sent out repeatedly throughout the year calling for a change in trade policy that would not favor the developed states over the poor. In addition, in coalition with the IWGTI, the Washington Office met with congressional staff and leadership advocating for just trade. The IWGTI issue repeated calls to members of congress through letters and meetings to oppose unjust trade deals. The Washington Office has continued to monitor the free trade agreements.

The Washington Office also worked in coalition with our partners in Jubilee USA and the One Campaign to advocate for the Jubilee Act (S2166 and HR2634). The Jubilee Act for Responsible Lending and Expanded Debt Cancellation will expand eligibility for 100 percent debt cancellation without harmful economic conditions to 67 impoverished countries in the Global South. The Washington Office cosponsored a prayer breakfast in the House of Representatives, signed on to letters in support of the legislation, and sent out action alerts to our grassroots calling for them to contact their members of congress in support of the act.

In addition, the Washington Office has focused considerable time, resource, and energy on reform of the 2007 Farm Bill, calling for a change in policy to reduce the trade-distorting effects of U.S. farm subsidies in the global marketplace and to increase and improve U.S. international food aid. The Washington Office worked hand-in-hand with the Presbyterian Hunger Program on this issue. During 2007, the Washington Office sent six action alerts on reform of the farm bill, wrote newsletter articles, presented the issue at local churches, when invited, and at the Presbyterians for Restoring Creation conference in October 2007.

In addition, the Washington Office was an active member in the Religious Working Group on the Farm Bill, a coalition of organizations including many other Christian denominations, Bread for the World, Church World Service, the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops, and Oxfam. The Washington Office closely coordinated its work on farm bill reform with the United Church of the Christ, the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America, the Episcopal Church and the United Methodist Church General Board of Church and Society (the five denominations–5D). This 5D coordinating committee received a grant from Oxfam and hired a consultant to facilitate and coordinate the 5D farm bill work.

22. 2006 Referral: Item 09-10. Report: Resolution on Just Globalization: Justice, Ownership, and Accountability, Recommendation E.1. Urge the U.S. Administration and Congress to Commit to Full Support of the Call for Developed Countries to Provide Annually Seven-Tenths of 1 Percent of Gross Domestic Product in Economic Assistance to Less Developed Countries, and To Appropriate Annually Such Funds Beginning by Fiscal Year 2008, Without Requiring That These Funds

Be Used to Purchase U.S. Products—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 50, 51, 827).

Response: The Washington Office has advocated with congress and the administration urging the U.S. government to support a significant increase in development assistance and provide 7 percent of GDP in assistance to less developed countries. In addition, the Washington office has advocated in coalition with the One Campaign and Bread for the World for significant increases in development assistance through advocacy in support of the Global Child Survival Act (H.R.2266/S.1418), which would increase U.S. investment in child survival and maternal health programs.

In addition, the Washington Office has, in coalition with the One Campaign, advocated in support of the Education for All Act (HR 2092/S 1259), which would amend the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 to provide assistance for developing countries to promote quality basic education and to establish the achievement of universal basic education in all developing countries as an objective of United States foreign assistance policy, and for other purposes.

23. 2006 Referral: Item 09-15. On Advocacy and Welcome for All Immigrants—From the Presbytery of New York City. Recommendation 8. Advocate General Assembly Policies on Advocacy and Welcome for Immigrants Through the Washington Office of the PC (USA) and the Office of the Stated Clerk, Including Amicus Curiae Briefs, if Necessary (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 50, 51, 881).

Response: The Washington Office has over the past two years advocated for a just immigration policy based on the principles set out in Item 9-15. In coalition with the Latin American Working Group and the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, the Washington Office advocated to congress and the administration through visits, letters, and grassroots education for a more just immigration policy. Several articles on the issue were published in the Washington Report to Presbyterians and action alerts on specific immigration bills were sent out in the Witness in Washington Weekly. An intern was hired for the summer of 2007 to specifically work on this issue. Unfortunately, a just immigration policy has yet to be passed.

24. 2006 Referral: Item 09-15. On Advocacy and Welcome for All Immigrants—From the Presbytery of New York City, Recommendation 11. Express Our Grave Concern About the Negative Impact of the Growing Effort to Make the Border More Secure Through Building Walls Designed to Move Migrant Patterns Further into the More Dangerous Part of the Borderlands, by Increasing the Number of Federal Agents, and by Deploying Armed National Guard to the Already Volatile Region (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 50, 51, 881).

Response: The Washington Office, on its own as well as in coalition with the Border Working Group, advocated to congress and the administration against the militarization of the U.S.-Mexico border by the building of the wall and the deploying of armed national guardsmen to the region. The Washington Office participated in visits to members of congress on the issue in addition to sending letters to congress and the administration and activating grassroots through action alerts and educational materials. The educational materials focused on the dangers posed to migrants by the militarization of the border.

25. 2006 Referral: Item 09-23. Commissioners' Resolution. On Abandoning Mountaintop Removal of Coal (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 50, 52, 898-99).

Response: Letters related to the General Assembly action were sent to major coal companies, and select elected officials in states impacted by the mountaintop removal method of mining. In addition, a shareholder resolution with Arch Coal on issues related to coal production was co-filed by the Committee on Mission Responsibility Through Investment (MRTI) with stock owned by the Board of Pensions.

26. 2006 Referral: Item 10-06. Report: Living into the Body of Christ: Towards Full Inclusion of People with Disabilities, Recommendation 2.c.(9). That the General Assembly Council Direct the Social Welfare Organizations Office of the National Ministries Division to Continue to Support Existing Programs and Congregations Seeking to Cultivate Inclusive Ministries with People Living with Disabilities—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 49, 50, 922).

Response: The Social Welfare Organizations, of Peace and Justice Ministry, continues to support the work of Presbyterians for Disability (PDC) and the PC(USA) Disability Consultants although funds for these programs have been seriously cut. To maintain these ministries, additional budget needs to be supported.

27. 2006 Referral: Item 10-06. Report: Living into the Body of Christ: Towards Full Inclusion of People with Disabilities, Recommendation 2.c. (10). That the General Assembly Council Direct the Presbyterian Washington Office and Other Appropriate General Assembly Entities to Convey Disability Policy Concerns to Political Leaders and Church Members; Monitor Legislation at the Federal Level and Notify Presbyterians When They Have an Opportunity to Influence Such Legislation, Affirm Historical Strides Made Through Federal Legislation, and Support New Legislative Initiatives That Affirm the Full Humanity and Advance the Full Inclusion of People with Disabilities—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 49, 50, 922).

Response: In accordance with the above directive, the Washington Office affirms the previous legislative strides made toward a more inclusive and accessible society in the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA), among others, and works to try to build upon the solid foundation provided by the ADA. The Washington Office has worked on various issues related to disability, but in particular has focused efforts on access to health care for people with disabilities, with a focus on mental illness, and adequate funding and expanded access to supportive services in private homes as well as facilities. Mental Health Parity has been an issue on the legislative calendar in 2007–2008 and the Washington Office is working to communicate Presbyterian support for Mental Health Parity to legislators and administrators in Washington, DC. Presbyterians were alerted for action on mental health parity as the bill, passed in the Senate, approached consideration in the House of Representatives. The Washington Office has further followed issues of access to housing equipped with supportive services for people with disabilities, including the Community Choice Act and Section 811 of the housing code.

28. 2006 Referral: Item 10-06. Report: Living into the Body of Christ: Towards Full Inclusion of People with Disabilities, Recommendation 2.c. (11). That the General Assembly Council Direct the Presbyterian United Nations Office and Other Appropriate General Assembly Entities to Convey Disability Policy Concerns to the Appropriate Leaders in the United Nations—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 49, 50, 922).

Response: The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), through the Presbyterian United Nations Office, has conveyed disability policy concerns through sustained participation and engagement with the following UN processes:

a. The Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities and its Optional Protocol were adopted by the United Nations General Assembly on 13 December 2006, and opened for signature on 30 March 2007. On 30 March, eighty-one member states and the European Community signed the convention, the highest number of signatures of any human rights convention on its opening day. The convention was negotiated during eight sessions of an Ad Hoc Committee of the General Assembly from 2002 to 2006.

b. Report of the special rapporteur on Disability of the Commission for Social Development—46th Session [E/CN.5/2008/3] - E/CN.5/2008/3 Report in MS Word.

c. The annual observance of the International Day of Disabled Persons, 3 December, aims to promote an understanding of disability issues and mobilize support for the dignity, rights, and well-being of persons with disabilities. It also seeks to increase awareness of the benefits to be derived from the integration of persons with disabilities in every aspect of political, social, economic, and cultural life. It was established by the World Program of Action concerning Disabled Persons and adopted by the UN General Assembly in 1982.

29. *2006 Referral: Item 11-25. On Condemning International Trafficking in and Sexual Exploitation of Children—From the Synod of the Northeast, Recommendation 2. Response: In conjunction and consultation with other GAC staff (International Health Ministries; Presbyterian Health, Education, and Welfare Association; Mission Responsibility Through Investment; Women’s Ministries; Presbyterian Women; Hunger Program; the Sexual Misconduct Ombudsperson; and others) as well as the Office of the General Assembly’s staff person for Immigration Issues, a four-session study on sex trafficking was written and produced for The Thoughtful Christian, Presbyterian Publishing Corporation’s online adult studies. A resource list is a part of the study.

Information and suggested action steps to address child sex trafficking were also included in Are All The Children Well? A Presbyterian Sabbath Supplement to the 2007 National Observance of Children’s Sabbaths Manual produced by Children’s Defense Fund. Both the manual and the supplement were provided to congregations at no cost through Pentecost offering funds.

At the invitation of the board for Mission Responsibility Through Investment, the Associate for Child Advocacy participated in a seminar on child sex trafficking held in Los Angeles.

Along with other ecumenical agencies, The Presbyterian Hunger Program provided funding for the development of a DVD resource, Lives for Sale: A Documentary on Immigration and Human Trafficking (produced by Maryknoll and Lightfoot Films)

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) joined other agencies in the submission of ECPAT-USA's submission of the Alternative Report to the United State's Initial Report concerning the Optional Protocol on the Sale of the Child. The associate for Child Advocacy is in conversation with ECPAT about other ways to collaborate.

To familiarize staff and personnel with this issue, in June 2007, a brown bag lunch discussion series on sex trafficking facilitated by the associate for Child Advocacy and the intern for the Office of Women's Advocacy was held for staff and other interested persons.

30. 2006 Referral: Item 11-26. On Expressing the Church's Concern for the People of Haiti—From the Presbytery of Tropical Florida (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 43, 45, 997–99).

Response: Over the past two years, the Washington Office, on its own as well as with its partners in the Jubilee USA coalition, have been advocating for comprehensive debt relief legislation that would relieve Haiti from its crushing debt. It has done this through grassroots education on the issue, action alerts, direct advocacy, and coalition work. The Washington Office in coalition with Jubilee USA sent letters to congress urging them to support the debt relief legislation for Haiti both in 2006 and 2007. The Washington Office cosponsored several briefings on the hill regarding this issue as well as participating in meetings with various members' offices.

In the summer and fall of 2006, the Washington Office called for advocates to ask their members of congress to support a Haiti debt cancellation resolution (H.RES. 888) urging the World Bank, International Monetary Fund, and Inter-American Bank to cancel Haiti's debt. An article in the July/August 2006 report was dedicated to this issue as well as several alerts in the Witness in Washington Weekly. In 2007, the Washington Office urged support for similar legislation and co-sponsored the Haiti Days of Action on October 2–4.

In addition, the Washington Office has advocated in support of legislation that would render Haitian nationals eligible for temporary protected states (H.R. 522).

31. 2006 Referral: Item 11-33. The Commitment to Peacemaking, Recommendation 9. That a Report Be Made to the 218th General Assembly (2008) on the Number of Sessions That Have Adopted the "Commitment to Peacemaking"—From the General Assembly Council (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 43, 46, 1013).

Response: As of February 5, 2008, 4,514 congregations have made the "Commitment to Peacemaking." Additionally three presbyteries have made the "Commitment to Peacemaking" since the 217th General Assembly (2006). This information will be updated and reported to the 218th General Assembly (2008) Assembly Committee on Peacemaking and International Issues.

[This response was removed from the consent agenda and assigned as Item 11-29. The assembly approved the response. See pp. 5, 46, 47, 1226.]

Response: That this referral be answered by Item 11-27, p. 1223.

33. 2003 Referral: Item 09-03. Strategy for Ministry with Hispanic-Latino Constituencies in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), Recommendation 6. That the General Assembly Request the General Assembly Council, Through Its National Ministries Division, Racial Ethnic Ministries Program Area, and the Office of Hispanic Congregational Enhancement, to Organize a National Consultation Event in 2006 to Determine How Best to Implement the Strategy, Explore the Issues Raised by It, and Monitor the Progress of the Recommendations and Report Its Findings to the 218th General Assembly (2008)—From the General Assembly Council (Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 25, 532).

Response: In response to the 215th General Assembly (2003) action, a consultation was held in October 2005, in Dallas, Texas. Participants at the consultation determined that developing a manual for implementation was the most effective way to engage the whole church into this ministry effort. In 2006, a Manual for Implementation was created and distributed to all Hispanic/Latino Presbyterian churches, organizations, and related ministries. And, The Strategy for Ministry with Hispanic-Latino Constituencies is available in English, Spanish, and Portuguese at www.pcusa.org/hispanic.

From July 2004–December 2005, thirty-two presentations and workshops on Hispanic church development were presented to sixteen presbyteries, three synods, two theological seminaries, and at six national events. These events were coordinated together with middle governing bodies and the Hispanic Congregational Enhancement Office. The Office of Youth Ministry developed specific workshops to be offered at youth leader development events and conferences. A progress report was reported to the 217th General Assembly (2006) (Minutes, 2006, Part 1, pp. 90–91, 99). Bilingual curriculum materials in Spanish are available for youth: Lecciones Cristianas Para Jóvenes. Portuguese translation of these resources is under development. The General Assembly Council is aware of the need for resources in various languages and is investigating ways that this can be done.

The National Hispanic/Latino Caucus, the Hispanic Congregational Enhancement Office Advisory Committee, and General Assembly Council staff is implementing a five to ten-year plan. The implementation started in 2007 with two synods, the Hispanic caucus, and the annual gatherings of women and youth, and of the caucus' assembly in 2007. Plans in 2008 include training in four synods with the Hispanic caucus.

34. 2004 Referral: Item 10-01. Recommendation 8. Direct the General Assembly Council to Create and Facilitate a Network of “Immigrant Welcome” Churches That Agree with the Affirmations of This Overture (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 50, 51, 881).

Response: The Office of New Immigrant Groups Ministries in the U.S.A. in the Racial Ethnic and Women’s Ministries/Presbyterian Women ministries area worked in collaboration with the Office of the General Assembly, who in 2006 created the network of Presbyterians for Just Immigration, with participation from middle governing bodies and congregations. Workshops and presentations on welcoming new immigrants into our denomination were offered in two synods and nine presbyteries in 2007.

36. 2006 Referral: Item 10-06. Report: Living into the Body of Christ: Towards Full Inclusion of People with Disabilities, Recommendation 2.c.(8). That the General Assembly Council Direct the Racial Ethnic Congregational Enhancement, Middle Eastern Ministries, Immigrant Group Ministries, and Evangelism and Racial Cultural Diversity Offices, in Partnership with the Racial Ethnic Caucuses, the Coordinating Councils and Networks of These Offices, Social Welfare Organization Offices, and with All Governing Bodies of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to Develop Strategies for the Full and Faithful Implementation of This Policy—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 49, 50, 920–21).

Response: The Racial Ethnic and Women’s Ministries/Presbyterian Women ministries area engages with racial ethnic caucuses, coordinating councils, networks, and governing bodies. The ministry works to educate the church about the inclusion of all people in all ministries of the church, including the full inclusion of people with disabilities. The initial response for the implementation of the “Living into the Body of Christ: Towards Full Inclusion of People with Disabilities” policy entailed seeking understanding and sensitivity to the issues involved in developing strategies for the inclusion of people with disabilities. The first step, therefore, was for the Racial Ethnic Congregational Enhancement offices to contact racial ethnic caucuses, coordinating councils, networks, other constituency groups, and governing bodies to acquaint them with the report. A portion of the letter, sent along with the report, follows:

The policy affirms the Church’s efforts to ensure that buildings and grounds are physically accessible and inviting to persons with disabilities. The policy paper “Living into the Body of Christ: Towards Full Inclusion of People with Disabilities,” affirms that all the entities of The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) are to take appropriate steps to ensure that members with disabilities are fully included in the ministries of the Church. The policy also provides a theological understanding of living with disabilities, and encourages advocacy with and on behalf of people with disabilities in local, national and international contexts. This policy paper also includes a study guide. You are encouraged to use this policy paper as a resource for your continuing efforts in helping the Church and the larger community to be a more inclusive place for persons with disabilities. Thank you for reviewing this policy paper, which was approved by the 217th General Assembly (2006) and for your part in developing strategies to help the whole church live into the body of Christ.

As justice for all is an important value in the General Assembly Council and in our ministry area, we plan to follow up this contact by developing and implementing strategies in partnership with the caucuses and councils for a full and faithful response to the recommendation.

37. *2006 Referral: Item 12-12. Report, Older Adult Ministries Task Force, Recommendation 2.d.(5). Response: Spiritual formation is integral to the General Assembly Council’s Mission Work Plan. The Theology Worship and Education ministry area includes an Office of Christian Formation, which in turn includes an associate for spiritual formation. Numerous publications and programs ensure that spiritual formation is not an isolated program, but rather an enduring element of all ministries within Theology Worship and Education.

48. 2006 Referral: Item 12-01. On Creating the Office of Minister of Christian Education—From the Presbytery of Mission (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 14, 1027–49).

2006 Referral: Item 12-02. On Amending the Book of Order to Create a Fourth Office to Be Known as Education Elder—From the Presbytery of Shenandoah (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 14, 1049–60).

Response: The place of Christian educators within Presbyterian polity has been a matter of discussion for decades. From time to time, proposals have been made to create a fourth ordained office—in addition to deacons, elders, and ministers of the Word and Sacrament. The church has not approved these proposals. Instead, a process for certification of Christian educators has provided the means to prepare and recognize persons for service as educators in congregations and middle governing bodies (G-14.0130, 14.0710-.0732).

The two overtures sent to the 217th General Assembly (2007) were referred to the Office of Theology and Worship for study and response.

The overtures from the Presbyteries of Mission and Shenandoah each propose an ordination process for Christian educators, but they differ in their understanding of the nature of a fourth office.

The Presbytery of Mission proposes the creation of the office of “minister of Christian education” (Item 12-01), while the Presbytery of Shenandoah proposes the creation of the office of “educating elder” (Item 12-02). The Presbytery of Mission’s “minister of Christian education” proposal stipulates the same preparation process as that for minister of the Word and Sacrament, with minor changes to recognize the specialized nature of education ministry. The Presbytery of Shenandoah’s “educating elder” proposal sets forth a process for certified Christian elders to be ordained as elders, with session and presbytery membership.

Both overtures find rationale for a “fourth office” in John Calvin’s Institutes of the Christian Religion. Calvin mentions both pastors and teachers: “There is, I believe, this difference between them: teachers are not put in charge of discipline, or administering the sacraments, or warnings and exhortations, but only of Scriptural interpretation—to keep doctrine whole and pure among believers. But the pastoral office includes these functions within itself” (Institutes, 4.3.4). Calvin’s “teachers” were more akin to professors than to Christian educators in congregations, however. Most Reformed churches have not adopted Calvin’s distinction, noting instead “the pastoral office includes [teaching] functions within itself.” Historically, Presbyterian ministers have been called “teaching elders,” a designation that is emphasized in the proposed revision to the Form of Government in order to accentuate the crucial teaching function of the pastoral office.

Biblical, historical, theological, ecclesial, and ecumenical considerations point to the conclusion that creation of a fourth ordered ministry, whether minister of Christian education or educating elder, is not warranted. However, the concerns of Mission and Shenandoah presbyteries for the place of certified Christian educators in the life of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) are significant, both for educators and the denomination they serve. Many of the practical considerations that lead to ordination proposals are valid, and should be addressed by the church.

The Book of Order provides that “Persons called to particular service in the church may be certified by recognized agencies affiliated with the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) as having achieved proficiency in their field of expertise” (G-14.0130). Certification processes are currently in place for Christian educators, church musicians, administrative personnel, and church business administrators. The Book of Order makes formal provisions for certified Christian educators, including their relationship to the presbytery: certified Christian educators are given privilege of the floor at meetings of the presbytery, with vote as well as voice to those who are elders (G-14.0730c).

Presbyteries must set minimum requirements for certified Christian educator compensation and benefits, and grant access to the committee on ministry (G-14.0703a).

Certified Christian educators have a duty to report knowledge of abuse, neglect, or molestation (G-14.0732).

There are further provisions for certified Christian educators that should be considered by the church, however. The following are the central questions to be addressed:

a. Should the call to service in a congregation include three parties—the session, the certified Christian educator, and the presbytery, with terms of call and dissolution of call subject to agreement by all three? [This appears to be a logical extension of current provisions for minimum compensation and access to the committee on ministry.]

b. Should certified Christian educators who are not ministers or elders be ordained as ruling elders, either by the congregation in which they serve or by the presbytery? [This would not constitute a “fourth office,” but would recognize the appropriate inclusion of certified Christian educators in the office of ruling elder (note responsibilities of elders in G-6.0304). Ordination as elder without a term of service on a session would be consistent with the provision in G-6.0403b for deacons to be ordained and commissioned to service individually rather than as members of a board of deacons.]

c. Should certified Christian educators be given membership in the presbytery within whose bounds they serve? [Many certified Christian educators are barred from membership in the congregations they serve, and thus hold membership in distant congregations within the bounds of other presbyteries. These educators are without an ecclesial home.]

d. Should certified Christian educators be seated in session meetings, with voice but not vote? [This would be consistent with the provisions for participation in the presbytery. Certified Christian educators can be particularly helpful as sessions fulfill their responsibilities in G-10.0102a,c,e,f,k,l,p.]

These are important matters for certified Christian educators, congregations, presbyteries, and the whole church. The proposed revisions to the Form of Government may provide flexibility that will enable presbyteries and congregations to make some changes without specific, detailed amendments to the Book of Order. Other changes may require standardized churchwide practice. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) will benefit from thoughtful consideration of the four central questions.

49. 2006 Referral: Item 12-12. Report, Older Adult Ministries Task Force, Recommendation 2.a.(1). That the General Assembly Council, Through Congregational Ministries Publishing, Develop a Series of Resources on Spirituality and Aging; Authorize the Office of Older Adult Ministries to Review, Update, and Republish Existing Resources in Older Adult Ministry as Needed; and Offer Distance Learning Opportunities Such as On-Line Courses, Teleconferences, and Web-Casts to Increase Leadership Skills in Aging Issues—From the General Assembly Council (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 14–15, 1069).

Response: Although a designated office for Older Adult Ministries was eliminated in May 2006, ministering to older adults continues to be an important issue for congregations. In this regard, other ministry areas of the General Assembly Council, such as the office of Christian education, national health ministries, and the office of vocation, continue to address questions that congregations may have about older adult ministries by networking across the denomination for recommended information, tools, and resources.

60. 2006 Referral: Item 08-10. On the Elimination of Administration Costs on Restricted Mission Gifts—From the Presbytery of Baltimore (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 36–37, 649–50).

Response: The 217th General Assembly (2006) instructed the General Assembly Council to assist congregations in communicating to their membership the reality of changed patterns in unrestricted giving and the resulting cost implications of administering restricted funds, and implored the General Assembly Council and its Mission Funding Task Force to seek alternative means of budgeting in order to deal with this changing reality.

The GAC Mission Funding Task Force explored the changing patterns of unrestricted giving and has made a number of recommendations with regard to Funding for Specific Mission. (See Item 08-12, Mission Funding Task Force Report, “Funding Christ's Mission Throughout the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), p. 664.”) Among the recommendations is a proposed “Season of Interpretation” as a period of time each year, beginning in 2009, for the church to promote and interpret the work of its mission programs through local, regional, and national governing bodies. The interpretation would include information on how individuals' and congregations' giving to the mission of the church is used to bear witness to God's love and make a difference in the world. Part of the interpretation would be clear information on how gifts are used to provide both the activity and support network that enables mission to take place. Administrative costs are part of a broader interpretation piece of the whole network of support that makes mission possible. To that end, the request to assist congregations in communicating the reality of changed patterns and resulting administrative costs would be part of the comprehensive work of “A Season of Interpretation” in 2009 and following years.

In addition, the General Assembly Council approved another recommendation from its Mission Funding Task Force that will gradually implement, over a five-year period starting in 2009, a means of fairly and accurately allocating all costs associated with individual projects in the General Assembly mission budget, including the costs associated with the systems necessary for the support, promotion, and accountability of each item. The results of this system will be communicated to the church as part of the General Assembly Council’s mission interpretation.

Response: For coordinated response to the recommendations from 2006 Referral, Item 12-12, see F. General Assembly Council Final Responses to Referrals, Referral 6, above.

62. 2006 Referral: Item 12-12. Report, Older Adult Ministries Task Force, Recommendation 2.a.(3). Encourage the Ongoing Relationship Between the Presbyterian Church Foundation and the Office of Older Adult Ministries as a $6,000,000 Endowment Is Raised to Ensure the Long-Term Financial Viability of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)’s Older Adult Ministries—From the General Assembly Council (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 14–15, 1069).

Response: For coordinated response to the recommendations from 2006 Referral, Item 12-12, see F. General Assembly Council Final Responses to Referrals, Referral 6, above.

63. 2004 Referral: Item 07-08. Report, Creating a Climate for Change in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), Recommendation 3.1. That All CEO’s, Presidents, Directors, and Boards of Directors of General Assembly Agencies Be Encouraged to Demonstrate a Renewed Commitment to Racial and Gender Diversification in Upper Management Positions and to Report Successes, on a Per Agency Basis, to the 217th General Assembly (2008)—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns Task Force to Examine GA Entities (Minutes, 2004, Part I, pp. 51, 545).

Response: In creating the climate for change, and instilling a whole new Human Resources culture, we have renewed our commitment to diversity.

a. We are reinforcing the commitment with recruiting. For example, we require all leadership searches to publish the opening in minority sites. As new openings occur, we ask the hiring manager to look at their current racial and gender representation and determine where they have opportunity to increase diversity.

b. We confirm our desire for racial and gender inclusion in one of our core values. We define “Collaboration” as specifically calling for “... cultivating an inclusive, covenantal community. ...”

c. We have made changes at the Executive Leadership level of the GAC that address the gender representation. Prior to 2007, we had 7 people, 5 male and 2 female at that level. 5 were white, 2 were black. In 2007 we have a total of 6 people in the executive leadership level. 3 are male and 3 are female. 1 is black, 5 are white.

d. We have increased our racial representation of people with Asian, Hispanic, and multiple racial lines.

e. We have increased our gender representation of Hispanic and black females.

Going forward, with the new categories and continued awareness, we anticipate that 2008 will show even more diverse representation.

64. 2006 Referral: Item 08-01. On Clarifying the Practice of Our Theology of Call for Those Serving General Assembly Entities—From the Presbytery of Santa Fe (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 36, 623–26).

Response: The 217th General Assembly (2006) approved Item 08-01 and in so doing instructed all of the entities of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to review their policies and practices and to effect any needed changes to bring them into full compliance with the Book of Order (G-11.0410) and General Assembly policies so that every minister of the Word and Sacrament employed by them in any relationship shall have a call as defined by the Constitution of the church with full constitutional participation by the appropriate presbytery. This action also required changes in terms of call be shared with the presbytery of membership for their approval and the Board of Pensions; termination or settlement agreements be accessible to the presbytery's COM; the entity present certification of full compliance to the 218th General Assembly (2008); and each entity provide a report to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly listing called positions and together with full terms of call.

In practice, the entities of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) are abiding by the requirements of the Book of Order. The General Assembly Council has reviewed and rewritten the Employee Handbook (September 2007) for General Assembly Council employees. It includes an expanded section on ministers of Word and Sacrament, making explicit the policies and procedures included in this overture. The General Assembly Council is operating in full compliance with this statement of policy:

800. MINISTERS OF THE WORD AND SACRAMENT

801. Terms of Call/ Notification and Consultation with Presbytery

All Ministers of the Word and Sacrament of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), ("Minister,") must have a written call before starting work, ordinarily in a form that includes:

- Description of goals and working relationships;
- Financial terms;
- Signature of the Minister;
- Signature of the presbytery of membership ("presbytery"); and
- Signature of the GAC. (See Book of Order G-11.0408B).

For Ministers employed in positions where ordination is a minimum qualification, the terms of call must at least meet the presbytery minimums for salary and study leave. For Ministers employed in positions where ordination is not a minimum qualification, the terms of call and benefits will be established by the employer and may or may not meet the presbytery minimums, but will be comparable to those offered to other staff in similar positions.

Prior to the offer of employment, the Human Resources Department will contact the Minister candidate's Committee on Ministry (COM) of the presbytery. Contact will be made through its stated clerk or executive presbyter to afford the presbytery the opportunity to communicate concerns about the candidate.

Prior to starting work, a Minister must consult with his or her COM and will be reminded by the Human Resources Department about the Minister's obligation to request and obtain the presbytery's approval of the terms of call. (See Book of Order G-11.0410.)

The Human Resources Department will:

- Provide the Minister with an offer letter that includes the written call (see above-listed requirements);
- Copy the presbytery COM through the stated clerk or executive presbyter on the offer letter; and
- Ask the stated clerk or executive presbyter to notify the Human Resources Department of approval, making clear that the employment relationship will not start without receipt of approval from the presbytery.

Written calls will be prepared for existing Minister staff members and submitted with an updated position description when the annual performance review is submitted to Human Resources Department.

During employment, the Human Resources Department will provide timely notification to the presbytery and the Board of Pensions (BOP) of any changes in the terms of call (Book of Order, G-11.0410).

If during employment, the employer becomes aware of any circumstances that might occasion discipline of a Minister under the Book of Order, the Human Resources Department will be informed and will notify and provide full information and cooperation to the presbytery's COM, unless prohibited by applicable law.

Upon termination of employment of a Minister, the Human Resources Department will provide timely notice of the dissolution of the call to the presbytery. If the dissolution was disciplinary in nature, then the notice will include the cause of dissolution. Financial provisions related to termination or settlement agreements are changes in terms of call that the Human Resources Department will share with the presbytery and with the BOP on a timely basis. Upon request of the presbytery's COM, the COM will be given access to all information contained in the Minister's termination (separation) or settlement agreement, regardless of whether the agreement contains a confidentiality clause, unless prohibited by applicable law. The Director of Human Resources and/or a representative of the Legal Services Office will respond to inquiries of appropriate officers of the presbytery.

The Human Resources Department will submit salary information to the General Assembly for publication in the minutes.

Employment of a Minister remains at-will and may be terminated at any time with or without cause and with or without notice.

802. Manse/Housing Allowance

The Internal Revenue Code allows exempt level, ordained Minister staff members to exclude from gross income for income tax purposes, if designated in advance by the employer, any housing allowance paid as part of compensation when that allowance is used for specified purposes. The responsibility for accurate estimates of the housing allowance and payment of applicable taxes rests solely with the Minister staff member.

For purposes of this policy, "housing" means housing and furnishings.

Housing allowances are to be used for expenses such as:

- Rental of a home;

01 ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON BUSINESS REFERRALS

- Purchase of a home, including down payment, mortgage, legal fees, fees for title search, installment payments, interest, taxes, fire and home liability insurance premiums, repairs, etc.;
- Operating expenses of a home, other than costs for food or domestic help, such as utilities, house furnishings, attached garage, sidewalks, and front and back yards; and
- Home owner association dues.

Due to Internal Revenue Service requirements, the manse allowance must be designated by the employer prior to the Minister staff member receiving the allowance (generally, before employment begins). The manse/housing allowance form is available from the Human Resources Department.

803. General

The nature of the relationship between persons ordained to Ministry of the Word and Sacrament and their presbyteries is governed by the Book of Order. They are generally covered by all provisions of this Staff Handbook except where excluded by federal, state, or local laws, including the ministerial exception.

804. Credited Service for Ministers

With regard to Ministers of the Word and Sacrament, in calculating “credited service” or “continuous credited service,” the commencement of such service shall be the date of ordination to the office of Minister of the Word and Sacrament by a presbytery of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) as opposed to the date of hire by the GAC.

805. Withholding

The Internal Revenue Code exempts exempt-level, ordained Minister staff members from mandatory withholding. Such Minister staff members may pay their income and self-employment taxes via quarterly installments sent directly to the Internal Revenue Service or via voluntary withholding which may be arranged with the Human Resources Department and the Payroll Department by completing Internal Revenue Service Form W-4 (Employee’s Withholding Allowance Certificate). It is the Minister staff member’s sole responsibility to complete Form W-4 if voluntary withholding is desired. If no such completed form is submitted to the Human Resources Department, no withholding will take place and the Minister staff member will be responsible to make any and all tax payments to the Internal Revenue Service directly. As with the manse/housing allowance form, the responsibility for accurate estimates and completion of Internal Revenue Service Form W-4 rests solely with the Minister staff member.

806. Reporting of Disciplinary Matters

The Human Resources Department will report to the respective Minister’s COM of presbytery through its stated clerk or executive presbyter any disciplinary actions for violation of the GAC’s Anti-Discrimination and Anti-Harassment Policies, Sexual Misconduct Policy or Ethics Policy for Employees of the General Assembly Council.

65. 2006 Referral: Item 11-01/5. On Rescinding and Modifying Certain Actions of the 216th General Assembly (2004) Regarding the Israeli-Palestinian Conflict, Recommendation 5. Recognizing That The Situation on the Ground in the Israel-Palestine Area Is Rapidly Changing, the General Assembly Council (GAC) Is Directed to Carefully Monitor Ongoing Developments of the Situation in the Middle East and to Examine the Policies of the PC(USA) Related to the Middle East, in Order to Make a Comprehensive Report to the 218th General Assembly (2008).”

In consideration of the above, the General Assembly Council (GAC) is monitoring developments of the situation by:

- a. Remaining in communications with church partners in Israel/Palestine and the wider Middle East region.
- b. Hearing reports from various program offices at GAC meetings regarding the situation on the ground and church’s ongoing engagement with the Middle East and receiving accounts of progress on the implementation of actions of earlier assemblies.
- c. Praying for and celebrating the witness of the Christians of the Middle East in the midst of situations of hardship, conflict, and hope.
- d. Capitalizing on the commitment and energy of the GAC-related Israel/Palestine Mission Network that has been a vital resource of information, education, partnership, and advocacy for the church, as well as other denominational and ecumenical/interfaith organizations that work tirelessly for peace in the Middle East (e.g., Churches for Middle East Peace, the National Inter-religious Leadership Initiative for Peace in the Middle East, and the Presbyterian Peace Fellowship).
- e. Participating in dialogue and conversations with Jewish and Muslim leadership in the United States and in Israel/Palestine.
- f. Participating in a delegation that visited Israel/Palestine in January 2007, represented by the GAC chair and Executive Director, along with the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly, the director of the Peace & Justice program area, and the coordinator of the Office for the Middle East; and in other ways, individually and collectively.

Recognizing that the situation on the ground in Israel-Palestine is rapidly changing, the 217th General Assembly (2006) directed the General Assembly Council (GAC) “to carefully monitor ongoing developments of the situation in the Middle East and to examine the policies of the PC(USA) related to the Middle East, in order to make a comprehensive report to the 218th General Assembly (2008)” (Minutes, 2006, Part I, p. 945). A preliminary response to that referral was made in the February 2008 GAC meeting, citing several ways the GAC has been monitoring the situation. The response also promised the submission of a more comprehensive report with recommendation(s) to the April 23–25 meeting of the GAC, (thereby meeting the 45-day deadline of materials to be forwarded to the 218th General Assembly (2008)). The following paragraphs summarize a review of PC(USA) policy in light of developments on the ground<sup>1</sup> and the PC(USA)’s concern for the dwindling presence of Christians in Israel/Palestine and other parts of the region. Mentioned as well are signs of hope, the meaning of which remains ambiguous for both the church here and in the Middle East.

Policy Summary

Presbyterian involvement and investment in the region dates back to the early 19th century. Educational institutions established by the PC(USA) in Lebanon and Egypt continue to this day. The PC(USA) also supports educational institutions in Israel/Palestine and elsewhere in the Middle East. The PC(USA) is present through faithful and enduring mission and ecumenical relationships.

The Middle East contains not only ancient cultures and active warfare, but also intensified religio-political ideologies and increasingly pivotal oil supplies. In the 1950s and 60s, the church’s mission policies affirmed post-colonial development, a process then affected by the struggle between Cold War power blocs. In the 1970s and 80s, democracy, religious freedom, and human rights became continuing concerns, this last especially visible in annual General Assembly human rights updates. More recently, immigration from and within the Middle East has made its countries more visible to U.S. eyes; broad currents in Islamic thought also respond to globalization and less-welcomed elements of modernity. A resolution on the Iraq war also submitted to the 218th General Assembly (2008) looks at particular developments in that country, but can only suggest the various dimensions of struggle among Sunni and Shi’a Muslims, Arabs and non-Arabs, and religious and secular nationalist elements that exist across the region.

With regard to Israel/Palestine, since 1948 the church, (through a pattern of regular General Assembly statements), has expressed concern for the fate of refugees displaced by the formation of the State of Israel, for the security of Israeli citizens, and for the establishment of peace and security with justice in the region. In 1974, the church completed a major policy statement examining the changed realities of West Bank occupation after the 1967 and 1973 wars. In 1997, an extensive Resolution on the Middle East explored the 1980 Camp David peace agreement between Egypt and Israel, the first Intifada, the Madrid Conference in 1991, the 1993 Israeli-Palestinian Declaration of Principles, and the Oslo Accords. Resolutions since 1997 have focused on human rights, the continued expansion of settlements (now accommodating more than 400,000 settlers), the cessation of the peace process from September 2001 to November 2007, and the ongoing violence perpetrated by various Palestinian organizations as well as the government of Israel.

The 2004 and 2006 General Assemblies expressed more intense concern for the dwindling Christian population in the Holy Land. In response to the Second Intifada and the beginning of construction of the “wall” or “separation barrier,” the 216th General Assembly (2004) called for initiating “a process of selective, phased divestment.” In 2006, the assembly urged that financial investments of the PC(USA) as they pertain to Israel, Gaza, East Jerusalem, and the West Bank, be invested only in peaceful pursuits. The assembly also affirmed the customary corporate engagement process of MRTI to be the proper vehicle for achieving that goal.

The Situation on the Ground

During the past two years, the news media, as well as organizations that monitor the situation on the ground, have reported the continued deterioration of relations between Israel and the Palestinians, despite initiatives of neighboring states (such as Saudi Arabia and Egypt) and of the United States (e.g., the Annapolis Conference of November 2007, and President Bush’s December 2007 visit to Israel and the Occupied Palestinian Territories). Violence has increased. There are more suicide bombings and rockets hurled by Palestinian groups into southern Israel. Israeli armed forces continue their attacks inside Gaza, killing both militants and unarmed civilians, including children and women. Humanitarian aid and relief organizations have reported that living conditions for the 1.5 million persons living in Gaza are the worst in forty years.<sup>2</sup> In the West Bank and East Jerusalem, the government of Israel continues to implement the policies of Palestinian home demolitions, the expansion of Israeli settlements, and the restriction of movement of Palestinians. Whether through the roadblocks and checkpoints, the “Israeli-only” routes, the continuing construction of the Separation Barrier on confiscated land, or imprisonment and administrative detention, the situation on the ground is continually changing, mostly for the worse.<sup>3</sup> News reports, however, still indicate that the majority of Israelis and the majority of Palestinians hunger for a peaceful settlement of the conflict. Many are still crying “peace, peace, when there is no peace” (Jer. 6:14, NRSV).

Signs of Hope?

In the broader Middle East region overall, there are also some positive changes. Cells of suicide bombers are small in comparison with the number of reformers demanding change through attempted legislative petitions and mass protest. One quarter of Lebanon's population took to the streets in 2005, peacefully insisting that Syria withdraw its troops and Syria did, after years of de facto occupation. Egyptians who have been living under unrelenting martial law since Sadat's assassination are also protesting peacefully, creating organizations to monitor government corruption and excess. International access to information has increased and this helps greatly. Due to new technologies, people are able to exchange ideas more. In Israel/Palestine itself, more Palestinians are developing nonviolent spiritual and cultural programs and projects to resist the occupation without being destroyed themselves by rage or resentment. When abuse occurs, it is more widely known.

While the transition from autocratic government to more open processes may be long, difficult, and unpredictable, we must rejoice in the change that is happening.

What this change means for the church, as well as other aspects of diverse Middle Eastern cultures, remains unclear.

Messages from Partners

On the eve of the Annapolis conference last November, following a meeting of Christian, Jewish, and Muslim leaders in Jerusalem, where a common commitment was made to work together toward reconciliation and peace, one of our partner churches in the Holy Land sent a message expressing their hope to the political leaders gathered in Maryland. In part it said,

It is our responsibility to find the right way to live together in peace rather than to fight and to kill. We believers from three religions have been placed in this land—Jews, Christians and Muslims—among one another. Palestinians yearn for the end to occupation and for what they see as their inalienable rights. Israelis long for the day when they can live in personal and national security. Together we must find ways of reaching these goals. ... If we, faith leaders steeped in the religious sensitivities of the land, can take an unprecedented move toward reconciliation, then you can, too. We urge the Americans, the European countries, the Quartet and Arab countries to seize the momentum. ...<sup>4</sup>

In another message<sup>5</sup> from the Latin Rite (Catholic) Patriarch of Jerusalem, His Beatitude Michel Sabbah reminded the world of the Holy Land's "universal vocation"—for Jews, Christians, Muslims and Druze. For Christians, who are "few in number," the reality of the land is "linked to the mystery of Jesus." He then called upon them to love God in every human person "for it is God whom we love in the friend or the enemy. ..."

Jewish, Christian and Muslim leaders, members of the Council of Religious Institutions of the Holy Land, were in Washington in early November 2007 to meet with U.S. lawmakers and their American co-religionists to express both their yearning and their shared commitment to work for peace. In a public statement<sup>6</sup> the clerics pledged to "find the right way to live together in peace" and promised cooperation related to the Holy Sites that "respects their integrity and independence and avoids any act of desecration, aggression or harm." On the issue of Jerusalem, the leaders said they will "work to secure open access to the Old City for all communities, and seek a common vision for this city which all of us regard as holy."

The consistent message of our Christian, ecumenical and interfaith partners is a message of reconciliation, hope, peace, and love, even though violence, terror, enmity, demonization, fear, suspicion, oppression, and injustice prevail.

The cry for solidarity, support, advocacy, and—above all—prayer resounds from our partner churches.

G. General Assembly Nominating Committee

1. 2006 Referral: Item 05-11. Recommendation 1. That the GANC, the Moderators of the 215th, the 216th, and the 217th General Assembly Appoint a Form of Government Task Force. (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 39, 366)

Response: The 217th General Assembly (2006) directed that the Moderators of the current and two most recent General Assemblies consult with the General Assembly Nominating Committee (GANC) in appointing members for the Form of Government Task Force. Members of the GANC contributed names of persons corresponding with the categories of membership required for the task force as potential candidates for the pool of nominees being considered by the Moderators. In addition, the moderator of the GANC met, via conference call, with the General Assembly Moderators and was a part of the decision-making process.

2. 2006 Referral: Item 08-16. Grant the General Assembly Nominating Committee Latitude with Regard to the Composition of the General Assembly Council as the General Assembly Council Adjusts to the Changes Called for Pursuant to Item 08-08. (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 37, 746)

Response: In response to this referral, the 217th General Assembly (2006) did not elect new members to serve on the General Assembly Council nor did the General Assembly Nominating Committee fill vacancies created when members resigned. The composition of the General Assembly Council has been fully adjusted to be in accord with the Book of Order and the General Assembly Council's Manual of Operations mandates in the slate of nominees being presented to the 218th General Assembly (2008).

3. 2006 Referral: Item 10-06. "Living into the Body of Christ: Towards Full Inclusion of People with Disabilities" Recommendation 2.m. GANC to Encourage the Middle Governing Bodies to Increase the Percentage of Qualified People Living with Disabilities Serving on General Assembly Level Committees (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 50, 924).

The Book of Order stipulates that, "The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) shall give full expression to the rich diversity within its membership and shall provide means which will assure a greater inclusiveness leading to wholeness in its emerging life. Persons of all racial ethnic groups, different ages, both sexes, various disabilities, diverse geographical areas, different theological positions consistent with the Reformed tradition, as well as different marital conditions (married, single, widowed, or divorced) shall be guaranteed full participation and access to representation in the decision making of the church" (G-4.0403).

Representatives for the General Assembly Nominating Committee and the General Assembly Committee on Representation met with members of the Presbyterians for Disabilities Concerns in New Orleans, Louisiana, in January 2007, to seek ways in which best to communicate with and encourage persons living with disabilities to serve the larger church on its agencies, committees, and boards. The General Assembly Nominating Committee is limited in its task when persons with disabilities are not recognized because applicants have not declared a disability on their application form.

In training sessions, conversations, and consultations with middle governing bodies—presbytery and synod nominating committees and committees on representation—the General Assembly Nominating Committee has encouraged that persons living with disabilities be identified and solicited to apply within the General Assembly nominations process so that they may be full participants in the decision-making of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

4. 2006 Referral: Item 14. ACWC R. Report on the Review of the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns, Recommendation 2. That the Desirability of Theological Diversity in the Membership Composition of the ACWC Be Referred to the GANC. (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 17, 1164).

The Book of Order mandates that, "The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) shall give full expression to the rich diversity within its membership and shall provide means which will assure a greater inclusiveness leading to wholeness in its emerging life. Persons of all racial ethnic groups, different ages, both sexes, various disabilities, diverse geographical areas, different theological positions consistent with the Reformed tradition, as well as different marital conditions (married, single, widowed, or divorced) shall be guaranteed full participation and access to representation in the decision making of the church" (G-4.0403).

The General Assembly Nominating Committee (GANC) gives close attention to this provision of the church's Constitution, working carefully to ensure the broadest representation on all entities to which the GANC makes nominations. Of the constitutional categories of inclusiveness, "different theological positions consistent with the Reformed traditions" is the most difficult to determine. The GANC relies upon a careful reading of applications and appraisal forms to assess theological convictions and commitments. The committee continues to encourage persons from a broad range of theological positions to make themselves available for service on General Assembly entities.

In its nominations to service on the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns, the GANC has given particular attention to theological diversity, and will continue to monitor the diversity of the ACWC with regard to all aspects of G-4.0403.

H. Office of the General Assembly

1. 2000 Referral: Paragraph 12.049. Recommendation H. Encourage Use of Standards of Ethical Conduct in Leadership Training; Request OGA Include a Summary of Uses Made in Seminaries, Churches, Presbyteries, and Synods in a Report to the 215th General Assembly (2003) (Minutes, 2000, Part I, pp. 54, 83).

Response: A letter was sent to the clerks and executives of all governing bodies, as well as to deans and presidents of all PC(USA) seminaries, asking if the Standards of Ethical Conduct (Standards) approved by the PC(USA) in 1998 is being used in their particular areas of ministry and, if so, how. Responses were received from forty-eight presbyteries, five synods, and three seminaries.

A large majority of presbyteries (38 of 48) indicated that they are familiar with the Standards of Ethical Conduct and use them to at least some extent in their work with clergy, committees, and congregations. Only three presbyteries indicated that they were not familiar with the “Standards,” and eleven presbyteries indicated that the document is not used on a regular basis. Four presbyteries requested that copies of the Standards be sent to them so that they might study and distribute the document as appropriate.

Four of the five synods that responded indicated that they use the Standards to some extent; the response from one synod questioned whether clergy should be asked to sign the Standards each year. Of the seminaries that responded, one requested copies of the document to share with faculty, and the other two suggested that the use of the Standards be discussed at a future meeting of the Committee on Theological Education.

Middle governing bodies use the Standards in a variety of ways. The most common uses were for training committees on ministry, orienting new clergy and newly ordained clergy within presbyteries, and providing educational opportunities for presbyteries and congregations. A large number of presbyteries have used the Standards to train session and other church officers, and have found the document helpful in dealing with conflict between pastors and churches. Many presbyteries have incorporated part or all of the Standards into their manuals of operation (presbytery and COM manuals) or handbooks. In addition, the Standards has been used to provide training for investigative committees, interim pastors, clerks of session, and workshops on sexual misconduct. Some presbyteries have the Standards to be particularly helpful as a tool for working with boundary issues, especially with interim pastors and with pastors who have completed service in their churches and continue to live in the surrounding community. One of the presbytery stated clerks has used the standards as part of the curriculum for polity classes.

Five presbyteries have adopted the Standards as policy. Four presbyteries that use the Standards for training reported that there have been no instances of sexual misconduct within their bounds since the document had been approved or widely interpreted by the presbytery. One presbytery was honest enough to admit that copies of the Standards had laid undisturbed in a box for five years, but had since been found helpful for training on sexual ethics.

It appears as though the Standards of Ethical Conduct are used more in the life of presbyteries than in synods, but several synods reported that they use the document for training church officers, sessions, investigating committees, and interim pastor.

In summary, a small percentage of respondents indicated that they were either unfamiliar with the Standards of Ethical Conduct or had found little use for them. A large majority of presbyteries use the Standards on a regular basis and in a variety of ways. Those who find the document helpful believe that it has not been well promoted in the life of the church and might be helpful to others as well.

2. 2006 Referral: Item 05-20. On Amending D-10.0102, Accusation of Another—From the Presbytery of Santa Fe (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 38, 40, 427–9).

For the final response to this referral, see Item 04-27, p. 282.

I. Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation

2006 Referral: Item 08-01. On Clarifying the Practice of Our Theology of Call for Those Serving General Assembly Entities—From the Presbytery of Santa Fe. (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 36, 623–26).

The 217th General Assembly (2006) approved Item 08-01 and in so doing instructed the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation and other General Assembly level entities to review their policies and practices and to effect any needed changes to bring them into full compliance with the Book of Order (G-11.0410) and General Assembly policies so that every minister of the Word and Sacrament employed by them in any relationship shall have a call as defined by the Constitution of the church with full constitutional participation by the appropriate presbytery. This action also required changes in terms of call be shared with the presbytery of membership for their approval and the Board of Pensions; termination or settlement agreements be accessible to the presbytery’s COM; the entity present certification of full compliance to the 218th General Assembly (2008); and each entity provide a report to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly listing called positions together with full terms of call.

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation is abiding by the requirements of the Book of Order. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation has updated the Employee Handbook (February 2008) for its employees. The handbook contains an expanded section on ministers of Word and Sacrament, making explicit the policies and procedures included in this overture.

The Board of Trustees of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation reviewed the policy presented in the Employee Handbook (February 2008) and adopted those changes. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation employs six ministers of the Word and Sacrament. Of those six, five are employed as development officers and one is employed as associate for Church Relations.

This policy will be thoroughly communicated to all employees. Current ministers of the Word and Sacrament will be requested to affirm the existence of a current call or complete the process outlined to establish a call within thirty days of Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Foundation Board's adoption.

2006 Referral: Item 08-01. On Clarifying the Practice of Our Theology of Call for Those Serving General Assembly Entities—From the Presbytery of Santa Fe (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 36, 623–26).

Response: The 217th General Assembly (2006) approved Item 08-01 and in so doing instructed the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Investment and Loan Program, Inc., and other General Assembly level entities to review their policies and practices and to effect any needed changes to bring them into full compliance with the Book of Order (G-11.0410) and General Assembly policies so that every minister of the Word and Sacrament employed by them in any relationship shall have a call as defined by the Constitution of the church with full constitutional participation by the appropriate presbytery. This action also required changes in terms of call be shared with the presbytery of membership for their approval and the Board of Pensions; termination or settlement agreements be accessible to the presbytery's COM; the entity present certification of full compliance to the 218th General Assembly (2008); and each entity provide a report to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly listing called positions and together with full terms of call.

In practice, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Investment and Loan Program, Inc., is abiding by the requirements of the Book of Order. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Investment and Loan Program, Inc., contracts with the General Assembly Council to provide Human Resource Services for our employees. The General Assembly Council has rewritten the Staff Handbook (September 2007) for General Assembly Council employees. It includes an expanded section on ministers of Word and Sacrament, making explicit the policies and procedures included in this overture.

The Board of Directors of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Investment and Loan Program, Inc., has reviewed the policies presented in the Employee Handbook (August 2004). The statements of policy regarding ministers of Word and Sacrament are:

3.05 Ministers of Word and Sacrament

The nature of the relationship between persons ordained to Ministry of Word and Sacrament and their presbyteries is governed by the Book of Order. They are covered by all Personnel Policies except where specifically excluded by federal, state or local laws.

6.03 Manse/Housing Allowance

The Internal Revenue Code allows exempt level, ordained ministers to exclude from gross income for tax purposes, if designated in advance by the Employer, any housing allowance paid as part of compensation when that allowance is used for specified purposes. The responsibility for accurate estimates of the housing allowance and payment of applicable taxes rests solely with the employee.

For purposes of this policy, "housing" means housing and furnishings.

Housing allowances are to be used for expenses such as:

- a. rental of a home;
- b. purchase of a home, including down payment, mortgage, legal fees, fees for title search, installment payments, interest, taxes, fire and home liability insurance premiums, repairs, etc.;
- c. operating expenses of a home, other than costs for food or domestic help, such as utilities, house furnishings, attached garage, sidewalks, front and back yards.
- d. homeowner association dues.

Due to Internal Revenue Service requirements, the manse allowance must be designated by the Employer prior to the employee receiving the allowance (generally, before employment begins). The manse/housing allowance form is available from the Human Resources Department.

7.02 Credited Service

It is the policy of the Employer to credit years of service as an employee toward certain benefits eligibility.

Credited service includes all regular full-time and (pro-rated) part-time service on the staff of any Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) governing body (i.e., local Presbyterian church, middle governing body, General Assembly entity or its predecessor) or service with a partner church or ecumenical body in which the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) holds membership (i.e., Special Committee on Consultation on Church Union, National Council of Churches, World Council of Churches, World Alliance of Reformed Churches) and Presbyterian-related theological and educational institutions.

“Total credited service” is defined as the sum of all regular full-time service and pro-rated part-time service. Total credited service is used to determine the amount of personal leave to which the employee is entitled.

“Continuous credited service” is defined as the sum of all regular full-time service and pro-rated part-time service without a break in service. Continuous credited service is used to determine the amount of severance to which the employee is entitled.

“Break in service” is defined as a period of time during which the employee does not appear on the payroll of any Presbyterian Church (USA) governing body or entity. If the period of time during which the employee does not appear on the payroll is one year or less and there has been no intervening employer, service will be considered continuous.

Leave without pay will not count toward credited service.

The Board of Directors of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Investment and Loan Program approved the addition of the following three sections to the Employee Handbook of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Investment and Loan Program, Inc., to make explicit our commitment to a reformed theology of the call of ministers of Word and Sacrament.

3.05a. Terms of Call/Notification and Consultation with Presbytery

All Ministers of the Word and Sacrament of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), (“Minister,”) must have a written call before starting work, ordinarily in a form that includes:

- Description of goals and working relationships;
- Financial terms;
- Signature of the Minister;
- Signature of the presbytery of membership (“presbytery”); and
- Signature of the Employer.

Since ordination is not a qualification for any position, the terms of call and benefits for ministers employed will be established by the Employer and may or may not meet the presbytery minimums, but will be comparable to those offered to other staff in similar positions with the Employer.

Prior to the offer of employment, the Human Resources Department will contact the Minister candidate’s Committee on Ministry (COM) of the presbytery. Contact will be made through its stated clerk or executive presbyter to afford the presbytery the opportunity to communicate concerns about the candidate.

Prior to starting work, a Minister must consult with his or her COM and will be reminded by the Human Resources Department about the Minister’s obligation to request and obtain the presbytery’s approval of the terms of call.

The Human Resources Department will:

- Provide the Minister with an offer letter that includes the written call (see above-listed requirements);
- Copy the presbytery COM through the stated clerk or executive presbyter on the offer letter; and
- Ask the stated clerk or executive presbyter to notify the Human Resources Department of approval, making clear that the employment relationship will not start without receipt of approval from the presbytery.

Written calls will be prepared for existing Minister staff members and submitted with an updated position description when the annual performance review is submitted to the Human Resources Department.

During employment, the Human Resources Department will provide timely notification to the presbytery and the Board of Pensions (BOP) of any changes in the terms of call.

If during employment, the Employer becomes aware of any circumstances that might occasion discipline of a Minister under the Book of Order, the Human Resources Department will be informed and will notify and provide full information and cooperation to the presbytery’s COM, unless prohibited by applicable law.

Upon termination of employment of a Minister, the Human Resources Department will provide timely notice of the dissolution of the call to the presbytery. If the dissolution was disciplinary in nature, then the notice will include the cause of dissolution. Financial provisions related to termination or settlement agreements are changes in terms of call that the Human Resources Department will share with the presbytery and with the BOP on a timely basis. Upon request of the presbytery’s COM, the COM will be given access to all information contained in the Minister’s termination (separation) or settlement agreement, regardless of whether the agreement contains a confidentiality clause, unless prohibited by applicable law. The Director of Human Resources and/or a representative of the Legal Services Office will respond to inquiries of appropriate officers of the presbytery.

The Human Resources Department will submit salary information to the General Assembly for publication in the minutes.

Employment of a Minister remains at-will and may be terminated at any time with or without cause and with or without notice.

3.05b. Withholding

The Internal Revenue Code exempts exempt-level, ordained Minister staff members from mandatory withholding. Such Minister staff members may pay their income and self-employment taxes via quarterly installments sent directly to the Internal Revenue Service or via voluntary withholding which may be arranged with the Human Resources Department and the Payroll Department by completing Internal Revenue Service Form W-4 (Employee’s Withholding Allowance Certificate). It is the Minister staff member’s sole responsibility to complete Form W-4 if voluntary withholding is desired. If no such completed form is submitted to the Human Resources Department, no withholding will take place and the Minister staff member will be responsible to make any and all tax payments to the Internal Revenue Service directly. As with the manse/housing allowance form, the responsibility for accurate estimates and completion of Internal Revenue Service Form W-4 rests solely with the Minister staff member.

3.05c. Reporting of Disciplinary Matters

The Human Resources Department will report to the respective Minister's COM of presbytery through its stated clerk or executive presbyter any disciplinary actions for violation of the Employer's Anti-Discrimination and Anti-Harassment Policies, Sexual Misconduct Policy or Ethics Policy for Employees of the General Assembly Council.

Item 02-05

[The assembly approved Item 02-05. See p. 60.]

The Assembly Committee on Bills and Overtures has examined the Minutes of the 218th General Assembly (2008) for Thursday, June 26, 2008, and found that all has been done in compliance with Standing Rules. A copy of these minutes has been posted on the website and two printed copies have been posted on bulletin boards outside the meeting hall. The committee recommends approval of these minutes.

[The assembly approved Item 03-01. See p. 34.]

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly recommends that the 218th General Assembly (2008) confirm the following change in Section IV.C.6. of the Organization for Mission regarding the membership of the Board of Directors of the Presbyterian Historical Society from a maximum of “twelve” members to a maximum of “twenty-four” members:

“6. Board of Directors for the Presbyterian Historical Society

“b. The board of directors shall be composed of a minimum of eight and a maximum of ~~twelve~~ twenty-four persons. The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly shall elect and the General Assembly shall confirm the board. The members of the board of directors shall serve a four-year term and shall be eligible to serve one additional full or partial term.”

Rationale

The current Bylaws of the Presbyterian Historical Society indicate a minimum of eight and a maximum of twelve people to serve on the PHS board. The PHS board voted at its February 2008 meeting to recommend to the COGA that the maximum number of board members be changed to twenty-four in order to better serve the needs of the PHS. This action needs to be confirmed by the 218th General Assembly (2008).

[The assembly approved Item 03-02. See p. 34.]

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly recommends that the 218th General Assembly (2008) confirm the election of the following persons as members of the Board of the Presbyterian Historical Society:

Class of 2009

D’Agostino, Diane (Houston, Texas)—1st term
 Ellis, Margaret Holben (New York, New York)—1st term
 Schaefer, Joyce (Macon, Georgia)—1st term
 Kuykendall, John (Davidson, North Carolina)—2nd term of 1 year.
 Tobin, Myra (New York, New York)—1st term

Class of 2012

Allerton, Donald (Chicago, Illinois)—1st term
 Bay, Eugene (Vero Beach, Florida)—2nd term
 Callantine, Douglas S. (Abington, Pennsylvania)—2nd term
 Weeks, Louis (Williamsburg, Virginia)—1st term
 Ervin, Elizabeth (Morganton, North Carolina)—1st term
 Watermulder, Paul (Burlingame, California)—1st term

Item 03-03

[The assembly approved Item 03-03 with amendment. See p. 34.]

On Amending Standing Rules L.2. and 3., Amending and Suspending the Standing Rules—From the Presbytery of Flint River.

The Presbytery of Flint River overtures the 218th General Assembly (2008) of the PC(USA) to

1. Amend Standing Rule L.2. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“2. The Standing Rules of the General Assembly may be amended by a ~~two-thirds vote of the total enrollment majority vote of the commissioners present and voting.~~”

[~~2. Amend Standing Rule L.3. as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]~~

[~~“3. A motion to suspend the standing rules is not debatable and shall require a two-thirds vote of the total enrollment majority vote of the commissioners present and voting.”~~]

Rationale

Changes to standing rules currently require a 2/3 majority of the total commissioners enrolled, thus imposing an unrealistic constraint on the will of commissioners present at a given session.

OGA COMMENT ON ITEM 03-03

Comment on Item 03-03—From the Office of the General Assembly (OGA).

The overture recommends that the process for amending the Standing Rules be changed from a two-thirds vote to a simple majority. The Office of the General Assembly takes no position on that part of the overture. The overture also recommends that the process for suspending the Standing Rules be changed from a two-thirds vote to a simple majority. The OGA advises against this part of the overture. Suspending the Standing Rules of an assembly already in process should require a higher threshold than amendment. Request for suspension is not debatable and therefore does not allow a more informed deliberation that would be allowed in the amendment process.

*Item 03-04

[The assembly approved Item 03-04. See p. 34.]

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly recommends that the 218th General Assembly (2008) accept the invitation of the Presbytery of Detroit for the 221st General Assembly (2014) to meet in Detroit, Michigan, June 14–21, 2014.

Rationale

In accordance with the rotation specified in Standing Rule I.1.d., a presbytery in Region C (the Synods of Lincoln Trails, Covenant, and Living Waters) will host the 221st General Assembly (2014).

Staff of the Office of the General Assembly researched several cities in that area as potential sites for that assembly. The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly reviewed those findings and recommends Detroit as the best location for the assembly.

Detroit is the most economical of the cities we considered, with facilities and hotels that are well-suited to our needs. Detroit’s large convention center has more-than-ample space for the assembly plenary sessions, exhibit hall, committee meetings offices, group meals, worship services, etc. Downtown hotels can accommodate most assembly attendees at competitive rates.

The assembly last met in Detroit in 1980, and the Presbytery of Detroit is enthusiastic about the opportunity to host the assembly.

Item 03-05

[The assembly disapproved Item 03-05. See p. 34.]

On Amending the Book of Order to Provide Flexibility in Presbytery and Synod Membership—From the Presbytery of Beaver-Butler.

The Presbytery of Beaver-Butler overtures the 218th General Assembly (2008) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendments to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

1. Amend the first sentence of G-11.0101 as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

To vote to receive, by majority vote, existing and new presbyteries that have petitioned for synod membership.~~ Such presbyteries shall be formed in compliance with the requirements of G-7.0201 and G-11.0102 and be accountable to the synod within which they were created.”*

“b. Any synod that chooses to withdraw from the denomination shall forfeit all real property to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).”

Rationale

These changes to the Form of Government will honor the spirit of the Report of the Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church. These changes will accommodate the diverse belief systems, theological positions, and mission designs that currently exist within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and will encourage the kind of “flexible equilibrium” to which the task force calls the church (lines 807–808, The Final Report of the Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church).

The 213th General Assembly (2001) directed the Moderators of the 213th, 212th, and 211th General Assemblies (2001, 2000, 1999) to appoint a theological task force reflecting the theological and cultural diversity of the church to “lead the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in spiritual discernment of our Christian identity, in and for the 21st century ... . This discernment shall include but not be limited to issues of Christology, biblical authority and interpretation, ordination standards, and power” (Minutes, 2001, Part I, p. 29). One significant outcome from the task force involves allowing presbyteries and synods a certain amount of latitude (what the report calls flexible equilibrium [lines 807–808, The Final Report of the Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church]) in matters of polity.

“Our faith is in the God of Israel who raised Jesus Christ bodily from the dead. This is the one faith confessed by the people of God: ‘one Lord, one faith, ... one God and Father of all, who is above all and through all and in all.’ (Ephesians 4:5–6)” (lines 51–53, The Final Report of the Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church)

“It is by following Jesus Christ, as attested for us in Scripture, that the unity of our faith will be made visible today as it has in the past” (lines 58–60, The Final Report of the Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church).

Jesus Christ alone is head of the church. Jesus alone is the source of the church’s unity.

The Book of Order, G-1.0100c, affirms that: “Christ gives to his Church its faith and life, its unity and mission, its officers and ordinances.” The task force report reminds us that our unity is rooted in Christ and that the church’s purity does not spring from “technical or legal means,” but from Jesus Christ. Attempting to keep the Church unified and pure without providing freedom for Christ’s Spirit to move is not helpful.

Section G-1.0301(1)(a) affirms that: “‘God alone is Lord of the conscience, and hath left it free from the doctrines and commandments of men which are in anything contrary to his Word, or beside it, in matters of faith or worship.’” Flexibility in presbytery and synod membership provides options for theological and missional partnerships not possible under the rigid geographical criteria that worked well in other times.

Section G-3.0401d affirms that God is calling us “... to a new openness to God’s continuing reformation of the Church ecumenical, that it might be a more effective instrument of mission in the world.” The task force points out that “there are many signs that, on a changing cultural landscape, old models are breaking down and new forms of denominationalism in the United States are developing at local, regional, and national levels” (lines 907–908, The Final Report of the Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church). These new forms cannot emerge from strict adherence to existing structures; they must be permitted and nurtured by a denomination willing to seek flexibility and equilibrium.

The intended purpose of flexible equilibrium in presbytery and synod membership is to provide safe opportunity for congregations and judicatories to express shared, deeply held convictions. To seek flexibility regarding essential belief, as the task force does, without providing a corresponding freedom of association based on those very convictions is contradictory and ultimately self-defeating.

Under a more flexible system of presbytery and synod membership, the power of the upper judicatories is diminished (for example, in discipline and enforcement) and that of lower judicatories (congregations and presbyteries) increases.

A flexible plan of presbytery and synod membership provides an affirmation of the missional church's understanding of non-hierarchical structures and ministries. It affirms the congregation as the primary agent of mission and ministry and the presbytery as secondary agent for the support, encouragement, and accountability of congregations and pastors. Any other judicatories are tertiary agents for the support, encouragement, and accountability of the presbytery.

Allowing congregation's flexibility in their presbytery membership, and presbyteries in their synods membership, provides the basis for mission and ministry under a generous and broad orthodox creedal Reformed Christianity. Membership flexibility acknowledges the current era of diverse styles and forms while maintaining the historic unity of the church.

Competing factions within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) appeal to "Historic Presbyterianism." Flexible equilibrium is, by contrast, future-oriented while at the same time providing an affirmation of "Presbyterianism" in its connectional-accountable sense. It acknowledges the need for one another while rejecting both institutional coercion and radical ecclesiastical autonomy.

A flexible plan for presbytery and synod membership allows congregations and judicatories to work for reformation and renewal in local congregations and in presbyteries only as they serve the local congregation. This flexibility allows the denomination to focus on positive change rather than defensive battles.

For these reasons, we urge the 218th General Assembly (2008) to approve this overture.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 03-05

Advice on Item 03-05—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 218th General Assembly (2008) to disapprove Item 03-05.

Rationale

[The present overture is substantially similar to Item 05-23 submitted to the 217th General Assembly (2006) by the Presbytery of Beaver Butler. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advised, and the General Assembly at that time disapproved, that item (see Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 38, 40). The committee refers to that advice in response to the present overture (see Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 433–37).]

The overture proposes to redefine a presbytery as "all the churches and ministers of the Word and Sacrament who have chosen to affiliate based on geographic, theological, missional, or other considerations of importance to those congregations." Similarly, it redefines a synod as not fewer than three presbyteries "who have chosen to affiliate based on geographic, theological, missional, or other considerations of importance to those presbyteries" [emphasis added]. The overture would delete the specific provisions of G-11.0103j and G-12.0102k empowering presbyteries and synods to locate, organize, unite, and divide congregations and presbyteries. It would replace those provisions with new sections empowering congregations and presbyteries to select affiliation based on these same considerations. Finally, two new sections are proposed for addition to G-8.0401 that would require presbyteries or synods seeking to withdraw from the denomination to forfeit all real property to the next higher governing body.

These changes challenge basic assumptions about the relationships between the parts of the church, assumptions that have characterized Presbyterian polity for many generations. First, under the terms of this proposal, congregations could change affiliation with presbyteries, and presbyteries with synods, based on agreement between the affiliating bodies on whatever issues of theology or polity were under controversy at the moment of the decision. Thus the historic relationships between congregations in a presbytery, or presbyteries in a synod, could be replaced by shifting patterns of uncertain allegiances founded on opinion and like-mindedness. If such language is approved, there would be nothing to prevent a congregation or presbytery from realigning itself repeatedly over a period of years as its leadership changes and as controversies in the church come and go. To the extent that our relations with one another are strained by geographic distance, we weaken the missional connectedness of the church.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution notes that the Constitution poses no impediment to the formation of networks based on shared concerns of theology and mission. Such networks may, and indeed do, share resources and gather for mutual encouragement. They are not geographically bound, and are not subject to the requirements of the Constitution that pertain to governing bodies.

Second, this proposal would reverse the flow of authority for the creation, location, union, and/or dissolution of congregations and presbyteries. Historically and currently, the responsibility for such decisions has rested with presbyteries (for congregations) and synods (for presbyteries). Our polity has arrived at this arrangement because of basic commitments to the notions that “a larger part of the church ... shall govern a smaller” (G-1.0400), and that each governing body is “responsible for the mission and government of the church throughout its geographical district” (G-11.0103, regarding the presbytery; see G-12.0102 for synods, and G-13.0103 for the General Assembly). If the proposed language is approved, it could complicate the ability of presbyteries and synods to structure their work on the basis of their sense of God’s call by allowing congregations and presbyteries to disaffiliate and affiliate at will.

Third, this overture has the effect of greatly expanding the complications posed by the existence of nongeographic presbyteries. Currently, synods may create nongeographic presbyteries “to meet the mission needs of identified racial ethnic or immigrant congregations” (see G-12.0102k). The power of the synod to form nongeographic presbyteries is thus limited to application in communities of non-majority ethnicity and language. The approval of the proposed language greatly expands the grounds on which nongeographic presbyteries could be organized, thereby significantly increasing the number of congregations whose presbytery membership is disconnected from their physical location and mission context. Such physical disconnection makes it more difficult for the presbytery to fulfill its mandate to “... be responsible for the mission and government of the church throughout its geographical district” (G-11.0103a). It may also create conflicts over mission that do not presently exist, such as competition between geographic and nongeographic presbyteries over the location of new church developments or the relocation of existing congregations.

Fourth, Chapter XIII of the Book of Order currently contains no provision permitting the General Assembly to organize nongeographic synods that would equate to the provisions of G-12.0102k. Thus the language of the overture is without clear grounding in the constitutional authority of the General Assembly.

Fifth, the property provisions of the overture are unnecessary, in view of the control of G-8.0201 over the discussion of all church property. Thus these provisions are at best superfluous, and may potentially be confusing in case of legal challenge.

Finally, the overture speaks of “withdrawing” congregations and presbyteries. While this language has become part of common parlance in the church, it is not constitutional. Congregations do not “withdraw”; they are dismissed to other churches “whose organization is conformed to the doctrines and order of this church” (see Anderson v. Florida, PJC, Minutes, PCUS, 1974, Part I, pp.119–21; and G-11.0103i, G-15.0203b). The Constitution contains no provision for dismissing presbyteries to other churches. The introduction of the language of “withdrawal” shifts the focus of action onto the congregation (or presbytery) seeking to depart the fellowship of the church, and away from the authority of the next higher governing body to dismiss. In so doing, it clouds basic principles of Presbyterian order and government: the authority of the governing body to determine its membership (G-1.0302), the right of the larger part of the church to govern a smaller in matters of controversy (G-1.0400), and the right of a higher governing body to review and control of a lower (G-4.0301f).

As the committee noted in its response to Item 05-23 in 2006:

At stake here is not merely a style of polity but a central ecclesiological question: is the church finally a voluntary association of the like-minded, or is it called into being by the sovereign God through the grace of Jesus Christ, who gathered to himself persons of vastly different persuasions, background, and lifestyle?

The effect of this overture will be to exacerbate the proclivity of the church to dissolve itself into associations based on affinity. This proclivity is antithetical to the call of God to engage Christ’s mission together, to honor the critiques of brothers and sisters of faith who disagree, and to plan and work together to live out our calling to be “the sign in and for the world of the new reality God is making available to people in Jesus Christ” (G-3.0200).

Item 03-06

[The assembly disapproved Item 03-06. See p. 34.]

On Examining Our Current Synod Structure—From the Presbytery of Central Washington.

The Presbytery of Central Washington overtures the 218th General Assembly (2008) to direct the Office of the General Assembly and the General Assembly Council to conduct an examination of our current synod structure with the intention to streamline the current synod structure into fewer synods, covering larger geographic areas.

Rationale

Under the current structure, there exists duplication of various ministries. Fewer synods, covering a larger geographic area, would both reduce the current workforce needed to maintain existing synods and free individuals for other areas of ministry.

Given the budget constraints that our denomination is facing at all levels, streamlining the synods could create an overall cost savings.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 03-06

Advice on Item 03-06—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 218th General Assembly (2008) that, if the 218th General Assembly (2008) believes that the intent of Item 03-06 is appropriate, the proposed language is clear and consistent with that intent. The committee notes, however, that the examination contemplated in this overture does not in itself constitute a change to the current synod structure of the church, and that any changes in that structure must be approved by the General Assembly (G-13.0103m).

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution further advises the General Assembly that there is a history of study of the question of the structure and viability of synods.

In 1993, Overture 93-2 from the Presbytery of Southern New England proposed the creation of a special committee to

1. create a plan to eliminate synods and to divide synod property between presbyteries and the General Assembly;
2. design a process by which presbyteries might reevaluate their boundaries and mission responsibilities;
3. design a plan for regional judicial commissions to hear appeals from presbyteries; and
4. recommend necessary changes to the Book of Order. (See Minutes, 1993, Part I, p.857.)

The overture was not approved by the 205th General Assembly (1993) (Ibid, p. 97).

The 208th General Assembly (1996) appointed a nine-member Special Committee on Middle Governing Bodies to examine the relationships between and among the national offices, synods, and presbyteries; develop and review studies of middle governing bodies for effectiveness; and seek new paradigms for prioritizing, evaluating, visioning, resourcing, and partnering. (Minutes, 1996, Part I, p. 200)

The special committee offered several recommendations to the 211th General Assembly (1999) including that the PC(USA) move to a three-governing-body system. The committee is convinced that a flexible and simplified three-governing-body system will offer more opportunities and incentives for direct linkage between and among General Assembly, presbyteries, and congregations. (Minutes, 1999, Part I, p. 526)

The General Assembly took action on some aspects of the special committee's report, but did not act to move in the direction of eliminating synods, opting instead to receive and commend the report for study.

Should the 218th General Assembly (2008) find the present overture an acceptable course of action, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution commends to the Office of the General Assembly and the General Assembly Council the full report of the Special Committee on Middle Governing Bodies for study.

[The assembly approved Item 03-07 with amendment. See p. 34.]

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly recommends that the 218th General Assembly (2008) direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendments to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

1. Amend G-12.0102k as follows: [Text to be added is shown as italic.]

“k. to organize new presbyteries, to divide, unite, or otherwise combine presbyteries or portions of presbyteries previously existing, and, with the concurrence of existing presbyteries, to create nongeographic presbyteries in order to meet the mission needs (G-12.0102a; G-11.0103a) of identified racial ethnic or immigrant congregations; subject to the approval of the General Assembly. Such presbyteries shall be formed in compliance with the requirements of G-7.0201 and G-11.0102 and be accountable to the synod within which they were created. When such mission needs arise inside a congregation that lies within a synod lacking such a nongeographic presbytery, that synod may permit, with the approval of the General Assembly and unless some legal or ecclesiastical issue would prohibit, that congregation to join a nongeographic presbytery inside the bounds of another synod with the consent of that other synod, the geographic presbytery, and the nongeographic presbytery; The creation of such presbyteries should be formed where there is a need on the basis of language only, and that there be a sunset clause (end date) added to each formation of a nongeographic presbytery.”

“In each presbytery the minimum number of ministers shall be ~~twelve~~ ten and the minimum number of churches with duly constituted sessions (G-7.0202a) shall likewise be ~~twelve~~ ten. In an isolated area, upon recommendation of the synod, the General Assembly may permit a presbytery to be organized with fewer than these minimums, provided that there shall be at least five ministers in each presbytery.”

Rationale

These recommendations are in response to the following: 2006 Referral: Item 05-22. On Establishing a Committee or Task Force to Conduct a Feasibility Study for Creating a Nongeographic Korean American Synod—From the Presbytery of Midwest Hanmi (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 430–33).

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) believes that the PC(USA) is at a “tipping point” in relation to whether new immigrant communities will be welcomed into the life and ministry of our denomination or go the route of creating separate denominations based on ethnic affiliation. How we respond to this challenge over the next decade will determine whether there is one major Presbyterian church inclusive of the multicultural diversity of this nation or many different Presbyterian churches, each organized along different racial and ethnic lines.

The COGA believes God is calling us to the option of being a truly united, multicultural church and that these amendments to our Book of Order can make a significant contribution to that reality. It would be a tragic mistake for the PC(USA) not to allow the flexibility in our polity at this point in history to enable various new immigrant communities to make the transition into the life and ministry of the PC(USA).

This denomination has a long history of using nongeographic, language-based presbyteries as a way to welcome new immigrant communities and to achieve long-term unity in the church. In the nineteenth century, German and Czech language nongeographic presbyteries made this transition possible for immigrants from parts of the world where English was not the language and Anglo-Saxon culture was unfamiliar. The same is proving true in the 20th and 21st centuries relative to Korean-language presbyteries. To make these nongeographic, language presbyteries more effective, the 217th General Assembly (2006) asked COGA, in consultation with the leaders of those presbyteries and the National Korean Presbyterian Council, to consult and bring proposals to the 218th General Assembly (2008) as to whether a Korean-language synod or other adjustments to our polity related to nongeographic presbyteries might make this approach more effective.

A very helpful gathering among these parties was held in December 2006, and it was agreed that the move to a Korean-language, nongeographic synod was probably not the best way to achieve this goal. Instead, it was felt that the best way forward would be to amend the current Form of Government to reduce the number of congregations required to constitute a language-based presbytery from twelve to ten and to add a provision that would allow congregations in synods where no such presbytery exists to affiliate with a language-based presbytery in an adjacent synod, with concurrence of the geographic presbytery involved and both synods.

These minor adjustments to our polity would go a long way toward making it easier and providing options for congregations that believe a nongeographic, language presbytery would strengthen their mission and ministry. It would also help to assure that Korean congregations could find a welcome home in the PC(USA). Further, it would remove the current irregular status of a number of congregations who are members of nongeographic presbyteries but are located outside the bounds of the synod of which that presbytery is a part.

We are in a time when a growing number of Korean American congregations are finding a welcome home in our geographic presbyteries and many are establishing English language, multicultural congregations. At the same time, there is also continuing immigration from Korea and a large number of Korean Americans who find Korean-language congregations and presbyteries helpful to their faithful ministry and to their long-term relationship with the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). Both of these groups represent numerical and spiritual growing edges of the PC(USA).

Especially at the 218th General Assembly (2008), when we will be taking action on a covenant agreement with the Korean Presbyterian Church in America, it is important that we show flexibility and welcome to Korean American congregations that seek a home in the PC(USA), one that also welcomes and honors the language and culture of these congregations. These amendments to our Form of Government will do just that without making any significant deviation in the patterns already enshrined in our Constitution.

The PC(USA) will be a stronger and more faithful church if we take the risks to welcome Korean Americans and other immigrant groups fully into the life of our church, even if it requires flexibility in our polity. We believe these changes will both make us a stronger and more faithful church and allow us to reach out and enlarge our church by welcoming more Korean Americans into our ministry. We urge the 218th General Assembly (2008) to approve these amendments and recommend them to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 03-07

Item 03-07 is in response to the following referral: 2006 Referral: Item 05-22: On Establishing a Committee or Task Force to Conduct a Feasibility Study for Creating a Non-Geographic Korean American Synod—Midwest Hanmi (Minutes, 2006, Part I, p. 430).

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 218th General Assembly (2008) that Item 03-07 presents issues of constitutional amendment that the assembly should consider.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly recommends two constitutional amendments to enhance the effectiveness of Korean-speaking nongeographic presbyteries. The first proposed amendment would regularize, and provide certain protections for, some existing situations where congregations belong to non-geographic presbyteries in other synods than the ones in which they reside. The second proposed amendment would decrease the minimum number of ministers and churches needed to form a presbytery.

The PC(USA) and its predecessors employed nongeographic presbyteries since early in the 20th century without the clear constitutional authority for creating them until 2002 when the church approved a constitutional amendment to do so.

The first proposed amendment by Item 03-07 raises a constitutional issue by its silence on the necessity of obtaining General Assembly concurrence in the transfer of the congregation. Two constitutional provisions apply to the transfer of congregations.

Section G-13.0103m gives the General Assembly the responsibility “to organize new synods and to divide, unite, or otherwise combine synods or portions of synods previously existing.”

Section G-13.0103n gives the General Assembly the responsibility “to approve the organization, division, uniting, or combining of presbyteries or portions of presbyteries by synods.”

Because of these responsibilities, the General Assembly’s approval is necessary whenever a congregation is transferred from one presbytery to another across synod boundaries.

When a congregation that is located within the bounds of one synod joins a presbytery that is within the bounds of another synod, there are serious implications for each synod and for the geographic presbytery involved. Such a transfer would enlarge the district of the nongeographic presbytery, increasing the overlap with the districts of the geographic presbyteries. Because presbyteries are responsible for the mission and government of the church throughout their geographical districts, the overlapping of districts raises the potential for conflict.

The absence of a stated time limitation on the cross-boundary membership, and the absence of a requirement that the cross-boundary relationship be periodically renewed, each suggest that the cross-boundary relationship is intended to continue for the life of the nongeographic presbytery or until the congregation seeks to be transferred to a geographic presbytery. The lack of a clear end date for the relationship necessitates that all governing bodies involved should give their assent at the beginning of the cross-boundary relationship.

The proposed amendment would make the synod where the congregation is located the key governing body to permit the cross-boundary relationship of the congregation to the nongeographic presbytery. That synod would be required to verify that the geographic presbytery where the congregation is located, the nongeographic presbytery, and the synod where the nongeographic presbytery is located all agree to the relationship across boundaries.

In order to clarify the necessity of General Assembly involvement in such a transfer across synod boundaries, the proposed amendment would be strengthened by inserting the phrase “, with the approval of the General Assembly and” after the phrase “that synod may permit.” The first proposed amendment would then read:

“k. to organize new presbyteries, to divide, unite, or otherwise combine presbyteries or portions of presbyteries previously existing, and, with the concurrence of existing presbyteries, to create nongeographic presbyteries in order to meet the mission needs (G-12.0102a; G-11.0103a) of identified racial ethnic or immigrant congregations; subject to the approval of the General Assembly. Such presbyteries shall be formed in compliance with the requirements of G-7.0201 and G-11.0102 and be accountable to the synod within which they were created. When such mission needs arise inside a congregation that lies within a synod lacking such a nongeographic presbytery, that synod may permit, with the approval of the General Assembly and] unless some legal or ecclesiastical issue would prohibit, that congregation to join a nongeographic presbytery inside the bounds of another synod with the consent of that other synod, the geographic presbytery, and the nongeographic presbytery;”

Such an amendment would additionally require the synod of the nongeographic presbytery to obtain the approval of the General Assembly in order to establish the cross-boundary relationship.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution has concerns about the potential for conflicts across multiple boundaries implicit in a proposed amendment such as the one above. The proposed amendment implicitly requires the governing bodies to reach agreements on those areas of potential conflict they can anticipate before establishing the cross-boundary relationship.

Although nongeographic presbyteries are not the normative way in which presbyteries are constituted within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), the proposal from COGA, with the amendment suggested herein, would ensure that such presbyteries are approved when there is a valid mission purpose that has the approval of the General Assembly, two synods, and two presbyteries.

The proposal from COGA is an alternative to the prospect of a constitutional amendment that would authorize nongeographic synods, and do not expand the grounds on which nongeographic presbyteries could be organized.

The second proposal would amend G-11.0102 to reduce the minimum numbers of ministers and churches with duly constituted sessions in a presbytery from twelve to ten.

The only time that the ACC has commented on G-11.0102 was in 2001 when it advised the assembly to insert the words “with duly constituted sessions” after “churches.” At that time, the ACC did not comment on the number twelve, and does not appear to have reviewed whether the number should be changed.

The second sentence of G-11.0102 provides that: “In an isolated area, upon recommendation of the synod, the General Assembly may permit a presbytery to be organized with fewer than these minimums, provided that there shall be at least five ministers in each presbytery.” It is evident that even before the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) constitutionally regularized the formation of nongeographic presbyteries, the PC(USA) granted its General Assembly the power to permit flexibility in the minimum number of churches and ministers in a presbytery; the minimum below which not even the General Assembly could permit a presbytery to be formed was five ministers.

The ACC finds that the Form of Government should and does state a minimum number of ministers and churches with duly constituted sessions in a presbytery. The amendment proposed by COGA does not change the actual lower limit, and ensures that there would be at least five ministers in a presbytery.

If the 218th General Assembly (2008) believes that the intent of Item 03-07 is appropriate, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises that the first proposed constitutional amendment should be altered to conform to this advice, and that the language proposed for the second proposed constitutional amendment is clear and consistent with that intent.

ACREC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 03-07

Advice and Counsel on Item 03-07—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC).

Item 03-07. On Amendment of G-11.0102 and G-12.0102k Regarding Non-Geographic Presbyteries.

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) advises that this item be approved, with the following proposed amendment:

Add a sentence to the proposed amendment from the Committee of the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) to G-12.0102k as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“k. to organize new presbyteries, to divide, unite, or otherwise combine presbyteries or portions of presbyteries previously existing, and, with the concurrence of existing presbyteries, to create nongeographic presbyteries in order to meet the mission needs (G-12.0102a; G-11.0103a) of identified racial ethnic or immigrant congregations; subject to the approval of the General Assembly. Such presbyteries shall be formed in compliance with the requirements of G-7.0201 and G-11.0102 and be accountable to the synod within which they were created. When such mission needs arise inside a congregation that lies within a synod lacking such a nongeographic presbytery, that synod may permit, unless some legal or ecclesiastical issue would prohibit, that congregation to join a nongeographic presbytery inside the bounds of another synod with the consent of that other synod, the geographic presbytery, and the nongeographic presbytery[;] [The creation of such presbyteries should be formed where there is a need on the basis of language only, and that there be a sunset clause (end date) added to each formation of a nongeographic presbytery.]

Rationale

The ACREC believes that the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is called to be a multiracial, multicultural community of faith, reflecting the vast diversity of God’s human family. While we recognize that the diversity of language and culture bring challenges that the church is not always prepared to address, we believe the church should always be striving to live into this vision. The creation of nongeographic presbyteries on the basis of language is acknowledged as a compromise. It facilitates the life of immigrant congregations, but creates an institutional barrier to the inclusive welcome of all people in the life of geographic presbyteries. It is our fervent hope that this request from Korean congregations serves to remind the larger church that living into our vision of becoming a more diverse community of faith will require the larger church to change in ways that will enable greater participation of diverse communities in the life of the church as a whole.

The proposed amendment offered by ACREC are offered to underscore the transitional nature of language-specific, non-geographic presbyteries. The nongeographic, Korean language-specific presbyteries serve to facilitate the greater participation of immigrant congregations in the larger, connectional life of the church.

However, nongeographic presbyteries pose certain challenges to living into the vision of becoming a multiracial, multicultural church.

In the life of every immigrant congregation, there is a generation whose first language is English. Both the non-geographic presbytery and the geographic presbyteries must be intentional about supporting and nurturing the full participation of emerging English-speaking ministries and second and third generation pastors who are English dominant who may be better served by relating to the larger church through geographic presbyteries.

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 03-07

Advice and Counsel on Item 03-07—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC).

Item 03-07 is a referral on amending G-11.0102 and G-12.0102k regarding non-geographic presbyteries.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns concurs with the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC)’s advice and counsel.

Rationale

Understanding that non-geographic presbyteries are organized primarily for language purposes for a limited time, ACWC concurs with ACREC's comments, and feels it is an appropriate compromise at this time. The ACWC understands this is an active and ongoing effort to transition from specific language presbyteries to becoming fully inclusive geographic presbyteries in the near future. Division is not intended as a permanent solution. Unity in Christ is the goal and enriches our ability to be "the provisional demonstration of what God intends for all of humanity" (Book of Order, G-3.0200). Permanent non-geographic presbyteries pose challenges to our becoming an inclusive, multiracial, multicultural church. The vision of the beloved community requires compassion but also reconciling work.

The ordination of women and their leadership in governing bodies at all levels of the church is of particular concern for the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns. The Book of Order mandate for the ordination of women needs to be fulfilled when organizing language specific presbyteries. The Book of Order, G-14.0221, states, "Every congregation shall elect men and women from among its active members, giving fair representation to persons of all ages and of all racial ethnic backgrounds and to persons with disabilities who are members of that congregation, to the office of elder and to the office of deacon (if used in the congregation)." Korean language congregations and presbyteries do not call many women clergy. Korean women clergy have shared in forums and consultations with ACWC their frustrations and difficulties. Generational differences profoundly influence the needs of these congregations.

On Transferring Funding of Items from the Per Capita Budget to the Mission Budget—From the Presbytery of Indian Nations.

The Presbytery of Indian Nations overtures the 218th General Assembly (2008) of the Presbyterian Church (USA) to do the following:

1. Transfer any funding of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)'s involvement in ecumenical and ecumenical agency relationships from the Per Capita budget of the Office of the General Assembly to the Mission budget of the General Assembly, beginning with budgets for 2009. The per capita apportionment for 2009 shall be adjusted downward accordingly.

2. Instruct the General Assembly Council and the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly to initiate a study of the Per Capita budget to determine, prior to the 219th General Assembly (2010), all other items funded by the Per Capita budget that do not constitute "Office of the General Assembly operating expenses," or "General Assembly meeting expenses of commissioners," and thus should be rightly transferred to the Mission budget.

[Committee Action Financial Implications: (2008): $0; (2009): $0; (2010): $0 (Mission)]

Rationale

The Book of Order provides for per capita budgets to include funding as follows:

"... The General Assembly shall pay the expenses of commissioners who are elected by the presbyteries to attend the meetings of the General Assembly. Per capita funds may be used by each governing body to pay such expenses" (G-9.0308).

"Each governing body above the session shall prepare a budget for its operating expenses, including administrative personnel, and may fund it with a per capita apportionment among the particular churches within its bounds" [emphasis added] (G 9.0404d).

Any reasonable reading of the above Book of Order references would conclude that contributions to ecumenical bodies, along with ecumenical and ecumenical agency relations expenses, do not properly fall under the category of items to be included in a per capita budget, irregardless of the use that the ecumenical bodies might make of the funds. The Book of Order allows a governing body only "its" operating expenses to be funded with a per capita apportionment.

In addition, the original purpose of many of the ecumenical agencies to which the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) belongs was to promote unity in Christian doctrine and mutual recognition of ministries. Increasingly, these same ecumenical agencies have changed their primary focus away from building Christian unity toward advocating for policies that may or may not be consistent with the policy of the PC(USA) or her member churches. In the case of the National Council of Churches of Christ, denominations and other religious groups are no longer even the primary source of funds, yet the NCCC claims to be a “religious” organization. Because these agencies have shifted their focus towards political action, termed “justice advocacy,” it is appropriate that they be funded under the mission budget, where the church normally funds advocacy activities, rather than the per capita budget, which is intended to pay for the administrative costs of the Office of the General Assembly.

Shifting the ecumenical agencies’ funding from the per capita budget will likely strengthen support of that budget by moving it closer to its original purpose and by providing relief of conscience to those not in support of the ecumenical agencies’ political agenda. At the same time, it will afford supporters of those agencies the opportunity to designate mission contributions toward their support.

There are other expenses currently paid from the per capita budget that should be evaluated to determine if they are properly included in that budget. These include, but are not limited to

- Expenses associated with supporting the Presbyterian Historical Society.
- Expenses associated with the General Assembly Council (GAC), which oversees the mission budget.
- Expenses associated with the GAC Administration, including the office of the Executive Director of the GAC, which is related to functions included in the mission budget.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 03-08

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 218th General Assembly (2008) regarding Item 03-08 with the following comment.

The overture raises the issue of the appropriate use of funds raised for the per capita budget; it specifically seeks to transfer funding for involvement in ecumenical and ecumenical agency relationships from the General Assembly’s per capita budget to its mission budget by 2009. It further calls for beginning prior to the 219th General Assembly (2010) an inquiry by the General Assembly Council (GAC) and the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) into other uses of per capita resources.

The funding of certain ecclesiastical expenses of the church through the per capita budget of the General Assembly as an equitable expression of the church’s essential unity has a long history in American Presbyterianism, going back to an apportionment plan approved by the Synod of Philadelphia in the 1730s. A General Assembly “plan of mileage” to cover the expenses of commissioners to the General Assembly by the mid 1800s is an early illustration of the church’s sharing specific costs of functions of the whole church. As the responsibilities of the General Assembly have grown and been developed by the church over the last 250 years, its per capita budget has come to include a wider range of ecclesiastical expenses.

In particular the General Assembly has responsibility for providing for ecumenical expenses as it serves the church in fulfillment of the constitutional statement that “[t]he Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) seeks to manifest more visibly the unity of the church of Jesus Christ and will be open to opportunities for conversation, cooperation, and action with other ecclesiastical and secular groups” (G-15.0101). “The General Assembly is the highest governing body of this church and is representative of the unity of the synods, presbyteries, sessions, and congregations of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)” (G-13.0101), and it has the power and responsibility “to establish and maintain those ecumenical relations that will enlarge the life and mission of the church” (G-13.0103).

The Form of Government connects this polity understanding of the unity of the church expressed by the General Assembly to a deeper and more theological constitutional awareness of the significance of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) living within the whole Body of Christ:

Visible oneness, by which a diversity of persons, gifts, and understandings is brought together, is an important sign of the unity of God’s people. It is also a means by which that unity is achieved. Further, while divisions into different denominations do not destroy this unity, they do obscure it for both the Church and the world. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), affirming its historical continuity with the whole Church of Jesus Christ, is committed to the reduction of that obscurity and is willing to seek and to maintain communion and community with all other branches of the one, catholic Church. (Book of Order, G-4.0203)

It is helpful, then, that General Assembly Minutes show that care has been taken to describe how per capita funding of the range of its ecclesiastical expenses is appropriate for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.):

When Presbyteries, synods, and the General Assembly meet, they are conducting the legislative or judicial business of the Church and incur necessary expenses. There are also necessary administrative expenses involved which enable these legislative and judicial functions to be performed. All these expenses should be shared throughout the church because every one who is a [Presbyterian] shares in the benefits of this system of government.... (GAPJC, Westminster Church v. Presbytery of Detroit, Minutes, UPCUSA, 1976, Part I, p. 229)

In 1995 the following definition of per capita showing its theological significance for the life of the church was approved:

“Per capita is an opportunity for all communicant members of the Presbyterian Church through the governing bodies to participate equally, responsibly, and interdependently by sharing the cost of coordination and evaluation of mission; of performing ecclesiastical, legislative, and judicial functions that identify a Reformed church, while at the same time strengthening the sense of community among all Presbyterians.” (Minutes, 1995, Part I, p. 301)

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution notes that regarding General Assembly ecumenical involvements on behalf of the whole church, it has been Presbyterian practice for many years to fund its contributions to the work of ecumenical agencies of which it is a member through the per capita budget:

1. There is an historically recognized difference between defraying the core costs of ecumenical bodies (paying for delegates and core operations) and the mission programs of those agencies. In the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) the per capita budget has supported those core costs while the General Assembly mission budget has supported ecumenical mission programs.

2. The Organization for Mission require that the expenses of the Stated Clerk [as permanent ecumenical representative of the church, IV.B.2.G.], members of the Ecumenical Staff Team, and the General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations [IV.C.7.e.] be funded through the per capita budget.

The question of what constitutes appropriate use of per capita funds is not new. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution notes that traditionally the church has been reluctant to define either too broadly or too narrowly ecclesiastical and operating expenses.

In 1952, the General Assembly approved the principle that per capita apportionment be used “only for the necessary ecclesiastical expenses that its organizations may effectively function” (Minutes, UPCUSA, 1952, Part I, p.262). The statement did not, however, delineate what those “necessary ecclesiastical expenses” were or what “organizations” were to be included.

In 1977, the General Assembly Mission Council of the United Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A. responded to a referral on the general subject of per capita with a reaffirmation of the 1952 policy, supported by the following comments:

Sometimes judicatories succumb to the temptation to fund some mission program or project by the per capita method because of its reliability. This appears to be a result of the decision to follow a policy other than that adopted by the General Assembly rather than to any lack of clarity as to the meaning of the General Assembly policy.

Questions have been raised from time to time as to the appropriateness of supporting certain expenditures from General Assembly per capita funds. Because there are so few of these, and because there is a continuing arena for review, it appears that even in these cases the clarity and reliability of current policy is affirmed (Minutes, UPCUSA, 1977, pp. 412-415).

In 1989, Overture 89-28 (Presbytery of Maumee Valley) and Overture 89-39 (Presbytery of Northern Waters) would have restricted use of per capita funds to administrative costs within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), moving contributions to ecumenical organizations from the per capita budget to the mission budget. In keeping with advice from the General Assembly Council that these overtures would “have a serious detrimental effect in the PC(USA) and its ecumenical relations” first of all by “put[ting] in jeopardy basic responsibilities of membership in ecumenical bodies,” the General Assembly took no action (Minutes, 1989, Part I, p. 329).

In 1991, Overture 90-101 (Presbytery of Western Reserve) would have amended G-15.0102 to state clearly that per capita apportionment funds may be used to pay expenses of delegates attending meetings of ecumenical bodies, and that other ecumenical expenses shall be paid from mission funds. The overture was not approved by the assembly. In its advice, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution noted that ... it has been the common practice of both former denominations (Presbyterian Church in the United States and the United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America), and that it is current practice as cited in the Manual of the General Assembly (Standing Rule 32.q.), to use per capita moneys to pay expenses of delegates to meetings of ecumenical bodies. Therefore, it is not necessary to amend the Constitution for this purpose (Minutes, 1991, Part I, p. 907).

03 ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON GENERAL ASSEMBLY PROCEDURES

The advisory committee further believes that it is unwise for the Form of Government to mandate the payment of “other ecumenical expenses” from any particular funds as would be the effect of Overture 90-101.

Persistent questions on the subject of the limits of “ecclesiastical or operating expenses” appropriate to the per capita budget prompted the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly to propose an amendment to G-9.0404, subsequently defeated in the presbyteries, that would have clarified the question. The amendment would have inserted new paragraphs, one of which read:

e. Ecclesiastical or operating expenses may include the cost of facilities, equipment, program materials and supplies, communications, travel and other meeting expenses, and the compensation of ordained and non-ordained executive and administrative staff necessary for the functions of the governing body, and may also include the governing body’s contribution to similar expenses of ecumenical and conciliar bodies, and such other costs as the governing body considers necessary to its functions. (Minutes, 1997, Part I, p.111)

The church has sought carefully to respond to such overture efforts to restrict the use of per capita funds exclusively to General Assembly meeting and commissioner expenses, reviewing its traditional constitutional means to meet the costs of appropriate responsibilities of the whole church by a per capita apportionment budget communicated to the presbyteries. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution notes the usefulness of these periodic discussions for the church as they contribute to and enhance the General Assembly’s budgeting process.

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 03-08

Advice and Counsel on Item 03-08—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC).

Item 03-08 urges transferring the funding of PC(USA)’s involvement in ecumenical and agency relationships from the Per Capita Budget.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC) advises that Item 03-08 be disapproved.

Rationale

The ACWC concurs with the comments from the General Assembly Council (GAC) and the Office of the General Assembly (OGA), and the advice of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC). Per capita apportionment has theological significance, and has been part of the polity of the Presbyterian church since 1730. Advocating for justice is the responsibility of the whole church, not just those who participate in mission giving. Participation within the ecumenical community is a crucial connection for the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns and for the PC(USA) as we work together for justice and peace throughout the world.

COGA AND GAC COMMENT ON ITEM 03-08

Comment on Item 03-08—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly and the General Assembly Council.

The COGA and the GAC urge disapproval of Item 03-08. The purpose of per capita is to provide a mechanism for all Presbyterians to share equally in core ecclesiastical functions. On several occasions over the past three decades, the support through per capita funds of one of our core ecclesiastical functions, participation in ecumenical bodies, has been challenged through overtures, but consistently rejected by General Assemblies (Minutes, 1977, 1989, 1991, as cited in Advice on Item 03-08 from the Advisory Committee on the Constitution).

The overture is based on a fundamental misconception of the role and responsibility of the Office of the General Assembly for seeking and maintaining a strong participation in ecumenical relations and ecumenical witness. Further, it seeks to put forward a very restricted definition of the work of the Office of the General Assembly, thereby misconstruing what may be properly underwritten by “operating expenses” (Book of Order, G-9.0404d).

The Constitution manifests a strong historic and continuing commitment to ecumenical relations and witness. Section G-3.0401d asserts that the Church is called “to a new openness to God’s continuing reformation of the Church ecumenical, that it might be a more effective instrument of mission in the world.”

In G-4.0203, in speaking of “The Unity of the Church,” we find:

Visible oneness, by which a diversity of persons, gifts, and understandings is brought together, is an important sign of the unity of God’s people. It is also a means by which that unity is achieved. Further, while divisions into different denominations do not destroy this unity, they do obscure it for both the Church and the world. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), affirming its historical continuity with the whole Church of Jesus Christ, is committed to the reduction of that obscurity and is willing to seek and to maintain communion and community with all other branches of the one, catholic Church.

In G-9.0402c we read: “All structures shall be open to the possibility of change and new forms of ecumenical cooperation.”

Our commitment to the unity of Christ’s Church is a core ecclesial responsibility of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), and a primary function of the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly. The Office of the General Assembly is the instrument of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), the “structure” within our historic polity that maintains communication and engages in cooperation with the Church ecumenical on behalf of the denomination, seeking to reduce the obscurity that a divided Church presents to the world. Our fundamental commitment to God’s gift of unity in Jesus Christ is an expression of the whole church, and is properly funded by a per capita apportionment as a sign of our covenantal relationships within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and with the Church Universal.

Item 03-09

[The assembly disapproved Item 03-09. See pp. 34, 35.]

On Eliminating the General Assembly Per Capita as Part of the Mission Funding System by 2010—From the Presbytery of Grace.

The Presbytery of Grace overtures the 218th General Assembly (2008) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to eliminate the General Assembly “per capita” as part of its mission funding system by 2010.

[Committee Action Financial Implications: (2008): $0; (2009): $0; (2010): $0 (Mission)]

Rationale

The current mission funding system of the General Assembly continues to generate less and less giving from the churches.

The funding of the entirety of the church’s work is reflective of the church’s understanding of its mission and that no part of the church’s work should be separated from the church’s review of its mission (including such matters currently being funded by the General Assembly’s per capita as the holding of General Assembly meetings, ecumenical relationships, and the employment of certain administrative staff).

The elimination of the General Assembly per capita would simplify the work of mission funding and the interpretation of the church’s mission.

The “per capita” is inconsistently used throughout the entire church (that is, some presbyteries and synods use the per capita and others do not).

The payment of the General Assembly “per capita” for all church members is an expectation of the presbytery, regardless of the mission gifts received from that congregation; the Presbytery of Grace currently abides by this expectation.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 03-09

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 218th General Assembly (2008) to disapprove Item 03-09.

Rationale

The stated purpose of the overture is to end the funding of all General Assembly responsibilities through per capita apportionments. As it lifts up one of the church's two established means of budgeting, the overture relates to a view of the Presbyterian Church's mission and mission funding as unified rather than as separable into the areas of administrative, ecclesiastical, and programmatic responsibilities and commitments that traditionally have been supported by annual per capita and mission budgets at the level of the General Assembly.

At the presbytery level, both of these approaches to funding are established practices in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), with some presbyteries depending on their sessions giving to a single or unified mission budget only and others utilizing both per capita and mission budgets. Both kinds of presbytery funding have supported the per capita budgets of synods, and of the General Assembly that for 250 years has apportioned through the presbyteries the costs of certain of its church-wide expenses on the basis of the annually reported active membership of the denomination.

The health of the church is not diminished constitutionally by variations among the presbyteries in their means of funding their per capita apportionment communicated from the General Assembly. The Form of Government provides for flexibility in this, allowing but not requiring presbyteries to "direct per capita apportionments to the sessions of the churches within their bounds" (G-9.0404d). Presbyteries may continue or may begin to depend on unified mission or benevolence budgets to fulfill particular mission pledges as well as to meet the shared obligation to support the administrative and ecclesiastical responsibilities of the whole church through its General Assembly.

Historically, however, the church as a whole also has understood per capita apportionments as the most equitable way to meet certain costs of continuing its overall mission in response to Christ's call, i.e., the expenses to be met by the highest or most inclusive governing body of the church; as early as 1734 the Synod of Philadelphia interpreted an approved per capita funding to its ministers and congregations. Since then and while giving strenuous attention to specific questions about presbyteries' and sessions' obligation and abilities to remit their shares of the General Assembly's per capita budget, the church has continued to understand the constitutionality and theological appropriateness of using the per capita apportionment system for particular aspects of its unified ecclesiastical life, such as expenses for General Assembly meetings and staffing and for the whole church's participation in ecumenical relationships with other communions.

The 207th General Assembly (1995) approved the following definition of per capita:

Per capita is an opportunity for all communicant members of the Presbyterian church through the governing bodies to participate equally, responsibly, and interdependently by sharing the cost of coordination and evaluation of mission; of performing ecclesiastical, legislative, and judicial functions that identify a Reformed church, while at the same time strengthening the sense of community among all Presbyterians. (Minutes, 1995, Part I, 70, 301)

The church understands this per capita apportionment funding to be a special means by which its individual members are able to help create on an equal basis the resources for meeting specific costs of being the church, by a means resonant with the per capita apportionment collected by Moses from "the children of Israel" for the maintaining of the tabernacle (Ex. 30:11–16).

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution notes that these constitutional statements indicate that the essential unity of the church is clearly and properly represented by the General Assembly on behalf of the whole church: "The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) seeks to manifest more visibly the unity of the church of Jesus Christ and will be open to opportunities for conversation, cooperation, and action with other ecclesiastical bodies and secular groups" (G-15.0101). Further, "[t]he General Assembly is the highest governing body of this church and is representative of the unity of the synods, presbyteries, sessions, and congregations of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)" (G-13.0101).

The orderly sharing of specific expenses of the General Assembly through its per capita budget expresses the unity of the church in a way that has traditionally characterized American Presbyterianism, and it illustrates how the gift of Christian community relates to all of its individual members. Understood in this way, per capita funding is "a high moral obligation, the fulfillment of which visibly demonstrates the covenantal ties that bind us as the one church of Jesus Christ" (GAPJC 217-2, Johnston, et al. v. Presbytery of Heartland, Minutes, 2006, Part I, p. 462).

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 218th General Assembly (2008) that if it agrees with the intent of Item 03–09 it should recognize that approval would place in jeopardy the constitutionally mandated functions of the General Assembly now funded by per capita apportionment. Examples of such functions that would be at risk range from holding biennial meetings of the General Assembly as the highest and most inclusive governing body of the church (G-13.0102b) and paying the expenses of the presbyteries' elected commissioners to these meetings (G-4.0308), to establishing and maintaining the Office of the General Assembly itself (G-13.0103g), to serving in judicial matters in accordance with the Rules of Discipline through its permanent judicial commission (G-13.0103o). Furthermore, approval of the overture would require that all of the constitutionally mandated General Assembly functions be supported from the mission budget, which would potentially create conflict and dissension for the whole church in its efforts to meet a greatly expanded General Assembly mission budget without diminishing its programmatic mission commitments.

The Organization for Mission would also need to be amended by deleting IV.B.2.g. on including in a General Assembly per capita budget the expenses of the General Assembly Stated Clerk as the church's permanent ecumenical representative, and Section IV.C.7.e. lodging in a General Assembly per capita budget the expenses of the General Assembly Staff Team and the Committee on Ecumenical Relations. These functions would then also need to be funded from the General Assembly's mission budget.

COGA AND GAC COMMENT ON ITEM 03-09

Comment on Item 03-09—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly and the General Assembly Council.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly and the General Assembly Council urge disapproval of Item 03-09 because it seeks to eliminate the historic method for funding the essential and mandated functions of the Office of the General Assembly and the General Assembly Council as an expression of our covenant community, and it does so without offering a way of underwriting these functions. "Per capita apportionments" are the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)'s way of making incarnate our foundational theological conviction, found in G-1.0400, a section regarding "The radical principles of Presbyterian Church government and discipline:"

That the several different congregations of believers taken collectively constitute one Church of Christ, called emphatically the Church; that a larger part of the Church, or a representation of it, should govern a smaller, or determine matters of controversy which arise therein; that, in like manner, a representation of the whole should govern and determine in regard to every part, and to all the parts united: that is, that a majority shall govern; and consequently that appeals may be carried from lower to higher governing bodies, till they be finally decided by the collective wisdom and united voice of the whole church. ...

This radical connectional principle at the heart of our Presbyterian ecclesiology requires implementation through a participatory system of support in addition to a participatory system of government, and the per capita apportionment has been our historic way of ensuring this covenantal commitment's expression as a form of stewardship of God's gifts to all members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

In addition to theological and constitutional concerns with this overture, its passage would create serious financial problems for the General Assembly. At a time when there is extreme pressure on all funding systems in the church, to eliminate the General Assembly per capita budget would put in great jeopardy such core functions in the PC(USA) as the biennial General Assemblies, our core support of ecumenical bodies, our constitutional and judicial functions, the preservation of our historical records, and the training and support of our governing body system and significant added stress on the mission budget of the GAC because that budget would need to cover these functions.

Item 03-10

On Transferring Funding of Items from the Per Capita Budget to the General Mission Budget—From the Presbytery of Sierra Blanca.

The Presbytery of Sierra Blanca overtures the 218th General Assembly (2008) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to transfer the funding of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)'s involvement in ecumenical and agency relationships from the budget of the Office of the General Assembly/Per Capita to the general mission budget of General Assembly.

Rationale

The original purpose of many of the ecumenical agencies to which the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) belongs was to promote unity in Christian doctrine and mutual recognition of ministries. Increasingly, these same ecumenical agencies have changed their primary focus away from building Christian unity towards advocating for social policies that may or may not be consistent with the social witness policy of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) or her members. Because these agencies have shifted their focus from ecumenism towards political action and “justice advocacy,” it is appropriate that they be funded under the mission budget, where the church normally funds advocacy activities, rather than the per capita budget, which is intended to pay for the administrative costs of the General Assembly.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 03-10

Advice on Item 03-10—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises that the 218th General Assembly (2008) answer Item 03-10 from the Presbytery of Sierra Blanca with its advice concerning Item 03-08 from the Presbytery of Indian Nations.

Comment: Item 03-10 seeks to transfer ecumenical and agency expenses from the Office of the General Assembly per capita budget to the General Assembly mission budget, and in the rationale refers to concerns about items being included in the per capita budgets of the General Assembly being reviewed for current appropriateness. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution’s response to this concern is included in its advice on Item 03-08 from the Presbytery of Indian Nations.

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 03-10

Advice and Counsel on Item 03-10—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC).

Item 03-10 urges transferring the funding of items from the Per Capita Budget to the General Assembly Mission Budget.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC) advises that Item 03-10 be disapproved.

Rationale

(Note: Rationale is the same as on Item 03-08). The ACWC concurs with the comments from the General Assembly Council (GAC) and the Office of the General Assembly (OGA), and the advice of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC). Per capita apportionment has theological significance, and has been part of the polity of the Presbyterian church since 1730. Advocating for justice is the responsibility of the whole church, not just those who participate in mission giving. Participation within the ecumenical community is a crucial connection for the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns and for the PC(USA) as we work together for justice and peace throughout the world.

GACER COMMENT ON ITEM 03-10

Comment on Item 03-10—From the General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations (GACER).

The General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations advises the 218th General Assembly (2008) to disapprove Item 03-10.

Rationale

In both parts of our Constitution, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) understands itself to be part of the one holy, apostolic, catholic church.<sup>1</sup> We do not understand ourselves to be the church of Christ by ourselves, but we are called into relationship with other Christians. We are called to seek the full, visible unity of the Body of Christ as prayed for in John 17 and taught in Ephesians 4.

The General Assemblies of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) through the Articles of Agreement at Reunion, the Ecumenical Vision Statement<sup>2</sup>, and regular review of the ecumenical agencies have affirmed and reaffirmed our participation and membership in ecumenical agencies. The General Assembly has voted to be members of the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A. (NCCC), the World Alliance of Reformed Churches (WARC), the World Council of Churches (WCC), and Churches Uniting in Christ (CUiC). Through the General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations, the General Assembly regularly reviews the ministry of these ecumenical councils and the participation of the PC(USA) in their governance and programs.

Per capita funding of the WCC and NCC covers our core support and delegate participation in the governance life of the councils. This is in partial fulfillment of our responsibilities as members of the council. In many ways, this is comparable to the responsibilities that individuals, churches, and presbyteries have to offer core support to the wider church. Recognizing the support that the PC(USA) gives to the NCC, the 216th General Assembly (2004) noted

... the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) cannot be characterized simply as a donor to the National Council of Churches of Christ. It is a member of the council. Our core contribution to the NCCC demonstrates the seriousness with which we take our membership and is an expression of our quest for Christian unity. As one of the wealthiest denominations in the council, and indeed, the country, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) can be proud of its leadership in supporting the NCCC.<sup>3</sup>

It is through this process that the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) contributes the wisdom of PC(USA) policy and witness to the ecumenical agenda and informed and shaped by the wisdom, faith, and concerns of the wider ecumenical family. This ensures that there is greater congruence between the policies of the ecumenical agencies and those of the General Assembly of the PC(USA).

Cognate or designated funding for the work of the WCC and the NCCC does come from the General Assembly Council budget and is directly related to how we choose to work through the ecumenical agencies to accomplish our mission goals. The General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations understands that there is a difference between our membership responsibilities as represented in our core support through per capita and our programmatic options represented in the mission budget.

Item 03-11

On Amending G-9.0404d to Delineate the Use of Per Capita Funds—From the Presbytery of Santa Barbara.

The Presbytery of Santa Barbara overtures the 218th General Assembly (2008) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Shall G-9.0404d be amended as follows: [Text to be inserted is shown in italics.]

“d. Each governing body above session shall prepare a budget for its operating expenses, including administrative personnel, and may fund it with a per capita apportionment among the particular churches within its bounds. Care shall be taken to ordinarily limit this budget to those ecclesial expenses related to the government, historical and archival activities, and polity of the governing body. Benevolences, ministries, ecumenical dues, or other elective spending for the work and mission of the governing body shall not be funded by the per capita budget. The presbyteries ... [the rest of the paragraph remains unchanged]”

Rationale

According to the Book of Order, per capita may be used to pay the expenses of the elders and pastors to attend governing bodies (G-9.0308). It also is meant to cover “operating expenses” for the governing body, “including administrative personnel,” which undoubtedly means some clerical and bookkeeping assistance (G-9.0404d). Those are the only specified per capita expenses.

Yet from this modest beginning, intended to provide equitably for the governance of the church and to spread the expenses fairly among the churches, per capita has grown to include the costs of a vast number of enterprises, many of which cannot easily be distinguished from ministries or benevolences of the governing body. At every level, large staffs carrying on a number of ministries may be funded by per capita. For example, more than $1 million annually is given to ecumenical relations through the National and World Council of Churches.

One is hard pressed in many instances to discern a sufficient criterion for why some activities are funded by the per capita budget, while others are covered by the judicatory's mission budget. And, as mission budget dollars have become scarcer, the temptation is to move expenses into the per capita budget, which can be raised by what amounts to compulsion, if need be.

Since congregations are all but required to contribute their share of per capita budget, the plethora of items currently included in the per capita budget—some of which are highly controversial—causes much of the greatest resistance to giving by congregations. While a congregation might be completely willing to supply the basic governmental functions our Constitution requires, they would not be willing to be forced to fund causes and activities not in keeping with their conscience. Thus, some churches have rebelled by declining to pay per capita at all. If what is included in per capita expense were confined to the purely ecclesial, governmental expenses as was originally intended, the per capita-withholding problem would diminish greatly.

The ministry and mission of the judicatories are important, but such activity needs to be funded through the general giving of congregations and individuals who desire to support those particular activities. Work beyond the essential governmental and historical functions of the church should not be funded through assessments, which border on the involuntary.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 03-11

Advice on Item 03-11—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 218th General Assembly (2008) to disapprove Item 03-11 from the Presbytery of Santa Barbara and refers the assembly to its response to Item 03-08 from the Presbytery of Indian Nations, which does not request amendment of the Book of Order but presents issues similar to those in Item 03-11 from the Presbytery of Santa Barbara.

Rationale

Item 03-11 from the Presbytery of Santa Barbara seeks to amend G-9.0404d so as “to ordinarily limit [all per capita budgets] to those ecclesial expenses related to the government, historical and archival activities, and polity of the governing body.” The response to Item 03-08 from the Presbytery of Indian Nations considers the matter of which items are included in per capita budgets of the church.

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 03-11

Advice and Counsel on Item 03-11—From the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC).

Item 03-11 urges transferring the funding of PC(USA)'s involvement in ecumenical and agency relationships from the Per Capita Budget.

The Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC) advises that Item 03-11 be disapproved.

Rationale

(Note: Rationale is the same as on Item 03-08.) The ACWC concurs with the comments from the General Assembly Council (GAC) and the Office of the General Assembly (OGA), and the advice of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC). Per capita apportionment has theological significance, and has been part of the polity of the Presbyterian church since 1730. Advocating for justice is the responsibility of the whole church, not just those who participate in mission giving. Participation within the ecumenical community is a crucial connection for the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns and for the PC(USA) as we work together for justice and peace throughout the world.

COGA COMMENT ON ITEM 03-11

Comment on Item 03-11—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly advises disapproval of Item 03-11 because it seeks to eliminate the historic method for funding the functions of the presbyteries, the synods, and the Office of the General Assembly, as an expression of our covenant community, and it does so without offering a way of underwriting these functions. “Per capita apportionments” are the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)’s way of making incarnate our foundational theological conviction; found in G-1.0400, a section regarding “The radical principles of Presbyterian Church government and discipline:”

That the several different congregations of believers taken collectively constitute one Church of Christ, called emphatically the Church; that a larger part of the Church, or a representation of it, should govern a smaller, or determine matters of controversy which arise therein; that, in like manner, a representation of the whole should govern and determine in regard to every part, and to all the parts united: that is, that a majority shall govern; and consequently that appeals may be carried from lower to higher governing bodies, till they be finally decided by the collective wisdom and united voice of the whole church. ...

This radical connectional principle at the heart of our Presbyterian ecclesiology requires implementation through a participatory system of support in addition to a participatory system of government, and the per capita apportionment has been our historic way of ensuring this covenantal commitment’s expression as a form of stewardship of God’s gifts to all members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

There were 44 million dollars received in per capita in 2007. Seventy percent of that amount was for support of presbyteries and synods. It is true that some presbyteries do not employ a per capita revenue stream to support their work. Nevertheless, eliminating this historic method of support, used by the great majority of presbyteries and synods, seems unwise in this critical time in the lives of middle governing bodies.

Item 03-12

On Honoring the Life and Work of the Reverend Doctor Clifton Kirkpatrick—From the Presbytery of the Western Reserve.

The Presbytery of the Western Reserve respectfully overtures the 218th General Assembly (2008) to honor the life and work of the Reverend Doctor Clifton Kirkpatrick by naming him Stated Clerk of the General Assembly emeritus upon his retirement from active service as clerk.

Rationale

The Reverend Doctor Clifton Kirkpatrick has fulfilled his ordination vows, serving with energy in the Presbyterian Church in the United States and the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

As a leader, Kirkpatrick has understood what it means to follow Christ, and serve His Body, with idealism tempered by the reality of the flawed world of our time where mercy and grace are essential that justice may thrive.

In Kirkpatrick’s early days as a pastor, his imagination may not have permitted him to envision himself as serving as the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly, yet he has grown into the office with an irenic spirit as he has lead the church nationally, as well as locally, working with the boards and agencies of the General Assembly.

Rev. Kirkpatrick has not faltered in his grasp of the vision of the larger church, of the unity in Christ to which we are called, even as he has understood and acted wisely in being the servant leader of the church and its people, who are sometimes limited in their vision and contentious in their behavior.

Rev. Kirkpatrick has acted with love, making glad those privileged to spend time with him.

With a gentle and glad spirit, Kirkpatrick’s message embodies the love of the God he serves, the Christ whose life is exemplary, and the Spirit that enlivens the Church today as it did centuries ago.

Now, therefore, as a church, we will miss him, but we commission him gladly to serve Body of Christ in the world, knowing that he will go where God leads him, and that he will continue to serve with energy, intelligence, imagination, and love. Our brother, go in peace to love and serve the Lord.

COGA COMMENT ON ITEM 03-12

Comment on Item 03-12—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly enthusiastically concurs with Item 03-12: On Honoring the Life and Work of the Reverend Clifton Kirkpatrick—From the Presbytery of Western Reserve, by naming him Stated Clerk of the General Assembly emeritus upon his retirement from active service as clerk.

For the past thirty-five years, the Reverend Dr. Clifton Kirkpatrick has given exemplary service as leader of the Presbyterian Church in the United States and the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in various capacities. Kirkpatrick is a faithful Christian leader with a gentle and servant spirit who has promoted the peace, unity, and purity of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) by word and deed. He is an energetic and respected leader who has given much of his time and energy to the cause of mission and justice in our denomination and also around the world. Kirkpatrick is a follower and a teacher of the life, death, and resurrection of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. He is a minister of Word and Sacrament in good standing who has served our church with endless “energy, intelligence, imagination, and love.”

ACREC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 03-12

Advice and Counsel on Item 03-12—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC).

Item 03-12 calls for the General Assembly to honor the Reverend Doctor Clifton Kirkpatrick as Stated Clerk of the General Assembly emeritus.

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) advises that Item 03-12 be approved.

Rationale

As a leader of the church, Rev. Kirkpatrick has been a faithful disciple in giving witness to the demand of justice as an expression of God’s love for all of God’s people and all of God’s Creation. While we will miss his gentle spirit in the work of ACREC, we look forward to his continuing ministry and leadership in the church, knowing that he will always seek to serve “the least among us.”

---

GAC COMMENT ON ITEM 03-12

Comment on Item 03-12—From the General Assembly Council (GAC).

The General Assembly Council enthusiastically urges approval of Item 03-12, to honor the life and work of the Reverend Doctor Clifton Kirkpatrick.

Cliff’s service as Stated Clerk has been a gift to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). He has demonstrated distinctive leadership during a time of considerable transition, a time when the cultural disestablishment of the mainline church has become clearly manifest. Through his ministry as Stated Clerk, Cliff has sought to uphold the unity and integrity of the church.

Cliff’s greatest gift to the church has been his ability to clearly articulate the Gospel of Jesus Christ and to hold up before us a vision of faithfulness to our Lord. Cliff has not merely been content to demonstrate the finer points of parliamentary procedure, but has pushed the PC(USA) to engage in a world in need of concrete demonstrations of the love of God.

Cliff’s deep and abiding ecumenical commitment demonstrates his love for the Church of Jesus Christ and its ministry. His continuing service as the president of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches is an embodiment of the themes of his leadership: commitment to the Gospel; commitment to international partnership in mission; and commitment to seeking the unity of Christ’s body.

The General Assembly Council will miss his wise leadership and spirit of collegiality and encouragement. We look forward to working with him in his ministry with the World Alliance of Reformed Churches, and bid him Godspeed in his new life.

*Item 03-13

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly recommends that the 218th General Assembly (2008) do the following:

1. Amend the PC(USA) Open Meeting Policy as follows:

a. Amend “2.” as follows: [Text to be added is shown as italic.]

“2. It is the policy of the General Assembly; the General Assembly Council, its Ministries Divisions and Mission Support Services, and of the entities and work groups related to them, that their meetings shall be open to all interested persons. Documents being considered at such meetings shall be available to interested persons at the meeting.”

b. Amend “3.a.” as follows: [Text to be added is shown as italic.]

“a. Subjects dealt with must be limited to property negotiation, personnel, civil and criminal litigation, including cases under the Rules of Discipline, or security.”

2. Direct the entities subject to the PC(USA) Open Meeting Policy to post the dates, times, and locations of their open meetings on the PC(USA) calendar Web page within a reasonable time of making such plans.

Rationale

These recommendations are in response to the following referral: 2006 Referral: Item 03-23. Commissioners’ Resolution. On Amending the “Open Meeting Policy” to Include the Whole Church in the Church’s Work (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 198–200).

In response to the referral of Item 03-23 (commissioners’ resolution on amending the Open Meeting Policy) to the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) from the 217th General Assembly (2006), COGA reviewed Referral 03-23, the current PC(USA) Open Meeting Policy (OMP), and relevant interpretations of the policy by the Stated Clerk as provided in Section 7 of the policy. We believe this policy has been and will continue to be helpful to the church.

As a result of our review, COGA recommends three actions:

1. An addition to Section 2 of the Open Meeting Policy which clarifies that where documents are being considered during an open meeting, e.g. draft proposals for discussion, amendment, and possible adoption, such documents will be available to interested persons at the meeting. Document availability was the primary proposal of Item 03-23. Although this is not specifically provided for in the current policy, in many open meetings under the GA OMP this is already being done. The documents may of course include an appropriate heading, e.g. Draft; Not Yet Acted on by the Committee; Proposal Only; Not for Distribution; Not Approved, as the case may be, to distinguish it from the finally adopted action, if any, at the open meeting. It is expected that interested persons at the meeting who receive the documents will honor such limitations.

2. A clarification of the litigation subject matter that can be the basis for a closed meeting. As has been interpreted by the Stated Clerk, this term includes cases under the Rules of Discipline. Similar to civil or criminal litigation, to require a party to a case under the Rules of Discipline to discuss that case in an open meeting would certainly impede that party’s ability to effectively respond in the case.

3. A directive to the entities covered by the OMP to post relevant information about their open meetings on the existing PC(USA) calendar Web page (pcusa.org/calendar). This requirement does not relate to the meeting itself and is procedural in nature, so it is recommended as a directive rather than an amendment to the policy. Referral 03-23 proposed posting on the entity Web page and some entities may wish to do so but not all entities have a Web page and the PC(USA) calendar Web page is already available and it is relatively easy to add a new meeting notice.

Further language proposed in Referral 03-23 for Section 7 of the OMP is unnecessary since the Stated Clerk already issues opinions based on the exceptions listed in Section 3.a. of the OMP. The new language would add no new process or criteria.

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 03-13

Advice and Counsel on Item 03-13—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

Item 03-13 from COGA recommends amending the General Assembly Open Meeting Policy.

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy advises that Item 03-13 be approved by adding a Recommendation 1.c. to amend Item “1” of the Open Meeting Policy (Approved by the 209th General Assembly (1997)) as follows: [Text to be added is shown with brackets and with underline.]

“1. The work of the church is strengthened when it is done in a spirit of openness and trust. Church members have a basic right to know about the work done and the decisions made by entities within the church. Church leaders have a basic responsibility to honor that right by conducting their business with a spirit of openness and vulnerability to public scrutiny. Therefore, open meetings shall be the norm for all such entities. [Equally, observers and other guests, particularly members of the PC(USA), have a basic responsibility to show respect for elected members and staff of church bodies and, though not under General Assembly authority, to demonstrate a spirit of openness and vulnerability to public scrutiny in their behavior and publications.]”

Rationale

This change would affirm mutual accountability and says: “It is expected that observers will observe the same practices of mutual respect, disclosure, and vulnerability that hold for entities of the PC(USA) and their individual members.”

As point one of the Open Meeting Policy is currently phrased, it splits the responsibilities of those serving the church from the rights of those observing, allowing the shared principles and values of our faith to be discounted and an adversarial approach adopted. Attitudes cannot be legislated, of course, and interests will differ, but a positive statement may raise expectations of “observership” and related journalism, at least within the church.

Presbyterian tradition supports openness and accountability in the use of power throughout the church. The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy strongly supports the principles of open meetings and mutual accountability. This amendment is intended to clarify responsibilities and improve the quality of the church’s decision-making.

[The assembly approved Item 03-14. See pp. 34, 35.]

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly recommends that the 218th General Assembly (2008) elect the Reverend Jill Hudson and the Reverend Marcia Myers to a first, four-year term as Associate Stated Clerks of the General Assembly.

Rationale

The Standing Rules of the General Assembly at H.2.d. states the following:

The General Assembly may elect one or more Associate Stated Clerks as the General Assembly shall determine. The Stated Clerk shall nominate persons to fill each such office after consultation with the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly [see Section IV.B.2.j. of the Organization for Mission]. The term of office shall be four years, subject to reelection at the pleasure of the General Assembly.

These two persons give exemplary service as leaders of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), are in good standing as ministers of Word and Sacrament, and are faithful Christian leaders who serve the church with “energy, intelligence, imagination, and love.” The Stated Clerk and the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly enthusiastically nominate these two persons for election as Associate Stated Clerks of the General Assembly.

Interpretation of G-18.0301 and G-13.0112c, Deadlines for Overtures that Support/Oppose Other Overtures to Amend/Interpret the Book of Order—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that the 218th General Assembly (2008) answer Item 03-15 with the following response:

1. Under G-18.0301a, all overtures supporting or opposing proposed changes to the Book of Order must be received by the 120-day deadline, so that the Advisory Committee on the Constitution may prepare its constitutionally required advice to the General Assembly.

2. Under G-13.0112c all overtures or requests supporting or opposing proposed authoritative interpretations of the Book of Order must be received by the 120-day deadline, so that the Advisory Committee on the Constitution may prepare its constitutionally required findings and recommendations to the General Assembly.

Question

How does the 120-day deadline apply to overtures that support or oppose proposed changes to or proposed authoritative interpretations of the Book of Order?

Rationale

Pursuant to G-13.0112d, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution makes the following findings with respect to the question presented:

For clarity, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution has separated the request into separate findings with respect to the provisions governing amendment of the Book of Order and the provisions governing approval of an authoritative interpretation of a provision of the Book of Order.

1. With respect to part one of Item 03-14 regarding “overtures that support or oppose proposed changes to ... Book of Order,” the Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that the request presents a question in which interpretation of G-18.0301a is advisable. Section G-18.0301a provides: “All proposals requesting amendment of the Book of Order shall be communicated in writing to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly no later than the 120-day deadline prior to the convening of the next session of the General Assembly.” It is worth noting that this provision uses the word “proposal” rather than “overture.” A request for amendment suggests a change to the Book of Order. Any overture that supports or opposes a proposed change in the Book of Order falls within this category. Further, such overtures require review by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, the underlying reason for the requirement that such business be submitted by a deadline earlier than other business. In other words, any item of business that could permissibly be answered by submission of an amendment to the Book of Order to the presbyteries must be submitted in accordance with the 120-day deadline. On the other hand, an overture in the nature of a motion to postpone or to refer an item proposing constitutional change would not have to meet the 120-day deadline.

2. With respect to part two of Item 03-15 regarding “overtures that support or oppose authoritative interpretations of the Book of Order,” the Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that the request presents a question in which the interpretation of G-13.0112c is advisable. That section provides: “All questions requiring an interpretation by the General Assembly of the Book of Order arising from governing bodies of the church or from individuals shall be communicated in writing to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly no later than 120 days prior to the convening of the next session of the General Assembly.” No logical reason exists for not including overtures that support or oppose proposed changes to authoritative interpretations within the category of “questions requiring an interpretation by the General Assembly.” The purpose for the requirement that such business be submitted by a deadline earlier than other business is to allow the Advisory Committee on the Constitution time to prepare findings and recommendations to the General Assembly on such matters. In other words, any item of business that could permissibly be answered by an authoritative interpretation of the Constitution must be submitted in accordance with the 120-day deadline.

Joint COGA/GAC Budget Proposals

[The assembly approved Item 03-16, Recommendation 1. See pp. 34, 35.]

1. The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly and the General Assembly Council recommend that the 218th General Assembly (2008) approve “Introduction to the Per Capita Budget” as a statement of the principles, values, and purposes for the General Assembly per capita budget.

INTRODUCTION TO THE PER CAPITA BUDGET
General Assembly Council and
Committee on the Office of the General Assembly

INTRODUCTION

Presbyterians have a deep concern for good stewardship, the decent and orderly administration of funds, and the best use of limited financial resources (which have declined in recent years). Given this reality, overtures and other initiatives are developed every few years to look seriously at the per capita funding system, the appropriate causes to be funded by this budget, and the most responsible and economic uses for per capita funds. The 218th General Assembly (2008) is one of those times.

The Office of the General Assembly (OGA) and the General Assembly Council (GAC) welcome such a review. We took action two years ago to be certain that the 217th General Assembly (2006) had such an opportunity. In October 2007, these two bodies agreed to reactivate the Joint Per Capita Table to not only propose a 2009–2010 per capita budget to the General Assembly, but also to look more deeply into the role of the per capita budget in the life of the church and the functions that should appropriately be funded by per capita. The results of that review can be found in this paper and in the proposed budget (see attachment). In short, we reaffirm the importance of the per capita budget to the well being of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and to the ministries appropriately funded by it.

Per capita funding is how Presbyterians mutually share the costs of coming together to discern the Spirit’s leading for the future; it is how Presbyterians are trained to become better elders and ministers; it is how Presbyterians participate in the life of the wider church by serving on General Assembly (GA) committees, commissions, and the General Assembly itself; it is how Presbyterians discern God’s call to service; it is how Presbyterians preserve our heritage; it is how Presbyterians participate in the life of the Church universal (catholic) as we commit ourselves to share the gospel, and work and live in fellowship with “all persons in every nation” (Book of Order, G-4.0101).

The Westminster Confession of Faith says, “. . . all believers, are therefore, under obligation to sustain the ordinances of the Christian religion where they are already established, and to contribute by their prayers, gifts, and personal efforts to the extension of the Kingdom of God throughout the whole earth” (6.058) [emphasis added]. Therefore, per capita is a fundamental way in which all of the nearly 11,000 congregations and governing bodies of the PC(USA) are connected, and the way that allows its members to participate in the work of the wider church.

HISTORY AND PURPOSE OF PER CAPITA

Per capita has a long history in the Presbyterian church. The earliest records of a system like per capita predate the organization of the first General Assembly in 1787. Such a system was clearly codified when the assembly in 1857 adopted a “Plan for Mileage” that apportioned to every presbytery an expected payment based on their membership to reimburse General Assembly commissioners for the cost of their travel to the assembly. The reason for this was to make certain that all Presbyterians shared equally and fairly in the cost of their governance and that all duly elected commissioners would be enabled to participate in the assembly, regardless of how far they had to travel or how much it cost.

This system of covering the core ecclesiastical costs of the church has served us well for over 150 years, and we believe it will continue to serve us well into the 21st century. The Book of Order states that per capita exists to “give meaning to the interdependent nature of Presbyterian polity” (G-9.0404). It exists to allow the whole church to share equitably in those things that make us Presbyterian: our theological identity, our connectedness, our system of governing bodies that allow elders and ministers together to discern the mind of Christ, our ecumenical connections that make us part of the church universal, and our core structures that keep us together as a church. In short, per capita is the system that enables all Presbyterians equitably to provide the resources that mold us into being a Presbyterian covenant community. Hence, it might be well to think of per capita as the Presbyterian Covenant Community Fund.

The 207th General Assembly (1995) gave a very helpful definition of per capita when it stated:

Per capita is an opportunity for all communicant members of the Presbyterian church through the governing bodies to participate equally, responsibly, and interdependently by sharing the cost of coordination and evaluation of mission; and of performing ecclesiastical, legislative, and judicial functions that identify a Reformed Church, while at the same time strengthening the sense of community among all Presbyterians. (Minutes, 1995, Part I, p. 301)

The Presbytery of San Francisco has found an interesting analogy to per capita from the field of technology. They suggest that we might wish to think of per capita in relation to our overall stewardship and mission the way we think of the fees we pay to Internet service providers to be able to communicate through the Internet and email. Like with the Internet, we use those connections for a variety of missions, but we all must support the basic system that allows us to be connected to one another and to share in this electronic (or Presbyterian) world that has revolutionized how we relate to one another. Per capita supports the basic underpinnings of being Presbyterian, connects us to one another, and enables us to make and carry out decisions as a community. All of us have a stake in that and should share in its support!

OUR EXPERIENCE IN RECENT YEARS

While every funding system in the church is under stress, the per capita system is working! Hard work has been done at the General Assembly level to keep the increase in the per capita rate below the rate of inflation, and the actual dollars proposed in the 2009 budget to be spent on the per capita budget will decline, even before inflation has been taken into account. At the same time, in spite of organized campaigns by interest groups in the church to “withhold per capita” and the reality that many congregations and governing bodies are facing financial stress, the level of per capita payments received has remained remarkably high. Over the last decade the percentage of unpaid per capita from middle governing bodies to the General Assembly has never exceeded four percent. Both COGA and GAC are exceptionally grateful for the faithful support of Presbyterians for these core ecclesiastical responsibilities.

The Mission Funding Task Force of the GAC had it right! They concluded that such a system that allows all Presbyterians to share equitably in building and sustaining Presbyterian covenant community and which, year in and year out, is receiving in excess of ninety-six percent of its requested allocation is a system that fundamentally is not broken and does not need to be fixed. We concur!

APPROPRIATE FUNCTIONS FOR THE PER CAPITA BUDGET

One other effort we have made in the OGA and GAC is to be certain that these funds are budgeted only for the purposes intended. Our concern is to be sure that per capita fulfills its purpose, but also is sensitive to the broader needs of the church. As assemblies have regularly made clear, per capita is to provide resources for those ecclesiastical and administrative purposes that make us a Presbyterian covenant community, so that Presbyterians may fund and carry out mission (which is funded through our mission budgets and designated funds) in a Presbyterian way.

The 207th General Assembly (1995) outlined those basic functions that are critical for holding us together as a Presbyterian covenant community and are funded appropriately from per capita at the General Assembly level. In accord with these provisions, COGA and GAC have reaffirmed the following as core ecclesiastical expenses to which per capita funds should be allocated:

- The General Assembly session, including commissioners’ expenses, where ministers and elders seek together to discern the mind of Christ;
- The Office of the General Assembly, which is responsible for administering the General Assembly; upholding our Constitution; maintaining our minutes, records and statistics; communicating the actions of the assembly to the church and the world; supporting our governing body system; promoting Christian vocation and the ordering of ministry; and publishing essential resources to uphold our faith and polity;
- The Presbyterian Historical Society, which collects, preserves, and shares the historic record of American Presbyterianism;
- General Assembly permanent and special committees and commissions (such as the General Assembly Nominating Committee, Advisory Committee on the Constitution, Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns, Permanent Judicial Commission, Form of Government Task Force, and so forth) that carry out the work of the assembly between meetings;
- Membership and core support in the ecumenical bodies in which the PC(USA) is a member (their “per capita” costs), which give expression to our basic ecclesiological conviction that we alone are not the church but only one part of the body of Christ, and thus expressing our Presbyterian identity through our ecumenical connections;
- The meetings of the GAC and the expenses for legal services and for the planning and evaluation of mission (but not the mission programs), which make it possible to coordinate our mission as Presbyterians and connect it with fidelity to the governing bodies and the whole church.

These functions enable us to maintain our Presbyterian identity and connections. They also provide a solid Reformed foundation for our church’s renewal as a missional church. These are the functions included in the proposed per capita budget for 2009 and 2010.

Consequences of abandoning the per capita budget

From time to time, calls are made to abandon our system of per capita and mission budgets and simply move to a coordinated budget that would fund both ecclesiastical and mission functions. We believe that would be a serious mistake for the church. In addition to the theological and practical values of a per capita system that allows the whole church to equitably share in its core Presbyterian covenantal services and the positive record of support from the church, we believe such a move would have serious negative financial consequences not only to the General Assembly, but also to many presbyteries and synods.

With the exception of some presbyteries in the region of the former Presbyterian Church in the United States, most of our middle governing bodies and the General Assembly have established systems for promoting and receiving both mission and per capita giving. Even in a time of growing financial resources, the abandonment of one of these systems and the ethos of common responsibility for all Presbyterians to pay their “fair share” of our basic ecclesiastical expenses would likely result in the receipt of far less funding for our governing bodies than is produced by these two systems. To make this change in a time of financial stress could have disastrous financial consequences to our presbyteries, synods, and General Assembly.

However, the core reasons for maintaining a per capita funding system are that it is a proven way of giving financial expression to our core Presbyterian values, it works, it has wide (if not always enthusiastic) support among Presbyterians, and it is responsibly administered to make the gifts of the Reformed faith come alive in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

2. The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly and the General Assembly Council recommend that the 218th General Assembly (2008) instruct the General Assembly Council and the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly Joint Per Capita Table to review the allocation of expenses and programs to per capita and mission funds, and present a report to the 219th General Assembly (2010).

3. The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly and the General Assembly Council recommend that the 218th General Assembly (2008) instruct the Stated Clerk and the General Assembly Council to share, in partnership with the middle governing bodies, educational materials with the whole church, so that all will have a better understanding of the history, values, and uses of the per capita budget.

4. The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly and the General Assembly Council recommend that the 218th General Assembly (2008) incorporate into the Minutes the 2006 and 2007 Per Capita Apportionment Budget and Statement of Activities, and the Comparative Statement of Financial Position at December 31, 2007 (see attachment A).

5. The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly and the General Assembly Council approve and recommend that the 218th General Assembly (2008):

a. approve the proposed 2009 expenditure budget totaling [~~$12,308,884~~] [$12,650,269] and a proposed 2010 expenditure budget totaling [~~$15,310,620~~] [$15,429,215];

b. approve that $1,306,362 be designated from the 2009 per capita budget (about half the cost of the General Assembly meeting), and be reserved for use in the year of the General Assembly meeting (2010) (see attachment B); c. approve the proposed revised 2008 expenditure budget totaling $14,889,556 (which includes $1,213,977 carried over from 2007).

6. The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly and the General Assembly Council approve and recommend that the 218th General Assembly (2008) approve an increase in the per capita apportionment rate from $5.79 to [~~$6.04~~] [$6.15] per active member for 2009, and that the same rate be effective for 2010, without change.

Rationale

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) and the General Assembly Council (GAC) continue to be grateful to the whole church for its faithfulness in meeting per capita obligations (over ninety-six percent collection rate for 2006). We believe these funds have enabled the General Assembly to carry out its core ecclesial functions so that the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) can carry out its ministry in faithfulness to Scripture and the PC(USA) Constitution.

Building the per capita budgets for 2009 and 2010 continues to be a challenge. The total revenue level is impacted by variables as diverse as stock market fluctuations, hurricanes and disasters, levels of membership loss, and the ability of presbyteries to fully meet their per capita obligations. Most of these factors impact negatively the overall per capita budget. On the expenditure side, challenges include added costs due to the 2008 change in the Book of Order to increase by 200 the number of commissioners to the General Assembly, as well as added costs to carry out an assembly on the West Coast.

Given these dynamics, both COGA and OGA faced the reality that major reductions would be necessary unless a very substantial increase in the per capita rate occurred, which we determined would create a real hardship in the church. We are, therefore, proposing an increase of 25 cents (4.3 percent) in the per capita rate in 2009 and no additional increase for 2010, after having made major personnel cost reductions in 2007 that will carry forward savings from expenditures through 2010.

In order to hold to a minimal increase in the per capita rate, hard choices had to be made relative to staffing levels, the consolidation of the Presbyterian Historical Society, ecumenical expenses, and changes in the funding of the Office of Vocation. The previously approved budget for 2008 was reduced by almost $500,000 as a result of these staff reductions, reorganization, and other adjustments. We are, therefore, able to propose a per capita budget for 2009–2010 that is slightly less than the budget for 2007–2008, even with inflation and the added mandated costs for items like the increased number of commissioners beginning with the 218th General Assembly (2008). The details behind these calculations can be found on the attached sheets. To balance the budget, we have budgeted the planned use of reserves accumulated from prior years income in 2008, 2009, and 2010, in the amounts of $281,966, $282,725, and $934,090 respectively. Such use of prior income from available funds, over the General Assembly mandated minimum reserve requirement of 30 percent of current budget, cushions the increase necessary to the per capita allocation. We believe that such restraint in the increase in the per capita rate and the expenditure level are necessary for the well being of the church and the fiscal integrity of the per capita budget. We would encourage a similar spirit of restraint by commissioners as other proposals are considered that might have financial implications at the 218th General Assembly (2008).

If we had continued the practice of annual General Assembly meetings, we would have required at least an additional $2,500,000 for 2009 (estimate cost of the General Assembly session in 2010, schedule 1, is $2,612,723). Directly, this cost would have necessitated an increase of at least $1.15 per capita for 2009, or a depletion of all available reserves above the required minimum by a negative $560,000 at the beginning of 2010.

7. The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly and the General Assembly Council recommend that the 218th General Assembly (2008) approve the attached allocation of designated funds for COGA and GAC task forces totaling $2,041,671 for 2008, $2,294,900 for 2009, and $2,147,700 for 2010 for revenue, and the following for expenses: $2,126,671 for 2008, $2,372,183 for 2009, and $2,249,964 for 2010.

Rationale

The allocation of designated funds are reserved for specified expenditures planned to augment the per capita budget, so that steep increases to the per capita apportionment rate may be cushioned. The primary items include the General Assembly session, vocation services, the production and distribution of OGA publications, part of the Presbyterian Historical Society operations, some conferences, and GAC task forces. The sources of these funds are mostly from independently generated revenue, including gifts and endowments. The beginning balances indicated are a result of the unused carryover from the previous year (see attachment C).

[The assembly approved Item 03-17. See pp. 34, 35.]

The Office of the General Assembly recommends that the 218th General Assembly (2008) authorize the Office of the General Assembly to make the necessary changes to the Session Annual Statistics Report (SASR) form as may be needed to conform with the revised Form of Government, should it be approved by majority of the presbyteries, and that the OGA report such changes to the 219th General Assembly (2010).

Rationale

The Session Annual Statistics Report (SASR) collects data based on requirements outlined in the Book of Order. The membership section of the SASR deals with the rolls churches are required to maintain and the reporting of those rolls to their presbytery. The revised Form of Government would necessitate changes to the SASR. The revised form would be used to collect the 2009 information, which would be reported to the Office of the General Assembly in the spring of 2010.

Item 03-18

On the Continuation of the Hanmi Presbytery—From the Synod of Southern California and Hawaii.

The Synod of Southern California and Hawaii overtures the 218th General Assembly (2008) to continue Hanmi Presbytery without term limit.

Rationale

The 195th General Assembly (1983) approved the organization of the Hanmi Presbytery within the bounds of the Synod of Southern California and Hawaii with a ten-year term (Minutes, 1983, Part I, pp. 106, 821).

On January 28, 1984, the Synod of Southern California and Hawaii (hereafter synod) organized the Presbytery of Hanmi (hereafter presbytery) with fifteen Korean American churches and pastors from outside our denominations.

The presbytery, with the concurrence of the synod, submitted an overture to the 204th General Assembly (1992) to extend the term of the presbytery for an additional fifteen years.

The 204th General Assembly (1992) approved an amended overture that extended the life of the presbytery for another fifteen years with the term ending in January 2009, which instructed the presbytery and the synod to “prepare an intentional plan for the transfer of congregations, as they are ready, to the proper geographic presbytery . . . .”

While it is clear that the presbytery was created originally, and subsequently extended, with the intent that it be a transitional presbytery, the General Assembly has taken actions since that time that indicate a change in denominational approach e.g., the Book of Order has been amended at G-12.0102k to specifically provide for the creation of nongeographic presbyteries to meet the mission needs of identified racial ethnic or immigrant congregations, a provision that was not in the Constitution when the General Assembly authorized the creation of Hanmi Presbytery nor when it took action to approve the amended overture in 1992, which extended the term of the presbytery.

The presbytery has experienced some difficult years following the extended term including a dispute over matters of governance, particularly the nominations and elections of presbytery officers on December 3, 1998, which was one of the precipitating issues that led to the synod council appointing an Administrative Commission to Work with Hanmi Presbytery (hereafter commission) for the purpose (among others) of conducting a special administrative review of the affairs of the presbytery (G-9.0408-.0409) and determining who were the rightful officers, committee chairs, and committee members of the presbytery for 1999.

Subsequent to the holding of open hearings and the reviewing of presbytery records, the commission determined that there were deep underlying problems within the presbytery, and on June 12, 1999, a special Called Meeting of the Synod Assembly reaffirmed the earlier granted authority of the commission and approved the recommendation of the commission to be granted “original jurisdiction,” including acting for the presbytery in several major areas.

The commission, in its 2003 report to the synod assembly, stated that “An increasing number of Hanmi Presbytery members are working very hard to follow the Book of Order... that under the guidance of the Commission, the Committee on Ministry has made significant progress ... that Hanmi Presbytery has formed a Mission Statement Advisory Committee to do a Mission Study and prepare a Mission Statement.”

The synod assembly, in October 2004, granted the request of the commission to relinquish “original jurisdiction” effective December 2004 with several major aspects of the presbytery’s work remaining with the commission until the work related to those areas were completed.

During 2006, ministers and elders of the presbytery determined that “...transformation is needed in Hanmi Presbytery and it is worth the pursuit of developing a healthy Presbytery,” the presbytery created the Hanmi Presbytery Transformation Task Force at its meeting of June 1, 2006.

The Transformation Task Force and leadership of the presbytery continue to stress the importance of compliance with the Book of Order and the presbytery has initiated training for the committees of the presbytery and the sessions in Presbyterian Polity with some resourcing provided by the commission.

The presbytery continues to work with sessions to bring them into compliance with G-14.0221 and 14.0222, and as of May 2007, 13 of the 27 churches have sessions with women elders, 16 of the 27 churches now have sessions in two or three year classes, with the remaining sessions expected to come into compliance with G-14.0222 by the end of 2008, and the committee on ministry with the stated clerk continues to work with these churches.

The commission is encouraged by the evident efforts on the part of the leadership of Hanmi to work with the commission in a spirit of cooperation, which is a contrast with the struggle during much of the service of the commission.

As a Korean-language, nongeographic presbytery, it has numerous gifts to share with the synod and the whole church—cultural and spiritual gifts that can enrich the life of the whole church in this 21st century, and can serve as an effective model of what a viable nongeographic language presbytery should be.

The presbytery realizes that while there is still much work to do, they have expressed their commitment to “succeeding” with God’s help as stated in their recently adopted new Mission Statement: “The Mission of Hanmi Presbytery is to be a faithful partner in mission and ministry with the sessions, congregations, and minister members of the Presbytery; to empower, support, nurture and walk with them in their ministries. As a Presbytery, we hold ourselves accountable to Jesus Christ as Head of the Church, and to the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.); working cooperatively as mission partners with the Synod and the General Assembly. The Presbytery expresses commitment to God’s grace and love by seeking opportunities not only to continue serving Korean immigrants but also for promoting racial and ethnic harmony in a multicultural society. in glorifying the Lord our God with a modest and faithful lifestyle.”

ACREC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 03-18

Advice and Counsel on Item 03-18—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC)

Item 03-18 on the continuation of Hanmi Presbytery in the Synod of Southern California and Hawaii without term limit.

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 03-18

Advice and Counsel on Item 03-18—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC)

Item 03-18 asks the 218th General Assembly (2008) for continuation of the Hanmi Presbytery.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC) advises that this item be disapproved and/or answered by the action taken on Item 03-07.

The General Assembly Nominating Committee recommends that the 218th General Assembly (2008) amend Standing Rule F.6.c.(2) as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added is shown as italic.]

“(2)When any nomination for service on a General Assembly committee, council, or board comes from the floor of the assembly, the commissioner making the nomination will provide the General Assembly Nominating Committee, ~~at least twenty-four hours in advance of the nomination being made from the floor~~ no later than 48 hours after the convening of the General Assembly, with pertinent information about the person whose name is being presented, as well as the name of the particular person nominated by the nominating committee whose nomination is being challenged. Such information shall be provided on the “Nomination by Commissioner Form” provided for use at the assembly and available from the Stated Clerk.”

Rationale

The current timeline for submission of persons commissioners wish to nominate from the floor does not provide sufficient time for members of the General Assembly Nominating Committee (GANC), the Assistant Stated Clerk staffing that committee, nor the Moderator of the previous General Assembly (who nominates the slate for the General Assembly Nominating Committee) to prepare adequate and factual responses. This is of particular concern when there are numerous challenges to the GANC slate. At the 217th General Assembly (2006), commissioners were presented with a total of ten challenges. Additionally, the number of GANC members attending General Assembly has been reduced from sixteen to no more than five. This lessening of the resources available at General Assembly impacts the preparation time needed for response.

The General Assembly Nominating Committee’s slate of nominees is published no later than the forty-five-day deadline. The procedure for floor nominees is explained in the preface of that document. The Book of Order provides that the Moderator of the General Assembly nominate members of the General Assembly Nominating Committee within thirty days prior to the General Assembly. Thus, commissioners should have sufficient time to review the slate of nominees.

[In response to Item 03-20, the assembly approved an alternate resolution. See pp. 34, 35.]

On Creating a Presbyterian Office for the Prevention and Healing of Minister of Word and Sacrament Misconduct and Abuse—From the Presbytery of San Francisco.

The Presbytery of San Francisco overtures the 218th General Assembly (2008) to authorize the following:

1. Establish an Office for the Prevention and Healing of Misconduct and Abuse by Ministers of Word and Sacrament as an on-going and permanent structure in the Office of the Stated Clerk and the General Assembly Council. This office will be church-wide, serving local congregations, governing bodies, world missions, and other church services. The mission of this office is to
  - a. educate, providing training and resources for the prevention of and response to sexual abuse and misconduct by ministers of Word and Sacrament;
  - b. provide training and resources for the healing of individuals, congregations, communities, and presbyteries impacted by minister of Word and Sacrament abuse;
  - c. encourage churchwide systems of accountability for ministers and church professionals;
  - d. offer a place of sanctuary and confidentiality, providing advocacy, information, and referrals for those in church-related abusive situations, both primary and secondary victims and congregations; and
  - e. develop theological resources on restorative justice, grace, forgiveness, and reconciliation, and address issues of faith related to the abuse of power by a minister of Word and Sacrament.

2. Hiring of the director, oversight, and direction of the office will be provided by an advisory board appointed by the General Assembly Council to include survivors, professionals, and those experienced in the prevention and healing of minister of Word and Sacrament abuse.

3. The office will be staffed by a minister of Word and Sacrament or an elder with experience in healing sexual abuse and with clinical training preferred.

Alternate Resolution:

Joint Resolution Between the Office of the General Assembly; the General Assembly Council; the Overture Advocates of the Presbyteries of San Francisco, Geneva, and San Jose; and the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns

While the Office of the General Assembly (OGA) and the General Assembly Council (GAC) provide a combination of staff and resources to assist in prevention of sexual misconduct and to support middle governing bodies and local churches when a minister of the Word and Sacrament controlled or employed by them is accused of sexual misconduct, this approach may have been perceived to be reactive rather than responsive, and could be more proactive. The approach should be expanded and strengthened to ensure appropriate resources are easily accessible to middle governing bodies and local particular churches. At the same time, survivors must receive information to enable them to access pastoral care and access advocacy assistance regardless of whether the perpetrator is a minister of the Word and Sacrament, member, elder, deacon, commissioned lay pastor, volunteer, or nonordained staff doing ministry, including Christian educators and youth leaders of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

To strengthen and improve resourcing for middle governing bodies and local particular churches, the OGA/GAC will:

1. Better coordinate and develop resources by forming a joint OGA/GAC staff advisory team that will meet regularly to review existing resources and recommend development of additional resources; review the hotline response to ensure it includes appropriate pastoral and advocacy elements; review and recommend Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) "best practices" to be included in a revised Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Sexual Misconduct Policy and Guidelines to be recommended as guidelines to middle governing bodies and local churches, which will be sent as a report to the 219th General Assembly (2010); and to review the training resources for needed updates and enhancements.

2. Train three to four people to answer the hotline in the absence of the Sexual Misconduct Ombudsperson.

3. Survey, through the Office of Middle Governing Body Relations, to determine what resources presbyteries need for the prevention of and response to incidents of sexual misconduct and, if needed, to develop and distribute at reasonable cost to middle governing bodies and local particular churches, a training on the topic of preventing and responding to sexual misconduct by ministers of the Word and Sacrament, member, elder, deacon, commissioned lay pastor, volunteer, or non-ordained staff doing ministry, including Christian educators and youth leaders. This training could be available on DVD and available for order on the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Website at reasonable cost. The advisory staff team could investigate online training and train-the-trainer educational programs to be provided through third party vendors at a reasonable fee per participant.

4. Place resources currently available on the PC(USA) website in one easily accessible area of the website, and develop and distribute a brochure to promote the available resources on the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) website to middle governing bodies and local churches and available opportunities for training.

5. Increase middle governing body and local particular church awareness of the availability of these resources through MGB Connect, OGA and GAC websites, by sending online communications.

Rationale

Sexual abuse occurs more frequently than we would like to believe. Statistics indicate that 1 in 4 girls and 1 in 6 boys will have been sexually abused by the age of 18.<sup>1</sup> Ninety percent of offenders are known to the child and the typical offender is a male using his position of power to take advantage of a child's trust, need for affection, and innocence.<sup>2</sup>

Donaldina Cameron House is a faith-based community center founded by Presbyterian Women in 1874 as a rescue mission for Chinese women trafficked to this country for prostitution or domestic slavery. In 1947, as a National Mission of the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A., a youth work component was added and an ordained pastor was called to be the director of a youth ministry. This pastor also eventually became co-pastor at the Presbyterian Church in Chinatown. A strong, charismatic leader, he established a hugely successful and popular youth ministry in Chinatown for the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A. During his tenure, forty young persons attended seminary and others became fraternal workers or active lay persons.

However, in 1987, ten years after he retired, stories surfaced of his sexual molestation with adolescent youth in the Cameron House program. The Presbytery of San Francisco formed an investigating committee; however, just as charges were to be filed, he renounced the jurisdiction of the church. Victims felt abandoned by the church, were sometimes accused of lying and worse, and were left to deal with their abuse alone. It would take another fifteen years before the sexual abuse would be brought fully to light by the Final Report of the Healing Task Force of the Cameron House Board of Directors. Finally, a safe environment was created to allow this “secret” to be discussed openly with victims, the Cameron House community, and the congregation of the Presbyterian Church of Chinatown. Victims of this abuse would finally be heard and find their voice. They found that they were not the only persons abused, but that there were many other victims.

Victims were provided support for healing. In turn, they became survivors who helped Cameron House and the Presbyterian Church in Chinatown in the healing process.

Unfortunately, what occurred at Cameron House is not an isolated incident of sexual abuse by ministers of Word and Sacrament in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). All across the country, presbyteries are dealing with cases of sexual misconduct and abuse by ministers of Word and Sacrament. Internationally, the PC(USA) has dealt with the abuse of missionary children in a mission school in the Congo by a Presbyterian minister and is currently investigating allegations of similar problems with mission schools in Egypt and the Cameroon.

When the Healing Task Force of Cameron House began to implement the recommendations for healing contained in its final report, it was unable to find denominational resources for healing victims of sexual abuse by ministers of Word and Sacrament other than a hotline for reporting abuse in the international mission field. As a result, Cameron House had to develop its own healing program of community workshops, retreats, group therapy for victims, retreats for victims and spouses, and locate culturally competent therapists for individual therapy. After an appeal from Cameron House, the General Assembly Council provided monetary support of individual therapy for victims.

In the aftermath of recent media coverage of sexual abuse by Catholic priests and by Protestant ministers, presbyteries throughout the denomination have implemented sexual misconduct policies and procedures and now require ministers and lay leaders under their jurisdiction to attend sexual abuse training. Training, policies, and procedures are important and essential, but the denomination has now begun to address the far-reaching impact of sexual abuse on victims, families, and congregations. Sexual abuse not only traumatizes victims, it devastates spouses and families. The impact of sexual abuse extends even beyond victims and their families. It often creates distrust of the institutional church and loss of faith. The health of the congregation is also jeopardized. When there is sexual misconduct by the minister, it fractures the church community and sometimes leads to schism.

The idea for a denominational center was first raised in a Cameron House sponsored retreat for victims/survivors. Clearly, instances of sexual abuse and misconduct by Presbyterian ministers will continue to damage not only of victims and their extended relationships but congregations and presbyteries as well. If it is to restore the faith in God that is often destroyed by the abuse by ministers of Word and Sacrament, the institutional church needs to demonstrate a strong commitment to justice, advocacy, and healing for victims. The establishment of an Office for the Prevention and Healing of Misconduct and Abuse by Ministers of Word and Sacrament by the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) will demonstrate its unequivocal commitment to providing resources and support for restoring health and wholeness to those wounded by sexual abuse and to the boarder communities of relationships that are also impacted.

Comment on Item 03-20—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) and the General Assembly Council (GAC).

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) and the General Assembly Council (GAC) suggests that the current structure and positions within the national staff provide the resources to address the concerns raised in this overture. As such, the COGA and the GAC urge disapproval of Item 03-20.

Sexual misconduct within the context of the church is sinful and contrary to Scripture, PC(USA) Constitution, and General Assembly policy. All congregations and governing bodies are urged to address the threat of sexual misconduct in a variety of ways. The General Assembly has urged that congregations and governing bodies create spaces for reflection of healthy sexuality, boundaries, ministries, and missions of members and officers of the church in order to prevent and respond to those instances of sexual misconduct within the context of the church.

This overture seeks to authorize and fund an office for the prevention and healing of misconduct and abuse by ministers of the Word and Sacrament as an ongoing and permanent structure in the Office of the General Assembly and the General Assembly Council. According to the overture, the financial implications include funding for a staff member, resources for healing and theological concepts of restorative justice, and an advocacy board appointed by the GAC.

The overture limits this position to prevention and healing of misconduct and abuse by ministers of the Word and Sacrament and does not address misconduct and abuse by others within the context of the church. Unfortunately, sexual misconduct within the context of the church can be varied depending upon the perpetrator's relationship with the church such as member, elder, deacon, minister of the Word and Sacrament, commissioned lay pastor, volunteer, and non-ordained staff doing ministry, including Christian educators and youth leaders.

Currently, the OGA and GAC have offices that provide the following resources for congregations and governing bodies responding to sexual misconduct within the context of the church.

Office of the General Assembly:

- Manager of Judicial Process and Social Witness

—Provides advice and resources to governing bodies regarding policies and procedures for prevention, reporting, and response to allegations of sexual misconduct.

—Provides advice and resources regarding the use of the Rules of Discipline to provide accountability for members, elders, deacons, and ministers of the Word and Sacrament.

General Assembly Council:

- Sexual Misconduct Ombudsman

—Provides advice and resources to overseas missionaries regarding prevention, reporting, and response of sexual misconduct.

—Staffs a hotline to advise persons regarding prevention, reporting, and response procedures.

- Compassion, Peace and Justice Associate for Child Advocacy

—Provides educational materials for the advocacy of children within the context of the church.

- Racial Ethnic and Women's Ministries Associate for Women's Advocacy

—Provides staffing to a Committee of the General Assembly that is empowered to advocate for women's concerns within the context of the church

- Compassion, Peace and Justice Associate for Social Welfare Organizations (also the Executive Director of the Presbyterian Health Education and Welfare Association)

—Provides staffing to the Presbyterian Child Advocacy Network, which provides advocacy for children both within the church and the community and has as a focus child abuse in general. This network most recently provided a response on the Web to lift up April as the Child Abuse Prevention month. <http://www.pcusa.org/phewa/childabuseawareness.htm>

A Website addressing the issues of sexual misconduct within the context of the church is maintained in part by a staff team made up of each of the above offices and can be found at <http://www.pcusa.org/sexualmisconduct>.

The rationale for the overture describes the experience of the Presbytery of San Francisco and the Healing Task Force of Cameron House as they were responding to allegations of sexual abuse of minors by a minister of the Word and Sacrament. Both of these entities worked hard at creating a space for healing and transparency after the horrendous acts of child sexual abuse. All governing bodies that have to create such spaces for healing recognize that there are a variety of responses that may be required in order to empower or encourage such healing. These responses include holding the perpetrator accountable, reporting to the secular authorities, providing a safe place for the survivors to tell their stories, providing a safe place for the church to engage in mission with the survivors and their families. The particular responses will depend upon the situation and by necessity have to be carried out by the churches, congregations, and governing bodies that are affected. It is not an easy process, nor is there a one process fits all approach. There is the commitment on behalf of all who are in community together within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to seek God's will in preventing, reporting, responding, and providing care when sexual misconduct occurs by members of our community or within our community.

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 03-20

Advice and Counsel on Item 03-20—From the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC).

Item 03-20 urges creating a Presbyterian Office for the Prevention and Healing of Minister of Word and Sacrament misconduct and abuse.

The Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC) concurs with the Office of General Assembly (OGA) and the General Assembly Council (GAC) in advising the disapproval of this overture.

Rationale

In a time of limited resources, we believe there is an effective current structure and sufficient positions within the national staff to address these concerns. These structures are outlined in OGA-GAC response. We also recognize that while these resources are in place at the General Assembly level, any particular response will have to be carried out and tailored to fit the situation on the local level in the churches, congregations, and governing bodies that are affected. The ACWC will continue monitoring this process, holding General Assembly and GAC accountable and assessing policy effectiveness as part of its regular work.

Commissioners' Resolution. On Sharing Costs of Legal Defense in Our Connectional System of Government.

That the 218th General Assembly (2008) do the following:

1. Provide funds to the Office of General Assembly for the purpose of sharing the cost of legal fees defending our Constitution against the New Wineskins Non-geographic Presbytery of the Evangelical Presbyterian Church and a group which has joined that denomination.

2. From these funds, reimburse the Presbytery of Northern New England for half of all of its remaining legal costs up to a maximum of $185,000.

3. That the Office of the General Assembly establish and promote an Extra Commitment Opportunity (ECO) account that will be the source of this support and welcomes contributions from the whole church.

[Financial Implications: (2008): $0; (2009): $2,000,000; (2010): $0 (Per Capita-OGA)]

Rationale

We are in the civil court defending freedom of religion, the right of the PC(USA) and any other denomination to organize and govern itself according to its beliefs. The precedent set in the decision in this case could have serious and far-reaching effects.

The Book of Order, G-1.0400, reads as follows:

4. The Historic Principles of Church Government

The radical principles of Presbyterian church government and discipline are:

That the several different congregations of believers, taken collectively, constitute one Church of Christ, called emphatically the Church; that a larger part of the Church, or a representation of it, should govern a smaller, or determine matters of controversy which arise therein; that, in like manner, a representation of the whole should govern and determine in regard to every part, and to all the parts united: that is, that a majority shall govern; and consequently that appeals may be carried from lower to higher governing bodies, till they be finally decided by the collected wisdom and united voice of the whole Church. For these principles and this procedure, the example of the apostles and the practice of the primitive Church are considered as authority. [The text of this section was adopted in 1797 by the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America. In this quotation the word “radical” is used in its primary meaning of “fundamental and basic,” and the word “appeals” is used in a general sense rather than with reference to a case involved in judicial process.]

The PC(USA) holds that the Church is an organic unity of which its synods, presbyteries, and local congregations are integral parts.

On September 15, 2007, the Presbytery of Northern New England recognized a problem in the Londonderry Presbyterian Church of Londonderry New Hampshire, in that the session had called a congregational meeting and recommended that the congregation vote to disaffiliate with the PC(USA). In response to this action, the presbytery elected an administrative commission to work with the session and congregation for resolution.

On September 27, 2007, the session of the Londonderry PC(USA) filed suit against the presbytery, obtaining a court order prohibiting the administrative commission from taking any action, prohibiting the presbytery from exercising any oversight in the selection of their pastor, prohibiting the presbytery from exerting any control over the property of the congregation, and prohibiting any minister or elder or representative of the presbytery from entering onto the church property.

On September 30, 2007, the Londonderry Presbyterian Church voted in a congregational meeting to leave the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to join the New Wineskins Non-Geographic Presbytery of the Evangelical Presbyterian Church. The session immediately brought a civil law suit against the Presbytery of Northern New England and obtained a civil injunction to prevent the presbytery from settling this matter within the framework of our Constitution, or even entering the property.

The continuing congregation (those who did not vote to leave) is now about 200 members strong and is meeting in another location with 80 to more than 125 attending worship each Sunday. The newly constituted session of the continuing PC(USA) congregation has brought a civil suit against the dissidents to reclaim its property that was illegally taken. These two lawsuits have been joined into one trial with the presbytery covering all legal costs. So far, we have incurred more than $226,000 in legal costs. We estimate another $150,000 by the end of this year. These legal costs are running much higher than the $80,000 in the presbytery’s 2008 budget.

The Presbytery of Northern New England consists of 3,837 members in 31 churches and 3 ethnic fellowships. Most of the churches are small rural churches with an average membership of 124 and over half with less than 100 members. The presbytery’s budgeted income for 2008 is $347,925. The additional legal costs for 2008 may increase presbytery expenditures by more than 50 percent over its budget. Many of the churches are already struggling to pay their per capita of $35.25 and any significant increase is not possible.

For a small, mostly rural, presbytery these legal costs are extremely difficult to handle. The result of this civil lawsuit will set a precedent for our entire denomination and all of us will benefit or suffer from the consequences. Our connectional system of government compels us to work together in our mission. It is unfortunate that part of our mission is to deal with such distasteful affairs as defending our constitution and our freedom of religion in civil courts.

We have received small contributions from General Assembly and synod to help with our costs. Additionally, a law firm in New York has been made available to assist our attorneys. We are very grateful for this assistance, and we realize that neither General Assembly nor synod has the budgeted funds to provide any additional assistance.

We must be careful that we do not lose the civil lawsuit and set legal precedent endangering our Constitution, simply because we cannot afford to put up the best defense.

Thus, we ask that funds be provided to share costs in this matter. The $185,000 represents approximately half of the estimated legal costs of $376,000.

The Reverend Thomas Woodward, Presbytery of Northern New England
Elder Ingrid Cyros, Presbytery of Northern New England

COGA COMMENT ON ITEM 03-21

Comment on Item 03-21—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA).

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly does not concur in the relief requested by this resolution.

The strategy of inviting secular judges to interject with presbyteries doing constitutional and pastoral work with disaffected congregations is eloquently described in this commissioner resolution. The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) expresses its appreciation to the Presbytery of Northern New England for its care of the loyal continuing congregation in Londonderry and its faithful defense of this important constitutional principal. The COGA notes that an additional thirty-nine presbyteries face, or have faced, similar challenges. The spiritual, emotional, and financial costs faced by our presbyteries in dealing with such painful situations is extraordinary. The whole church owes all those presbyteries, including Northern New England, gratitude for their faithfulness.

The Stated Clerk has also made his staff, as well as the PC(USA) general counsel, available to these presbyteries in advising them how to navigate between their church constitutional responsibilities and secular legal interventions into their lives. Virtually all of those presbyteries have taken advantage of this resource.

The 202nd General Assembly (1990) adopted actions that permit the Stated Clerk to assist presbyteries with up to 50 percent of the direct legal costs, that is, the hours and costs of services and fees billed by attorneys or courts. Unfortunately, our present annual budget for this assistance is only $50,000 intended to cover all ongoing cases. Recognizing that a single legal dispute might easily exceed that amount, the Stated Clerk has negotiated with faithful Presbyterian attorneys so that the church may become their firm's pro bono client. The Stated Clerk has made that resource available to presbyteries facing secular lawsuits. Most of those thirty-nine presbyteries, including Northern New England, have gratefully accepted such assistance. The Stated Clerk has provided the Presbytery of Northern New England $20,000 in defending this civil lawsuit. The Stated Clerk has in hand requests for additional funds from this presbytery.

Finally, Section IV.B.2.b. of the Organization for Mission gives the Stated Clerk responsibility and authority to "participate in legal proceedings in civil and criminal courts." Recently the Stated Clerk, upon the advice of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, has joined a number of amicus (friend of the court) briefs in support of the Episcopal Church in America and its current overwhelming conflict with local congregations seeking to leave its communion.

The approval of the resolution as presented would seriously burden our present resources and certainly increase per capita costs.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly:

1. urges the 218th General Assembly (2008) to be in prayer for its presbyteries facing these difficult challenges;
2. commends the Stated Clerk to continue to provide legal and advisory services and support;
3. urges the presbyteries to continue their faithfulness; and
4. in response to this resolution, COGA urges the assembly to approve the Advisory Committee on the Constitution's recommendations (Item 07-13) regarding the Evangelical Presbyterian Church's New Wineskin's transitional presbytery to give presbytery an additional tool for use in such situations.

Commissioners Resolution. On Amending Standing Rule B.5.d. Granting Presbytery Executives and Clerks Advisory Vote.

That the 218th General Assembly (2008) amend Standing Rule B.5.d. by striking the existing text and inserting new text as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

~~"d. The presbytery's executive staff person (or designee) and the presbytery's stated clerk shall be supplied with all reports and materials related to the General Assembly, but shall not be entitled to speak in plenary meetings or in meetings of assembly committees unless called upon by a moderator to provide information. The executive staff (or designee) and stated~~ clerks of presbyteries and synods shall be able to be a constituency to be polled in an advisory capacity by the Moderator prior to certain issues that come before the plenary. Presbytery staff and synod stated clerks will not serve as advisory delegates as a part of General Assembly committees nor have the privilege of the floor in committee or plenary unless elected as a commissioner by a presbytery.”

Rationale

Many of us in presbytery leadership, whether we like it or not, have to be in the trenches interpreting the actions of the General Assembly. The actions of a General Assembly will be topics of conversation in session meetings and congregations, and we have to deal with the ramifications of some of those actions.

Financial implications: Unknown at this time but since executive presbyters/general presbyters and stated clerks already sit at table, the assembly would only need to add the voting machines.

The Reverend Walt Peters, Presbytery of Baltimore

Item 03-23

[The assembly disapproved Item 03-23. See pp. 34, 35.]

Commissioners’ Resolution. On Publishing in the Minutes the Full Audits of Each Assembly Entity Completed Since the Previous General Assembly Meeting.

That the 218th General Assembly (2008) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) direct the Stated Clerk to publish with the Minutes of each General Assembly the full audits of each assembly entity that have been completed since the last meeting of the General Assembly.

Rationale

Sessions, presbyteries, and synods are expected to record in their minutes that appropriate financial reviews have been conducted and the results of those reviews. Approval of this resolution would provide a similar expectation of assembly entities, would provide for transparency in our records, and would create an important historical and public record for the church into the future.

Item 03-24

[The assembly disapproved Item 03-23. See pp. 34, 35.]

Commissioners’ Resolution. On Amending the Standing Rules Related to Communication Strategies, the Media, and the Unity of the Church.

That the 218th General Assembly (2008) amend the Standing Rules of the General Assembly as follows:

1. Amend Standing Rule A.4.d. by adding a new paragraph as follows: [Text to be added is shown as italic.]

“d. Advice and counsel memoranda are resources prepared by the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy, Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns, and the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns for the purpose of providing information about existing policy, current work on specific topics, recent developments, and other factors useful to commissioners as they consider issues before the assembly.

“Additionally, an advice and counsel memorandum shall be prepared by the Communications Office of the General Assembly Council with a communication strategy, including possible media coverage, for the PC(USA) and/or the general public related to overtures and recommendations that are coming to the assembly. Additionally, the Theology and Worship Office may provide a statement regarding the potential impact on preserving and promoting the peace, unity, and purity of the church, when applicable, related to overtures and recommendations the assembly is considering.”

2. Amend Standing Rule E.7. by adding new text as “d.” and re-lettering sections “d.”–“h” as “e.”–“i.” as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“d. A communication strategy, including possible media coverage, for the PC(USA) and/or the general public shall be presented at the time that the recommendation is considered by the assembly. Additionally, a statement regarding the potential impact on preserving and promoting the peace, unity, and purity of the church, when applicable, will accompany recommendations the assembly is considering.”

~~“d. e.~~ Recommendation for assembly action, or action taken by the committee, shall identify the entity that is directed to carry out and report back to the General Assembly regarding the matter dealt with by the recommendation or action.

~~“e. f.~~ When the entity to which an assembly action is directed is a part of the General Assembly Council, such as a division or related entity, the Stated Clerk shall automatically amend the language so that the action is directed to the General Assembly Council. The council shall determine which entity shall carry out the responsibility and report to the assembly on the matter.

~~“f. g.~~ The votes recorded in the assembly committee on each recommendation or action shall be included in the report for the information of the commissioners, but shall be omitted from the Journal of the General Assembly.

~~“g. h.~~ If the report of an assembly committee proposes or records an action affecting the interests of an entity of the General Assembly or of a governing body other than the General Assembly, it shall be the responsibility of that assembly committee to confer with the representative(s) designated by the entity or governing body concerned before proposing such action to the General Assembly or taking such an action.

~~“h. i.~~ Minority Report [Text in the rest of this section remains unchanged.]”

Rationale

The General Assembly, according to the Constitution, is responsible for preserving and promoting the unity of the church (Book of Order, G-13.0101; G-13.0103a, b).

The General Assembly, on behalf of the whole church, is responsible for communication (Book of Order, G-13.0103j).

In an internet instant communication age, being proactive and giving forethought on effectively communicating the actions of each assembly is essential in preserving the peace and unity of the church.

Past actions of the General Assembly have been framed and defined by those outside the church before anyone from the General Assembly had thought about a communication strategy.

Implicit in the responsibility of the General Assembly is a pastoral responsibility for the whole church.

The issues that each assembly must resolve and decide are often complex and controversial, and some have very localized implications. The above additions to the Standing Rules would help General Assembly committees and commissioners address issues related to the unity of the church, as well as address communication strategies as part of how we are [and do] church in the 21st century.

The Reverend Clinton Cotrell, Presbytery of Peace River
Elder Lee Martin, Presbytery of Peace River

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 03-24

Advice and Counsel on Item 03-24—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy.

The ACSWP advises that the assembly answer Item 03-24 with the alternate resolution:

“The 218th General Assembly (2008) requests the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly to consider amending Standing Rule A.4.(d) of the General Assembly as follows: [Text to be added is shown as italic.]

“d. Advice and counsel memoranda are resources prepared by the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy, Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns, and the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns for the purpose of providing information about existing policy, current work on specific topics, recent developments, and other factors useful to commissioners as they consider issues before the assembly.

“Additionally, the Communications Office of the General Assembly Council shall review all business submitted to the assembly by the 45-day deadline as part of its overall communications strategy, using their professional expertise to prepare proactive approaches to topics expected to garner media attention.”

Rationale

The commissioners’ concern for proactive communications strategy is understandable, given media interest in matters of controversy, real or imagined. At the same time, most commissioners are able to judge which topics are likely to be controversial and the Communications Office already does prepare strategies for interpreting potential General Assembly actions, including issuing background press releases produced by Presbyterian News Service. Further, most social witness resolutions and policy statements contain basic communication strategies for publication, correspondence, and electronic posting of materials. At all points, however, care is taken not to anticipate action by the assembly itself, but once action has been taken, to ensure that it is reported faithfully both within and outside the church.

As Item 03-24 recognizes, the advice and counsel process is designed to ensure that commissioners have the best information available to them in order to make informed decisions. The calling of commissioners is to consider all items of business in light of their understanding of God’s redemptive work in Christ, and to seek the will of God through the Holy Spirit in a shared process of discernment and deliberation. The peace, unity, and purity of the church, and the six great ends of the church, are ways of speaking of the church’s response to God’s intent, but should not be reduced to considerations of self-censorship or conflict-avoidance. The Book of Order affirms that “truth is in order to goodness,” emphasizing the practical and public impact of our faithfulness to Christ. It does not speak of regulating the faithfulness of the church in terms of anticipated popular responses—this would be another form of what the commissioners rightly oppose, letting secular interests frame, condition, or limit our witness to the living Word of God.

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy hastens to note that the public attention given to actions of the General Assembly has no necessary relation to their intrinsic importance. Overall, the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy favors more public attention rather than less to General Assembly action, but recognizes that predicting media impact is often a subjective process and can distort consideration of issues on their merits. We affirm that the commissioners to the General Assembly faithfully seek to discern the mind of Christ and communicate that discernment to the church and world as clearly and carefully as possible.

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 03-24

Advice and Counsel on Item 03-24 —From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC).

Item 03-24 asks for an addition to the General Assembly Standing Rules related to communication strategies, the media, and the unity.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC) advises disapproval of this item.

Rationale

Advice and counsel memoranda are one means used to give commissioners information necessary for their decision making. To include a communication strategy and media plan in the decision-making process suggests that concern for public image influences the assembly’s decisions. Public image should not hinder the assembly’s decision to act according to the will of the Holy Spirit, remembering “God alone is Lord of the conscience” (Book of Order, G-1.0301).

COGA COMMENT ON ITEM 03-24

Comment on Item 03-24—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA).

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly raises serious concerns over the proposed Standing Rules changes proposed by Item 03-24.

The theological integrity of the Presbyterian process is that the session of any single congregation can draft an overture, petition their presbytery, and access the General Assembly. This open process undergirds the relational nature of our governance. In the 300 years of history of the PC(USA), overtures have often been the window for the Spirit to move the church in a new direction.

There are several other issues raised:

- Overtures, recommendations, and commissioner resolutions should be evaluated primarily on their merit and not on the potential media impact. Concerns about the secular media should not redefine the open process for assembly business.
- The Standing Rules in section H.2.a.(11) assign to the Stated Clerk the responsibility to “report on actions of the General Assembly.” A communication strategy would need to be in cooperation with the Office of the General Assembly.
- The General Assembly itself has the capacity to determine potential impact on the peace, unity, and purity of the whole church.
- The agencies of the General Assembly already have the power to prepare comments on any item of business.

GAC COMMENT ON ITEM 03-24

We appreciate the concerns expressed in this resolution, and believe that the means are already in place to address the underlying issues. The General Assembly Council, in collaboration with the other five General Assembly agencies, already does communications planning for those items of assembly business that are most likely to generate immediate publicity requirements. This represents less than 5 percent of assembly business, and is covered within existing budgets. To proactively plan communications strategy for 100 percent of business would drastically increase personnel and material costs—just under $1million per 100 items of business.

The General Assembly Council is committed to collaboration and believes the communications staffs of the other five agencies should also be included in communications planning—specifically in the items of business to be incorporated in their mission and ministry.

Item 03-B

[The Assembly Committee on General Assembly Procedures approved Item 03-B. See pp. 34, 35.]

Report of the Committee on Review of the Office of the General Assembly

I. Introduction

The General Assembly Committee on Review submits to the 218th General Assembly (2008) this written report of its examination and review of the work of the Office of the General Assembly (hereafter OGA). This review process was established by the 213th General Assembly (2001) to provide regular oversight of the work of General Assembly agencies. The purpose of the review is “to evaluate the relationship of their individual [agency] ministry with the mission of the whole Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)” (Minutes, 2001, Part 1, p. 67, addition of Standing Rule E.10.). The instructions to the Committee on Review were that it must conduct the process according to predetermined standards and present a written report to the next General Assembly.

Fundamental to this process is that the agency being reviewed shall conduct a self-study review of its work over the previous six-year period (2001–2006). The Committee on Review, having been elected by the previous General Assembly, then participates with the agency and its staff in a study and review process to determine how the agency relates and contributes to the mission of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). The review process is further guided by an Agency Review Manual, developed by the Office of the General Assembly to focus and facilitate the committee’s work. The review process is not an attempt to look for problems, but to evaluate current practices and offer affirmations and recommendations for improvements where appropriate.

In accordance with Standing Rule M.4.a. (now found in the Organization for Mission, Section IV.D.1.), the following persons were elected by the 217th General Assembly (2006) to serve as the General Assembly Committee on Review of the Office of the General Assembly: The Reveren John Cairns, moderator, Elder Carl Carpenter, Elder Ernest Ettlich, Elder Freda Gardner, The Reverend Bruce Gillette, The Reverend Adele Langworthy, The Reverend Michael Livingston, The Reverend John McFayden, Elder Pat Niles, Elder James Tse, and ecumenical representative The Reverend Lowell Almen, ELCA. The Reverend Danelle McKinney was also elected but was unable to serve.

These individuals brought a wide variety of skills and experience to the task. The group included former moderators of presbyteries, synods, and the General Assembly, stated clerks, and veterans of service on the boards of several denominations agencies. Our work was greatly facilitated by the staff support of Gary Luhr and Arlene Torrens. We wish to express our deep appreciation for their attention to the many large and small details necessary to carry out this process within a very limited meeting schedule.

This report is the result of three multiday meetings of the committee in Louisville, during which we met with much of the staff of OGA and others whose work intersects with that of OGA. We are grateful for the cooperation of Stated Clerk Clifton Kirkpatrick and Director of Operations/Associate Stated Clerk Gradye Parsons for their personal participation and for facilitating the participation of other members of the OGA staff. Further work was done through a number of telephone conference calls and a visit by a delegation of committee members to the Presbyterian Historical Society in Philadelphia.

The Committee on Review appreciates the work done by the OGA staff on their self-study. It provided a comprehensive base for the committee's work and was an important reference resource throughout the review process.

II. Church Relatedness

The first criterion for assessment set forth in the Agency Review Manual is church relatedness. The Committee on Review asked, "Is OGA doing what the church and its congregations and governing bodies need for it to be doing, and in a way that is faithful to its defined role?" Said another way, "How does OGA serve and support the church's mission and exhibit a constant awareness of its servant role in the life of the PC(USA)?" Is it accountable? Does it exercise appropriate leadership? Does it cooperate with other agencies of the church in areas where responsibilities may overlap? These questions were addressed as follows:

AWARENESS OF OGA'S MISSION AND SERVANT ROLE

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has a diverse group of people serving as the staff of OGA. The staff reflects in its diversity the PC(USA)'s desire to be a multicultural church.

Those with whom we met displayed competence, openness, and a generous spirit. They bring years of experience serving the church in a variety of roles in congregations, middle governing bodies, overseas mission service, and ecumenical organizations. The staff is a cohesive, collegial community that understands its OGA work to be a "call." We were not charged to evaluate the OGA staff, but the committee did conclude that many are well-matched for their present service. There is a clear understanding of OGA's specific mission and the staff's role in helping to fulfill that mission. The Review Committee heard few complaints about OGA's basic operations, and much praise for the work of individual members of its staff. Despite work that sometimes involves controversial issues and demanding constituents, it is our judgment that the OGA staff performs its duties faithfully with sensitivity and intelligence.

The faithful leadership of Stated Clerk Cliff Kirkpatrick as head of the OGA staff set a clear example of servanthood for the staff and the whole church. During the years under review, Dr. Kirkpatrick, along with former General Assembly Council Executive Director John Detterick, visited as many presbyteries and synods as they could, not only to share their vision for our denomination, but also to listen to those whom they sought to serve. Thousands of Presbyterians throughout the church had the opportunity at these meetings to talk with these leaders and to see that the Stated Clerk served and cared for the PC(USA) by listening, praying, preaching, teaching, and building community.

FIDELITY, ACCOUNTABILITY, AND LEADERSHIP IN DELIVERING SERVICES

Many with whom we spoke praised the quality of work done by OGA. The OGA's servant-style leadership is evident in its accessibility by phone and e-mail and by the staff's timely and faith-filled responses to questions and concerns from all sources. Many senior staff have BlackBerries, which help in these efforts, but can also be a burden for their owners. The staff's non-defensive attitude in responding to inquiries has helped to ameliorate the inevitable conflicts that can occur within a diverse denomination. The addition of a communications coordinator has helped OGA respond to concerns more rapidly and thoroughly and be proactive in conveying information to the larger church. These efforts have significantly improved communication, but in spite of the work of the OGA staff, some challenges remain with the dissemination of information beyond the middle governing body level.

Denominational statistics are well kept. The ability to file a congregation's annual numbers online has been well-received.

The Presbyterian Historical Society is a resource that is appreciated by ecumenical groups, national agencies, middle governing bodies, congregations, and individual researchers. The latter group ranges from people tracing their family trees to graduate students working on dissertations to professional historians writing books. (Further comments on the Presbyterian Historical Society appear in Appendix A.)

HONORING THE CONSTITUTION AND GENERAL ASSEMBLY POLICIES

The OGA is a faithful steward of our denomination's constitution and polity. The Review Committee saw clear evidence of the staff's commitment to the health and unity of the church. One excellent way of promoting the Constitution has been through the OGA-led "Common Faith, Common Mission" conferences at Presbyterian seminaries.

The Department of Constitutional Services received strong affirmations in several surveys from those who used its services. Presbytery stated clerks rated this department as "very effective" (57 percent) or "effective" (33 percent) when it came to doing its work. Ninety-four percent of presbytery stated clerks who inquired about an interpretation of the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) reported satisfaction with the results they received. The department worked consistently, in a focused manner, to serve the church in the midst of disputes over church property, ordination standards, and a process of phased selective divestment in multinational corporations operating in Israel. The department acted quickly to ensure that the OGA staff responded consistently to questions regarding the potential impact of A Season of Discernment: The Final Report of the Theological Task Force on the Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church as approved by the 217th General Assembly (2006).

The addition of an Office of Immigration Issues has enabled the Department of Constitutional Services to provide a helpful and timely new service. The staff person in that office has been a legal and pastoral resource to many presbyteries and congregations. A Presbyterian News Service story in May 2006 reported that Julia Thorne, manager for immigration issues, had been contacted by sixty to seventy presbyteries in her first year after being hired in July 2005. This new resource has been clearly important to the church as it seeks to be faithful to General Assembly policies regarding immigration. A helpful resource kit and the increased level of training that this office has provided throughout the church on this topic are commendable. A concern raised by the Review Committee was a lack of sufficient funding for this office.

The synergy of the new vocation office, which is lodged in OGA but reports to both OGA and the General Assembly Council (GAC), is exciting. This joint office is successfully meeting a variety of needs of OGA, GAC, and presbyteries. Ordination exams are administered more smoothly, though some concern was raised with the Review Committee that the process of the Presbyteries Cooperative Committee on Examinations for Candidates for selecting exam readers and reading exams needs attention in order to show greater sensitivity to racial ethnic candidates.

The leadership of the Stated Clerk in communicating the denomination's social witness policy is vital and has been faithful to General Assembly mandates. Commissioners to the 216th General Assembly (2004) specifically commended the Stated Clerk's leadership in opposition to the war in Iraq. Assisted by letters from the Stated Clerk, the church saw a positive resolution of the boycott it supported against Taco Bell over compensation of migrant farm workers.

ECUMENICAL RELATIONSHIPS

The ecumenical movement experienced several ups and downs during the period under review. The Review Committee commends OGA for providing strong leadership and resourcing to ecumenical agencies and initiatives nationally and worldwide. The Stated Clerk and the Department of Ecumenical and Agency Relationships coordinated the representation of the PC(USA) on the governing board of the National Council of Churches and its program commissions. The church was represented on the Central Committee of the World Council of Churches (WCC) as well as key programmatic committees of this world ecumenical body. In addition, during this period of evaluation, the PC(USA) sent a delegation to the Ninth Assembly of the WCC in Porto Alegre, Brazil. The Reverend Robina Winbush, Associate Stated Clerk for ecumenical and agency relationships, preached at the closing worship of the assembly.

The PC(USA) was a founding member of Churches Uniting in Christ, which evolved out of the Consultation on Church Union. (See the CUiC document in the appendices to the Book of Order.) Unfortunately, progress continues to be slow for full communion between the member churches. A multi-church witness for racial justice is still a concern. The OGA continued to monitor and encourage interpretation and implementation of the Formula of Agreement with the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America, the United Church of Christ, and the Reformed Church in America, and noted progress toward deepening relationships among the full communion partners.

In 2006, the PC(USA) became a provisional member of Christian Churches Together in the USA, which has the potential of becoming a dynamic organization not only for mainline Protestants, but also for Roman Catholics, Pentecostals, and Evangelicals, who have not worked together through a national council in the United States as they have in some other countries.

In December 2000, Edward Cardinal Cassidy, then president of the Roman Catholic Church's Pontifical Council for the Promotion of Christian Unity, visited the Presbyterian Center in Louisville, Kentucky, for discussions with a delegation from the PC(USA) and others. The starting point for the discussions was the Presbyterian paper "The Successor to Peter," written in response to the 1995 encyclical, Ut unum sint, by the late Pope John Paul II that invited suggestions for new ways of understanding Christian unity. In March 2001, Stated Clerk Cliff Kirkpatrick led a delegation to Rome to continue the conversation.

In 2006, the General Assemblies of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, and the Cumberland Presbyterian Church in America met concurrently in Birmingham, Alabama. The concurrent assemblies were a wonderful way to celebrate the 300th anniversary of American Presbyterianism.

The Stated Clerk gets very high marks for his strong personal leadership in ecumenical circles. His 2004 election as president of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches shows the esteem in which he is held globally. The WARC's gain, however, was seen as a loss by the World Council of Churches, which no longer benefits from his service on its Central and Executive committees.

SERVICE TO MIDDLE GOVERNING BODIES AND CONGREGATIONS

Through their visits to more than 100 presbyteries and synods, Cliff Kirkpatrick and John Detterick were a visible witness of concern by national leaders for middle governing bodies.

Development of a joint OGA-GAC Office of Middle Governing Body Relations in 1999 has been praised by many. This office was well staffed by Gary Torrens during the period under review. The OGA is seen by many as providing positive help with conflict management for middle governing bodies.

The "MGB Connects" Web site has been an excellent source for "best practices" that provide specific help and services to middle governing bodies and congregations. The OGA and the rest of the PC(USA) should build on this successful model to make more resources available online in a timely fashion. The Review Committee recognizes the need for more resourcing of congregations by OGA. Such online resources are increasingly important. Overall, the OGA Web site has made a wide array of information available. The continued use of multiple forms of media to disseminate information is encouraged.

The OGA received high marks for its role in arranging Fall Polity Conferences, Moderators' Conferences, and Pastors' Sabbath conferences (also the Elders' Conference, which met for the first time in 2007). The Committee on Review encourages OGA to pursue the idea of a so-called "big tent" conference in years when the General Assembly does not meet, where pastors and elders can engage a variety of subjects such as evangelism, peacemaking, racial justice, multicultural ministry, etc.

GENERAL ASSEMBLIES

The Committee on Review commends OGA for its work coordinating and producing General Assemblies. The work of training the local arrangements committee and its hundreds of volunteers and the various assembly committee leadership personnel has been consistently well done. Survey results confirm this. In addition, the site selection and physical arrangements have been carried out smoothly and efficiently. The OGA generally got high reviews for the guidance and support afforded to Moderators, although some additional attention needs to be paid to moderatorial travel arrangements.

The assembling of ecumenical representatives makes visible the unity of the body of Christ. These people, along with other invited guests, have enriched the educational and spiritual experience of all who attend General Assemblies. The OGA's evolving efforts to produce a high tech, "paperless" assembly have been largely successful. Providing reports, overtures, resolutions, other assembly materials, and streaming video of plenary sessions online has been well-received.

The move to biennial assemblies and the development of pastors' conferences in the off years was a significant change for our denomination and the OGA staff. The staff has effectively managed the move to biennial assemblies. The challenge of finding gifted people to serve for two years as General Assembly Moderator was raised as a concern by some former Moderators, but that concern is beyond the scope of the Review Committee. General Assemblies have been well-organized, but the OGA staff remains open to new ideas for making them more meaningful and effective. Other denominational agencies praised the OGA staff for its cooperative spirit in resolving docket and exhibit hall issues in the planning of recent General Assemblies.

III. Policies and Practices

The second criterion for assessment is policies and practices. The Committee on Review asked if OGA were working in ways that are "decent and in order," displaying transparency, justice, and good stewardship throughout the scope of its work?

The Agency Review Manual directs the Committee on Review to examine the appropriate documents and procedures that guide the work of the agency to ensure they are properly framed and carefully followed.

HIRING PRACTICES AND PERSONNEL POLICIES

The Committee on Review commends the OGA for its personnel policies and the proactive stance it has taken regarding the hiring and equitable treatment of its employees. The staff of OGA is small enough that it has been able to create a “family feel” in the work place. The staff reflects the intention of the Stated Clerk to give attention to diversity as well as ability in hiring decisions.

Throughout its review, the committee heard strong praise for the staff leadership provided by Cliff Kirkpatrick and Grady Parsons, and the positive tone their efforts have set for the entire office. In general our surveys and personal interviews affirmed a high level of competence and performance throughout the OGA staff, particularly by those in support roles who are often the public’s primary point of contact.

The OGA’s personnel policies encourage staff members to continue their professional development. Three staff members completed degree programs in the last year. In spite of the need to eliminate several staff positions in 2007 because of budget cuts, the Review Committee perceived the morale of the OGA staff to be quite good. A few of the staff, however, expressed some concern about the limited opportunities available for spiritual formation.

Our examination of compensation and benefits policies and practices found them to be both fair and competitive. The OGA has a clear sexual abuse policy and a high standard of compliance with EEOC and affirmative action guidelines.

BUDGET MANAGEMENT

Our conversations with those responsible for managing the budget and the day-to-day financial operations of OGA led us to conclude that there is a sound set of practices in place. The OGA budget office assists the Stated Clerk with planning, forecasting, and budgeting. Good stewardship of limited resources was evident. All PC(USA) protocols are being followed. The accounting and auditing of per capita apportionment funds is handled through the GAC’s financial offices. Of critical importance looking forward is OGA’s reliance on per capita income for the majority of its budget. A declining membership base raises questions about the adequacy of OGA’s per capita funding in the years ahead.

LONG RANGE PLANNING AND ANNUAL REVIEW PROCESSES

The Stated Clerk, working with the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA), produces an annual list of goals and work targets for OGA. This list becomes the heart of the work plan for the Stated Clerk and, by implication, the entire OGA staff and the basis for staff evaluation at the end of the year.

The Committee on Review examined these lists—and the reviews that followed from them—for the six years under consideration. We found the targets to be well chosen and appropriate for the life and mission of the PC(USA). Annual reviews were extremely positive, indicating that the OGA took these annual goals seriously and worked effectively to accomplish them.

We were concerned, however, that this process focuses primarily on the work of the Stated Clerk and may ignore the more routine work of many of the subsections of OGA. We questioned whether these annual work plans, which appear to focus only on the upcoming twelve months, qualify as long range planning and whether they provide an adequate basis for annual reviews of anyone beyond the Stated Clerk. Because of the scope of this review, we were not able to determine whether complaints about the work of particular OGA staff members were addressed in annual reviews or work plans.

WORKING UNDER THE LEADERSHIP OF COGA

It is the responsibility of the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly to oversee work of the OGA and ensure that OGA faithfully fulfills its constitutional responsibilities. The Committee on Review found a good working relationship between COGA and OGA. Trust is high and working relationships are productive. In the years covered by this review we noted that the OGA workload was often controlled by “urgent” issues, frequently to the detriment of “important” issues. We commend both COGA and OGA for the way that several of these “urgent” issues have become—through proactive efforts—positive opportunities for the church.

Central among the responsibilities of OGA is being a faithful steward of the church’s Constitution. As COGA has guided the work of OGA, this enterprise has remained a high priority and been carried out in a way well described by the phrase “decently and in order.” We see the OGA (and particularly the Stated Clerk’s office and the Department of Constitutional Services) as an effective interpreter of the Constitution. In addition, the proposed revision of Chapter 14 of the Form of Government (Ordination, Certification, and Commissioning) is regarded as an important positive step in the way church moves forward.

The COGA's assignment as the entity responsible for the annual review of the Stated Clerk has been carried out with care and discernment (see comments above). The Review Committee did not examine other aspects of COGA's work.

IV. Program Effectiveness

The third criterion for assessment is program effectiveness. The Committee on Review asked how well OGA is doing what it does. Our focus was on the consistency, appropriateness, and usefulness of OGA services, programs, and communications. We also paid attention to the way OGA staff monitored these efforts and opportunities for improvement.

CONSISTENCY WITH GENERAL ASSEMBLY DIRECTIVES AND MANDATES

The OGA has developed an appropriate and faithful mindset of being an instrument of the General Assembly and the Book of Order. It consistently references its work to actions of the General Assembly, mandates within the Book of Order, and oversight assigned by the General Assembly to the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly. Surveys and interviews with persons outside of OGA revealed satisfaction with the scope and range of OGA's work.

One new initiative has been the development of national meetings in years when the General Assembly does not meet. We heard consistently glowing reports of the events held in the first two "off" years, particularly the Pastors' Sabbath and the 2007 Elders' Conference. A number of people have recommended that several national gatherings be scheduled at the same time and place to create a "big tent" event comparable to a General Assembly in attendance and impact. Such an event might conceivably include the Pastors' Sabbath, the Elders' Conference, Presbyterian men's and women's events, youth events, and more, and result in a national celebration focused on worship and mission in alternate years.

Many of those interviewed and polled gave high marks to the OGA staff for carrying out its assigned responsibilities even after recent staff reductions due to budget cuts. That commendation extended to OGA's representation of the denomination in social, political, and legal arenas, though the Review Committee also heard some criticism, as would be expected given the diversity within our denomination. The Stated Clerk and staff in the Department of Constitutional Services have sought advice in these subject areas from different parts of the denomination, particularly when considering the filing of amicus curiae briefs. The OGA's restrained issuance of these social, political, and legal opinions on behalf of the denomination appears to have been done within authorized limits and to have accurately represented actions and policies of the General Assembly, and historic principles of the denomination, and to have been concentrated on issues central to the Reformed faith.

EVALUATION OF SERVICES

The Review Committee conducted an extensive survey of PC(USA) representatives on a wide range of topics. In addition, the OGA staff uses evaluation forms regularly to determine the effectiveness of events and services for which they are responsible. These forms made it relatively easy for the Review Committee to assess the satisfaction of the church with staff, programs, and events. A summary of these findings is included in Appendix B.

Evaluations of the Stated Clerk from interviews and questionnaires were laudatory. The two Executive Directors of the General Assembly Council during the years of our review, five recent General Assembly Moderators, and a representative group of synod and presbytery executives were uniformly positive in their assessments of Cliff Kirkpatrick. His work in ecumenical agencies and councils was lauded by a representative group of ecumenical executives. All said they would like to see him be even more active, but realize that is not possible given the full range of his duties.

The Review Committee was impressed with the fact that nearly all whom we interviewed and polled characterized the OGA staff as eager to serve, honoring of the offices held by others, and efficient in executing their duties. The culture of the OGA seemed to fit a servant attitude and did not exhibit a sense of position or power to be imposed on the church.

COMMUNICATION QUALITY AND STRATEGY

In recent years, the main constituency for all OGA communication has been middle governing bodies—presbytery and synod executives and stated clerks. Obviously the OGA staff, COGA, other agency heads, the Presbyterian Communicators Network, and Presbyterian press outlets receive regular communication from OGA along with individuals who have participated in events and activities organized by OGA. An extensive survey of middle governing body staffs shows that OGA's communication effort has been appreciated and judged highly effective. Comments received from a variety of sources suggest that middle governing body staffs have been less effective and consistent in forwarding communication from OGA on to congregations. Some direct communication from OGA that is targeted for session members and clerks of session, Christian educators, and other church staff appears to be needed. The OGA needs to communicate effectively regarding its supportive services, publications, and events targeted to the needs of congregations in order to effectively serve those needs. Without such communication, congregations are likely to be unaware of the role and value of OGA.

Both online and print publications such as Continuing the Journey, Perspectives, Journal of Presbyterian History, Constitutional Musings and Assembly in Brief continue to be of high quality and seem to serve their purposes effectively, though information about them may need to go beyond middle governing body executives to increase readership. Notices designed for posting in church libraries, for example, might serve this purpose. Likewise inserts for worship bulletins and church newsletters made available on the Web may prove a helpful resource for congregations.

The interpersonal communication between OGA staff and individuals at all levels of the PC(USA) remains strong and effective. Such communication is numbered in the thousands. Nearly all who contact OGA staff receive a reply that is selected, tailored, or discretely prepared for that individual, an amazing accomplishment enabled by the integration of computer-assisted technology and staff trained in the use of that technology. A reduction of OGA support staff was accomplished even as the flow of correspondence increased. While the development and implementation of this communication system has been thorough and professional in its planning and implementation, further upgrades in hardware and software are needed.

A similar transformation of General Assembly communication, including the “paperless” distribution of information and legislative materials, has been rapid and accomplished with minimal problems. Surveys indicated a high level of acceptance of these changes, much to the credit of the staff responsible for their design and implementation.

One communication challenge that remains is the development of a reliable system for forwarding information from middle governing bodies to congregants in the pew. That communication must include an interpretation of per capita and its purpose.

The PC(USA) Web site, including the pages pertaining to OGA, is administered by GAC. At times this arrangement has caused delay in the dissemination of information from OGA to the larger church and beyond.

V. Recommendations

1. The Committee on Review recommends that the OGA seek and use more volunteers in times of peak workload and where particular experience and expertise are needed. An example of the latter would be the work of Vernon Broyles, a long-time member of the national church staff, in the area of social witness.

2. The committee recommends that the OGA expand conversations with other denominations for the purpose of sharing best practices.

3. The committee recommends that the joint OGA-GAC Office of Vocation address disparities in the ordination examination process. Concerns include the need for increased sensitivity to racial ethnic candidates in the way the exams are created and read. The committee further recommends the development of procedures for recruiting and training readers that remedy these concerns.

4. The committee applauds the progress OGA has made in using electronic communication as a means of disseminating information. We recommend that OGA either develop its own Web site or that a way be found to guarantee faster dissemination of time-sensitive information generated by OGA on the PC(USA) Web site administered by the GAC.

5. The committee recommends that the Web be utilized as a means of making available OGA’s vast library of position papers, study documents, General Assembly reports, etc. to a larger constituency and that the Constitution be available in a user-friendly and accessible format.

6. The committee recommends the development by OGA of a reliable system, perhaps Web-based, for forwarding information to pastors and congregants.

7. The committee acknowledges and underscores the importance of the per capita apportionment as an essential and joyful affirmation of belonging both to the PC(USA) and the church catholic, as well as an equitable opportunity for all Presbyterians to responsibly support mission coordination and ecclesiastical expenses. Therefore, the committee recommends an expanded effort to interpret and clarify the purpose and use of the per capita apportionment by means of various media including the PC(USA) Web site.

8. The committee recommends that OGA with COGA strengthen its long-range planning process and document a three- to five-year plan.

9. The committee's most challenging recommendation addresses the fact that our denominational structure includes two entities with overlapping responsibilities—OGA and GAC. The committee affirms the steps that have been taken toward synthesis and cooperation between these agencies, most notably through the joint offices for vocation and middle governing body relations. At the same time, however, the Review Committee cannot ignore evidences during the period of review of turf conflict, inefficiencies due to duplication of effort in the dual nature of the system, and substantial public confusion of OGA and GAC roles. It is not our place to suggest a new structure. Even so, we strongly recommend that both agencies increase their commitment to communication and cooperation, find ways to speak with a clear and singular voice, and continue to identify areas such as social witness, theology, and leadership development where joint offices could be established.

10. Pending acceptance of the recommendation from the GAC Review Committee seeking a joint review of all the agencies, the committee recommends that the review process of individual agencies be delayed until 2010 and that COGA, in consultation with the agencies, evaluate the "Standards of Review" and the manual built on these standards before the next cycle of review commences. The committee further recommends that the revised manual specify that each agency be required to complete its self-study and present it to its review committee within 120 days of the close of the General Assembly at which that committee is elected. [Our committee was not able to begin its work until more than nine months after it was elected.]

VI. Summary

It has been our privilege on behalf of the General Assembly to review the work of OGA. We are pleased to report that we have found no critical problems beyond those associated with having too much to do and too few human and financial resources to work with. In spite of staff downsizing and budget limitations, we found the OGA to be faithful to its appointed mission as the ecclesiastical and ecumenical arm of the PC(USA).

We were impressed with the agency's self-study. It was comprehensive and candid, and showed a keen understanding of the strengths and weaknesses—the accomplishments and the challenges—of the agency's work. Our surveys and personal interviews reinforced our initial impressions. While issues were raised during our review process, they did not in our judgment indicate problems within the OGA, nor a failure to be faithful to the mandates set by the General Assembly and the Constitution.

It is clear that much of the credit for this positive review goes to the Stated Clerk Cliff Kirkpatrick. His skill in administration and delegation was evident over and over in our investigation into the working of the OGA. He has been an extremely able leader. This sentiment was echoed by ecumenical officers who have worked with his office, and by those throughout the church who rely on OGA for procedures, reference material, counsel, and resources. Looking ahead, we share the opinion heard often during our work that "Cliff will be a hard act to follow."

We are pleased to report to the 218th General Assembly (2008) our findings that the work of the OGA during the six-year period under review was faithful to the church's mission and to the mandates set for this agency. Further, the recommendations made in Section V of this report have been agreed to by the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly, and will be reflected in OGA's work going forward.

Report of the Subcommittee to Review the Presbyterian Historical Society

Interviews conducted August 6, 2007 by Freda A. Gardner, Michael Livingston, and James N. Tse

I. INTRODUCTION

The task of the Committee on Review of the Office of the General Assembly (OGA) was to review the agency and its substructures "from a 10,000-foot viewpoint" for the years 2001–2006. It is with this same approach that we reviewed the Presbyterian Historical Society (PHS). Such a review is limited in scope compared to a more in-depth review that would have required additional time and documentation to complete. It is with that understanding that we report our findings.

This report is based on interviews with the senior staff and chairperson of PHS. We began the day with a tour of the facilities in Philadelphia for an overview of PHS's current operations. For the next three hours our interviews focused primarily on the three major assessment criteria in the Agency Review Manual: church relatedness, policies and practices and program effectiveness. The following persons were interviewed:

- Frederick J. Heuser, Associate Stated Clerk and Director
- Margery Sly, Deputy Director and Assistant Stated Clerk
- Morton Bell, Associate for Administration and Finance
- Margo Szabunia, Manager of Technical Services
- Charles Soltis, Chairperson of the Board of Directors

Eileen Rojas, Director of Development, was on our list of staff to interview but was not available that day. After the interviews, the subcommittee felt that the other interviewees had answered our questions regarding funds development adequately, so an interview with Rojas was not rescheduled.

The subcommittee was also given a copy of a 2001 Archival Assessment Report (the Warner Report) prepared by Robert M. Warner and Elizabeth Yakel, consultants from the University of Michigan's School of Information. This report helped shape PHS's focus, vision and mission in succeeding years. A summary of the report and its recommendations are highlighted below.

II. OVERVIEW

The mission of the Presbyterian Historical Society as presented on the PHS Web site is:

"...to serve all levels of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in its administrative, legal, and historical needs; to collect, preserve, and share information relevant to American Presbyterianism; and to encourage appreciation of the church's heritage.

"The Presbyterian Historical Society is the national archives and historical research center of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). As the memory of the Reformed tradition, the PHS uses the lessons of the Church's heritage to confront the challenges of tomorrow. Headquartered in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, with a records management program at the denomination's headquarters in Louisville, Kentucky, it serves the church's national agencies, middle governing bodies, and local congregations as well as scholars and the general public."

In 2001, the PHS hired consultants from the University of Michigan's School of Information to address issues in four major areas:

1. The role and mission of the Society in the 21st century;
2. The governance of PHS, which the consultants expanded to include the internal structure of the Society;
3. The sustainability of the current funding model and the potential for developing a new funding model for the PHS; and
4. How technology can be incorporated into the infrastructure to help sustain the role of an institutional archives in the 21st century.

Over the next few years, PHS incorporated many recommendations of the Warner Report. Among those recommendations:

1. The Warner Report affirmed the mission statement of PHS, but said, "...what is needed is a clearer vision of how best to fulfill this mission statement and what aspects of the mission statement will be emphasized and embraced to set the tone for all PHS activities." The report, proposed four possible models for PHS:

a. The Historical Society. This model closely resembles the current PHS, which serves as the archives of a major organization, collects other historical materials, and offers historical programming.

b. Records and information management (RIM) for the PC(USA). This model focuses solely on providing archival and records management services to the PC(USA).

c. Records and information management for the PC(USA) and coordination and support of collecting by other archives on a regional level. This model's emphasis is to carry out the RIM functions described in model "b." for national offices only and document other national movements, while leaving management of regional and local records to other repositories.

d. Presbyterian Historical Center – facilitator, coordinator, and standard-bearer for Presbyterian history. This model emphasizes facilitating the placement of PC(USA) records in other appropriate subject and area repositories, with PHS serving only as the archives of last resort.

The Warner Report concluded, "...the important thing for the PHS to do is to think about the various options and purposefully adopt a mission focus and strategically plan to fulfill that in the future to select a future that is sustainable. The important element to consider, though, is that the selected scope and vision must have a business plan and be sustainable."

2. The Warner Report recommended the creation of a Governance Board with responsibility for policy-making authorities including development, finance and operations. In 2004, a new Board of Directors was elected to replace the existing committee that only served PHS in an advisory capacity. Another recommendation concerning governance led to the consolidation of PHS operations in one location, which eventually led to the closing of the PHS offices in Montreat, North Carolina, in 2006.

3. The Warner Report reinforced the need for development plans and operations, which were already an important concern of PHS. This led to the creation of a new development office and staff.

4. The Warner Report affirmed the need for a strong and seamless technological infrastructure to fulfill PHS's mission and responsibilities to the PC(USA) and its members. The report recommended three areas where technological solutions could be applied.

- a. Communications among PHS offices and between PHS and PC(USA);
- b. Increasing access to and visibility of collections and services; and
- c. Electronic records

The Warner Report concluded, "...the Society has a talented and dedicated staff, a respected director, support at the highest level from within the PC(USA), and individuals willing to help the Society with their expertise. The Society is seen as a model for other denomina- tional archives in the United States).” The final conclusion of the report was that “...within the staff, the intellectual and professional expertise exists to make or remake the PHS for the new century.” In our interviews with the staff and its chairperson, we found this final statement to be true.

III. CHURCH RELATEDNESS

PHS relates to the PC(USA) in its capacity as a resource for American Presbyterianism. To that end, the staff offers workshops and training annually to presbytery and synod executives and stated clerks, as well as congregations, on topics such as record retention and preservation. As stewards of Presbyterian history and archives, they share and offer to Presbyterians and non-Presbyterians opportunities to access, study and learn about the rich heritage of the PC(USA) and its predecessor denominations and entities. Although their primary focus is Presbyterian, they offer their retention services to other organizations including the National Council of Churches, the Presbyterian Foundation, and the Board of Pensions.

General Assembly per capita funds 80 percent to 85 percent of PHS’s budget, to enable PHS to provide storage, records management and information services to the agencies and offices of the General Assembly, middle governing bodies, and congregations. The other 15 percent to 20 percent is derived from grants, contributions, and endowment interest and program fees. Over 90 percent of PHS expenditures are for salaries, benefits, and the cost of maintaining the offices in Philadelphia. More than one interviewee noted that per capita funds are not permitted to be used for funding technology. Therefore, upgrades in both hardware and software depend largely on other sources of revenue.

IV. POLICIES AND PRACTICES

The PHS is part of the OGA and subject to its policies in areas such as human resources, salary administration, and per capita funding. Although PHS reports to the General Assembly through the Office of the Stated Clerk, a new governing board was created in 2004 to provide oversight in areas such as finance, administration, and development. This Board replaced the advisory committee that existed at the time.

Board members are elected by the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA), not by the General Assembly. As such, the board views itself as a subcommittee of COGA, yet it has its own nominating committee. The board seeks members who have a demonstrated love for the church and its history, as well as the ability to support PHS and friends who share the same passion. In addition the nominating committee seeks members who have board experience and specific expertise and knowledge. The nominating committee also ensures that board members represent the diversity of the PC(USA) including gender, race/ethnicity and geographic diversity.

One of the new board’s immediate challenges is funds development. As PHS moves toward providing more access of its resources through emerging technology, new funds to meet those demands and cover the increasing cost of technology will be crucial. All of the interviewees acknowledged and are committed to using technology as a tool for expanding the reach of PHS to as many people as possible. The board is also committed to working with donors to develop a steady stream of funds to maintain PHS’s current standards and to meet future needs as the PC(USA) copes with declining membership, which results in fewer per capita funds.

One of the casualties of diminishing funds was PHS’s Montreat office. The Montreat office represented a remnant and the heritage of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, which was often referred to as the “southern church” prior to the 1983 merger with the United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America. The recommendation to close the Montreat office came after a task force was appointed by COGA and the Stated Clerk to assess the emotional and financial impact of consolidating the three PHS offices (Philadelphia, Montreat, and Louisville) into one central location.

The closing was a daunting and painful process, with some of the archives and records being moved to Philadelphia, some to Columbia Theological Seminary in Decatur, Georgia, and some to Austin Presbyterian Theological Seminary in Austin, Texas. One positive result of this move was that Columbia Seminary established a new study of Presbyterian history.

V. PROGRAM EFFECTIVENESS

As the oldest church historical society in the United States (begun in 1852), PHS has done extremely well in collecting and preserving the rich history of American Presbyterianism. Through its work with congregations, presbyteries, and synods, PHS has assisted Presbyterians in creating their own history of what it means to be Presbyterian.

Recognizing that these collections will continue to grow, available storage space is of a major concern. In 2006, PHS spent over $900,000 renovating its available storage, creating 48 percent more space. This new and innovative technology will enable PHS to remain in Philadelphia without immediate need for expansion in the foreseeable future.

This national treasure of the PC(USA) receives about 5,500 to 6,000 inquiries annually, of which 40 percent are church-related requests including for information of a legal or historical nature. Another 40 percent are from genealogical users searching for information about their family’s church history. Many of the users are seminary students of various communions and faiths.

Over the last few years, PHS has increased the accessibility of its archives through its Web site, which currently includes about 130 pages of information, exhibits, electronic indexes, and its online catalog, CALVIN. Development of CALVIN began more than twenty-five years ago with the online cataloging of its collections. As innovative electronic technology becomes the norm in today’s society, the reach of PHS in sharing the stories of American Presbyterianism seems endless.

VI. CONCLUSION

PHS does an extremely good job of carrying out its mission to collect, preserve, and share information relevant to American Presbyterianism. The PHS has embraced the use of new technology in fulfilling this mandate, while being hampered by decreasing funds and restrictions on the use of per capita dollars to upgrade and update the technology.

The board has made funds development one of its top priorities and recognizes that this is a similar challenge for many not-for-profit organizations. It recognizes that the challenge ahead to secure new funding streams will rely heavily on PHS's ability to share the Presbyterian story. To that end, PHS has created a new DVD and new opportunities to promote itself and its rich history of American Presbyterianism.

Finally, PHS has prepared a document called "A Strategic Plan for the 21st Century, 2007–2013." This plan documents PHS's self-study and sets goals and priorities for the coming years. Because the task of this review committee is to focus on the years 2001–2006, this plan is not within the scope of our review. We wanted, however, to acknowledge its existence and commend PHS for its proactive and forward-looking focus.

Office of the General Assembly Review
Summary of Evaluation Survey Research

Highlights

During the summer of 2007, Research Services contributed to a review of the work of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Office of the General Assembly between 2001 and 2006 by surveying 13 Office of the General Assembly constituencies: congregational leaders, synod and presbytery executives, synod and presbytery stated clerks, synod and presbytery moderators, leaders of other General Assembly agencies, General Assembly commissioners and advisory delegates, General Assembly Committee on Local Arrangements members, General Assembly permanent committee and task force members, international and ecumenical partners, racial-ethnic caucus participants, Committee on Ministry and Committee on Preparation for Ministry moderators, Presbyterian Communicators Network participants, and Presbyterian Heritage recipients. Response rates ranged from 56% for synod and presbytery stated clerks to 7% for international and ecumenical partners. Analysis of survey responses shows that:

- Seven in eight synod and presbytery stated clerks (88%) were very familiar or familiar with the work of the Office of the General Assembly. At least half of respondents from all other constituencies, except for racial-ethnic caucus participants, were familiar with the work of the Office of the General Assembly. Two in five racial-ethnic caucus participants (38%) were familiar with the agency's work.
- Between one-third and one-half of staff and elected leaders of Presbyterian entities believed that the Office of the General Assembly was very effective or effective in building up community among PC(USA) governing bodies. Half of synod and presbytery stated clerks (54%), General Assembly permanent committee and task force members (54%), and synod and presbytery moderators (45%), two in five leaders of other national General Assembly agencies (43%) and synod and presbytery executives (42%), and one-third of presbytery Committee on Ministry and Committee on Preparation for Ministry moderators (31%) believed that the Office of the General Assembly was effective in building up this community.
- Leaders of between one-quarter and two-fifths of congregations believed that the Office of the General Assembly was very effective or effective in serving congregations of their sizes (with memberships of 100 or less, 39%; with memberships between 101 and 350, 24%; with memberships between 351 and 800, 23%; with memberships of 800 or greater, 32%). At least half of presbytery leaders and synod leaders believed that the Office of the General Assembly was very effective or effective in serving the staffs and elected leaders of presbyteries and synods, respectively.
- Of eight Office of the General Assembly-produced communications resources, larger proportions of Presbyterian leaders had examined the following four between 2001 and 2006: Constitution of the PC(USA), Office of the General Assembly Web site, Minutes of the General Assembly, and Continuing the Journey (a publication for past, present, and future General Assembly commissioners and advisory delegates). At least two-thirds of those who had examined these resources rated them as good.
- Between one-third and 95% of Presbyterian leaders from different constituencies had talked by telephone with the Office of General Assembly staff between 2001 and 2006. Among those in telephone contact with the staff were congregational leaders (31%) and General Assembly permanent committee and task force members (95%). At least three-quarters of the Presbyterian leaders who had participated with these calls. The proportion of leaders who had been in e-mail contact with Office of the General Assembly staff between 2001 and 2006 ranged from one-quarter to 94%. With all but one constituency, three-quarters of the leaders in e-mail contact were satisfied with these contacts.
- Asked about the failure of a limited number of congregations and presbyteries to make the per-capita, or per church member, contributions that finance the work of the Office of the General Assembly in the amounts the denomination has recommended, at least two-thirds of Presbyterian leaders from each constituency strongly agreed or agreed that asking for per-capita contributions is a fair way to finance the Office of the General Assembly's work. At least half of leaders from the constituencies surveyed were concerned about the failure of congregations and presbyteries to make those contributions in the recommended amounts.
- Asked how the PC(USA) and Office of the General Assembly should respond to the needs of presbyteries with congregations that are interested in separating from the denomination, at least four in five Presbyterian leaders believed that the denomination should help presbyteries engage in dialogue with congregations about their concerns. Two other denominational responses that at least one-third of leaders recommended were: helping presbyteries maintain ownership of all church buildings and property at the expense of the congregations that choose to separate and helping presbyteries negotiate equitable divisions of buildings and properties with separating congregations.
- At least two-thirds of Presbyterian leaders from each different constituency believed that the Office of the General Assembly exhibits leadership in support of PC(USA) mission to a great extent or to some extent. Three-quarters of synod and presbytery executives (74%) and two-thirds of congregational leaders (64%) believed this, as did 87% of synod and presbytery stated clerks.

03 ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON GENERAL ASSEMBLY PROCEDURES

- For half of the constituencies surveyed, interpretation of the PC(USA) Constitution was the quality that the largest proportion of Presbyterian leaders identified as an Office of the General Assembly strength. For half of the constituencies, funds development was the quality that fewest identified as a strength.
- At least half of Presbyterian leaders from each constituency believed that the Office of the General Assembly was faithful to its charge (given in the text) to a great extent or to some extent. Seven in ten synod and presbytery executives (75%) and congregational leaders (68%) believed this.
- At least two-thirds of Presbyterian leaders from each constituency believed that the work of the Office of the General Assembly is very important or important to the PC(USA). Three-quarters of congregational leaders (74%), five in six synod and presbytery executives (86%), and almost all synod and presbytery stated clerks (99%) believed this.
- In response to an open-ended question about the Office of the General Assembly, some Presbyterian leaders expressed a range of opinions about the work of Stated Clerk Clifton Kirkpatrick: some very positive, some not so positive. In addition, Presbyterian leaders who responded to the open-ended question exhibited a mix of confusion about and opposition to the difference among the General Assembly, Office of the General Assembly, and General Assembly Council. A few leaders called for the merger of the Office of the General Assembly and the General Assembly Council.

Introduction

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) General Assembly Review Committee on the Office of the General Assembly asked the Research Services staff to conduct research about the work of the PC(USA) Office of the General Assembly between 2001 and 2006. The committee is reviewing the Office of the General Assembly's work in advance of the 2008 General Assembly.

The Office of the General Assembly (OGA) is one of six national agencies that carry out the work of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) General Assembly (GA) and serve PC(USA) synods, presbyteries, and congregations. During the two years between General Assemblies, the Office of the General Assembly is the agency that speaks for the General Assembly, arranges future assemblies, provides staff assistance to many General Assembly committees, and maintains connections with PC(USA) ecumenical partners, synods, and presbyteries. The PC(USA) Stated Clerk (elected by alternating General Assemblies) and the 15-member Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) oversee the work of this agency. A 15-member board helps govern the Office of the General Assembly's Department of History, also known as the Presbyterian Historical Society (PHS).

Research Strategy

During the summer of 2007 Research Services staff surveyed 13 constituencies on behalf of the Review Committee. These were:

- Leaders of 800 sampled congregations (with surveys addressed to each congregation's "Pastor or Clerk of Session").
- 186 synod and presbytery executives.
- 162 synod and presbytery stated clerks.
- 189 synod and presbytery moderators.
- 155 staff and elected leaders of the other national General Assembly agencies (the Board of Pensions, General Assembly Council, Presbyterian Foundation, Presbyterian Investment & Loan Program, and Presbyterian Publishing Corporation).
- 1,440 commissioners and advisory delegates to the 216th and 217th PC(USA) General Assemblies (in 2004 in Richmond, Virginia, and in 2006 in Birmingham, Alabama).
- 75 members of the Committees on Local Arrangements (COLAs) for the 214th, 215th, 216th, and 217th General Assemblies.
- 117 current members of General Assembly permanent committees and members of General Assembly task forces active in 2006 or 2007.
- 199 international and ecumenical partners (leaders of Christian denominations in the United States with which the PC(USA) is in correspondence, PC(USA) partner churches overseas, and PC(USA) ecumenical partner organizations).
- 249 racial-ethnic caucus participants.
- 357 presbytery Committee on Ministry and Committee on Preparation for Ministry moderators and co-moderators.
- 250 Presbyterian Communicators Network listserv subscribers.
- 700 sampled recipients of the Presbyterian Historical Society newsletter Presbyterian Heritage.

Respondents from ten of these constituency groups received printed surveys by mail. Research Services sent e-mail messages inviting recipients from two other constituencies (Committee on Ministry and Committee on Preparation for Ministry moderators and Presbyterian Communicators Network participants) to participate in Web-based surveys. The survey of those in a final constituency group (leaders of other General Assembly agencies) used both a Web-based survey for those with accessible e-mail addresses and printed surveys for others in the group.

Characteristics of Survey Respondents

Most congregational leaders who responded to the congregational survey were pastors, clerks of sessions, or elders. More than two-thirds (70%) were ministers of the Word and Sacrament.

Table 2 shows that most respondents were middle-aged whites. A majority were men. A few constituencies provided exceptions. Only 9% of racial-ethnic caucus participants were white. Only one-third of General Assembly Committee on Local Arrangements members (32%), racial-ethnic caucus participants (42%), and Presbyterian Communicators Network participants (36%) were men. The median age of Presbyterian Heritage recipients was 70.<sup>1</sup>

Familiarity with the Work of the Office of the General Assembly

The surveys asked respondents to rate how familiar they were with the work of the Office of the General Assembly.<sup>2</sup> At least half of respondents in all but one constituency reported they were very familiar or somewhat familiar with the work of the Office of the General Assembly. Five in six synod and presbytery stated clerks (88%) were familiar with the Office of the General Assembly's work. Only one-third of racial-ethnic caucus participants (38%) were familiar with that work. (See Table 3.)

Effectiveness of the Office of the General Assembly

The surveys asked respondents how effective they believed the Office of the General Assembly was in accomplishing various objectives and serving various constituencies. The percentages of respondents who marked no opinion in response to some of these questions were relatively large. This was not so much the case, however, when respondents were asked about the effectiveness of the Office of the General Assembly in accomplishing objectives of special interest to their particular constituencies or in serving their particular constituencies.

Accomplishing Objectives

Between one-third and one-half of the staff and elected leadership of Presbyterian entities believed that the Office of the General Assembly was very effective or effective in building up community among the governing bodies of the PC(USA). These included synod and presbytery stated clerks (54%), General Assembly permanent committee and task force members (54%), synod and presbytery moderators (45%), leaders of other national General Assembly agencies (43%), synod and presbytery executives (42%), and presbytery Committee on Ministry and Committee on Preparation for Ministry moderators (31%).

At least two-thirds of General Assembly commissioners and advisory delegates and General Assembly Committees on Local Arrangement believed that the Office of the General Assembly was very effective or effective in facilitating General Assemblies that are celebrations of a common witness in Christ (commissioners and advisory delegates, 79%; Committee on Local Arrangements members, 81%) and that are unique times for seeking the leadership of the Holy Spirit for the PC(USA) (commissioners and advisory delegates, 63%; Committee on Local Arrangements members, 72%).

At least two-thirds of international and ecumenical partners believed that the Office of the General Assembly was very effective or effective in accomplishing several ecumenical objectives: promoting the quest for unity and reconciliation throughout the church (83%), facilitating substantive ecumenical progress towards more visible unity in enterprises such as Churches Uniting in Christ (67%), and facilitating cooperative ecumenical effort in areas such as the delivery of emergency relief assistance (67%).

Seven in ten Presbyterian Communicators Network participants (70%) believed that the Office of the General Assembly was very effective or effective in using appropriate technology to support a more interconnected PC(USA). Two in five communicators network participants (40%) believed that the Office of the General Assembly was very effective or effective in creating a climate of communication where dialogue flows naturally and facilitates the sharing of the Gospel, the telling of stories of faith, the building up of trust, and the creation of community.

Two in five Presbyterian Heritage recipients (40%) believed that the Office of the General Assembly was very effective or effective in engaging the PC(USA) in a new appreciation of its heritage.

Serving Constituencies

Between one-quarter and two-fifths of leaders of congregations of various membership sizes believe that the Office of the General Assembly is effective in serving congregations of their sizes. Larger proportions of leaders of small and very large congregations than of other congregations believed that the Office of the General Assembly was very effective or effective in serving congregations of their sizes.

Two in five leaders of congregations with memberships of 100 or less (39%) believed that the Office of the General Assembly was very effective or effective in serving congregations with memberships of 100 or less. One-quarter of leaders of congregations with memberships between 101 and 350 (24%) and of leaders of congregations with memberships between 351 and 800 (23%) believed that the agency was effective in serving congregations of their membership sizes, respectively. One-third of leaders of congregations with memberships greater than 800 (32%) believed that the agency was effective in serving congregations with memberships greater than 800.

At least half of presbytery leaders (presbytery executives, 64%; presbytery stated clerks, 91%; presbytery moderators, 60%; presbytery Committee on Ministry and Committee on Preparation for Ministry moderators, 54%) believed that the Office of the General Assembly was very effective or effective in serving presbytery staff and elected leadership.

At least three in five synod leaders (synod executives, 70%; synod stated clerks, 57%; synod moderators, 71%) believed that the Office of the General Assembly was very effective or effective in serving synod staff and elected leadership.

At least half of those from PC(USA) constituencies other than leaders of congregations, presbyteries, and synods believed that the Office of the General Assembly was very effective or effective in serving their constituencies:

- Two-thirds of staff and elected leaders of other General Assembly agencies (67%) believed that the Office of the General Assembly was very effective or effective in serving other national General Assembly staff or elected leadership.
- Five in six General Assembly permanent committee and task force members (85%) believed that the Office of the General Assembly was very effective or effective in serving General Assembly permanent committees and task forces.
- Four in five international and ecumenical partners (80%) believed that the Office of the General Assembly was very effective or effective in serving ecumenical partners.
- Half of racial-ethnic caucus participants (45%) believed that the Office of the General Assembly was very effective or effective in serving racial-ethnic caucuses.

Participation in and Assessment of Activities That the Office of the General Assembly Staff Supports

Respondents reported whether they had participated (between 2001 and 2006) in various activities supported by Office of the General Assembly staff. Those who had participated in these activities were asked if they were satisfied with the Office of the General Assembly's contribution to the activity.

At least three-quarters of those who had served on the staff or elected leadership of presbyteries or synods (synod and presbytery executives, 77%; synod and presbytery stated clerks, 94%; synod and presbytery moderators, 77%) were satisfied with the contribution that the Office of the General Assembly made to the experience of serving in synod or presbytery leadership.

At least half of synod and presbytery leaders had participated in other activities that the Office of the General Assembly supports: submitting overtures for consideration and possible adoption by the General Assembly (synod and presbytery executives, 54%; synod and presbytery stated clerks, 63%), submitting inquiries about the interpretation of the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) (synod and presbytery executives, 67%; synod and presbytery stated clerks, 62%), nominating themselves or other people to serve on General Assembly permanent committees or task forces (synod and presbytery executives, 51%; synod and presbytery stated clerks, 48%). In addition, one-third had helped initiate PC(USA) judicial proceedings (synod and presbytery executives, 32%; synod and presbytery stated clerks, 34%).

At least two-thirds of the synod and presbytery leaders who had participated in these activities were satisfied with the contribution the Office of the General Assembly had made to their experiences. These included: submitting overtures for consideration and possible adoption by the General Assembly (synod and presbytery executives, 80%; synod and presbytery stated clerks, 80%), submitting inquiries about the interpretation of the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) (synod and presbytery executives, 92%; synod and presbytery stated clerks, 94%), nominating themselves or other people to serve on General Assembly permanent committees or task forces (synod and presbytery executives, 64%; synod and presbytery stated clerks, 76%), and helping initiate PC(USA) judicial proceedings (synod and presbytery executives, 68%; synod and presbytery stated clerks, 88%).

The surveys also asked those from constituencies outside of synod and presbytery leadership about their involvement in activities. At least half of those who had been involved indicated that they were satisfied with the Office of the General Assembly's contribution to that experience:

- Leaders of five in six congregations (83%) had completed and submitted Session Annual Statistical Reports or Five-Part Forms. Of these, three in five (60%) were satisfied with the contribution that the Office of the General Assembly had made to the experience of doing this.
- Almost all of those who had served on the staff or elected leadership of other national General Assembly agencies (94%) were satisfied with the contribution that the Office of the General Assembly had made to the experience of doing this.
- Four in five General Assembly commissioners and advisory delegates (82%) were satisfied with the contribution that the Office of the General Assembly had made to the experience of attending General Assemblies.
- Two-thirds of General Assembly commissioners and advisory delegates (66%) had used Les, the PC(USA)'s electronic system for meetings. Half of these commissioners and delegates (44%) were satisfied with the Office of the General Assembly's contribution to their experience of using Les. One-quarter (28%) were dissatisfied.
- Three-quarters of General Assembly Committee on Local Arrangements members who attended General Assemblies (77%) were satisfied with the Office of the General Assembly's contribution to the experience of doing this.
- Five in six of those who had served on General Assembly Committee on Local Arrangements (84%) were satisfied with the contribution that the Office of the General Assembly had made to the experience of doing this.
- Almost all of those who had served on General Assembly permanent committees and task forces (97%) were satisfied with the contribution that the Office of the General Assembly had made to the experience of doing this.
- All of those who had served on the staff or elected leadership of PC(USA) ecumenical partner organizations, U.S. denominations with which the PC(USA) is in correspondence, and/or non-U.S. churches with which the PC(USA) maintains partnerships (100%) were satisfied with the contribution that the Office of the General Assembly made to the experience.

- One-third of recipients of the Presbyterian Historical Society newsletter Presbyterian Heritage (36%) had contacted the historical society with research questions. Of these, four in five (82%) were satisfied with the contribution that the Office of the General Assembly had made to the experience of doing this.
- One in five Presbyterian Heritage recipients (20%) had submitted materials to the Presbyterian Historical Society for storage or microfilming. Of these, five in six (83%) were satisfied with the contribution that the Office of the General Assembly had made to the experience of doing this.

Examination and Assessment of Office of the General Assembly Communications Resources

All of the surveys asked respondents which of eight PC(USA) communications resources produced by the Office of the General Assembly they had examined between 2001 and 2006 and how they would rate those resources they had examined. The resources assessed were: Office of the General Assembly Web site (www.pcusa.org/oga), Presbyterian Historical Society Web site (www.history.pcusa.org), Continuing the Journey (a publication for past, present, and future General Assembly commissioners and advisory delegates), Perspectives (an electronic publication), Journal of Presbyterian History, Presbyterian Heritage (a Presbyterian Historical Society newsletter), Constitution of the PC(USA), and Minutes of the General Assembly.

Table 4 shows that the most widely examined of the eight resources listed were the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), Office of the General Assembly Web site, and Minutes of the General Assembly. Two in five respondents from 11 of the 13 constituencies surveyed had examined each of these three communications resources between 2001 and 2006. For example, two-thirds of congregational leaders had examined the Constitution (69%) and the Web site (65%), and 44% had examined the Minutes.

Half of synod and presbytery leaders (synod and presbytery executives, 54%; synod and presbytery stated clerks, 52%) and General Assembly commissioners and advisory delegates (56%) had also examined Continuing the Journey. Two-thirds of recipients of the Presbyterian Historical Society newsletter Presbyterian Heritage (70%) had examined the newsletter.

Contact with Office of the General Assembly Committee Members and Staff

The surveys asked respondents about their contact with Committee on the Office of the General Assembly members and Office of the General Assembly staff. Respondents were asked whether they had been in contact in various ways with Office of the General Assembly committee members and staff between 2001 and 2006. Those who had been in contact were asked how many times there had been such contact and whether they were satisfied with this contact. The types of contact listed were by telephone, e-mail, letter, in-person visits to their areas, in-person visits to the Presbyterian Center, in-person visits to the Presbyterian Historical Society office, at General Assembly, at General Assembly permanent committee or task force meetings, at ecumenical gatherings, at training events or workshops, and through other contacts.

The largest proportions of respondents had been in contact with the Office of the General Assembly staff by telephone and e-mail (see below). In general, contact was less common for other types of contact with staff and for any type of contact with Office of the General Assembly committee members.

Telephone Contact

Nine in ten synod and presbytery executives (89%), synod and presbytery stated clerks (93%), and General Assembly permanent committee and task force members (95%) had talked with Office of the General Assembly staff by telephone, while one-third of congregational leaders (31%) had done so. The median number of times that those from each constituency who had talked with Office of the General Assembly staff by telephone between 2001 and 2006 had done so ranged from 3 to 45 times. At least three-quarters of those from each constituency who had talked with Office of the General Assembly staff by phone were satisfied with those phone conversations. (See Table 6.)

E-Mail Contact

The median number of times those in each constituency who had exchanged e-mail with Office of the General Assembly staff between 2001 and 2006 had done so ranged from 1 to 99 times. At least four in five respondents from each constituency who had exchanged e-mail with Office of the General Assembly staff were satisfied with that e-mail exchange. The one exception was international and ecumenical partners. Only one-third of them (33%) were satisfied with the e-mail contact. (See Table 7.)

Possible Responses to Shortfalls in Per-Capita Contributions and to Interest on the Part of Congregations in Separating from the PC(USA)

The surveys asked respondents how the PC(USA) should respond to the limited number of congregations and presbyteries that have not made the per-capita, or per church member, contributions in the amounts that the denomination has recommended. These contributions finance the work of the Office of the General Assembly. Respondents were asked to what extent: (1) the financing of the Office of the General Assembly’s work through per-capita contributions is fair and equitable; (2) the General Assembly should dramatically reduce the size and scope of the Office of the General Assembly’s ministries to eliminate the per-capita contribution shortfall; and (3) the failure of presbyteries and congregations to make the recommended per-capita contributions concerns them greatly. Respondents were also asked to what extent the reduction or cessation of per-capita contributions reflects financial problems or legitimate concerns that the presbyteries and congregations have about the denomination’s direction.

At least two-thirds of the respondents from each constituency strongly agreed or agreed that financing the work of the Office of the General Assembly through per-capita contributions is fair and equitable and at least half were concerned about the failure of presbyteries and congregations to make these contributions in the amounts suggested. For example, four in five congregational leaders (78%) and synod and presbytery executives (82%) strongly agreed or agreed that funding the Office of the General Assembly through per-capita contributions is fair. Two-thirds of congregational leaders (60%) and synod and presbytery executives (75%) agreed that the failure of some presbyteries and congregations to make the per-capita contributions that the denomination has recommended worries them.

Respondents from some specific constituencies were more understanding about the per-capita contribution shortfall. More than half of congregational leaders (54%) strongly agreed or agreed that congregations choosing not to make per-capita contributions have legitimate concerns. More than half of General Assembly permanent committee and task force members (51%) and Presbyterian Communicators Network participants (58%) agreed that, for financial reasons, many congregations are not able to make per-capita contributions in the amounts lines that the denomination has recommended. (See Table 8.)

Leaders of one in ten congregations (9%) indicated that in 2006 their congregations had not made per-capita contributions in the amounts that the denomination had recommended. One in ten presbyteries whose leaders responded to the surveys (synod and presbytery executives, 16%; presbytery stated clerks, 15%; synod and presbytery moderators, 9%; presbytery Committee on Ministry and Committee on Preparation for Ministry moderators, 6%) had not made per-capita contributions in the recommended amounts.

The surveys also asked respondents how the PC(USA) and the Office of the General Assembly should respond to the needs of presbyteries with congregations that are interested in separating from the PC(USA). Respondents were asked to what extent that the PC(USA) and the Office of the General Assembly should : (1) help presbyteries engage in dialogue with congregations about their concerns; (2) help presbyteries maintain ownership of all church buildings and property at the expense of congregations that choose to separate; (3) help presbyteries negotiate divisions of buildings and property with congregations that choose to separate; and (4) encourage presbyteries to allow congregations that choose to separate to take all church buildings and property with them at the expense of the presbyteries.

At least four in five respondents from each of the various constituencies believed that to a great extent or to some extent the PC(USA) should help presbyteries engage in dialogue with congregations interested in separating. At least half of the respondents from each constituency believed that the denomination should help presbyteries maintain ownership of all church building and property at the expense of any congregations that separate. Between one-third and two-thirds of respondents from the constituencies believed that the denomination should help presbyteries negotiate equitable divisions of buildings and property with congregations that choose to separate. One-third or less of respondents from each constituency believed that the denomination should encourage congregations to take all church buildings and property with them at the expense of the presbyteries. The Office of the General Assembly’s Leadership in Support of PC(USA) Mission

At least two-thirds of respondents from the various constituencies believed that the Office of the General Assembly exhibits leadership in support of PC(USA) mission to a great extent or to some extent. Three-quarters of synod and presbytery executives (74%) believed that the Office of the General Assembly exhibits leadership, while two-thirds of congregational leaders (64%) did so. (See Table 10.)

Larger proportions of leaders of congregations with 800 or fewer members than of leaders of even larger congregations believed that the Office of the General Assembly exhibits leadership in support of PC(USA) mission. Leaders of two-thirds of congregations with memberships of 800 or less (65%) believed that the Office of the General Assembly exhibits leadership in support of PC(USA) mission to a great extent or to some extent. In contrast, leaders of half of congregations with memberships greater than 800 (55%) believed that the Office of the General Assembly exhibits leadership in support of mission.

Office of the General Assembly Strengths and Their Importance

Table 11 shows the extent to which respondents believed that various qualities were strengths of the Office of the General Assembly. For half of the Office of the General Assembly's constituencies, respondents selected—more than any other potential Office of the General Assembly strength—interpretation of the PC(USA) Constitution. At least three in five respondents from each constituency believed that interpreting the Constitution was an agency strength. Three constituencies cited the agency's expertise more than any other strength. At least half of respondents from each constituency believed that expertise was an agency strength. Also for half of the constituencies, funds development was the quality that the fewest respondents selected as an agency strength. (See Table 11.)

How important is it that these qualities be Office of the General Assembly strengths? Table 12 shows how important respondents believed it is that the Office of the General Assembly excels in these 15 areas. Communication, fairness, helpfulness, and interpretation of the PC(USA) Constitution were all areas that the largest proportion of respondents from at least two constituencies cited as being very important or important. Advocacy, cooperation with international and ecumenical partners, and funds development were areas that the smallest proportion of respondents from at least two constituencies selected as important. The Office of the General Assembly’s Faithfulness to Its Charge and Importance to the PC(USA)

The survey included the text of the Office of the General Assembly’s charge. That charge reads: “The Office of the General Assembly accepts the call of God to work for a Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) that is reconciled in Christ and led by the Spirit to be a vital church in the world. Our hope is for a church of renewed congregations committed to being an effective witness to the good of the Gospel and a powerful advocate for justice and mercy.”

At least three in five respondents from each constituency believed that the Office of the General Assembly was faithful to its charge to a great extent or to some extent. Nine in ten leaders of other General Assembly agencies (92%) and synod and presbytery stated clerks (90%) believed that Office of the General Assembly was faithful to its charge. Three-quarters of synod and presbytery executives (75%), two-thirds of congregational leaders (68%), and three in five racial-ethnic caucus participants (59%) also believed that the agency was faithful to its charge. (See Table 13.)

Larger proportions of leaders of congregations with memberships of 800 or less than of even larger congregations believed that the Office of the General Assembly was faithful to its charge. Leaders of seven in ten congregations with memberships of 800 or less (70%) believed that the Office of the General Assembly was faithful to its charge to a great extent or to some extent. Leaders of three in five congregations with memberships greater than 800 (59%) believed that the Office of the General Assembly was faithful to its charge.

At least three in five respondents from each constituency believed that the Office of the General Assembly charge (see above) reflects what the Office of the General Assembly should be doing to a great extent or to some extent. Five in six congregational leaders (85%) and synod and presbytery executives (82%) believed the charge reflects what the agency should be doing. Eleven in twelve General Assembly permanent committee and task force members (93%) believed the charge reflects what the agency should be doing, while three in five international and ecumenical partners (62%) believed this. (See Table 14.)

The survey also asked respondents to rate the importance of the Office of the General Assembly's work to the PC(USA). At least three-quarters of respondents from each constituency believed that the Office of the General Assembly's work is very important or important to the denomination. Three-quarters of congregational leaders (74%) and seven in eight synod and presbytery executives (86%) believed that the Office of the General Assembly's work is important. At least nine in ten synod and presbytery stated clerks (99%), synod and presbytery moderators (92%), leaders of other General Assembly agencies (90%), General Assembly Committee on Local Arrangements members (100%), General Assembly permanent committee and task force members (98%), international and ecumenical partners (89%), and Presbyterian Communicators Network participants (92%) believed that work is important. Larger proportions of leaders of congregations with 800 or fewer members than of even larger congregations believed that the work of the Office of the General Assembly is important to the PC(USA). Leaders of three-quarters of congregations with memberships of 800 or less (75%) believed that the Office of the General Assembly's work is very important or important to the denomination. Leaders of two-thirds of congregations with memberships greater than 800 (67%) believed that the agency's work is important.

Responses to Open-Ended Questions

Some respondents from each constituency wrote or typed responses to the surveys' open-ended question about the Office of the General Assembly.

In response to the open-ended question, some respondents praised the work of the Office of the General Assembly in what many observed were difficult times. Respondents singled out for praise Stated Clerk Clifton Kirkpatrick and several of his Office of the General Assembly colleagues (Evelyn Hwang, Gradye Parsons, Valerie Small) as well as his General Assembly Council counterpart, Linda Valentine. That Kirkpatrick and others speak out on issues such as the Taco Bell boycott has made some of the respondents proud to be Presbyterian. “Cliff rocks!” wrote one respondent.

People who had had a good experience at General Assembly, on a General Assembly permanent committee or task force, in synod or presbytery leadership training, or within the call system were particularly effusive with their praise.

Others sought to defend the Office of the General Assembly and the PC(USA) against criticism from the Layman and what they saw as creeping congregationalism and individualism that, to their minds, threatens Presbyterian connectionalism.

Others were much tougher on Reverend Kirkpatrick, the Office of the General Assembly, and the denomination in general. The stated clerk and the General Assembly office have presided over a period in which the denomination’s traditional roots in evangelism and spiritual revitalization have eroded, the critics observed. According to these critics, “leftist” or “liberal” individuals who appropriate Christianity only very selectively have taken over General Assemblies and the Office of the General Assembly staff. This has at the very least set up a protracted battle over social issues that will drive away from the denomination not only conservatives but also moderates who simply grow sick of conflict, the critics contended. Declining membership and attendance numbers is one of the results of this shift away from evangelism, protracted internal conflict, and development of an institution-building focus on structures, rules, and money (evident even in the tone, content, and length of the evaluation survey itself, a few wrote).

Critics urged the Office of the General Assembly and the PC(USA) to focus on communication, congregational transformation, faith-sharing, and stewardship, instead of on social witness advocacy and ecumenical outreach. Social witness advocacy, ecumenical outreach, and even mission itself can, do, and should take place in local congregations, not in Louisville. Different respondents stressed different aspects of communication: information-sharing and aggressive public relations. As part of a further devolution of responsibilities to local congregations that some respondents advocated, the denomination should scale back the size and scope of Office of the General Assembly ministries dramatically, these respondents suggested. “Get out of the way [of local congregations]!” several respondents wrote.

Sometimes respondents from very different perspectives ended with a similarly pessimistic tone. About the PC(USA), wrote one respondent: “We should disband as soon as possible.”

Respondents who wrote comments in response to the open-ended question sometimes were poorly informed about the ministries of the Office of the General Assembly and the differences among the General Assembly, Office of the General Assembly, General Assembly Council, and other national General Assembly agencies. Some respondents used the phrases General Assembly, Office of the General Assembly, and General Assembly Council and the corresponding acronyms interchangeably.

Other respondents pursued different strategies with reference to their knowledge or lack of knowledge. International and ecumenical partners and professional historians who receive the Presbyterian Heritage newsletter were particularly outspoken about their lack of knowledge about the Office of the General Assembly. Others were clearly familiar with differences between the Office of the General Assembly and the General Assembly Council, but they wanted these differences abolished. Merge the two agencies and finance them in a combined mission funding system that does away with per-capita contributions, some respondents urged. Few people understand what the difference between the Office of the General Assembly and the General Assembly Council is anyway, they wrote.

The Office of the General Assembly and the PC(USA) as a whole, on the one hand, and individual congregations, on the other hand, have become aloof from each other, some critics and supporters alike argued. An aggressive communications campaign might help reconnect everyone. That campaign might start with an improved PC(USA) Web site, an improved Les electronic system for meetings, and staff returning e-mail messages and voice-mail messages even more promptly, respondents suggested.

Very few of those who responded to the open-ended question referred to the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly. Some respondents expressed concern about the Office of the General Assembly charge, which they said was vague and/or overemphasized social justice advocacy.

Conclusion

Many Presbyterian leaders believe that the Office of the General Assembly has exhibited leadership in support of the PC(USA)’s mission and has been faithful in carrying out its responsibilities between 2001 and 2006. Most also believe that the Office of the General Assembly’s work is important to the denomination. Somewhat smaller numbers of leaders of synods, presbyteries, and congregations believe that the Office of the General Assembly has been effective in serving synods, presbyteries, and congregations of various memberships sizes. Leaders of small congregations and very large congregations are more likely than leaders of other congregations to regard the Office of the General Assembly as effective.

Most Presbyterian leaders who have participated in activities that Office of the General Assembly staff support or who have communicated with Office of the General Assembly staff by telephone or e-mail are satisfied with the Office of the General Assembly’s contribution to those activities and with that communication, respectively. Those who have examined Office of the General Assembly-produced communications resources such as the Constitution of the PC(USA), Office of the General Assembly Web site, Minutes of the General Assembly, and Continuing the Journey regard those resources favorably.

Stated Clerk Clifton Kirkpatrick, who helps direct the Office of the General Assembly, is a focal point for Presbyterian leaders’ assessments of the work of the Office of the General Assembly. Many Presbyterians praise Reverend Kirkpatrick’s work effusively, while others connect his tenure with what they see as the denomination’s decline. Some Presbyterian leaders cannot distinguish between the General Assembly, Office of the General Assembly, and General Assembly Council. A few leaders recommended that the Office of the General Assembly and General Assembly Council be merged.

COGA COMMENT ON ITEM 03-B

Comment on Item 03-B—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA).

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) expresses its deep appreciation to the Committee on Review of the Office of the General Assembly. We believe your review has been thorough and gives COGA and the staff of the Office of the General Assembly (OGA) useful insights and directions for the years ahead.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) agrees to the recommendations in the report and offers the following comments on them.

“1. The Committee on Review recommends that the OGA seek and use more volunteers in times of peak workload and where particular experience and expertise are needed. An example of the latter would be the work of Vernon Broyles, a long-time member of the national church staff, in the area of social witness.”

Comment: The COGA/Office of the General Assembly (OGA) will continue to explore the use of volunteers and interns in the OGA. The OGA has also used interns from seminaries and colleges. Some were paid by OGA and others were paid by their institution. In addition, OGA has been the chosen spot for sabbaticals from some presbytery staff. The meeting of the General Assembly could not be held without the generous support of hundreds of volunteers. The COGA has certainly benefited from the volunteer service of Rev. Broyles.

“2. The committee recommends that the OGA expand conversations with other denominations for the purpose of sharing best practices.”

Comment: The OGA currently shares best practices with other denominations in a variety of areas such as the planning of meetings, use of technology, ecumenical efforts, and vocations. The COGA/OGA will continue to explore with the OGA staff other areas where it may benefit from the practices of other denominations.

“3. The committee recommends that the joint OGA-GAC Office of Vocation address disparities in the ordination examination process. Concerns include the need for increased sensitivity to racial ethnic candidates in the way the exams are created and read. The committee further recommends the development of procedures for recruiting and training readers that remedy these concerns.”

Comment: The Presbyteries Cooperative Committee on Examination of Candidates (PCCEC) underwent a six-year review during the same period as the OGA. The report can be found as Item 14-Self-Study PCCEC. The PCCEC acknowledges the issues raised by the review committee and is already working to address them.

“4. The committee applauds the progress OGA has made in using electronic communication as a means of disseminating information. We recommend that OGA either develop its own Web site or that a way be found to guarantee faster dissemination of time-sensitive information generated by OGA on the PC(USA) Web site administered by the GAC.”

Comment: The use of the World Wide Web as distribution of information has increased tremendously in the six-year period of the review. The current PC(USA) Web site is undertaking a major study of its future. The goal of the COGA/OGA in this study is to develop faster and more efficient ways to disseminate its time sensitive information.

“5. The committee recommends that the Web be utilized as a means of making available OGA’s vast library of position papers, study documents, General Assembly reports, etc. to a larger constituency and that the constitution be available in a user-friendly and accessible format.”

Comment: Currently advisory opinions, constitutional musings, General Assembly Minutes since 1991, archived issues of Perspectives, the Book of Order, ecumenical newsletters, and many other materials are available. We agree that not all material is accessible nor is what available easily accessible. Some of the PC(USA) seminaries are working on placing many of these materials on-line. The COGA/OGA is committed to addressing this recommendation and working collaboratively with the seminaries.

“6. The committee recommends the development by OGA of a reliable system, perhaps Web-based, for forwarding information to pastors and congregants.”

Comment: The COGA welcomes this challenge. The OGA has current mailing addresses for all congregations and ministers but a smaller list of e-mail addresses. The COGA/OGA would need to develop protocols with middle governing bodies before sending information directly to congregations and ministers. The COGA/OGA will explore ways to create such a database and the means to keep it current.

“7. The committee acknowledges and underscores the importance of the per capita apportionment as an essential and joyful affirmation of belonging both to the PC(USA) and the church catholic, as well as an equitable opportunity for all Presbyterians to responsibly support mission coordination and ecclesiastical expenses. Therefore, the committee recommends an expanded effort to interpret and clarify the purpose and use of the per capita apportionment by means of various media, including the PC(USA) Web site.”

Comment: The COGA/OGA affirms the review committee’s understanding of per capita as sign of affirmation of belonging to the PC(USA). A report of per capita can be found at Item 03-16. The per capita Website is up on the Web now: www.pcusa.org/percapita. Other interpretive materials are needed and will be created in 2008.

“8. The committee recommends that OGA with COGA strengthen its long-range planning process and document a three- to five-year plan.”

Comment: The COGA/OGA appreciates the concerns and will explore new ways to strengthen the planning process.

“9. The committee’s most challenging recommendation addresses the fact that our denominational structure includes two entities with overlapping responsibilities—OGA and GAC. The committee affirms the steps that have been taken toward synthesis and cooperation between these agencies, most notably through the joint offices for vocation and middle governing body relations. At the same time, however, the Review Committee cannot ignore evidences during the period of review of turf conflict, inefficiencies due to duplication of effort in the dual nature of the system, and substantial public confusion of OGA and GAC roles. It is not our place to suggest a new structure. Even so, we strongly recommend that both agencies increase their commitment to communication and cooperation, find ways to speak with a clear and singular voice, and continue to identify areas such as social witness, theology and leadership development where joint offices could be established.”

Comment: The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly meets annually with the General Assembly Council Executive Committee. There is a commitment by the elected members and staff members to work collaboratively. The senior staffs of the two agencies meet regularly. There has been ongoing collaboration and regular meetings among the agency legal offices, the agency operating officers, Theology and Worship, and the Presbyterian Communicators Network. Examples of recent collaboration are the National Elders Conference, the development of officer training material, a joint funds development table, logistical support for large meetings, technology, the ecumenical consultation, the Belhar Confession, and joint work on Middle East issues. The COGA/OGA is committed to making collaboration the norm for the Office of the General Assembly and the General Assembly Council.

“10. Pending acceptance of the recommendation from the GAC Review Committee seeking a joint review of all the agencies, the committee recommends that the review process of individual agencies be delayed until 2010 and that COGA, in consultation with the agencies, evaluate the “Standards of Review” and the manual built on these standards before the next cycle of review commences. The committee further recommends that the revised manual specify that each agency be required to complete its self-study and present it to its review committee within 120 days of the close of the General Assembly at which that committee is elected. (Our committee was not able to begin its work until more than nine months after it was elected).”

Comment: The COGA welcomes the recommendation to study the review process and standards in light of the completion of the review of all six agencies.

Item 03-Info

A. Advisory Committee on Litigation

I. Narrative

Assigned Responsibilities

The Advisory Committee on Litigation (ACL) is composed of six Presbyterian attorneys. Each General Assembly elects two members to a six-year term. Each member is eligible for reelection to an additional term, but in no case may a member serve for a period exceeding twelve consecutive years of service. The General Assembly Nominating Committee nominates persons for the ACL who fit the criteria for eligibility. The Advisory Committee on Litigation was established by the 200th General Assembly (1988) to advise the Stated Clerk on matters relating to litigation.

The consultations typically take place via telephone conference calls after committee members have been provided copies of all pertinent pleadings, orders, and information. The committee ordinarily meets face-to-face at least once each year. It is normally consulted whenever the Stated Clerk is asked to participate in litigation involving matters of civil and religious liberty, church and state relations, and other matters related to the mission and interests of the church.

II. Disposition of Cases Reported in 2006

A. Crawford, US Immigration and Customs v. Sergio Suarez Martinez Clark v. Sergio Suarez Martinez

U.S. Supreme Court

No. 03–878. Argued October 13, 2004—Decided January 12, 2005

On August 2, 2004, Stated Clerk Clifton Kirkpatrick joined a variety of denominational leaders on an amicus brief in the Supreme Court of the United States, Crawford, US Immigration and Customs v. Sergio Suarez Martinez.

Under U.S. immigration law, an alien seeking immigration status must be inspected by an immigration officer at a port of entry and unless he is found “clearly and beyond a doubt entitled to be admitted” must either be removed immediately under expedited removal or undergo removal proceedings in order to determine whether he or she is admissible into the U.S. While in the removal proceedings, the alien may be detained unless the secretary of the Department of Homeland Security has agreed to parole the alien into the U.S. If the alien has been determined to be inadmissible to the U.S., the Secretary of the Department of Homeland Security must deport the alien within ninety days.

This brief is consistent with the policies approved by the General Assembly regarding immigrant persons living and working within the United States.

On January 12, 2005, the Supreme Court of the United States held that under the statute the secretary of Homeland Security may detain inadmissible aliens beyond the ninety day removal period, but only for as long as necessary to achieve reasonable removal. If the government is unable to enforce a removal order within six months, even inadmissible aliens, like Martinez, are entitled to release from immigration detention.

B. Christ Universal Mission Church v. City of Chicago

(7th Cir. 2003)

U.S. Supreme Court—Amici Brief in support of petition for certiorari

On December 2, 2004, Stated Clerk Clifton Kirkpatrick joined a variety of denominational and religious leaders on an amicus brief filed in the Supreme Court of the United States asking the Supreme Court to issue a writ of certiorari in Christ Universal Mission Church v. City of Chicago. The brief highlighted a split in the Circuits in which the 7th Circuit held in this case and an earlier case, CLUB v. City of Chicago, 342 F3rd 752 (7th Cir. 2003), that “a land-use regulation that imposes a substantial burden on religious exercise is one that necessarily bears direct, primary, and fundamental responsibility for rendering religious exercise—including the use of real property for the purpose thereof within the regulated jurisdiction generally—effectively impracticable” Id. at 761 [emphasis added].

Amici argued that the Seventh Circuit created such a high standard for establishing when land use decisions impose a substantial burden on religious exercise that the protections of the Free Exercise Clause and Religious Land Use and Institutional Persons Act (RLUIPA) would often be rendered meaningless and would have nationwide adverse consequences on the ability of religious organizations to construct houses of worship. This standard conflicts with the decisions of other circuits and lower courts and violates the express intent of Congress in enacting RLUIPA.

This brief was consistent with the policies approved by the General Assembly regarding the religious liberty guarantees of the First Amendment. The 200th General Assembly (1988) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) expressly addressed these issues:

1. Churches have a right of autonomy protected by the Free Exercise clause of the First Amendment. Each worshipping community has the right to govern itself and order its life and activity free of government intervention.

2. The government must assert a compelling interest and demonstrate an imminent threat to public safety before the right of autonomy may be set aside [and create a substantial burden] in specific instances and government permitted to interfere with internal church activities. ... (Minutes, 1988, Part I, p. 555; see also Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), God Alone Is Lord of the Conscience, A Policy Statement Adopted by the General Assembly 42–43 (1988))

The Supreme Court of the United States denied the petition writ of certiorari. The Circuits are still split on the standard to be applied when deciding whether or not a governmental regulation imposes a substantial burden on the religious exercise of the owner and user of land.

C. Cutter v. Wilkinson

125 S.Ct. 2113 (2005). Decided May 31, 2005

On December 20, 2004, Stated Clerk Clifton Kirkpatrick joined a coalition of religious entities and individuals on an amicus brief to the Supreme Court of the United States in Cutter v. Wilkinson. The brief brought together a coalition of entities that gathered under the umbrella of Coalition for the Free Exercise of Religion (CFER) to defend the constitutionality of the Religious Land Use and Institutionalized Persons Act (RLUIPA). The Circuit held that RLUIPA violated the Establishment Clause and was an impermissible legislative accommodation of religion. The amicus brief argued that RLUIPA did not violate the Establishment Clause because it satisfied all three requirements of the establishment clause test: (1) RLUIPA has a secular purpose, to minimize government interference with religious exercise; (2) it does not have the primary effect of advancing religion, because alleviating substantial government burdens on religious exercise—even exclusively, as religious accommodation laws do—does not involve the government itself advancing religion; (3) and the statute entails no greater entanglement problem than the ordinary application of Free Exercise doctrine.

This brief is consistent with the policies approved by the General Assembly regarding the religious liberty guarantees of the First Amendment. The 200th General Assembly (1988) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) expressly addressed these issues:

1. Churches have a right of autonomy protected by the Free Exercise clause of the First Amendment. Each worshiping community has the right to govern itself and order its life and activity free of government intervention.

2. The government must assert a compelling interest and demonstrate an imminent threat to public safety before the right of autonomy may be set aside [and create a substantial burden] in specific instances and government permitted to interfere with internal church activities. ... (Minutes, 1988, Part I, p. 555; see also Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), God Alone Is Lord of the Conscience, A Policy Statement Adopted by the General Assembly 42–43 (1988))

On May 31, 2005, the Supreme Court decided the Cutter v. Wilkinson case, reversing the 6th Circuit’s opinion. In a decision written by Justice Ginsberg, the Court held that RLUIPA on its face does not violate the Establishment Clause. The RLUIPA, the Court stated, fits within the “corridor between the Religion Clauses: On its face, the Act qualifies as a permissible legislative accommodation of religion that is not barred by the Establishment Clause.” The Court recognized the need for prisons to maintain security, but said: “We have no cause to believe that RLUIPA would not be applied in an appropriately balanced way.” Additionally the Supreme Court affirmed the feasibility of a case-by-case consideration of religious exemptions when a governmental regulation imposes a substantial burden on a sincere expression of religion. The RLUIPA was enacted to establish a standard for such a case-by-case consideration when the regulation imposes a substantial burden upon the religious use of property or the sincere expression of religion of a person who is incarcerated by the government. The statute states that the government must prove that it has a compelling state interest in the regulation if the regulation substantially burdens the religious use of property or the sincere expression of religion of a person who is incarcerated by the government. The court stated in the UDV case below that they have no cause to believe that the compelling interest test would not be applied in an appropriately balanced way to specific claims for exemption from a generally applicable regulation which burdens the religious use of property or the sincere expression of religion of a person who is incarcerated by the government.

Decided June 6, 2007

On April 25, 2005, Stated Clerk Clifton Kirkpatrick joined on an amicus brief filed in the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, et al, v. City of New York, et al.

Plaintiffs, a religious corporation that owns and operates a church at the corner of Fifth Avenue and 55th Street in Manhattan, New York City (the “Church”), et al.—brought this action to obtain a permanent injunction preventing the City of New York (the “City”) from dispersing homeless persons sleeping, at the Church’s invitation, in the landings at the tops of the staircases and on the Church’s property along 55th Street adjacent to the Church wall (extending about five feet into the public sidewalk), as well as for a declaration that the dispersal of such persons from such areas has violated plaintiffs’ rights.

The United States District Court, S.D. New York, decided on October 24, 2004, that the defendant had failed to prove that there was a compelling state interest in removing homeless persons sleeping on church property. The district court found that the reasons stated were not neutrally applicable to all entities and were individually assessed by the government thus the government had the burden to assert a compelling state interest in dispersing homeless persons sleeping on church property and substantially burdening the free exercise of religion of 5th Avenue Presbyterian Church.

The issue of when the strict scrutiny standard of review applies in Free Exercise cases has, at times, caused considerable confusion among state and local governments in the wake of the Supreme Court's decision in Employment Div. v. Smith, 494 U.S. 872 (1990). Amici submitted this brief to the 2nd Circuit to emphasize that the strict scrutiny standard of review, which shifts the burden to the government to assert a compelling state interest when the government has substantially burdened the free exercise of religion, continues to apply, post-Smith, where religious exercise is substantially burdened pursuant to a system of individualized assessments by government.

This brief is consistent with the policies approved by the General Assembly regarding the religious liberty guarantees of the First Amendment. The 200th General Assembly (1988) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) expressly addressed these issues:

1. Churches have a right of autonomy protected by the Free Exercise clause of the First Amendment. Each worshiping community has the right to govern itself and order its life and activity free of government intervention.
2. The government must assert a compelling interest and demonstrate an imminent threat to public safety before the right of autonomy may be set aside [and create a substantial burden] in specific instances and government permitted to interfere with internal church activities. (Minutes, 1988, Part I, p. 555; see also Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), God Alone Is Lord of the Conscience, A Policy Statement Adopted by the General Assembly 42–43 (1988))

The U.S. Court of Appeals, Second Circuit, on June 6, 2007, affirmed the summary judgment of the District Court. In their Order, the Second Circuit Court of Appeals noted that the City provided no medical evidence that the homeless people who spent the night on Church property constituted a health risk to themselves or to the public at large. They also noted that speculation about potential injuries in insufficient to establish the existence of a public nuisance.

E. Alberto R. Gonzales, Attorney General, ET AL v. O Centro Espirita Beneficiente Uniao Do Vegetal, ET AL
No. 04-1084. Argued November 1, 2007 – Decided February 21, 2006

On September 9, 2005, Stated Clerk Clifton Kirkpatrick joined a large variety of denominational leaders on an amicus brief filed in the Supreme Court of the United States, Alberto R. Gonzales, Attorney General, ET AL v. O Centro Espirita Beneficiente Uniao Do Vegetal, ET AL. The Religious Freedom Restoration Act of 1993 (“RFRA”) generally prohibits the federal government from imposing a substantial burden on a sincere exercise of religion without first showing that the regulation furthers a compelling governmental interest in the least restrictive way. The District court required the government to prove the underlying facts of the asserted compelling state interest in this case: that sacramental consumption of hoasca posed a serious health risk to the UDV members and that it would lead to a significant increase in nonreligious use. The District court found that the government failed to prove a compelling state reason to restrict the sacramental use of hoasca under RFRA and issued a preliminary injunction against governmental restriction. The 10th Circuit upheld the finding that the government failed to build an adequate record demonstrating that the sacramental use of hoasca presented a danger to the members of the UDV church and thus the government failed to show a compelling state interest in the regulation, which imposed a substantial burden on a sincere exercise of religion.

The amici argued to the U.S. Supreme Court that although RFRA was found unconstitutional when applied to the states, the government can and did choose to provide a standard that allowed for a case-by-case review of a generally applicable federal regulation when the regulation provides a substantial burden on a person's right to exercise their religion. The amici argued that RFRA is consistent with the Establishment clause and is within the authority of the legislature to require a case-by-case analysis when a generally applicable federal regulation is a substantial burden on an individual's sincere exercise of religion.

This brief is consistent with the policies approved by the General Assembly regarding the religious liberty guarantees of the First Amendment. The 200th General Assembly (1988) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) expressly addressed these issues:

1. Churches have a right of autonomy protected by the Free Exercise clause of the First Amendment. Each worshiping community has the right to govern itself and order its life and activity free of government intervention.
2. The government must assert a compelling interest and demonstrate an imminent threat to public safety before the right of autonomy may be set aside [and create a substantial burden] in specific instances and government permitted to interfere with internal church activities. (Minutes, 1988, Part I, p. 555; see also Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), God Alone Is Lord of the Conscience, A Policy Statement Adopted by the General Assembly 42–43 (1988))

On February 21, 2006, the U.S. Supreme Court with Chief Justice Roberts writing the opinion upheld the preliminary injunction against the federal government and affirmed the lower courts' interpretation of RFRA.

III. Cases Joined (2006–2008)

A. People of the State of New York v. John Taylor
 New York Court of Appeals
 New York Court of Appeals Decision October 23, 2007

On November 2, 2006, Clifton Kirkpatrick, Stated Clerk, joined a variety of religious leaders on an amicus brief against the death penalty. In this case, the defendant was convicted of six counts of first-degree murder and sentenced to the death penalty. In his appeal of the sentence, the defendant asserted that there were procedural errors in the sentencing phase of his trial.

The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has long held positions against capital punishment and joined the amicus brief on that basis.

On October 23, 2007, the New York State Court of Appeals ordered that the death sentence be vacated and returned the case to the New York State Supreme Court for re-sentencing.

B. The Presbyterian Church of Sudan et al., v. Talisman Energy Inc, and the Republic of Sudan
 U. S. Court of Appeals, Second Circuit

On March 7, 2007, the Stated Clerk joined scholars and former prosecutors with the International Criminal for the former Yugoslavia and the Special Court for Sierra Leone submitting to the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit an amicus brief arguing that Talisman Energy could be held liable for its participation in international law violations under either federal common law or international law. The brief argued that a judicial dismissal on a motion to dismiss for lack of evidence was premature prior to a trial on the merits where the parties would submit evidence on their behalf.

The plaintiffs, who are current and former residents of Southern Sudan, allege that they were victims of genocide, crimes against humanity, and other violations of international law as a result of acts perpetrated by the Canadian energy company, Talisman Energy, Inc., and the government of Sudan.

The 2nd Circuit has not yet issued an opinion in the appeal.

C. Town of Foxfield, Colorado, v. The Archdiocese of Denver
 State of Colorado Supreme Court
 Colorado State Court Decision May 1, 2007

On March 15, 2007, the Stated Clerk joined sixteen other religious and civil rights organizations submitting to the Colorado Supreme Court an amicus brief supporting the constitutionality of RLUIPA.

At issue was whether the Court of Appeals erred when it concluded that a parking ordinance was subject to the Freedom to Gather to Worship Act. Also at issue was whether the court of appeals erred in concluding that the archdiocese met either of the relevant jurisdictional prerequisites of RLUIPA.

On May 1, 2007, the Supreme Court of the State of Colorado reversed the earlier ruling favoring the Town of Foxfield. The Court's ruling allows the church's RLUIPA claims to go forward.

D. Shafiq Rasul et al., v. Donald Rumsfeld et al.
 U. S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit
 U. S. Court of Appeals Decision January 11, 2008

On March 16, 2007, the Stated Clerk joined other religious organizations submitting to the U.S. Court of Appeals in the District of Columbia an amicus brief in supporting the plaintiffs (Rasul) in their suit against the U.S. government. The plaintiffs are being held in a detention center in Guantanamo and assert that the U.S. is in violation of the Religious Freedom Restoration Act (RFRA). The defendants (U.S. government and its agents) assert that RFRA is applicable to areas within the United States territory, but outside its sovereignty, which in this case, is the military base at Guantanamo Bay.

Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has a long history of support of religious freedom including participation in the drafting the Religious Freedom Restoration Act.

In their decision on January 11, 2008, the Court of Appeals affirmed the district court's decision that the plaintiffs rights under RFRA were not violated stating "We believe that RFRA's use of 'person' should be interpreted consistently with the Supreme Court's interpretation of 'person' in the Fifth Amendment and 'people' in the Fourth Amendment to exclude non-resident aliens. Because the plaintiffs are aliens and were located outside sovereign United States territory at the time their alleged RFRA claim arose, they do not fall with the definition of ‘person.’”

U. S. Supreme Court Case No. 07-290

On January 11, 2008, the Stated Clerk joined other religious organizations in submitting to the United States Supreme Court an amicus brief affirming the Constitutional right of the District of Columbia to regulate handguns. For decades, many amici have supported meaningful handgun regulations that amici believe are critical to protecting life, liberty, and property. Amici thus have a particular interest in the manner in which the decision below struck down the District of Columbia’s handgun law, because it threatens their ability to seek and obtain effective protection through firearm regulation at the state and local level.

The PC(USA) has a long history of supporting federal and state regulation of handguns.

The U.S. Supreme Court scheduled oral arguments for March 18, 2008, and has not yet issued a decision in this case.

F. Episcopal Church Cases
California Supreme Court

On May 4, 2008, the Stated Clerk joined in an amicus brief with other denominational partners to the California Supreme Court. In this case, the congregation of St. James Parish of the Protestant Episcopal Church had been in schism regarding theological issues for several years. The Episcopal Diocese of Los Angeles (the “Diocese”) unsuccessfully attempted to reconcile the factions. Therefore, applying its internal Constitution and Canons, the Diocese determined which faction was entitled to manage the affairs of St. James Parish. The Diocese and several individuals then filed a complaint in which they sought relief including a declaration of rights giving effect to this determination as to which faction shall control St. James’ affairs. The lower court’s decision focused exclusively on the issue of whether the Episcopal Church had proven a cognizable property interest in St. James’ real and personal property. The court, finding it did not, dismissed the complaint as a strategic lawsuit against public interest, which infringed on the Respondents’ free speech rights. On June 25, 2007, the California Court of Appeals, Fourth District, Division Three, issued an opinion in a combined decision with other Episcopal Church cases involving church property and reversed the judgments from the lower court.

The Appellants appealed to the California Supreme Court arguing that California should follow “neutral principles of law” and only look at secular documents to determine which faction has the legal property interest. The amicus brief filed by the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) argued that Federal constitutional jurisprudence allowing states to apply “neutral principles of law” does not abrogate the right of states to apply a “principle of [church] government” approach to resolve disputes over church property. The brief argues that the California courts may, under the U.S. Constitution, apply its traditional “principle of government” approach to resolving disputes over church property or it may apply a “neutral principles of law” approach. If the California Supreme Court applies the “neutral principles of law” approach, it is not limited to an analysis of only secular legal documents such as deeds or corporate charters alone but has been explicitly instructed by the U.S. Supreme Court in Jones v. Wolf (1979) 443 U.S. 595, 602, to take into account an express trust within the denomination’s own constitution.

The California Supreme Court has not yet issued a decision in these cases.

B. General Assembly Nominating Committee Agency Summary

Not infrequently you will hear people complain about the never-ending use of committees in the Presbyterian Church; frustrated members and pastors sometimes say, “if you want something done right, do it yourself.” The notion that we are called to be together has led Presbyterians to conclude that this is how we should make decisions: not independently or unilaterally, but together. This is as true within the life of a local congregation as it is for the denomination as a whole. Decisions are shared among the various members or governing bodies for the good of the whole, because together we are the body of Christ. (Cynthia Campbell in Presbyterian Polity for Church Officers, Third Edition, Gray & Tucker, p. xii).

The General Assembly Nominating Committee mandate is charged in the Book of Order, G-13.0111, with ensuring “careful nomination of members of such boards, agencies, and committees as the General Assembly shall from time to time designate...”

Through the General Assembly’s nominations process, the church has the benefit of selecting, from the varied gifts and services of Presbyterians, the most qualified persons to serve on General Assembly level entities. The committee makes nominations to twenty-eight such General Assembly level entities.

The General Assembly Nominating Committee

1. presents to the General Assembly for election, nominees for at-large vacancies on General Assembly entities;
2. submits to the General Assembly for election, nominees from persons proposed by synods and presbyteries in consultation with the General Assembly Nominating Committee for rotation vacancies or for middle governing body representation on General Assembly entities; and
3. transmits to the General Assembly the names of persons from General Assembly entities for their representatives (linkages) to other General Assembly entities.

As a commissioning service in the Book of Occasional Services beautifully puts it, “the call of Christ is to willing, dedicated discipleship. Our discipleship is a manifestation of the new life we enter through baptism. Discipleship is both a gift and a commitment, an offering and a responsibility.”

The General Assembly Nominating Committee works continuously to broaden and deepen the pool of persons interested in and capable of serving General Assembly entities. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is blessed with a wealth of faithful disciples of Christ. The Spirit calls Presbyterians to service at all levels of the church’s life—congregations, synods, and presbyteries, and the General Assembly.

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) guarantees full access to the participation in the decision-making processes of the church (G-4.0403). This commitment to the ministry of the whole people of God moves Presbyterians to respond to God’s call for service—to use their gifts for the life and mission of the church. In cooperation and consultation with the General Assembly Committee on Representation, the General Assembly Nominating Committee gives careful consideration to Book of Order mandates that persons of all racial ethnic groups, different ages, both sexes, various disabilities, diverse geographical areas, different theological positions consistent with the Reformed tradition, as well as different marital conditions, be guaranteed full participation and access to representation in the decision-making of the church (G-4.0403 and G-13.0108). The GANC follows, whenever possible, Book of Order guidelines, G-13.0111, that consideration shall be given to the nomination of equal numbers of ministers, laymen, and laywomen, except where other membership is mandated by the Book of Order. The GANC also encourages synods, presbyteries, and other linking entities to keep Book of Order mandates in mind as they submit persons for nomination.

1. Accomplishments in 2006–2008

The GANC works to inform Presbyterians of the many and diverse opportunities for service. Individuals, congregations, presbyteries, and synods can find a listing of positions open for election on the General Assembly Nominating Committee’s Website, www.pcusa.org/nominations, along with information on the General Assembly nominations process and descriptions of each entity to which the committee makes nominations. These descriptions, prepared by the specific entity, contain information on the purpose of the entity, skills, and expertise needed, and time requirements for service. In addition a brochure, with a slimmed down version of the descriptions is available at most major Presbyterian conferences, offered at no cost upon request to the General Assembly nominations office in Louisville and disseminated to all middle governing bodies.

The General Assembly Nominating Committee encourages those wishing to be considered for service on a General Assembly level committee to apply online via its Website. The online application is an easy to use, safe and secure, and relatively fast way to file. While this is the preferred way to apply, women and men who find that they are not able to use this method are able to obtain either an electronic or paper version of the application form for their use.

The General Assembly Nominating Committee solicits applications for nomination to at-large positions from all governing bodies, other official Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) groups, and individual Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) members. Presbyteries and synods provide the names of persons to be considered for nomination to middle governing body positions on the various committees, boards, and commissions where such membership is mandated.

The nominating committee maintains a rotation system by which synods and/or presbyteries nominate persons to serve on the Mission Development Resources Committee, the Presbyterian Investment and Loan Program, Inc., and the National Committee on the Self-Development of People, as well as a rotation system for presbytery representation on the General Assembly Council, as outlined in the Organization for Mission. It is important to remember that nominations for these middle governing body positions, as well as for positions on the General Assembly Committee on Representation and the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission, are made from proposals received from presbyteries or synods—through their regular nominating process.

Members of the General Assembly Nominating Committee relate actively to middle governing bodies and General Assembly entities throughout the year. Each General Assembly Nominating Committee member serves as a liaison to the nominating committee of the synod in which the member resides. Each member attends at least one synod or synod nominating committee meeting every other year to explain the nominations process.

The General Assembly Nominating Committee invites all General Assembly entities to send a written report biennially concerning the specific needs of the entity regarding nominees presented to the General Assembly. In addition, the General Assembly Nominating Committee's liaison member is available to meet with the entity or be in contact by telephone or mail at the entity's invitation, so that the nominating process may be explained and that the skills and expertise needed by the entity are identified. This information, along with advice and counsel received from the General Assembly Committee on Representation, assists the General Assembly Nominating Committee in its work.

The General Assembly Nominating Committee continues to be concerned about the needs of persons with disabilities, persons with children and/or other dependents, and youth and young adults on entities of the General Assembly. The General Assembly Nominating Committee and the General Assembly Committee on Representation are committed to working together to discover persons with disabilities, youth, and young adults who are willing to be considered for service on General Assembly committees and agencies. The General Assembly Nominating Committee and the General Assembly Committee on Representation note that many applicants do not identify themselves as persons with disabilities even when a disability does exist. Thus, the number of persons with disabilities serving the church on committees at the General Assembly level is actually higher than reported. The General Assembly Nominating Committee will continue to seek ways to encourage persons living with disabilities to make this information available.

During the past two years, the General Assembly Nominating Committee has noticed an increase in the number of persons who have been elected but have faced a variety of issues that prevent their continued service and result in their resignation. This issue was discussed at the February, 2007 joint meeting of the General Assembly Nominating Committee and the General Assembly Committee on Representation.

Through participation at conferences, conversations, and engagement with the General Assembly Committee on Representation, racial ethnic caucuses, affinity groups, individual contact at all middle governing body levels as well as with pastors and elders across the denomination, the General Assembly Nominating Committee strives to increase the number of racial ethnic persons and persons with differing theological perspectives in its pool of applicants.

Most persons serving on General Assembly agencies, committees, or entities are members of a congregation or a presbytery of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). Several committees include within their membership persons who are not Presbyterian: the General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations, the National Committee on the Self-Development of People, and the Review Committees on General Assembly Agencies.

About a year before it meets to make nominations, the GANC publishes on its Website and mails to each presbytery and synod a list of vacancies to be filled. Additionally the GANC Website provides instructions, committee descriptions, and information about the nominations process.

Persons interested in being considered for service on a General Assembly level committee and persons who wish to suggest persons for consideration may do so by submitting an application for nomination form either online at the GANC's Website, electronically via an email version of the application form, or by completing and returning a printed version of the form. As of February 1, 2008, approximately 300 applications were received for about 75 at-large vacancies. Applications remain active for two General Assembly cycles.

The application process requires that applicants ask three evaluators to complete a reference form regarding the applicant's abilities, gifts, and experience. A reference is also solicited from the governing body for each applicant. The references are treated in confidence and are critical in the discernment process the members of the GANC use. All application forms are shared with each General Assembly Nominating Committee member. Each member of the General Assembly Nominating Committee has access to the confidential appraisal materials for all applicants.

The Organization for Mission provides that terms for most agencies, committees, or entities are four years, with eligibility to serve an additional four-year term. Re-nomination to a second term is not automatic. The GANC uses several factors in determining whether or not to re-nominate a person. Key in this discernment process is an evaluation instrument completed by the agency, committee, or entity on which the member serves, diversity issues, special skills and expertise needed by the agency, committee, or entity to respond to assigned mandates.

During 2005–2006, the General Assembly Council (GAC) engaged in a substantive transformation of composition as a result of their Governance Task Force report. In response to the General Assembly Council's request, the 217th General Assembly (2006) "froze" the membership of the General Assembly Council and allowed the General Assembly Nominating Committee latitude in adhering to the constitutional mandate of the General Assembly Council so that the GANC could bring to the 218th General Assembly (2008) a slate of nominees in compliance with the Book of Order and the new GAC structure approved by the presbyteries.

Since the 217th General Assembly (2006), there have been three meetings of the nominating committee: February 2007 in Albuquerque, New Mexico; October 2007 in Snowbird, Utah; and March 2008 in Dallas, Texas. New members of the General Assembly Nominating Committee participated in an intensive orientation meeting in Portland, Oregon, in August 2006.

2. Membership

There are sixteen members on the General Assembly Nominating Committee—one member residing in each of the sixteen synods. The General Assembly, upon the nomination of the General Assembly Moderator, elects the members of the General Assembly Nominating Committee; members serve a six-year term. The following officers were elected and served in 2006–2008: Janet Schlenker, minister, Synod of the Rocky Mountains, moderator; A. Jarrell (Jerry) Tankersley, minister, Synod of Southern California and Hawaii, vice-moderator; James Madson, elder, Synod of Mid-America, secretary. The other members of the committee are David H. Bennett, minister, Synod of the Northeast; Frank Deming, minister, Synod of Mid-Atlantic; Cindy Edwards, church member, Synod of Alaska-Northwest; W. Gregory Elmore, elder, Synod of Living Waters; Carnell Hampton, minister, Synod of the South Atlantic, Richard Kampa, elder, Synod of the Southwest; William King, minister, Synod of the Trinity [moderatorial appointment after the resignation of Scott Collins-Jones, minister]; Robert Lucy, elder, Synod of the Sun; Emily McGinley, church member, Synod of Lincoln Trails; Mike Reyes, elder, Synod of the Pacific; Cynthia Schweitzer Vives, elder, Sinodo Presbiteriano Boriquen en Puerto Rico; Elona Street-Stewart, elder, Synod of Lakes and Prairies; and Laura VanDale, elder, Synod of the Covenant.

The office of the General Assembly Nominating Committee is located in the Office of the General Assembly, 100 Witherspoon Street, Louisville, KY 40202-1396. Assistant Stated Clerk Valerie Kiriishi Small, elder, serves as the manager for General Assembly Nominations.

Grace be with all of you!

C. General Assembly Per Capita Payments by Presbytery

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) is grateful to the presbyteries for their continued level of faithfulness in the payment of per capita apportionments. During the year 2005, the percentage of total per capita paid to the General Assembly was about 97 percent, and during 2006, 96.5 percent. Improvement of the level of giving is encouraged in the future.

“Per capita is an opportunity for all communicant members of the Presbyterian church through the governing bodies to participate equally, responsibly, and interdependently by sharing the cost of coordination and evaluation of mission” (Minutes, 1995, Part I, p. 301).

Full participation in per capita giving preserves the connectional nature of our Presbyterian system and provides a strong witness to good stewardship as believers of the Reformed Theology, based on the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ.

The following pages contain a statement of all per capita payments to the General Assembly for the last five years (2003–2007) by presbytery, indicating the total annual per capita apportionment, the amount paid, and the unpaid balance. It can be observed that the total unpaid per capita for 2007 (as of May 6, 2008) stands at about $615,000. The Office of the General Assembly (OGA) will continue to receive further payments for 2007 from a few presbyteries, which will hopefully reduce the level of unpaid per capita to be closer to last year’s level.

We are grateful that the vast majority of our congregations continue to be faithful and support our denomination by participating in per capita giving, even when they may have disagreements with our governing bodies. Each member’s share of these costs for the year (2008) is $5.79.

D. Committee on the Office of the General Assembly Agency Summary to the 218th General Assembly (2008)

1. Committee Description and Leadership

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) oversees and supports the ministry of the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly and the staff of the Office of the General Assembly (OGA) as OGA helps the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) fulfill its call to be the church of Jesus Christ. The committee partners with OGA in carrying out work assigned by the assembly and exercises the General Assembly's accountability for OGA between sessions of the assembly. The COGA is composed of sixteen members, which include fourteen persons nominated by the General Assembly Nominating Committee (and elected at the General Assembly meeting), and the current Moderator and Vice-Moderator of the General Assembly. The Stated Clerk of the General Assembly, the Executive Director and the Vice-Moderator of the General Assembly Council (the Reverend Clifton Kirkpatrick, Elder Linda Bryant Valentine, and Elder Charles Easley, respectively, during this period) serve as corresponding members of the committee. For 2006–2007, the Reverend Cathy Ulrich served as moderator and Elder John (Jack) Baugh as vice-moderator. Committee leadership for the upcoming term will be provided by the Reverend Dennis Hughes as moderator and Elder Barbara Corwin as vice moderator.

In addition to the committee leadership mentioned previously, COGA members were Elders James Babcock, Charles Easley, Steve Grace, Kent Grimes, Kathy Walker, and Robert Wilson, and the Reverends Helen Baily Cochrane, Barbara Campbell Davis, Joan Gray, Jerrod Lowry, John Purcell, Martha Sadongeti, and John Wilkinson.

2. 2006–2007 Highlights and Accomplishments

The biennial period of the 217th General Assembly (2006) was a significant period from beginning to end. The theme of the assembly—"So Great a Cloud of Witnesses" (from Heb. 12:1)—was held concurrently with the Cumberland Presbyterian Church and the Cumberland Presbyterian Church in America. Several milestones were recognized during the assembly meeting in Birmingham, Alabama, including 300 years of American Presbyterianism, fifty years of the ordination of women to the ministry of the Word and Sacrament, and twenty-five years of the Presbyterian Peacemaking Program. The three denominations worshipped together, shared exhibit space, and held a joint forum on the future of the church. The planning partnership of the Presbytery of Sheppards and Lapsley, the Committee on Local Arrangements, the General Assembly Council, the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly, and the Office of the General Assembly resulted in an assembly that both celebrated a rich heritage and worked toward a promising future for this part of the larger body of Christ. The myriad actions taken by the assembly, detailed in the Minutes, are evidence of a gathering of commissioners and advisory delegates who took their responsibilities very seriously and prayerfully.

The General Assembly Breakfast continued its tradition of being a major highlight during the assembly. Odessa Woolfolk, founder and administrator of the Birmingham Civil Rights Institute, spoke to the more than 1,500 participants, telling them that “God calls us to be agents of peace, justice, and reconciliation in our world.” In 2008, singer and songwriter David LaMotte will speak at the breakfast.

Since the assembly meeting, commissioners and advisory delegates to the 217th General Assembly (2006) have received issues of “Continuing the Journey,” an occasional publication to update them on the follow-up work that resulted from the actions they took in Birmingham. As a result of this and other efforts, commissioners have been instrumental in interpreting the work of the assembly to congregations and presbyteries throughout the last two years.

A new Office of Vocation, a shared ministry of OGA and the General Assembly Council (GAC), was developed with the vision of creating a “culture of call” in the PC(USA). Activities over the past two years have included a conference for racial ethnic seminarians to equip them for entering their first call; revitalization of the Presbyterian Leadership Search Effort to help young people with vocational discernment; and administration of Church Leadership Connection, which provides service to congregations, presbyteries, and individuals using the PC(USA) call system.

The Presbyterian Historical Society (PHS) finished consolidating its offices into one location in Philadelphia. The historical society celebrated news of the Center for Study of Presbyterian and Reformed History that was launched by Columbia Theological Seminary (CTS) in Decatur, Georgia. Some of the material that was held formerly at the PHS office in Montreat, North Carolina, is now among the archives at CTS.

The first consultation on the ecumenical stance of the PC(USA) since the 1983 reunion of the Presbyterian Church in the United States and the United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America to form the PC(USA) was held in Louisville. Hosted by the General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations, the event drew nearly sixty-five individuals from a cross-section of the PC(USA) and its ecumenical partners. A new policy statement on the ecumenical stance of the PC(USA), based on results of the consultation, is being submitted to the 218th General Assembly (2008) for approval.

The 217th General Assembly (2006) approved a new task force, the Form of Government Task Force, to undertake a revision of the Form of Government that is found in the PC(USA) Book of Order. The task force was charged with preserving our “foundational polity,” while “providing leadership to congregations as ‘missional communities.’” The task force will present its final report and recommendations to the 218th General Assembly (2008). In addition to the proposed new Form of Government itself, the task force is recommending “Foundations of Presbyterian Polity” to replace the current first four chapters of the Form of Government.

In addition to partnering with the other PC(USA) agencies to support the National Pastors Sabbath, OGA anchored the effort to hold the first-ever National Elders Conference, held in Nashville, Tennessee. More than 300 elders from almost every state in the nation gathered to hear preachers and other speakers and attend workshops aimed at helping elders know what the ministry of being an elder is about and claiming that ministry for their own.

Significant ecumenical breakthroughs have taken place over these last two years through bilateral ecumenical dialogues between the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and other churches. These have led to four very significant ecumenical agreements that will be before the 218th General Assembly (2008)—with the Catholics, the Episcopalians, the Moravians, and the Korean Presbyterian Church in America.

In addition, Christian Churches Together (CCT), the largest ecumenical body in terms of its comprehensive nature, was inaugurated early in 2007. The PC(USA) is a provisional member of CCT, which consists of five Christian “families”—Catholics, evangelicals and Pentecostals, Orthodox, mainline Protestants, and racial ethnic churches—that represent more than 100 million Christians. Participants hope to address common issues, such as poverty and evangelism.

Other significant breakthroughs in the area of social witness was the successful boycott of Taco Bell that ended with an agreement between the Coalition of Immokalee Workers and Taco Bell. Furthermore, in the spring of 2007, a voluntary agreement on the part of Yum! Brands included all other brands in this agreement.

In partnership with the Committee on Local arrangements (COLA), much time was spent on the planning and preparations of the 218th General Assembly (2008) that will be held in San Jose, California, in June 2008. The theme of the assembly, “Do Justice, Love Kindness, Walk Humbly with our God” comes from Micah 6:8.

A significant amount of time was devoted to the self-study and other items related to the review of the Office of the General Assembly by a committee established by the 217th General Assembly (2006) for that purpose.

Following a process similar to the one used in the recent past to engage presbyteries and synods in a serious reflection of what it means to be a New Testament church in this century, a new round of consultations was held with PC(USA) seminaries. The focus of the gatherings was unique to each seminary, based on what each theological institution had identified as its particular emphasis for preparing future ministers of the Word and Sacrament. The consultations were only the beginning step of a process to lift up the significant work of the “crown jewels” of the PC(USA).

More recently, a new Web site on per capita was launched. Focusing on the General Assembly portion of per capita, the site is designed to provide materials to interpret and share information related to what per capita is and what the dollars support.

E. *Moderator’s Report to the General Assembly

I am very thankful for the privilege of being able to serve God and the PC(USA) as Moderator of the 217th General Assembly (2006).

As I have traveled the church I have seen a number of encouraging things:

- Small churches and presbyteries doing extraordinary mission against the odds in spite of challenges relating to demographic shifts, funding, and distance.
- Young people in college fellowships and youth groups who are excited about God, the church, and specifically the PC(USA).
- Congregations and presbyteries reinventing themselves in creative, God-honoring ways to face the challenges of the post-modern age.
- Amazing and inspiring mission work being done by congregations, presbyteries, and our own PC(USA) missionaries and mission partners around the world. I have been especially impressed with the Young Adult Volunteer program participants I have met.
- The passion and love Presbyterians have for their church.
- Groups gathering in some presbyteries to struggle with the divisive issues of our day, trying to find common ground in the midst of our theological differences. I have seen evidence that the method of meeting together put forth by the Theological Task Force on the Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church does bear good fruit if it is tried.
- The presence of immigrant and multicultural churches in our denomination and the passion they bring to our churches.
- The willingness of elders to rise to the challenge of spiritual leadership when challenged, trained, and encouraged.
- The excellent ministry of trained commissioned lay pastors.

As I have listened to Presbyterians over these last two years, I have heard the following concerns raised a number of times:

- Distress over our continuing loss of thousands of members each year.
- Frustration and grief that we are not reaching young people in greater numbers.
- Desire for the PC(USA) denominational mission program to send more long-term missionaries overseas.
- Frustration on the part of pastors of immigrant fellowships over the obstacles they see in the way of their ministries.
- Desire on the part of PC(USA) military chaplains for their voices to be heard in the denomination.
- Continuing sense of distance, even estrangement, between many “people in the pew” and the denominational structures and leadership.
- Struggle to come to terms on all levels of the church above the session with new patterns of mission funding.
- Desire to hear the “good news” about things happening in the PC(USA) reach a wider audience.

- Confusion on the part of church members about the changes that are impacting church life today and lack of understanding as to how to respond in constructive ways.
- Continuing deep divisions about how to interpret the Bible around controversial issues such as homosexuality, abortion, war, etc.

Highlights of my term as Moderator included:

- Leading fifteen prayer retreats in Nevada, Minnesota, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Florida, Texas, Alaska, New York, South Carolina, Delaware, Idaho, West Virginia, Illinois, and Georgia.
- Participating in the celebration of 200 years of African American Presbyterianism.
- Participating in the celebration of the 300th anniversary of the first presbytery meeting.
- Attending the first national Elders' Conference held in Nashville, Tennessee.

As my term comes to an end, I want to thank my husband Bill Gray for his encouragement, constant support, and patient endurance of my being away from home 342 days in the last two years. I want to thank all those who showed me hospitality, shared their lives with me, and supported me with faithful prayers since I was elected. Though the names are too many to list here, the kindness and care of this great cloud of witnesses has kept me going through thick and thin. I have experienced the faithfulness of God and the power of prayer in profound ways during these two years, and I am hopeful about the future of the PC(USA) because I believe God is faithful and is able, through the power at work within us, to do more than we could ever ask or imagine.

Item 04-01

[The assembly approved Item 04-01 with amendment. See pp. 48, 49.]

On Amending G-6.0401 by Replacing the Word “Sympathy” with the Word “Empathy”—From the Presbytery of Albany.

~~[The Presbytery of Albany overtures]~~ [That] the 218th General Assembly (2008) ~~[to]~~ direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment~~[s]~~ to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

[1.] Shall G-6.0401 of the Book of Order be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“The office of deacon as set forth in Scripture is one of ~~sympathy~~ [empathy] [compassion], witness, and service after the example of Jesus Christ. Persons of spiritual character, honest repute, of exemplary lives, brotherly and sisterly love, ~~warm sympathies sincere~~ [empathy] [compassion], and sound judgment should be chosen for this office.

“b. The permanent pastoral offices of ministers of the Word and Sacrament are pastors and associate pastors. When a minister of the Word and Sacrament is called as pastor or associate pastor of a particular church or churches, she or he is to be responsible for a quality of life and relationships that commend the gospel to all persons and that communicate its joy and its justice. The pastor is responsible for studying, teaching, and preaching the Word, for administering Baptism and the Lord's Supper, for praying with and for the congregation. With the elders, the pastor is to encourage the people in the worship and service of God; to equip and enable them for their tasks within the church and their mission in the world; to exercise pastoral care, devoting special attention to the poor, the sick, the troubled, and the dying; to participate in governing responsibilities, including leadership of the congregation in implementing the principles of participation and inclusiveness in the decision making of the church, and its task of reaching out in concern and service to the life of the human community as a whole. With the deacons the pastor is to share in the ministries of ~~sympathy~~ compassion, witness, and service. In addition to these pastoral duties, he or she is responsible for sharing in the ministry of the church in the governing bodies above the session and in ecumenical relationships.”]

Rationale

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) affirms the belief that as Christ’s faithful evangelists we demonstrate “by the love of its members for one another and by the quality of its common life the new reality in Christ; sharing in worship, fellowship, and nurture, practicing a deepened life of prayer and service under the guidance of the Holy Spirit” (Book of Order, G-3.0300c(2)); “participating in God’s activity in the world through its life for others by ... ministering to the needs of the poor, the sick, the lonely, and the powerless, ... giving itself and its substance to the service of those who suffer (Book of Order, G-3.0300c(3)(b, d)). “It is the duty of deacons, first of all, to minister to those who are in need, to the sick, to the friendless, and to any who may be in distress both within and beyond the community of faith. ...” (Book of Order, G-6.0402).

Sympathy, as defined in the Merriam Webster Dictionary, is “an affinity, association, or relationship between persons or things wherein whatever affects one similarly affects the other.” This implies a degree of equal feeling or suffering together. It is our belief that a more appropriate response to those in need is one of empathy. Empathy, as defined in the Merriam Webster Dictionary, is “the action of understanding, being aware of, being sensitive to, and vicariously experiencing the feelings, thoughts, and experience of another of either the past or present without having the feelings, thoughts, and experience fully communicated in an objectively explicit manner.” An empathic person recognizes but does not share other’s suffering.

In an article entitled, “Don’t Forget Your Dispatchers,” Wendy Norris makes the differences between sympathy and empathy quite clear. With sympathy, advice is offered; whereas with empathy, questions are asked with appropriate listening to empower the person to make their own decisions. With sympathy, we feel responsible for others, in empathy we feel responsible to others. When we show sympathy, we want to fix, protect, rescue, and carry others feelings. When we show empathy, we are a helper-guide, concerned more with the person and feelings rather than solutions. With sympathy we expect the person to live up to our expectations and in empathy we expect the person to be responsible for himself/herself. Suffering can aid to the growth of those in need and by using empathy, we can be there for others and help them reach their own conclusions and solutions to life problems (Norris, 2007).

Empathy is more directly related to serving others. Service to others is indicated throughout the Bible. Luke 6:31 states “Do to others as you would have them do to you” (NRSV). Romans 12:15–16 states “Rejoice with those who rejoice, weep with those who weep. Live in harmony with one another; do not be haughty, but associate with the lowly; do not claim to be wiser than you are” (NRSV). By participating in the emotions rather than actually feeling the emotion, we are being empathic toward others, helping them process their own emotions, feelings, and grief rather than fixing their problems.

Deacons are often called to tend to the sick, elderly, lonely, grieving, and those in need. In such cases, if a deacon truly acted in a sympathetic manner, he or she would be taking on other’s emotions and carry feelings to a level that would be unhealthy, over burdensome, and emotionally exhausting. By taking on a more empathic role, deacons can tend to others by considering another’s feelings and responding to their needs, helping them move through various stages of emotion at their own pace and comfort level, with autonomy and grace.

Advice on Item 04-01—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 218th General Assembly (2001) to disapprove Item 04-01.

Rationale

The overture seeks to replace the word “sympathy” with “empathy” and “warm sympathies” with “sincere empathy” in G-6.0401. A review of linguistic authorities shows that “sympathy” and “empathy” have semantic fields that significantly overlap, so that the very arguments used for “empathy” could just as easily be applied to “sympathy.” Therefore, neither increased clarity nor precision of meaning is gained by the substitution.

The use of “sympathy” is to be preferred for the following reasons:

- History: The use of “sympathy” as a qualification for the office of deacon has a long history of use in predecessor denominations, dating back at least to 1911 in the UPCNA Book of Government and Worship; at least to 1923 in the PCUS Book of Church Order; and to 1958 in the UPCUSA Book of Order.
- Biblical attestation: The word “sympathy” is a direct transliteration of the Greek word “συμπαθής” (sympathēs), which occurs as a noun or verb three times in the New Testament, most notably in the list of Christian virtues in 1 Peter 3:8, and in Hebrews 4:15 in which Christ is proclaimed as a Great High Priest who is able “to sympathize with us in our weaknesses” (NRSV). By contrast, the word “empathy,” from the Greek “εμπαθειος” (empatheios) does not occur in the New Testament.

Should the assembly seek an alternative word for “sympathy” in G-6.0401, the committee would find amendment to “compassion” as proposed by the Form of Government Task Force to be a preferred alternative. The committee also advises the assembly that for clarity and consistency in Chapter Six of the Form of Government, any amendment to G-6.0401 should be accompanied by a parallel amendment to G-6.0202b, which states, “With the deacons, the pastor is to share in the ministries of sympathy, witness, and service.”

Should the proposed revision to the Form of Government be approved, this overture would amend the language found in the first sentence of G-2.0202, which would read:

“The ministry of deacon as set forth in Scripture is one of [~~compassion~~] [empathy], witness, and service after the example of Jesus Christ. Persons of spiritual character, honest repute, exemplary lives, brotherly and sisterly love, [~~warm sympathies~~] [sincere empathy], and sound judgment should be chosen for this ministry....”

Item 04-02

[In response to Item 04-02, the assembly approved an alternate resolution. See pp. 48, 49.]

On Amending G-5.0200 to Add the Vows of Membership to the Book of Order—From the Presbytery of Mission.

The Presbytery of Mission overtures the 218th General Assembly (2008) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Shall G-5.0000* be amended by inserting new text as G-5.0200 and renumbering the remaining items in G-5.0000 (G-5.0200–.0500 becomes G-5.0300–.0600) as follows: [Text to be added is shown as italic.]

“2. Membership Vows

“At the time member-candidates present themselves to the session for reception into membership, whether by profession of faith, transfer of letter, or reaffirmation of faith, the following questions shall be addressed to the member-candidates for their answer as indicated. Sessions may make the determination, on an individual basis, to exempt certain persons from answering these specific questions due to physical or mental disability. In such a case, appropriate alternative questions and their presentation should be devised, still meeting the requirements of G-5.0101a.

“Who is your Lord and Savior?”

“Trusting in the gracious mercy of God, do you turn from the ways of sin and renounce evil and its power in the world?”

“Will you be Christ’s faithful disciple, obeying his Word and showing his love?”

“Will you be a faithful member of this congregation, share in its worship and ministry through your prayers and gifts, your study and service, and so fulfill your calling to be a disciple of Jesus Christ?”

“I will, with God’s help.”

Alternate Resolution

Shall G-5.0000* be amended by inserting new text as G-5.0200 and renumbering the remaining items in G-5.0000 (G-5.0200–.0500 becomes G-5.0300–.0600) as follows: [Text to be added is shown as italic.]

“After new members are examined, affirming their faith in Jesus Christ as Lord and Savior, and are received by the session, whether by profession of faith, certificate of transfer, or reaffirmation of faith, they shall be presented to and welcomed by the congregation during a service of worship where they shall make a public profession of their faith in Jesus Christ as Lord and Savior, as do confirmands (W-4.2003a, b, and c).”

*Should the assembly send a revised Form of Government to the presbyteries for their positive or negative vote, the vows contained here should be inserted and included in the appropriate membership section.

Rationale

Chapter IV of the Directory for Worship describes confirmands’ reaffirmation of baptismal vows taken on their behalf (W-4.2003). They do this by

“a. professing their faith in Jesus Christ as Lord and Savior,

“b. renouncing evil and affirming their reliance on God’s grace,

“c. declaring their intention to participate actively and responsibly in the worship and mission of the church.”

The same chapter (W-4.2004) highlights the reception of other new members into the congregation as an appropriate opportunity, as well, for reaffirmation of baptismal commitments, public profession of faith, and commitment to participation in the worship and mission of the church.

While these professions are described in the Directory for Worship, the actual reception of new members takes place in the context of a session meeting, directed by the Form of Government (G-10.0102b).

The Book of Order lists the constitutional questions prescribed for those being ordained or installed to service in the offices of the church. These questions are now found in the Directory for Worship; the questions are posed in the context of worship as the act of the congregation or presbytery. In contrast, the Book of Order does not presently contain a corresponding set of constitutional questions for those wishing to enter into active church membership, an act of the session. The proposed amendment parallels the outlined statements contained in the Directory for Worship. The specific language comes from the Book of Common Worship, a liturgical resource that is valuable but optional.

It is desirable that the Book of Order be amended to include constitutional questions for those seeking active membership since

1. having common, standardized, questions for use throughout the denomination will emphasize the fact that membership is not solely in the local church, but in the larger, connectional, whole as well;
2. it will provide a resource of readily accessible, doctrinally sound, and well-constructed questions for use by the local churches;
3. it will provide guidance and clarification to member-candidates in the step they are taking as outlined in G-5.0101a (“One becomes an active member of the church through faith in Jesus Christ as Savior and acceptance of his Lordship in all of life.”); and
4. its placement in G-5.0000 appropriately emphasizes the promises and responsibilities of membership along with the meaning and privileges of membership.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 04-02

Advice on Item 04-02—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 218th General Assembly (2008) to disapprove Item 04-02.

Rationale

The meaning of membership is contained in Chapter V of the Form of Government. In becoming a member of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), a person professes (or reaffirms) faith in Jesus Christ as Savior and acceptance of his Lordship in all of life (G-5.0101). Membership means accepting Christ’s call to involvement in the ministry of the Church, especially as defined in G-5.0102a–i.

The Directory for Worship presently contains language that largely accomplishes the goal of the overture. The vows required of persons being received into active membership in W-4.2003 (and of parents who present their children for baptism, W-3.3603a–d) deal with the same subjects as questions 1, 2, and 4 proposed in the overture, although not in precisely the same terminology. The overture would add a question concerning faithful discipleship that is not explicitly covered by language in W-4.2003. As the rationale accompanying the overture notes, the aim of the overture is to create “common standardized questions” that are “readily accessible, doctrinally sound, and well-constructed.”

The principal difference between the existing language in W-4.2003 and that proposed here is that the overture proposes specific formulae with which the confirmand must respond to catechetical questions posed by the liturgist. Section W-4.2003 does not specify the precise terms of response, leaving open the possibility that the language employed in this section could be used as questions to which the confirmand responds, “I do.” The language of W-4.2003 also leaves open the possibility that affirmations of faith in Christ, renunciations of evil, and declarations of intent to participate in the life of the church might be made in language that is nontraditional. Whether the language of affirmation constitutes an affirmation of faith, renunciation of evil, or declaration of intent, is a matter for sessions to determine on a case-by-case basis.

The Advisory Committee notes that antecedent polities to the present Book of Order did contain such questions as this overture contemplates. For example, the PCUS Book of Church Order, Directory for the Worship and Work of the Church, Part I, chapter 10, required that

- (c) The Minister shall then address those seeking confirmed membership, using the following or like form:

(All of you) being present to make a public profession of your faith, are to assent to the following declarations and promises, by which you enter into a solemn covenant with Christ and his Church:

(1) Do you acknowledge yourselves to be sinners in the sight of God justly deserving his displeasure, and without hope save in his sovereign mercy?

(2) Do you believe in the Lord Jesus Christ as the Son of God and Savior of sinners, and do you receive and depend upon him alone for salvation as he is offered in the Gospel?

(3) Do you now resolve and promise, in humble reliance upon the grace of the Holy Spirit, that you will endeavor to live as becomes the followers of Christ?

(4) Do you promise to serve Christ in his Church by supporting and participating in its worship and work to the best of your ability?

(5) Do you submit yourselves to the government and discipline of the Church, and promise to further its purity and peace? (Section 210-5).

In 1990–1992, a series of overtures were proposed that would have placed affirmations very nearly identical to these in the Directory for Worship, at W-4.2003. The overtures were referred to the (then) Theology and Worship Ministry Unit (TAW) for response. The TAW advised the 205th General Assembly (1993) to disapprove the overtures, and the assembly agreed. As part of the rationale for its advice, TAW noted:

The session has responsibility in regard to forms of words. The . . . session is responsible for ordering an act of worship so significant as the reception of members. It is a crucial part of that ministry to determine the form of avowals a person should make in order to profess faith, present children for baptism, or be received into membership. A notably strong element of our Presbyterian tradition has refused to restrict the sessions and pastors in the important work of formulating such wording, while an outline or statement of the substance of confession and commitments has always been provided. (Minutes, 1993, Part I, p. 727–28).

As it considers this overture, the General Assembly may wish to consider the degree to which the inclusion of particular language for profession of faith invites forms of subscriptionism. While language is the primary, if indeed not the only, tool we have by which to express the nature of our faith, the church must be on guard against assuming that profession of faith can be reduced to subscription to formulae. The present overture is careful to provide for alternative means of profession for those limited by physical or mental disability. But it does not provide for the possibility that there may be other, more meaningful language not herein contemplated by which a believer—and not necessarily one who is disabled—might make acceptable profession. In the end, it seems to us that the essence of faith is not to be found in the intellectual constructions to which we give assent but in the One in whom we repose our ultimate confidence and trust.

Item 04-03

[The assembly disapproved Item 04-03 with comment. See pp. 48, 49.]

On Amending G-10.0101, G-10.0401, and D-10.0401b Regarding Accounting Practices of the Church—From the Presbytery of the Pacific.

The Presbytery of the Pacific overtures the 218th General Assembly (2008) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following amendments to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

1. Amend G-10.0101 as follows: [Text to be added is shown as italic.]

“The session of a particular church consists of the pastor or co-pastors, the associate pastors, and the elders in active service. All members of the session, including the pastor, co-pastors, and associate pastors, are entitled to vote. Although pastors, co-pastors, and associate pastors are members of the session, they shall not be corporate officers or trustees nor shall they act as agents of the corporation.”

2. Amend G-10.0401a–d as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“a. The counting and recording of all offerings by at least two duly appointed, unrelated persons, or a fidelity bonded person;

“b. The keeping of adequate books and records to reflect all financial transactions, open to inspection by authorized church officers at reasonable times;

“c. Any changes in accounts, designated or operating, or drawing on funds designated for other purposes, shall be by session action only and duly recorded in the session minutes;

“d. Periodic reporting of the financial activities to the board or boards vested with financial oversight at least annually, preferably more often; and there shall be an annual published report of financial activity presented to the congregation;

“e. A full financial review or audit of all books and records relating to the finances once each year by a public accountant or public accounting firm or a committee of members versed in accounting procedures and Presbyterian polity. Such auditors should shall not be related to the treasurer (or treasurers) and not related to pastors or any individual related to persons having to do with the finances of the church. While terminology in this section is meant to provide general guidance and is not intended to require or not require specific audit procedures or practices as understood within the professional accounting community, it is expected that the accounting practices of a church shall minimally conform to the standards of not-for-profit organizations for their state.”

3. Amend D-10.0401b as follows: [Text to be added is shown as italic.]

“b. For instances of sexual abuse of another person, the three-year time limit shall not apply. Charges may be brought regardless of the date on which an offense is alleged to have occurred. For instances of alleged financial misconduct regarding church funds, the three-year time limit shall begin from the time of discovery of the alleged offenses.”

Comment: It is expected that the accounting practices of a church shall minimally conform to the standards of not-for-profit organizations for their state.

Rationale

The financial and management practices of many churches are very lax, due in part to the church being a “voluntary association”; with many of those exercising fiscal responsibilities being trained or untrained volunteers.

The increasing evolution of the church along lines of a corporate management model has resulted in the pastoral staff assuming responsibility for, and control of the financial and corporate matters of churches. The reporting of financial activity to the congregation on at least an annual basis serves as both information and as a form of accountability.

All sorts of voluntary organizations in our time have shown themselves to be susceptible and vulnerable to fiscal mismanagement resulting in disregard for fund designations, i.e. those set up for specific purposes by session action and those restricted due to donor designation leading to the unauthorized shuffling and mixing of the funds of the organization (church); or the embezzlement of funds by those responsible for the finances of an organization (church).

When appropriate accounting and reporting procedures are not in place, it may be some time before financial misconduct is discovered. The statute of limitations period should start when the alleged misconduct is discovered, rather than when it occurred.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 04-03

Advice on Item 04-03—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 218th General Assembly (2008) to disapprove Item 04-03.

Item 04-03 from the Presbytery of the Pacific proposes amendments to G-10.0101, G-10.0401, and D-10.0401b, relating to financial and management practices within congregations.

The proposed amendment to G-10.0101 would prohibit pastors, co-pastors, and associate pastors from being trustees or corporate officers.

The proposed amendments to G-10.0401 would require that counting of congregational collections be conducted by two unrelated persons, that changes in accounts and drawing on funds designated for other purposes be with session approval only, that an annual financial report be presented to the congregation, that persons who serve on a congregational audit committee be versed in Presbyterian polity as well as accounting procedures, and that accounting practices of congregations conform to standards established for non-profit corporations.

The proposed amendment to D-10.0401b would provide that the three-year statute of limitations for bringing an accusation of alleged financial misconduct regarding church funds not begin until the time of the discovery of the alleged offense.

Rationale

With respect to the proposed amendment to G-10.0101, the second sentence of G-7.0401 is dispositive of the issue: “Only members on the active roll of the particular church shall be members of the corporation and eligible for election as trustees.” While the pastor, co-pastor, or associate pastor is a member of session, he or she is not a member of the congregation and, therefore, not eligible to be a trustee. Since the pastor cannot be a trustee, he or she cannot moderate the meetings of the board of trustees. The trustees will have to elect one of their elder members as president of the corporation who will have to preside when the session is meeting as the board of trustees.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution believes that sessions and presbyteries have the authority to institute the procedures set forth above as amendments to G-10.0401 if they believe that stricter measures are needed to prevent mismanagement and mishandling of church finances. In order to prevent financial misconduct in congregations it is important that the session be diligent in its oversight of church officers and employees. The session can put in place whatever rules and procedures it believes it needs to assist in that obligation. Presbyteries can use administrative review or can suggest or require new rules and procedures to sessions to assist in preventing financial misconduct. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution believes that an amendment to the Form of Government is unnecessary to solve the problems.

With respect to the proposed amendment to D-10.0401b, the statute of limitations for bringing an accusation in a matter involving financial misconduct in a congregation is three years from the time of the commission of the offense. There should be a review of financial matters at least annually. If misconduct is not discovered within the three-year period, that is an indication that the session is not exercising due diligence. Changing the statute of limitations is not a way to respond to lax management of the church’s financial affairs. Furthermore, the term “time of the discovery of the alleged offense” is vague. Does the time of discovery occur when suspicion is aroused that some misconduct may have occurred, is it when an audit is completed and some evidence of misfeasance is uncovered, or is it when more evidence has been accumulated?

If, however, the 218th General Assembly (2008) believes that the problems addressed by this overture are so serious or severe that amendment of the Form of Government is the best way to respond to them, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that the proposed language is clear and consistent for accomplishing the intent of the overture. In that event, the General Assembly may approve amendments to either G-10.0401 or D-10.0401b or both.

Item 04-04

[The assembly disapproved Item 04-04. See pp. 48, 49.]

On Amending G-7.0301, “Meetings of the Congregation”—From the Presbytery of Denver.

The Presbytery of Denver respectfully overtures the 218th General Assembly (2008) to

1. Pursue equality, justice, and inclusiveness, consistent with the Gospel of Jesus Christ and the commitment of the PC(USA) to preserving the same, by “giving rights to those who have no power to claim rights for themselves” (W-7.4002).
2. Direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Amend G-7.0301 as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“The congregation is made up of all members on the active roll of a particular church. All such members who are ~~present at a congregational meeting~~ listed on the active roll are entitled to vote.”

Rationale

When the congregation meets for the purpose of electing officers, establishing representative committees, and so on, there are many members who, by necessity or circumstances, must be absent. One of the few rights of an active congregation member is the right to vote, but when active members lose this right because they are physically absent, equality, justice, and inclusiveness are being denied.

While it is in community that we make decisions, God’s perspective of the beloved community is inherently more inclusive than our own. From a biblical perspective, what makes God’s people ‘the people of God’ is not simply the visible gathering together of the saints. The community of God is inclusive of both the visible and the invisible members who, together, have been called to serve the invisible God who has made God's self visible in Jesus Christ. It was "all the saints" to whom the Apostle Paul repeatedly sent greetings, and it was the prayers of "all the saints" which, together with the smoke of the incense, went up before God (Revelation).

Our system of representation is so structured that ministers, elders, women, men, youth, and people of every race and ethnicity are encouraged to speak to and vote on those issues that are before and in the church. Thankfully, reforms previously made by the church put an end to a time when the only persons voting in both the nation and our church were white men.

How, then, do we justify the failure of the PC(USA) to extend voting rights to those active members of the church who have - Made a profession of faith in Christ.

- Been baptized.
- Been received into membership of the church.
- Voluntarily submitted to the government of this church.
- Participated in the church work and worship (through such manifestations as faithfully supporting the church through their prayers and financial contributions, sending cards and making telephone calls, knitting and sewing for the poor, receiving the Sacraments at home, and otherwise participating as their health, condition, and time allow)?

Are we not failing to "do justly," as the Prophet Micah says, and failing to affirm Ecclesia reformata, semper reformanda when we fail to give full voting privileges to those active members of the church who, through no fault of their own, are physically unable to come into the House of the Lord?

An ordinance that requires a member be present to vote intentionally excludes certain people, most notably the aged, the physically challenged, health-care workers, and minimum wage earners (who often are forced to work during the worship hour), and is inconsistent with the church's affirmation of inclusiveness.

If this overture is embraced and approved, presbyteries and sessions can work collaboratively to develop appropriate guiding principles and policies for implementing a fair and secure method for absentee voting. Such policies and guidelines would speak to such issues as eligibility, electronic voting, and time limits for casting votes, to name just a few.

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has faithfully and progressively witnessed to, and worked on behalf of, equality, justice, and inclusiveness for all peoples. In these changing times, may the wisdom, power, and Spirit of the God who is always doing a new thing, move us to a new way of holding fast to our unity as the body of Christ.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 04-04

Advice on Item 04-04—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 218th General Assembly (2008) to disapprove Item 04-04.

Rationale

The overture seeks to permit congregations to create rules whereby active members unable to attend the congregational meeting shall be permitted to vote. The ACC commends the concern of the overture for including the whole community of active members in the decision-making process of the congregation. The constitutional mandate for inclusion and diversity, however, is directed at prohibiting categorical exclusion from the decision-making process and does not provide a guarantee for universal accommodation. The ACC believes provisions already in the Form of Government setting forth requirements for the call of the meeting and notification of members provide reasonable and sufficient accommodation for members to fulfill their responsibilities of membership without violating the mandate for inclusion.

In addition, the particular remedy proposed would constitute a major departure from the Principles of Presbyterian Government (G-4.0301), and the biblical and theological precepts on which they are founded.

Our Presbyterian form of governance emphasizes that decision-making is a spiritual exercise in seeking the will of Christ together. The model for this is found in the practice of the apostolic church, in which apostles and elders gathered together in prayer for the purpose of discerning God's will (Acts 1, Acts 15). Central to this practice is the belief that God speaks through the gathered community, and that the shared wisdom of the body can serve to counter and correct the power of self-interest in individuals (Mt. 18:15–20). Inherent to the very concept of “congregation” is the physical gathering of the people of God, both for worship and governance (Heb. 10:24–25).

While the “Principles of Presbyterian Government” address governing bodies and not congregations, where applicable, they also apply to decision-making in congregations. Hence, G-4.0301e: “Decisions shall be reached in governing bodies by vote, following opportunity for discussion, and a majority shall govern” is generally applicable to congregations. It provides that there be opportunity for discussion before voting takes place. In any voting system where the voting parties are not able to participate in simultaneous communication, there has been no opportunity for discussion. Robert's Rules of Order Newly Revised, 10th edition (Perseus Publishing) also emphasizes the importance of simultaneous communication in group decision-making: “The opportunity for simultaneous communication is central to the deliberative character of the meeting, and is what distinguishes it from attempts to do business by postal or electronic mail or by fax” (p. 482).

The General Assembly has historically resisted attempts to permit absentee voting except in corporate matters in jurisdictions where proxy votes must be permitted by civil law (G-7.0404). Similarly, Robert's discourages absentee voting: “It is a fundamental principle of parliamentary law that the right to vote is limited to the members of an organization who are actually present at the time the vote is taken in a legal meeting.” Robert's specifies flaws in voting systems where all members are not present to vote at the same time: “The votes of those present could be affected by debate, by amendments, and perhaps by the need for repeated balloting, while those absent would be unable to adjust their votes to reflect these factors. Consequently, the absentee ballots would in most cases be on a somewhat different question than that on which those present were voting, leading to confusion, unfairness, and inaccuracy in determining the result.” (408f.).

In some circumstances, governing bodies (as opposed to congregations) may provide for votes via electronic meetings and email for certain types of business in emergencies. The business of congregations, however, is limited to those essential functions that require the gathering of God's people (G-7.0304). The election of officers and the call of a pastor each may require the body to exercise judgment about individuals and may require the evaluation of a candidate's response to questions that can only be conducted in person. When congregations gather in their places of worship to deliberate, their decisions related to the purchase, sale, or encumbrance of real property assume a different perspective.

The practical matter of providing for equal participation by absent members while preserving the integrity of the process of discussion, discernment, and decision-making is daunting. To honor the intent of the overture, all non-present members would need to be afforded equal access to the process. In some congregations, those not present might exceed the number of those present. Even if by technological means, absent members were able to participate in the discussion and vote on an equal basis with those present, issues such as verification of identity and the provision for secure, written, secret ballots (if electing a pastor, conducting a contested election, or requested by the body) would need to be addressed.

If approved, the overture could adversely impact the ability of a presbytery to exercise oversight of congregations through congregational meetings which it may call under G-7.0303a.(2). In conflicted congregations, extending votes to those not present in congregational meetings invites expansion of the conflict and increases the likelihood of challenges to the outcome in both civil and ecclesiastical courts.

Ours is a covenant faith. Throughout our Book of Order, decisions are vested in groups, gathered in the presence of the Holy Spirit. That very presence changes the nature of the gathering, and often the outcome is different than it would have been as the sum of the many individuals. While the ACC is sympathetic with the realities expressed in the rationale of this overture, it finds that the amendment is inconsistent with provisions of the Constitution.

If the proposed revised Form of Government is approved, this overture would amend the last sentence of G-1.0501 to read as follows:

“1.0501 Annual and Special Meetings

“The congregation shall hold an annual meeting and may hold special meetings as necessary. At least annually, the congregation shall review the adequacy of the compensation of the pastor or pastors, shall elect ruling elders, and may elect deacons and persons to other positions of elected service as determined by the congregation. Special meetings may be called for any or all of the purposes appropriate for congregational consideration. The business to be transacted at special meetings shall be limited to items specifically listed in the call for the meeting. Adequate public notice of all congregational meetings shall be given at a regular service of worship; congregations shall provide by their own rule for minimum notification requirements. Congregations shall also provide by rule the quorum necessary to conduct business. All active members [~~of the congregation present at either annual or special meetings~~] are entitled to vote.

Item 04-06

On Amending D-7.0402c and D-8.0404c. Regarding Permanent Judicial Commission Written Decisions—From the Presbytery of Stockton.

The Presbytery of Stockton overtures the 218th General Assembly (2008) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendments to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Shall D-7.0402c and D-8.0404c be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strikethrough; text to be added or inserted is shown in italics.]

“c. The questions presented for decision shall be fully debated and voted upon while all participating commission members are present. A written outline of a decision shall be prepared while in session, ~~and shall become the~~. The final decision, with dissents, shall be reviewed by all members of the panel, which may take place by conference call within ten days of the meeting, and when a copy of the written decision is signed by the moderator and clerk of the permanent judicial commission. A copy of the written decision shall immediately be delivered to the parties to the case by personal service or by certified delivery.”

Rationale

Permanent judicial commissions of presbyteries and synods are called upon to decide cases that affect the lives of individuals and the health of our church. These decisions are not to be made lightly or in great haste. But given the current situation, these commissions are sometimes placed under duress to make a decision within a short period of time. They would be better served if they would be allowed to use their time together to go through the evidence and the facts presented and together prepare an outline of a decision that deals with all of the issues presented to them. Then, a completely typed decision with all pertinent references noted may be made by the moderator and clerk, e-mailed to the members of the panel, and finalized in a conference call within ten days of the meeting. In this manner, the time together is spent reflecting on the issues of the trial, not in trying to quickly prepare a written document.

The context for this is that many of the synod permanent judicial commissions (and some of the presbyteries) are spread out geographically. The members of these commissions are volunteers and usually have travel plans made in advance, such that extending a meeting to complete a written decision is not always an option. It is costly to have them return to work on a decision together. Very often, writing a decision involves wordsmithing a decision, typing quotations from the trial record, inserting pertinent Book of Order references and portions of the parties' arguments. All of this takes time, which might better be spent making sure all of the allegations are given careful deliberation. If a member wishes to dissent from the majority decision, they must be working on their dissent, rather than fully participating in all portions of the ongoing decision. Allowing them the time they need to craft their response to the majority decision would be helpful to higher governing bodies who review the case on appeal.

The current process does not make use of the technology available (i.e. e-mail and conference calls) and should be updated to reflect the best use of time and resources of the commissioners.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 04-06

Advice on Item 04-06—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 218th General Assembly (2008) regarding Item 04-06 with the following comment.

Item 04-06 from the Presbytery of Stockton proposes amending D-7.0402c and D-8.0404c to permit permanent judicial commissions to approve a written outline of decisions in remedial cases, and then vote on the final decision during a conference call within ten days of the meeting. The overture cites the challenge of completing a written decision “while in session.”

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution notes that the overture would not amend similar language in D-11.0403c and D-13.0404c, limiting the effect of the proposed change to one type of case.

The General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission in Hope, et al., v. Presbytery of San Francisco (Remedial Case 217-1, Minutes, 2006, Part I, p. 455), held:

D-7.0402c states that “A written decision shall be prepared while in session . . .” The SPJC concluded the trial on February 7, 2004, but did not reconvene in a face-to-face meeting to complete the writing of its decision. A permanent judicial commission must meet in person for consideration and adoption of a final decision. A fundamental reason for this requirement rests upon the Reformed understanding of the activity of the Holy Spirit in the midst of the covenant community which is the Body of Christ. (1 Cor. 12:12–13; The Book of Confessions, 5.124–.141)

On the other hand, the denomination places great burdens on an ecclesial judicial system that is dependent upon elected volunteers to handle a wide variety of matters. Many issues presented in remedial cases can be complex. Issues may arise in the course of the trial of a remedial case that are not fully anticipated, and that may require additional research of church precedent. Further, the pressures of drafting a decision in a limited period of time immediately after hearing the trial of a case may limit a permanent judicial commission’s ability to review, revise and reconsider a decision thoroughly.

Accordingly, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 218th General Assembly (2008) that the proposed amendment should be considered in light of these competing concerns. If the assembly believes that greater flexibility is needed in the writing and adoption of permanent judicial commission decisions in the trial of a remedial case, the Advisory Committee advises that the 218th General Assembly (2008) submit to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative vote the overture’s proposal amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and a strikethrough; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and an underline.]

“c. The questions presented for decision shall be fully debated and voted upon while all participating commission members are present. A written outline of a decision shall be prepared while in session, and shall become the. [The final] [A written] decision, with dissents, shall be reviewed by all members of the panel, [which may take place] [either while the participating commission members are present or by meeting within ten days either in person or] by conference call[.] [within ten days of the meeting, and] [The decision shall become the final decision of the commission] when a copy of the written decision is signed by the moderator and clerk of the permanent judicial commission. A copy of the written decision shall immediately be delivered to the parties to the case by personal service or by certified delivery.”

This revision would allow a permanent judicial commission the flexibility to finalize its decision either at the conclusion of trial while all members are still present or within ten days thereafter. This revision is also intended to make clear that the permanent judicial commission may find it feasible to meet again in person.

If the proposed amendment is approved by the presbyteries, the use of “conference call” for approving the final decision would be subject to Robert’s Rules of Order Newly Revised (10th edition), § 50, pages 482–83, (G-9.0302) which establishes the criterion of being able to hear (and see in videoconferences) all persons at all times, as well as requiring standing rules of the permanent judicial commission to establish the purpose and limits for using such means.

Item 04-07

[In response to Item 04-07, the assembly approved an alternate resolution. See pp. 48, 49.]

On Adding a New Section D-1.0104 to Limit the Abuse in Disciplinary Process by the Filing of Multiple Complaints and/or Allegations—From the Presbytery of Los Ranchos.

The Presbytery of Los Ranchos overtures the 218th General Assembly (2008) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Shall the Rules of Discipline be amended by adding a new Section “D-1.0104” in the Preamble to read as follows: [Text to be added is shown as italic.]

“When an individual persists in filing multiple ecclesiastical and/or civil complaints, simultaneously or serially, remedial or disciplinary, against a particular individual or individuals, one governing body or several, the governing body (or its permanent judicial commission) with original jurisdiction or with jurisdiction over the governing body with original jurisdiction, may declare that individual NOT IN COMPLIANCE and may itself, or through its permanent judicial commission, refuse to accept additional remedial or disciplinary complaints authored by or initiated by or filed by that individual while that individual has another judicial matter (ecclesiastical and/or civil) pending. A NOT IN COMPLIANCE ruling means the individual does not have standing to file, directly or by proxy, any additional allegations or complaints. (Any complaints filed by that individual prior to such designation, are tolled while the original matter before the governing body declaring the person NOT IN COMPLIANCE is resolved.) The intent of this section is to practice good stewardship by requiring the use of the provisions for resolution of disagreements by those means provided in D-1.0103. This section is not intended to replace or limit the right to file disciplinary charges against such individual.”

Alternate Resolution Approved

That the Stated Clerk be instructed to prepare an advisory opinion outlining existing remedies to address abuses of judicial process, and the Office of the General Assembly be instructed to prepare any necessary constitutional amendments for presentation to the 219th General Assembly (2010) in order to provide for responses following due process, for permanent judicial commissions and sessions to censure persons found guilty of abusing judicial process through frivolous and/or harassing complaints and/or allegations.

Rationale

One of the purposes of disciplinary process, as set forth in the opening of Chapter I, is “... the just, speedy, and economical determination of proceedings. ...”

There are individuals who, contrary to D-1.0103, move frequently and directly to judicial process whenever they have a disagreement with a governing body;

In doing so, such individuals do not make use of other options for resolving difference.

Such individuals use the Rules of Discipline for purposes other than those for which they were intended.

The filing of multiple complaints and allegations results in the need for extensive investment of human and financial resources to respond to such complaints and allegations.

This is poor stewardship of governing body resources.

Some individuals refuse non-judicial attempts to respond to their concerns—and reject efforts to be more judicious in the use of judicial process.

Such abuse of the judicial process undermines the need for trust, mutual forbearance, and good will.

Such abuse of the judicial process erodes the ability of governing bodies to engage in mission and diverts resources to activities that detract from the primary mission of Christ’s Church.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 04-07

Advice on Item 04-07—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 218th General Assembly (2008) to disapprove Item 04-07.

Rationale

Item 04-07 seeks to grant governing bodies and permanent judicial commissions the ability to limit an individual’s standing to file remedial complaints or disciplinary accusations, if the individual “persists in filing multiple ecclesiastical and/or civil complaints, simultaneously or serially, remedial or disciplinary, against a particular individual or individuals, one governing body or several. ...”

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises disapproval of the overture for the following reasons:

The overture would permit governing bodies and permanent judicial commissions to deprive a person of constitutional rights without affording the individual due process. Essential to our exercise of discipline is the protection of the individual from the arbitrary and capricious abuse of power. The Preamble to the Rules of Discipline underscores the importance of due process in the exercise of judicial authority: “In all respects, all participants are to be accorded procedural safeguards and due process, and it is the intention of these rules so to provide” (D-1.0101). The proposed overture would empower governing bodies and courts of the church to limit an individual’s access to the courts of the church for redress of grievances a priori, apart from any hearing or process to address the relevance or truthfulness of the complaints. It would go so far as to empower governing bodies and courts to abridge the constitutional rights even of those persons who might, in the judgment of the governing body or permanent judicial commission be acting as “proxy” for one suspected of filing multiple complaints. In this way, the overture would violate the Historic Principle of Church Order that states, “no Church governing body ought to pretend to make laws to bind the conscience in virtue of their own authority” (G-1.0307).

The overture would permit a higher governing body to intervene in the judicial proceedings of a lower governing body independently of the lower governing body’s right or ability to exercise its own judgment. The overture seeks to provide an overbroad authority to higher governing bodies (or judicial commissions) to intervene in matters under the jurisdiction of lower governing bodies (or judicial commissions). The overture does not identify any process of review, referral, or appeal by which a higher governing body or its permanent judicial commission is invited to participate in the issues before the lower governing body or judicial commission. Section G-4.0301f recognizes that the hierarchical use of power may not be exercised arbitrarily, but only when matters of controversy arise through an orderly process of review, or upon reference, complaint, or appeal: “A higher governing body shall have the right of review and control over a lower one and shall have power to determine matters of controversy upon reference, complaint, or appeal.”

The overture would potentially hinder justice through the delay of judicial process. The overture would automatically “toll” or suspend action on pending items while the original item before the governing body is being adjudicated. The Preamble of the Rules of Discipline calls for the “just, speedy, and economical” determination of proceedings (D-1.0101). The proposed overture, however, could delay action on duly filed complaints or accusations for months if not years. In cases in which suspended disciplinary accusations allege sexual abuse, it could have the effect of delaying the determination of whether an accused person should be put on administrative leave, and/or extending that leave for unreasonably long duration (D-10.0106).

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution is sympathetic to the concerns for the stewardship of human and financial resources in the face of multiple, potentially groundless, complaints and accusations.

The committee reminds the assembly of existing remedies it cited in its response to Item 05-20 to the 217th General Assembly (2006):

The polity of the PC(USA) currently provides means to protect the denomination and its members from abuse of the system. Currently that protection exists through

1. the ability of an investigating committee to determine that charges will not be filed;
2. the ability of the investigating committee to choose to file allegations against an individual who inappropriately files allegations against another;
3. the ability of a session/permanent judicial commission that tries a disciplinary case to include in its opinion the statement that the allegations were frivolous. Investigating committees and sessions/permanent judicial commissions are strongly urged to avail themselves of these means as they seek to protect the integrity of our judicial system. (Minutes, 2006, Part I, p. 428)

In addition, the committee notes that permanent judicial commissions of higher governing bodies may instruct parties in its decisions that it will take original jurisdiction of cases in lower governing bodies filed by specific individuals when there has been a pattern of multiple complaints and appeals. This would have the remedy of reducing the time and money spent on multiple appeals. There is precedent for this by the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission in the case of Veldhuizen v. Presbytery of San Francisco (Remedial Case 210-6, Minutes, 1998, Part I, p. 136).

Item 04-08

On Amending W-4.9000 Regarding the Definition of Marriage—From the Presbytery of Baltimore.

The Presbytery of Baltimore overtures the 218th General Assembly (2008) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendments to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Shall W-4.9000 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strikethrough; text to be added or inserted is shown in italics.]

“W-4.9000 9. Marriage

“W-4.9001

“Marriage is a gift God has given to all humankind for the well-being of the entire human family. “W-4.9002

“W-4.9002b [No changes.]

“W-4.9004

“The service begins with the scriptural sentences and a brief statement of purpose. The ~~man and the woman~~ two people shall declare their intention to enter into Christian marriage and shall exchange vows of love and faithfulness. The service includes appropriate passages of Scripture, which may be interpreted in various forms of proclamation. Prayers shall be offered for the couple, for the communities which support them in this new dimension of discipleship, and for all who seek to live in faithfulness. In the name of the triune God the minister shall declare publicly that the ~~woman and the man~~ two people are now joined in marriage. [The remainder of this paragraph remains the same.]

“A service of worship recognizing a civil marriage or civil union and confirming it in the community of faith may be appropriate when requested by the couple. The service will be similar to the marriage service except that the opening statement, the declaration of intention, the exchange of vows by the ~~husband and wife~~ couple, and the public declaration by the minister reflect the fact that the ~~woman and man~~ two people are already ~~married to one another~~ united according to the laws of the state.”

Rationale

Currently in our churches and communities same gender couples are living together in loving, committed, monogamous relationships. They are raising children, caring for aging parents, and making positive contributions to their communities. These couples include new and long-time members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). Their relationships are equivalent to a marriage in every way but formal recognition by the church and by most states in which they live, though some states are recognizing their relationships as marriages or civil unions.

By changing the definition of marriage in the Directory for Worship, we would recognize committed, lifelong relationships that are already being lived out by our members. We would honor and support the love and commitment they practice in their lives every day. We would bear witness to the love of God as it is expressed between these couples and as we offer that love to them on behalf of the church.

In addition, as the legal recognition of same gender relationships goes through transitions throughout the country, PC(USA) clergy and sessions are faced with complex decisions regarding ecclesiastical authority and property use. Ministers of Word and Sacrament currently can face ecclesiastical charges if they perform marriage ceremonies or civil unions that may be legal in their state. Same gender couples who are members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) can come to their minister and request that minister to perform their marriage as an agent of the state, only to be denied that important time of pastoral care and ministry because of church law. Broadening the language to offer marriage to any two people removes the religious barriers faced by ministers, sessions, church members, and other Christians while continuing to honor the laws of each state. Changing the language in this way emphasizes that the Directory for Worship defines marriage within the bounds of our denomination and does not determine what is legal or illegal in civil law.

For the good of loving, monogamous, same-gender couples in our church and for the community and for the greater ministry of our clergy, sessions, and churches we propose these changes to the Directory for Worship.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 04-08

Advice on Item 04-08—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution offers the following advice to the 218th General Assembly (2008) regarding Item 04-08.

Rationale

The overture proposes removing language in W-4.9000 identifying marriage as a relationship between “a man and a woman” in favor of language that is not gender-specific as to the parties involved. In addition, it would reverse the order of the terms by which marriage is defined so that it refers to marriage first as a “covenant” and second as “a civil contract.”

The understanding of Christian marriage is set forth in W-4.9001:

Marriage is a gift God has given to all humankind for the well-being of the entire human family. Marriage is a civil contract between a woman and a man. For Christians marriage is a covenant through which a man and a woman are called to live out together before God their lives of discipleship. In a service of Christian marriage a lifelong commitment is made by a woman and a man to each other, publicly witnessed and acknowledged by the community of faith.

This definition of marriage identifies three distinct contexts in which God’s gift of marriage is received, each of which lays a claim on the church to provide a faithful response. First, “marriage is a gift God has given to all humankind for the well-being of the entire human family.” Second, “Marriage is a civil contract between a woman and a man.” Third, “For Christians, marriage is a covenant through which a man and a woman are called to live out together before God their lives of discipleship.” These three sentences require interpretation: Does the second sentence (civil contract) describe a subset of the first (gift to all humankind), or is it a description of how the gift is conferred? Does the second sentence (civil contract) control and subsume the third (Christian marriage)?

These are questions that apply directly to the polity issues presented by the overture, and which divide the church as to its understanding of what constitutes a faithful witness to the world. If God’s gift of marriage is only conferred through a civil contract, then the church’s practice (and therefore its witness) regarding marriage would be limited by the definitions set by civil authority. While the church can always define marriage more narrowly than the state, and restrict marriage in the church by enforcing its own limits and conditions, if the gift of marriage to the church were independent of the state and not fully subsumed by the civil contract definition, then it would have a basis for performing marriages as acts of prophetic and compassionate witness against civil definitions it deemed too narrow.

The social witness policies of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) have consistently advocated for the end to discrimination in the civil arena on the basis of sexual orientation. This commitment to equality under the law has prompted our support of civil unions for homosexual couples that would afford them protections and rights by the state equal to those afforded heterosexual couples under marriage. The church has permitted the blessing of same-sex unions as an act of pastoral care to its members and as an act of witness, justice, and compassion to the wider community.

However, the church, on the basis of its historic interpretation of the standards of its faith, has drawn a distinction between same-sex unions, which it has permitted within the church, and homosexual marriage, which it has not. This distinction was affirmed in our polity by the decision of the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission in the case of Benton, et al. v. Presbytery of Hudson River, (Remedial Case 212-11, Minutes, 2000, Part I, p. 586). This decision relied on a 1991 authoritative interpretation of W-4.9001, which reads (in part):

...since a Christian marriage performed in accordance with the Directory for Worship can only involve a covenant between a woman and a man, it would not be proper for a minister of the Word and Sacrament to perform a same sex union ceremony that the minister determines to be the same as a marriage ceremony. (Minutes, 1991, Part I, pp. 55, 57, 395)

Benton then drew an important distinction between same-sex unions and marriages:

A determinative distinction between a permissible same-sex ceremony and a marriage ceremony is that the latter confers a new status whereas the former blesses an existing relationship. The Book of Order makes this theological distinction concerning marriage in W-4.9004: "In the name of the triune God the minister shall declare publicly that the woman and the man are now joined in marriage." This and similar pronouncements declaring a new status are to be reserved for services of marriage. (loc. cit.)

In this regard, then, the social witness of the church for equality under the law has not extended to its own liturgical practice and theological understanding of Christian marriage.

Both the Preface to the Directory for Worship and W-1.4001 make clear the connection between the church's faith and its practice, so that forms of worship are informed biblically, theologically, and ecumenically, and the practice of worship respects both the tradition of the church and the pastoral needs of the community. In this light, changes to the language, forms, or definition of marriage should be informed by theological fidelity, ecumenical consultation, and pastoral sensitivity.

Changing civil understandings of marriage raise new questions of how pastors are to lead the church in exercising pastoral care to its members and compassionate witness and outreach to its neighbors. For example, in some civil jurisdictions, same-sex unions are automatically accorded the legal status of marriage. In others, the state will not sanction a marriage unless both parties present valid social security cards. The Baltimore overture seeks to provide greater options to pastors facing these questions.

Should the assembly consider such a definition more faithful to the service of Christ in the church, the ACC finds the language proposed in the overture to be clear and consistent with that intent. However, in light of the Preface to the Directory for Worship, the ACC believes it would be incumbent on the assembly to clarify the biblical and confessional warrant for, as well as the ecumenical impact of, any alteration to the definition of marriage in the Directory for Worship.

Were the assembly to approve and the church adopt the overture as presented, it would have the effect of negating the authoritative interpretation of 1991 and the Benton decision, as each is predicated on the constitutional definition of marriage as between "a man and a woman" exclusively. The ACC advises the assembly, however, that changing the definition of marriage in W-4.9001 would leave intact the language relating to the standards for church officers contained in G-6.0106b that calls for "fidelity in the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman," although the accompanying citation to W-4.9001 would no longer apply.

GAC COMMENT ON ITEM 04-08

The Directory for Worship states that marriage, both as a civil contract and as a Christian covenant, is a commitment made by a woman and a man. Item 04-08 seeks to change the definition of marriage in the Book of Order from "a man and a woman" to "two people."

This overture has theological, ethical, cultural, legal, and liturgical implications. All aspects of this issue need to be considered. Because the church's understanding of marriage is expressed in its services for Christian marriage, the overture's liturgical implications are particularly significant.

Any change in the theology of marriage must be reflected in the Book of Common Worship services of Christian marriage. The current forms of marriage liturgy reflect (and shape) a particular theology of marriage. The Book of Common Worship grounds God's gift of marriage in the complimentary creation of male and female, given by God, blessed by Jesus Christ, and sustained by the Holy Spirit. Thus, marriage is the proper context for the full expression of love between a man and a woman, an aid to faithful living, the environment for the birth and nurture of children, an element in the well-being of society, a holy mystery uniting a man and a woman, and a calling into a new way of life. (See Book of Common Worship, p. 842.)

The church's Statement on the Gift of Marriage would not make sense if "two persons" were substituted for "a man and a woman." The change called for by the overture would require a new understanding and a different statement of what constitutes God's gift of marriage.

Item 04-12

[The assembly answered Item 04-12 by the action taken on Item 04-13. See pp. 48, 49.]

On Equal Rights for Families of Same-Gender Partners—From the Presbytery of New Brunswick.

The Presbytery of New Brunswick respectfully overtures the 218th General Assembly (2008) to do the following:

1. Renew and strengthen the long-standing Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) commitment to equal protection under the law for lesbian and gay persons.
  - a. Recognize that married couples enjoy more than 1,000 protections, benefits, and responsibilities that are denied to committed couples in same-gender partnerships and their children.
  - b. Declare that equality under the law requires that same-gender partners have access to all protections, benefits, and responsibilities of civil marriage.
  - c. Urge state legislatures and the federal government to apply the principle of equal protection to same-gender couples and their children.
2. Direct the Moderator of the General Assembly to appoint a fifteen-member special committee, representing the broad diversity of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), to explore the following, and report to the 219th General Assembly (2010), including any policy recommendations growing out of the study:
  - a. The history of the laws governing marriage and civil union, including current policy debates.
  - b. How the theology and practice of marriage have developed in the Reformed and broader Christian tradition.
  - c. The relationship between civil marriage and Christian marriage.
  - d. The effects of current laws on same-gender partners and their children.
  - e. The place of covenanted same-gender partnerships in the Christian community.
3. Support congregations, sessions, and ministers of the Word and Sacrament who are seeking to extend pastoral care to same-gender couples and their families.

Rationale

The Government Accountability Office has issued a report in which it identifies “a total of 1,138 federal statutory provisions classified to the United States Code in which marital status is a factor in determining or receiving benefits, rights, and privileges” (GAO-04-353R, January 23, 2004; see <http://www.gao.gov/new.items/d04353r.pdf> ). These include survivor benefits, family visitation rights, tax considerations, insurance and other employment benefits, and a host of provisions designed to protect families with children, which are taken for granted by married couples. State laws are not included in this total.

The Theological Task Force on the Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church identified the need for continued attention to the theological issues underlying our struggles:

Having heard a presentation to the task force ... , many believe that, instead of beginning with the question of ordination, it would be more profitable first to explore a more basic theological question: How does God’s gracious drama of creation, reconciliation, and redemption work itself out in the lives of baptized gay and lesbian persons who are committed to exclusive, covenanted relationships?<sup>25</sup>

[Footnote]

<sup>25</sup>Johnson’s presentation demonstrated the wide range of responses to the question in current biblical scholarship and theological writing. Johnson says the question arises because the church’s current standards specifically address heterosexual persons who are married and all single persons, but have no specific word for gay or lesbian persons in partnership. [Report of the Theological Task Force on the Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church, A Season of Discernment, p. 21]

The prevalence of controversy about same-gender relationships in both the church and the civil sphere demonstrates the urgent need to engage in the biblical and theological work that will help us move forward. This issue is so important that it needs the focus of an appointed body that represents the wide spectrum of views within the church.

The overture's recommendations are consistent with the PC(USA)'s historic championing of the civil rights of gay and lesbian persons, as expressed in the following statements from the Social Witness Policy Compilation:

In 1977, the PCUS General Assembly expressed "... the need for the Church to stand for just treatment of homosexual persons in our society in regard to their civil liberties, equal rights, and protection under the law from social and economic discrimination which is due all citizens ..." (PCUS, 1977, p. 174). The PCUS General Assembly reaffirmed that decision in 1978 and in 1979 (PCUS, 1978, p. 190; PCUS, 1979, p. 208). In 1978, the UPCUSA declared that "... there is no legal, social, or moral justification for denying homosexual persons access to the basic requirements of human social existence ..." (UPCUSA, 1978, p. 264). In 1987, the PC(USA) General Assembly called "... for the elimination ... of laws governing the private sexual behavior between consenting adults [and the passage] of laws forbidding discrimination based on sexual orientation in employment, housing, and public accommodations ..." (PC(USA), 1987, p. 776)

On the basis of the previous policy statements, the 204th General Assembly (1992) declared "... its support for the New Jersey Law Against Discrimination, as amended in January 1992," which "... added the criteria of 'affectional or sexual orientation' to the New Jersey Law ..." The Assembly further directed "... the Stated Clerk to explore possibilities for filing a 'friend of the court' brief in support of this law," which was challenged by the Orthodox Presbyterian Church (PC(USA), 1992, p. 918).

The 205th General Assembly (1993) took two actions with regard to the legal rights of homosexuals: The first action was a resolution in response to an overture urging condemnation of the discriminatory legislation in Colorado's Amendment Two which repealed laws protecting against discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation. In the resolution, the Assembly noted its previous position on homosexuals and society, and "... unequivocally condemn[ed] all discriminatory legislation, such as [Amendment 2 of the Colorado Constitution]..." (PC(USA), 1993, p. 119). The second action this General Assembly took was to adopt a Commissioners' Resolution which affirmed its commitment to end discrimination based on sexual orientation and encouraged the United States military to do the same, saying: that it "... commend[s] [the] Stated Clerk ... for joining with other national religious leaders in urging an end to discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation in the U.S. military ..." (PC(USA), 1993, p. 946). 1978 Statement—UPCUSA, 1978, pp. 265–66

The 208th General Assembly (1996) approved the following resolution:

Affirming the Presbyterian church's historic definition of marriage as a civil contract between a man and a woman, yet recognizing that committed same-sex partners seek equal civil liberties in a contractual relationship with all the civil rights of married couples, we urge the Office of the Stated Clerk to explore the feasibility of entering friend-of-the-court briefs and supporting legislation in favor of giving civil rights to same-sex partners. (Minutes, 1996, Part I, p. 122)

The 216th General Assembly (2004) stated that it:

- Offers prayerful thanks for the Scriptures informing us that all persons are created in the image of God (Gen. 1:27)
- Affirms the Presbyterian church's historic definition of the meaning of marriage as a "civil contract between a woman and a man" (W-4.9001, as quoted in a resolution of 208th General Assembly (1996), Minutes, 1996, Part I, p. 122).
- Declares that all persons are entitled to equal treatment under the law (Constitution of the United States of America); therefore
- Urges state legislations to change state laws to include the right of same-gender persons to civil union and, thereby, to extend to them all the benefits, privileges, and responsibilities of civil union, and urges all persons to support such changes in state laws.
- Urges the Congress of the United States of America to recognize those state laws that allow same-gender union and to change federal laws to recognize all civil unions licensed and solemnized under state law to apply in all federal laws that provide benefits, privileges, and/or responsibilities to married persons. (Minutes, 2004, Part I, p. 59)

Item 04-13

[The assembly approved Item 04-13 with amendment. See pp. 48, 49.]

On Equal Rights for Families of Same-Gender Partners—From the Presbytery of Denver.

The Presbytery of Denver respectfully overtures the 218th General Assembly (2008) to do the following:

1. Renew and strengthen the long-standing Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) commitment to equal protection under the law for lesbian and gay persons and the 216th General Assembly (2004)'s affirmation of the right of same-gender persons to civil union and, thereby, to all the benefits, privileges, and responsibilities of civil union.

a. Recognize that married couples enjoy more than 1,000 protections, benefits, and responsibilities that are denied to committed couples in same-gender partnerships and their children.

b. Recognize that equality under the law does not discriminate against some committed couples but sees that same-gender partners also have access to all protections, benefits, and responsibilities of civil union.

c. Request the Stated Clerk, the General Assembly Council, and other representatives of the PC(USA) to urge state legislatures and the federal government to apply the principle of equal protection to same-gender couples and their children.

2. Direct the Moderator of the General Assembly to appoint a special committee, representing the broad diversity [and theological balance] of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), to study the following, and report to the 219th General Assembly (2010), including any policy recommendations growing out of the study:

a. The history of the laws governing marriage and civil union, including current policy debates.

b. How the theology and practice of marriage have developed in the Reformed and broader Christian tradition.

c. The relationship between civil union and Christian marriage.

d. The effects of current laws on same-gender partners and their children.

e. The place of covenanted same-gender partnerships in the Christian community.

3. Support congregations, sessions, and ministers of Word and Sacrament who are seeking to extend pastoral care as well as outreach and evangelism to same-gender couples and their nontraditional families who are more and more our neighbors on our streets and our fellow members in our pews.

[4. This overture seeks to renew and strengthen the commitment of the PCUSA to equal protection under the law, encourage steps to reinforce this commitment and to affirm the importance of pastoral care and outreach to non-traditional families, including those same-gender commitment partners. This overtures advocates for equal rights and does not seek to redefine the nature of Christian marriage.]

Rationale

This overture seeks to renew and strengthen the commitment of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to equal protection under the law, encourage steps to reinforce this commitment, and to affirm the importance of pastoral care and outreach to non-traditional families, including those of same-gender committed partners. This overture advocates for equal rights and does not seek to redefine the nature of Christian marriage.

The prevalence of controversy about same-gender relationships in both the church and the civil sphere demonstrates the urgent need to engage in the biblical and theological work that will help the church find right and faithful steps to engage with God's love the growing number of same-gender relationships and families in our time. This issue is so important that it needs the focus of an appointed body that represents the wide spectrum of views within the church.

The Theological Task Force on the Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church identified the need for continued attention to the theological issues underlying this struggle:

many believe that, instead of beginning with the question of ordination, it would be more profitable first to explore a more basic theological question: How does God's gracious drama of creation, reconciliation, and redemption work itself out in the lives of baptized gay and lesbian persons who are committed to exclusive, covenanted relationships? (Report of the Theological Task Force on the Peace, Unity and Purity of the Church, PC(USA), 2005, p. 21, lines 592-96)

The overture's recommendations are consistent with the PC(USA)'s historic championing of the civil rights of gay and lesbian persons, as expressed in the following statements from the Social Policy Compilation:

- In 1977, the PCUS General Assembly expressed "... the need for the Church to stand for just treatment of homosexual persons in our society in regard to their civil liberties, equal rights, and protection under the law from social and economic discrimination which is due all citizens . . ." (Minutes, PCUS, 1977, Part I, p. 174). (Minutes, UPCUSA, 1978, Part I, p. 264). In 1987, the General Assembly called "... for the elimination ... of laws governing the private sexual behavior between consenting adults ... [and the passage] of laws forbidding discrimination based on sexual orientation in employment, housing, and public accommodation" (Minutes, 1987, Part I, p. 776).

- The 205th General Assembly (1993) adopted a resolution in response to an overture urging condemnation of the discriminatory legislation in Colorado's Amendment Two, which repealed laws protecting against discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation.

- The 216th General Assembly (2004) did the following:

- Offers prayerful thanks for the Scriptures informing us that all persons are created in the image of God (Gen. 1:27). ...
- Declares that all persons are entitled to equal treatment under the law (Constitution of the United States of America); therefore
- Urges state legislations to change state laws to include the right of same-gender persons to civil union and, thereby, to extend to them all the benefits, privileges, and responsibilities of civil union, and urges all persons to support such changes in state laws.
- Urges the Congress of the United States of America to recognize those state laws that allow same-gender union and to change federal laws to recognize all civil unions licensed and solemnized under state law to apply in all federal laws that provide benefits, privileges, and/or responsibilities to married persons.

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 04-13

Advice and Counsel on Item 04-13—From the Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC).

Item 04-13 urges equal rights for families of same-gender partners.

The Advocacy Committee for Women's Concerns (ACWC) advises that this item be approved.

Rationale

"The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) shall give full expression to the rich diversity within its membership and shall provide means which will assure a greater inclusiveness leading to wholeness in its emerging life" (Book of Order, G-4.0403).

The church in its emerging life is continuously discerning how and working toward becoming a truly diverse, Christian community of faith making visible the Reign of God. The church continues recognizing injustice and responding with mercy to the cries of God's children while building justice. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is Reformed and always reforming, necessitating that we recognize instances of injustice and act to bring justice for all people. Women and men in same-gender, monogamous, committed relationships face extra barriers. They do not currently benefit from the blessings of church and society that contribute to the strengthening of families and communities. Presbyterians are committed to equal protection under the law and have a history of repudiating discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation. Approval of this overture would move the church toward a clearer recognition of the inequalities and discrimination that same-gender couples experience. These actions would serve to appreciate the contributions that women and men in same-gender relationships make to our congregations and communities.

*Item 04-14

Moderator Discretion—Stated Clerk, Dr. W. Keith Geckeler, The Presbytery of Los Ranchos.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that the 218th General Assembly (2008) answer Item 04-14 with the following recommendation:

Ordination as an Act of the Whole Church

The request points to the inherent tension in our polity between individual conscience and corporate decision-making. The 1979 Report of Task Force on Polity & Reconciliation to the 190th General Assembly of the United Pres- byterian Church in the United States of America recognized that, “The moderator of any judicatory is a member of that judicatory, chosen by the members to represent, in a person, the unity of the body, which is in tension between individual conscience and majority opinion” (Minutes, UPCUSA, 1979, Part I, p. 316).

In the case of a session, the moderator has been installed or appointed by the presbytery with the additional responsibility of representing the whole church, not merely the majority opinion of the session (Request 97-5, Minutes, 1997, Part I, p. 186). In exercising this responsibility, the moderator has the responsibility to see that the business of the session is conducted in a manner that conforms to the Constitution. When a governing body conducts an examination for ordination or installation, it shall apply the standards of the church to those elected to office, and determine whether a candidate has departed from scriptural and constitutional standards for fitness for office, and if so, whether any departure constitutes a failure to adhere to the essentials of Reformed faith and polity under G-6.0108 of the Book of Order, thus barring the candidate from ordination and/or installation (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 28–29, 523, Item 06-01). This determination is the responsibility of the governing body on behalf of the whole church, and any decision is the act of the whole church unless upon review a higher governing body finds the examination or ordination and installation decision defective. In this regard, both session and moderator are called to exercise judgment that is captive to the Word of God as interpreted in the standards of the church (G-6.0108b).

The request does not suggest that the moderator or any other person has challenged the examination or ordination and installation decision of the session, but asks whether the moderator may refuse to perform the acts of ordination or installation when the moderator holds a conscientious objection or a minority opinion regarding the fitness of the candidate.

The Constitutional Responsibilities of the Moderator and Session

In responding to this question, it is important to consider the decision of the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission in Maxwell v. Presbytery of Pittsburgh (Minutes, UPCUSA, 1975, p. 254), in which a candidate, Walter Wynn Kenyon, indicated during his examination his unwillingness to participate in the ordination of candidates regarding whose ordination he was conscientiously opposed. The decision underscored the role of the moderator in fulfilling the constitutional responsibilities of the office as a matter of “the candidate’s vows of ordination, particularly his endorsing the Church’s government and honoring its discipline.” However, the decision did not support its finding barring Kenyon’s ordination on his refusal to fulfill the role of moderator qua moderator, but rather on his rejection of “an explicit constitutional provision” to provide equal access to leadership opportunities regardless of sex, which therefore constituted a “rejection of its [the denomination’s] government and discipline.” This begs the question as to whether a moderator has a constitutional obligation by virtue of office to perform an otherwise constitutional ordination or installation contrary to conscience.

Section G-10.01021 states the session has the responsibility, “to instruct, examine, ordain, install, and welcome into common ministry elders and deacons on their election by the congregation and to inquire into their faithfulness in fulfilling their responsibilities.” A refusal to participate in the ordination or installation of duly elected elders or deacons by an installed pastor as a member of session could constitute a violation of this provision and call into question whether the moderator truly “welcomed them into common ministry.” Whether or not the moderator was a member of session, it could call into question whether the moderator was willing “to be a friend among ... colleagues in ministry, working with them, subject to the ordering of God’s Word and Spirit” (G-4.4003e).

Furthermore, W-4.4003 suggests the moderator has a positive obligation to preside at the service of ordination and/or installation: “The moderator of the governing body of those to be ordained, installed, or commissioned shall ask them to stand before the body of membership and to answer the following questions ....” Section G-10.0103a offers remedies for the session to conduct its business in the absence of the installed or appointed moderator; and inasmuch as the act of ordination and installation is an act of the session, the remedies in this section would apply under those circumstances. No remedy explicitly provides for a refusal on the basis of conscience, and in no circumstance does the Constitution permit a moderator to invite another minister to serve as moderator without the concurrence of the session. Nevertheless, it does state, “When it may appear advisable for prudential reasons that some minister other than the pastor should preside, the pastor may, with the concurrence of the session, invite a minister of the same presbytery to do so.” Whether the specific circumstances of the pastor’s refusal constitute “prudential reasons” is left to the pastor and the session to determine.

Mutual Forbearance

Without the concurrence of the session, there is no provision on the basis of conscience for a moderator to refuse to fulfill the functions of the office of moderator in participating in the ordination and installation of duly elected, examined, and approved elders and deacons. That notwithstanding, the request highlights the importance of section “e” of the authoritative interpretation approved by the 217th General Assembly (2006) (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 28–29, 523, Item 06-01), which states, “All parties should endeavor to outdo one another in honoring one another’s decisions, according the presumption of wisdom to ordaining/installing bodies in examining candidates and to the General Assembly, with presbyteries’ approval, in setting standards.” Moreover, the same assembly encouraged all members to exercise their biblical and constitutional responsibilities “to conciliate, mediate, and adjust differences without strife” prayerfully and deliberately (D-1.0103) and to institute administrative or judicial proceedings only when other efforts fail to preserve the purposes and purity of the church.

We encourage all members, and especially officers, to exercise mutual forbearance toward one another, respecting the conscience of those who disagree with the decision of the body. It is equally incumbent on the session to respect the conscience of the moderator and authorize the invitation to another minister to preside, as it is incumbent upon the moderator to fulfill the responsibilities of moderator on behalf of the whole church, and to welcome colleagues in ministry.

Whether the moderator in question would be considered to have committed an offense would be determined by a permanent judicial commission (PJC) relying on the specific facts in the incident referred to it.

Question Received

If a moderator refuses to ordain an individual whom the session has approved for ordination, has this moderator committed an offense as defined by the Rules of Discipline?

4. Amend D-10.0202h(4): as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

~~“All parties shall be provided an advocate~~ The investigating committee shall provide an advocate for the accused throughout settlement negotiations, and may provide an advocate for other interested persons at its own discretion.”

5. Amend D-10.0202h(5) as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

~~“If a settlement satisfactory to all parties involved~~ both the investigating committee and the accused in the mediation alternative form of resolution is not reached, the investigating committee shall designate a prosecuting committee per D-10.0202j, and the case shall proceed to the filing of charges on the charges filed.”

Rationale

1. With respect to questions one and five, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that the questions point to a deficiency in the current language of the Book of Order best addressed by constitutional amendment.

Regarding question one, in the Rules of Discipline, the words “party” or “parties” have specific meanings. In nearly all occurrences, they refer exclusively to the persons identified at trial as the complainant (or complainants) and respondent (or respondents) in remedial cases (D-6.0201), or to the prosecuting committee and the accused in a disciplinary case (D-10.0402b). The use of “all parties” in D-2.0103 and D-10.0202h, however, creates the possibility of confusion as to who is intended. D-2.0103 and D-10.0202h refer to procedures preliminary to the filing of charges and the creation of parties in a disciplinary case.

While recent amendments have had the purpose of broadening the judicial process to take into consideration the rights and perspectives of persons alleged to have been harmed, nevertheless, in disciplinary cases, these rights and perspectives, while important, do not override the rights and responsibilities of the whole church to exercise discipline of offenders. The use of “parties” in the Rules of Discipline is specifically and intentionally limited to those persons representing the governing body (i.e., the investigating committee or prosecuting committee), and the accused. Presbyteries should exercise pastoral care towards all persons involved in disciplinary cases (persons alleged to have been harmed, the accused, and others as needed). And, while the interests of accuser(s) and/or person(s) alleged to have been harmed should be considered in the process of developing an alternative form of resolution (AFR), the only persons with the authority to agree to such a petition are the investigating committee on behalf of the larger church, and the accused. Therefore, no veto power over an AFR is accorded to an accuser.

With respect to question two, the ACC reminds the assembly of the advice it issued to the 212th General Assembly (2000) in response to Overture 00-23 that “Removal of professional training and certification requirements increases the risk of misunderstandings.” This is true even in cases of self-accusation. As D-2.0103 makes no distinction between disciplinary cases initiated by self-accusation or the accusation of others, we believe the requirements for professional training and certification still apply if mediation or arbitration is pursued.

With respect to question three, while D-10.0202h(3) makes reference to “the substance of the accusation or charge,” the ACC reaffirms the authoritative interpretation issued in response to Item 04-06 (Minutes, 2004, Part I, p. 299) requiring that charges be filed along with the petition for an AFR. An AFR is an alternative to trial, not an alternative to filing charges. An AFR is not intended as a means of avoiding determinations of guilt, but as an aid to the efficient and compassionate dispensation of justice to achieve the purposes of discipline.

Similarly, with respect to question four, the purpose of an AFR is not whether or not to file charges, or which charges will be filed, but to seek to come to an agreement before charges are filed as to the appropriate degree of censure on the charges to be filed.

Item 04-15 from the Presbytery of National Capital presents numerous questions for constitutional interpretation concerning the implementation of alternative forms of resolution (AFR):

1. What is the meaning of “all parties” in D-2.0103 and D-10.0202h?
2. Where a person has come forward in self-accusation and the investigating committee proposes an AFR, is the requirement in D-2.0103 for a “professionally trained and certified” mediator still in effect?
3. What is the relationship between D-10.0301 and D-10.0303?
4. What is the meaning of D-10.0202h?
5. Do the Rules of Discipline give the accuser in a disciplinary proceeding veto power over an AFR?

Item 04-16

[The assembly approved Item 04-16. See p. 49.]

Interpretation of the Rules of Discipline: Status of Negotiated Settlements—From the Stated Clerk, Synod of the Trinity.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that the 218th General Assembly (2008) answer Item 04-16 with the advice set forth below.

1. The first question presents an issue upon which authoritative interpretation of the constitution by the 218th General Assembly (2008) is appropriate. Accordingly, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that the 218th General Assembly (2008) approve the following authoritative interpretation of D-6.0310 and D-8.0104:

“Prior to or during trial, the parties may enter into a private resolution of a remedial case and advise the permanent judicial commission before which it is pending that the complaint is being withdrawn. The notice of withdrawal may, but need not, notify the permanent judicial commission of the terms of the settlement agreement between the parties. Such a withdrawal of the complaint terminates the remedial case without decision of the permanent judicial commission. No action or meeting of a permanent judicial commission is necessary or appropriate to receive such a withdrawal of the complaint.

“If a matter is pending on appeal, it may be withdrawn only pursuant to D-8.0104 by permission of the permanent judicial commission before which it is pending. The only determination made in such a decision is whether withdrawal of the appeal ‘would defeat the ends of justice.’ A permanent judicial commission must meet to determine whether withdrawal of the appeal would defeat the ends of justice. A decision granting or denying a request to withdraw an appeal has precedential value only as to the issue of what standard governs the determination of whether withdrawal of future appeals would defeat the ends of justice.

“This authoritative interpretation recognizes that remedial cases have a different status prior to a decision at trial and after trial during appeal. Nothing in the Rules of Discipline requires permission of a permanent judicial commission for a complaint to be withdrawn prior to (or during) trial. Notice from the complainant withdrawing the complaint, whether because of a settlement or because of a lack of interest in continuing, should therefore be sufficient to terminate a remedial case prior to a decision of the permanent judicial commission being rendered. Thus, there is no warrant for permanent judicial commissions ‘deciding’ to approve the settlement of a case before or during trial.

“On the other hand, on appeal, D-8.0104 requires a determination as to whether the appeal can be withdrawn either by settlement or because the appellant is unwilling to continue. In such circumstance, the permanent judicial commission is required to make a decision, with the only issue before it being whether the withdrawal of the appeal ‘would defeat the ends of justice.’ Such a decision can only have precedential value as to the question presented, i.e., whether withdrawal of the appeal would defeat the ends of justice. The decision has no precedential value as to the underlying issue presented on appeal.”

2. The second question does not present an issue upon which authoritative interpretation of the Constitution by the 218th General Assembly (2008) is necessary. In Hope, et al. v. Presbytery of San Francisco, Minutes, 2006, Part 1, p. 455 (Remedial Case 217-1), the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission held that a permanent judicial commission must meet in person to render a decision. Receipt of a notice withdrawing a complaint does not require a meeting of the permanent judicial commission if received in writing by all complainants. Determination of whether withdrawal of an appeal would defeat the ends of justice does require a decision of the permanent judicial commission.

3. The third question does not present an issue upon which authoritative interpretation of the Constitution by the 218th General Assembly (2008) is necessary. A settlement agreement is a private contract between the parties, regardless of whether reported in a notice of withdrawal of a complaint before or during trial or if mentioned in a decision allowing the withdrawal of an appeal.

4. The fourth question presents an issue upon which authoritative interpretation of the Constitution by the 218th General Assembly (2008) is necessary. The authoritative interpretation recommended above addresses this question.

5. The fifth question does not present an issue upon which authoritative interpretation of the Constitution by the 218th General Assembly (2008) is necessary. Either a withdrawal of a complaint or a decision approving withdrawal of appeal terminate a case such that no further appeal is possible.

6. The sixth question does not present an issue upon which authoritative interpretation of the Constitution by the 218th General Assembly (2008) is necessary. The means of enforcing a settlement agreement depend upon the nature of the agreement the parties have entered into.

Questions Received

Item 04-16 from the stated clerk of the Synod of the Trinity presents the following questions upon which she seeks constitutional interpretation:

1. If the parties to a remedial case agree to explore settlement possibilities and end up with a settlement agreement, is there a particular process the PJC must follow to approve, disapprove, or accept the agreement?
2. Must it occur in person or may this occur by teleconference?
3. If the Settlement Agreement is accepted, what is the affect of the Settlement Agreement? (on the parties, on precedent, on authoritative interpretation?)
4. Does an approved Settlement Agreement become a decision of the PJC?
5. If so, is this an appealable decision?
6. Who has the power to enforce a Settlement Agreement?

Item 04-17

[The assembly approved Item 04-17 with comment. See p. 49.]

Possible Conflict Between G-14.0730b and G-11.0407—From the Associate for Certification and Christian Vocation.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that the 218th General Assembly (2008) interpret the provisions of G-14.0730 as follows:

1. “The provisions of G-14.0730b regarding the responsibility of the presbytery to establish minimum requirements for compensation and benefits for Certified Christian Educators, to provide access to the committee on ministry on the part of Certified Christian Educators, and to grant privilege of the floor with voice only to Certified Christian Educators shall apply to Certified Associate Christian Educators who have met the standards established by the Educator Certification Council (G-14.0722) and described in the handbook on the certification process for Christian Educators (G-14.0720).”

2. Direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative vote:

Amend G-14.0730c as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“c. grant the privilege of the floor to the ~~e~~Certified Christian ~~e~~Educator at all its meetings with voice only, and, in the case of ~~e~~Certified Christian ~~e~~Educators who are ordained as elders, voice and vote under the provisions of G-11.0101b. (G-11.0407)”

Comment: That the inclusion of Associate Christian Educators be examined by the appropriate General Assembly committee or entity.

Question Presented

Item 04-17 from Martha Miller, associate for Certification and Christian Vocation presents the following questions upon which it seeks constitutional interpretation:

In view of the removal of reference to Certified Associate Christian Educators from G-14.0730, and in view of the continuing requirements of G-11.0103n and G-11.0407 that preserve reference to Certified Associate Christian Educators, shall the provisions of G-14.0730 b and c concerning Certified Christian Educators be interpreted to apply to Certified Associate Christian Educators also?

Rationale

For Recommendation 1:

In its revision of Chapter XIV of the Book of Order, the General Assembly omitted reference to the Certified Associate Christian Educator in G-14.0720–.0731. However, the assembly did not act to strike references to Associate Christian Educator in G-11.0103n (minimum compensation standards), G-11.0407 (rolls of persons entitled to the privilege of the floor), and G-11.0503 (communication with the Committee on Ministry). The Advisory Committee on the Constitution concludes that it was not the intent of the assembly to eliminate the status of Certified Associate Christian Educators, but rather to leave to the Educator Certification Council the designations, standards, and examination procedures for Christian Educators (G-14.0722).

Since there was not an evident positive intent to eliminate the title of Certified Associate Christian Educator, the more general provisions of G-14.0730 may be interpreted to mean that the presbytery has a responsibility to provide support for all persons who are “certified Christian educators” (emphasis added). The committee notes that the lower-case initial “c” and “e” may be seen as an indication that the term “certified Christian educator” in this context is a general reference to persons who have met the standards for certification in G-14.0720 – 14.0721 and as defined by the Educator Certification Council (G-14.0722), rather than as part of a specific title, i.e., “Certified Christian Educator” as opposed to “Certified Associate Christian Educator.” Thus the language of G-14.0730 does not require the limitation of the provisions of the section to Certified Christian Educators. Under this interpretation, the existing requirements of G-11.0103n and G-11.0407 are controlling.

Unlike the provisions of G-11.0103n and G-11.0407, the access to the committee on ministry guaranteed to Certified Christian Educators in G-11.0503 does not explicitly include Certified Associate Christian Educators. However, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution believes there is practicality and wisdom in creating opportunity for the committee on ministry to be open to communication from Certified Associate Christian Educators, as it may assist the committee on ministry in exercising its responsibility to “serve as an instrument of presbytery for promoting the peace and harmony of the churches, especially in regard to matters arising out of the relations between ministers and churches” and “to mediate differences and reconcile persons” (G-11.0502i). In handling all such communications, including but not limited to those coming from Certified Associate Christian Educators, the committee on ministry is still bound by the requirement of G-11.0502j to “exercise wise discretion in determining when to take cognizance of information concerning difficulties within a church....”

For Recommendation 2:

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution notes that the language of G-14.0730, as interpreted above, would create a new privilege of the floor with voice and, under certain conditions, vote to Certified Associate Christian Educators. In the previous version of G-14.0705c (prior to the revisions to G-14.0000 approved in 2007), the ability of the presbytery to grant the privilege of the floor with voice was limited to Certified Christian Educators, and there was no provision for the privilege of vote whatsoever. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution concludes that opening these privileges to Certified Associate Christian Educators was the intent of the 217th General Assembly (2006) in wording the present provisions of G-14.0230c. However, if the 218th General Assembly (2008) wishes to limit the privilege of the floor with voice and, under limited circumstances, vote to Certified Christian Educators only, it may accomplish that purpose by amending G-14.0730c to capitalize the words “certified” and “educator/s,” so that the section reads as above in Recommendation 2.

*Item 04-18

[In response to Item 04-18, the assembly approved an alternate resolution. See pp. 48, 50.]

Newly Amended G-13.0107—From the Assistant Stated Clerk, Manager for GA Nominations and Moderatorial Staff Services

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that the 218th General Assembly (2008) approve the following interpretation, recommendation, and comments:

1. With respect to the first question presented, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that interpretation of G-13.0107 is advisable and recommends that the 218th General Assembly (2008) approve the following authoritative interpretation of G-13.0107:

“Section G-13.0107 requires that the General Assembly elect an individual from each synod to each permanent committee of the General Assembly. A permanent committee of the General Assembly for the purposes of this section is a committee whose size or the means of nominating individuals for membership is not otherwise defined by the Book of Order. Accordingly, the General Assembly Nominating Committee and the Advisory Committee on the Constitution are not permanent committees within the meaning of G-13.0107. Section G-13.0107 requires coordination between the synods and the General Assembly Nominating Committee. Synods have responsibility for nominating individuals from within their synod to fill these positions on permanent committees. The General Assembly Nominating Committee, however, has the responsibility to coordinate this process, which includes the responsibility to assure that the diversity requirements of G-4.0403 and G-9.0104 are met. The General Assembly Nominating Committee may accomplish these responsibilities either by creating a rotational system among the synods for meeting these diversity requirements or by advising a synod that a nominee put forward does not have the characteristics required to assure such diversity. The General Assembly Nominating Committee may make recommendations to the General Assembly as to the appropriate size of permanent committees to assure the representation of all synods, and the election of at-large members, as appropriate.”

2. If the 218th General Assembly (2008) wishes to effect a change in G-13.0107 to facilitate a different model for nominating committee membership, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that this problem can be addressed by directing the Stated Clerk to submit the following amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative vote:

Shall G-13.0107 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

~~“Each synod will have a representative, nominated by the synods, on each permanent committee of the General Assembly. The General Assembly shall determine which of its permanent committees shall have permanent representation from each of the synods or have rotating representation from among the synods. Such representatives of the synod shall be nominated by those synods. The General Assembly Nominating Committee will coordinate this process, keeping in mind the need for synod representatives and members-at-large, and seeing that special attention is given to the principles of participation and representation expressed in G-4.0403, G-9.0104, G-13.0111, and G-13.0202.”~~

Alternate Resolution Approved

In response to Item 04-18, the 218th General Assembly (2008) approved the following resolution:

While the Advisory Committee on the Constitution has offered some relief to these concerns by proposing new language that would allow the General Assembly to determine which of its permanent committees shall have permanent representation from each of the synods or have rotating representation from among the synods, the General Assembly Nominating Committee believes that the former advice of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution provided to the 217th General Assembly (2006) is a more effective response. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution formerly advised the 217th General Assembly (2006) that

4. Proposed amendments to G-13.0107: The proposed revision of this section should be assessed to determine whether all permanent committees of the General Assembly require representation from each synod. The term “permanent committees” is not specifically defined by the provision, but presumably would include all committees whose membership is not otherwise defined by Book of Order. The assembly should consider whether the size of permanent committees should be defined by the mission of the committee rather than a formalistic approach. (Section G-9.0402a: “Mission determines the form of structure and administration. All structures should enable the church to give effective witness to the Lordship of Christ in the contemporary world.”) [Underline added for emphasis.]

If the 217th General Assembly (2006) agrees with the restructuring of membership being proposed and wishes to address these concerns, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution suggests the following alternative resolution be presented to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative vote:

- a. Shall G-13.0107 be stricken.
- b. Shall G-13.0108 be amended as follows: [Text to be added is shown as italic.]

“The General Assembly shall establish a permanent Committee on Representation as required by G-9.0105, which shall advise the General Assembly Nominating Committee of any need for nominations in particular categories needing increased representation. The Committee on Representation shall report to each meeting of the General Assembly (other than special or adjourned meetings) regarding progress toward fair representation of the categories of persons listed in G-4.0403. The committee shall consist of members equal in number to the synods of the church, each member resident in a different synod, and members distributed so that there are one third ministers (both women and men), one third laymen, and one third laywomen.”

- c. Add to the proposed revision to G-13.0202 as proposed by this Item the following text:

“The membership, terms of office, and officers of the General Assembly Council shall be approved by the General Assembly as provided for in the manual of operations of the General Assembly Council. The Council shall include members from each of the synods of the church.” (Minutes, 2006, Part I, p. 644)

The General Assembly Nominating Committee supports the 2006 advice of the ACC and suggests that the 218th General Assembly (2008) consider approving it.

Therefore, the 218th General Assembly (2008) directs the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendments to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

1. Shall G-13.0107 be stricken.
2. Shall G-13.0108 be amended as follows: [Text to be added is shown as italic.]

“The General Assembly shall establish a permanent Committee on Representation as required by G-9.0105, which shall advise the General Assembly Nominating Committee of any need for nominations in particular categories needing increased representation. The Committee on Representation shall report to each meeting of the General Assembly (other than special or adjourned meetings) regarding progress toward fair representation of the categories of persons listed in G-4.0403. The committee shall consist of members equal in number to the synods of the church, each member resident in a different synod, and members distributed so that there are one third ministers (both women and men), one third laymen, and one third laywomen.”

3. Shall G-13.0202a be amended as follows:

“The membership, terms of office, and officers of the General Assembly Council shall be approved by the General Assembly as provided for in the Manual of Operations of the General Assembly Council. The Council shall include members from each of the synods of the church.”

Rationale

As noted by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution’s advice to the 217th General Assembly (2006), the revision of G-13.0107 proposed by the General Assembly Council, approved by the 217th General Assembly and adopted by the presbyteries, requires each permanent committee of the General Assembly to have a member nominated by each synod. “Permanent committee” is not defined in this provision of the Book of Order, but logically would include all committees of the General Assembly whose work is continuing in nature and whose size or means of election is not otherwise defined inconsistently by specific provisions of the Book of Order. The size of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution and means of electing the General Assembly Nominating Committee are set forth by separate provisions of the Book of Order, which control G-13.0107.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recognizes that the language of G-13.0107 would substantially expand the size of a number of permanent committees of the General Assembly. Indeed, the ACC advised the 217th General Assembly (2006) on this point, encouraging the assembly to “consider whether the size of permanent committees should be defined by the mission of the committee rather than a formalistic approach” (Minutes, 2006, Part I, p. 644).

3. Moreover, the General Assembly Nominating Committee continues to have responsibility for assuring that the diversity requirements of the Book of Order are met. Because G-13.0107 does not specify how the General Assembly Nominating Committee is to carry out this responsibility, it retains significant discretion in determining how best to accomplish that goal. Likewise, because G-13.0107 places responsibility on the General Assembly Nominating Committee for coordinating the balance of synod representatives and at-large members on permanent committees, it is therefore appropriate for it to recommend the appropriate balance to the General Assembly as it elects committees.

4. With respect to the fourth question presented and its subparts, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that interpretation of G-13.0107 is advisable and suggests that the response to the first question addresses the issues raised. As noted, “permanent committee” is not defined in this provision or elsewhere in the Book of Order, but logically would include all committees of the General Assembly whose work is continuing in nature and whose size or means of election is not defined inconsistently by specific provisions of the Book of Order. The size of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution and means of electing the General Assembly Nominating Committee are set forth by separate provisions of the Book of Order, which control over G-13.0107.

This recommendation has no effect on the proposed Form of Government, since the proposed Form of Government mandates only one committee at the General Assembly level, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, whose membership is defined by constitutional provision (see proposed G-6.02).

Questions Received

Item 04-18 from the Assistant Stated Clerk, manager for General Assembly Nominations and Moderatorial Staff Services, presents the following questions upon which she seeks constitutional interpretation:

1. The General Assembly Nominating Committee (GANC) commented to the 217th General Assembly (2006) that the phrase “Each synod will have a representative, nominated by the synod...” can be interpreted to mean that synods directly nominate persons to serve on each permanent committee. Does the new wording of G-13.0107 imply this?
2. The GANC in its comment further noted that, “If synods directly nominate one person rather than providing several names to the General Assembly Nominating Committee, the pool of potential nominees is reduced limiting the possibility of ensuring the desired diversity of committee membership as required in G-4.0403.” What are the implications of G-13.0107 to G-4.0403 and G-9.0104?
3. What is required of the GANC when it is to coordinate the process of ensuring that each synod nominate a representative on each committee of the General Assembly “while keeping in mind the need for synod representatives and members-at-large” [emphasis added in question]?
4. What is a permanent committee? Who are they?
  - a. Is the General Assembly Committee on Representation a permanent committee? If yes, are there implications of G-13.0107 to G-9.0105a?
  - b. Is the General Assembly Nominating Committee a permanent committee? If yes, are there implications of G-13.0107 to G-13.0111?
  - c. Is the Advisory Committee on the Constitution a permanent committee? If yes, are there implications of G-13.0107 to G-13.0112a?
  - d. Is the General Assembly Council a permanent committee? If yes, are there implications of G-13.0107 to G-13.0202?

GAC COMMENT ON ITEM 04-18

Comment on Item 04-18—From the General Assembly Council.

The General Assembly Council proposes that to answer the concerns raised by the General Assembly Nominating Committee and the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, that the text for Recommendation 2 be deleted and that new clarifying language to G-13.0107 “Synod Participation” be inserted as new Recommendation 2., to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“[2. The 218th General Assembly (2008) directs the Stated Clerk to submit the following amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative vote:

“[Shall G-13.0107 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“[‘Each synod will have a representative, nominated by the synods, on each permanent committee of the General Assembly except instances in which the Book of Order, Organization for Mission, or Standing Rules of the General Assembly addresses a committee’s membership requirements and does not expressly require representation from each synod. The General Assembly Nominating Committee will coordinate this process, keeping in mind the need for synod representatives and members-at-large, and seeing that special attention is given to the principles of participation and representation expressed in G-4.0403, G-9.0104, G-13.0111, and G-13.0202.’]”

This suggested revision would ensure that membership on permanent committees of the General Assembly that have specific Book of Order, Organization for Mission, or General Assembly Standing Rules membership provisions will continue to conform with Book of Order, Organization for Mission, or Standing Rules of the General Assembly criteria delineating membership size and composition.

Another alternative that the 218th General Assembly (2008) can approve to address these concerns is to follow the recommendation of the General Assembly Nominating Committee in its Comment on Request 08-8.

The amendment to G-13.0107 of the Book of Order offered by the General Assembly Council to the 217th General Assembly (2006) was intended to only affect membership on the General Assembly Council. The Governance Task Force of the General Assembly Council recommended, and the General Assembly Council adopted, subject to the approval of the General Assembly and approved by affirmative votes of a majority of all presbyteries, a restructuring and downsizing plan of the General Assembly Council membership size and composition.

However, approval of the 2006 amended language by the General Assembly and the presbyteries has called into question whether the permanent committees of the General Assembly are now required to have representation from and be populated directly by each of the synods. One concern of the General Assembly Council is the lack of a defined term or specific description in the Book of Order for permanent committee of the General Assembly. Additional concerns arise from the resultant application of such an interpretation requiring synod representation as offered by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC) and the General Assembly Nominating Committee: this would be extremely expensive to the denomination, would place an undue burden on the nominating process for synods to adhere to such a requirement, would greatly expand the membership size, and may alter the composition of such committees, and could change the face of the governance of the church to the extent that the General Assembly nominating process would no longer be able to ensure the diversity of committee membership.

GANC COMMENT ON ITEM 04-18

Comment on Item 04-18—From the General Assembly Nominating Committee.

Upon recommendation by the 217th General Assembly (2006), G-13.0107 of the Book of Order has been amended so that it now requires the General Assembly to elect an individual from each synod to each permanent committee of the General Assembly. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution's (ACC) proposed authoritative interpretation defines "permanent committee" as a committee whose size or the means of nominating individuals for membership is not otherwise defined by the Book of Order. The proposed authoritative interpretation also sets forth the implications of that interpretation for the General Assembly nominations process.

The GANC continues to be concerned about the impact on its mandate to "ensure careful nominations" (G-13.0111) as well as the potential burden on the synods if they are required to provide an increased number of nominations to permanent committees.

As it coordinates the nominations process for those committees with middle governing body representational slots, the GANC solicits no less than three names from each affected synod. These names are determined through the synod's own nominations process. This process provides the GANC with a pool of names from which it makes selections that ensure that constitutional mandates for clergy/lay balance, gender balance, as well as racial ethnic representation can be met.

Synods already are required to make proposals for five committees. The Book of Order requires that a member from each of the sixteen synods serve on the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission and the General Assembly Nominating Committee. In addition, because of membership requirements, a member from each of the sixteen synods serves on the General Assembly Committee on Representation, while persons from six synods serve on the GAC's Mission Development Resources Committee, and there is one synod position on the Presbyterian Investment and Loan Program, Inc.

Given the ACC's interpretation, the following committees would be required to have representation from each of the sixteen synods nominated by those synods:

Committee	Current At-Large Members	Current Synod Position	Current Other Designated Positions	Additional Members Required During Transition
Advisory Committee on Litigation	6			12
Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy	9			9
Advocacy Committee on Racial Ethnic Concerns	6			11
Advocacy Committee on Women's Concerns	10			8
Board of Pensions	32			5
Committee on the Office of the General Assembly	14		1	7
Committee on Theological Education	11		12	6
General Assembly Committee on Ecumenical Relations	12		4	10

The GANC believes that an undue burden would be placed on synod nominating committees if they were required to propose persons to be considered for all of the entities mentioned above.

Implementing the interpretation is not a simple matter of converting current positions to synod positions. Some committees require particular non-synod categories of membership that must be maintained.

In addition, implementing the ACC interpretation of G-13.0107 will have a major impact on the budget. Due to the current composition of the affected committees, a larger than normal number of members will have to be added in order to meet the new mandate. The financial implication during the transition period in 2009 is $206,040 and $205,305 in 2010.

For many of the affected committees, the complete transition to synod representation could occur by the 220th General Assembly (2012) and for some by the 221st General Assembly (2014). Even so, this would represent an increase of eighty-three persons over the current membership for these entities.

While the Advisory Committee on the Constitution has offered some relief to these concerns by proposing new language that would allow the General Assembly to determine which of its permanent committees shall have permanent representation from each of the synods or have rotating representation from among the synods, the General Assembly Nominating Committee believes that the former advice of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution provided to the 217th General Assembly (2006) is a more effective response. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution formerly advised the 217th General Assembly (2006) that

4. Proposed amendments to G-13.0107: The proposed revision of this section should be assessed to determine whether all permanent committees of the General Assembly require representation from each synod. The term “permanent committees” is not specifically defined by the provision, but presumably would include all committees whose membership is not otherwise defined by Book of Order. The assembly should consider whether the size of permanent committees should be defined by the mission of the committee rather than a formalistic approach. (Section G-9.0402a: “Mission determines the form of structure and administration. All structures should enable the church to give effective witness to the Lordship of Christ in the contemporary world.”) [Underline added for emphasis.]

If the 217th General Assembly (2006) agrees with the restructuring of membership being proposed and wishes to address these concerns, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution suggests the following alternative resolution be presented to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative vote:

- a. Shall G-13.0107 be stricken.
- b. Shall G-13.0108 be amended as follows: [Text to be added is shown as italic.]

“The General Assembly shall establish a permanent Committee on Representation as required by G-9.0105, which shall advise the General Assembly Nominating Committee of any need for nominations in particular categories needing increased representation. The Committee on Representation shall report to each meeting of the General Assembly (other than special or adjourned meetings) regarding progress toward fair representation of the categories of persons listed in G-4.0403. The committee shall consist of members equal in number to the synods of the church, each member resident in a different synod, and members distributed so that there are one third ministers (both women and men), one third laymen, and one third laywomen.”

- c. Add to the proposed revision to G-13.0202 as proposed by this Item the following text:

“The membership, terms of office, and officers of the General Assembly Council shall be approved by the General Assembly as provided for in the manual of operations of the General Assembly Council. The Council shall include members from each of the synods of the church.” (Minutes, 2006, Part I, p.644)

The General Assembly Nominating Committee supports the 2006 advice of the ACC and suggests that the 218th General Assembly (2008) consider approving it.

COGA COMMENT ON ITEM 04-18

Comment on Item 04-18—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly concurs with the General Assembly Nominating Committee on Item 04-18.

*Item 04-19

[The assembly approved Item 04-19. See pp. 48, 51.]

On Moderating Services of Ordination and Installation—Manager for Polity Guidance and Training.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that the 218th General Assembly (2008) answer Item 04-19 with the following response.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that the Book of Order provides ample guidance on this question. Ordination and installation are acts of governing bodies: for elders and deacons, the session; and for ministers of the Word and Sacrament, the presbytery. The person who asks the constitutional questions at ordination and/or installation is acting as the moderator of the governing body or its administrative commission. For the ordination/ installation of elders and/or deacons, that person does not have to be the appointed moderator of session, but may be another person duly invited or elected to preside as provided in the Form of Government. Section G-10.0103 provides several expedients for naming a moderator in the event that the moderator of session cannot be present for a session meeting:

“G-10.0103a. ... When it may appear advisable for prudential reasons that some minister other than the pastor should preside, the pastor may, with the concurrence of the session, invite a minister of the same presbytery to do so. ... In addition, the moderator of the session of a church with a vacant pulpit may request an elder who is a member of the presbytery’s committee on ministry, the stated clerk, executive presbyter, or associate executive presbyter, to preside; such elder may not moderate the session of the church of which that elder is a member.”

“G-10.0103b. When Without a Pastor

“When a church is without a pastor, the moderator of the session shall be the minister appointed for that purpose by the presbytery, or a minister of the same presbytery invited by the session to preside on a particular occasion. When it is impossible for such a minister to attend, the session may elect one of its own members to preside.”

In the event that the appointed moderator of session cannot be present at the ordination and/or installation of elders and/or deacons in a particular church, the moderator may invite another minister of the same presbytery to preside, or an elder who is a member of the presbytery’s committee on ministry, the stated clerk, executive presbyter, or associate executive presbyter, to preside as long as such elder may not moderate the session of the church of which that elder is a member. Or, should a minister be unavailable, or the invited minister be unable to attend, with the permission of the appointed moderator, the session may elect one of its own members to preside.

Question Received

Item 04-19 from the manager for Polity Guidance and Training presents the following question upon which it seeks constitutional interpretation:

“When a particular church is without regular pastoral leadership and the presbytery has appointed a moderator who cannot be present at the time of the ordination/installation of officers, may the appointed moderator request that another minister preside at the ordination/installation of officers? Does this minister qualify as the ‘moderator’ for the purposes of W-4.4003?”

Does Presbytery Have Authority to Change Quorum for Congregational Meeting?—From the Stated Clerk, Presbytery of Eastern Virginia.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that the 218th General Assembly (2008) to answer Item 04-20 with the following recommendation:

1. With respect to the first question presented, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that interpretation of G-7.0305 of the Book of Order is advisable.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends to the General Assembly that the right to establish a quorum for meetings of the congregation is assigned to the congregation itself by G-7.0305. It is not a power assigned to the session, or to any other governing body.

The pattern of fact behind this question indicates that the presbytery has established a policy that requires that congregational meetings called to consider the matter of withdrawal from the PC(USA) will have “at least 75 percent of the active members of the congregation” present for the meeting.

Withdrawal from the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is not a matter that can be considered at a congregational meeting. Section G-7.0304a lists five types of business that a congregation may consider at a congregational meeting:

“(1) matters related to the electing of elders, deacons, and trustees

“(2) matters related to the calling of a pastor or pastors;

“(3) matters related to the pastoral relationship, such as changing the call, or requesting or consenting or declining to consent to dissolution

“(4) matters related to buying, mortgaging, or selling real property (G-8.0500);

“(5) matters related to the permissive powers of a congregation, such as the desire to lodge all administrative responsibility in the session, or the request to presbytery for exemption from one or more requirements because of limited size.”

The presbytery, acting through an administrative commission it has appointed to settle differences within a church, is required to hold hearings that “afford to all persons to be affected by the decision fair notice and an opportunity to be heard on the matters at issue” (G-9.0503b2). Such hearings are for the advice of the presbytery, so that the commission may make informed decisions. No congregational business may be transacted at these hearings. The requirement of 75 percent of the active membership cannot be treated as the establishment of a quorum, since the hearing is not a congregational meeting. The absence of stated percentage attendance may, however, be regarded by the presbytery’s commission as contributory to its disposition of any request to withdraw made at the hearing.

2. With respect to the second question presented, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that interpretation of G-7.0306 of the Book of Order is advisable.

According to the provisions of G-7.0306, the circumstances under which a presbytery may appoint a moderator of a congregational meeting who is other than the pastor or moderator of session are limited to the following:

a. when the congregation is without a pastor;

b. when the presbytery appoints a lay pastor who is already commissioned to the congregation.

Thus, in congregations where there is an installed pastor, the presbytery would be acting outside its authority to require that someone other than the pastor or session moderator be accepted by the congregation as its moderator for the meeting. In response to Overture 00-39, the ACC advised the 212th General Assembly (2000) that empowering the presbytery to name a moderator without the invitation of the pastor of the church would be in conflict with the basic rights of ordination and installation of a pastor. It proposes to remove one of the rights that has been a cornerstone of Presbyterian polity; namely, that an installed pastor of a congregation, unless the right is removed by judicial process, is moderator of the session of that church (G-9.0202, G-10.0103a). Such a pastor is free to invite another pastor of the presbytery or even an elder to preside as moderator; but without an invitation this is not possible. (Minutes, 2000, Part I. p. 412)

In particularly tense or stressful congregational meetings, the presbytery may wish to suggest that the pastor or moderator to invite a minister named by the presbytery, in an effort to ensure that the congregational decision to be made is free of undue influence from the installed pastor, protecting both the process and the pastor. But an installed pastor is not bound to act on the suggestion.

In the fact pattern presented in the request for interpretation, the matter to be dealt with is the question of whether the congregation shall be permitted to vote to advise the presbytery of its desire to be dismissed. Since the meeting to consider such an action is not a congregational meeting but rather a hearing (see #1 above), the presbytery is free to name any moderator it wishes. Under most conditions, that person is likely to be the moderator of the administrative commission appointed by the presbytery, but it is conceivable that the presbytery or the commission may wish to name other leadership for the hearing.

Questions Presented

Item 04-20, a request from the stated clerk of the Presbytery of Eastern Virginia, presents the following questions upon which it seeks constitutional interpretation:

1. Does the presbytery have the authority to change the requirement for a quorum for a church congregational meeting to be in excess of the one tenth of the members requirement of G-7.0305 in the Book of Order; and
2. Does the presbytery have the authority to require that someone other than the installed pastor be the moderator of that meeting (G-7.0306)?

*Item 04-21

[The assembly approved Item 04-21. See pp. 48, 51.]

Member/Church Officer Renounces Jurisdiction—From the Stated Clerk, The Presbytery of Los Ranchos.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that the 218th General Assembly (2008) answer the request with the following action on Item 04-21:

This question asks about potential abuse of our process and the rules that are generally applicable to members. In a more general form this question may be restated as:

Should the rules that apply to all members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) be applied in the same manner to members who are thought to be abusing our process?

Stated in this way, the question should be answered in the affirmative with the following advice. Absent a judicial finding that an individual is a vexatious litigant, and a corresponding order of a permanent judicial commission to require judicial review of filings from that individual before any other judicial process is commenced (as in Hoover v. Presbytery of Charlotte, Remedial Cases 206-9, 206-11, and Case 206-10), all members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) enjoy the same access to our judicial process as provided in the Rules of Discipline.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends to the 218th General Assembly (2008) that renunciation of membership in a congregation or of church office is a serious action that carries significant implications. In the case of both officers and members, there are other, less disruptive ways by which a person may relinquish standing in the church. Elders or deacons may resign from office for good cause (G-6.0501) or may request release from the exercise of office (G-6.0600 a and b), both without implication of judgment or failure on the officer. Members may request transfer to another congregation (G-10.0302b1) or termination of membership (G-10.0302b3), again all without implication of judgment or failure. Renunciation of jurisdiction, on the other hand, carries with it a sense of fracture of relationship and injury to the body of Christ. In the case of an individual member, the decision to join another congregation without regular transfer and the decision to renounce jurisdiction are essentially equivalent in effect (G-10.0302b(4)). In the case of an officer, renunciation carries with it the requirement of the immediate termination of the exercise of office as well as removal from the membership roll (G-6.0701). In those cases where renunciation is presumed on the basis of the persistence of the officer in disapproved work, renunciation is related to disobedience and an unwillingness to be a friend among one's colleagues in ministry.

Regarding the questions presented in the request:

1a. A person who has renounced membership and/or church office in a PC(USA) congregation may, at some subsequent point, seek admission to membership in another PC(USA) congregation by reaffirmation of faith. Membership may not be denied “for any ... reason not related to profession of faith” (G-10.0102b). It is the session’s responsibility to receive such persons, and to determine if their reaffirmation of faith is consistent with the requirements for a profession of faith in W-4.2003a–c. In such determinations, sessions may wish to pay particular attention to whether the applicant declares “intent to participate actively and responsibly in the worship and mission of the church” (W-4.2003c, emphasis added), and whether the person will fulfill the obligations of church membership as defined in G-5.0102, especially G-5.0102f— “demonstrating a new quality of life within and through the church”—and G-5.0102h— “living responsibly in the personal, family, vocational, political, cultural, and social relationships of life.” In its examination, the session may also inquire about the faith journey of the person requesting membership, and the nature of relationships between that person and prior congregations from which he or she has renounced membership. The session may wish to emphasize that the act of professing faith is itself a form of renunciation: the person requesting membership “renounces evil” and affirms reliance on God’s grace.

1b. A person who has renounced jurisdiction and then subsequently been received into the membership of another PC(USA) congregation would, on the basis of the new membership, be able to initiate judicial process, provided that membership in the new church grants standing for the envisioned judicial process. Membership in a congregation gives the individual standing to file a remedial complaint only “against the session of that church” (D-6.0202b1) or a statement of disciplinary offence against another person “under the jurisdiction of a governing body of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)” (D-10.0102a). It should be noted that a written statement alleging a disciplinary offense does not itself initiate judicial process, although it does initiate procedure preliminary to a disciplinary case (D-10.0101). Judicial process in a disciplinary case is initiated by the filing of a charge by an investigating committee. (See D-10.0404.)

1c. A person who has previously renounced the jurisdiction of the PC(USA) and then been admitted to membership and elected an officer of another PC(USA) congregation is once again under the jurisdiction of a governing body of the church. However, it is not the election to office but the reaffirmation of faith and admission to membership that constitutes a reversal of renunciation. Once elected to office, an elder or deacon may then file remedial complaints against the session of the new congregation, and he or she may also file a statement of disciplinary offense against another person under PC(USA) governing body jurisdiction. In addition, if the elder is serving as a member of the session of the new congregation, he or she may file a statement of offense on the basis of information received from any source that a potential offense should be investigated for purposes of discipline (D-10.0102b).

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution notes that the 217th General Assembly (2006) rejected an overture to amend the text of D-10.0102 to restrict access to disciplinary process. In so doing, it asked the Office of the General Assembly to “undertake a study of the inappropriate use of judicial process and report findings and recommendation to the 218th General Assembly (2008)” (Minutes, 2006, Part I, p. 38). The report of the OGA concludes concerning the use of judicial process that

... the Rules of Discipline cannot be used to mediate intrinsic differences of theology, polity, power, or trust. These broader issues of conflict should be addressed by individuals within the church and by administrative processes within the church such as mediation, administrative review committees, or administrative commissions. Judicial process is to be used when an individual church member after trying to bring about an adjustment or settlement of the quarrel, complaint, delinquency, or irregularity asserted has determined after prayerful deliberation that the due process provided by the Rules of Discipline is necessary to preserve the purity and purposes of the church, either to limit the behavior of individuals within the church or to correct the unconstitutional use of power by governing bodies. (Referral 05-20 from the Office of the General Assembly, 218th General Assembly (2008))

2.a and b. The hypothetical situation proposed in this section presumes that the renunciation takes place as disciplinary charges are either active or pending against the renouncing member/officer. It further presumes that the renouncing member/officer is then admitted to the membership of another PC(USA) congregation, although it does not specify the time frame within which these two events occur.

Section D-3.0106 is clear that “jurisdiction in judicial process ends when a church officer or a member renounces jurisdiction of the church.” There is no provision in either the Form of Government or the Rules of Discipline that would prevent a member from initiating judicial process simply because the member was once the subject of charges. In addition, neither makes provision for the resumption of proceedings against a member or officer who renounces jurisdiction to avoid prosecution and then is admitted to membership in another PC(USA) congregation. However, a person who is accused of sexual abuse as defined in D-10.0401c and who renounces jurisdiction to avoid prosecution on those charges, becomes liable to those charges again when he or she comes under the jurisdiction of another governing body of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) (D-10.0102a) by being received into congregational membership. To the extent that it is aware of prior renunciations of jurisdiction, a governing body has both the right and the obligation to inquire into the circumstances of any such renunciation in its examination of an officer.

As the stated clerk of the Presbytery of Los Ranchos notes, the core issue here is whether an individual member or officer may renounce the jurisdiction of one session to avoid prosecution for a disciplinary offense, and then join another congregation and seek to use the same judicial process whose authority he or she has recently evaded. The current state of the constitution would appear to make this strategy possible. The filing of excessive remedial complaints or written statements of offenses, however, could subject the church officer to disciplinary allegations for violation of their ordination vows to “be a friend among your colleagues in ministry” (W-4.4003e), to “work for the reconciliation of the world” (W-4.4003f), and to “further the peace, unity, and purity of the church” (W-4.4003g). The Advisory Committee on the Constitution notes that the same 2006 referral to the Office of the General Assembly mentioned above concerning inappropriate use of the judicial system also urged individuals and governing bodies to become familiar with D-10.0102 and, as appropriate, to exercise their right to submit an accusation alleging (1) that a member of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has violated the commandment against bearing false witness, and/or (2) the member, if an officer of the church, has broken his/her ordination vows (see G-14.0405b(4)–(9) and G-14.0207d–j) [now W-4.4002a-i] by filing accusations in bad faith. (Minutes, 2006, Part I, p. 38)

At the same time, caution must be exercised against the assumption that multiple use of the judicial process by the same person constitutes “filing accusations in bad faith.” It is the merit of the individual complaint or allegation, and not the history of the complainant, that must determine its legitimacy.

Questions Received

Item 04-21 from the stated clerk of the Presbytery of Los Ranchos presents the following question upon which it seeks constitutional interpretation:

May an individual who is a member/officer of a local congregation renounce jurisdiction to avoid prosecution, move to another congregation, and proceed to use the system of judicial process which they have renounced?

The question is posed in two scenarios as follows:

1. Regarding a member or church officer against whom no disciplinary charges are filed or pending, and who renounces the jurisdiction of the church and is removed from the membership rolls of the local congregation:

a. May they join another PC (U.S.A.) congregation? If the other congregation finds out the person has renounced jurisdiction, may they choose not to receive them as a member?

b. May the individual who renounced now initiate judicial process based on their standing as a member of the new church—even though they have renounced jurisdiction? (e.g. can you “unrenounce” renunciation?)

c. If the individual is elected an officer of the new church and takes the vows of office, would this “unrenounce” and once again bring them under the jurisdiction of the PC (U.S.A.)? Could they then initiate judicial process?

2. Regarding a member or church officer against whom charges have been filed or are pending, and who renounces the jurisdiction of the church and is removed from the membership rolls of the local congregation:

a. May they join another congregation, and having joined, proceed to initiate judicial process based on their standing as a member of a new church?

b. If charges are filed in the original congregation, can the original session proceed to trial against the member or officer, even though he/or she is no longer a member of the original congregation?

*Item 04-22

Regarding Authoritative Interpretation or Amendment to D-10.0202h(3)—From the Stated Clerk, Presbytery of Cincinnati.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that the 218th General Assembly (2008) to answer Item 04-22 with the following recommendation:

The clear requirement of D-10.0202h(3) is that the decision of the session or permanent judicial commission (PJC) be transmitted to the session clerk or stated clerk, who is then to “record minutes of the proceedings, which shall include any actions or orders of the session or permanent judicial commission relating to the case with the vote thereon” (D-11.0601c). Since the proceedings of the session or permanent judicial commission must include “the name of the accused, the substance of the accusation or charge, and censure” (D-10.0202h3), it is therefore the case that the name of the accused and substance of the accusation must be spread across the records of the presbytery.

In 2004, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advised the assembly in response to Item 04-06 that

2. When an investigating committee begins alternative forms of resolution under D-10.0202g the investigating committee must file charges at least concurrently with an agreement being filed with the permanent judicial commission in order to seek the permanent judicial commission’s approval of the agreement. Absent such charges, the permanent judicial commission has no basis to evaluate the proposed agreement. Moreover, if the agreement is not approved, the investigation should be prepared to move forward to prosecute such charges.

3. An agreement approved by the permanent judicial commission under D-10.0202g(2) is a decision of the permanent judicial commission. (Minutes, 2004, Part I, p. 299)

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution notes that the rationale for the approval of the current wording of D-10.0202h(3) included the following comment:

The intent of this amendment is to ensure that the church's commitment to truthfulness as expressed in the disclosure provisions of a disciplinary trial (D-11.0701) are also expressed in disciplinary proceedings that utilize alternative forms of resolution to reach settlement agreements (D-10.0202g). Since the introduction of the provisions for alternative forms of resolution into the Book of Order, there is an increasing utilization of nondisclosure clauses in settlement agreements. In some instances, such nondisclosure agreements have resulted in the sealing of records. This practice is contrary to the provisions of D-11.0000 that result in the disclosure of the results of disciplinary case proceedings (Minutes, 2004, Part I, p. 85, 314).

Question Received

Item 04-22 from the stated clerk of the Presbytery of Cincinnati presents the following question upon which it seeks constitutional interpretation:

Under the provisions of D-10.0202h(3), when agreement on an alternate form of resolution is reached between an investigating committee and an accused person, is the stated clerk required to enter into the records of the presbytery the name of the accused and substance of the accusation?

*Item 04-23

Clarification Regarding Certification of Christian Educators—From the Stated Clerk, Presbytery of Santa Fe.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that the 218th General Assembly (2008) answer Item 04-23 with the following recommendations:

1. That the 218th General Assembly (2008) direct the Stated Clerk to send the following amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Shall G-11.0407 be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“G-11.0407 Rolls

“The stated clerk shall maintain four rolls, one listing the names of all of the ministers of the Word and Sacrament who are continuing members of the presbytery and who are active members, one listing the names of all of the ministers of the Word and Sacrament who are continuing members of the presbytery and who are members-at-large, one listing the names of all of the ministers of the Word and Sacrament who are continuing members of the presbytery and who are inactive members, one listing all Certified Christian Educators and Certified Associate Christian Educators within the bounds of the presbytery who are entitled to the privilege of the floor with voice at all presbytery meetings during the term of service in an educational ministry under the jurisdiction of the presbytery, and a fifth roll listing those who have been deleted from the other rolls. [Paragraph continues unchanged.]”

[The proposed Revised Form of Government provides each presbytery the flexibility to determine which rolls it will maintain.]

2. That the 218th General Assembly (2008) direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Amend G-14.0730 as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“G-14.0730 Presbytery and Certified Christian Educators

“The presbytery shall

“a. support the certification process by encouraging educators to seek certification, providing guidance through the Educator Certification Advisor, and encouraging sessions to make continuing education funds and time available to educators seeking certification; and

“b. provide the following support to the certified Christian educators: service of recognition that shall include the constitutional questions at W-4.4003 (G-11.0103n); establish minimum requirements for compensation and benefits (G-11.0103n); and access to the committee on ministry (G-11.0503); and.

“e. The presbytery may grant the privilege of the floor to the certified Christian educator at all its meetings with voice only, and, in the case of certified Christian educators who are ordained elders, voice and vote under the provisions of G-11.0101b, during the term of service in an educational ministry under the jurisdiction of the presbytery. (G-11.0407)”

This language is consistent with that of the proposed Revised Form of Government.

3. That if the 218th General Assembly (2008) believes the questions point to serious deficiencies in the educator certification process, it should direct the Educator Certification Council to address these issues in its handbook and the model policies provided to the presbyteries.

Rationale

The Form of Government provides for the certification of Christian educators. Section G-14.0720 mandates that the General Assembly provide a “handbook containing the training and continuing education process for Christian Educators...” It also calls for an Educator Certification Council (hereafter ECC) that administers the provisions of the handbook and grants certification for Christian educators. Subsequent Form of Government paragraphs describe the accrediting process (G-14.0721), the presbytery’s role and responsibilities with certified Christian educators (G-14.0730 and G-14.0731), and the certified Christian educators’ and certified associate Christian educators’ duty to report evidence of abuse or neglect of minors or adults who lack mental capacity in specified circumstances (G-14.0732).

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution notes that the Educator Certification Council (ECC) handbook addresses some of the questions in Item 04-23. While this handbook guides or controls the work of the ECC and those seeking certification, it has no binding authority on presbyteries.

1. With respect to the first question presented, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that certification is granted by the ECC on behalf of the General Assembly Council, as specified in G-14.0720.

2. With respect to the second question presented, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that there is no mention in the Constitution of rescinding certification, nor is there any provision for revocation of certification for cause by the presbytery.

3. With respect to the third question presented, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that “certification [is] granted by the Educator Certification Council on behalf of the General Assembly Council” (G-14.0720). But the presbytery is not required to recognize the applicant for a certified education position in a church until the presbytery “is satisfied with the qualifications of an applicant” (G-14.0731). When the presbytery is satisfied, it “provides for a Service of Recognition” (G-14.0731). It is not clear what happens if the presbytery is not satisfied. Nor is it clear what, if any, effect a presbytery’s decision not to provide for a Service of Recognition would have.

4. With respect to the fourth question presented, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that there is no constitutional provision requiring consultation with the presbytery before the status of Certified Christian Educator is conferred. The handbook describes a process for the presbytery and the ECC to work together toward the certification of Christian educator applicants. However, the ECC and presbyteries may not have partnered in the certification process of particular educators in the ways described in the handbook. Presbyteries may be unaware of their roles in the process of certification. Or they may be unwilling or unable for a variety of reasons to provide the personnel to participate in the process. Presbyteries may feel that they do not need to abide by the provisions of a handbook they did not adopt.

The Form of Government (G-14.0730a–c) does require the presbytery to

a. support the certification process by encouraging educators to seek certification, providing guidance through the Educator Certification Advisor, and encouraging sessions to make continuing education funds and time available to educators seeking certification;

b. provide the following support to the certified Christian educators: service of recognition that shall include the constitutional questions at W-4.4003 (G-11.0103n); establish minimum requirements for compensation and benefits (G-11.0103n); and access to the committee on ministry (G-11.0503); and

c. grant the privilege of the floor to the certified Christian educator at all its meetings with voice only, and, in the case of certified Christian educators who are ordained elders, voice and vote under the provisions of G-11.0101b. (G-11.0407)

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution further finds that it is an aberration in our polity that a person is granted the privilege of the floor, or, in the case of elders, full membership privileges without the approval of the body in which those privileges will be exercised. In 2004, the ACC noted in its advice on Item 05-11:

For various reasons a presbytery may grant “membership” to an ordained elder “for a term.” However such a provision by rule and for a fixed term of service is different from what is proposed, namely a status of “member” based solely upon a certification process. The effect of this overture, if approved, would create a category of persons entitled to membership by virtue of a certification process outside the discretion of the presbytery. The historic principle of governance asserts that a presbytery has the right to determine its membership. (Minutes, 2004, Part 1, p. 400)

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution also notes that certification itself is contingent upon having employment as a Christian educator in a Presbyterian church [PC(USA)]. However, once the certification is conferred, the presbytery is required to enroll the certified Christian educator with voice, or, if an elder, with voice and vote under the provisions of G-11.0101b, whether or not the educator remains employed. Once established, the relationship to the presbytery is not contingent upon service or employment in a Presbyterian church. Further, the certified Christian educator could move his or her church membership to a particular church in a different presbytery and that presbytery would be required to enroll the certified Christian educator regardless of employment status and without any right to determine suitability for membership in the presbytery. Conversely, the first presbytery has no authority or warrant for dismissing or removing a departed Christian educator from its roll of certified Christian educators, required by G-11.0407.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that constitutional amendment is warranted to establish the presbytery’s right to determine whom it will enroll.

5. With respect to the fifth question presented, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that there is no constitutional provision for review or termination of Certified Christian Educator status.

6. With respect to the sixth question presented, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that there is no constitutional provision for committees on ministry to exercise oversight or evaluation functions with respect to Certified Christian Educators.

7. With respect to the seventh question presented, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that the Rules of Discipline contain no special provisions for disciplinary cases when the accused is a certified Christian educator. As a member of a Presbyterian church, the session of that church would have original jurisdiction.

Questions Received

Item 04-23 from the stated clerk of the Presbytery of Santa Fe presents the following questions upon which it seeks constitutional interpretation:

1. At what point does certification of Christian educators actually happen?
2. Is a presbytery’s dissatisfaction with the qualifications of the applicant enough for the ECC to rescind certification?
3. Who has the authority to certify a Christian educator?
4. Is there any input requested from presbytery such as a review, reference checking, and/or examination prior to certification?
5. Is certification, once conferred, permanent?
6. G-11.0501 (a) gives responsibility to COM to serve as “pastor and counselor” to Certified Christian Educators of the presbytery and to facilitate their relations with the congregation, ministers, and presbytery, yet COM is not given any power to examine, oversee, recommend, etc. Is this an oversight?
7. Who has jurisdiction over Christian educators in the event that allegations are filed?

Authoritative Interpretation Regarding Discretionary Powers of Presbytery in Relation to the Formula of Agreement and Orderly Exchange—From the Stated Clerk, Presbytery of Giddings-Lovejoy.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that the 218th General Assembly (2008) answer Item 04-24 with the following response:

1. With respect to the first question, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that the “Formula of Agreement” was approved by the General Assembly, approved by the presbyteries, and is binding on the whole church. At the time the “Formula of Agreement” was approved, the presbyteries also amended G-11.0405 to enable implementation of “Formula of Agreement” provisions. Without those amendments, the provisions of “A Formula of Agreement” could not have been put into practice, as stipulated in G-15.0302c: “Ecumenical activity under the guidance of such received ecumenical statements may be conducted only under provisions of the Constitution thereof.”

“The Orderly Exchange of Ordained Ministers of Word and Sacrament” is a series of agreements that were mandated by “A Formula of Agreement.” The Preface of “A Formula of Agreement” specifies that the four denominations will, among other requirements, “recognize each others’ various ministries and make provision for the orderly exchange of ordained ministers of Word and Sacrament.” These agreements were written by persons representing the four denominations and were not approved by the General Assembly or the presbyteries, but they, too, are binding on the church, because of our agreements with the partner denominations.

2. With respect to the second question, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that there are no express provisions in our Constitution for amendment, interpretation, or clarification. However, in the Orderly Exchange document itself, is a section entitled “Background and Affirmations” where we find:

the four churches will need to continue conversations toward clarification of church policies in order to enhance the orderly exchange of ministers and to find ways to celebrate visibly our full communion relationship and the recognition of the ordained ministries of the four churches.

Thus, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that the way to amend the Orderly Exchange document is to ask the team, made up of representatives of the four participating denominations to amend or clarify the document.

3. With respect to the third question, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution notes that “A Formula of Agreement,” was approved by the General Assembly and the presbyteries. It is a standard of the whole denomination. No presbytery may waive provisions approved by the whole. As a subsidiary document of “A Formula of Agreement,” “The Orderly Exchange of Ordained Ministers of Word and Sacrament” is, likewise, a standard of the whole church.

“A Formula of Agreement,” was agreed upon by the four partner churches and “The Orderly Exchange of Ordained Ministers of Word and Sacrament” was written by representatives of the four churches and expresses the ways we work together in support of our common mission. In the spirit of that partnership, it is important that we all adhere to the agreed principles or the process of exchange is no longer orderly. It is not possible for a single body to override or amend agreements of the partner churches.

4. With respect to the fourth question, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that it is the intent of Principle 2 to prohibit a candidate from accepting a first call in “a congregation of another church.” Principle 2 states:

It is important to the faithful and orderly exchange of ordained ministers among the four churches of A Formula of Agreement that one who would serve in a congregation of another church first be formed and educated for ministry in one’s own tradition, and have experience in serving in that church’s ordained ministry. Such experience and grounding in one’s own tradition are seen to be essential prior to serving in a setting of another tradition; therefore, such service is not intended for a first call.

This is confirmed in our own Constitution in G-11.0405b which states, “A minister of another denomination, with whom the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is in full communion (G-15.0201), may be called ... .” A minister is a person who is already ordained, working in Presbyterian ministry, and a member of a presbytery.

5. With respect to the fifth question, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that “not intended” closes the door to ordination to a first call in another denomination.

If the 218th General Assembly (2008) believes that the issues raised by questions in Item 04-24 warrant discussion by the representatives of the Formula of Agreement partner denominations, the General Assembly should direct the Stated Clerk to request conversations between the four partner churches for discussion of same.

Questions Received

1. What authority do the Formula of Agreement and The Orderly Exchange of Ordained Ministers of Word and Sacrament have in the PC(USA)?

2. May the Agreement and the Orderly Exchange be amended, interpreted, or clarified and by what process?
3. May a presbytery waive a provision of the Agreement or the Orderly Exchange and by what process?
4. Does principle number two [quoted above] from the Orderly Exchange prevent a presbytery from ordaining a candidate to ministry in a partner denomination? If not, are there any specific conditions that limit when a presbytery may ordain a candidate to ministry in a partner denomination?
5. In the phrase, “therefore, such service is not intended for a first call,” does the use of the word “intended” open or close the door to ordination to a first call in another denomination?

On Transferring Shalom Presbyterian Church from Hanmi Presbytery to the Presbytery of Riverside—From the Synod of Southern California and Hawaii.

The Synod of Southern California and Hawaii overtures the 218th General Assembly (2008) to concur with the request that Shalom Presbyterian Church (pin number 11314) be transferred to Riverside Presbytery from Hanmi Presbytery for the purpose of merging with the First Presbyterian Church of Fontana (pin number 00719).

Rationale

The Shalom Presbyterian Church has previously been located in Los Alamitos, California, and has been meeting more recently in the First Presbyterian Church of Fontana, California, located at 9260 Mango Ave. in Fontana.

The congregations of both Shalom Presbyterian of Hanmi Presbytery and First Presbyterian Church of Fontana of Riverside Presbytery approved the Covenant of Intent to Merge on February 3, 2008.

The session of Shalom Presbyterian Church and the session of First Presbyterian Church formally approved the Covenant of Intent to Merge on February 3, 2008.

The Presbytery of Riverside voted on March 11, 2008, to receive Shalom Presbyterian Church upon transfer from Hanmi Presbytery so that the congregation could merge with First Presbyterian Church of Fontana. Hanmi Presbytery voted on Feb. 14, 2008, to dismiss Shalom Presbyterian Church to Riverside Presbytery so that it could merge with First Presbyterian Church of Fontana.

The Synod of Southern California and Hawaii voted in a special meeting on December 8, 2007, to approve the transfer and merger, and to overture the General Assembly to concur.

On Transferring Faith Presbyterian Church from Hanmi Presbytery to the Presbytery of the Pacific—From the Synod of Southern California and Hawaii.

The Synod of Southern California and Hawaii overtures the 218th General Assembly (2008) to concur with the request that Faith Presbyterian Church (pin number 11900) be transferred from Hanmi Presbytery to the Presbytery of the Pacific.

Comment: It is understood the effective date is 1-1 2009.

Rationale

Faith Presbytery Church, 1880 Crenshaw Blvd. in Torrance, California, was initiated by Torrance First Presbyterian Church (TFPC), a church within the geographical bounds of the Presbytery of the Pacific, but a member of the non-geographical Hanmi Presbytery, primarily an English-language congregation of TFPC. Faith Church is separately chartered and has been a member church of Hanmi Presbytery.

The session of Faith Presbytery Church voted on June 25, 2006, and the congregation voted on June 20, 2006, to request the transfer of the church to the Presbytery of the Pacific.

The Presbytery of the Pacific voted on September 11, 2007, to overture the Synod of Southern California and Hawaii to approve the transfer of Faith Presbyterian Church upon its dismissal from Hanmi Presbytery, and to receive Faith Presbyterian Church upon action of the synod and General Assembly.

Hanmi Presbytery voted on November 1, 2007, to dismiss Faith Church to the Presbytery of the Pacific.

The Synod of Southern California and California voted in a Special Meeting on December 8, 2007 to approve the transfer, and to overture the General Assembly to concur.

*Item 04-27

[The assembly approved Item 04-27. See pp. 48, 51.]

The Office of the General Assembly recommends that the 218th General Assembly (2008) remind individuals that the Rules of Discipline cannot be used to mediate intrinsic differences of theology, policy, polity, power, or trust. These broader issues of conflict should be addressed by individuals within the church and by administrative processes within the church such as mediation, administrative review committees, or administrative commissions. Judicial process is to be used when an individual church member, after trying to bring about an adjustment or settlement of the quarrel, complaint, delinquency, or irregularity asserted has determined after prayerful deliberation that the due process provided by the Rules of Discipline is necessary to preserve the purity and purposes of the church either to limit the behavior of individuals within the church or to correct the unconstitutional use of power by governing bodies.

Rationale

This recommendation is in response to the following referral: 2006 Referral: Item 05-20. On Amending D-10.0102, Accusation of Another—From the Presbytery of Santa Fe (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 38, 40, 427–9).

Item 05-20 was referred to the Office of the General Assembly with the following comment:

1. The 217th General Assembly (2006) requests that the Office of the General Assembly undertake a study of the inappropriate use of judicial process and report findings and recommendation to the 218th General Assembly (2008).
2. The General Assembly urges individuals and governing bodies to become familiar with D-10.0102 and, as appropriate, to exercise their right to submit an accusation alleging (1) that a member of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has violated the commandment against bearing false witness, and/or (2) the member, if an officer of the church, has broken his/her ordination vows (see G-14.0405b(4)–(9) and G-14.0207d–j) by filing accusations in bad faith. (Minutes, 2006, Part I, p. 427)

Introduction

The Rules of Discipline of the Book of Order describe two very detailed judicial processes for the governing bodies to use in order to address two very specific types of conflict in the church, disciplinary and remedial. The disciplinary judicial process provides a “due process” in situations where individual members of the church are alleged to have behaved in ways contrary to Scripture or the PC(USA) Constitution. The disciplinary judicial process allows the PC(USA) community to determine whether the individual engaged in the prohibited behavior and whether the PC(USA) should limit the individual participation within the church (either as a member or as an officer) until the individual has exhibited repentance and is able to be restored to the full rights and responsibilities of membership or office. The remedial judicial process provides a formal process by which a member of a governing body, a sister governing body, or an employee of a governing body may challenge a collective decision of the governing body if the governing body has taken an action it does not have the power under the PC(USA) Constitution to take or has failed to take an action the governing body has a duty to take under the PC(USA) Constitution. All other conflicts may be addressed by the governing bodies through administrative committees or commissions that may be given broader powers to resolve the particular conflicts under the Form of Government.

Occasionally individuals within the PC(USA) will attempt to use these judicial processes in inappropriate ways. On these occasions it can take quite a bit of human energy and money to eventually resolve the cases and many times resolve the issues. Inappropriate uses of judicial process can include multiple filing of allegations of offenses against individual, which triggers the appointment of multiple committees to determine probable cause. When allegations of offenses are in writing from a member of the PC(USA), the governing body automatically appoints an investigating committee to determine probable cause. When allegations of offense are from a non-member of the Presbyterian church or not in writing, the governing body staff analyze whether they have received a notice of offense that will need a committee appointed to determine probable cause and reasonable proof. Other inappropriate uses of judicial process include the filing of multiple remedial cases against one governing body to interfere with the ongoing mission of the church.

Results of Study

The Office of the General Assembly sent a survey to the stated clerks of the presbyteries and synods to find if the stated clerks felt that there had been any inappropriate use of judicial process in their governing body. We received responses from fifty-six presbyteries out of one hundred seventy-four presbyteries or just under one third of the presbyteries and four synods or one fourth of the synods. Of those who responded, fifty-two stated clerks stated that their governing body had not experienced any inappropriate use of judicial process. Eight stated clerks did acknowledge the inappropriate use of judicial process, seven presbyteries and one synod.

Most of the inappropriate uses were spread out over two to four years and involved one person filing multiple disciplinary allegations as well as multiple remedial complaints. In several instances, the individual also filed civil cases. Most of these allegations and cases were attempts to challenge a particular set of facts and circumstances in a variety of ways. In some cases, the disciplinary allegations of offense were filed against individuals for decisions made within the context of a committee or commission of a presbytery and in two instances for participation in a judicial case either as witnesses or as members of a permanent judicial commission. In some situations, the disciplinary allegations did not rise to the level of an offense and the investigating committees did not begin an inquiry. In some situations, the allegations may have constituted an offense, but the investigating committees found no probable cause after an initial inquiry. Some of these governing bodies had to appoint five to six investigating committees (of three to five members each) simultaneously. Others have had to field five to six investigating committees over a period of years because the individual filing the allegations continued to file against people.

The most egregious use of judicial process occurred over a period of four years in which a church split spawned over one hundred disciplinary allegations and remedial complaints. The permanent judicial commission with jurisdiction spent several years consolidating the cases until a resolution satisfactory to all was obtained. Another church split spawned a dozen disciplinary allegations and remedial complaints. In those cases where multiple remedial complaints were filed, the permanent judicial commission with jurisdiction consolidated cases based upon similar facts and circumstances. In those disciplinary allegations based upon the same facts and circumstances, presbyteries have utilized one investigating committee (IC) to inquire into the facts and circumstances for allegations of offense against multiple people.

The financial costs to the governing bodies have ranged from $2,000 to $200,000 for the inappropriate use of judicial process within the context of the church, with most in the range of $2,000 to $5,000. When civil litigation is included, the financial costs increase. The costs to the governing bodies in time and energy included the use of as many as fifteen to thirty people as members of investigating committees, administrative commissions, permanent judicial commissions, and governing body staff. When these inappropriate uses occur, it can cripple the ongoing mission of the governing body since the time and energy of so many people are directed towards judicial process.

One stated clerk observed that the inappropriate use seemed to be in retaliation for a perceived wrong rather than an attempt to correct a perceived wrong.

In five instances, the governing bodies eventually either censured the individual responsible for the inappropriate use, limited which body has jurisdiction over the cases filed by the individual, presumed the individual to have renounced jurisdiction, or the individual renounced jurisdiction. In three instances, there has been no censure of the individual who used the judicial process inappropriately.

Is There A Solution?

The current Rules of Discipline allow the permanent judicial commission (PJC) of jurisdiction to dismiss a remedial complaint that fails to state a claim upon which relief may be granted. Current authoritative interpretation of the Rules of Discipline also allows a permanent judicial commission to consolidate multiple remedial complaints filed based upon the same facts and circumstances.

When allegations of offense against members of the PC(USA) are received by a governing body, the current Rules of Discipline state that, depending upon the form of the allegation, either a committee is automatically formed to determine probable cause or the governing body staff that receives the allegation determines whether or not to form a committee. Generally the PC(USA) has preferred that decisions made by governing bodies be made in the context of groups of people, not by individuals. Any further limit on the form of allegation that automatically triggers the formation of a committee shifts the power into the hands of the governing body staff to determine whether or not a committee should be appointed to determine probable cause.

The PJC currently has the power, after due process, to limit any individual behavior that constitutes an offense, including using judicial process inappropriately.

The inappropriate use of judicial process can be quite destructive on the life and witness of the church through its governing bodies. When used appropriately, judicial process maintains the rights of individuals and governing bodies to have a fair hearing when alleged to have behaved beyond the boundaries set by the church and Scripture. The current processes can be used to limit, consolidate, dismiss, or censure individual and governing body behavior including inappropriate use of judicial process.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 04-27

Advice on Item 04-27—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution

Item 04-27 is in response to the following referral: 2006 Referral: Item 05-20. On Amending 10.0102 Regarding Accusation of Another—From the Presbytery of Santa Fe (Minutes, 2006, Part I, p. 427).

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 218th General Assembly (2008) to approve the recommendation of the Office of the General Assembly, which is in response to the referral, and to thank the Office of the General Assembly for its work.

Item 04-28

[The assembly approved Item 04-23 with amendment. See pp. 49, 51.]

Commissioners' Resolution. On Urging a Gracious, Pastoral Response to Churches Requesting Dismissal from the PC(USA).

The 218th General Assembly (2008) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)

1. Directs the Stated Clerk to send this resolution to the presbyteries, synods, and sessions, indicating the will of the assembly that presbyteries and synods develop and make available to lower governing bodies and local congregations a process that exercises the responsibility and power “to divide, dismiss, or dissolve churches in consultation with their members” (Book of Order, G-11.0103i) with consistency, pastoral responsibility, accountability, gracious witness, openness, and transparency.

2. Believing that trying to exercise this responsibility and power through litigation is deadly to the cause of Christ, impacting the local church, other parts of the Body of Christ and ecumenical relationships, and our witness to Christ in the world around us, [the General Assembly] urges [congregations considering leaving the denomination,] presbyteries[,] and synods to implement a process using the following principles:

- Consistency: The local authority delegated to presbyteries is guided and shaped by our shared faith, service, and witness to Jesus Christ.
- Pastoral Responsibility: The requirement in G-11.0103i to consult with the members of a church seeking dismissal highlights the presbytery’s pastoral responsibility, which must not be submerged beneath other responsibilities.
- Accountability: For a governing body, accountability rightly dictates fiduciary and connectional concerns, raising general issues of property (G-8.0000) and specific issues of schism within a congregation (G-8.0600). But, full accountability also requires preeminent concern with “caring for the flock.”
- Gracious Witness: It is our belief that Scripture and the Holy Spirit require a gracious witness from us rather than a harsh legalism.

- Openness and Transparency: Early, open communication and transparency about principles and process of dismissal necessarily serve truth, order, and goodness, and work against seeking civil litigation as a solution.

Rationale

There are many scenarios and reasons for dismissal of churches. Furthermore, presbyteries have constitutional discretion in how to respond to such requests. Nonetheless, it is not sufficient to follow the letter of church law and miss or transgress the Spirit of Christ in that law. This resolution is deeply needed for two reasons.

First, it is easy for us to emphasize the property trust responsibilities of presbytery/synod oversight to the exclusion of the pastoral responsibility of caring for the congregations (members staying and leaving) and the responsibility of public witness to Christ with the larger body of Christ and the community and world.

Second, across the church our presbyteries are inconsistent in communicating how they will respond to churches seeking dismissal. There are several helpful and gracious processes available on the middle governing body Website (and by the example of some presbyteries), but many presbyteries and councils are guarded about the local application of G-11.0103i. This fosters a preemptive all-or-nothing posture from a church seeking dismissal. Our desire is to urge each other into a more grace-filled exchange.

Our concern is practical and is rooted in the commission to care for Christ's sheep. To be direct, if a church goes through the trauma of an internal split, wouldn't we rather the members go to church anywhere than end up disillusioned and quitting on a local church and presbytery that have been to court in a protracted legal battle? Wouldn't we rather lose some dirt or brick or even lose face than poison the well of witness in our community? As the resolution states, we believe litigation by Christians against Christians is deadly to the cause of Christ.

What do we envision? We call on local church leadership and presbytery leadership to care pastorally for majority and minority groups in a church seeking dismissal. This could result in a final picture, not of two embittered enemies in court, but in mutual blessing and partnership in the midst of the sadness of parting. We envision presbytery leadership and local church leadership working together to bless and make way for a majority group and to take great care to relocate and shepherd a minority group. This could be the last great joint mission effort of two parts of Christ's body who are focusing on different mission fields.

Brothers and sisters, we can do better than we are doing! But it will take a reprioritizing of how we exercise responsibility and power and a commitment to act. Failure to act will perpetuate communication and practice that we believe is not only harmful to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) but to our witness to Jesus Christ in the world. Choose to act by endorsing this resolution for the cause of Christ in the world.

The Reverend Robert Austell, Presbytery of Charlotte
Elder Archie Smith, Presbytery of San Joaquin

A. Advisory Committee on the Constitution Agency Summary

1. Assigned Responsibilities

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC) is composed of nine voting members as established by the Book of Order, G-13.0112 and G-18.0301. The nine voting members must be former members of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the General Assembly, stated clerks or former stated clerks of synods or presbyteries, or other qualified persons with knowledge of and experience with the Constitution and polity of the church (G-13.0112a). The Stated Clerk of the General Assembly is a member ex officio without vote.

With regard to questions requiring an interpretation of the Book of Order, the advisory committee's responsibilities are set out in G-13.0112c and d as follows:

c. All questions requiring an interpretation by the General Assembly of the Book of Order arising from governing bodies of the church or from individuals shall be communicated in writing to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly no later than 120 days prior to the convening of the next session of the General Assembly.

d. The Stated Clerk shall refer all such questions of interpretation to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, except those pertaining to matters pending before a judicial commission. The Advisory Committee shall report its findings to the General Assembly along with its recommendations. Such recommendations may include proposals for constitutional change. The General Assembly shall vote on the recommendations, and may amend or decline to approve them.

With regard to proposed amendments to the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), the advisory committee's mandated responsibilities are set out in G-18.0301b, as follows:

b. The Stated Clerk shall refer all such proposed amendments to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution (G-13.0112), which shall examine the proposed amendment for clarity and consistency of language and for compatibility with other provisions of the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). The advisory committee shall report its findings to the General Assembly along with its recommendations, which may include an amended version of any proposed constitutional changes as well as advice to accept or decline the proposals referred to the committee. The General Assembly shall not consider any amendment until it has considered the report and any recommendation from the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

2. Process and Procedures, Responsibilities and Relationships

The advisory committee does not interpret the Constitution. The role of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, as its title suggests and as its constitutional mandate clearly establishes, is to advise the General Assembly. The committee's advice has no authority until and unless it is approved by the General Assembly. With respect to proposed amendments to the Constitution, the advisory committee focuses on clarity of proposed language, and consistency of the proposed amendment with the remainder of the Constitution. The advisory committee occasionally finds that the intent of the proposal is already inherent in other provisions of the Constitution or that it could be achieved by slight changes in language, by placing the amendment in a different section, or by different language entirely. The advisory committee sometimes has recommended such changes in order to avoid inconsistencies within the Book of Order, and also to make as few changes as possible in existing paragraphs and in section numbering.

With respect to requests for interpretation, as well as comments on overtures, the advisory committee seeks to provide advice that is based on constitutional issues, not on the substance of the issues at hand. In many circumstances, the question has been answered by earlier interpretations and does not require action by the General Assembly. In these cases, the inquirer is notified of the standing interpretation. In order to make clear the questions raised, the advisory committee has modified its past practice of reprinting the entire request received (which in some instances contained material not germane to the question itself), and has focused the presentation of the request on the question presented, together with the advisory committee's findings and recommendations. If the question was not clear from the request received, the advisory committee has sought clarification from the individual transmitting the request.

All overtures and reports containing proposed amendments and all requests for interpretation of the Book of Order by the General Assembly must be communicated in writing to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly no later than 120 days prior to the convening of the next session of the General Assembly (G-13.0112c). This 120-day time period allows the advisory committee the time to consider and research carefully each proposed amendment and request. Those requests that the advisory committee brings to the General Assembly are those that it believes meet this constitutional criterion.

The advisory committee completed its preparatory work for the General Assembly in three meetings. In June 2007, the advisory committee met for two days to review and comment upon a draft proposed revision to the Form of Government prepared by the Form of Government Task Force. At a two-day fall meeting, held in conjunction with the OGA Fall Polity Conference, we were able to begin work on our task of preparing for the 218th General Assembly (2008). At its spring five-day meeting, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution concluded its work of preparing responses to constitutional issues to be considered by the 218th General Assembly (2008).

After it has received and considered the advice of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, the General Assembly is free to take whatever action it deems wise on proposed amendments, requests for interpretations, and referrals.

The primary focus for the advisory committee is to fulfill its constitutional function to provide advice to the General Assembly concerning overtures that seek to amend the Constitution, and concerning requests for interpretation of the Constitution.

3. Observations Regarding the Business Coming Before the Assembly

The advisory committee, because of its role in reviewing all requests for constitutional change or interpretation, has the opportunity to observe some of the trends and changes in the type of business coming to the assembly. In reviewing the business coming to the 218th General Assembly (2008), the advisory committee notes that a number of overtures in effect seek to bring motions to postpone or motions to refer particular business before the assembly. The advisory committee reminds the church that these procedural motions could be brought by any commissioner. While such overtures are perfectly permissible, they suggest a lack of trust that the Holy Spirit will work by and through the commissioners to the assembly. The advisory committee reminds the church that such trust in the workings of the Holy Spirit is central to the functioning of our polity.

4. Editorial Corrections

The Organization for Mission provides, at IV.B.2.c., that the Stated Clerk shall prepare editorial changes in the Book of Order, which should be reviewed by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, provided the changes do not alter the substance of the text approved by the presbyteries. The following changes have been made by the Stated Clerk and approved by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution:

Editorial Change 08-01 from Neal E. Lloyd who asked whether there should be an editorial correction in the last phrase of the second sentence of G-11.0401a where he suggested that the word “formerly” should be replaced with “currently.”

With respect to the question presented, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that the question points to a deficiency in the current language of the Book of Order that can be addressed through the process of editorial correction. Lloyd is correct in stating that “membership always resides somewhere” and that this phrase does not really refer to any previous presbytery of membership, but the place of current membership. Correction of this language makes the sentence clearer.

Therefore, in response to Editorial Change 08-01, regarding the second sentence of G-11.0401a, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution approves the correction made by the Stated Clerk so the sentence now reads: “A minister called to work not under the jurisdiction of a presbytery may apply for reception to the presbytery in which he or she will be resident, or to another presbytery, or retain membership in the presbytery where he or she ~~was formerly~~ is currently a member.”

Editorial Change 08-02 from the Presbytery of Philadelphia noted that in D-12.0103 the permanent judicial commission was the body that imposed censure. There is no rational distinction among the four levels of censure that would call for the permanent judicial commission to pronounce the censure under D-12.0103 rather than the presbytery, which does it in the other three levels of censure. The other changes are made to bring the language in D-12.0103 into conformity with the language of the other sections dealing with censure.

The Presbytery of Philadelphia has correctly asserted that in all other forms of censure, the pronouncement of the censure states that it is the presbytery (or session) named as the party executing the censure. The current language implies that in the case of rebuke with supervised rehabilitation, the permanent judicial commission acts on its own behalf, when instead it acts with the authority of and on behalf of the presbytery in these proceedings. There is no reason for the language to be different in this one instance.

5. Special Thanks

On behalf of the 218th General Assembly (2008), the Advisory Committee on the Constitution expresses its thanks and appreciation to the Reverend William Chapman and Elders John Matta and Frances Pitts for their dedicated service to the church through membership on the Advisory Committee on the Constitution. Each of them has brought profound gifts, and deep dedication, to the work of the committee.

The advisory committee is grateful for the staff assistance of the Reverend Mark Tammen, Associate Stated Clerk and director for the Department of Constitutional Services, Joanne Green and Diane Minter, administrative assistants for the Department of Constitutional Services. We are also grateful for the years of dedicated service given by Elder Mary Ruth Phares, who provided immeasurable support as an administrative assistant for the Department of Constitutional Services.

The advisory committee also notes that George Adams, a good and faithful servant of the denomination both in his work for the advisory committee and in the many other works he did for the church died shortly after resigning from the committee in the fall of 2007. We continue to miss both his insights and his irrepressible personality.

Finally, the advisory committee is deeply grateful for the profound and insightful leadership Stated Clerk Clifton Kirkpatrick. As an ex officio member of the advisory committee, Dr. Kirkpatrick has been a calm and consistent voice for the peace, unity, and purity of the church, and a passionate advocate for the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). We are grateful for the opportunity to have served with him.

Headnotes

(1) Property of a dissolving congregation: A dissolving congregation has the right to dispose of church property only as the presbytery directs. G-8.0401 grants the presbytery exclusive rights and responsibilities for dealing with the property of a dissolved church.

(2) Effective date of dissolution: The act of dissolution of a church is complete at the effective date stated in a presbytery resolution.

(3) Property held in trust: The principle that all property held by or for a particular church is held in trust for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) applies to congregations and presbyteries, no matter which entity holds title to church property. (G-8.0201)

(4) Congregational meetings on property matters: Congregational meetings on property matters are not required for every matter having to do with property issues, but are limited to those matters enumerated in Chapters VII and VIII. (G-7.0304, G-8.0500)

(5) Lack of authority of a dissent or minority report: In a judicial decision, neither a dissent nor a minority report has binding authority.

(6) Presbytery business with non-members: Presbyteries and congregations are free to transact business with non-members and may take actions and pass resolutions that address their dealings with non-members. (G-15.0105)

(7) Standard of review: Factual determinations made by a trier of fact have a presumption of correctness and are not to be disturbed on appeal unless they are plainly wrong, without supporting evidence or manifestly unjust (Hardwick v. Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of North Carolina, Minutes, 1983, Part I, p. 45).

Arrival Statement

This remedial case comes to the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission (GAPJC) on appeal by the Chesterbrook Taiwanese Presbyterian Church (CTPC) from a decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of the Mid-Atlantic (SPJC) dated April 19, 2005. This Commission finds that it has jurisdiction, that the Appellant has standing to appeal, that the appeal was properly and timely filed, and that the appeal states one or more grounds for appeal under D-8.0105.

Appearances

The following persons appeared on behalf of Appellant, Chesterbrook Taiwanese Presbyterian Church: Max Ko, Ying H. Shih, and Y.T. Hung. The Reverend David Shih, Moderator, and Chung Yao Kuo, Clerk of Session, of Chesterbrook Taiwanese Presbyterian Church were also present. Appellee, Presbytery of National Capital Presbytery, was represented by the following persons: Lynn Stanton-Hoyle, Gerald Hopkins, and James G.E. Williams. Richard McFail, Stated Clerk of the Presbytery, was also present.

History

Chesterbrook Presbyterian Church (CPC) was a congregation of National Capital Presbytery (Presbytery), located in Falls Church, Fairfax County, Virginia on about 9 acres. The site is divided into three parcels: Parcel A of 3.4 acres, which contained the church building with parking and access to the street; Parcel B of .6 acres, which was a narrow strip of land on the northern boundary of the property, designed to provide access to the land at the rear; and Parcel C of 5 acres, a land-locked area at the rear of Parcel A. As early as 1974, Fairfax County records showed Parcel B as providing potential access to Parcel C.

As a diminishing and aging congregation, CPC began moving toward dissolution as a congregation. An "Exploratory Task Force" met on March 13, 2000, with the pastor and two elders of the Taiwanese Presbyterian Church of Northern Virginia (TPCNVA) to discuss the possibility of the latter using the building and land of the former, as TPCNVA had been meeting in a school building and had no facility of its own.

By September, 2000, Presbytery, through its Church Development Committee, began to discuss closure with CPC, and on September 17, the congregation of CPC voted to close with a tentative date of January 31, 2001. Throughout the remainder of 2000, committees of Presbytery worked with CPC, focusing on pastoral care and transition issues which would follow dissolution.

On October 8, 2000, TPCNVA's Session met. In a letter dated October 9, 2000, from Elder Y. T. Hung, Clerk of Session of TPCNVA, to William Carter, the representative of CPC, Mr. Hung stated, "The Congregation and the Session express their deepest appreciation for the love and generosity of the Chesterbrook Presbyterian Church...[A]s a gift receiver, we think any additional request would be beyond the God's grace to TPC. Therefore, TPC will go along with whatever the decision made by the CPC and with whatever CPC sees feasible." Mr. Hung also suggested the need for language and exhibits to be precise concerning potential building of an assisted living facility on Parcel C and the impact of this proposed building on future plans for church expansion.

A congregational meeting of CPC was held on November 12, 2000 to approve the dissolution of the church, effective January 31, 2001, with the following resolution:

We accept the Session's plan to deed the real property to National Capital Presbytery, Incorporated, with the provision that the building and grounds be given, at no cost, to the Taiwanese Presbyterian Church of Northern Virginia Congregation and to give Lewinsville Presbyterian Church the opportunity to determine whether or not an assisted living facility for low and moderate income persons can be constructed on the back portion of the Church property and to also explore the possibility of developing a home for the Family Respite Center.

On November 26, 2000, at a congregational meeting, TPCNVA voted to accept CPC's plan, and to change the church name to "Chesterbrook Taiwanese Presbyterian Church."

At the stated meeting of Presbytery on January 23, 2001, the Presbytery approved the dissolution resolution for CPC (effective January 31, 2001) and the name change for TPCNVA. The January 23, 2001 resolution included the following:

8. On February 1, 2001, the CTPC is authorized to use "Parcel A" and "Parcel B" property as their new church home with all responsibilities thereof. The Taiwanese Church, chartered in 1992 and a rapidly growing congregation, will move from its current worship site at Oakton Elementary School to "Parcel A." This move will allow them to continue to grow their ministry by now having their own church building. The Taiwanese Church shall maintain and make improvements to the property as necessary. Also, the Taiwanese Church shall be National Capital Presbytery, Inc.'s local representative for oversight of "Parcel C," with such representation to end upon any development of Parcel "C" anticipated in paragraph 12.

12. The Session of Lewinsville Presbyterian Church is requested to form a task force for exploring the use of undeveloped "Parcel C" as an Affordable Assisted Living Facility or a similar facility. Every effort shall be made to incorporate the Family Respite Center (currently located on "Parcel A") into the Affordable Assisted Living Facility. It is recognized that access to "Parcel C" will be by way of "Parcel B" or other access over a portion of "Parcel A." This task force shall report its build/no build decision to Presbytery's Business Advisory Committee no later than July 31, 2002, which is 18 months from dissolution of Chesterbrook Presbyterian Church. By mutual agreement, this time may be extended if needed.

The January 23, 2001 resolution also provided that the Presbytery address contractual issues with two not-for-profit tenant organizations using church facilities, and proceed with all legal arrangements for dealing with Parcel C, including a long-term lease of the property and access rights. CTPC moved to the property on February 1, 2001. Later in 2001, CPC transferred the title to all the church property (Parcels A, B, and C) to Presbytery.

The feasibility study for the assisted living facility on Parcel C began, and the deadline for completing the study was extended to March 1, 2004. During the period 2001-2004, many activities related to planning, zoning, and other government approvals for the assisted living facility were in progress. CTPC became concerned that the use of Parcel C and the location of the access road would impair its capacity to expand the building as the congregation grew. On February 17, 2004, Presbytery leadership sent a letter to all those of interest, acknowledging CTPC's concerns and stating a willingness to work together to solve the issues. Several discussions and communications to that end ensued.

On March 9, 2004, Presbytery Council met, considered motions concerning the disposition of the issues, but postponed action until a later date. Later that month, Presbytery voted to accept the project proposal for the assisted living facility, now named Chesterbrook Residences, Inc. (CRI). On April 20, 2004, a meeting was held with representatives of CTPC, Presbytery, CRI, and Lewinsville Church, which resulted in a first draft of a proposed resolution to address these concerns. This resolution was to be presented at Presbytery's stated meeting in May, 2004. At some point, CTPC ceased to participate in the discussions.

On May 10, 2004, a revised "Working Draft" of the resolution was sent by e-mail to CTPC representatives and the others participating in the drafting. The following day, Presbytery Council met to consider the draft. Though invited, representatives of CTPC did not attend.

Presbytery held its stated meeting on May 25, 2004 and the Council's recommended resolution was presented. Following a failed motion to postpone, Presbytery passed the resolution after considerable discussion. The May 25, 2004 resolution began as follows:

National Capital Presbytery recognizes that language in the Chesterbrook Presbyterian Church Dissolution Resolution which it approved on January 23, 2001, has led to confusion, distress and conflict. The presbytery, therefore, apologizes to its members and particularly to the members and leadership of CTPC, Lewinsville Presbyterian Church, Immanuel Presbyterian Church and Chesterbrook Residences, Inc (CRI). The Presbytery seeks grace and forgiveness as it moves forward.

In order to resolve differences which have arisen, underscore its commitment to the vitality and success of Chesterbrook Taiwanese Presbyterian Church and the proposed Chesterbrook Affordable Assisted Living Facility, and more clearly define its intentions, National Capital Presbytery hereby resolves, agrees, and acknowledges that:

1. The Presbytery retains title to Parcels A, B, and C . . . and all the rights and responsibilities of a presbytery under the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (USA);
2. With regard to Parcels A and B, National Capital Presbytery grants to Chesterbrook Taiwanese Presbyterian Church all of the rights and responsibilities of a particular church under the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (USA) [ex. G-8.0201, ff: G-10.0102, ff)
  - a. with the understanding that an access road on Parcel B to Parcel C will occupy a portion of Parcel A in perpetuity and subject to an easement granted across Parcel A;
  - b. with the understanding that CTPC cedes its interest in Parcel B and agrees that the Presbytery shall retain all rights and responsibilities to Parcel B...

On July 6, 2004, CTPC filed a complaint with the SPJC concerning the actions of Presbytery on May 25, 2004. A stay of enforcement was requested by CTPC, but was not granted. Following a trial, SPJC issued a decision on April 29, 2005, which upheld the May 25, 2004 resolution, and ordered that congregational meetings should be held "in all future matters of this sort having to do with property issues . . ." An appeal was filed by CTPC with the GAPJC on June 2, 2005. A hearing on appeal was held February 10, 2006 by the GAPJC.

Specifications of Error

CTPC's specifications of error have been reworded or combined for purposes of clarity.

Part I Property of Dissolving Congregation

One specification of error suggests the question: "May a dissolving congregation direct disposition of church property?"

Specification of Error Number 3: SPJC erred in denying a particular church's right of the disposition of its own property before it was formally dissolved by the Presbytery.

This specification of error is not sustained.

Specification of error number 3 refers to the "right" of a church to dispose of church property before being dissolved by Presbytery. CTPC contends that, because of the wishes expressed by CPC prior to its dissolution, CTPC had a greater interest in the church property from February 1, 2001 forward than Presbytery was willing to acknowledge.

The Book of Order is clear that a dissolving church, such as CPC, has the right to dispose of church property only as the presbytery directs. G-8.0401 grants Presbytery exclusive rights and responsibilities for dealing with the property of a dissolved church. SPJC correctly held that a dissolving congregation cannot dispose of church property by gift, contract or other means. Thus, CTPC could not acquire from CPC that which CPC had no right to transfer.

CTPC argued that the dissolution of CPC was not complete until the January 23, 2001 resolution was passed by Presbytery and a formal celebration occurred. However, G-8.0401 does not apply only after "formal dissolution" as CTPC defines it, i.e., after a final worship service. The process leading to the dissolution of a congregation, even in cases where the congregation seeks to be dissolved, takes substantial time, particularly when dealing with real property. The act of dissolution is complete at the effective date stated in a presbytery resolution, which in this case was January 31, 2001.

Moreover, even if CPC had not been formally dissolved before January 23, 2001, it could not have sold, leased, or otherwise encumbered church property without the written approval of Presbytery (G-8.0501). A presbytery has exclusive power to determine the use and disposition of church property in a case where the property ceases to be used for a particular church, as was the case with CPC (G-8.0301).

These three provisions of the Book of Order (G-8.0301, G-8.0401, G-8.0501) are consistent with the premise in G-8.0201 that "[a]ll property held by or for a particular church, a presbytery, a synod, the General Assembly, or the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) ... is held in trust ... for the use and benefit of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)." This principle applies to congregations and presbyteries, no matter which entity holds title to church property, and applies whether the property is being used for a particular church program, for investment or otherwise.

Part II

Effect of CPC Resolution and January 23, 2001 Presbytery Resolution

Two specifications of error suggest the question: "What 'rights' did CTPC receive under the November 12, 2000 CPC resolution or the January 23, 2001 presbytery resolution?"

Specification of Error Number 4: SPJC erred in disregarding CTPC's contractual right and the promise of Presbytery.

This specification of error is not sustained.

Specification of Error Number 5: SPJC erred in neglecting the common understanding of the Chesterbrook Dissolution Resolution of January 23, 2001, which resulted in denying CTPC's right to the property.

This specification of error is not sustained.

The January 23, 2001 resolution granted "authorized use" to CTPC and required it to assume "all the responsibilities thereof." This authorized use was limited by the "development of 'Parcel C' anticipated in paragraph 12." That paragraph expressly "recognized that access to 'Parcel C' will be by way of 'Parcel B' or other access over a portion of 'Parcel A'." The difference in understanding between CTPC and Presbytery about the extent of CTPC's rights in Parcels A and B under this language (including its right to object to the location of an easement) did not emerge until 2004 when Fairfax County officials determined that access to the assisted living facility would cross both Parcels A and B. In light of the language of paragraph 12 of the 2001 resolution, the SPJC correctly held that CTPC's right to use Parcels A and B was subject to the placement of an easement over either Parcel A or B for purposes of access to Parcel C.

Part III

Effect of 2004 Presbytery Resolution

Specification of error number 2 suggests the question: "Was the CTPC divested or deprived of property rights by the May 25, 2004 resolution of Presbytery?"

Specification of Error Number 2: SPJC erred in allowing a presbytery to use a resolution to dispose of a particular church's property right that has been well settled without consent of the particular church.

This specification of error is not sustained.

After February 1, 2001, CTPC was authorized to use the church property. No right previously given to CTPC was taken away from it by the May 25, 2004 resolution. Rather, the May 25, 2004 resolution gave CTPC full rights and responsibilities for the church property under Chapter VIII of the Book of Order.

Part IV
Necessity for Congregational Meeting

Specifications of error numbers 1, 7, and 8 suggest the question: "Was a meeting of the CTPC congregation required to give consent to the placing of easements in May 2004?"

Specification of Error Number 1: SPJC erred in making a decision which contradicted its own finding.

This specification of error is not sustained.

Specification of Error Number 7: SPJC agreed with CTPC's position that the May 25, 2004 resolution required approval of the CTPC congregation. As Presbytery filed no appeal, the SPJC's finding is final and CTPC's plea should be granted.

This specification of error is not sustained.

Specification of Error Number 8: SPJC erred in failing to correct and prevent the irregularities and delinquencies of Presbytery, as required by D-2.0101.

This specification of error is not sustained.

In specification of error number 1, CTPC contends that SPJC correctly recognized that there should have been a meeting of CTPC congregation "to approve and accept" the May 25, 2004 resolution. CTPC further argues that SPJC then erred when it did not grant relief to it based on the fact that no such meeting occurred, even while suggesting that such meetings "should" occur "in all future matters of this sort having to do with property issues and congregations."

Before May 25, 2004, CTPC had only been "authorized to use" Parcels A and B, modified by the possible future easements provided for in paragraph 12 of the resolution of January 23, 2001. That authority was not diminished by the relocation of the proposed access road easement at the direction of the Fairfax County officials. Yet SPJC's recognition of the wisdom of holding a congregational meeting to discuss the effect of the new easement was reasonable in light of the pattern of miscommunication and misunderstanding shown in this case.

However, a requirement for such a meeting in "all future matters of this sort having to do with property issues and congregations of the Presbytery" goes too far. Congregational meetings are not required for every matter having to do with property issues. The Book of Order requires congregational meetings in the limited situations enumerated in Chapters VII and VIII. G-7.0304 states, "Business to be transacted at meetings of the congregation shall include . . . [m]atters related to buying, mortgaging, or selling real property (G-8.0500) . . ."

No business other than those items listed in G-7.0304a may be transacted at a congregational meeting. (G-7.0304b.) G-8.0501 notes that many property related transactions also require the written permission of presbytery:

A particular church shall not sell, mortgage, or otherwise encumber any of its real property and it shall not acquire real property subject to an encumbrance or condition without the written permission of the presbytery transmitted through the session of the particular church.<sup>1</sup>

SPJC's more expansive recommendation for congregational meetings is one that congregations and presbyteries may follow, but are not required to follow. Increasing the opportunities for communication and consensus, whether by congregational meetings, informational meetings, or correspondence, is desirable, even if not constitutionally mandated.

Part V
Procedural Errors

Specifications of error numbers 6, 9 and 10 allege procedural errors by the SPJC.

Specification of Error Number 6: SPJC erred in using materials that were part of the process of reconciliation against the party who participated in the process.

This specification of error is not sustained.

This specification of error largely relies on a “Minority Report” in the SPJC decision, which concluded that the content of the May 25, 2004 resolution was “implicitly accepted by CTPC’s participation and approval in drafts of the resolution as early as April 2004.” CTPC, using a civil court standard, argues that SPJC made improper use of “materials” that were part of an offer of compromise. This civil court standard is not applicable in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)’s judicial process.

It should be noted that the designation “Minority Report” in the SPJC decision is not in common use in the ecclesiastical process of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), and should normally have been written as a dissent. Neither a dissent nor a minority report has binding authority.

Moreover, in answer to this specification, the record in this case does not demonstrate that CTPC approved or accepted the resolution before it was presented to Presbytery for debate and vote on May 25, 2004.

Specification of Error Number 9: SPJC erred in ruling that Presbytery’s violation of its own Manual “does not rise to the level of constitutional error.”

This specification of error is not sustained.

SPJC correctly determined that Presbytery’s failure to include a copy of the May 25, 2004 resolution in the mailing that preceded the stated May 2004 Presbytery meeting did not rise to the level of constitutional error. (Hope, et al, v. Presbytery of San Francisco, Minutes, 2006, Part I, p. 455)

Moreover, Presbytery’s manual states: “Docket and Packet: The packet containing materials to be voted on will be mailed prior to each regular meeting.” The manual does not state that all materials to be voted on will be mailed in advance.

Specification of Error Number 10: SPJC erred in allowing a non-member of Presbytery who is not subject to the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to be a party to the Presbytery Resolution.

This specification of error is not sustained.

Presbyteries and congregations are free to transact business with non-members and may take actions and pass resolutions that address their dealings with non-members. G-15.0105 states:

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) will initiate and respond to approaches for conversation and common action with movements, organizations, and agencies of the business, educational, cultural, and civic communities that give promise of assistance toward accomplishing the mission of the Church in the world.

Part VI Factual Errors

Specification of Error Number 11: SPJC erred in disregarding the evidence admitted, and the undisputed facts and circumstances, which resulted in a denial of justice.

This specification of error is not sustained.

CTPC alleges that certain evidence was disregarded by SPJC, resulting in a denial of justice. That certain facts were not mentioned in SPJC’s decision does not mean they were not considered by SPJC. Moreover, factual determinations made by SPJC, as a trier of fact, have a presumption of correctness and are not to be disturbed on appeal unless they are plainly wrong, without supporting evidence or manifestly unjust (Hardwick v. Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of North Carolina, Minutes, 1983, Part I, p. 45). CTPC has not met the burden articulated in Hardwick.

According to CTPC, the evidence shows that Presbytery acted contrary to the expressed intent of the parties with respect to the January 23, 2001 resolution and that Presbytery representatives were less than forthcoming with CTPC. The SPJC, as the trier of fact, did not find improper motives or dishonesty, but a profound breakdown in communication between CTPC and the Presbytery. CTPC’s quest for accountability and integrity reflects its commitment to our polity and deep respect for Presbytery. In seeking forgiveness, reconciliation and closure, Presbytery demonstrated its sensitivity to the means and manner by which it exercised its authority and power.

Church discipline is a power to be used for “building up the body of Christ, not for destroying it, for redeeming, not for punishing. It should be exercised as a dispensation of mercy and not of wrath so that the great ends of the Church may be achieved, that all children of God may be presented faultless in the day of Christ.” (D-1.0102) Although the ruling of SPJC is now affirmed, it is this Commission’s hope that this process has helped remove discord and division between CTPC and Presbytery.

Order

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that the decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of the Mid-Atlantic be affirmed, with the clarification that the Constitution requires a congregational meeting on property matters only as specified in G-7.0304, G-8.0501, and G-8.0502.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Synod of the Mid-Atlantic report this Decision and Order to the Synod at its first meeting after receipt, that the Synod enter the full Decision and Order upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the National Capital Presbytery report this Decision and Order to the Presbytery at its first meeting after receipt, that the Presbytery enter the full Decision and Order upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Clerk of Session of Chesterbrook Taiwanese Presbyterian Church report this Decision and Order to the Session at its next meeting, that the Session enter the full Decision and Order upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

Absences and Non-participants

William Carlough, P. David Snellgrove, and Judy Woods were not present and took no part in this case. Christopher Yim was recused from participation in this case.

Headnotes

- (1) Inactive member’s request for restoration to the active roll: At a minimum, a session must convene to consider an inactive member’s request for restoration to the active roll.
- (2) Timeliness of filing a remedial complaint: A complaint filed within ninety days of the Session’s response to an inactive member’s request for restoration to the active roll is timely filed within the provisions of D-6.0202a.
- (3) Session’s discretion in determining active members: In determining active membership, a session has broad discretion, but its exercise of that discretion is limited by G-5.0202, G-10.0102b and s, and G-10.0302a(2)(a).
- (4) Standard of review: A permanent judicial commission shall not substitute its judgment for that of a session absent a showing that the session did not act “reasonably, responsibly, and deliberately within the Constitution of the church.” (Simmons v. Presbytery of Suwannee, Minutes, 1985, Part I, p.114.)

Arrival Statement

This remedial case comes to the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission (GAPJC) on appeal filed by Respondent/Appellant Session of First Presbyterian Church of Tecumseh, Michigan, (Session) from a decision by the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of the Covenant (SPJC) dated July 14, 2005. This Commission finds that it has jurisdiction, that Session has standing to appeal, that the appeal was properly and timely filed, and that the appeal states one or more grounds for appeal under D-8.0105.

Appearances

John R. Frye, Complainant/Appellee (Frye), was represented by Edward H. Koster; Session was represented by Gregory Grover and William Wise.

History

On March 28, 2002, Session took action to place John and Marcia Frye on the roll of inactive church members. The Fries were notified of this decision by letter from Session on April 17, 2002.

On March 31, 2004, Frye requested by letter to Session that it reverse the allegedly improper action taken in April, 2002, and restore the Fries to active membership.

Frye received an unsigned letter dated April 13, 2004, purportedly from Session, stating that his request fell under the provisions of D-2.0202, and therefore it was not timely.

At its meeting on April 22, 2004, Session removed the Fries from the membership roll.

On June 22, 2004, Frye filed a remedial complaint with the Presbytery of Maumee Valley, complaining that in its letter of April 13, 2004, the Session failed to reinstate Frye to the active roll.

On September 4, 2004, four members of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Presbytery of Maumee Valley (PPJC) ruled that Frye had no standing to file the complaint because he was no longer a member of the church against which the complaint was directed. No other findings were made. On October 21, 2004, counsel for Frye requested a full PPJC hearing. Following a hearing on March 15, 2005, the PPJC ruled that it had jurisdiction; that Frye did have standing; that the complaint stated a claim on which relief could be granted; but that the complaint was not timely filed, because all aspects of the complaint related only to the Session action of March 28, 2002.

On April 6, 2005, Frye appealed the PPJC decision to the SPJC. Following a hearing on July 14, 2005, SPJC sustained in part the PPJC decision, concluding that the complaint was timely filed only with regard to Session's April 13, 2004 response or failure to respond to Frye's request to be restored to the active roll.

Session filed the present appeal and a request for stay of enforcement on August 26, 2005. The request for stay was granted. The GAPJC heard the appeal on February 10, 2005.

Specification of Error

Specification of Error: The Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of the Covenant erred in finding that the complaint was timely filed.

The specification of error is not sustained.

The complaint was timely filed with respect to the Session's response or failure to respond to Frye's letter of March 31, 2004. According to the present record, Session failed to meet to consider Frye's request to be restored to active membership. Instead, in an unsigned letter purportedly from Session dated April 13, 2004, Frye's request was summarily rejected as untimely. On June 22, 2004, Frye filed a complaint with the PPJC alleging a delinquency in the issuance of the April 13, 2004, letter. This complaint was initiated within ninety days of Frye's receipt of the unsigned letter, and therefore within the ninety-day time limit prescribed in D-6.0202a. On remand, the PPJC should address whether Session's process for considering Frye's request to be restored to the active roll was appropriate.

On remand it will also be the PPJC's task to determine what, if any, relief is appropriate. The Book of Order grants a session "the responsibility and power to receive members" (G-10.0102b), to keep rolls (G-10.0102s), and to determine whether a person is "active in the church's work and worship" (G-10.0302a(2)(a)). A session's exercise of its discretion in matters concerning membership is broad, and a permanent judicial commission shall not substitute its judgment for that of a session absent a showing that the session did not act "reasonably, responsibly, and deliberately within the Constitution of the church." (Simmons v. Presbytery of Suwannee, Minutes 1985, Part I, p.114). Constitutional bounds include the limitations that the "conditions of active membership are to be "consistent with the order and confessions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)" (G-5.0202) and that "membership shall not be denied to any person because of race, economic or social circumstances, or any other reason not related to profession of faith" (G-10.0102b).

Decision and Order

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Presbytery of Maumee Valley convene and conduct a trial limited to an examination of the Session’s process in responding or failing to respond to Frye’s request of March 31, 2004, to be restored to the active roll of the First Presbyterian Church of Tecumseh, Michigan.

The Presbytery Permanent Judicial Commission shall convene the trial within ninety days of this decision.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Synod of the Covenant report this decision to the Synod at its first meeting after receipt, that the Synod enter the full Decision and Order upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of Maumee Valley report this Decision and Order to the Presbytery at its first meeting after receipt, that the Presbytery enter the full Decision and Order upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Clerk of Session of First Presbyterian Church, Tecumseh, Michigan report this Decision and Order to the Session at its first meeting after receipt, that the Session enter the full Decision and Order upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing the entry of the Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

This remedial case came before this Commission on a Complaint of original jurisdiction filed by the Complainant, The Session of the Concord Liberty Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), against The Office of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.); The Theological Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church to the 217th General Assembly (2006), a Committee of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.); and Clifton Kirkpatrick, Stated Clerk of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), dated November 18, 2005, and filed with the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) on November 21, 2005. Respondents filed an Answer to the Complaint and a Motion to Dismiss the Statement of Complaint on December 16, 2005.

The Executive Committee of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the General Assembly issued a Preliminary Order and Order for Dismissal on December 19, 2005. There has been no request by the Complainant to petition the full Permanent Judicial Commission for a hearing on the Order for Dismissal on jurisdictional grounds.

The General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission finds that the Commission has jurisdiction, that the Complainant has standing to file the Complaint, and that the Complaint was properly and timely filed. The Commission finds, however, that the Complaint fails to states a claim upon which relief can be granted. The report of the Theological Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church is only a recommendation to the 217th General Assembly (2006), and has no force or effect without further consideration and action by the General Assembly. Therefore, the recommendations proposed in that report, which the Complaint challenges as “irregularities,” do not constitute “actions” that are subject to remedial attack at this time. See D-2.0202a.

The Permanent Judicial Commission dismisses the Complaint in the above-captioned matter on the grounds that the Complaint fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted.

Dated the 12th day of February, 2006.

DECISION AND ORDER

Remedial Case 218-01

Headnotes

(1) Sufficiency of Session Examination of Elders-elect: Session examination must meet the Wier standard “if the governing body has reasonable cause for inquiry based on its knowledge of the life and character of a candidate, it has a positive obligation to make due inquiry and uphold all of the standards of ordination and installation” [emphasis added]. However, the governing body must have “direct and specific knowledge that such a person is in violation of the ordination and installation standards of the Constitution” (Wier v. Session, Second Presbyterian Church of Ft. Lauderdale, FL, Minutes, 2002, Part I, p. 339).

(2) Pleading Standards for Failure to State a Claim: “A permanent judicial commission must assume the truth of the facts alleged in the complaint and then determine whether those assumed facts warrant any relief” (McKittrick v. Session, West End Presbyterian Church of Albany, New York, Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 272-274).

(3) Alternative Resolution: Attention of all ... is directed to the Biblical obligation to resolve disputes without strife and to avoid judicial process when possible (D-1.0103P). The Presbytery and parties are urged and encouraged to explore alternative dispute resolution as provided by G-9.0106 and particularly the possibility of special administrative review as provided by G-9.0409a.

Arrival Statement

This remedial case comes to the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission (GAPJC) on appeal by the Session of Colonial Presbyterian Church (Colonial) from a decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of Mid-America (SPJC) to dismiss a Remedial Complaint against the Session of Grace Covenant Presbyterian Church (GCPC) for failure to state a claim upon which relief may be granted.

Jurisdictional Statement

This Commission finds that it has jurisdiction, the Appellant has standing to appeal, the appeal was properly and timely filed, and the appeal states one or more grounds for appeal under D-8.0105.

Appearances

The Session of Colonial Presbyterian Church, Complainant/Appellant, was represented by Ryan G. Terril. The Session of Grace Covenant Presbyterian Church, Respondent/Appellee, was represented by Michael D. Hockley and Ky A. Weekley.

History

In April, 2004, the Session of GCPC initiated a series of congregational discussions and circulated mailings to prepare the congregation for the election of officers in May. These included a session letter to the congregation, a summary chart of Book of Order provisions, a series of questions and answers, an election “roadmap,” and a voting process chart, among others. These discussions and mailings centered on the constitutional, biblical, and confessional issues of ordination standards, specifically the standard laid out in G-6.0106b, requiring “fidelity within the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman, or chastity in singleness. Persons refusing to repent of any self-acknowledged practice which the confessions call sin shall not be ordained and/or installed as deacons, elders, or ministers of the Word and Sacrament.” The pastor preached at least two sermons on the topic, one on the day of the election. On May 16, 2004, the congregation elected the slate of officers.

At the June, 2004, meeting of Presbytery of Heartland Committee on Ministry (COM), members expressed concern about the election of a woman “thought to be a lesbian” to the session of GCPC. An appointed task force of COM met with representatives of GCPC on June 24, 2004. The GCPC group consisted of its three pastors, eight elders, and the four elders-elect. A discussion of constitutional issues ensued. The COM report concluded that “the congregation was very well prepared for this particular election of officers.” The record of this case does not show that the COM took further action.

Subsequently, the four elders-elect were ordained and/or installed on July 18, 2004.

On September 13, 2004, the session of Colonial made a written request to the session of GCPC to cure an alleged delinquency in the ordination and installation of one or more elders. The session of GCPC did not act to correct the alleged delinquency at its next stated meeting on September 20, 2004. Colonial asked the GCPC session for the questions used to examine elders-elect. In a subsequent (undated) written communication, an elder from GCPC described their examination process as follows:

- a. The discussion by them of their personal faith journey. Two questions were then asked of all elder designates:
  - i. How do you understand your role as an elder, if ordained; and
  - ii. Having completed your training (in the doctrine, government and discipline of the church and in the duties of Elder), what concerns do you have about fulfilling your role as an Elder?
- b. The Elder candidates are then asked the constitutional questions in G-14.0207.

On October 13, 2004, Colonial filed a complaint with Presbytery of Heartland Permanent Judicial Commission (PPJC) against the GCPC session claiming an irregularity and a delinquency in the examination, ordination, and installation of its elders-elect.

In December, 2004, the PPJC moderator and clerk examined the papers and found that the Complaint did not state a claim upon which relief can be granted (D-6.0305d). On January 31, 2005, Colonial challenged the findings of the moderator and clerk. The PPJC on March 10, 2005, upheld the findings of the moderator and clerk and dismissed the Complaint for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted.

On April 20, 2005, Colonial appealed the decision of the PPJC to the SPJC. The SPJC held a hearing on October 28, 2005, and issued a decision upholding the decision of the PPJC, thus dismissing the case for failure to state a claim under D-6.0305d.

Colonial filed the Notice of Appeal to this Commission on December 15, 2005. This Commission accepted the appeal and heard the arguments of the parties on July 28, 2006.

Specifications of Error

Specification of Error No. 1: The Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of Mid-America committed an injustice in the process when it ruled that Appellant’s Complaint failed to state a claim upon which relief can be granted.

This specification of error is sustained.

The Complaint alleges that the session failed to conduct sufficient inquiry consistent with the standard set forth in Wier v. Session, Second Presbyterian Church of Ft. Lauderdale, FL, Minutes, 2002, Part I, p. 339 and specifically failed to inquire of each of the elders-elect as to whether he or she was living in compliance with G-6.0106b. Colonial’s allegations are based on materials distributed to the congregation during a period of education and discernment leading up to the congregation’s election of four persons to serve as elders as well as a report from the COM. The materials cited in the Complaint include a letter from the session to the congregation dated March 30, 2004.<sup>2</sup>

The Wier case states that “if the governing body has reasonable cause for inquiry based on its knowledge of the life and character of a candidate, it has a positive obligation to make due inquiry and uphold all of the standards of ordination and installation.” The Wier case further states, however, that the governing body must have “direct and specific knowledge that such a person is in violation of the ordination and installation standards of the Constitution. A hunch, gossip or stereotype is not a sufficient ground to compel a governing body to make further inquiry” [emphases added].

The crux of the Complaint is whether GCPC session had reasonable cause for further inquiry of the elders-elect as to their willingness to uphold all the standards for ordination and installation.

Since this appeal is limited to the preliminary jurisdictional question of whether or not the Complaint states a claim upon which relief can be granted (D-8.0301), the decision must address only that narrow issue. The pleading standard for failure to state a claim is clearly articulated in McKittrick v. Session, West End Presbyterian Church of Albany, New York, Minutes, 2003, Part I, pp. 272–274:

In ruling on a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, a permanent judicial commission must assume the truth of the facts alleged in the complaint and then determine whether those assumed facts warrant any relief.

At this stage of the proceeding, this Commission is compelled to accept as true the allegation in the Complaint that the GCPC session may have had cause for further inquiry based on its professed knowledge of the life and character of the elders-elect.

It therefore cannot be said with certainty that this Complaint fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted. If the facts alleged in this Complaint are assumed true only for the purposes of deciding the preliminary jurisdictional questions, the case must be accepted for trial by the PPJC. With the presentation of evidence and witnesses, the PPJC will have the opportunity to deliver a decision on the Complaint in full.

Accordingly, the decision of the SPJC is reversed on the narrow question of whether the GCPC session conducted a sufficient examination of one or more elders-elect prior to ordination and installation.

Specification of Error No. 2: The SPJC erred in not applying proper standards to its review of the evidence and authorities in reaching its decision.

This specification of error is not sustained.

Because this Commission is deciding preliminary jurisdictional questions, and not reviewing evidence presented at a trial, this specification of error is not sustained.

Decision

There are sufficient allegations presented in this Complaint, that, if assumed true, would state a claim upon which relief could be granted. The assumption of truth of alleged facts is only for the purpose of determining this preliminary jurisdictional question. The ultimate determination of whether or not those facts alleged are indeed true is properly left to the trier of fact. If it is determined that the session’s examination of elders-elect was not sufficient, then the presbytery has the authority to require that future examinations be conducted in compliance with the Constitution.

Order

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that the decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of Mid-America be reversed.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Presbytery of Heartland be reversed, that all the preliminary jurisdictional questions be answered in the affirmative, and that this Complaint proceed to trial on the facts unless an alternative resolution is achieved.

The attention of all parties is directed to D-1.0103. In the spirit of this provision, this Commission strongly urges and encourages the Presbytery Permanent Judicial Commission to explore alternatives to resolve this case between the parties, including allowing time for the Presbytery to consider using a special administrative review of the elder-elect examination process of Grace Covenant Presbyterian Church.

If a special administrative review is conducted by the Presbytery, it will determine, in accordance with G-9.0409a, whether the examination:

- (1) was regular and in accordance with the Constitution;
- (2) was prudent and equitable; and

(3) was faithful to the mission of the whole church.

If the dispute between the parties is not resolved by means of a special administrative review or other alternative dispute resolution processes in accordance with G-9.0601, the Presbytery Permanent Judicial Commission shall proceed with the trial on the merits of the case. Whether the case goes to trial or an alternative method of resolution is used, the parties are enjoined to be mindful of the standards set in the Wier case.

The trial, should it be necessary, shall commence by June 1, 2007.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Clerk of Session of Colonial Presbyterian Church, Kansas City, Missouri, report this decision to the Session at its first meeting after receipt, that the Session enter the full decision upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the decision be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Clerk of Session of Grace Covenant Presbyterian Church, Overland Park, Kansas, report this decision to the Session at its first meeting after receipt, that the Session enter the full decision upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the decision be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of Heartland report this decision to the Presbytery at its first meeting after receipt, that the Presbytery enter the full decision upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the decision be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Synod of Mid-America report this decision to the Synod at its first meeting after receipt, that the Synod enter the full decision upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the decision be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

DECISION AND ORDER

Headnotes

(1) Standing. An elder-commissioner enrolled at a particular presbytery meeting has standing to file a complaint against that presbytery concerning an irregularity or delinquency which occurred during that period of enrollment (D-6.0202a(1)).

(2) Presbytery Membership. A presbytery is a corporate expression of the church consisting of all the churches and ministers of the Word and Sacrament within a certain district. When a presbytery meets, each church shall be represented by an elder or elders commissioned by the session (G-11.0101). Duly elected elder-commissioners become temporary members of presbytery for a particular meeting only when they present themselves at the meeting and are enrolled by the presbytery for that meeting. Their membership terminates upon adjournment of that meeting. Specific exceptions to this are noted in G-9.0203b and G-11.0101c.

(3) Enrollment of Elder-Commissioners at Presbytery Meetings. An elder-commissioner to presbytery is enrolled at a presbytery meeting only if he or she is present at the meeting and fulfills the presbytery's enrollment procedure. Such an elder is enrolled only for that meeting, and the elder's enrollment terminates when the meeting is adjourned.

(4) Parity between Elder-Commissioners and Ministers of the Word and Sacrament. The Book of Order requires parity between ministers of Word and Sacrament and elder-commissioners in terms of voice and vote at meetings (G-

6.0302). This requirement for parity at meetings does not mean that there is parity in how ministers and elders can become members of a presbytery or in their privileges or authority outside of presbytery meetings.

Arrival Statement

This remedial case comes to the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission (GAPJC) on appeal by Patricia Fair-Booth from a decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of the Mid-Atlantic (SPJC) to dismiss a Remedial Complaint against the National Capital Presbytery on the grounds that Fair-Booth lacked standing to bring her Complaint.

Jurisdictional Statement

This Commission finds that it has jurisdiction, the Appellant has standing to appeal, the appeal was properly and timely filed, and the appeal states one or more grounds for appeal under Book of Order D-8.0105.

Appearances

Patricia Fair-Booth, Complainant/Appellant, was present and represented by Mary Thomas. National Capital Presbytery, Respondent/Appellee, was represented by Stephen Morse.

History and Procedural Background

Patricia Fair-Booth (Fair-Booth) is a member of the session of the Church of the Redeemer (Church), a congregation in the National Capital Presbytery (Presbytery). In February 2005 the Church session elected Fair-Booth to a one-year term as one of its two commissioners to the Presbytery. Fair-Booth was unable to attend the Presbytery's stated meeting on September 27, 2005 due to health reasons. The Church's other commissioner was present at the meeting.

At the meeting the Presbytery's Committee on Ministry distributed and presented a recommendation to appoint an administrative commission for the Church. The recommendation was amended from the floor. The Presbytery approved the following amended motion:

The Committee on Ministry recommends that the presbytery appoint an Administrative Commission which will assess the situation and be empowered to act to dissolve the pastoral relationship and/or empowered to dissolve the session if it sees fit in accordance with the Book of Order (G-9.0505). Furthermore it recommends that the presbytery empower the Committee on Ministry Coordinating Team to appoint this Administrative Commission on its behalf.

On November 1, 2005 Fair-Booth filed a Remedial Complaint with the Synod of the Mid-Atlantic against the Presbytery. The Complaint, among other things, alleged that at its September 27, 2005, meeting, the Presbytery erred by appointing an administrative commission for the Church and by intervening in the affairs of the Church without the session's knowledge, request or approval. The Presbytery did not file an Answer to the Complaint as required by D-6.0303. Notwithstanding the absence of an Answer, the Moderator and Clerk of the SPJC proceeded with a preliminary examination of the Complaint and found that the SPJC had jurisdiction, Fair-Booth had standing to file the case, the Complaint was timely filed, and the Complaint stated a claim upon which relief could be granted. These findings were communicated to the parties by memorandum dated February 8, 2006.

The Presbytery did file an Answer on February 23, 2006 and made a timely challenge to the preliminary finding by the SPJC Moderator and Clerk that Fair-Booth had standing to file the Complaint. The Presbytery requested the opportunity to present evidence and argument, as provided for in D-6.0306a, in order to show that Fair-Booth did not have standing because there was no record that she had attended the September 27, 2005 Presbytery meeting or had been elected as a Presbytery commissioner by her session. Based on these allegations, the Presbytery moved to dismiss the case pursuant to D-6.0306c. Fair-Booth responded that she did have standing because she had been elected by her session as a commissioner to the Presbytery, that the Complaint was based on a series of erroneous actions taken by the Presbytery, and was not based solely on the Presbytery's actions at the September 27, 2005 meeting.

Both parties submitted briefs to the SPJC. In its brief, the Presbytery acknowledged that Fair-Booth was a duly-elected commissioner to the Presbytery but maintained that she was not present at the September 27, 2005 Presbytery meeting, and therefore did not have standing to bring the Complaint. The Presbytery contended that standing to complain about an action by the Presbytery was limited to "a minister or elder enrolled as a member of presbytery concerning an irregularity or a delinquency during that period of enrollment..." (D-6.0202a(1)).

Fair-Booth acknowledged that she did not attend the September 27, 2005 meeting, but claimed that she had standing to complain because she was an "enrolled" member of the Presbytery, having been elected to serve as a commissioner to the Presbytery by the Church's session for a term that included the September 27, 2005 Presbytery meeting.

The SPJC conducted a hearing on March 27, 2006 on the issue of Fair-Booth's standing to bring this Complaint. Thereafter, the SPJC voted not to sustain the ruling by the SPJC Moderator and Clerk that Fair-Booth had standing as required by D-6.0305b because Fair-Booth "was not present at the meeting in which the irregularity allegedly occurred." As a result of this decision the Complaint was dismissed pursuant to D-6.0306c.

Fair-Booth appealed the SPJC decision to dismiss her Complaint to the GAPJC. The GAPJC heard the arguments of the parties on July 28, 2006.

Specification of Error

"The Synod of the Mid-Atlantic erred in its constitutional interpretation of the term 'enrolled' as it relates to the standing of elder-commissioners to file a complaint in a remedial case."

This specification of error is not sustained.

Decision

The sole issue in this case is whether a duly-elected elder-commissioner to a presbytery who did not attend a presbytery meeting has standing to file a remedial complaint against the presbytery for alleged irregularities that occurred during and prior to that meeting. The dispute concerns the difference between "membership" and "enrollment" in a governing body, in this case, a presbytery. The case illustrates the difference between ministers of the Word and Sacrament who are members of presbyteries with continuing membership status and responsibilities (G-6.0201), and elder-commissioners who are elected by sessions from a particular church but who are members of a presbytery only when enrolled at a presbytery meeting.<sup>3</sup> "Presbytery is a corporate expression of the church consisting of all the churches and ministers of the Word and Sacrament within a certain district. When a presbytery meets, each church shall be represented by an elder [or elders] commissioned by the session" (G-11.0101). Under G-10.0102p, the session elects commissioners to presbytery and is encouraged to elect commissioners for specified terms. Elders elected as commissioners become enrolled members of presbytery only when they present themselves at a particular meeting of the presbytery occurring during the term for which the session elected them, and comply with the steps for enrollment (e.g., signing an enrollment sheet, completing an attendance form, checking in with the stated clerk or the clerk's designee, etc.).

Commissioning is not the same as enrollment. Whether elected for a single meeting or a longer term, an elected elder is "enrolled" only if he or she is present at a meeting and fulfills the presbytery's enrollment procedure. Such an elder is "enrolled" only for that meeting, and the elder's enrollment terminates when the meeting is adjourned. In this case Fair-Booth would have been an enrolled member of Presbytery had she attended the September 27, 2005 meeting and registered with the attendance sheet used by the Presbytery. Fair-Booth was not enrolled at that meeting and thus did not have standing to bring her Complaint. The Church's other commissioner was enrolled at the September 27, 2005 Presbytery meeting, and would have had standing to complain about actions taken at that meeting, but did not bring or join this case.

The requirement for enrollment, as separate from election for presbytery commissioners is consistent with the principle that lower governing bodies do not determine the membership of higher governing bodies. Rather, lower governing bodies elect commissioners to higher governing bodies.

The importance of attendance and enrollment at a presbytery meeting, as a prerequisite to the elder-commissioner's standing to complain about an action taken at the meeting, is not a mere technicality. The decisions of church governing bodies "should be founded on the revealed will of God" (G-1.0307). "Presbyters are ... to seek together to find and represent the will of Christ" (G-4.0301d). Presbyterians come together in governing bodies to deliberate and decide matters as a community of faith, open to the work of the Spirit among them. Voting by proxy is not allowed except in a corporate matter where civil law specifically requires that voting by proxy be permitted as to that particular matter (G-7.0404).

Fair-Booth argued that requiring elder-commissioners to enroll before being deemed a member of presbytery results in disparate treatment of elder-commissioners and ministers of the Word and Sacrament. However, the Book of Order states that ministers of the Word and Sacrament are members of a presbytery, not members of a particular church (G-6.0201). The Book of Order requires parity between minister and elder commissioners in terms of voice and vote at meetings (G-6.0302). This requirement for parity at meetings does not mean that there is parity in how ministers and elders can become members of a presbytery, or in their privileges or authority outside of presbytery meetings. A minister's continuing membership in a presbytery parallels an elder's continuing membership in a church, rather than an elder-commissioner's transitory status at a presbytery meeting.

Fair-Booth's contention that she is complaining about matters outside of the September 27, 2005 meeting does not change the analysis or outcome in this case. An individual who has been elected by a session to be that church's commissioner to presbytery meetings does not, by that act of election, have standing to complain about actions of the presbytery, whether such actions occur in a meeting or outside a meeting of presbytery. Enrolled elder-commissioner members of presbytery have standing to complain only about things that happen at a meeting at which they were enrolled. A particular church and its session interact with the presbytery in many ways, while an elder-commissioner acts on behalf of a church only at presbytery meetings.

Fair-Booth lacks standing to bring her Complaint because she was not enrolled at the September 27, 2005 meeting. This does not mean that there are no checks on the presbytery's actions. Sessions can bring remedial cases against presbyteries (D-6.0202a(3)); ministers of the Word and Sacrament can bring remedial cases against presbyteries (D-6.0202a(1)); and individuals can bring disciplinary cases against other individuals within a presbytery (D-10.0102a). In this case, Fair-Booth acknowledged that other actions have been taken by her and others to challenge actions by the Presbytery concerning the Church.

Presbyteries should be attentive to the importance of rolls and enrollment records. Fair-Booth correctly noted that there are many reasons why it is important to keep complete and accurate records, including, for example, tracking of information about membership in specific categories (G-9.0105b). For purposes of enrollment, this Presbytery uses an attendance form that is to be completed by elder-commissioners and ministers and dropped into a box in order to record attendance at a meeting. While this method may be sufficient for preparing an attendance record to be included in the minutes of the meeting, it may be less than optimal for tracking "enrollment" or membership for other purposes. As this case illustrates, presbyteries should be deliberate and careful to record the attendance of those present at presbytery meetings and should maintain an accessible record of those elder-commissioners who are enrolled at each meeting. Such records may be needed, for example, for voting by ballot during a meeting.

This Commission acknowledges that situations that come about as a result of long-term, chronic or systemic conflict, such as this Complaint, are difficult to address in a remedial case. In such situations, churches and presbyteries are urged to be pastoral and prayerful in their response to one another and to consider other means of resolving conflicts as an alternative, or preliminary step, to judicial process.

CONSENT ORDER

Arrival Statement

This remedial case comes before the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission (GAPJC or this Commission) as a matter of original jurisdiction to adjudicate a Complaint filed with the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) on July 7, 2006.

Jurisdictional Statement

This Commission is the appropriate body before which a complaint against an entity of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is heard. The Complainant is a session of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and has standing to file the Complaint. The Respondent, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC), appeared by an Answer and a Motion to Dismiss dated July 28, 2006.

Appearances

Gordon Fish, Amy McCracken, and James R. Tony, minister, (Tony) were Committee of Counsel for the Complainant. Stephen S. Grace and Justin M. Johnson were Committee of Counsel for the Respondent.

Background

This case involves the responsibilities of the ACC when questions of constitutional interpretation arising from governing bodies or individuals are delivered to the ACC by the Stated Clerk pursuant to G-13.0112. On February 14, 2006, Winfield R. Jones, minister (Jones) and M. Douglas Harper, Jr., minister (Harper), submitted certain questions (Jones/Harper Questions) to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly (Stated Clerk). On February 14, 2006, Tony also submitted certain questions (Tony Questions) to the Stated Clerk. The Jones/Harper Questions and the Tony Questions posed issues of constitutional interpretation for the 217th General Assembly (2006). The Jones/Harper Questions and the Tony Questions were timely filed with the Stated Clerk, and they were referred to the ACC, pursuant to G-13.0112d.

On or about March 13, 2006, the ACC formulated its advice concerning the Tony Questions. On March 29, 2006, Mark Tammen, the Associate Stated Clerk assigned to staff the ACC, advised Tony, and possibly Jones and/or Harper, of the ACC action. It is not clear from the record what advice was formulated by the ACC with respect to the Jones/Harper Questions. On April 3, 2006, Jones and Tony requested the ACC to reconsider its advice (Jones/Tony Letter). On April 5, 2006, Harper wrote the ACC (Harper Letter), noting that the ACC had not given advice on the Jones/Harper Questions and urged that the ACC was required to do so.

On April 10, 2006, the ACC went into executive session during a conference call meeting and had before it the Jones/Tony Letter and the Harper Letter.<sup>4</sup> On April 11, 2006, the Office of the Stated Clerk advised Tony, and perhaps Jones and Harper, that in the executive session portion of the April 10, 2006, meeting, the ACC had reviewed its original advice, as requested by the Jones/Tony Letter and the Harper Letter, and had declined to change or reconsider its original actions. The ACC subsequently reported to the General Assembly, but the date(s) of such report(s) is/are unclear from the record.

On July 7, 2006, the Session of Palos Park Presbyterian Community Church (Session) filed a remedial complaint with this Commission against the ACC. On July 28, 2006, the ACC filed its Answer and a Motion to Dismiss the Complaint. A hearing on the Motion to Dismiss was held on October 13, 2006, after which the GAPJC entered a Decision denying the Motion to Dismiss and setting the case for trial.

During the pre-trial conference, the case was submitted to mediation by consent of the parties. The matter was subsequently settled as a result of the mediation. The settlement agreement included a provision that the agreement be entered as “a final decision and order in this matter.” In accordance with this provision, the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission has adopted the order set forth below. The Commission thanks the mediator, Jane Fahey, minister, former moderator of the GAPJC, and the parties, for their diligent and tireless work in the mediation.

Consent Order

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that the following agreement of the parties is made the Consent Order of the GAPJC concerning the parties’ dispute:

The parties have agreed to conclude this case by agreement on the following issues and to the entry of their agreement as a final decision and order in this matter.

The Role of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution in Advising the General Assembly

With respect to all questions requiring an interpretation by the General Assembly of the Book of Order that have been referred to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC) by the Stated Clerk (G-13.0112c), the parties agree that the ACC may include in its advice (i.e., findings and recommendations under G-13.0112d) to the General Assembly, given no later than sixty days prior to the convening of the next session of the General Assembly (G-13.0112b), a single response that collectively addresses plural questions, along with other responses directed to individual questions. The parties further agree that where the ACC chooses to issue a collective response, such a collective response must provide a reasonable person with sufficient basis to understand how the findings and recommendations in its collective response address every question posed. The ACC acknowledges that the Constitution obligates it to provide advice to the General Assembly that a reasonable person would recognize is responsive to every question requiring a constitutional interpretation (G-13.0112d), and the ACC will comply with this responsibility. See Manual of the General Assembly Standing Rule A.5.a.

The General Assembly’s Open Meeting Policy

The ACC acknowledges that it is an entity subject to the provisions of the General Assembly Open Meeting Policy. The ACC agrees that it will secure advice from the Office of the Stated Clerk about whether the Open Meeting Policy permits it to close its meeting to discuss a particular subject and, that prior to closing its meeting to discuss that subject, it will announce the advice it has received and record in its official record the advice it received and the reason it is going into executive session. Whenever the ACC considers or acts upon subjects not enumerated in section 3(a) of the Open Meeting Policy, such as a request for reconsideration of prior advice, the Policy obliges the consideration or action to be done in open session.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly report this Consent Order to the General Assembly at its first meeting after receipt, that the General Assembly enter the full Consent Order upon its minutes.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Clerk of Session of Palos Park Community Presbyterian Church report this Consent Order to the Session at its next meeting, that the Session enter the full Consent Order upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Consent Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

Headnotes

- (1) Mootness. When the relief requested has been achieved, the case is moot. There is no point in proceeding in a case in which the findings and conclusions cannot affect the final outcome.
- (2) Role of Permanent Judicial Commission. This Commission is not an advisory body for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), regarding matters relating to the Constitution, but is charged with deciding cases or controversies.
- (3) Annotations. In addition to the Constitution, the law includes authoritative interpretations of the General Assembly and decisions of the GAPJC. Annotations found in the Book of Order: Annotated Edition are not authoritative. The annotation for Sheldon, et al. v. Presbytery of West Jersey contained in the Book of Order: Annotated Edition, 2006–2007, is a misstatement of the cited case.

Arrival Statement

This remedial case comes to the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission (GAPJC) on appeal by George R. Stewart (Stewart), minister, from a decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of the Sun (SPJC) to dismiss a remedial complaint against Mission Presbytery, which enrolled a candidate for minister of Word and Sacrament who was a self-acknowledged practicing lesbian woman living in a committed homosexual relationship with another woman.

Jurisdictional Statement

This Commission finds that it has jurisdiction, Stewart has standing to appeal, the appeal was properly and timely filed, and the appeal states one or more grounds for appeal under D-8.0105.

Appearances

Stewart was present and was represented by Marvin D. Snodgrass. Mission Presbytery, Respondent/Appellee (Presbytery), was represented by Thomas A. Forbes. Linda Tyler, member of the committee of counsel for Presbytery, was also present.

History

Presbytery held a stated meeting on October 10–12, 2005. In the call to that meeting, the Moderator stated:

An inquirer who is ready to be accepted as a candidate for ministry wishes to inform you that she is a lesbian and lives in a committed relationship. Although our Book of Order (G-14.0305a-i) requires those coming to be ordained to observe fidelity in marriage and chasteness in singleness, the Book of Order does not place this standard on those in the candidacy process.

At the stated meeting, Presbytery voted by a ballot vote to move the person from inquirer to candidacy on a vote of 169 in favor, 114 opposed, and none abstaining. Stewart, an honorably retired minister member, was present at the stated meeting of Presbytery on October 10–12, 2005. He initiated a remedial complaint against Presbytery dated January 9, 2006, in which the relief sought was “that the Synod of the Sun order Presbytery to remove [the candidate] from the roll of candidates for minister of the Word and Sacrament.”

The trial in the remedial case against Presbytery was heard by the SPJC on September 8, 2006. The SPJC, on a tie vote, failed to sustain the Complaint. This decision was appealed to the GAPJC by Notice of Appeal dated October 11, 2006.

GAPJC issued a Preliminary Order on October 20, 2006, accepting the case for hearing.

In the interim, the candidate by a letter dated November 17, 2006, to the Committee on Preparation for Ministry requested that her name be withdrawn from the roll of candidates. On March 3, 2007, Presbytery voted to remove her from the roll of candidates for minister of the Word and Sacrament. Following this action, Presbytery moved to dismiss the case on the grounds of mootness on March 6, 2007.

The Executive Committee of this Commission issued an Order for Dismissal dated March 23, 2007, on the grounds that the relief requested in Stewart’s Complaint dated January 9, 2006, has been granted and that there is no longer a case upon which relief can be granted as required by D-6.0301(3)e.

Stewart requested a hearing before the full Commission on March 28, 2007, on the Order for Dismissal. The Executive Committee of the GAPJC issued an Order for Hearing on April 4, 2007, limited to the issue of mootness. The hearing on the issue of mootness was heard by this Commission on May 4, 2007.

Decision

The issue before this Commission is whether Presbytery’s removal of the candidate’s name from the roll of candidates for minister of the Word and Sacrament rendered this matter moot. In other words, should this action continue even though the relief requested by Stewart has been achieved?

Stewart, in his complaint and during the trial, made numerous challenges to the action of Presbytery at its stated meeting on September 8, 2006. However, Stewart consistently maintained that, as relief, the candidate should be removed from the roll of candidates for minister of Word and Sacrament. This was achieved at the March 3, 2007, presbytery meeting. Upon a review of the record in this case, this Commission finds that no further relief can be granted. When the relief requested has been achieved, the case is moot.

In response to the Order for Dismissal, Stewart argues that the case was directed to the Presbytery, not to the person who was advanced to candidate status. The complaint was not made against the Presbytery in the abstract, but in the context of the Presbytery’s specific action to enroll a candidate. Because the enrollment has been withdrawn by the Presbytery, the subject of the action no longer exists. There is no point in proceeding in a case in which the findings and conclusions cannot affect the final outcome.

Stewart also argues that Presbytery committed a variety of errors in the timing, location, and conduct of its October, 2005, meeting. Again, these allegations are only relevant in the context of the specific action challenged.

Stewart further argues that there is a “need for guidance” because the statements to the Presbytery and the SPJC cast doubt on the Book of Order requirements for candidates. This Commission is not an advisory body for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) regarding matters relating to the Constitution, but is charged with deciding cases or controversies. However, this Commission notes with concern that the record shows that both the Presbytery and the SPJC appear to have relied on the Book of Order: Annotated Edition entry for the Sheldon, et al. v. Presbytery of West Jersey, Minutes, 2000, Part I, p. 589, case, rather than the language of the case itself. Such reliance was misplaced. The erroneous explanation given under G-14.0305d of the Book of Order: Annotated Edition to the Sheldon case provides “An inquirer may be received as a candidate even if not currently eligible for ordination because of G-6.0106b, but could not be ordained if found at the time for certification of readiness for ordination not to be in compliance.”

The annotation is a misstatement of the cited case. Sheldon concerned an inquirer being considered for candidacy who was a celibate gay man, and therefore eligible to become a candidate. Furthermore, the GAPJC specifically found in Sheldon that “... the evidence supports a determination that the candidate has not violated the standard of G-6.0106b.” Sheldon concludes by stating, “However, if the [Presbytery] should determine the Candidate to be ineligible for candidacy at some point in the future, the [Presbytery] should remove the Candidate’s name from the roll of candidates, as provided by G-14.0312.”

The correspondence in the record from the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly also cites Wier v. Second Presbyterian Church, Ft. Lauderdale, Minutes, Part I, 2002, p. 339, which is more relevant to this case: “If the governing body has reasonable cause for inquiry based on its knowledge of the life and character of the candidate, it has the positive obligation ... to uphold all the standards for ordination and installation.”

The task of this Commission is to consider and decide individual cases which come before it on the basis of the Constitution and the law of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). In addition to the Constitution, the law includes authoritative interpretations of the General Assembly and decisions of the GAPJC. Annotations found in the Book of Order: Annotated Edition can be helpful to the Church as it seeks to be faithful in its life and service; however, they are not authoritative. The assistance that annotations offer to the church is as a guide to the deliverances of the bodies that have been accorded authority in our Constitution. To the extent that the misstatement in the Book of Order: Annotated Edition was relied upon by the Committee on Preparation of Ministry, the Presbytery, and the SPJC, it misled each body.

Order

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that the Order of Dismissal dated March 23, 2007, of the Executive Committee of this Commission is affirmed.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of Mission Presbytery report this decision to the Presbytery at its first meeting after receipt, that the Presbytery enter the full decision upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the decision be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Synod of the Sun report this decision to the Synod at its first meeting after receipt, that the Synod enter the full decision upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the decision be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

DECISION AND ORDER

Remedial Case 218-05

Headnotes

(1) Fundamental Fairness. Principles of fundamental fairness include reasonable notice and an opportunity to be heard.

(2) Dissolution of a Pastoral Relationship by a Presbytery

(a) The Book of Order does not set forth a specific procedure to be followed when neither the congregation nor the pastor has requested dissolution, and no administrative commission has recommended or is empowered to act to dissolve the relationship.

(b) The matter of the dissolution of a pastoral relationship is so serious that ordinarily the pastor and the congregation should be given notice and an opportunity to be heard before a final vote to dissolve (G-11.01030).

Arrival Statement

This remedial case comes to the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission (GAPJC) on appeal filed by the Complainants/Appellants, Douglas J. Essinger-Hileman and Sandra D. Essinger-Hileman (Pastors) from a decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of the Covenant (SPJC) dated September 7, 2006.

Jurisdictional Statement

This Commission finds that it has jurisdiction, the Pastors have standing to appeal, the appeal was properly and timely filed, and the appeal states one or more of the grounds for appeal under D-8.0105.

Appearances

The Pastors appeared in person and without counsel. The Presbytery of Miami (Presbytery) was represented by W. McGregor Dixon.

History

The Pastors first met with the Committee on Ministry (COM) of the Presbytery of Miami in September, 2004. Although questions were raised about their call, the COM approved their service as co-pastors of the United Presbyterian Church of Belle Center (Church), and the congregation subsequently voted to extend the call on October 10, 2004. At its meeting on November 9, 2004, the Presbytery received the Pastors as members and approved their installation as co-pastors of the Church.

Having received new information regarding the background and previous service of the Pastors, the COM held a special meeting on November 13, 2004, at which it rescinded its approval of the call and established a task group to meet with the parties, also making arrangements for financial compensation to the Pastors in the event their starting date at the Church was delayed. The scheduled start date of the Pastors was delayed by one day while the task group accomplished its work. The Pastors began work at the Church on November 16, 2004, upon e-mail approval by the COM.

At its November 30, 2004, meeting, the COM received the report of its task group, “rescinded its rescission,” and approved several recommendations intended to facilitate healthy pastoral relationships, including: the creation of a “companion group” to begin meeting with the Pastors as they began their ministry at the Church, a testing and counseling process for the Pastors at the Presbytery’s expense, and the completion of a unit of Clinical Pastoral Education by one of the Pastors, also at the Presbytery’s expense.

The Pastors were officially installed on January 8, 2005. The “companion group” met with them on a number of occasions over the next several months, reporting regularly to the COM. The initial reports were positive, but at its meeting on May 31, 2005, the COM approved an expenditure for the Pastors’ participation in the crisis process at the Midwest Career Development Center. At its July 26, 2005, meeting, the COM adopted a recommendation to invite the Session of United Presbyterian Church of Belle Center (Session) to request the formation of an Administrative Commission (AC) to the Church.

At a special meeting of the Presbytery on August 23, 2005, an AC was appointed by the Presbytery. The COM, the Pastors and the Session concurred in the appointment of the AC. The AC was granted the authority to assume original jurisdiction of the Church, if necessary, but was not granted authority to dissolve the pastoral relationships of the Pastors.

The AC conducted a congregation-wide listening process, and met on several occasions in the fall of 2005, including a lengthy meeting with the Pastors on November 13, 2005. The Pastors were placed on administrative leave at their own request from November 29, 2005, through January 21, 2006, during which time the Pastors agreed “to refrain from all pastoral responsibilities including preaching, pastoral calls, and pastoral contact with the parishioners, attending all church meetings, services, and congregational functions,” according to the minutes of the AC. On December 22, 2005, the AC met with the Pastors, at which time the possibility of the dissolution of their pastoral relationships was discussed openly.

On January 5, 2006, the AC held a joint meeting with the Session to which the Pastors were specifically invited and at which the Pastors were present. The Pastors were informed of the Session’s intent to pursue the dissolution of their pastoral relationships at the annual meeting of the congregation. The AC/Session meeting continued with open discussion of two severance package options which had been presented to the Pastors prior to the meeting. The Pastors were afforded the opportunity to state their views regarding the Session’s intentions and to openly question members of the Session.

At the conclusion of the AC/Session meeting on January 5, 2006, the Session adopted a motion to recommend that the pastoral relationships be dissolved as part of the congregation’s annual meeting scheduled for January 15, 2006. On January 12, 2006, the Pastors filed a complaint with the SPJC alleging irregularities in the action of the Session regarding this recommendation. On January 13, 2006, a stay of enforcement was issued resulting in the cancellation of the January 15, 2006, annual meeting.

On January 15, 2006, the AC “met informally” with the congregation to “provide the congregation with pastoral care” and to “allow them [to] ask questions or relay feelings over the Stay of Enforcement,” according to the minutes of the AC.

At a special meeting on January 17, 2006, the COM approved a recommendation to the Presbytery that it call a meeting of the congregation for January 29, 2006, for the sole purpose of considering a request for dissolution of the pastoral relationships. The Pastors were notified that this motion would be presented to the Presbytery at its meeting on January 21, 2006.

On January 19, 2006, the Pastors filed two additional complaints with the SPJC against the Presbytery claiming that the AC violated terms of the Stay of Enforcement by meeting with Church members on January 15, 2006, and requesting that the COM be prevented from bringing any action to call a congregational meeting to dissolve the pastoral relationships between the Pastors and the Church.

The Pastors were not present at the January 21, 2006, meeting of the Presbytery, at which the COM presented its recommendation that the Presbytery call a congregational meeting at the Church for January 29, 2006, for the sole purpose of considering a request for dissolution of the pastoral relationships. A substitute motion from the floor to dissolve the pastoral relationships in accordance with G-11.0103o “effective at the close of this presbytery meeting,” was adopted in place of the COM recommendation.

On April 20, 2006, the Pastors filed a Complaint with the SPJC regarding the Presbytery’s action to dissolve the relationships. The SPJC heard the case and issued its decision on September 7, 2006, which was to dismiss the Complaint.

The Pastors filed an appeal to the GAPJC on October 24, 2006. Oral arguments were heard on May 4, 2007.

Specifications of Error

Specification of Error No. 1: The Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of the Covenant erred in that it manifested prejudice in the conduct of the case by limiting the Pastors’ closing argument but not limiting the Presbytery’s closing argument, by not answering all of the specifications of error raised by the Pastors, and by denying the Pastors’ lines of questioning in oral argument.

This specification of error is not sustained.

This Commission finds that the SPJC properly and adequately addressed the Pastors’ complaint.

Specification of Error No. 2: The Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of the Covenant erred by incorrectly interpreting the Constitution in its assertions that “the Book of Order fails to provide clear guidance with regard to a situation such as occurred in this case, where a motion to dissolve the pastoral relationships was made on the floor of the Presbytery, in the absence of the pastors,” and that the Book of Order’s requirements for due process are not applicable in this instance.

This specification of error is sustained in part and not sustained in part.

This commission concurs with the result reached by the SPJC, but not with its rationale. The SPJC was correct in affirming the action of the Presbytery to dissolve the pastoral relationships between the Pastors and the Church. The SPJC was unanimous in finding that the pastoral relationships in this instance were irretrievably broken and that the church's mission under the Word imperatively demanded dissolution in accordance with G-11.0103o. No remedial action or relief by any judicatory body will restore those relationships, and, therefore, the decision to dissolve the pastoral relationships should not be reversed. In this instance, there is a long history of efforts to address the difficulties in these pastoral relationships, and responsibility for these difficulties is shared by all parties. The Pastors admittedly knew that a process for dissolving the pastoral relationships had begun and matters concerning this process would be addressed at the January 21, 2006, Presbytery meeting. The Pastors made a decision not to attend the Presbytery meeting.

The docket for the Presbytery meeting included the COM's recommendation that a congregational meeting be called for the sole purpose of taking action on the Session's recommendation to dissolve the pastoral relationships, but did not state that the Presbytery would take action to dissolve the pastoral relationships at the Presbytery meeting. The Church's elder commissioner offered a substitute motion to dissolve the pastoral relationships in place of the motion to call a congregational meeting for the same purpose.

The Book of Order, G-14.0602 and G-14.0603, addresses procedures for the dissolution of a pastoral relationship when requested by the pastor and/or the congregation. Similarly, G-9.0505b(1) and (2) address dissolutions through an administrative commission. In this case, none of these procedures applied. The Book of Order does not set forth a specific procedure to be followed when neither the congregation nor the pastor has requested dissolution, and no administrative commission has recommended or is empowered to act to dissolve the relationship.

Under G-11.0103o, a presbytery has authority to dissolve a pastoral relationship "when it finds that the church's mission under the Word imperatively demands it." The Presbytery's authority to act on this basis is not at issue here.

Principles of fundamental fairness include reasonable notice and an opportunity to be heard (see Lewis v. Presbytery of New York City, Minutes, 1995, Part I, p. 133. Here, the Pastors had notice of the Presbytery meeting and could have spoken to the substitute motion if they had elected to attend the Presbytery meeting.

Under the unique circumstances of this case, it cannot be said that it was fundamentally unfair for the Presbytery to proceed with the substitute motion. It would have been a better practice, however, to provide for a fuller hearing of the issues before voting on the substitute motion, particularly when the motion at hand involved so serious a matter as the dissolution of pastoral relationships. Some means should have been devised by which the Pastors and the congregation were given notice and an opportunity to be heard before the final vote to dissolve was taken.

Specification of Error No. 3: The Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of the Covenant erred by incorrectly interpreting the Constitution in not answering the Pastors' assertion that the Administrative Commission did not follow the provisions of G-9.0505 of the Book of Order and therefore determining that these provisions are applicable at the discretion of the presbytery.

This specification of error is not sustained.

The provisions of G-9.0505 relate specifically to the decisions of administrative commissions. In the instant case, the AC had neither been granted the authority to dissolve the pastoral relationships nor had it decided to recommend to the Presbytery that the pastoral relationships be dissolved.

Order

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that the decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of the Covenant is affirmed.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Synod of the Covenant report this Decision and Order to the Synod at its first meeting after receipt, that the Synod enter the full Decision and Order upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of Miami Presbytery report this Decision and Order to the Presbytery at its first meeting after receipt, that the Presbytery enter the full Decision and Order upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

Headnotes

(1) Appeals in disciplinary cases: Appeals in disciplinary cases exist to review proceedings of lower governing bodies (D-13.0100) and not to retry issues of fact. The determinations of facts are made by the trier of fact, not the appellate body.

(2) Standard of review: Factual determinations made by a trier of fact have a presumption of correctness and are not to be disturbed on appeal unless they are “plainly wrong, without supporting evidence or manifestly unjust” (Chesterbrook Taiwanese Presbyterian Church v. National Capital Presbytery, Minutes, 2006, p.493, and Hardwick v. Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of North Carolina, Minutes, 1983, Part I, p. 45).

(3) Record of proceedings: While D-11.0601 does require an accurate verbatim recording of all testimony and oral proceedings at trial, it does not require such recording to be available during commission deliberations.

Arrival Statement

This disciplinary case came before the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission (GAPJC or this Commission) on an appeal filed by the Complainant/Appellant, Presbytery of Wyoming (Presbytery), from a decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of the Rocky Mountains (SPJC) dated November 17, 2006.

Jurisdictional Statement

On December 4, 2006, the Executive Committee of the GAPJC found that this Commission has jurisdiction; that the Presbytery has standing to file the appeal; that the appeal was properly and timely filed; and that the appeal states one or more of the grounds for appeal under D-13.0106b.

Appearances

The Presbytery was represented by Lynne Reade. Gordon R.J. King, minister, was represented by Elizabeth T. Dunning.

History

This disciplinary case began on May 31, 2003, with the filing of four charges by an Investigating Committee of the Presbytery against Mr. King. One of those charges became the subject matter of the instant case. On July 20, 2003, the SPJC accepted jurisdiction of the case on reference from the Presbytery (D-4.0100).

Previously, on July 16, 2002, Mr. King had been convicted in a Utah state criminal court for sexual abuse of a child and was incarcerated. This conviction comprised the substance of the original charge in this matter. Mr. King was unable to appear in person at an ecclesiastical trial because of his incarceration. Mr. King’s conviction was reversed and remanded in 2004 and Mr. King was released from prison. The release of Mr. King was communicated to the Investigating Committee in 2005. On April 21, 2006, the Presbytery Prosecuting Committee (Prosecuting Committee) filed a “Request for Action by the Synod PJC.”

On August 8, 2006, the Prosecuting Committee amended the original charge against Mr. King by replacing the charge based on his conviction with charges based on the specific alleged acts of sexual abuse of a minor child. The trial was held by the SPJC on October 16 and 17, 2006. The Prosecuting Committee presented no live witness testimony in support of its direct case at trial. In lieu of live testimony, the Prosecuting Committee attempted to enter the transcript of the Utah criminal prosecution into evidence. While the written transcript was not admitted into evidence, portions of that trial transcript were read into the record, including testimony of the alleged victim and other witnesses. The ruling of the SPJC Moderator, affirmed by the SPJC, was “to proceed to hear the testimony on the transcript” without admitting the full transcript as an exhibit into evidence. Additional responsive and rebuttal witnesses were present and testified on behalf of both parties including Mr. King and another person who was present when the alleged incident occurred.

This is an appeal filed by the Presbytery on November 27, 2006, from the SPJC Decision finding that Mr. King was not guilty. This Commission heard the arguments of the parties on July 27, 2007.

Specifications of Error

Appeals in disciplinary cases exist to review proceedings of lower governing bodies (D-13.0100) and not to retry issues of fact. The determinations of facts have already been made by the SPJC, the trier of fact in this case.

Factual determinations made by a trier of fact are accorded a presumption of correctness. These determinations are not to be disturbed on appeal unless they are “plainly wrong, without supporting evidence or manifestly unjust” (Chesterbrook Taiwanese Presbyterian Church v. National Capital Presbytery, Minutes, 2006, Part I, p. 493, and Hardwick v. Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of North Carolina, Minutes, 1983, Part I, p. 45). Those Specifications of Error addressing factual findings have been considered in light of this principle.

Specification of Error No. 1. The SPJC erred in constitutional interpretation

(1) by conducting the trial under outdated rules; and,

(2) by the Moderator stating on the record that the accused has “a right to be confronted by a witness.”

This specification of error is not sustained.

(1) An outdated Preamble to the Rules of Discipline (D-1.0101) was read at the beginning of the trial. The current Preamble was read later during the trial. It was acknowledged by both parties at oral argument that this did not affect the conduct or outcome of the case.

(2) The Moderator did state during the trial that the accused has “a right to be confronted by a witness.” Nevertheless, the Moderator’s statement did not preclude the Prosecuting Committee from using transcript testimony at the trial. (See discussion in Specification of Error No. 2.)

Specification of Error No. 2. The SPJC erred in refusing the Prosecuting Committee reasonable opportunity to present evidence, particularly by not receiving into evidence the entire criminal court transcript.

This specification of error is not sustained.

The entire transcript from Mr. King’s state criminal trial was not admitted into evidence in written or testimonial form; however, all the testimonial portions of the trial transcript requested by the Prosecuting Committee were read into the record in question and answer form. Therefore, the SPJC’s refusal to admit the written transcript into evidence did not prejudice the Prosecuting Committee’s case.

Specification of Error No. 3. The SPJC erred in receiving improper or declining to receive proper evidence or testimony.

(1) The Moderator and Clerk made reference to information received only by them and not shared with the rest of the SPJC.

(2) The criminal case was referred to as a “nullity” by the Moderator, other commissioners, and counsel for Mr. King.

This specification of error is not sustained.

(1) The record shows that the SPJC was made aware of all pertinent information at the time of the trial, including the existence of briefs regarding transcript evidence.

(2) The SPJC understood that, although Mr. King’s conviction had at the time been reversed, the trial testimony that was read into the record was not a “nullity.”

Specification of Error No. 4. The SPJC erred in that irregularities occurred in the proceedings, including

- (1) accepting a Reference from the Presbytery improperly;
- (2) not making evidence read into the record available to the SPJC during its deliberations; and,
- (3) allowing “wide-ranging” discussions during the trial.

This specification of error is not sustained.

(1) Reference of a case from a lower to a higher governing body is both possible and proper in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) as delineated in D-4.0000. The Presbytery itself requested Reference to the SPJC. While this step should have been documented, the Record does not show that the Reference was accepted irregularly (D-4.0201). The Prosecuting Committee asked the SPJC to proceed to trial and understood that the SPJC had accepted the Reference, as shown by the Prosecuting Committee’s “Request for Action by Synod PJC” dated April 21, 2006. The full SPJC and the parties proceeded to trial without objection, and thus must be presumed to have acquiesced in the acceptance of the Reference. Moreover, the Synod Decision states that the SPJC accepted jurisdiction on the PPJC’s request for Reference.

(2) While D-11.0601 does require an accurate verbatim recording of all testimony and oral proceedings at trial, it does not require such recording to be available during commission deliberations.

- (3) Regarding the “wide-ranging” discussions, the Record does not sustain the allegation of error (D-11.0304).

Decision

None of the Specifications of Error are sustained; therefore, the Decision of the Synod Permanent Judicial Commission is affirmed.

In Mr. King’s brief to the GAPJC, he questioned, for the first time, the Presbytery’s standing to appeal. He argued against the retroactive application of D-13.0102 and D-11.0502. [D-11.0502, as printed in the 2005–2007 Book of Order, conflicts with D-13.0102. This editorial error was corrected to conform to D-13.0102 by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution as published in the 2006 revision of the 2005–2007 Book of Order, in accordance with the Manual of the General Assembly, 2006, A.5.a and as reported to the 217th General Assembly (2006).] Because the Decision of the SPJC is being sustained on independently sufficient grounds, no determination has been made on the jurisdictional question raised by Mr. King.

This Commission recognizes the gravity of the allegations in this matter and the concerns raised in this case for the alleged victim and the rights of the accused (D-1.0101). This case illustrates the need for careful adherence to procedural safeguards as set forth in the Rules of Discipline in order that the rights and interests of all concerned are given due accord.

Order

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that the Decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of the Rocky Mountains is hereby affirmed.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of Wyoming report this Decision and Order to the Presbytery at its first meeting after receipt, that the Presbytery enter the full Decision and Order upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Synod of the Rocky Mountains report this Decision and Order to the Synod at its first meeting after receipt, that the Synod enter the full Decision and Order upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

ORDER REFUSING REQUEST FOR REFERENCE

Disciplinary Case 218-07

This Request for Reference dated December 22, 2006, was submitted to the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission (GAPJC) by the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of the Pacific (SPJC), under D-4.0100.

Whether to accept a reference from a lower body’s judicial commission is a matter of discretion to be exercised by the permanent judicial commission of the higher body. GAPJC considered the Request and hereby refuses to accept reference of this case. Responding to the reasons suggested by SPJC for the reference, GAPJC, under D-4.0203, states the following reasons for the refusal:

(1) A Matter of First Impression. While this may be a case of first impression as to an appeal by a prosecuting committee, now permitted under D-13.0102, it is not a matter of first impression as to the substance of the complaint. See, for example, Benton et al., v. Presbytery of Hudson River, Minutes, 2000, Part I, p. 586. The complexity of the issues invites consideration through the full judicial structure of the PC(USA).

(2) An Appeal Inevitable. Despite an assertion by SPJC that an appeal is inevitable, it is not for GAPJC to speculate whether a non-prevailing party at the SPJC level will appeal a decision of SPJC. Further, the judicial framework established by the Book of Order provides an intermediate level of appellate review at the synod level. Acceptance of this reference would deny the parties one level of review.

(3) Undue Expense and Delay. The expense and delay, if any, that may result from this refusal of reference is not likely to be extraordinary, as SPJC claims.

THEREFORE, this case is returned to the SPJC for action in accordance with D-4.0203.

DECISION AND ORDER
 Remedial Case 218-08

Headnotes

(1) Dismissal on Preliminary Questions: A permanent judicial commission must assume the truth of the facts alleged when considering the factual allegations in a statement of errors contained in a notice of appeal (D-8.0202e). A permanent judicial commission may not dismiss an appeal on jurisdictional grounds under D-8.0301 and D-8.0302 on the basis that the appellant has not “proven” the alleged errors.

(2) Hearing Required: A decision to sustain or deny alleged errors is only appropriate after a hearing under D-8.0400 on the merits of the errors alleged.

Arrival Statement

This remedial case came before the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission (GAPJC or this Commission) on an appeal filed by the Complainants/Appellants, Hyung K. Yun, Yun Soo Kim, Young Yoon Kim, Kwan Young Lee, Seung G. Ahn, In Bae Chun, Richard Yun, and Kee Ho Lim, (Yun et al.) from a decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of the Northeast (SPJC) dated December 7, 2006.

Jurisdictional Statement

This Commission finds that it has jurisdiction to hear this appeal. Yun et al. have standing to appeal; the appeal was properly and timely filed<sup>5</sup>; and the appeal states one or more grounds for appeal under D-8.0105.

Appearances

Dr. Hyung K. Yun and Mr. Seung G. Ahn, Committee of Counsel, and Elder John Lee appeared on behalf of Yun, et al. Mr. H.K. Dong represented the Session of Korean United Presbyterian Church of New Jersey (Session).

History

This case arose from a remedial complaint filed by several members of the Korean United Presbyterian Church of New Jersey with the Presbytery of Newark concerning matters leading up to and at a congregational meeting for the election of elders and deacons on October 2, 2005. The Permanent Judicial Commission of the Presbytery of Newark (PPJC) tried the case on April 4, 2006.

The PPJC entered a Decision containing the parties’ acknowledgment that certain irregularities identified in the Complaint had occurred and their agreement to six specific remedies recommended by the PPJC. Those persons elected at the congregational meeting were later ordained and installed and are presently serving their terms of office.

Yun et al. appealed the PPJC Decision to the SPJC. The Notice of Appeal stated, as grounds for the appeal, items enumerated in D-8.0105, specifically that: the PPJC erred in constitutional interpretation (D-8.0105g), there was injustice in the Decision (D-8.0105f), the Complainants were refused a reasonable opportunity to present evidence (D-8.0105b), there was manifestation of prejudice in the conduct of the case (D-8.0105e), and the PPJC hastened to a decision before the evidence or testimony was fully received (D-8.0105d). The Notice also included argument on the merits of each of those alleged errors.

The SPJC dismissed the appeal under D-8.0302c, holding that the Notice of Appeal did not state one or more of the grounds for appeal as set forth in D-8.0105. The SPJC Order of Dismissal also addressed the merits of the arguments of Yun et al. as set forth in their Notice of Appeal.

Yun et al. appealed the Order of Dismissal by the SPJC to this Commission, asserting that the SPJC had improperly dismissed the appeal. On July 27, 2007, the GAPJC heard oral argument on the issue of whether the SPJC appeal was properly dismissed based on a defective Notice of Appeal.

Specification of Error

Specification of Error: The Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of the Northeast erred in dismissing the case when it ruled that the Notice of Appeal did not state one or more of the grounds for appeal set forth in D-8.0105.

This specification of error is sustained.

The Notice of Appeal met all requirements of D-8.0202, including the requirement to state the errors of the PPJC that were the grounds for appeal to the SPJC. In its consideration of the preliminary questions, the SPJC was limited by D-8.0301 and D-8.0302 to a consideration of whether the Notice of Appeal met the requirements of D-8.0202e and D-8.0105. The SPJC erred because it considered the merits of the appeal prematurely and did not limit its decision at this preliminary stage to whether the Notice of Appeal was sufficient.

This Commission held in Daniel J. McKittrick v. The Session of West End Presbyterian Church of Albany, New York, Minutes, 2003, Part I, p. 273, that when a permanent judicial commission is considering a motion to dismiss a case for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, it must assume the truth of the facts alleged. The same standard must be applied when considering on a preliminary basis the factual allegations in a statement of errors contained in a notice of appeal

(D-8.0202e). A permanent judicial commission may not dismiss an appeal on jurisdictional grounds under D-8.0301 and D-8.0302 on the basis that the appellant has not “proven” the alleged errors. Rather, a decision to sustain or deny alleged errors is only appropriate after a hearing under D-8.0400 on the merits of the errors alleged.

Decision

This case is remanded to the SPJC for proceedings in accordance with D-8.0303 - .0307 and D-8.0400. In remanding this case to the SPJC, the parties and the SPJC are cautioned that the scope of the appeal is established by the Notice of Appeal of Yun et al. Therefore, the SPJC will need to consider whether the PPJC had jurisdiction to address errors alleged to have occurred before and at the congregational meeting, and whether the remedies requested in the appeal can be granted (see D-2.0202 and D-6.0200).

Order

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that this case is remanded for further proceedings before the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of the Northeast as provided above.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Clerk of Session of the Korean United Presbyterian Church of New Jersey report this Decision and Order to the Session at its next meeting, that the Session enter the full Decision and Order upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly (D-8.0404f).

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of Newark report this Decision and Order to the Presbytery at its first meeting after receipt, that the Presbytery enter the full Decision and Order upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Synod of the Northeast report this Decision and Order to the Synod at its first meeting after receipt, that the Synod enter the full Decision and Order upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

Concurring Opinion

I concur in all respects with the majority decision in this case. However, it bears noting that the record in this case, as well as the exchange during the GAPJC hearing, reveal the lack of a common understanding among the parties of the appropriate issues to address at various stages of the appeal. Unfortunately, the SPJC’s dismissal deepened this misunderstanding. Rather than confining itself to the question of whether the Notice of Appeal stated one or more grounds for appeal as set forth in D-8.0105, the SPJC entertained issues that would have been addressed in a hearing on the merits. This decision, which was likely drafted with helpful intentions, only served to create further confusion.

In a denomination where we value our diversity, we must undertake the challenges presented when we have different cultures and different languages into which Presbyterian “culture” and polity are being translated. I therefore urge governing bodies to appreciate their critical role as “translator” of the Book of Order and its implementation at any given stage in cases such as these.

DECISION AND ORDER

Headnotes

(1) Authoritative Interpretation Did Not Change any Ordination Standard: While the General Assembly and the GAPJC may interpret ordination standards set forth in the Book of Confessions and the Form of Government, the Authoritative Interpretation of the Theological Task on the Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church adopted by the 217th General Assembly did not (and constitutionally could not) change any ordination standard, including the requirements set forth in G-6.0106b.

(2) Statements of “Essentials of Reformed Faith and Polity”: Attempts by governing bodies that ordain and install officers to adopt resolutions, statements or policies that paraphrase or restate provisions of the Book of Order and/or declare them as “essentials of Reformed faith and polity” are confusing and unnecessary, and are themselves an obstruction to constitutional governance in violation of G-6.0108a.

(3) Rationale for Decisions not Required but Recommended: While the Constitution does not require that a permanent judicial commission provide a rationale for every irregularity or delinquency assigned in the complaint when rendering a decision (D-7.0402), this Commission recommends that permanent judicial commissions provide enough explanation for the church to understand the reasons for decisions and be guided accordingly.

Arrival Statement

This remedial case came before the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission (GAPJC or this Commission) on an appeal filed by the Complainants-Appellants, Barlow J. Buescher, Dave R. Brown, Mary D. McGonigal, Jeanne Howell, Serena Sullivan, Eileen Dunn, Wayne H. Keller, Don E. Keller, Dwight W. Whipple, David R. Kegley, F. Mark Dowdy, Brian Heath, R. Sidney Cloud, Isaac H. Jung, Irene Van Arnam, Michael Baugh, Chuck Jenson, Donna Lee, and the Session of Lakewood Presbyterian Church, (Buescher, et al.) from a decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of Alaska-Northwest (SPJC) dated March 30, 2007.

Jurisdictional Statement

This Commission finds that it has jurisdiction, that Buescher, et al., have standing to file the appeal, that the appeal was properly and timely filed and that the appeal states one or more of the grounds for appeal required under D-8.0105.

Appearances

Buescher, et al., Complainants-Appellants were represented by Doug Nave and Dwight Whipple. The Presbytery of Olympia (Presbytery), Respondent-Appellee, was represented by William Holt and Pamela Anderson.

History

At a meeting of the Presbytery held on September 21, 2006, at Church of the Indian Fellowship in Tacoma, Washington, the Presbytery adopted the following Resolution:

We hereby declare that in our discernment of the movement of the Holy Spirit, every mandate of the Book of Order (2005-2007) is an essential of reformed polity. Therefore, any violation of a mandate of the Book of Order (2005-2007) constitutes a failure to adhere to the essentials of reformed polity and thus presents a bar to ordination and installation.

Following this action, Buescher, et al., filed a Complaint with the SPJC seeking remedial relief.

After a hearing held on March 20, 2007, in Seattle, Washington, in which both parties were represented by counsel, the SPJC entered its Decision affirming the action of the Presbytery.

Buescher, et al., timely filed a Notice of Appeal dated March 20, 2007, with this Commission. On May 25, 2007, this Commission entered its Preliminary Order and Order for Hearing and on August 6, 2007, entered its Amended Order for Hearing setting a hearing on this matter at this Commission’s February, 2008, meeting. The appeal was heard by the GAPJC on February 8, 2008.

Specifications of Error

Specification of Error No. 1. The SPJC erred in allowing the Resolution to stand because it voids the presbytery’s responsibility to conduct meaningful examinations.

This specification of error is sustained.

Specification of Error No. 2. The SPJC erred in allowing the Resolution to stand because it violates individuals' freedom of conscience and presbytery's duty to show mutual forbearance in non-essentials.

This specification of error is sustained.

Specification of Error No. 3. The SPJC erred in allowing the Resolution to stand because it violates Olympia Presbytery's connectional responsibilities as part of the larger church.

This specification of error is sustained.

Specification of Error No. 4. The SPJC erred in applying an improper standard of review.

This specification of error is sustained.

Specification of Error No. 5. The SPJC erred by committing other procedural irregularities and injustice by failure to engage in transparent and reasoned decision making and by disregarding the immediate and harmful effects of the Resolution.

This specification of error is sustained.

Decision

The record on appeal and statements of counsel at oral argument suggest that the Presbytery adopted the Resolution in response to concerns among the churches and members of the Presbytery about the implementation of the Authoritative Interpretation of the Theological Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church (Authoritative Interpretation) adopted by the 217th General Assembly (2006) (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 514–515). The Presbytery submitted that it desired to provide advice to potential candidates for the office of minister of the Word and Sacrament as to what the Presbytery would consider to be “essential” in the event the process set forth in the Authoritative Interpretation resulted in “scruples” by such candidates, as contemplated by the Authoritative Interpretation.

The Authoritative Interpretation provides that “The Book of Confessions and the Form of Government of the Book of Order set forth the scriptural and constitutional standards for ordination and installation.” The Authoritative Interpretation clarifies procedures for applying those standards. G-6.0108b provides that the “decision as to whether a person has departed from essentials of Reformed faith and polity is made initially by the individual concerned but ultimately becomes the responsibility of the governing body in which he or she serves.”

The question herein is whether the Resolution is constitutional. This Commission reiterates the rationale contained in a case decided contemporaneously herewith, Bush, et al., v. the Presbytery of Pittsburgh (218-10, February 11, 2008):

The Authoritative Interpretation correctly states that the standards for ordination of officers in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) are set forth in the Book of Confessions and the Form of Government. Section “b” of the Authoritative Interpretation states that “these standards are determined by the whole church, after the careful study of Scripture and theology, solely by the constitutional process of approval by the General Assembly with the approval of the presbyteries” (emphasis added). The constitutional process for amending ordination standards (or any other provision of the Constitution) is defined in Chapter 18 of the Form of Government. While the General Assembly and the GAPJC may interpret these standards, the Authoritative Interpretation did not (and constitutionally could not) change any ordination standard, including the requirements set forth in G-6.0106b. Similarly, no lower governing body can constitutionally define, diminish, augment or modify standards for ordination and installation of church officers (footnote omitted).

[A]ttempts by governing bodies that ordain and install officers to adopt resolutions, statements or policies that paraphrase or restate provisions of the Book of Order and/or declare them as “essentials of Reformed faith and polity” are confusing and unnecessary. G-6.0108a sets forth standards that apply to the whole church. These standards are binding on and must be followed by all governing bodies, church officers and candidates for church office. Adopting statements about mandatory provisions of the Book of Order for ordination and installation of officers falsely implies that other governing bodies might not be similarly bound; that is, that they might choose to restate or interpret the provisions differently, fail to adopt such statements, or possess some flexibility with respect to such provisions. Restatements of the Book of Order, in whatever form they are adopted, are themselves an obstruction to the same standard of constitutional governance no less than attempts to depart from mandatory provisions.

In allowing the Resolution to stand, the SPJC disregarded such immediate and harmful effects as those described above.

Therefore, this Commission finds the Resolution to be unconstitutional.

If there were concerns in the Presbytery about the Authoritative Interpretation and its impact on freedom of conscience, Bush clarifies the issue:

While G-1.0301 permits broad freedom of conscience for members of the church, “in becoming a candidate or officer of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) one chooses to exercise freedom of conscience within certain bounds” (G-6.0108b). G-6.0108a defines the limits of this freedom of conscience for ordained church officers. It first states the requirement that all church officers adhere to the essentials of Reformed faith and polity as expressed in the Book of Confessions and the Form of Government (footnote omitted). It next assures freedom of conscience, but only with respect to the interpretation of Scripture. Even then, freedom of conscience is permitted only to the extent that it (a) is not a serious departure from the essential standards of Reformed faith and polity, (b) does not infringe on the rights and views of others, and (c) does not obstruct the constitutional governance of the church.

By declaring in advance the mandates to be “essentials,” and by establishing in advance the mandates to be an absolute bar to ordination and installation, the Presbytery violated G-6.0108 and the Authoritative Interpretation.<sup>6</sup> As was stated in the 1927 Report of the Special Commission of 1925 (the “Swearingen Commission Report”) Presbyterian Church in the United States of America (Minutes, PCUSA, 1927, Part I, pp. 78–79):

One fact often overlooked is that by the Act of 1729, the decision as to essential and necessary articles was to be in specific cases. It was no general authority that might be stated in exact language and applied rigidly to every case without distinction. It was an authority somewhat undefined, to be invoked in each particular instance. . . . It was clearly the intention that this decision as to essential and necessary articles was to be made after the candidate had been presented and had declared his [or her] beliefs and stated his [or her] motives personally, and after the examining body. . . . had full opportunity to judge the man himself [or woman, herself] as well as abstract questions of doctrine.

The SPJC’s decision did not make clear what standard of review it used to determine the constitutionality of the Resolution, but simply stated that the Resolution “does not preclude Olympia Presbytery from conducting a meaningful examination to assess the fitness of individual candidates on a case-by-case basis. . . .” Without a clear articulation by the SPJC of its rationale, this Commission is unable to determine the SPJC’s standard of review. Given the foregoing rationale as to the other specifications of error, this Commission concludes that the SPJC’s review was constitutionally flawed.

Finally, while the Constitution does not require that a permanent judicial commission provide a rationale for every irregularity or delinquency assigned in the complaint when rendering a decision (D-7.0402), this Commission recommends that permanent judicial commissions provide enough explanation for the church to understand the reasons for decisions and be guided accordingly.

Order

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that the Decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of Alaska-Northwest be reversed and that the Resolution of the Presbytery of Olympia is void and of no further force or effect.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of Olympia report this decision to the Presbytery at its first meeting after receipt, that the Presbytery enter the full decision upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the decision be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Synod of Alaska-Northwest report this decision to the Synod at its first meeting after receipt, that the Synod enter the full decision upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the decision be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

DECISION AND ORDER

Headnotes

(1) No Departures from “Fidelity and Chastity” Requirement: Candidates and examining bodies must follow G-6.0108 in reaching determinations as to whether the candidates for ordination and/or installation have departed from essentials of Reformed faith and polity. Such determinations do not rest on distinguishing “belief” and “behavior,” and do not permit departure from the “fidelity and chastity” requirement found in G-6.0106b.

(2) Examinations of Candidates: Ordaining and installing bodies must examine candidates for ordination and/or installation individually. The examining body is best suited to make decisions about the candidate’s fitness for office, and factual determinations by examining bodies are entitled to deference by higher governing bodies in any review process.

(3) Statements of “Essentials of Reformed Faith and Polity”: Attempts by governing bodies that ordain and install officers to adopt resolutions, statements or policies that paraphrase or restate provisions of the Book of Order and/or declare them as “essentials of Reformed faith and polity” are confusing and unnecessary; and are themselves an obstruction to constitutional governance in violation of G-6.0108a.

Arrival Statement

This remedial case comes before the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission (GAPJC) on appeal filed by the Complainants/Appellants, Randall Bush, Wayne Peck, and the Session of East Liberty Presbyterian Church, from a Decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of the Trinity (SPJC) dated May 16, 2007.

Jurisdictional Statement

This Commission finds that it has jurisdiction, that Complainants/Appellants have standing to appeal, the appeal was properly and timely filed, and the appeal states one or more grounds for appeal under D-8.0105.

Appearances

Randall Bush, Wayne Peck, and the Session of East Liberty Presbyterian Church (Bush, et al.) were represented by Stephen Paschall and Randall Bush. The Presbytery of Pittsburgh (Presbytery) was represented by Susan Dobbins.

History

The 217th General Assembly adopted, with amendment, the recommendations of the Theological Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church (PUP Task Force). The fifth and final of those recommendations sets forth an authoritative interpretation of G-6.0108 (Authoritative Interpretation) which is thereby binding on the church. The Authoritative Interpretation (which is recommendation 5 of the PUP Report) states:<sup>7</sup>

a. The Book of Confessions and the Form of Government of the Book of Order set forth the scriptural and constitutional standards for ordination and installation.

b. These standards are determined by the whole church, after the careful study of Scripture and theology, solely by the constitutional process of approval by the General Assembly with the approval of the presbyteries. These standards may be interpreted by the General Assembly and its Permanent Judicial Commission.

c. Ordaining and installing bodies, acting as corporate expressions of the church, have the responsibility to determine their membership by applying these standards to those elected to office. These determinations include:

(1) Whether a candidate being examined for ordination and/or installation as elder, deacon, or minister of Word and Sacrament has departed from scriptural and constitutional standards for fitness for office,

(2) Whether any departure constitutes a failure to adhere to the essentials of Reformed faith and polity under G-6.0108 of the Book of Order, thus barring the candidate from ordination and/or installation.

d. Whether the examination and ordination and installation decision comply with the Constitution of the PC(USA), and whether the ordaining/installing body has conducted its examination reasonably, responsibly, prayerfully, and deliberately in deciding to ordain a candidate for church office is subject to review by higher governing bodies.

e. All parties should endeavor to outdo one another in honoring one another’s decisions, according the presumption of wisdom to ordaining/installing bodies in examining candidates and to the General Assembly, with presbyteries’ approval, in setting standards. (217th General Assembly (2006); Minutes, Part I, pp. 514–515).

Following this action by the General Assembly, several sessions in the Presbytery proposed a resolution (Resolution) to the Presbytery seeking to “clarify” the Authoritative Interpretation. The Resolution states:

04 ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON CHURCH POLITY

In its discernment of the essentials of Reformed polity and for the sake of the peace, unity, and purity of the church, Pittsburgh Presbytery [Resolution, part 1]:

Adopts the principle that compliance with the standards for ordination approved by the Presbyterian Church (USA) in the Book of Order is an essential of Reformed polity. Therefore, any departure from the standards of ordination expressed in the Book of Order will bar a candidate from ordination and/or installation by this governing body. Provisions of the Book of Order are signified as being standards by use of the term “shall,” “is/are to be,” “requirement” or equivalent expression [Resolution, part 2]; and

Resolves that no exceptions to the requirement that all Ministers of Word and Sacrament must “live either in fidelity within the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman or in chastity in singleness” (Book of Order, G-6.0106b) will be allowed within the jurisdiction of this Presbytery [Resolution, part 3]; and Resolves that Ministers of Word and Sacrament shall be prohibited from conducting same-sex marriages within the jurisdiction of this Presbytery [Resolution, part 4].

The Resolution was first reviewed by the Presbytery Council at a meeting on August 22, 2006. A motion was made to refer the Resolution to the Presbytery’s Committee on Ministry. The motion failed, and the decision was made to present the Resolution to the full Presbytery at the September meeting, with a final vote scheduled for the October Presbytery meeting. The Resolution was read and debated at the September 7, 2006 Presbytery meeting. Again a motion to refer to the Committees on Ministry and Preparation for Ministry failed, and further action was deferred to the October meeting. The Resolution was again considered at the Presbytery meeting of October 12, 2006. At the conclusion of debate, following prayer, the Resolution was adopted on a paper ballot vote of 148 to 105.

On November 22, 2006, Bush, et al., filed a “Complaint of an Irregularity and a Request for Stay of Enforcement” with the Synod of the Trinity. SPJC issued a Stay of Enforcement on November 26, 2006. Trial before the SPJC was held on May 14 and 15, 2007, and the SPJC Decision and Order was issued on May 16, 2007. The SPJC sustained the first three irregularities alleged in the Complaint, but struck only part 2 of the Resolution.

By notice dated June 29, 2007, received July 5, 2007, Bush, et al., appealed to this Commission. Bush, et al., did not appeal from the final Order of the SPJC, but alleged irregularities in the SPJC Decision, contending that the SPJC erred in constitutional interpretation.

GAPJC issued a Preliminary Order on July 30, 2007, and the matter was set for a hearing on February 8, 2008. On October 12, 2007, counsel for the Presbytery filed a “Motion for Dismissal, or in the Alternative, Substitution of Real Party in Interest” (Motion). The Motion alleged that the Appellants had prevailed before the SPJC and therefore the Presbytery had no further interest or obligation in the matter. On October 22, 2007, the GAPJC Executive Committee amended its Order for Hearing, stating that the Motion would be heard at the February session of the GAPJC. On November 11, 2007, the full GAPJC reconsidered the Order for Hearing, denied the Motion, and revised the briefing schedule on the main matter. The appeal was heard by the GAPJC on February 8, 2008.

Specifications of Error and Decision

Specification of Error No. 1. The SPJC erred in constitutional interpretation by failing to place faith and practice (belief and behavior) on an “equal footing.”

This specification of error is not sustained.

The Authoritative Interpretation includes a rationale section which was not adopted by the General Assembly. The rationale describes G-6.0106b as a “manner of life standard” and states that the Authoritative Interpretation “requires ordaining and installing bodies to examine carefully both the doctrinal views and the manner of life of those elected to office.” It is up to the examining body to determine whether a candidate’s actions and beliefs, including with respect to G-6.0106b, are a serious departure from the essentials of Reformed faith and polity, or are such that they infringe on the rights and views of others, or would obstruct the constitutional governance of the church (G-6.0108a). The PUP Task Force Report in its rationale for the Authoritative Interpretation stated: “Section G-6.0108 puts ‘faith and polity’—belief and behavior—on an equal footing, as they were in 1729, when scruples were permitted in matters of ‘doctrine, discipline and government.’” (Minutes of the 217th General Assembly (2006), Part I, p. 516) The rationale for the Authoritative Interpretation recognizes that faith encompasses behavior in that faith is demonstrated by action.

As finally adopted by the General Assembly, the Authoritative Interpretation does not equate “polity” with “behavior.” Nevertheless, the church has required those who aspire to ordained office to conform their actions, though not necessarily their beliefs or opinions, to certain standards, in those contexts in which the church has deemed conformity to be necessary or essential. Section G-6.0106b contains a provision where conformity is required by church officers “to live either in fidelity within the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman (W-4.9001), or in chastity in singleness.” The church has decided to single out this particular manner of life standard and require churchwide conformity to it for all ordained church officers. Therefore, the specific “fidelity and chastity” standard in G-6.0106b stands in contrast to the provisions of G-6.0106a, including those concerning faith, discipleship, belief and manner of life in the church and the world, and also the remainder of G-6.0106b. The candidate and examining body must follow G-6.0108 in reaching a determination as to whether the candidate for office has departed from essentials of Reformed faith and polity, but that determination does not rest on distinguishing “belief” and “behavior,” and does not permit departure from the “fidelity and chastity” requirement found in G-6.0106b. Accordingly that portion of SPJC decision that stated: “no presbytery may grant an exception to any mandatory church wide behavioral ordination standard,” was correct. We agree with the SPJC that, “Under our polity, violations of behavioral standards are to be addressed through repentance and reconciliation, not by exception or exemption. The freedom of conscience granted in G-6.0108 allows candidates to express disagreement with the wording or meaning of provisions of the constitution, but does not permit disobedience to those behavioral standards.” The fidelity and chastity provision may only be changed by a constitutional amendment. Until that occurs, individual candidates, officers, examining and governing bodies must adhere to it.

Specification of Error No. 2. The SPJC erred in constitutional interpretation by establishing mandates of the Book of Order as “Essentials” of Reformed polity.

This specification of error is sustained in part and not sustained in part.

The Authoritative Interpretation correctly states that the standards for ordination of officers in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) are set forth in the Book of Confessions and the Form of Government. Section “b” of the Authoritative Interpretation states that “these standards are determined by the whole church, after the careful study of Scripture and theology, solely by the constitutional process of approval by the General Assembly with the approval of the presbyteries” (emphasis added). The constitutional process for amending ordination standards (or any other provision of the Constitution) is defined in Chapter 18 of the Form of Government. While the General Assembly and the GAPJC may interpret these standards, the Authoritative Interpretation did not (and constitutionally could not) change any ordination standard, including the requirements set forth in G-6.0106b. Similarly, no lower governing body can constitutionally define, diminish, augment or modify standards for ordination and installation of church officers.<sup>8</sup>

Although G-1.0301 permits broad freedom of conscience for members of the church, “in becoming a candidate or officer of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) one chooses to exercise freedom of conscience within certain bounds” (G-6.0108b). G-6.0108a defines the limits of this freedom of conscience for ordained church officers. It first states the requirement that all church officers adhere to the essentials of Reformed faith and polity as expressed in The Book of Confessions and the Form of Government.<sup>9</sup> It next assures freedom of conscience, but only with respect to the interpretation of Scripture. Even then, freedom of conscience is permitted only to the extent that it (a) is not a serious departure from the essential standards of Reformed faith and polity, (b) does not infringe on the rights and views of others, and (c) does not obstruct the constitutional governance of the church.

Ordaining bodies have the right and responsibility to determine whether or not any “scruples” declared by candidates for ordination and/or installation constitute serious departures from our system of doctrine, government, or discipline; to what extent the rights and views of others might be infringed upon by those departures; and whether those departures obstruct the constitutional governance of the church. At the same time, attempts by governing bodies that ordain and install officers to adopt resolutions, statements or policies that paraphrase or restate provisions of the Book of Order and/or declare them as “essentials of Reformed faith and polity” are confusing and unnecessary. G-6.0108a sets forth standards that apply to the whole church. These standards are binding on and must be followed by all governing bodies, church officers and candidates for church office. Adopting statements about mandatory provisions of the Book of Order for ordination and installation of officers falsely implies that other governing bodies might not be similarly bound; that is, that they might choose to restate or interpret the provisions differently, fail to adopt such statements, or possess some flexibility with respect to such provisions. Restatements of the Book of Order, in whatever form they are adopted, are themselves an obstruction to the same standard of constitutional governance no less than attempts to depart from mandatory provisions.

The Presbytery’s resolution would define the “essentials” of Reformed faith and polity by restating the Presbytery’s intention to enforce mandatory provisions of the Book of Order, when it has no authority to do otherwise. At the same time, declaring “essentials” outside of the context of the examination of a candidate for ordained office is inappropriate. As was stated in the 1927 Report of the Special Commission of 1925 (Swearingen Commission Report; Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, Minutes, PCUSA, 1927, Part I, pp. 78–79):

One fact often overlooked is that by the act of 1729, the decision as to essential and necessary articles was to be in specific cases. It was no general authority that might be stated in exact language and applied rigidly to every case without distinction. It was an authority somewhat undefined, to be invoked in each particular instance. . . . It was clearly the intention that this decision as to essential and necessary articles was to be made after the candidate had been presented and had declared his [or her] beliefs and stated his [or her] motives personally, and after the examining body...had full opportunity to judge the man himself [or woman herself] as well as abstract questions of doctrine.

For these reasons, the Resolution is unconstitutional and in error. It is not permissible for a presbytery or a session to define “essentials of Reformed faith and polity” outside of the examination of any candidate for office. Such a determination must be made only in the context of a specific examination of an individual candidate.

It would be an obstruction of constitutional governance to permit examining bodies to ignore or waive a specific standard that has been adopted by the whole church, such as the “fidelity and chastity” portion of G-6.0106b, or any other similarly specific provision. On the other hand, the broad reference in G-6.0106b to “any practice which the confessions call sin” puts the responsibility first on the candidate and then on the examining body to determine whether a departure is a failure to adhere to the essentials of Reformed faith and polity and the remainder of G-6.0108(a) with respect to freedom of conscience. The ordaining body must examine the candidate individually. The examining body is best suited to make decisions about the candidate’s fitness for office, and factual determinations by examining bodies are entitled to deference by higher governing bodies in any review process.

The SPJC’s treatment of part 3 of the Presbytery’s Resolution is unclear. This Commission concludes that since SPJC did not explicitly “void” part 3 of the Resolution (as it did part 2 of the Resolution), part 3 of the Resolution was not invalidated by SPJC’s Decision.

The SPJC correctly stated that the fidelity and chastity provision of G-6.0106b is a mandatory standard that cannot be waived. To the extent that the SPJC Decision appears to leave in force part 3 of the Resolution, Specification of Error 2 is sustained. Presbyteries do not have the authority to restate or define such standards.

Similarly, we note that part 4 of the Resolution appears to suffer from the same infirmity as part 3 of the Resolution; however, that issue was not briefed or argued to this Commission. Thus, the GAPJC makes no decision as to part 4 of the Resolution. We note, additionally, that if the Presbytery’s intent was to provide a “summary of civil law intended to advise new clergy about the legal context of their ministry,” as suggested in the SPJC Decision, it was an improper attempt by an ecclesiastical body to give civil legal advice.

Order

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that all portions of the resolution adopted by the Presbytery of Pittsburgh on October 12, 2006, which were before this Commission are void.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of Pittsburgh report this Decision to the Presbytery at its first meeting after receipt, that the Presbytery enter the full decision upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Decision be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Synod of the Trinity report this Decision to the Synod at its first meeting after receipt, that the Synod enter the full decision upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Decision be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

Headnotes

(1) Obligation of Permanent Judicial Commissions: Permanent judicial commissions are not required by the Book of Order to instruct parties to engage in non-judicial dispute resolution.

(2) The Adopting Act of 1729: This act provides significant guidance for the application and interpretation of G-6.0108a & b as to essentials.

Arrival Statement

This remedial case comes to the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission (GAPJC or this Commission) on appeal filed by the Respondent-Appellant, Presbytery of Washington (Presbytery), from a Decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of the Trinity (SPJC) dated August 14, 2007.

Jurisdictional Statement

This Commission finds that it has jurisdiction, that the Presbytery has standing to file the appeal, that the appeal was properly and timely filed, and that the appeal states one or more of the grounds for appeal under D-8.0105.

Appearances

The Session of First Presbyterian Church of Washington, 1793, et al. (Washington, et al.), Complainant-Appellee, was represented by Thomas O. Vreeland and David A. Leslie. The Presbytery, Respondent-Appellant, was represented by Rebecca A. Bowman, Craig Kephart, and Barry Sweet.

History

This case arises from actions taken by the Presbytery at its stated meeting of March 13, 2007, in adopting two documents. The first one, Biblical Standards for Christian Leaders in Washington Presbytery (BSCL), deals with standards for personal conduct for church leaders and was derived from certain New Testament passages. The second document, Resolution A, deals with a declaration of “essentials of Reformed polity,” which the Presbytery intended as a guide to evaluate candidates for ordination and/or installation to any ordained office.

The following is the text of Resolution A as adopted by the Presbytery:

WHEREAS the 217th General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (USA) adopted an Authoritative Interpretation of section G-6.0108 of the Book of Order, declaring that ordaining and installing bodies of the Church have the responsibility to examine candidates for ordination as ministers, elders and deacons to determine:

“Whether a candidate being examined for ordination and/or installation as elder deacon, or Minister of Word and Sacrament has departed from scriptural and constitutional standards for fitness for office”; and,

“Whether any departure constitutes a failure to adhere to the essentials of Reformed faith and polity under G-6.0108 of the Book of Order, thus barring the candidate from ordination and/or installation”; and,

WHEREAS the Presbytery of Washington is such an ordaining and installing body; and,

WHEREAS the aforementioned Authoritative Interpretation has caused considerable confusion within and without the church regarding what, precisely, constitutes the “essentials of Reformed faith and polity”;

THEREFORE, for the sake of the peace, unity, and purity of the church, the Presbytery of Washington adopts and shall function according to the following resolution: *It is an essential of Reformed polity that the Presbytery of Washington comply with and adhere to the standards for ordination adopted by the whole church and expressed in the Book of Order. Therefore, any departure from ordination standards mandated* in the Book of Order, unless repented of, shall bar a candidate from ordination and/or installation by the Presbytery of Washington.* (Italics in original text)

[*ordination standards mandated in the Book of Order include those instructions designated by the terms “shall,” “is/are to be,” “requirement” or “equivalent expression.”]

These two resolutions reflect “uneasiness” among some congregations and members of the Presbytery because of the action of the 217th General Assembly (2006) (GA) in adopting the Report of the Theological Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church.

The Committee on Ministry (COM) received the BSCL document at its meeting on November 29, 2006, and approved the presentation of BSCL to the Presbytery for a first reading at the January 20, 2007, Presbytery meeting. At that Presbytery meeting, COM presented BSCL for first reading, noting that it was “intended to clarify our expectations, as a presbytery, for those who lead among us,” and invited the Presbytery to discuss and vote on the document at its next meeting in March. At this same Presbytery meeting, Resolution A was received from Bentleyville Presbyterian Church and was referred by the Presbytery Moderator to the COM. The text of Resolution A was included in the minutes of the Presbytery meeting.

COM received and discussed Resolution A at its meeting on February 28, 2007. The motion to recommend its adoption to the Presbytery failed by a vote of four (4) in favor and seven (7) opposed.

The subsequent procedural history of Resolution A is somewhat murky. According to trial testimony, a summary of the March Presbytery meeting minutes was distributed with the docket for the May 2007 meeting; this summary did not refer to action on Resolution A.

A set of minutes of the March 13, 2007, meeting made available to participants at the pre-trial conference on July 6, 2007, did not refer to the passage of Resolution A. This set of minutes notes that Resolution A was read, but there is no record of discussion or action taken.

By July 9, 2007, a verified set of minutes of the March meeting was distributed. These minutes stated, “At the ruling of the Moderator, the Bentleyville Resolution A was brought back to the floor after no recommendation from the referral to COM. It was Moved, Seconded and Passed to approve the resolution” (emphasis in the original minutes). Witnesses noted that the resolution was adopted after vigorous debate; there is no record of yeas and nays.

The procedural confusion is compounded by the manner in which Resolution A got to the floor of the March Presbytery meeting. Resolution A was not on the meeting docket. The record is not clear as to whether it was presented to the Presbytery as part of the COM report or as New Business. There is conflicting testimony as to whether a request was made that Resolution A be presented as New Business or whether it would even be brought to the floor.

In either case, Resolution A was presented late in the meeting after a significant number of presbyters had left the meeting. As noted above, the Presbytery approved Resolution A after debate.

At that same Presbytery meeting, BSCL was passed on second reading by a standing vote of sixty-four (64) yea and twenty-five (25) nay. The BSCL document as adopted concluded in this way: “Washington Presbytery has established these standards, encouraging our Churches to [be] led by them as they call, commission, and train their own leadership.” At the end of the document is a sentence which reads, “I have read, understand, and subscribe to the ‘Biblical Standards for Christian Leaders’ as described above,” with lines for date and signature.

Further confusion exists as to the status of BSCL and Resolution A in the Presbytery. They were not designated as changes in policy or additions to the bylaws, nor did they follow the procedures normally taken for policy and bylaw changes. At the Synod trial the Stated Clerk testified that they are Standing Rules. The record is not clear as to how, when, and by whom these adopted items would have been applied.

Washington, et al., filed a complaint and request for stay of enforcement of both Resolution A and BSCL on April 24, 2007. They claimed that Resolution A was unconstitutional under the Book of Order and the Authoritative Interpretation of G-6.0108 adopted by the 217th GA and that BSCL was also unconstitutional by reintroducing subscriptionism to ordination and installation decisions. The stay was granted on April 30, 2007, without Presbytery objection. SPJC accepted the complaint and ordered a pre-trial conference for July 6, 2007. The trial was held on August 13–14, 2007.

The case record for the trial and subsequent oral arguments on appeal revealed a dispute between parties as to the extent of conciliation efforts. The record does not indicate what action if any was taken.

The SPJC's decision on August 14, 2007, set aside both Resolution A and BSCL as unconstitutional. In setting aside BSCL, the SPJC stated that presbyteries do not have the authority to set standards for elders and deacons.

The Presbytery filed a notice of appeal to this Commission on September 25, 2007. The Presbytery's appeal was limited to the procedural and ancillary matters surrounding the adoption of Resolution A and did not deal with BSCL. The hearing was held on February 8, 2007.

Specifications of Error<sup>10</sup>

Specification of Error No. 1. The SPJC erred by "its failure to address Appellees' complete absence of Biblically-faithful actions to resolve issues before bringing them to the larger, higher jurisdictional body for resolution. Despite repeated written and oral requests throughout the course of the proceeding, the SPJC declined to require or even encourage the Appellees to participate in pre-filing and/or during-pendency intra-presbytery conversation, discussion or negotiation as instructed by Matthew 18:15-17."

This specification of error is not sustained.

This Commission finds nothing in the record to sustain this specification of error; nor does it find any mandates in the Book of Order to support the claim that there is any requirement that a permanent judicial commission "require or even encourage [parties] to participate in pre-filing and/or during-pendency intra-presbytery conversation, discussion or negotiation as instructed by Matthew 18:15-17."

Matthew 18:15-17 applies in the situations where one party sins against another. While the text does suggest a process for conciliation between persons or parties, this Commission is reluctant to label the actions or failure to act by either party with respect to the settlement of their dispute as sin. An interpretation of this passage suggests that permanent judicial commissions embody the spirit of the "one or two others" that are taken along, "so that every word may be confirmed by the evidence of two or three witnesses." (Matthew 18:16, NRSV) The purpose of the "one or two others" is to "function as witnesses to the confrontation between the accuser and the accused ... [to] protect the accused if the accusation is too harsh or based on a misperception or inadequate information; [to] protect the accuser and observe how the accused responds to the charge."<sup>11</sup> It is exactly these functions that a permanent judicial commission accepts when it sits to hear and decide a dispute that is before it.

The Book of Order at D-1.0103 calls the Church to the Matthew 5:25 Biblical obligation to adjust differences without strife. However, this Commission recognizes the inadequacies in the Book of Order with respect to non-judicial dispute resolution processes. The GAPJC's Self Study Report as submitted to the 218th General Assembly (2008) states, "There is little guidance in Rules of Discipline about how the conciliation and mediation should take place... The experience of this Commission leads us to urge the General Assembly to consider adopting revisions to the Rules of Discipline that would promote alternative forms of dispute resolution and consensus building in lieu of adversarial judicial process. The Church should strive to resolve disputes in a manner that minimizes divisiveness and expense and promotes consensus, leaving this Commission to resolve disputes by judicial process as a last resort." (GAPJC Self Study Report, Chapter VI, Section 5, p. 25)

Specification of Error No. 2. The SPJC erred by substituting its judgment for that of the Presbytery in the matter of the "discernment process." "Despite hearing extensive testimony regarding the process of discernment used by...Presbytery in responding to the PUP Report, SPJC [improperly] held that...Presbytery failed to comply with the invitation to 'explore the use of alternative forms of discernment.'"

This specification of error is not sustained.

This Commission rejects the Appellant's claim that the SPJC substituted its judgment for that of the Presbytery. The SPJC's factual finding was, "that the Presbytery of Washington complied with this invitation only minimally, if at all." This finding of fact notes compliance, however minimal. This Commission accepts this factual finding based on Hardwick v. PJC Synod of North Carolina, "Judgments of a lower court on factual issues are favored with a presumption of correctness and are not to be disturbed unless plainly or palpably wrong, without supporting evidence, or manifestly unjust." (Minutes, PCUS, 1983, Part I, p.45)

The SPJC then went on to "recommend that the Presbytery provide appropriate opportunities for dialogue and discernment in the hope that additional litigation will not be necessary." This is SPJC's recommendation, not a factual finding which substitutes its judgment for that of the Presbytery.

Specification of Error No. 3. The SPJC erred in its determinations regarding G-6.0106b, the Confessions and the Adopting Act of 1729 in the following manner:

(1) SPJC exceeded its authority when it “held that the requirement of G-6.0106b is ‘broad and ephemeral’” and that compliance with the requirement “was an unenforceable standard.”

(2) SPJC also exceeded its authority when it indicated that “it is impossible to read the Confessions without encountering allegations of sin for thoughts or actions which may no longer be considered sin.”

(3) SPJC incorrectly asserted “that the Adopting Act of 1729 established ‘essential’ as having a specific meaning”; the Act “does not... [mention] the word ‘essential’ or any variant of it.”

This specification of error is not sustained in any part.

A. The Presbytery’s characterization of the SPJC decision regarding G-6.0106b and Resolution A is incorrect. The SPJC decision, in part, stated:

It is also noted that “any self-acknowledged practice which the confessions call sin,” if unrepented, will preclude ordination and/or installation pursuant to Book of Order G-6.0106b. This broad and ephemeral requirement is stated in “mandatory” terms as defined in Resolution A. Accordingly, Resolution A would provide an unqualified bar to ordination or installation in Washington Presbytery of anyone who is unrepentant of any act or thought that the Confessions call sin.

The Presbytery interprets the statement as a holding by the SPJC that compliance with G-6.0106b is “an unenforceable standard.” Based on this interpretation, the Presbytery concludes that the SPJC has no authority to set aside or ameliorate a valid constitutional requirement.

When this passage is read within the context of the whole decision, it is clear that the SPJC’s holding applies to Resolution A rather than to G-6.0106b. This construction is supported by SPJC’s inclusion of “Resolution A” in the sentence that uses the “broad and ephemeral” statement as well as the inclusion of the term “Resolution A” in the very next sentence. This Commission, therefore, finds no error in the SPJC’s statement.

B. This Commission does not affirm the Presbytery’s characterization of the SPJC statement:

Since it is impossible to read the Confessions without encountering allegations of sin for thoughts or actions which may no longer be considered sin, or at least no longer be considered the “serious” departure referred to in the Book of Order, G-6.0108a (such as provisions pertaining to Sabbath observance and interest on loans), Resolution A is in conflict with G-6.0108a and the long-established policy that what is essential must be determined by case-by-case consideration rather than by blanket and unviable prohibitions.

The Presbytery characterizes this statement as a holding by the SPJC that the Confessions are no longer valid, that it does not have the authority to set aside or ameliorate an element of the Confessions, and that it exceeded its authority in doing so.

The SPJC’s determination clearly pertains to Resolution A. When the statement is read in context, there is nothing to suggest that it represents a holding that the Confessions are no longer valid. This Commission, therefore, finds no error in the SPJC’s statement.

C. Contrary to the Presbytery’s assertions, the Adopting Act of the nineteenth of September, 1729<sup>12</sup> (Adopting Act), incorporates the term “necessary and essential” four times. Moreover, it provides instructive historical guidance for the application and interpretation of G-6.0108a and b (as to essentials). This Commission does note that later re-affirmations of the Adopting Act do not include the term “necessary and essential.” The Church is therefore urged to use original sources of this and other historic church documents and not to rely upon re-statements or paraphrases.

Decision

It is for these reasons that none of the specifications of error are sustained.

Order

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that the Decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of the Trinity is hereby affirmed.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of Washington report this Decision and Order to the Presbytery at its first meeting after receipt, that the Presbytery enter the full Decision and Order upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Synod of the Trinity report this Decision and Order to the Synod at its first meeting after receipt, that the Synod enter the full Decision and Order upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

Essentials and Subscription

We concur with the decision of the majority in case 218-15 wholeheartedly. However, we think it would be helpful to the church to have clarity concerning concepts mentioned in the decision of the Synod of the Trinity.

The term, “essential,” did not begin with the Adopting Act of 1729, although it was used several times within that action, as recorded in the minutes of the Synod. For Presbyterians, the concept of essential and necessary with respect to doctrine can be found in John Calvin’s Institutes of the Christian Religion, Book IV, Chapter I, Sections 9-16, (1559), in which Calvin discusses the marks of the Church and “the sin of schism.” Calvin identifies the marks of the church as:

“Wherever we see the Word of God purely preached and heard, and the sacraments administered according to Christ’s institution, there, it is not to be doubted, a church of God exists [cf. Eph. 2:20].” (Section 9)

Having defined the church, Calvin then says, “... it follows that separation from the church is the denial of God and Christ.” (Section 10)

If separation is the denial of God and Christ, how should the church and its members behave if there is some fault within the church or its members? Calvin’s words acknowledge that difficulty:

“What is more, some fault may creep into the administration of either doctrine or sacraments, but this ought not to estrange us from communion with the church. For not all the articles of true doctrine are of the same sort. Some are so necessary to know that they should be certain and unquestioned by all men as the proper principles of religion. Such are: God is one; Christ is God and the Son of God; our salvation rests in God’s mercy; and the like. Among the churches there are other articles of doctrine disputed which still do not break the unity of faith...Does this not sufficiently indicate that a difference of opinion over these nonessential matters should in no wise be the basis of schism among Christians?” (Section 12)

In the sections which follow, Calvin indicates that every church will include those who sin, and he speaks to those who wish to leave because of the sinfulness of others:

“Indeed, because they think no church exists where there are not perfect purity and integrity of life, they depart out of hatred of wickedness from the lawful church, while they fancy themselves turning aside from the faction of the wicked.” (Section 13)

Quite bluntly, Calvin states that, “... the church is at the same time mingled of good men and bad ...”, using Matthew 13:47–58 as Christ’s comparison of the many kinds fish caught in the net with the people to be found in the Body of Christ. Having said this, however, Calvin does not excuse any from recognizing the range of belief and behavior, or of even working to assist others in recognizing and repenting of “misdeeds.” Rather, he expects that remaining together for mutual support is important, so long as “public edification” is performed “decently and in order.” (Section 12) Calvin said that some things might be essential, but causing schism because of them was not desirable or necessary.

Concerning subscription, this practice has been handled differently in different times in the American Presbyterian Church. The earliest Presbyterian settlers on this continent brought with them disagreements from their time in Europe. Rigid subscriptionism had caused problems in England, Ireland, and Scotland, with some Presbyterians coming to the American shores to protect subscription to the Westminster Confession, and some to escape from this requirement. These struggles continued among the Presbyterians who formed the first presbyteries and the Synod, culminating in the Adopting Act of 1729. Presbyters were asked to declare their approbation of the Westminster Confession of Faith and the Larger and Shorter Catechisms, the act requiring each man to: “declare his Agreement in opinion with all the Essential and Necessary Articles of said Confession, either by subscribing the said Confession of Faith and Catechisms, or by a verbal Declaration of their assent thereto, as such Minister or Candidate shall think best.” By compromise, the subscription did not have to be in writing, but could be a spoken affirmation.

The record in case 218-15 reflects that subscription is now forbidden in the church. That is not entirely true. The outcome of the Fundamentalist-Modernist controversy, as embodied in the 1926 and 1927 reports from the Special Commission of 1925 (the “Swearingen Commission Report”), stated once again that the General Assembly did not have the power or authority to declare certain doctrines “essential.” The report noted that this action thus revised “our terms of subscription,” which had required subscription to five statements of doctrine that the General Assemblies in 1910, 1916, and 1923 had declared to be essential. (Minutes, 1926, p. 70) However, the adoption of these reports did not mean that subscription was removed from the church. Subscription continued in the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, often taking the form of the verbal assent affirming the vows taken at the time of ordination by elders, deacons and ministers of the Word and Sacrament, rather than written subscription.

Today, the “Form of Government” (2007/2009) retains the reference to subscription at the time of ordination or installation of a minister of the Word and Sacrament in saying in G-14.0485: “The presbytery shall record the ordination and installation as a part of its official records along with the acceptance and subscription of the new minister to the obligations undertaken in the ordination vows.”

Concerning the Handling of Presbytery Minutes

Case 218-15, involving the Presbytery of Washington, exposed a practice which is of concern. According to both the record and in oral argument, the custom in the Presbytery of Washington is to circulate to the presbytery a summary of the minutes of the previous presbytery meeting. The full minutes are given to “readers,” a minister and an elder, who review the minutes and suggest any modifications. The full minutes are then filed at the presbytery office at some future time.

In this case, the record showed that the full minutes of the meeting of March 13, 2007, reflecting the action on the Resolutions that were at issue in this case were not available even at the pre-trial conference held July 6, 2007. The minutes that were given to the parties that day did not reflect the action of the presbytery in passing Resolution A. It was a matter of verbal testimony at the original trial that the full and corrected minutes were not available until at least July 9, 2007, nearly four months after the meeting had occurred.

Two full meeting packets, with all materials to be circulated to presbytery commissioners and members in preparation for the meeting, were appended to the record, packets for the meetings of January 20, 2007 and March 13, 2007. In those packets, the Consent Items include the following:

1. That the minutes of the Stated Meeting of January 20, 2007 as read by Rev. Joe Rychcik and Elder Gretchen McBride (McMurray), and as summarized in this packet be approved; (March 13, 2007 packet)
2. That the minutes of the Stated Meeting of November 14, 2006 as read by Rev. Robert VandeKappelle [sic] and Elder Kevin Young (Laboratory), CLP and as summarized in this packet be approved; (January 20, 2007 packet).

The only conclusion that can be drawn is that the presbytery does not see nor approve the full minutes in any form. Because the handling of the minutes was not a part of the appeal, this Commission quite rightly has not considered this issue in its decision and order. The taking of minutes and dissemination of them to all members of the body is seen as a thankless task, often not valued by those asked to read them. Yet, as in this case, when minutes are not forthcoming and also not accurate, the actions of the presbytery may be questioned and the trust of presbyters can be seriously undermined.

At this point in time, Robert’s Rules of Order, Newly Revised, Section 48, page 456–57, permits the reading of minutes by a committee under certain specific circumstances. The ordinary procedure is stated as follows: “The minutes of the meeting are normally read and approved at the beginning of the next regular meeting... .” For those presbyteries that fall into the excepted categories, where the minutes are read by a committee, the full minutes should be available either in hard copy or electronically to the entire membership by the next meeting. Caution should be used in the handling of minutes in order to assure easy accessibility, which is vital to the health of the body.

It is the opinion of the undersigned members of this Commission, present and former stated clerks of presbyteries, that the Synod of the Trinity should be providing advice, counsel and oversight to the Presbytery of Washington concerning its handling of the minutes of presbytery meetings through its responsibility designated in G-12.0102n “to review the records of its presbyteries and to take care that they observe the Constitution of the church.” Providing full and accurate minutes is the responsibility of the stated clerk of the presbytery. Reviewing minutes for completeness and accuracy is the duty and privilege of every presbyter.

Dated this 11th day of February, 2008.

Endnotes

1. Written presbytery approval is also required if a congregation proposes to “lease its real property used for purposes of worship, or lease for more than five years any of its other real property ...” (G-8.0502).
2. This letter from the session of GCPC to the congregation states, in part, “we anticipate that some in the congregation may be particularly interested in discussing [ordination standards] since electing at least one of the nominees might be out of order according to one paragraph in the Constitution G-6.0106b.”

04 ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE ON CHURCH POLITY

3. Section G-11.0101c addresses the special status of elders who have been elected as moderator or other officers or chairs of committees or commissions of a presbytery. Under this provision, elders who hold the office of presbytery moderator have continuing membership in the presbytery during their term of office, others may be granted such status.
4. During oral argument, Complainant indicated that Jones and Tony attended the conference call meeting as observers until the ACC went into executive session.
5. See Yun et al. v. Session of Korean United Presbyterian Church, Decision on Challenge to Preliminary Questions of the GAPJC, dated May 7, 2007.
6. Both parties cited Presbytery of West Jersey v. Synod of Northeast, Minutes, 1993, Part I, p. 181, in support of their positions; however, West Jersey is not pertinent herein because it did not involve a declaration regarding “essentials.”
7. The remainder of the PUP report (including the rationale for recommendation 5) was received, but not adopted, by the General Assembly, and therefore has no binding effect on the church.
8. Governing bodies may impose other requirements on church officers, after ordination and installation, such as requirements to abide by ethics or sexual misconduct policies.
9. This section of the Book of Order refers only to the Form of Government, failing to recognize that standards for ordination of officers are now found in the Directory for Worship. This is an apparent oversight that should be addressed by the General Assembly.
10. The Presbytery’s specifications of error are limited to procedural and ancillary matters only. For a review of substantive considerations concerning the Authoritative Interpretation of G-6.0108 issued by the 217th GA (in the report of the Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church) see this Commission’s decisions in Bush, et al., v. Presbytery of Pittsburgh (218-10, February 11, 2008) and Buescher, et al., v. Presbytery of Olympia (218-09, February 11, 2008).

12. The text of the act (The Adopting Act) which adopted the Westminster Confession of Faith and the Larger and Shorter Catechisms states in its entirety:

Altho’ the Synod do not claim or pretend to any Authority of imposing our faith upon other men’s Consciences, but do profess our just Dissatisfaction with and Abhorrence of such Impositions, and do utterly disclaim all Legislative Power and Authority in the Church, being willing to receive one another, as Christ has received us to the Glory of God, and admit to fellowship in sacred ordinances all such as we have Grounds to believe Christ will at last admit to the Kingdom of Heaven; yet we are undoubtedly obliged to take Care that the faith once delivered to the Saints be kept pure and uncorrupt among Us, and so handed down to our Posterity. And do therefore agree, yt [that] all the Ministers of this Synod, or that shall hereafter be admitted into this Synod, shall declare their agreement in and approbation of the Confession of Faith with the larger and shorter Catechisms of the assembly of Divines at Westminster, as being in all the essential and necessary Articles, good Forms of sound words and systems of Christian Doctrine; and do also adopt the said Confession and Catechisms as the Confession of our Faith. And we do also agree, yt [that] all the Presbyteries within our Bounds shall always take Care not to admit any Candidate of the Ministry into the Exercise of the sacred Function, but what declares his Agreement in opinion with all the Essential and Necessary Articles of said Confession, either by subscribing the said Confession of Faith and Catechisms, or by a verbal Declaration of their assent thereto, as such Minister or Candidate shall think best. And in Case any Minister of this Synod or any Candidate for the Ministry shall have any Scruple with respect to any Article or Articles of sd.[said] Confession or Catechisms, he shall at the Time of his making sd.[said] Declaration declare his Sentiments to the Presbytery or Synod, who shall notwithstanding admit him to ye[the] Exercise of the Ministry within our Bounds and to Ministerial Communion if the Synod or Presbytery shall judge his scruple or mistake to be only about articles not Essential and necessary in Doctrine, Worship or Government. But if the Synod or Presbytery shall judge such Ministers or Candidates erroneous in Essential and necessary Articles of Faith, the Synod or Presbytery shall declare them incapable of Communion with them. And the Synod do solemnly agree, that none of us will traduce or use any opprobrious Terms of those yt [that] differ from us in these extra-essential and not-necessary points of Doctrine, but treat them with the same friendship, kindness and brotherly Love, as if they had not differed from us in such Sentiments.” (italics added) (Minutes of the Presbyterian Church in America, 1706–1788; Guy S. Jane Adams Spahr, Appellant, v. Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) through the Presbytery of Redwoods, Appellee.	) ) ) ) ) ) ) ) ) ) )	DECISION AND ORDER  Disciplinary Case 218-12

1. Marriage is defined by the Book of Order W-4.9001. Section W-4.9001 provides four definitional statements of marriage. As a definition, W-4.9001 does not prohibit an officer of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) who has been authorized to perform marriages from performing a same-sex union. A same-sex ceremony is not and cannot be a marriage under W-4.9001.

2. Same-sex unions are not to be confused with marriages. There are differences between same-sex ceremonies and marriage ceremonies. The liturgy should be kept distinct for the two types of services. Officers of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) who are authorized to perform marriages shall not state, imply, or represent that a same-sex ceremony is a marriage because under W-4.9001 a same-sex ceremony is not and cannot be a marriage.

3. Standard of review. Factual determinations made by a trier of fact are accorded a presumption of correctness. Questions of constitutional interpretation are not subject to the same deference.

Arrival Statement

This disciplinary case came before the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission (GAPJC or this Commission) on appeal filed by the Appellant, Jane Adams Spahr (Spahr), from a decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of the Pacific (SPJC) dated August 18, 2007.

Jurisdictional Statement

This Commission finds that it has jurisdiction, that Spahr has standing to file the appeal, that the appeal was properly and timely filed, and that the appeal states one or more of the grounds for appeal required under D-13.0106.

Appearances

Spahr was present in person and was represented by Sara M. Taylor, Tim K. Cahn and Scott Clark. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) [PC(USA)] through the Presbytery of Redwoods (Presbytery) was represented by the counsel for the prosecuting committee, Stephen L. Taber, Lyn Hamilton, and David Jordan-Erwin.

History

On February 28, 2004, Spahr, a minister of the Word and Sacrament, participated in a wedding ceremony for two men in Ontario, Canada. On October 24, 2004, the Presbytery filed a disciplinary case against Spahr based on this activity, charging her with violating W-4.9001 of the "Directory for Worship." Presbytery withdrew that charge in March, 2005, after determining that Spahr's level of participation in that particular ceremony was not in violation of W-4.9001 and as Authoritatively Interpreted by the 203rd General Assembly (Minutes, 1991, at 21.124-128) (1991 AI). Presbytery was granted permission to amend the charge to allege that:

Spahr conducted two same-gender marriages: the marriages of Connie Valois and Barbara Jean Douglass on August 21, 2004; and of Annie Senechal and Sherrill Figuera on May 27, 2005 in violation of W-4.9001. On August 21, 2004, you, Dr. Jane Adams Spahr, did perform a wedding service in the marriage of Connie Valois and Barbara Jean Douglass and on May 27, 2005 you did perform a wedding service in the marriage of Annie Senechal and Sherrill Figuera, and thereby you have acted contrary to the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church U.S.A. These actions were in violation of W-4.9001 which states, in part, 'Christian marriage is a covenant through which a man and a woman are called to live out together before God their lives of discipleship....'

By performing these wedding services, you violated Authoritative Interpretations of the General Assembly which declare that it would not be proper for a Minister of the Word and Sacrament to perform a ceremony that the minister determines to be the same as a marriage ceremony.

Trial was held before the Presbytery's Permanent Judicial Commission (PPJC) on March 2-3, 2006. In her trial testimony, Spahr acknowledged that she had performed the ceremonies at issue and others preceding them. The record reflects that she also signed a "Certificate of Marriage" for each of the ceremonies which is the subject of this case. She testified that her ministry had been a "ministry of marriage equality." Spahr had officiated at ceremonies between same gender couples whether the couple described the ceremony as a "union," a "marriage" or in other terms. Spahr provided heterosexual and same-sex couples the same counseling and preparation work before performing any ceremony.

At the trial, a motion was made to disqualify a member of the PPJC based on the allegation that the member had a personal interest in the case because she took part with Spahr in a "ceremony of commitment" on August 5-6, 2004. The motion was denied.

By its order dated March 3, 2006, the PPJC found that Spahr had committed no chargeable offense, and thus she was effectively found to be "not guilty" as charged. Based on a 2005 amendment to D-13.0106b, which permits a prosecuting committee to appeal the decision in a disciplinary case, Presbytery filed this appeal on March 23, 2006. A request by the SPJC to refer the case to the GAPJC was denied on May 7, 2007, because (1) the complexity of the issues invited consideration by the full judicial structure of the PC(USA), (2) acceptance of reference to the GAPJC would deny the parties one level of appellate review, and (3) there would be no extraordinary expense or delay if reference were not accepted. The SPJC subsequently held a hearing, and on August 18, 2007, issued its decision finding, Spahr guilty of violating W-4.9001 and the 1991 AI, and imposing on her the censure of rebuke.

Preliminary Statement

This is a disciplinary, not a remedial, case. Ministers of the Word and Sacrament can be charged with offenses for “any act or omission . . . that is contrary to the Scriptures or the Constitution.” (D-2.0203) Such charges must be clear and specific enough that the accused may know and understand the nature of the offenses charged and defend against the charges. In considering this case, this Commission had to determine whether the charges against Spahr were properly stated as offenses contrary to Scripture or the Constitution of the PC(USA). It is important that members and officers of the church know beforehand what conduct is prohibited as well as the basis for imposing censure. The Commission would note that while the Prosecuting Committee relied heavily on the decision in Benton v. Presbytery of Hudson River Minutes, 2000, Part I pp. 580-589, Remedial Case 212-11. Benton was a remedial case rather than a disciplinary case and involved the policies of a session. It is not applicable to this case.

Specifications of Error and Decision

Specification of Error No. 1 (Appellant’s 5): The SPJC erred in constitutional interpretation by concluding that, taken together, the 1991 AI, Benton and the provisions of W-4.9001 constitute a mandatory prohibition against a minister of the Word and Sacrament conducting same-sex marriages.

This specification of error is sustained in part and not sustained in part for the reasons stated below following Specification of Error No. 2.

Specification of Error No. 2 (Appellant’s 4 and 6): The SPJC erred in constitutional interpretation by concluding that Spahr committed a disciplinary offense.

This specification of error is sustained.

Spahr was charged with and found guilty of violating W-4.9001 and the 1991 AI by performing “wedding service[s] in the marriage of” two same-sex couples. The SPJC determined that Spahr was guilty based on her actions in performing “wedding” services for two same-sex couples. Even after amendment of the charges by the Presbytery, the offense charged was the act of performing same-sex marriages.

There is no prohibition in W-4.9001 against performing a same-sex ceremony. The 1991 AI acknowledged that there is no mention in the Book of Order of same-sex unions or ceremonies. The 1991 AI states that it is not “proper” for ministers to conduct ceremonies represented as marriages between persons of the same-sex.

W-4.9001 in the Book of Order defines marriage as follows:

Marriage is a gift God has given to all humankind for the well-being of the entire human family. Marriage is a civil contract between a woman and a man. For Christians marriage is a covenant through which a man and a woman are called to live out together before God their lives of discipleship. In a service of Christian marriage a lifelong commitment is made by a woman and a man to each other, publicly witnessed and acknowledged by the community of faith.

Section W-4.9001 provides four definitional statements of marriage. As a definition, W-4.9001 does not prohibit a minister from performing a same-sex union. Moreover, the 1991 AI did not prohibit ministers from performing ceremonies intended to bless or recognize the union between two men or two women.

The ceremonies that are the subject of this case were not marriages as the term is defined by W-4.9001. These were ceremonies between women, not between a man and a woman. Both parties acknowledged the ceremonies in question were not marriages as defined by the Book of Order. It is not improper for ministers of the Word and Sacrament to perform same-sex ceremonies. At least four times, the larger church has rejected overtures that would prohibit blessing the unions of same-sex couples.<sup>1</sup> By the definition in W-4.9001, a same-sex ceremony can never be a marriage. The SPJC found Spahr guilty of doing that which by definition cannot be done. One cannot characterize same-sex ceremonies as marriages for the purpose of disciplining a minister of the Word and Sacrament and at the same time declare that such ceremonies are not marriages for legal or ecclesiastical purposes.

The PPJC was correct in finding that by performing the two ceremonies at issue, Spahr did not commit an offense as charged. Therefore, the SPJC erred in determining that Spahr was guilty of violating W-4.9001 or the 1991 AI.

In holding that Spahr was not guilty as charged, this Commission does not hold that there are no differences between same-sex ceremonies and marriage ceremonies. We do hold that the liturgy should be kept distinct for the two types of services. We further hold that officers of the PC(USA) authorized to perform marriages shall not state, imply, or represent that a same-sex ceremony is a marriage. Under W-4.9001, a same-sex ceremony is not and cannot be a marriage.

Spahr argued that her actions were justified based on her work in providing pastoral care to a marginalized and oppressed community. Spahr served in a validated ministry charged with caring for members of the gay, lesbian, bi-sexual, and transgender (GLBT) community and reported regularly to her presbytery about the same-sex unions and “weddings” she performed. These services were not described as marriages in her reports as found in the record of the case.

It is acknowledged by those who have heard this case at every level that Spahr has acted in light of her call and the church’s call to participate in a caring and compassionate ministry to persons who have been marginalized, who are faithful Christians, and who wish to be accepted in every way as full members of the body of Christ. In this, Spahr may consider herself to be acting in the role of a prophet to the church, while others would reject such a characterization. Prophecy contains risk and uncertainty both for those who would speak and for those who listen. The role of a prophet carries consequences. It is the burden of a church officer to accept the consequences of his or her actions that are the ecclesiastical equivalent of civil disobedience. Membership in the PC(USA) is open to all persons. (G-4.0400) The General Assembly has affirmed several times and in various ways its commitment to stand for the just and equal treatment of all persons regardless of sexual orientation. While drawing a distinction between sexual orientation and sexual practice, and maintaining behavioral standards for ordained office that further limit sexual practice, the church has attempted to minister to GLBT persons through the efforts of ministers like Spahr. The tension the church has created between sexual orientation and sexual practice has led to turmoil and dissension that will likely continue for some time. The difficulties faced by this Commission in deciding this case reflect that tension.

Christians are called to do justice. The language of W-7.3000 and W-7.4000 is replete with admonitions that are inconsistent with imposing censure on a minister of the Word and Sacrament for reaching out to a marginalized and oppressed segment of the body. Moreover, “the Christian community offers pastoral care to its members in their personal and communal life.” (W-6.3001) The church should provide ministries of pastoral care to people in recognizing and celebrating times of transition and commitment. (W-6.3010) “The worship of God in the Christian community is the foundation and context for the ministry of pastoral care as well as for the ministry of nurture in faith.” (W-6.4000)

In summary, Specification of Error No. 1 is not sustained because by definition, “marriage is . . . between a man and a woman.” (W-4.9001) Specification of Error No. 1 and Specification of Error No. 2 are sustained because W-4.9001 does not state a mandatory prohibition on performing a same-sex ceremony. The charge was for performing a marriage ceremony, which by definition cannot be performed.

Specification of Error No. 3 (Appellant’s 1): The SPJC committed an irregularity in the proceedings by (a) substituting its judgment for that of the PPJC in the evaluation of Spahr’s conduct and (b) failing to apply the 2006 General Assembly’s Authoritative Interpretation of G-6.0108 (2006 AI).

This specification of error is sustained in part and not sustained in part.

(a) This case raises other procedural issues. This case is an appeal by a prosecuting committee as permitted by D-13.0102. Giving a prosecuting committee the right to appeal does not change the standard of review. Factual determinations made by a trier of fact are presumed to be correct. Questions of constitutional interpretation are not subject to the same deference, but are reviewed by an appellate body anew. (Hardwick v. Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of North Carolina, Minutes, 1983, Part I, p. 45) The SPJC determined that the PPJC erred in its constitutional interpretation.

In a case in which a prosecuting committee appeals a verdict of not guilty, the appellate body should not determine the appropriate censure in the first instance. Therefore, when the SPJC reversed the PPJC verdict, it should have remanded the case to the PPJC to impose a censure consistent with the SPJC’s decision. Attention is drawn to D-11.0403e, in which censures are imposed by the triers of fact who have heard “evidence as to the extent of the injury suffered, mitigation, rehabilitation, and redemption.”

(b) Spahr also contends that the SPJC failed to apply the 217th General Assembly’s Authoritative Interpretation, (2006 AI) and Bush et al. v. Presbytery of Pittsburgh, Remedial case 218-10, February 11, 2008. The 2006 AI and Bush do not apply because they deal with ordination standards that are not at issue in this case.

Specification of Error No. 4 (Appellant’s 3): The SPJC committed injustice in the decision by concluding that the Constitution of the PC(USA) sanctions marriage only between a man and woman.

This specification of error is not sustained.

As more fully discussed above in response to Specifications of Error Nos. 1 and 2, the SPJC was correct that W-4.9001 defines marriage as only between a man and woman, and that the Constitution does not address any other form of marriage. However, as discussed elsewhere in this decision, Spahr did not commit a sanctionable offense as charged.

Specification of Error No. 5 (Appellant's 7): The SPJC erred in constitutional interpretation by failing to apply the 2006 AI and historic constitutional principles of polity when it failed to determine whether Spahr's performance of same-sex marriages violated an essential tenet of Reformed faith or polity and, if so, whether the violation fell outside the bounds of G-6.0108.

This specification of error is not sustained.

Because this Commission has found that Spahr did not commit a sanctionable offense as charged, this specification of error is not sustained.

Specification of Error No. 6 (Appellant's 8): The SPJC erred in constitutional interpretation by incorrectly applying G-6.0108, failing to apply subsections (c)-(e) of the 2006 AI, and by finding Spahr's actions contrary to the Constitution, and, therefore, censurable, even though she "acted with conscience and conviction" in performing her ministerial duty with respect to the marriages.

This specification of error is not sustained.

Because this Commission has found that Spahr did not commit a sanctionable offense as charged, this specification of error is not sustained.

Spahr justifies her actions by claiming freedom of conscience as delineated in G-6.0108. Freedom of conscience is a foundational principle of the PC(USA). (G-1.0301) However, Spahr's repeated reliance on G-6.0108 as a standard of freedom to justify her actions ignores the thrust of this principle: freedom of conscience must be exercised within bounds. Rather than describing freedom of conscience in any absolute way, G-6.0108 declares the manner in which the conscience of an officer of the church is bound. The binding of the conscience of an officer of the church permits freedom of conscience with regard to the interpretation of Scripture only insofar as it "may be possible without serious departure from these standards, without infringing on the rights and views of others, and without obstructing the constitutional governance of the church." Further, G-6.0108 states that an officer's conscience is "captive to the Word of God as interpreted in the standards of the church so long as he or she continues to seek or hold office in that body." Submission to the current standards of the church may not always be comfortable, but it is not optional.

Specification of Error No. 7 (Appellant's 2): The SPJC erred by concluding that a member of the PPJC should have been disqualified.

This specification of error is sustained.

The SPJC determined that one member of the PPJC should have been disqualified from serving on the PPJC because there was at least an appearance of a conflict of interest. The PPJC member's participation was challenged because she "might conceivably have an interest in the case" based on evidence that she participated with Spahr in a "ceremony of commitment." At that ceremony of commitment, the PPJC member "led a blessing over the wine which was shared 'by the two to be wed,' she shared her story of her relationship with her best friend; she co-read in liturgy; she led a ceremony of lighting a 'unity candle,' which 'is an ancient Jewish custom called circling'; and she offered prayers and the benediction." These actions pertained to ceremonies not at issue in this case and thus did not rise to the level of an "interest in the case" requiring disqualification of the member under D-11.0402b(1).

In this case, the decision of the PPJC not to uphold the challenge to the member in question should not have been overturned. The member was not subject to the mandatory disqualification standards of D-5.0205, which applies to all types of cases. The member also did not fall into the disqualification standards of D-11.0402b(1), which pertain to disqualification in disciplinary cases. D-11.0402b(1) requires disqualification in a disciplinary case when the commissioner is "personally interested in the case" or has been "active for or against any party." The SPJC determination that the member should have been disqualified from serving was in error.

Order

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that the Decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of the Pacific is reversed and the censure is removed.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of Redwoods report this decision to the Presbytery at its first meeting after receipt, that the Presbytery enter the full decision upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the decision be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Stated Clerk of the Synod of the Pacific report this decision to the Synod at its first meeting after receipt, that the Synod enter the full decision upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the decision be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly.

Concurring Opinion of Fred L. Denson, William E. Scheu, and Gregory A. Goodwiller for Specifications of Error 1 and 2

We join in the foregoing Decision and Order (Decision). We understand the Decision to be an authoritative interpretation of W-4.9001, to mean that officers of the PC(USA) who are authorized to perform marriages shall not hereafter perform a same-sex union ceremony in which or with respect to which such officer states, implies or represents to be a marriage or the equivalent thereof. While the Commission did not find Spahr guilty as charged herein, in part because her conduct occurred under prior authoritative interpretations, we understand that future noncompliance with the authoritative interpretation of the Decision will be considered to be a disciplinable offense.

Concurring Opinion of Catherine G. Borchert, Tony M. Cook, and William E. Scheu for Specification of Error No. 7

Specification of error #7 concerns the conclusion of the SPJC that one of the members of the PPJC should have been disqualified due to her participation in a same gender commitment service.

We agree with the conclusion in law of the majority. However, what is right in a narrow legal sense may not be best either for the parties or for the church. A member of a permanent judicial commission who is placed in a position of trust by his or her sisters and brothers in the church needs to do special work in discerning if their actions and connections with a party to a case places them in a situation in which a reasonable person would question their ability to maintain the objectivity necessary to undertake the task of judging and disciplining another.

In this case, the decision of the PPJC not to uphold the challenge to the member in question was undoubtedly legally correct, and so should not be overturned. The rationale presented by the Synod concerning the participation of the member is wise and should always be considered prayerfully by any commissioner who may have past associations of any kind with a party in a disciplinary case.

Concurring Opinion of Mary Eleanor Johns, Catherine G. Borchert, and Susan J. Cornman

Much of the argument in this case centered on the provision of pastoral care by Spahr as her call to ministry. In providing pastoral care, the minister must take into account not only the rules of the church, but the call to faithfulness as Presbyterians. Among other places in the Constitution, the living out of our faithfulness as Christians and as Presbyterians is called forth through the words which define compassion, justice, reconciliation and peace in the "Directory for Worship", W-7.3002–W-7.3004, sections which speak of compassion in settings of worship, show compassion as advocacy, and speak of faithful compassion. The ways in which compassion is seen to be faithful include the following from W-7.3003:

Such acts of compassion, done corporately and individually, are the work of the church as the body of Christ. The church is called to minister to the immediate needs and hurts of people. The church is also called to engage those structures and systems which create or foster brokenness and distortion. Christians respond to these calls through acts of advocacy and compassion, through service in common ministries of the church, and through cooperation with agencies and organizations committed to those ends. (G-3.0300)

The "Directory for Worship" continues, delineating ways in which we are called to serve.

Following the example of Jesus Christ, faithful disciples today express compassion

- a. with respect for the dignity of those in need, ...
- c. with willingness to risk their own comfort and safety.

Acts of compassion through the power of the Holy Spirit are accompanied by the worshipful acts of justice, leading to peace and reconciliation. W-7.4002 includes the following:

Justice is the order God sets in human life ... for giving rights to those who have no power to claim rights for themselves. The biblical vision of doing justice calls for ...

- c. supporting people who seek the dignity, freedom, and respect that they have been denied. ...
- h. redressing wrongs against individuals, groups, and peoples in the church, in this nation, and in the whole world.

In following these constitutional admonitions, a minister may find the call to compassion and advocacy in tension rules of the church. The church's structure and discipline are to be heeded even while the minister's faithfulness to Christ is unquestioned.

Concurring Opinion and Dissenting Opinion in Part of Judy L. Woods, Patrick W. Notley, Mary Eleanor Johns, Fane Downs, and Susan J.
Cornman for Specifications of Error 1 and 2

In rendering its decision, the majority has taken the liberty of legislating in the guise of interpreting inconsistencies between W-4.9001 on the one hand, and the 1991 AI and this Commission's decision in Benton v. Presbytery of Hudson River, Remedial Case 212-11 (2000), on the other hand. For the reasons stated herein, we respectfully concur in the result of the majority, but disagree with the decision of the majority to the extent that it rests on the 1991 AI or Benton. Spahr was charged with and found guilty of violating W-4.9001 and the 1991 AI by performing "wedding" services for two same-sex couples. There is no prohibition in W-4.9001 or elsewhere in the Constitution against performing a same-sex wedding or other ceremonies to recognize or bless same-sex unions. The 1991 AI acknowledged that there is no mention in the Book of Order of same-sex unions or ceremonies.

The majority is correct that W-4.9001 defines "marriage" as between a man and a woman. Any ceremony, no matter what is called, between two men or between two women, is not and cannot be a marriage. As a definition, W-4.9001 does not prohibit a minister of the Word and Sacrament or authorized church officer from performing a same-sex union or blessing ceremony. Neither the 1991 AI, nor this Commission's decision in Benton, prohibited ministers from performing ceremonies intended to bless or recognize the union between two men or two women. Because a same-sex ceremony cannot be a "marriage" as marriage is defined by W-4.9001, it should not be necessary to say more. It is not the place of this Commission to go any farther and step into the legislative realm. The larger church has declined at least four times to amend W-4.9001 with regard to same-sex ceremonies. The majority now takes this step to amend the definition to include prohibitions. See the Annotations to W-4.9001 describing repeated unsuccessful attempts to change W-4.9001. Any steps to define or distinguish same-sex ceremonies or the nomenclature applied to them is best left to the General Assembly, not this Commission.

Benton attempts to draw a line between a marriage and a same-sex ceremony based on the conclusion that a marriage confers a new status on the couple, while a same-sex union blesses an existing relationship. The new status on which Benton differentiates marriages from same-sex ceremonies is not defined. Then in circular fashion, Benton concludes the status results from the pronouncement of "marriage" which is a priori defined by W-4.9001 as a status only available to a man and a woman. Benton and the 1991 AI "admonished" ministers and sessions to take special care to avoid confusing same-sex ceremonies with marriages. This advice is consistent with the current state of our Constitutional language, which makes it clear that there is no such thing as "marriage" between same-sex couples. W-4.9001. The majority purports that Benton (on which the SPJC relied heavily for its decision to censure Spahr) is not applicable. However, the holding in this case extends the holding in Benton. The majority refused to address Benton squarely or acknowledge that Benton is built on a foundation of sand. We dissent because the majority fails to point out the fallacies of Benton, and then converts admonitions in Benton into prohibitions. We disagree with that portion of the majority decision and do not join in it. In all other respects, we join in the majority decision as to Specifications of Error Nos. 1 and 2 and as to the remainder of the decision.

Dated this 28th day of April, 2008.

The Role of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution in Advising the General Assembly

With respect to all questions requiring an interpretation by the General Assembly of the Book of Order that have been referred to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution (ACC) by the Stated Clerk (G-13.0112c), the parties agree that the ACC may include in its advice (i.e., findings and recommendations under G-13.0112d) to the General Assembly, given no later than sixty days prior to the convening of the next session of the General Assembly (G-13.0112b), a single response that collectively addresses plural questions, along with other responses directed to individual questions. The parties further agree that where the ACC chooses to issue a collective response, such a collective response must provide a reasonable person with sufficient basis to understand how the findings and recommendations in its collective response address every question posed. The ACC acknowledges that the Constitution obligates it to provide advice to the General Assembly that a reasonable person would recognize is responsive to every question requiring a constitutional interpretation (G-13.0112d), and the ACC will comply with this responsibility. See Manual of the General Assembly Standing Rule A.5.a.

10. 218-7 The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Through the Presbytery of The Redwoods Prosecuting Committee v. Jane Adams Spahr

The following order was entered by the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission:

This Request for Reference dated December 22, 2006, was submitted to the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission (GAPJC) by the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of the Pacific (SPJC), under D-4.0100.

Whether to accept a reference from a lower body's judicial commission is a matter of discretion to be exercised by the permanent judicial commission of the higher body. GAPJC considered the Request and hereby refuses to accept reference of this case. Responding to the reasons suggested by SPJC for the reference, GAPJC, under D-4.0203, states the following reasons for the refusal:

1. A Matter of First Impression. While this may be a case of first impression as to an appeal by a prosecuting committee, now permitted under D-13.0102, it is not a matter of first impression as to the substance of the complaint. See, for example, Benton et al., v. Presbytery of Hudson River, Minutes, 2000, p. 586. The complexity of the issues invites consideration through the full judicial structure of the PC(USA).

2. An Appeal Inevitable. Despite an assertion by SPJC that an appeal is inevitable, it is not for GAPJC to speculate whether a non-prevailing party at the SPJC level will appeal a decision of SPJC. Further, the judicial framework established by the Book of Order provides an intermediate level of appellate review at the synod level. Acceptance of this reference would deny the parties one level of review.

3. Undue Expense and Delay. The expense and delay, if any, that may result from this refusal of reference is not likely to be extraordinary, as SPJC claims.

THEREFORE, this case is returned to the SPJC for action in accordance with D-4.0203.

Returned to the Synod of the Pacific for hearing. No compliance required.

11. 218-8 Hyung K. Yun, Yun Soo Kim, Young Yoon Kim, Kwan Young Lee, Seung G. Ahn, In Bae Chun, Richard Yun, and Kee Ho Lim v. Session of Korean United Presbyterian Church of New Jersey

The following orders were entered by the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission:

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that this case is remanded for further proceedings before the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of the Northeast as provided above.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Clerk of Session of the Korean United Presbyterian Church of New Jersey report this Decision and Order to the Session at its next meeting, that the Session enter the full Decision and Order upon its minutes, and that an excerpt from those minutes showing entry of the Decision and Order be sent to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly (D-8.0404f).

Item 05-01

[The assembly answered Item 05-01 by the action taken on Item 05-12. See p. 42.]

On Rescinding the Action of the 217th General Assembly (2006) on Recommendation 5 of the Report of the Theological Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity—From the Presbytery of South Louisiana.

The Presbytery of South Louisiana overtures the 218th General Assembly (2008) to rescind the action of the 217th General Assembly (2006) on Recommendation 5, the “authoritative interpretation” of the Report of the Theological Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 28–29, 514–15).

Rationale

The recent approval of Recommendation 5 of the Report of the Theological Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church does not seem to be promoting the peace, unity, and purity of the church.

With one significantly divided vote, the General Assembly apparently made the Constitution’s standards for ordination optional: “Ordaining and installing bodies, acting as corporate expressions of the church ... determine ... whether a candidate being examined for ordination and/or installation ... has departed from scriptural and constitutional standards [and] ... whether any departure constitutes a failure to adhere to the essentials of Reformed faith ... thus barring the candidate from ordination and/or installation” (Minutes, 2006, Part I, p. 515).

This “authoritative interpretation” has been perceived by many as accomplishing a change that would more properly have been done through a constitutional amendment for action by the presbyteries.

In 1998, 66 percent of the presbyteries, and in 2001, 73 percent of the presbyteries voted to retain G-6.0106b as an ordination standard.

The approval of this “authoritative interpretation” has resulted in the loss of several churches, and may result in the loss of more churches and members throughout the denomination.

General Assembly actions now take twice the time to address since the decision to move to biennial assemblies.

Concurrence to Item 05-01 from the Presbytery of St. Andrew.

---

Concurrence to Item 05-1 from the Presbytery of Sacramento (with Additional Rationale).

Rationale

Since the passage of Recommendation 5 (authoritative interpretation of G-6.0108) by the 217th General Assembly (2006) (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 28–29, 514–15), there has been among churches, sessions, and presbyteries, confusion, greater mistrust, tension, fragmentation, and a lack of peace, unity, and purity. We have witnessed large churches leaving or attempting to leave the PC(USA). These churches are our beloved brothers and sisters in Christ and watching their departure is grief-provoking.

In the aftermath of Recommendation 5, instead of being about the business of Jesus Christ and kingdom growth, we are consumed by property concerns, by drafting resolutions to set our own policy, by trying to understand what words mean now that they have lost their real meaning, e.g., “shall” and “standards,” by debates, by process, and by legal battles.

Instead of scrupling over a nonessential item in a confession of faith, scrupling is now occurring (and permitted by higher governing bodies) over the polity of the church—over standards in the Book of Order—when scrupling was never intended to cause us to escape the provisions of our polity.

Recommendation 5 has accomplished a change in the interpretation of the ordination standards of the Book of Order, which does change the Book of Order because by definition a standard is something everyone agrees to and if a standard is up for individual interpretation, then it is no longer a standard. And under the ruse that there was no change to the Book of Order, the presbyteries were not permitted to vote aye or nay.

With confusion, mistrust, tension, and distraction from working for the kingdom abounding, all as a result of the Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church, this overture seeks to rescind Recommendation 5 and return to total focus on Jesus Christ.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 05-01

Advice on Item 05-01—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 218th General Assembly (2008) to disapprove Item 05-01.

If the assembly wishes to accomplish the intent of Item 05-01, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 218th General Assembly (2008) to answer Item 05-01 with an action that takes into account the concern identified in the Rationale below.

Rationale

Item 05-01 is part of a group of items before the 218th General Assembly (2008) addressing the ordination and/or installation of candidates for office in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). No issue has absorbed as much energy and attention from General Assemblies over the past two decades as this one. For a variety of reasons, the issue is not only one that evokes deep passion, but also one with a complex history. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution strongly believes that a clear understanding of this history and the current interplay of constitutional provisions and authoritative interpretations is an absolute prerequisite to discerning where the Holy Spirit is leading the 218th General Assembly (2008) with respect to the variety of options before it. In order to assist the assembly in understanding this history and interplay of constitutional provisions, this advice therefore sets out: (1) a summary of the items before the 218th General Assembly (2008) related to ordination and/or installation; (2) an explanation of the means by which the Book of Order is amended and interpreted; (3) background concerning the approval and interpretation of G-6.0106b prior to the 217th General Assembly (2006); (4) background concerning the 217th General Assembly (2006)'s approval of an authoritative interpretation of G-6.0108b as it applies to the examination of candidates for ordination and/or installation in office; (5) a review of recent decisions of the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission pertaining to the authoritative interpretation of G-6.0108b; and (6) a review of the options available to the 218th General Assembly (2008) with respect to these items.

Accordingly, while Item 05-01 itself is short and on its face straightforward, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises that the 218th General Assembly (2008) consider it within the broader context of the various items addressing the ordination and/or installation of candidates for office. The last section of this rationale specifically addresses Item 05-01 in light of this broader advice.

1. Business Before the 218th General Assembly (2008) Related to Ordination and Installation of Church Officers

The 218th General Assembly (2008) has before it a wide variety of items addressing how governing bodies should determine whether a candidate should be ordained and/or installed, and what conduct bars such ordination and/or installation. These items generally fall into four categories, with some overlap between these categories:

- a. Proposals to eliminate or substantially amend G-6.0106b and to approve a new authoritative interpretation withdrawing the authoritative interpretation regarding ordination and installation that was in place prior to the adoption of G-6.0106b.
- b. Proposals to preserve the current provisions of G-6.0106b but reaffirm the use of G-6.0108b in the examination of candidates for ordination or installation by reaffirming or clarifying the authoritative interpretation of G-6.0108 approved by the 217th General Assembly (2006).
- c. Proposals to withdraw the authoritative interpretation of G-6.0108 approved by the 217th General Assembly (2006) or to approve a replacement authoritative interpretation limiting the use of G-6.0108b in ordination and installation decisions.
- d. Proposals to amend G-6.0108b (and in one instance G-6.0106b) to preclude its application to the examination of candidates with respect to their satisfaction of G-6.0106b's prerequisites to ordination or installation.

A variety of responses are possible to these various proposals. Evaluation of those options requires an understanding of the implications of constitutional amendment as opposed to authoritative interpretation, as well as of the history of these issues and the current status of both these constitutional provisions and of the authoritative interpretations governing those provisions.

2. How the Book of Order Is Amended and Interpreted

There are three sources of constitutional authority for the PC(USA):

(a) The Constitution itself and amendments to it. The process of constitutional amendment is carefully defined in the Book of Order (Chapter XVIII).

(b) General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission decisions interpreting the Constitution. The General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission makes such decisions in the context of hearing the appeal of particular disputes (remedial cases) or of allegations against an individual (disciplinary cases), or, fairly rarely, in an action originating in the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission itself. The General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission only interprets the constitution in the context of such particular cases and appeals.

(c) Deliberate General Assembly interpretations approved pursuant to process described in G-13.0112. The General Assembly approves such interpretations not in the context of particular disputes, but for the broader guidance of the church. Any General Assembly is free to modify or withdraw an authoritative interpretation approved by a previous General Assembly or by a decision of the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission.

Decisions by the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission and General Assembly interpretations under G-13.0112 together are referred to as “authoritative interpretations” (G-13.0103r). The most recent interpretation of a provision of the Book of Order is binding.

In this context, the constitutional structure of the church is not modeled on the United States federal system with the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission as a supreme court that has final authority in constitutional matters because the General Assembly itself also has power to provide authoritative interpretations of the Constitution in accordance with G-13.0103r. The General Assembly is not permitted to overturn the resolution of a particular dispute between the parties to a case before the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission, but it is permitted to overturn a constitutional interpretation adopted by the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission by approving an authoritative interpretation setting forth a different interpretation than the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission used in deciding the particular case before it.

3. The Adoption and Interpretation of G-6.0106b prior to the 217th General Assembly (2006)

In 1978, the former UPCUSA adopted a policy statement that came to be called “definitive guidance.” The next year, 1979, the former PCUS adopted a similar statement. Both sought to prohibit the ordination of “self-affirming practicing homosexual persons.” The General Assembly of this church determined in a permanent judicial commission (PJC) decision (Union Presbyterian Church of Blasdell v. The Presbytery of Western New York, Minutes, 1985, Part I, p. 118 et seq.) that those earlier statements carried the authority of the present Constitution. Thus, the earlier “definitive guidance” became an “authoritative interpretation” prohibiting the ordination of “self-affirming practicing homosexual persons.”

In 1996, the General Assembly proposed, and in 1997 the presbyteries adopted, an amendment to the Form of Government found at G-6.0106b, which provides:

Those who are called to office in the church are to lead a life in obedience to Scripture and in conformity to the historic confessional standards of the church. Among these standards is the requirement to live either in fidelity within the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman (W-4.9001), or chastity in singleness. Persons refusing to repent of any self-acknowledged practice which the confessions call sin shall not be ordained and/or installed as deacons, elders, or ministers of the Word and Sacrament.

The provisions of G-6.0106b have been interpreted by the General Assembly PJC on several occasions.

In Wier v. Second Presbyterian Church (Minutes, 1999, Part I, p. 831) [Wier I], the General Assembly PJC held that G-6.0106b does not authorize the nullification of an ordination that has been completed, even if the ordination might have been contrary to G-6.0106b’s provisions.

In Benton, et al v. Presbytery of Hudson River (Minutes, 2000, Part I, p. 586), the General Assembly PJC limited the application of G-6.0106b, finding: “The Appellants argue that since G-6.0106b is a foundational standard derived from the Confessions, it should be applied to standards for worship as well. This is unpersuasive. The plain language of G-6.0106b speaks only to ordination. The adoption of G-6.0106b did nothing to change the constitutional interpretation concerning worship practices set out in the 1991 Authoritative Interpretation ....” (Ibid, 587).

In Londonderry, et al v. Presbytery of Northern New England (Minutes, 2001, Part I, p. 577), the General Assembly PJC held that a higher governing body had an obligation to exercise pastoral oversight when an ordaining body (a session) adopted the position that “we vow to continue welcoming persons living singly or in committed relationships, regardless of sexual orientation, into the life, membership and leadership of this congregation on an equal basis, including eligibility for election and ordination as a ruling elder or deacon” (Ibid, pp. 577–78). In reaching this conclusion, the PJC noted: “G-6.0106b presents the qualifications established by the corporate judgment of the whole church for ordination to service as minister of the Word and Sacrament, elder, and deacon. The Historic Principles of Church Order are explicit as to the right of the church to make and to enforce these standards ....” (Ibid, p. 579). Further, the PJC noted: “It is not unusual for a document such as our Constitution, written at different periods of time and under different circumstances, to exhibit tensions and ambiguities in its provisions. Nevertheless, it is the task of governing bodies and judicial commissions to resolve them in such a way as to give effect to all provisions.”

In Wier v. Second Presbyterian Church of Ft. Lauderdale (Minutes, 2002, Part I, p. 339) [Wier II], the General Assembly PJC held that an allegation that the accused was a “practicing homosexual” was an insufficient allegation of an irregularity against the respondent, and that the complaint must allege that the person purportedly disqualified from ordination or installation must have self-acknowledged the proscribed sin. The PJC further explained: “Self-acknowledgment may come in many forms. In whatever form it may take, self-acknowledgment must be plain, palpable, and obvious, and details of this must be alleged in the complaint” (Ibid, p. 341). Finally, the PJC went on to hold that “[s]ince the standard for self-acknowledgment is that it be plain, palpable, and obvious, the ordaining and installing governing body is in the best position to make any such determination based on its knowledge of the life and character of the candidate” (Ibid).

In Presbytery of San Joaquin v. Presbytery of the Redwoods (Minutes, 2003, Part I, p. 277), the General Assembly PJC held that “sexual orientation alone would be no more sufficient or reasonable grounds for further questioning than would singleness, obesity or any other categorization. In other words, stereotypical profiling is not a reasonable or valid ground for singling out a candidate for additional questioning. Therefore, if a person does not self-acknowledge a practice that the confessions call sin, then a governing body has a positive obligation to make further inquiry only if it has direct and specific knowledge that said person is in violation of the ordination and installation standards of the Constitution” (Ibid, p. 280).

In McKittrick v. Session, West End Presbyterian Church of Albany, New York (Minutes, 2003, Part I, p. 272), the General Assembly PJC held that where an “elder had admitted during his examination that he was a gay man in a fifteen-year relationship, and that this information had previously been shared with his pastors and the nominating committee of the church” (Ibid, p. 272), a remedial case could seek a declaration that the installation was irregular. Further, the PJC held that a remedial case could challenge the procedures followed by the installing body, as opposed to the conduct of the individual installed. Finally, the PJC noted that “when, as in this case, an installation occurs immediately following the examination process, there may be no practical opportunity for a protesting or dissenting party to seek a stay of enforcement of the decision to install. The Presbyterian custom of conducting business ‘decently and in order’ should not be converted into a race in which the swift prevail. We undermine our system of mutual accountability when the proceedings such as ordination or installation are rushed with the consequence (whether intended or otherwise) that certain remedies become unavailable. Therefore, we encourage governing bodies to permit sufficient time between the examination and installation or ordination of a candidate so that there can be no intimation that any governing body intended to shield its action from scrutiny” (Ibid, 274).

These cases before the General Assembly PJC thus established the following authoritative interpretations of G-6.0106b:

(1) Governing bodies are not free to declare that they will disobey the constitutional standards for ordination and installation established by the whole church, and when faced with such a declaration higher governing bodies must exercise oversight, whether pastoral or administrative over the disobedient governing body.

(2) Section G-6.0106b applies to ordination and installation, and does not otherwise set constitutional limitations for governing bodies.

(3) Section G-6.0106b requires that the conduct complained of be self-acknowledged for it to constitute a basis for challenging a governing body’s decision to ordain or install, as opposed to its process for making such a decision. Self-acknowledged means that by words or actions, the person seeking ordination or installation has made it plain, palpable, and obvious that he or she is engaged in conduct “the confessions call sin.” Alleged sexual sin (lack of chastity in singleness or fidelity in marriage) is subject to the same high standard of self-acknowledgment as any sinful behavior in precluding ordination or installation.

(4) With respect to a challenge based on an alleged lack of chastity or fidelity, sexual orientation alone is not sufficient ground to require a governing body to make further inquiry into a person’s fitness for office.

(5) A challenge made to the process by which a governing body makes a decision to ordain or install is subject to review, and presumably to correction of the process by which such decisions are made.

The authoritative interpretation of G-6.0108 approved by the 217th General Assembly (2006) answered a question raised by G-6.0106b that neither the General Assembly nor the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission had previously addressed: how an ordaining or installing body should determine which practices the confessions call sin.

4. The 217th General Assembly's Approval of an Authoritative Interpretation of G-6.0108

The 217th General Assembly (2006) approved the following authoritative interpretation of G-6.0108 based on the recommendation of the Theological Task Force on the Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church:

- a. The Book of Confessions and the Form of Government of the Book of Order set forth the scriptural and constitutional standards for ordination and installation.
- b. These standards are determined by the whole church, after the careful study of Scripture and theology, solely by the constitutional process of approval by the General Assembly with the approval of the presbyteries. These standards may be interpreted by the General Assembly and its Permanent Judicial Commission.
- c. Ordaining and installing bodies, acting as corporate expressions of the church, have the responsibility to determine their membership by applying these standards to those elected to office. These determinations include:
  - (1) Whether a candidate being examined for ordination and/or installation as elder, deacon, or minister of Word and Sacrament has departed from scriptural and constitutional standards for fitness for office,
  - (2) Whether any departure constitutes a failure to adhere to the essentials of Reformed faith and polity under G-6.0108 of the Book of Order, thus barring the candidate from ordination and/or installation.
- d. Whether the examination and ordination and installation decision comply with the Constitution of the PC(USA), and whether the ordaining/installing body has conducted its examination reasonably, responsibly, prayerfully, and deliberately in deciding to ordain a candidate for church office is subject to review by higher governing bodies.
- e. All parties should endeavor to outdo one another in honoring one another's decisions, according the presumption of wisdom to ordaining/installing bodies in examining candidates and to the General Assembly, with presbyteries' approval, in setting standards. (Minutes, 2006, Part I, p. 515)

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advised the 217th General Assembly (2006) that this proposed authoritative interpretation G-6.0108 was a permissible interpretation if the assembly chose to approve it. Section G-6.0108 provides:

- a. It is necessary to the integrity and health of the church that the persons who serve in it as officers shall adhere to the essentials of the Reformed faith and polity as expressed in The Book of Confessions and the Form of Government. So far as may be possible without serious departure from these standards, without infringing on the rights and views of others, and without obstructing the constitutional governance of the church, freedom of conscience with respect to the interpretation of Scripture is to be maintained.
- b. It is to be recognized, however, that in becoming a candidate or officer of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) one chooses to exercise freedom of conscience within certain bounds. His or her conscience is captive to the Word of God as interpreted in the standards of the church so long as he or she continues to seek or hold office in that body. The decision as to whether a person has departed from essentials of Reformed faith and polity is made initially by the individual concerned but ultimately becomes the responsibility of the governing body in which he or she serves.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution has pointed out that G-6.0108 reflects an important principle of Presbyterian polity—the balance between the individual right of conscience recognized in the Westminster Confession and the necessity of uniformity within our denomination in those things our community has found to be essential. While the principle originated at the time of the Adopting Act in 1729 based on certain ministers' objections to portions of the Westminster Confession relating to the relationship between the church and civil government, over the history of the denomination the view of what is essential and nonessential broadened to other issues.

In response to the question as to whether the authoritative interpretation was impermissible because it allowed individuals to “obstruct the constitutional governance of the church,” the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advised the 217th General Assembly (2006):

“[O]bstructing the constitutional governance of the church” means a refusal to carry out the duties of office. For example, a candidate could say that he (presumably it would be a he) did not believe in the ordination of women and be ordained or installed as long as he was willing to participate in the functions of the office, including such ordinations or installations. See Hambrick v. PJC, Synod of North Carolina (No. 1-1983) and Simmons v. Presbytery of Suwannee (No. 197-4). A formal declaration not to comply with a Book of Order provision goes beyond bounds of freedom of conscience. Application of G-6.0108b in the examination process to interpret the bounds of acceptable belief does not. (Minutes, 2006, Part I, Errata Page)

Prior to the approval of this authoritative interpretation, the relationship between G-6.0108 and G-6.0106b had not been authoritatively interpreted by either previous General Assemblies or the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission. In its advice to the 217th General Assembly (2006), the Advisory Committee on the Constitution discussed the relationship between these two provisions:

By using the phrase “practice which the confessions call sin” rather than delineating practices that bar ordination, G-6.0106b creates an intersection between belief and practice. A person can only repent of conduct he or she genuinely believes to be sinful. If a person does not believe conduct to be sinful, he or she may abstain from that conduct out of concern for the well-being of the community (e.g., 1 Corinthians 8), but he or she cannot be said to repent of that conduct. The authoritative interpretation allows an ordaining or installing governing body, when faced with a particular practice that is described as sinful at some place in the confessions, that the candidate does not believe to be sinful, to ordain or install the candidate on the basis that the candidate's belief that the practice was not sinful does not depart from the essentials of the Reformed faith. (Minutes, 2006, Part I, p. 529)

During the course of the 217th General Assembly (2006), the proposed authoritative interpretation recommended by the Theological Task Force on the Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church was amended both by the committee and on the floor of the assembly. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advised the 217th General Assembly (2006) that these amendments did not change the effect of the authoritative interpretation from that described in the rationale offered by the Theological Task Force on the Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church.

5. Permanent Judicial Commission Application of the Authoritative Interpretation

The General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission recently issued three decisions—Buescher v. Presbytery of Olympia (Remedial Case 218-09); Bush v. the Presbytery of Pittsburgh (Remedial Case 218-10); Session of First Presbyterian Church of Washington v. Presbytery of Washington (Remedial Case 218-15)—applying the authoritative guidance to particular controversies. Each of these cases arose from the adoption by presbyteries of resolutions declaring certain “mandatory” provisions of the Form of Government as “essential,” and therefore not provisions from which a candidate for ordination or installation could depart without being barred from ordination or installation. In each case, the PJC determined that the presbytery under the authoritative interpretation was not permitted to determine outside the scope of a particular examination of a particular candidate what was a departure from what was essential:

[T]he broad reference in G-6.0106b to “any practice which the confessions call sin” puts the responsibility first on the candidate and then on the examining body to determine whether a departure is a failure to adhere to the essentials of Reformed faith and polity and the remainder of G-6.0108(a) with respect to freedom of conscience. The ordaining body must examine the candidate individually. The examining body is best suited to make decisions about the candidate’s fitness for office, and factual determinations by examining bodies are entitled to deference by higher governing bodies in any review process.

Bush further states that G-6.0108 protects “freedom of conscience, but only with respect to the interpretation of Scripture.” However, as the decision goes on to point out, such departures may relate to the Presbyterian system of doctrine, government, or discipline. In other words, Presbyterians may depart from our denomination’s doctrine, government, or discipline if they determine their interpretation of Scripture leads them to such a departure. In the context of an examination of a candidate for office, the governing body must determine, in light of the interpretation of Scripture offered, whether that departure is from something essential to the Reformed doctrine, government or discipline.

In addressing the meaning of the authoritative interpretation of G-6.0108, the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission indicated that the follow limitations apply: “It is up to the examining body to determine whether a candidate’s actions and beliefs, including with respect to G-6.0106b, are a serious departure from the essentials of Reformed faith and polity, or are such that they infringe on the rights and views of others, or would obstruct the constitutional governance of the church (G-6.0108a).”

The permanent judicial commission then went on to address the ability of governing bodies to apply the authoritative interpretation to the provisions of G-6.0106b:

As finally adopted, the Authoritative Interpretation does not equate “polity” with “behavior.” Nevertheless, the church has required those who aspire to ordained office to conform their actions, though not necessarily their beliefs or opinions, to certain standards, in those contexts in which the church has deemed conformity to be necessary or essential. Section G-6.0106b contains a provision where conformity is required by church officers “to live either in fidelity within the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman (W-4.9001), or in chastity in singleness.” The church has decided to single out this particular manner of life standard and require churchwide conformity to it for all ordained church officers. Therefore, the specific “fidelity and chastity” standard in G-6.0106b stands in contrast to the provisions of G-6.0106a, including those concerning faith, discipleship, belief and manner of life in the church and the world, and also the remainder of G-6.0106b. The candidate and examining body must follow G-6.0108 in reaching a determination as to whether the candidate for office has departed from essentials of Reformed faith and polity, but that determination does not rest on distinguishing “belief” and “behavior,” and does not permit departure from the “fidelity and chastity” requirement found in G-6.0106b.

Bush reached this conclusion based upon its view that the rationale of the Theological Task Force and of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution were not accepted by the final action of the assembly and its view that the requirements of G-6.0108 that bar obstruction of the constitutional governance of the church would be offended by a different understanding of the authoritative interpretation.

Thus, after Bush, the following are true:

a. Earlier holdings of the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission (GAPJC) remain in place, including the holdings that G-6.0106b requires that the conduct complained of be self-acknowledged for it to constitute a basis for challenging a governing body’s decision to ordain or install, as opposed to its process for making such a decision. Lack of chastity in singleness or of fidelity in marriage is subject to the same standard of self-acknowledgment as any sinful behavior in precluding ordination or installation. Self-acknowledged means that by words or actions, the person seeking ordination or installation has made it plain, palpable, and obvious that he or she is engaged in conduct “the confessions call sin.”

b. The authoritative interpretation approved by the 217th General Assembly (2006) remains in effect and governing bodies are not permitted to determine outside the examination of a particular candidate whether a departure is from the essentials of Reformed faith and polity. However, the authoritative interpretation does not apply to the second sentence of G-6.0106b.

6. Options Available to the 218th General Assembly (2008)

The 218th General Assembly (2008) may address the various items related to ordination and installation in a number of ways:

- a. The General Assembly may take no action, leaving in place the 2006 authoritative interpretation, as applied by Bush.
- b. The General Assembly may modify the authoritative interpretation to overturn its modification by Bush by clarifying how G-6.0108b may be used in the application of the second sentence of G-6.0106b. Item 05-12 recommends this course of action.
- c. The General Assembly may withdraw the 2006 authoritative interpretation. This item and Item 05-02 suggest this course of action.
- d. The General Assembly may approve a different authoritative interpretation of G-6.0108b. Items and 05-04 and 05-05 recommend this course of action.
- e. The General Assembly may submit to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative vote an amendment to G-6.0106b to limit a governing body's ability to find a departure to be from a nonessential tenet of Reformed faith and polity. Items 05-10 and 06-15 recommend this course of action.
- f. The General Assembly may submit to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative vote an amendment to repeal G-6.0106b (or replace it with a different standard), and either withdraw or leave in place the authoritative interpretation of gay and lesbian persons found in Blasdell. Items 05-06, 05-08, 05-09, 05-11, and 05-13 recommend this course of action.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution's advice as to each of these approaches is set forth in the items suggesting that approach.

7. Advice Concerning Item 05-01

Item 05-01 requests that the 218th General Assembly (2008) "rescind" the authoritative interpretation of G-6.0108b approved by the 217th General Assembly (2006). Initially, the General Assembly should consider whether the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission decisions issued since the overture was offered have addressed the concerns raised by the rationale to the overture.

In addition, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution reminds the General Assembly that a motion to rescind is not in order "[w]hen something has been done as the result of the vote on the main motion, that is impossible to undo" (Roberts Rules of Order, Newly Revised [10th ed.] p. 297, ll. 32–33). The authoritative interpretation of G-6.0108 approved by the 217th General Assembly (2006) governed all examinations for ordination or installation since its approval, and so cannot be "rescinded" with respect to those actions already taken. An assembly may, however, withdraw or replace an authoritative interpretation of a provision of the Book of Order approved by a previous assembly. Withdrawal of an authoritative interpretation leaves governing bodies and individual Presbyterians free to interpret the Book of Order provision without the guidance or restrictions imposed by that authoritative interpretation. If the 218th General Assembly (2008) desires to allow governing bodies and individual Presbyterians to interpret G-6.0108b without being bound by the authoritative interpretation of G-6.0108 approved by the 217th General Assembly (2006), then the proper action is to withdraw that authoritative interpretation and all subsequent judicial interpretations thereof. The General Assembly should note that the effect of such an action would not be to prohibit governing bodies and individual Presbyterians from continuing to follow this authoritative interpretation of G-6.0108. Rather, the effect of such a withdrawal of the authoritative interpretation would be to leave governing bodies and individual Presbyterians free to interpret G-6.0108 for themselves within the guidance provided by Bush absent the future approval of a new authoritative interpretation of that provision.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution notes that Item 05-01 is identical in effect to Items 05-02 and 05-04, and that those items could also be answered by the assembly's response to this request.

Impact of the proposed revisions to the proposed revised Form of Government before the assembly: To the extent the 218th General Assembly (2008) wishes to make amendment to the current G-6.0106b, the identical provision in the proposed Form of Government is found at G-2.0103b. To extent the 218th General Assembly (2008) wishes to make amendment to the current G-6.0108, the identical provision (although not divided into two paragraphs) in the proposed Form of Government is found at G-2.0104.

On Requesting That All Actions of the 217th General Assembly (2006) Related to the Report of the Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity Be Fully Rescinded—From the Presbytery of Central Washington.

The Presbytery of Central Washington overtures the 218th General Assembly (2008) to take the following action:

That all actions, either specifically noted or implied, of the 217th General Assembly (2006) of the PC(USA) related to the report of the Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity (PUP) (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 28–29, Item 06-01), be completely and fully rescinded.

Specifically, the authoritative interpretation of the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) of section G-6.0108 of the Book of Order, in Recommendation 5, shall be given no further force or effect (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 514–18, Item 06-01, Recommendation 5); such that all previous actions of General Assemblies or other judicatories that may have been in any way effected by this authoritative interpretation, shall be restored to the status they held in the church before such action of the 217th General Assembly (2006).

Rationale

These actions have begun to have a significant negative and irreparable effect on the church in loss of members, congregations, and financial giving.

Inactions at this next General Assembly to repair this damage will likely accelerate the loss of membership, churches, giving, and mistrust within the denomination.

The true effect and scope of these actions are so poorly understood that even the Stated Clerk cannot fully understand or predict what they may be. Even many of the commissioners of the 217th General Assembly (2006) reported after the vote that they were unsure of the full effects or meaning of the actions they had passed.

While it may not be necessary to rescind all the elements of the PUP report, it is important to be sure that there are no elements of the report that may, by direct reference or by implication, unintentionally effect future actions of any judicial commission or other church body.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution refers the 218th General Assembly (2008) to its advice concerning Item 05-01, which both sets forth the background that the Advisory Committee on the Constitution believes the assembly should consider in addressing each of the items related to ordination and installation of church officers and the Advisory Committee on the Constitution's advice concerning a nearly identical item of business.

On Directing the Stated Clerk to Collect and/or Develop Models of Examination Procedures—From the Presbytery of Scioto Valley.

The Presbytery of Scioto Valley respectfully overtures the 218th General Assembly (2008) to do the following:

- Commend presbyteries and sessions that have incorporated serious theological reflection and prayerful discernment into their examination procedures, as recommended by the 217th General Assembly (2006) in its approval of the report of the Theological Task Force on the Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 513ff), and the authoritative interpretation approved by the 217th General Assembly (2006) (Ibid, pp. 514–15).

- Direct the Stated Clerk to collect and/or develop models of such procedures, and make them available to the whole church.

~~• Remind sessions and presbyteries, as they carry out their constitutional responsibilities under G-6.0108, that~~

~~the purpose of ordination and installation examinations is to discern whether God has called and equipped persons for particular service, in order to proclaim the Gospel in word and deed, engage in faithful ministry in the world, build up the church of Jesus Christ, and bring glory to God;~~

~~in light of this purpose, persons being examined should be treated with respect;~~

~~theological questions should offer the opportunity for the prospective member to demonstrate knowledge of the Reformed tradition and insight in application;~~

~~—personal questions on all topics should be posed with discretion and sensitivity, and questioners should recognize “that it would be a hindrance to God’s grace to make a specific inquiry into the sexual orientation or practice of candidates for ordained office or ordained officers where the person involved has not taken the initiative in declaring his or her sexual orientation” (Minutes, UPCUSA, 1978, Part I, p. 264).]~~

Rationale

In its report to the 217th General Assembly (2006), the Theological Task Force on the Peace, Unity and Purity of the Church reminded us all that:

Peace, unity, and purity are gifts of the Spirit to the church. They are also hard won virtues for any church, as our review of Presbyterian history reminds us. Presbyterians have regularly and sometimes vehemently disagreed about fundamental features of our confession, order, and discipline. How we deal with one another in controversy—especially how we accept judgment and reconciliation won for us in Christ—is a challenge to our discipleship, a test of our faith, and our most convincing witness to the truth and power of the gospel we proclaim. (A Season of Discernment, Final Report of the Theological Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church, 2005, Office of the General Assembly, Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), OGA-05-088, p. 32, lines 920–926; also found at <<http://www.pcusa.org/peaceunitypurity/finalreport.htm>>)

The 217th General Assembly (2006), in approving its recommendation, urged our denomination to be church in a new way, a new way that paradoxically arose out of some of our oldest, deepest principles. Included in these principles are:

All ministry in the Church is a gift from Jesus Christ. Members and officers alike serve mutually under the mandate of Christ who is the chief minister of all. His ministry is the basis of all ministries; the standard for all offices is the pattern of the one who came “not to be served but to serve.” (Matt. 20:28) (Book of Order, G-6.0101)

One responsibility of membership in the church is the election of officers who are ordained to fulfill particular functions. The existence of these offices in no way diminishes the importance of the commitment of all members to the total ministry of the church. These ordained officers differ from other members in function only. (Book of Order, G-6.0102)

38.287

Ordination is an act by which those God calls to necessary, representative offices of leadership in God’s service are identified and authorized for their work. The word ordination is derived from the word “order.” In ordination the church orders itself for the ministry of God’s service, authorizing and inducting women and men with particular gifts to equip and lead it in its service of God’s Reign in the world.

38.288

Within the Reformed tradition, ordination refers to more than the liturgical action of prayer with the laying on of hands. It also includes actions by which the church discerns whether someone has been called by God:

- Testing of someone’s sense of inner call—gifts, character, knowledge, and fitness for leadership;
- Election by some community of God’s people; and
- Ratification of these matters by some governing body of the church. (Minutes, 1992, Part I, p. 1046, Theology and Worship Ministry Unit Proposal of the Task Force on Theology and Practice of Ordination to Office in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)).

Regrettably, our old differences are hard to give up. In too many parts of our church, we have been unwilling to try the new way offered us. Nevertheless, signs of hope surround us. Many sessions and presbyteries have taken the actions of the 217th General Assembly (2006) seriously, and have tried to do church in a new way. It is hard work to rebuild trust in a denomination too long at odds within itself. It requires time and resources to (in the words of the task force): “school ourselves in the foundational theological commitments and the practical wisdom . . . that have allowed Presbyterian churches at their best to remain grounded and, at the same time, flexible and open to alternative means within and beyond their history and practice” (A Season of Discernment, p. 30). The Presbytery of Scioto Valley urges the 218th General Assembly (2008) to commit the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to continue the work of building a faithful, trusting church that the last General Assembly began by reaffirming the actions of the 217th General Assembly (2006) and ensuring that resources that allow that work to be done are shared throughout our denomination.

Concurrence to Item 05-03 from the Presbyteries of Giddings-Lovejoy, Middle Tennessee, National Capital, and the Western Reserve.

Concurrence to Item 05-03 from the Presbytery of Cayuga Syracuse (with Additional Rationale)

Rationale

We reaffirm our support of the Theological Task Force on Peace Unity and Purity’s report and recommendations approved by the 217th General Assembly (2006) and believe it still provides positive guidance to sessions, presbyteries, synods, and the General Assembly as we together seek to be faithful to God in our examination of church officers.

We believe that the selection of church officers is an important part of our lives together. And our desire is to honor the standards and procedures of the examination of officers as part of our connection to the PC(USA).

We believe that all who serve in the church do so in response to the call and mandate of Jesus Christ and that persons ordained to positions of leadership are set apart to perform particular functions yet all are equally called to serve as Christ came to serve (1 Cor. 12:4–11; Eph. 4:1–6; G-5.0102, G-6.0101, G-6-0102).

We believe the process and act of ordination is a sacred one and is more than the liturgical action of prayer and the laying on of hands. We believe it includes the discerning process through which ordaining bodies seek affirmation of God’s call. This discerning process involves the testing of someone’s sense of inner call—gifts, character, knowledge, and fitness for leadership; election by the community of faith; and ratification of a governing body.

Rationale

Two years ago, the 217th General Assembly (2006) presented to the church—in its authoritative interpretation—a way of living together as Christ’s church, even in the presence of disagreements (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 514–15). Five years before that, the 213th General Assembly (2001) had appointed a task force to lead the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) “in spiritual discernment of our Christian identity, in and for the 21st century” (Minutes, 2001, Part I, p. 29), particularly in light of longstanding disagreements in the church. Faithful to its mandate, that task force proposed—and the 217th General Assembly (2006) approved—a process by which congregations and governing bodies throughout our church may reflect on and discern the matters that unite and divide us.

In its report to the 217th General Assembly (2006), the Theological Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church reminded us all that:

Peace, unity, and purity are gifts of the Spirit to the church. They are also hard won virtues for any church, as our review of Presbyterian history reminds us. Presbyterians have regularly and sometimes vehemently disagreed about fundamental features of our confession, order, and discipline. How we deal with one another in controversy—especially how we accept judgment and reconciliation won for us in Christ—is a challenge to our discipleship, a test of our faith, and our most convincing witness to the truth and power of the gospel we proclaim. (Theological Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church Final Report, p. 32, Lines 921–27)

The 217th General Assembly (2006) urged our denomination to be church in a new way, a new way that paradoxically arose out of some of our oldest, deepest principles. Included in these principles are:

- “All ministry in the Church is a gift from Jesus Christ. Members and officers alike serve mutually under the mandate of Christ who is the chief minister of all. His ministry is the basis of all ministries; the standard for all offices is the pattern of the one who came ‘not to be served but to serve.’ (Matt. 20:28)” (Book of Order, G-6.0101).
- “One responsibility of membership in the church is the election of officers who are ordained to fulfill particular functions. The existence of these offices in no way diminishes the importance of the commitment of all members to the total ministry of the church. These ordained officers differ from other members in function only” (Book of Order, G-6.0102).

The election of officers who are ordained to fulfill particular functions is an important and vital function of church members. Ordination is an act by which those God calls to necessary, representative offices of leadership in God’s service are identified and authorized for their work. In ordination the church orders itself for the ministry, authorizing and inducting women and men with particular gifts to equip and lead it in its service of God’s reign in the world.

Within the Reformed tradition, ordination requires the testing of a person’s inner call; gifts, character, knowledge, and fitness for leadership. In discerning God’s call, the church enters into a covenant relationship with the candidate, walks with the candidate during a period of preparation, and ultimately examines the candidate, assessing how the candidate’s life demonstrates the gospel of Jesus Christ in the church and in the world (Book of Order, G-6.0106a). Such examination should be thorough, respectful, and always guided by the Holy Spirit at work in the church.

It is not easy work the 217th General Assembly (2006) commended to us, but it is a proven way. Since 2006 many sessions and presbyteries have taken the actions of the 217th General Assembly (2006) seriously, and have tried to do church in a new way. It is hard work to rebuild trust in a denomination too long at odds within itself. It requires time and resources to (in the words of the task force) “school ourselves in the foundational theological commitments and the practical wisdom ... that have allowed Presbyterian churches at their best to remain grounded and, at the same time, flexible and open to alternative means within and beyond their history and practice” (Theological Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church Final Report, p. 30, lines 877–82). The Presbytery of the Redwoods urges the 218th General Assembly (2008) to commit the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to continue the work of building a faithful and trusting church by reaffirming the actions of the 217th General Assembly (2006) and ensuring that resources that allow that work to be done are shared throughout our denomination.

Concurrence to Item 05-03 from the Presbytery of Maumee Valley (with Additional Rationale).

Rationale

“All ministry in the Church is a gift from Jesus Christ. Members and officers alike serve mutually under the mandate of Christ who is the chief minister of all. His ministry is the basis of all ministries; the standard for all offices is the pattern of the one who came ‘not to be served but to serve.’ (Matt. 20:28)” (Book of Order, G-6.0101)

“One responsibility of membership in the church is the election of officers who are ordained to fulfill particular functions. The existence of these offices in no way diminishes the importance of the commitment of all members to the total ministry of the church. These ordained officers differ from other members in function only.” (Book of Order, G-6.0102)

Within the Reformed tradition, ordination refers to more than the liturgical action of prayer with the laying on of hands. It also includes actions by which the church discerns whether someone has been called by God:

- Testing of someone’s sense of inner call—gifts, character, knowledge, and fitness for leadership;
- Election by some community of God’s people; and
- Ratification of these matters by some governing body of the church. (Minutes, 1992, Part I, p. 1046, Theology and Worship Ministry Unit Proposal of the Task Force on Theology and Practice of Ordination to Office in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)).

While God has equipped us with gifts necessary to our calling, our ministry together is to be grounded in our love for one another.

“We are convinced that the Holy Spirit still calls people to various offices in the church and gives diverse gifts to believers.

We are to use them to speak and embody plainly the gospel of Christ in the world

No gift is of value without love.” (“A Declaration of Faith” published by the Office of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), PDS #OGA-91-005).

The 2005/2007 version of the Book of Order described the purpose of theological questioning in this manner: “This examination shall assess the candidate’s capacity to make effective use of the classical theological disciplines and of the confessional documents of the church in relating the gospel to the faith of the church in the contemporary world” (G-14.0310d(3)).

A previous assembly has clearly stated that “it would be a hindrance to God’s grace to make a specific inquiry into the sexual orientation or practice of candidates for ordained office or ordained officers where the person involved has not taken the initiative in declaring his or her sexual orientation. (Policy Statement and Recommendations, 190th General Assembly (1978) of the United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America.)

Ordination is an act by which those God calls to necessary, representative offices of leadership in God Service are identified and authorized for their work. ### Concurrence to Item 05-03 from the Presbytery of Albany (with Additional Rationale)

Rationale

1. The 217th General Assembly (2006) approved an authoritative interpretation of G-6.0108 and other recommendations of the Theological Task Force on the Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church that remind the church of the primary role of sessions and presbyteries in decisions about the ordination and installation of officers. The task force report, which the assembly received with thanks, expressed the fervent hope that by reemphasizing the historic Presbyterian process of examination for ordination, the church could discern God’s will and the Spirit’s leading even while Presbyterians continue to disagree deeply about many topics, including biblical interpretation and human sexuality. The church has just begun to implement these recommendations, so it is important to keep them at the forefront. That is the purpose of this overture.

2. Recently, attention in the secular and church press has focused on congregations that are considering withdrawal from their denominations. Many more congregations and governing bodies, however, are working hard to keep together Christians who disagree but who share a deep bond in Christ. In our denomination, some sessions and presbyteries have led the way in developing practices of discernment and dialogue. They deserve the church’s thanks and commendation. The collection and distribution of examples and models already in use will help others to incorporate discernment practices.

3. “All ministry in the Church is a gift from Jesus Christ. Members and officers alike serve mutually under the mandate of Christ who is the chief minister of all. His ministry is the basis of all ministries; the [highest] standard for all [Christians] is the pattern of the one who came ‘not to be served but to serve.’ (Matt. 20:28)” (Book of Order, G-6.0101).

4. The election of officers who are ordained to fulfill particular functions is a solemn function of church members. Ordination is an act by which those God calls to necessary, representative offices of leadership in God’s service are identified and authorized for their work. In ordination the church orders itself for the ministry, authorizing and inducting women and men with particular gifts to equip and lead it in its service of God’s Reign in the world.

5. Within the Reformed tradition, ordination requires the testing of a person’s inner call—gifts, character, knowledge, and fitness for leadership. For this reason, serious examination of candidates for office is centrally important, especially in light of the responsibility of the ordaining/installing body to decide whether the candidate meets all essential standards of faith and practice.

6. It is critically important that examinations be conducted in a respectful manner that bespeaks gratitude for the candidates’ offer of their lives to God. Personal questioning about such matters as finances, family, and sexuality should be sensitive and considerate. Policy statements and court rulings have stressed the importance of fairness and sensitivity with respect to sexual matters. The 190th General Assembly of the United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America (which adopted the “Definitive Guidance”) said in its recommendations “that it would be a hindrance to God’s grace to make a specific inquiry into the sexual orientation or practice of candidates for ordained office or ordained officers where the person involved has not taken the initiative in declaring his or her sexual orientation.” The Permanent Judicial Commission of the General Assembly confirmed in Wier v. Second Presbyterian Church, Fort Lauderdale, Remedial Case 214-5, that G-6.0106 applies to “self-acknowledged” practices that depart from standards and that such self-acknowledgement must be “plain, palpable and obvious.”

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 05-03

Advice on Item 05-03—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 218th General Assembly (2008) regarding 05-03 with the following comment.

Item 05-03 does not seek constitutional action, but rather the distribution of resources related to the authoritative interpretation of G-6.0108b to the denomination. Nevertheless, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution refers the 218th General Assembly (2008) to its advice concerning Item 05-01, which sets forth the background that the Advisory Committee on the Constitution believes the assembly may find useful in considering this item.

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 05-03

Advice and Counsel on Item 05-03—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC).

Item 05-03 directs the Stated Clerk to collect and/or develop models of examination procedures.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC) advises that this item be approved.

Rationale

The 217th General Assembly (2006) approved the Theological Task Force on the Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church’s recommendation to “urge governing bodies, congregations, and other groups of Presbyterians to follow the example of the task force and other groups that, in the face of difficult issues, have engaged in processes of intensive discernment through worship, community building, study, and collaborative work.”

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns concurs with the task force’s commitment to listen for the wisdom and guidance of the Holy Spirit in the faith community through respectful, open dialogue. As God’s people share their own personal stories and engage in respectful, honest conversation, we are often moved by the Holy Spirit to new understandings. Item 05-03 supports this kind of dialogue and provides a concrete way for congregations to engage in such conversations. We affirm our corporate belief in the Holy Spirit who calls us to “hear the voices of peoples long silenced” (The Book of Confessions, A Brief Statement of Faith). This recommendation provides a substantial means of hearing these previously silenced voices.

Opening ourselves to the Spirit, we expect new insights and pray for our church to grow new ears and eyes. We lift up the type of discernment discussed here and also found in Item 05-13.

Item 05-04

[The assembly answered Item 05-04 by the action taken on Item 05-12. See p. 42.]

On Rescinding Recommendation 5 of the Report of the Theological Task Force on the Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church, and Approving a New Authoritative Interpretation Regarding Ordination Standards—From the Presbytery of Huntingdon

The Presbytery of Huntingdon overtures the 218th General Assembly (2008) to do the following:

1. Rescind the action of the 217th General Assembly (2006) on Recommendation 5, the authoritative interpretation, of the Report of the Task Force on the Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church.
2. Approve a new authoritative interpretation affirming that G-6.0106b, “Those who are called to office in the church are to lead a life in obedience to Scripture and in conformity to the historic confessional standards of the church. Among these standards is the requirement to live either in fidelity within the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman (W-4.9001), or chastity in singleness. Persons refusing to repent of any self-acknowledged practice which the confessions call sin shall not be ordained and/or installed as deacons, elders, or ministers of the Word and Sacrament,” is an essential of the Reformed faith, any departure from which constitutes a serious breach of the standards and essentials of the Reformed faith and polity as expressed in The Book of Confessions and the Form of Government thus barring the candidate from ordination and/or installation (Book of Order, G-6.0108b). Furthermore, no inquirer who cannot affirm the standards of the requirements expressed in G-6.0106b shall be promoted to candidacy, and no candidate who cannot affirm the standards of the requirements expressed in G-6.0106b shall be deemed certified ready for examination for ordination. Any governing body that fails to uphold these standards shall be deemed to be obstructing the constitutional governance of the church (Book of Order, G-6.0108a).

Rationale

Recommendation 5 of the report of the Task Force on the Peace, Unity and Purity of the Church, approved by the 217th General Assembly (2006) as an authoritative interpretation of the Constitution, stated:

- a. The Book of Confessions and the Form of Government of the Book of Order set forth the scriptural and constitutional standards for ordination and installation.
- b. These standards are determined by the whole church, after the careful study of Scripture and theology, solely by the constitutional process of approval by the General Assembly with the approval of the presbyteries. These standards may be interpreted by the General Assembly and its Permanent Judicial Commission.
- c. Ordaining and installing bodies, acting as corporate expressions of the church, have the responsibility to determine their membership by applying these standards to those elected to office. These determinations include:
  - (1) Whether a candidate being examined for ordination and/or installation as elder, deacon, or minister of Word and Sacrament has departed from scriptural and constitutional standards for fitness for office.
  - (2) Whether any departure constitutes a failure to adhere to the essentials of Reformed faith and polity under G-6.0108 of the Book of Order, thus barring the candidate from ordination and/or installation.
- d. Whether the examination and ordination and installation decision comply with the Constitution of the PC(USA), and whether the ordaining/installing body has conducted its examination reasonably, responsibly, prayerfully, and deliberately in deciding to ordain a candidate for church office is subject to review by higher governing bodies.
- e. All parties should endeavor to outdo one another in honoring one another's decisions, according the presumption of wisdom to ordaining/installing bodies in examining candidates and to the General Assembly, with presbyteries' approval, in setting standard. (Minutes, 2006, Part I, p. 515)

The approval of this statement as an authoritative interpretation does not seem to be promoting the peace, unity, and purity of the church.

The approval of this authoritative interpretation has created confusion and doubt about our constitutional standards and their applicability to the entire church, and specifically has created confusion about whether or not G-6.0106b is an essential of the Reformed faith, any departure from which constitutional standard "constitutes a failure to adhere to the essentials of Reformed faith ... thus barring the candidate from ordination and/or installation."

The General Assembly has repeatedly affirmed the gifts and requirements for ministry incorporated in the Form of Government of the Book of Order (G-6.0106b). Many persons in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) have focused on Recommendation 5 of the report of the Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church, all of which was approved as an authoritative interpretation of the Constitution, that reminded governing bodies of their responsibility to determine membership by applying the standards of the Constitution, rather than on their responsibility to uphold the standards of that Constitution. This has contributed to controversy and division in the church. Section G-14.0480 reminds us that ordination for the office of minister of the Word and Sacrament is an act of the whole church, but the current authoritative interpretation encourages individual governing bodies to set their own individual standards, which breaks the unity of the church and makes a mockery of our Constitution, and brings the vow of all officers of the denomination to further the peace, unity, and purity of the church (W-4.4003g) into disrepute.

We believe that a clear statement, expressed as an authoritative interpretation, that the willingness to adhere to the standards of G-6.0106b is an essential requirement for ordination to and holding office in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) would contribute greatly to the peace, unity, and purity of the denomination.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 05-04

Advice on Item 05-04—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 218th General Assembly (2008) to disapprove Item 05-04.

Rationale

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution refers the 218th General Assembly (2008) to its advice concerning Item 05-01, which sets forth the background that the Advisory Committee on the Constitution believes the assembly should consider in addressing each of the items related to ordination and installation of church officers.

Item 05-04 requests that the 218th General Assembly (2008) both rescind the authoritative interpretation of G-6.0108 approved by the 217th General Assembly (2006) and approve a new authoritative interpretation of G-6.0108. With respect to the request to rescind this authoritative interpretation, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution refers the 218th General Assembly (2008) to its advice concerning Item 05-01, which also sets forth the relevant considerations if the 218th General Assembly (2008) wishes to address the prong of this overture seeking to rescind the authoritative interpretation of G-6.0108.

The General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission decision in Buescher v. Presbytery of Olympia (Remedial Case 218-09) states as follows:

By declaring in advance the mandates to be “essentials,” and by establishing in advance the mandates to be an absolute bar to ordination and installation, the Presbytery violated G-6.0108 and the Authoritative Interpretation. As was stated in the 1927 Report of the Special Commission of 1925 (the “Swearingen Commission Report”) Presbyterian Church in the United States of America Minutes, 1927, pp. 78–79:

One fact often overlooked is that by the Act of 1729, the decision as to essential and necessary articles was to be in specific cases. It was no general authority that might be stated in exact language and applied rigidly to every case without distinction. It was an authority somewhat undefined, to be invoked in each particular instance . . . . It was clearly the intention that this decision as to essential and necessary articles was to be made after the candidate had been presented and had declared his [or her] beliefs and stated his [or her] motives personally, and after the examining body . . . had full opportunity to judge the man himself [or woman, herself] as well as abstract questions of doctrine.

The proposed authoritative interpretation in Item 05-04 would violate this prohibition by declaring in advance mandates to be essentials.

(The Advisory Committee on the Constitution also advises disapproval of this overture because it seeks to expand the prohibitions of G-6.0106b to those seeking to become inquirers and candidates in the process leading to ordination. Section G-6.0106b does not have application to such individuals or the process by which individuals are approved to move to these stages in the discernment process. Moreover, the overture would bar individuals “who cannot affirm the standards of the requirements expressed in G-6.0106b” from becoming candidates or being certified for ordination. There is no basis in our polity for requiring agreement with specific provisions of the Form of Government, as opposed to conformity with its behavioral standards, as a precondition to ordination, installation or the steps leading thereto.)

As suggested in response to Item 05-05, if the 218th General Assembly (2008) does not believe that Bush addresses the concerns raised sufficiently and desires that G-6.0108b not be applied to making such a determination in the context of an examination for ordination or installation, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises that the assembly either (1) withdraw the authoritative interpretation of G-6.0108 and approve an authoritative interpretation of G-6.0106b defining which practices the confessions call sin; or (2) submit to the presbyteries an amendment to G-6.0106b that replaces the phrase “practices the confessions call sin” with a list of conduct the assembly believes should bar ordination or installation, or with some other standard that does not require definition through interpretation of the confessions.

Impact of the proposed revisions to the proposed revised Form of Government before the assembly: To the extent the 218th General Assembly (2008) wishes to make amendment to the current G-6.0106b, the identical provision in the proposed Form of Government is found at 2.0103b.

On Approving an Authoritative Interpretation to G-6.0108, “Freedom of Conscience—Interpretation of Scriptures”—From the Presbytery of Cherokee.

The Presbytery of Cherokee overtures the 218th General Assembly (2008) of the PC(USA) to approve the following authoritative interpretation of subsection G-6.0108 of the Book of Order:

A governing body is not permitted to ordain or install a candidate for deacon, elder, or minister of the Word and Sacrament after determining that the candidate has departed, without repentance, from the standards for ordination expressly provided in the Book of Order. Such unrepentant departure is a failure to adhere to the essentials of Reformed polity, and is a negative answer to the required constitutional question: Will you be governed by our church’s polity? Provisions of the Book of Order are signified as being standards by use of the term “shall,” “is/are to be,” “requirement,” or equivalent expression.

1. Summary

The 217th General Assembly (2006) approved, with amendment, an authoritative interpretation (AI) of G-6.0108 recommended in the report of the Theological Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church. The AI sets forth the manner in which the church establishes ordination standards and the process that governing bodies are to follow in applying those standards. While the AI mentions departures from “essentials of faith and polity,” the absence of specificity regarding compliance with Book of Order requirements leaves considerable confusion. Particularly, the AI is not clear as to whether a governing body may ordain or install a candidate who has departed, without repentance, from standards for ordination expressly provided in the Book of Order.

This lack of clarity has created confusion and has led many sessions and presbyteries to adopt resolutions that set their own policies, so further interpretation is needed. The AI proposed in this overture clarifies the question in a manner that is consistent with the Book of Order, with previous authoritative interpretations, and with rulings of the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission.

The contrary interpretation—that a governing body may ordain or install such a candidate—is not consistent with those authorities, and requires that certain express provisions of the Book of Order be ignored. It would be a de facto amendment to, rather than an interpretation of, the Book of Order, and would require approval of the presbyteries to be valid.

These summary statements are developed more fully, with references, below.

2. Lack of Clarity in the 2006 AI

The 2006 AI is not clear as to whether ordaining bodies can override the plain meaning of provisions of the Book of Order and judicial directives that require compliance with expressed standards<sup>1</sup> for ordination. While the task force’s supporting rationale states that an ordaining body can ordain a candidate not compliant with G-6.0106b [lines 1222–30], the AI itself makes no such explicit statement. The Office of the General Assembly has issued Constitutional Musing #11 and Advisory Opinion #18 to clarify the matter, but they fail to do so, in large part because CM #11 contradicts portions of AO #18.

3. Consistency of the Proposed AI with the Church’s Constitution

Sections G-1.0300, G-1.0400, and G-4.0300 set forth the historic basic principles of church government and polity. Four of these principles, together with express provisions of the Book of Order that are based on them, establish church polity related to standards for ordination. They are:

The church’s right to establish ordination standards. In its ruling on the Londonderry case, the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission stated that G-1.0302 explicitly gives the church the right to make and enforce qualifications for ordination established by the whole church.<sup>2</sup> Several subsections of the Book of Order establish specific requirements for ordination. Among them are those relating to training and education [G-14.0240, G-14.0450], successful completion of an examination [G-14.0240, G-14.0482], affirmative response to the constitutional questions [G-14.0300, G-14.0490, W-4.4000], personal conduct [G-6.0106b], and adherence to the essentials of Reformed faith and polity [G-6.0108a]. As provisions of the Book of Order, these requirements are standards adopted by the whole church.

The church's unity. The ordination or installation of an elder, deacon, or minister of the Word and Sacrament by an appropriate governing body is an act of the whole church [G-1.0400, G-9.0103, G-14.0480]. With power to act on behalf of the whole church, a governing body must faithfully apply the ordination standards adopted by the whole church. The failure of governing bodies to do so, without prompt correction by higher governing bodies, would seriously damage the church's unity and diminish the authority of the church's constitution.

The review of governing bodies' actions. Ordination decisions and all other actions of a governing body are subject to review by the next higher governing body [G-4.0301f, G-9.0103].

The freedom of conscience. The first sentence of paragraph 6.109 of The Book of Confessions (Westminster Confession) proclaims freedom of conscience "in matters of faith or worship." This sentence is the foundation of the principle that the Book of Order reaffirms in G-1.0301a. But there are limits placed on this freedom in both The Book of Confessions and the Book of Order.

In The Book of Confessions (6.110), immediately following paragraph 6.109, is the warning: "They who, upon pretense of Christian liberty, do practice any sin, or cherish any lust, do thereby destroy the end of Christian liberty." Freedom of conscience is not intended to be a dispensation to continue sinful practices.

In the Book of Order, G-6.0108 limits freedom of conscience by providing that it is to be maintained unless there is: (1) a serious departure from "the essentials of Reformed faith and polity as expressed in The Book of Confessions and the Form of Government," (2) an infringement on the rights and views of others, or (3) an obstruction of the constitutional governance of the church. The proposed AI is consistent with these limitations, as explained below.

- In general, the Form of Government expresses essentials of Reformed polity by establishing requirements or mandates and, in relation to ordination, by adopting ordination standards. Therefore, a candidate's declaration of a scruple with respect to an ordination standard expressed in the Book of Order and his or her unrepentant failure to comply with it would be a serious departure from the essentials.

- An ordination standard adopted by the whole church necessarily represents the views of many Presbyterians. The ordination of a candidate who deliberately and without repentance refuses to comply with such a standard would be a clear infringement of the rights and views of many others.

- The ordination of a candidate who deliberately and without repentance refuses to comply with an ordination standard adopted by the whole church would be an obstruction of the constitutional governance of the church because the ordaining body would have ignored a requirement of the Book of Order. It also would indicate that the candidate could not honestly give an affirmative answer to the required constitutional question: Will you be governed by our church's polity?

It should be noted that paragraph c of the 2006 AI, which describes how governing bodies are to apply ordination standards, calls for them only to make a determination relative to the first bulleted item above. It does not include the determinations relative to the second and third bullets, which are clearly required by G-6.0108a. This is another reason that further interpretation is needed.

In the Londonderry ruling, the GAPJC rejected an assertion that G-1.0301a and G-6.0108 affirm freedom of conscience with respect to matters addressed by G-6.0106b.<sup>3</sup> The proposed AI is consistent with that ruling.

The interpretation that a governing body may ordain or install a candidate who has departed, without repentance, from standards for ordination expressly provided in the Book of Order would permit inconsistent application of standards that could be unfair to some candidates. One governing body may deny ordination to a candidate because it determines a particular manner-of-life practice of the candidate to be a departure from the essentials of Reformed polity, while another governing body may ordain a candidate who engages in that same practice. The question of whether a candidate's engaging in a particular practice is a departure from the essentials should apply to that practice, not to the candidate. Consistent application of the standards adopted by the whole church is required to assure fairness to all candidates.

This interpretation, which is contrary to the proposed AI, also would create a conflict between two parts of the Book of Order, the Form of Government and the Rules of Discipline. A candidate's unrepentant declaration that his or her personal conduct does not comply with a manner-of-life mandate of the Form of Government is an admission of guilt of an offense. An offense is defined in the Rules of Discipline [D-2.0203b] as an act contrary to the Scriptures or the church's Constitution; it does not have to be a departure from the essentials of Reformed polity. If the ordaining body determines that the conduct is not a departure from the essentials and ordains the candidate, the candidate would be subject to censure and the ordaining body would be subject to correction by a higher body for failing to initiate disciplinary action. It should be noted that, in the Londonderry ruling, the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission stated that tensions and ambiguities between provisions of the church's Constitution are to be resolved "in such a way as to give effect to all provisions. It is not within the power of any governing body or judicial commission to declare a properly adopted provision of the Constitution to be invalid.”<sup>4</sup>

Endnotes

1. The word “standard” can have several meanings. In this interpretation, “standard” means “requirement.” (See World Book Dictionary, 2003, definition 2, and American Heritage Dictionary, 4th Ed., 2000, definition 6b.) That “requirement” is the proper meaning in this context is clearly shown by the text of the second sentence of G-6.0106b, the focus of this debate. It begins: “Among these standards is the requirement to live either....” [Emphasis added.]

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 05-05

Advice on Item 05-05—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 218th General Assembly (2008) to disapprove Item 05-05.

Rationale

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution refers the 218th General Assembly (2008) to its advice concerning Item 05-01, which sets forth the background that the Advisory Committee on the Constitution believes the assembly should consider in addressing each of the items related to ordination and installation of church officers.

Item 05-05 seeks to amend the authoritative interpretation of G-6.0108 approved by the 217th General Assembly (2006) in response to the recommendations of the Theological Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 28–29, 523). The stated intent of this item is to clarify “whether a governing body may ordain or install a candidate who has departed, without repentance, from standards for ordination expressly provided in the Book of Order.”

Initially, the 218th General Assembly (2008) may wish to consider the application of this authoritative interpretation of G-6.0108 in Bush v. the Presbytery of Pittsburgh (Remedial Case 218-10), as discussed in the Advisory Committee on the Constitution’s advice with respect to Item 05-01. If the assembly believes that this application answers the concern raised in the rationale to the overture, it may answer the overture by disapproving it with the comment that the Bush decision has addressed the concern raised in the overture.

If the 218th General Assembly (2008) does not believe that the Bush decision has addressed the concern raised in the overture, the 218th General Assembly (2008) has the power to modify authoritative interpretations approved by previous assemblies. However, the language proposed by this overture would not accomplish its stated intent and fails to reflect the applicable provisions of the Book of Order relating to ordination and installation of church officers.

Specifically, the overture seeks to prohibit presbyteries and sessions from ordaining or installing individuals who depart from “the standards for ordination expressly provided in the Book of Order.” The overture then proposes to define “standards” as follows: “Provisions of the Book of Order are signified as being standards by use of the term ‘shall,’ ‘is/are to be,’ ‘requirement,’ or equivalent expression.”

While the overture speaks to “standards,” its rationale suggests that it is principally concerned with the provisions of G-6-0106b. “Required,” is not used in G-6.0106b. “Shall not” is used in reference to what is permissible on the part of an ordaining or installing body. The mandatory language in G-6.0106b is “Persons refusing to repent of any self-acknowledged practice which the confessions call sin shall not be ordained and/or installed as deacons, elders, or ministers of the Word and Sacrament.” The “shall not” modifies the verb “be ordained and/or installed.” The sentence is written in the passive voice, and so the “shall not” applies to what a governing body may not do.

Contrary to the suggestion of the overture, the existing authoritative interpretation does not change the mandatory nature of the “shall not” as it applies to the acts of ordination or installation. What the authoritative interpretation addresses is the means of ascertaining to whom the “shall not” applies, not what “shall not” be done.

The word “standards” is used in the first and second sentences of G-6.0106b. No General Assembly PJC decision or authoritative interpretation has interpreted the first sentence of G-6.0106b. The Bush decision found that the authoritative interpretation of G-6.0108 did not allow a governing body to find a departure from the standards of the second sentence to be found “non-essential.” To the extent that the 218th General Assembly (2008) does not believe that the Bush decision adequately addressed the concerns raised in the rationale to this overture, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution does not believe that the language proposed would satisfy those concerns either.

The overture assumes that G-6.0106b is clear as to who can and cannot be ordained and installed under the existing language of the Book of Order, and that the authoritative interpretation approved by the 217th General Assembly (2006) departed from that clarity. If the 218th General Assembly (2008) does not believe that Bush addresses the concerns raised sufficiently and desires that G-6.0108b not be applied to making such a determination in the context of an examination for ordination or installation, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises that the assembly either (1) withdraw the authoritative interpretation or G-6.0108b and approve an authoritative interpretation of G-6.0106b defining which practices the confessions call sin; or (2) submit to the presbyteries an amendment to G-6.0106b that replaces the phrase “practices the confessions call sin” with a list of conduct the assembly believes should bar ordination or installation or some other standard that does not require definition through interpretation of the confessions.

Impact of the proposed revisions to the proposed revised Form of Government before the assembly: To the extent the 218th General Assembly (2008) wishes to make amendment to the current G-6.0106b, the identical provision in the proposed Form of Government is found at 2.0103b.

[The assembly answered Item 05-06 by the action taken on Item 05-09. See p. 42.]

On Deleting G-6.0106b, and on Providing a New Authoritative Interpretation—From the Presbytery of Hudson River.

The Presbytery of Hudson River respectfully overtures the 218th General Assembly (2008) to do the following:

1. Provide the following authoritative interpretation:

Interpretative statements concerning ordained service of homosexual church members by the 190th General Assembly (1978) of the United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America and the 119th General Assembly (1979) of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, and all subsequent affirmations thereof, have no further force or effect.

2. Direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Shall G-6.0106b be stricken? [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through.]

~~“b. Those who are called to office in the church are to lead a life in obedience to Scripture and in conformity to the historic confessional standards of the church. Among these standards is the requirement to live either in fidelity within the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman (W 4.9001), or chastity in singleness. Persons refusing to repent of any self acknowledged practice which the confessions call sin shall not be ordained and/or installed as deacons, elders, or ministers of the Word and Sacrament.”~~

Rationale

Current denominational policies regarding ordination contradict the foundational principle of Jesus’ teachings—God is love. From the early chapters in the First Testament where we read of Abraham and Sara inviting three strangers to stay for dinner (Genesis 18) to the frequent accounts of disciples in the early Second Testament churches creating an environment of welcoming, reconciliation, hospitality, and generosity (Romans 13 and 14, 1 Corinthians 13, Ephesians 2, Colossians 3, Hebrews 13, 1 John, etc.), the story of our faith is one in which God and God’s people are instructed to practice love. Jesus himself makes it clear that the greatest commandment is love of God and that the second is like it: “you shall love your neighbor as yourself” (Matthew 22, esp. 22:39). There are no exceptions to this expectation and yet our ordination policies certainly do not communicate a message of God’s love.

Current denomination policies regarding ordination contradict the Great Commission of Christ, who instructed his followers to go into all the world, making disciples, baptizing, and teaching (Matt. 28:16–20). The Scriptures call the church out of itself and direct us to practice hospitality towards all—even strangers (Hebrews 13), thereby demonstrating the message of grace and welcome that draws people into the community of faith. The Apostle Paul points out that “... God shows no partiality, but in every nation anyone who fears [God] and does what is right is acceptable to [God]” (Acts 10:34–35).

Current denominational policies regarding ordination contradict Scripture’s teachings about the freedom of God’s Spirit to engage in surprising, new, and unpredictable activities (John 3). Who of us can say with absolute certainty precisely what is God’s will with regard to the leadership of the church? For centuries we used biblical texts as the basis of our opposition to the ordination of women and inclusion of African Americans in our congregations. Now we know both practices were sinful violations of God’s will. Likewise, A Brief Statement of Faith reminds us that same Spirit “calls women and men to all ministries of the Church” (The Book of Confessions, 10.4, line 64).

Current denominational policies regarding ordination contradict the value Scripture places on inclusive welcome (Acts 8:26ff, 10:28, and 11:17). So, too, current ordination policies conflict with numerous parts of the Book of Order that underscore the church’s call to openness and inclusiveness (G-3.0401, G-4.0100–.0404) and the rights granted to members (G-5.0102 and G-5.0103, G-6.0107 and G-6.0108).

Current denominational policies regarding ordination contradict the church’s understanding of the Sacrament of Baptism. The Book of Order tells us that in baptism “we die to what separates us from God” (W-2.3002). To be consistent with that teaching, we cannot then set up a barrier (ordination) that separates some of the baptized from their unity with God. Likewise we are told “Baptism is [a] sign and symbol of inclusion in God’s grace and covenant ...” (W-2.3004), and “barriers of race, gender, status, and age are to be transcended. Barriers of nationality, history, and practice are to be overcome” (W-2.3005). If we are willing to baptize all believers, then is it not incumbent upon us to ordain all believers who are called by God into service?

Current denominational policies regarding ordination contradict the basic principle of the church that grants all men and women who are church members the right to respond to God’s call to special ministries as elders, deacons, or ministers of Word and Sacrament (G 6.0106a). There is only one status of church membership that means one’s sexual orientation should not be regarded when considering service.

Concurrence to Item 05-06 from the Presbytery of Albany (with Additional Rationale).

Rationale

The present categorical exclusion of certain church members from service in ordained office is unjust to the excluded individuals and spiritually damaging to the body of the church. It creates a category of “second-class membership” and fosters the heretical attitude that those assigned to this category are not really deserving of membership at all, i.e., are not Christians. Profession of faith in Jesus Christ is and must be the only requirement for church membership (Book of Order, G-5.0103). Any policy that promotes erosion of this principle does damage to the Body of Christ.

According to the Book of Order, “a faithful member accepts Christ’s call to be involved ... in the ministry of his Church” (G-5.0102), including “participating in the governing responsibilities of the church” (G-5.0102e). Section G-6.0106b, which bars an entire class of persons from participating in some of the most important areas of church governance, violates the conditions of membership and sets the Book of Order in contradiction with itself.

Ordination is an important qualification for participation in the discernment process that sustains the spiritual life of the church at all judicatory levels. Our goal is not to “make” decisions, but to seek to discern God’s intention for us. It has been a long-standing article of faith in our tradition that discernment requires a democratic inclusion of many voices. To rule out certain voices in advance as ineligible is both undemocratic and unjust. True reconciliation that seeks to restore peace, unity, and purity to the church is possible only between equals who mutually share access to power and who acknowledge that all power, ultimately, comes from God.

When Christians fall into two sides through disagreement, all involved are obliged to think charitably of those on the opposite side. If G-6.0106b is removed from the Book of Order, the “losers” will not have lost their status as full members of the church, eligible to participate in all decisions, including future decisions about ordination on an individual basis. On the other hand, if G-6.0106b remains in the Book of Order, the “losers” will continue to feel that their very humanity has been cast in doubt by a church that condemns what they understand to be their God-given nature. Deletion of G-6.0106b will honor everyone as a child of God and will permit the assignment of particular duties on the basis of the particular gifts that God has granted.

Injustice that exists now demands to be remedied now. Many a prophet would have preferred to exercise the call to prophecy at a more opportune time, but God has always made clear that the prophetic call is immediate. To appeal now for relief from the injustice fostered by G-6.0106b is simply to obey God’s command with humility and love for all those who now serve and for those who earnestly desire to serve God in the future.

Concurrence to Item 05-06 from the Presbytery of the Redwoods (with Additional Rationale).Rationale*

Current denominational policies regarding ordination require interpretation of ambiguous words and phrases in order to determine who has or has not met the standards for ordination. The battle over interpretation, and in particular, the attempt to root out all those with whom we disagree, has fractured the fellowship of our brothers and sisters in the church. Deletion of G-6.0106b returns to the presbyteries and sessions the oversight of who is to be ordained to the offices of the church, and returns the entire church to the Reformed understanding that we read the same Scripture but come to different conclusions.

Current denominational policies regarding ordination contradict Scripture’s teachings about the freedom of God’s Spirit to engage in surprising, new, and unpredictable activities (John 3). Who of us can say with absolute certainty precisely what is God’s will with regard to the leadership of the church? For centuries we used biblical texts as the basis of our opposition to the ordination of women and inclusion of African Americans in our congregations. Now we know both practices were sinful violations of God’s will. Likewise, A Brief Statement of Faith reminds us that same Spirit “calls women and men to all ministries of the Church” (The Book of Confessions, 10.4, line 64). Current denominational practices deny God’s freedom to “do a new thing” (Isa. 43:19).

Current denominational policies regarding ordination contradict the value Scripture places on inclusive welcome (Acts 8:26ff, 10:28 and 11:17). So, too, current ordination policies conflict with numerous parts of the Book of Order that underscore the church’s call to openness and inclusiveness (G-3.0401, G-4.0100-.0403) and the rights granted to members (G-5.0102 and G-5.0103, G-6.0107 and G-6.0108).

Current denominational policies regarding ordination contradict the Great Commission of Christ, who instructed his followers to go into all the world, making disciples, baptizing, and teaching (Matt. 28:16–20). The Scriptures call the church out of itself and direct us to practice hospitality towards all—even strangers (Heb. 13), thereby demonstrating the message of grace and welcome that draws people into the community of faith. The Apostle Paul points out that “God shows no partiality, but in every nation anyone who fears [God] and does what is right is acceptable to [God]” (Acts 10:34–35).

Current denominational policies regarding ordination contradict the church's understanding of the Sacrament of Baptism. The Book of Order tells us that in baptism "we die to what separates us from God" (W-2.3002). To be consistent with that teaching, we cannot then set up a barrier (ordination) that separates some of the baptized from their unity with God. Likewise we are told "baptism is [a] sign and symbol of inclusion in God's grace and covenant" (W-2.3004), and "barriers of race, gender, status, and age are to be transcended. Barriers of nationality, history, and practice are to be overcome" (W-2.3005). If we are willing to baptize all believers, then is it not incumbent upon us to ordain all believers who are called by God into service?

Current denominational policies regarding ordination contradict the basic principle of the church that grants all men and women who are church members the right to respond to God's call to special ministries as elders, deacons, or ministers of Word and Sacrament (G 6.0106a). There is only one status of church membership; one's sexual orientation should not be regarded when considering service.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 05-06

Advice on Item 05-06—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 218th General Assembly (2008) regarding Item 05-06 with the following comment.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution refers the 218th General Assembly (2008) to its advice concerning Item 05-01, which sets forth the background that the Advisory Committee on the Constitution believes the assembly should consider in addressing each of the items related to ordination and installation of church officers.

Item 05-06 and 05-08 seek to delete G-6.0106b from the Form of Government and to set aside previous authoritative interpretations regarding ordination standards. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advised the 213th General Assembly (2001), and assemblies since then, that the removal of G-6.0106b alone would not alter the church's position on ordination standards unless the General Assembly also amended or rescinded current authoritative interpretations regarding the eligibility of homosexual persons to hold church office. Approval of this overture would accomplish its intent to modify the church's position on ordination standards by taking both of the actions the Advisory Committee on the Constitution has advised are necessary to achieve that result.

Impact of the proposed revisions to the proposed revised Form of Government before the assembly: To the extent the 218th General Assembly (2008) wishes to make amendment to the current G-6.0106b, the identical provision in the proposed Form of Government is found at 2.0103b.

ACREC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 05-06

Advice and Counsel on Item 05-06—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC).

Item 05-06, on deleting G-0106b, and on providing a new authoritative interpretation.

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) respectfully offers its comment in the form of this earnest prayer with and for the whole church:

Holy God, who alone is our Creator, Redeemer, and Sustainer, we pray to become more and more your good news people. Indeed, we would pray day by day to see you more clearly, love you more dearly, and follow you more nearly.

In all our daily prayers, wondrous God, there is much to celebrate, for which we praise and thank you:

- For the guidance of the Holy Spirit and Scriptures, whereby we, as that part of Christ's church who call ourselves the PC(USA), have committed ourselves to become a beloved community of all baptized believers who would exhibit inclusive welcome, rich diversity, fair representation, and full participation of your whole people;
- For every modest and significant stride taken in recent years toward the full inclusion of women and people of color;
- For every call and effort made to diminish unjust myth, stereotype, prejudice, discrimination, and oppression of people with regard to their race, ethnicity, gender, and sexual identity;

- For all persons and groups who urge us onward in discerning your living Word and Way for us, by listening prayerfully and carefully to each other, and by believing that your Holy Spirit and Scripture reveal still more new insights and learnings that will enrich and expand our commitments to inclusive welcome and rich diversity among all of your people.

In all our daily prayers, gracious God, there is much to concern us too, for which we seek forgiveness and transformation:

- For often daring neither to preach what we actually practice nor to practice what we actually preach about your diverse and inclusive beloved community;
- For continuing internal conflicts and divisions that especially harm all those sisters and brothers who already are marginalized by our church and world, including gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgender people;
- For letting your blessed gifts of time, energy, money, and countless other resources be sinfully consumed by our interecine activities rather than by Christ's mission and ministries to which we are called;
- For appearing to deny what we confess, that Christ Jesus alone gives us our oneness and our Great Commission as your people; and
- For being a divided church that is a scandal to you and to the world.

Holy God, who alone is our Creator, Redeemer, and Sustainer, we pray for more and more discernment of Spirit-guided and promising ways for our PC(USA) to move from a time of disgrace to a state of grace, when our unity in Christ Jesus will lead us all into the diverse and inclusive fullness of your beloved community. You alone, O God-in-Christ, are the One who holds all things together. Just as you hold on to us, may we hold on to you and to each other, so that together, day by day, we will see you more clearly, love you more dearly, and follow you more nearly. Amen.

Item 05-07

[The assembly answered Item 05-07 by the action taken on Item 05-12. See p. 42.]

On Amending G-6.0106b and G-6.0108b to Clarify the Requirement That Mandatory Provisions of the Book of Order Be Enforced by Ordaining Bodies—From the Presbytery of St. Andrew.

The Presbytery of St. Andrew overtures the 218th General Assembly (2008) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendments to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

1. Shall G-6.0106b be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strikethrough; text to be added or inserted is shown in italics.]

“b. Those who are called to office in the church are to lead a life in obedience to Scripture and in conformity to the historic confessional standards of the church. Among these standards is the requirement to live either in fidelity within the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman (W-4.9001), or chastity in singleness. Persons refusing to repent of any self-acknowledged practice ~~which the confessions call sin~~ that does not conform to this standard shall not be ordained and/or installed as deacons, elders, or ministers of the Word and Sacrament.”

2. Shall G-6.0108b be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strikethrough; text to be added or inserted is shown in italics.]

“b. It is to be recognized, however, that in becoming a candidate or officer of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) one chooses to exercise freedom of conscience within certain bounds. His or her conscience is captive to the Word of God as interpreted in the standards of the church so long as he or she continues to seek or hold office in that body. The decision as to whether a person has departed from essentials of Reformed faith and polity is made initially by the individual concerned but ultimately becomes the responsibility of the governing body in which he or she serves (G-1.0301; G-1.0302); however, an ordaining body shall not proceed to enroll as a candidate or ordain and/or install to office any person who is unwilling to abide by all mandatory provisions of the Book of Order.”

Rationale

We are making these recommendations believing that the only appropriate way to amend the constitutional ordination standards should be to amend the standards themselves, referring proposed changes to the presbyteries in the form of a constitutional amendment so that the whole church has the opportunity to participate in the decision through the ratification process. We believe that in doing this, we reaffirm the strength of our polity, our connectedness, and our unity as one Body by encouraging all voices to be heard.

While G-6.0106b has been repeatedly upheld by the church since its inclusion in the Book of Order, it has also been exceedingly controversial and confusing. Part of the controversy has surrounded the core issue of the ordination of self-affirming, practicing homosexuals. At the same time, some of the controversy and confusion has resulted from the awkward reference in G-6.0106b to “any ... practice which the confessions call sin,” which must therefore include the entire lists of sins in, for example, the Westminster Larger Catechism’s illustrative examples of sins, including such practices as the undue delay of marriage, and the wearing of immodest apparel.

Another issue related to G-6.0106b and its enforcement is the confusion that it creates about the relationship of G-6.0106b to G-6.0108b. Ordaining bodies have the authority and responsibility to determine the suitability of candidates for office. However, it is unclear whether that authority supersedes the Book of Order’s mandatory provisions.

The proposed amendments would clarify the requirement that those who have agreed to “exercise [their] freedom of conscience within certain bounds” (G-6.0108b) must abide by all such mandatory provisions, even while they are free to seek changes to those provisions through the constitutional process for amendment.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 05-07

Advice on Item 05-07—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 218th General Assembly (2008) to disapprove Item 05-07.

Rationale

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution refers the 218th General Assembly (2008) to its advice concerning Item 05-01, which sets forth the background that the Advisory Committee on the Constitution believes the assembly should consider in addressing each of the items related to ordination and installation of church officers.

Item 05-07 proposes to amend both G-6.0106b and G-6.0108b. Specifically, the overture seeks to amend G-6.0106b with the express intention of limiting its restrictions on ordination and installation to individuals not meeting the requirement of fidelity in marriage or chastity in singleness. The overture seeks to amend G-6.0108b to add a provision that a governing body cannot ordain or install a candidate who is “unwilling to abide by all of the mandatory provisions of the Book of Order.”

As with other items related to the authoritative interpretation of G-6.0108 before it, the 218th General Assembly (2008) may wish to consider whether the application of the authoritative interpretation of G-6.0108 in Bush v. the Presbytery of Pittsburgh (Remedial Case 218-10), as discussed in the Advisory Committee on the Constitution’s advice with respect to Item 05-01 satisfies the intent of the overture. If the assembly believes that this application answers the concern raised in the rationale to the overture, it may answer the overture by disapproving it with the comment that the Bush decision has addressed the concern raised in the overture.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends disapproval of the proposed amendment to G-6.0106b first because it would have the effect of making standards of sexual conduct the only standard for ordination or installation of church officers. Elevating standards of sexual conduct above and to the exclusion of all other standards of conduct has neither scriptural nor confessional foundation. Moreover, the proposed amendment to G-6.0106b does not bring the clarity its rationale suggests. While the proposed amendment eliminates the phrase “practices the confessions call sin,” the phrase “fidelity in marriage between a man and a woman (W-4.9001), or chastity in singleness” is still set out as a “historic confessional standard,” thus requiring the interpretation of the words based on their use in confessional documents. The confessions offer a variety of possible interpretations of the terms “fidelity in marriage” and “chastity.” [See, for example, Heidelberg Catechism (C-4.109) and the Westminster Larger Catechism (C-7.249), which list a variety of conduct as unchaste.] Thus, replacing the phrase “practices the confessions call sin” with a reference to a lack of fidelity or chastity does not end debate as to what G-6.0106b means in practice.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution also recommends disapproval of the proposed amendment to G-6.0108b for two reasons. First, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution does not believe that modifying the language of a provision that reflects a fundamental principle of Presbyterian polity is an appropriate means of addressing concern with the application of that standard to G-6.0106b. If the 218th General Assembly (2008) is concerned with the application of G-6.0108b to G-6.0106b, the appropriate course would be to redraft G-6.0106b to set forth clear and specific limitations on the conduct of candidates for ordination or installation in place of the current incorporation of confessional references to sinful conduct.

Second, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution does not believe that the reference to “mandatory provisions of the Book of Order” is a useful standard. The apparent intent in the proposed amendment is to revise G-6.0108b to bar the authoritative interpretation approved by the 217th General Assembly (2006). However, the proposal is premised on the assumption that this authoritative interpretation allows governing bodies to ignore mandatory language in the examining and approving candidates for ordination or installation. However, as the Advisory Committee on the Constitution has previously advised, the mandatory language in G-6.0106b is “Persons refusing to repent of any self-acknowledged practice which the confessions call sin shall not be ordained and/or installed as deacons, elders, or ministers of the Word and Sacrament.” The “shall not” is part of the verb “be ordained and/or installed.” The sentence is written in the passive voice, and so the “shall not” applies to what a presbytery or session may not do.

Contrary to the suggestion of the overture, the existing authoritative interpretation does not change the mandatory nature of the “shall not” as it applies to the acts of ordination or installation. What the authoritative interpretation addresses is the means of ascertaining who the “shall not” applies to, not what “shall not” be done.

If the 218th General Assembly (2008) does not believe that the Bush decision addresses the concerns raised by this overture, and wishes to offer amendments to the Form of Government that eliminate the application of the principles of G-6.0108b to the decision whether to approve a candidate for ordination or installation, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises that the assembly submit to the presbyteries an amendment to G-6.0106b that replaces the phrase “practices the confessions call sin” with a list of conduct the assembly believes should bar ordination or installation or some other standard that does not require definition through interpretation of the confessions.

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEMS 05-07

Advice and Counsel on Item 05-07—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) advises that Item 05-07 be answered by the action taken on Item 05-12.

Item 05-08

[The assembly answered Item 05-08 by the action taken on Item 05-09. See pp. 42, 43.]

On Deleting G-6.0106b and Approving an Authoritative Interpretation—From the Presbytery of Genesee Valley.

The Presbytery of Genesee Valley respectfully overtures the 218th General Assembly (2008) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to do the following:

1. Approve the following authoritative interpretation, which shall take effect immediately upon the affirmative vote of the 218th General Assembly (2008):

“In order to live more closely in accordance with the spirit of the theological and constitutional principles of our Presbyterian tradition, which require hospitality, compassion, and justice for all people, the Definitive Guidance adopted by the 190th General Assembly (1978) of the United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America in response to Overture 9 (1976) and the interpretive statement approved by the General Assembly (1979) of the Presbyterian Church in the United States concerning ordained service (as set forth in the Minutes, PCUS, 1979, Part I, p. 200 et seq.), and all subsequent affirmations thereof, shall be given no further force and effect.”

2. Direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Shall G-6.0106b of the Form of Government be stricken from the Book of Order?

Rationale

Love, compassion, hospitality, and justice are basic theological and constitutional cornerstones of the Christian faith set by the teachings and example of Jesus Christ, as recorded in the Gospels and writings of early apostles:

Jesus said, "... love your neighbor as yourself" (Matt. 19:19, Matt. 22:39, Mark 12:31).

The Apostle Paul declared, "There is no longer Jew or Greek, there is no longer slave or free, there is no longer male and female; for all of you are one in Christ Jesus" (Gal. 3:28).

More recent additions to The Book of Confessions offer guidelines in practicing the spirit of Scripture:

The Confession of 1967 (9.44) states "Congregations, individuals, or groups of Christians who exclude, dominate, or patronize their fellowmen, however subtly, resist the Spirit of God and bring contempt on the faith which they profess."

The 1983 Brief Statement of Faith (10.3, lines 29–32) declares "In sovereign love God created the world good and makes everyone equally in God's image, male and female, of every race and people, to live as one community."

We affirm the standards for ordination set forth in G-6.0106a of the Book of Order, which provide that candidates "... should be persons of strong faith, dedicated discipleship, and love of Jesus Christ as Savior and Lord. Their manner of life should be a demonstration of the Christian gospel in the church and in the world."

We affirm fidelity and chastity as guides for our faith and practice, believing that we are all called to lead chaste and disciplined lives, whether in marriage or in single life (The Book of Confessions, 4.108 and 4.109).

We affirm our ordination vows, including our commitment to be "continually guided by our Confessions" as they have evolved.

We affirm our freedom of conscience, which is honored in our Historic Principles of Church Order (G-1.0301(1)(a) and in G-6.0108 of the Book of Order).

We affirm the provisions in the Book of Order that mandate an inclusive church (G-3.0401; G-4.0403; G-5.0103 and G-5.0202).

We affirm the rights and responsibilities of sessions and presbyteries to examine and ordain persons based on their character and qualifications as individuals (authoritative interpretation approved by the 210th General Assembly (1998), Minutes, 1998, Part I, p. 68).

Section G-6.0106b of the Form of Government of the Book of Order and the related interpretative statements concerning ordained service are theologically and constitutionally flawed. Their elimination from the Book of Order will celebrate and renew basic theological and constitutional principles of love, compassion, hospitality, and justice, and will be a positive step toward healing human brokenness and building a stronger, more inclusive church.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 05-08

Advice on Item 05-08—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 218th General Assembly (2008) regarding Item 05-08 with the following comment:

Approval of this item would accomplish its intent to modify the church's position on ordination standards by taking both of the actions the Advisory Committee on the Constitution has advised are necessary to achieve that result. For further explanation, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution refers the 218th General Assembly (2008) to its advice concerning Item 05-06, which seeks similar action by the assembly.

Item 05-09

[The assembly approved Item 05-09 with comment. See pp. 42, 43.]

On Deleting G-6.0106b and Substituting a New Paragraph in Its Place; on Amending G-14.0240 and G-14.0450; and on Providing a New Authoritative Interpretation—From the Presbytery of Boston.

The Presbytery of Boston respectfully overtures the 218th General Assembly (2008) to do the following:

1. Direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

a. Strike the current text of G-6.0106b and insert new text to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

~~“b. Those who are called to office in the church are to lead a life in obedience to Scripture and in conformity to the historic confessional standards of the church. Among these standards is the requirement to live either in fidelity within the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman (W-4.9001), or chastity in singleness. Persons refusing to repent of any self-acknowledged practice which the confessions call sin shall not be ordained and/or installed as deacons, elders, or ministers of the Word and Sacrament. Those who are called to ordained service in the church, by their assent to the constitutional questions for ordination and installation (W-4.4003), pledge themselves to live lives obedient to Jesus Christ the Head of the Church, striving to follow where he leads through the witness of the Scriptures, and to understand the Scriptures through the instruction of the Confessions. In so doing, they declare their fidelity to the standards of the Church. Each governing body charged with examination for ordination and/or installation (G-14.0240 and G-14.0450) establishes the candidate’s sincere efforts to adhere to these standards.”~~

b. Amend G-14.0240 as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“Preparation and Examination for Office

“When persons have been elected to the office of elder or deacon, the session shall confer with them as to their willingness to undertake the office. The session shall provide for a period of study and preparation, after which the session shall examine the officers-elect as to their personal faith; knowledge of the doctrine, government, and discipline contained in the Constitution of the church; ~~and~~ the duties of the office; and readiness to assent to the constitutional questions for ordination and installation. If the examination is approved, the session shall appoint a day for the service of ordination and installation (see W-4.4000). If the examination is not approved for one or more elected officers, the session shall report its action to the congregation’s nominating committee, which shall bring nomination(s) to a meeting of the congregation for any office(s) not filled.”

c. Amend G-14.0450 by inserting a new paragraph “b.” and by re-lettering current paragraphs “b.” through “d.” as “c.” through “f.” The text shall read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“Final Assessment of Readiness to Begin Ordained Ministry

“In the final year of theological education or when a candidate has satisfied all of the requirements of this section, and before the candidate has received a call, the committee on preparation for ministry of the candidate’s presbytery shall conduct a final assessment of the candidate’s readiness to begin ordained ministry. A summary of this assessment shall be reported to the presbytery and shall be transmitted to a calling presbytery when requested. The committee on preparation for ministry shall report to the presbytery when it has certified a candidate ready for examination for ordination, pending a call. This consultation shall focus on the outcomes of inquiry and candidacy and shall include each of the following requirements of certification:

“a. demonstration of readiness to begin ministry of the Word and Sacrament as required to fulfill the candidacy phase of preparation;

“b. demonstration of readiness to assent to the constitutional questions for ordination and installation;

“~~b.~~ c. presentation of a transcript showing satisfactory grades at a regionally accredited college or university, together with a diploma;

“~~e.~~ d. presentation of a transcript from a theological institution accredited by the Association of Theological Schools acceptable to the presbytery, the transcript showing satisfactory grades, and presentation of a plan to complete the theological degree including Hebrew and Greek and exegesis of the Old and New Testaments using Hebrew and Greek texts;

“~~d.~~ e. presentation of satisfactory grades together with the examination papers in the five areas covered by the Presbyteries’ Cooperative Committee on Examinations for Candidates.”

2. Provide the following authoritative interpretation:

Interpretive statements concerning ordained service of homosexual church members by the 190th General Assembly (1978) of the United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, and the 119th General Assembly (1979) of the Presbyterian Church in the United States and all subsequent affirmations thereof, have no further force or effect.

Comment:* Presbyteries are strongly encouraged to consider this overture using a process of listening and discernment.

Rationale

The opening paragraphs of the Form of Government are a powerful statement of the fundamental Christian and Reformed affirmation that Jesus Christ is the Head of the Church. In support of this primary affirmation, Chapter I of the Form of Government calls Christians to attend to the Scriptures, insofar as they set forth “Christ’s will for the Church,” and Chapter II identifies the church’s confessions as its guides, subordinate to the authority of Jesus Christ and to the witness of Scripture. Our church thus has bound itself to a hierarchy of authority in which we are to obey Jesus Christ its Head, and, additionally, to heed first the Scriptures and then the confessions, to the extent that they accurately bear witness to Christ’s will. This fundamental hierarchy of authority is accurately and eloquently reflected in the first three of the constitutional questions, the assent to which is required of each candidate for ordination and/or installation.

Although the hierarchy of the church’s authority is clear, it is subverted by the current language of G-6.0106b, which substitutes for our obedience to Christ two concepts that are foreign to Reformed understanding: “obedience” to Scripture and “conformity” to the confessions. The proposed amendment would remove this paragraph and substitute new language, which (1) reflects the church’s understanding of where its authority is to be found, and (2) reaffirms the church’s reliance on the examination of candidates by its governing bodies as the principal means by which to ensure the commitment of its ordained officers to the duties of faith. The amendment additionally would insert appropriate language to ensure that each such examination would include discussion of the constitutional questions and the governing body’s determination of the candidate’s readiness to accept their principles and live by them to the extent any of us is able.

In order to be able to rely on Jesus Christ as its Head and as its chief guide in all of life, the church must shed any subordinate source of authority that would bind its ability to follow where he leads. The overture therefore also calls for the rescission of past interpretive statements that have had the effect of limiting Christ’s freedom to use his servants as he would choose.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 05-09

Advice on Item 05-09—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 218th General Assembly (2008) regarding Item 05-09 with the following comment.

Rationale

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution refers the 218th General Assembly (2008) to its advice concerning Item 05-01, which sets forth the background that the Advisory Committee on the Constitution believes the assembly should consider in addressing each of the items related to ordination and installation of church officers.

Item 05-09 seeks to delete G-6.0106b from the Form of Government, to substitute a new provision in its place, and to set aside previous authoritative interpretations regarding ordination standards. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advised the 213th General Assembly (2001), and assemblies since then, that the removal of G-6.0106b alone (or likewise, substitution of new provisions for the existing G-6.0106b) would not alter the church’s position on ordination standards unless the General Assembly also amended or rescinded current authoritative interpretations regarding the eligibility of homosexual persons to hold church office. Approval of this overture would accomplish its intent to modify the church’s position on ordination standards by taking both of the actions the Advisory Committee on the Constitution has advised are necessary to achieve that result.

The proposed language for G-6.0106b substitutes a standard of obedience to Jesus Christ for the current provisions of G-6.0106b. Governing bodies would be given discretion in the application of this standard to particular candidates through the examination process. The proposed language is clear and not inconsistent with any other provision of the Book of Order.

Impact of the proposed revisions to the proposed revised Form of Government before the assembly: To the extent the 218th General Assembly (2008) wishes to make amendment to the current G-6.0106b, the identical provision in the proposed Form of Government is found at 2.0103b.

Item 05-10

[The assembly answered Item 05-10 by the action taken on Item 05-12. See pp. 42, 43.]

On Amending G-6.0108b Freedom of Conscience “Within Certain Bounds,” to Include a Freedom of Ordaining Bodies within Certain Bounds—From the Presbytery of Pittsburgh.

The Presbytery of Pittsburgh overtures the 218th General Assembly (2008) to direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative vote:

Shall G-6.0108b (Freedom of Conscience “Within Certain Bounds”) be amended as follows: [Text to be added is shown as italic.]

“b. It is to be recognized, however, that in becoming a candidate or officer of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) one chooses to exercise freedom of conscience within certain bounds. His or her conscience is captive to the Word of God as interpreted in the standards of the church so long as he or she continues to seek or hold office in that body. The decision as to whether a person has departed from essentials of Reformed faith and polity is made initially by the individual concerned but ultimately becomes the responsibility of the governing body in which he or she serves. (G-1.0301; G-1.0302) This responsibility does not give the governing body constitutional grounds to define essentials in ways that ignore clear indicators in the Book of Order regarding what is essential. These indicators include standards specified in ordination vows in the Book of Order; standards singled out in the Book of Order for compliance from amongst other standards; and standards oft repeated in diverse contexts in the Book of Order.”

Rationale

The controversial, narrowly adopted (57 percent) 2006 Authoritative Interpretation (AI) of G-6.0108b (“Freedom of Conscience within Certain Bounds”) encourages local and regional ordaining bodies to ignore clear indicators in the Book of Order itself that certain standards are essential for ordained officers.<sup>1</sup>

Three such indicators are when a particular standard is specified in ordination vows (the affirmation Christ as Savior and Lord), singled out from amongst other standards for special compliance (the standard for sexual purity), or repeated often in diverse contexts (acceptance of the ministry of women).<sup>2</sup> These contexts create a reasonable expectation among reasonable readers that the particular standard must be essential. Otherwise, there would be no reason for including it in an ordination vow, singling it out from amongst other standards, or repeating it in diverse contexts.<sup>3</sup>

Yet the rationale for the 2006 AI states that an ordaining body can judge noncompliance with the sexuality standard in G-6.0106b not to violate essentials,<sup>4</sup> despite the fact that G-6.0106b clearly singles out from “among” “the historic confessional standards of the church” the “requirement” that ordained officers confine sexual intercourse to “the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman.”<sup>5</sup>

If an ordaining body can ignore such a clear literary indicator of what is essential,<sup>6</sup> then an ordaining body could just as easily judge a departure from the first ordination vow requiring trust in Christ as one’s “Savior” and “Lord of all” (W-4.4003) or the declaration of a scruple with regard to the acceptance of women’s ordination not to violate the essentials of Reformed faith and polity.<sup>7</sup> This is especially so since the task force rationale cites the Adopting Act of 1729 as establishing a virtual absolute right on the part of local and regional ordaining bodies to determine for themselves what standards are essential.<sup>8</sup>

Inasmuch as the spin given by 2006 AI on G-6.0108b runs counter to the purpose for which it was formulated—namely to protect a national standard (i.e. women’s ordination) from candidates who might declare a contrary scruple—it is necessary to reassert the freedom of the collective conscience of the denomination as a whole, especially as enshrined in its constitutional documents.<sup>9</sup>

As to answering possible objections to the amendment the following may be noted:

1. Someone might counter that the 217th General Assembly (2006) added to the task force’s AI a safeguard; namely, that higher governing bodies may review “whether the examination and ordination and installation decision comply with the constitution of the PC(USA).” Even so, this addition did not offer the courts themselves any guidelines for determining esentials in the Book of Order that would safeguard against excessive judicial activism (as can be seen from the recent decision of the PJC of the Synod of the Trinity; cited in Endnote 7 below).

2. Someone might contend that not all “requirements” or “mandated” practices are essential and that consequently failure to comply with the “mandatory” sexual “requirement” in G-6.0106b is not a necessary bar to ordination. While such contentions regrettably make words mean what they do not normally mean and nullify clear distinctions in the Book of Order’s Preface between mandated practices on the one hand and practices merely recommended or permitted on the other hand, they are nevertheless beside the point here. We can all agree that the implicit literary force and effect of singling out for compliance a particular requirement from amongst all other standards is to establish the essential status of the requirement. The same holds true for inserting a standard in an ordination vow (so the affirmation of Christ as Savior and Lord) or repeatedly citing a standard in diverse contexts (the validity of women in ministry).

3. Some may fear that this amendment establishes too much certitude in interpreting texts or creates a detailed litmus text of orthodoxy. Such a fear would be misplaced. The purpose of this amendment is not to contend that all texts are equally obvious or to define what all the essentials are as regards ordination standards. Rather the purpose is to prevent arbitrary or ideologically-based circumventions of some obvious essentials.<sup>10</sup> Put differently, the purpose of this amendment is to establish that some standards in the Book of Order are clearly presented as essential (i.e. necessary barriers to ordination when not fulfilled by the candidate) even though the precise word “essential” is not used.

A related purpose is to reassert that, despite some radical postmodernist views to the contrary, the communication symbols that constitute the written text of the Book of Order and the literary conventions that accompany their use must be given their normal agreed-upon sense if church members are to have any confidence in the process of discernment. Certain literary moves such as placing a given requirement in the context of an ordination vow, singling it out to make a special point about the necessity of compliance, or citing it repeatedly in diverse contexts create an implicit contract of meaning with reasonable readers interpreting reasonably and contextually. Not to draw the obvious conclusion that such contexts establish the ordination requirement as essential is to violate that contract of meaning and engender distrust and cynicism regarding process.<sup>11</sup>

In short, there is nothing radical about this amendment. It simply reinstates the practice of reading literary indicators of meaning in the Book of Order reasonably—a practice that had generally operated before the passage of the 2006 AI on G-6.0108b.<sup>12</sup>

Endnotes

1. The AI states that “ordaining and installing bodies ... have the responsibility to determine ... whether any departure [from standards] constitutes a failure to adhere to the essentials of Reformed faith and polity under G-6.0108 of the Book of Order, thus barring the candidate from ordination and/or installation.”
2. While not an exhaustive list, these three indicators do have great relevance for current debates in the recent history of the PC(USA).
3. The necessity of accepting women’s ordination is repeated in diverse contexts throughout the Form of Government of the Book of Order. Section G-6.0105 makes clear that “Both men and women shall be eligible to hold church offices. ...” [emphasis added]. Likewise, G-14.0221 states: “Every congregation shall elect men and women from among its active members ... to the office of elder and to the office of deacon. ...” Section G-9.0105a (“Committee on Representation”) mandates: “Each governing body above the session shall elect a committee on representation, whose membership shall consist of equal numbers of men and women.” A specific duty of this committee is to “advocate for the representation of ... women” (G-9.0105c). According to G-13.0111a, “Consideration shall be given to the nomination of equal numbers of ministers (both women and men) ...” Section G-1.0100b (“Christ Calls the Church Into Being”) refers to Christ “exercising his authority by the ministry of women and men ...” Section G-3.0401b (“Called to Openness”) states: “The Church is called ... to a new openness” about “becoming in fact as well as in faith a community of women and men ...”
4. The text of G-6.0106b is as follows: “Those who are called to office in the church are to lead a life in obedience to Scripture and in conformity to the historic confessional standards of the church. Among these standards is the requirement to live either in fidelity within the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman (W-4.9001), or chastity in singleness. Persons refusing to repent of any self-acknowledged practice which the confessions call sin shall not be ordained and/or installed as deacons, elders, or ministers of the Word and Sacrament” [emphasis added].
5. According to the Final Report of the Theological Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church: “If an ordaining or installing body determines that an officer-elect has departed from G-6.0106b, ... [and judges this departure] not to violate the essentials of Reformed faith and polity.... then there is no barrier to ordination” (A Season of Discernment, pp. 40–41, ll. 1222–29).
6. If a teacher or parent should say, “Among all my requirements I want to point out this particular requirement as something that must be complied with,” then a student or child, respectively, who contended that the requirement was not “essential” would be in obvious, even perverse, error.
7. An example of how this might happen occurred on May 16, 2007, when the Permanent Judicial Commission of the Synod of the Trinity ruled in case no. 06-09 that the Presbytery of Pittsburgh could not define any essentials prior to specific cases and then must redefine essentials for each new ordination examination: “Essentials of the faith ... cannot be predetermined. ... [D]epartures from essential tenets, must be determined on a case by case basis within the ordination process.” The problem with this reasoning is that if an essential has to be determined on a case-by-case basis, then it is not “essential” as a churchwide standard. It can only be an essential for the particular case of a particular person. By this decision the presbytery could not “predetermine” that believing in Christ as Savior and Lord or accepting the validity of women’s ordination is an “essential” for ordination. The ordaining body would have to revisit the question of whether this is an essential at each and every ordination examination.

8. In point of fact, the Adopting Act of 1729 addressed finer points of Calvinist doctrine contained in a voluminous, undifferentiated document like the Westminster Standards. It was certainly never intended to allow local or regional ordaining bodies the autonomy to ordain someone who denied the lordship of Jesus Christ or who engaged in sexual intercourse outside the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman.
9. What was the point of the majority of the presbyteries in voting to incorporate this sexuality standard in the Book of Order in 1996–97 and then to deny by ever greater margins vigorous attempts to remove it in 1997–98 and 2001–2002 if not to communicate this: “Failure to comply with this singled-out standard would be a necessary barrier to ordination”? If the majority of presbyteries had only wanted to have a standard that could be viewed as nonessential, there would have been no reason to single it out for compliance in the Form of Government.
10. The Presbyterian Church operates on a principle of connectionalism. This includes the right to establish on a national level some minimal beliefs and practices for officers of the church that, when met with noncompliance, become necessary barriers to ordination. For example, the national governing body today could not, and would not, allow the ordination of avowed racists, participants in loving adult-consensual incest or polyamory, persons who declared Jesus to be delusional, or even persons who rejected the validity of women’s ordination.
11. The alternative is a way of reading texts where there are no generally accepted conventions for expected meaning. This would render all texts, including every standard expressed in the Book of Order, as meaningless. Then there would be no point to reading, interpreting, citing, adjudicating by means of, or amending the Constitution of the PC(USA) except as an exercise of raw, arbitrary power. And then there would be no point to the existence of the PC(USA) as a denominational entity.
12. At the time of the writing of this overture, it is unclear whether the proposed extensive revisions of the Form of Government will replace the current version. If it does, then the appropriate adjustments in the proposed amendment are to be made. Based on the draft of the proposed new FOG retrieved from <http://www.pcusa.org/formofgovernment/pdfs/form-of-government.pdf> on 1/7/08, “G-6.0108b” would have to be replaced with “G-2.0104”; “Freedom of Conscience within Certain Bounds” with just “Freedom of Conscience”; and “governing body” with “council.”

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 05-10

Advice on Item 05-10—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 218th General Assembly (2008) to disapprove Item 05-10.

Rationale

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution refers the 218th General Assembly (2008) to its advice concerning Item 05-01, which sets forth the background that the Advisory Committee on the Constitution believes the assembly should consider in addressing each of the items related to ordination and installation of church officers.

Initially, the 218th General Assembly (2008) may wish to consider the application of this authoritative interpretation of G-6.0108 in Bush v. the Presbytery of Pittsburgh (Remedial Case 218-10), as discussed in the Advisory Committee on the Constitution’s advice with respect to Item 05-01. If the assembly believes that this application answers the concern raised in the rationale to the overture, it may answer the overture by disapproving it with the comment that the Bush decision has addressed the concern raised in the overture.

Item 05-10 seeks to amend G-6.0108b to prevent governing bodies from concluding that a departure from certain “clear indicators” are not departures from that which is essential in Reformed faith and polity. The proposed amendment defines these “clear indicators” as including three categories: (1) standards specified in ordination vows in the Book of Order; (2) standards singled out in the Book of Order for compliance from among other standards; and (3) standards “oft repeated in diverse contexts in the Book of Order.” In effect, this proposed amendment has an intent similar to the proposed amendment to G-6.0108b proposed in Item 05-07, which seeks to amend G-6.0108b to add a provision that a governing body cannot ordain or install a candidate who is “unwilling to abide by all of the mandatory provisions of the Book of Order.”

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises disapproval of the proposed amendment for three reasons. First, the proposed category of “clear indicators” is less than clear. Unclear standards do not build up the peace and unity of the church.

Second, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution does not believe that modifying the language of a provision that reflects a fundamental principle of Presbyterian polity is an appropriate means of addressing concern with the application of that standard to G-6.0106b. As was stated in the 1927 Report of the Special Commission of 1925 (the “Swearingen Commission Report”) Minutes, PCUSA, 1927, Part I, pp. 78–79:

One fact often overlooked is that by the Act of 1729, the decision as to essential and necessary articles was to be in specific cases. It was no general authority that might be stated in exact language and applied rigidly to every case without distinction. It was an authority somewhat undefined, to be invoked in each particular instance . . . . It was clearly the intention that this decision as to essential and necessary articles was to be made after the candidate had been presented and had declared his [or her] beliefs and stated his [or her] motives personally, and after the examining body . . . had full opportunity to judge the man himself [or woman, herself] as well as abstract questions of doctrine.

As the Advisory Committee on the Constitution has advised with respect to other matters, if the 218th General Assembly (2008) is concerned with the application of G-6.0108 to G-6.0106b, the appropriate course would be to redraft G-6.0106b to set forth clear and specific limitations on the conduct of candidates for ordination or installation in place of the current incorporation of confessional references to sinful conduct. Likewise, if the intent is to examine candidates concerning each of the questions for ordination or concerning their beliefs regarding the appropriateness of the ordination of women, amendment to G-6.0106b making such examination questions mandatory is a more appropriate avenue to attain that goal.

Consistent with the Advisory Committee on the Constitution’s advice concerning Item 05-10, if the 218th General Assembly (2008) does not believe that Bush addresses the concerns raised sufficiently and desires that G-6.0108b not be applied to making such a determination in the context of an examination for ordination or installation, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the assembly to either (1) withdraw the authoritative interpretation of G-6.0108 and approve an authoritative interpretation of G-6.0106b defining which practices the confessions call sin; or (2) submit to the presbyteries an amendment to G-6.0106b that replaces the phrase “practices the confessions call sin” with a list of conduct the assembly believes should bar ordination or installation or some other standard that does not require definition through interpretation of the confessions.

Impact of the proposed revisions to the proposed revised Form of Government before the assembly: To the extent the 218th General Assembly (2008) wishes to make amendment to the current G-6.0106b, the identical provision in the proposed Form of Government is found at G-2.0103b. To extent the 218th General Assembly (2008) wishes to make amendment to the current G-6.0108, the identical provision (although not divided into two paragraphs) in the proposed Form of Government is found at G-2.0104.

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEMS 05-10

Advice and Counsel on Item 05-10—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) advises that Item 05-10 be answered by the action taken on Item 05-12.

Item 05-11

[The assembly answered Item 05-11 by the action taken on Item 05-09. See pp. 42, 43.]

On Amending G-6.0106b and Providing a New Authoritative Interpretation—From the Presbytery of Cincinnati.

The Presbytery of Cincinnati overtures the 218th General Assembly (2008) to do the following:

1. Direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Strike the current text of G-6.0106b and insert new text to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be inserted is shown as italic.]

~~“b. Those who are called to office in the church are to lead a life in obedience to Scripture and in conformity to the historic confessional standards of the church. Among these standards is the requirement to live either in fidelity within the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman (W 4.9001), or chastity in singleness. Persons refusing to repent of any self-acknowledged practice which the confessions call sin shall not be ordained and/or installed as deacons, elders, or ministers of the Word and Sacrament. Those who are called to ordained service in the church are to lead lives of obedience to Jesus Christ, as revealed in the Scriptures and guided by the confessional standards of the church. Suitability for the offices to which they have been elected is determined by the governing bodies where the examinations for ordination/installation take place. By their assent to the constitutional questions for ordination and/or installation, officers declare their fidelity to the~~ standards of the church. Whether the examination/installation decision complies with the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), and whether the ordaining/installing body has conducted its examination reasonably, responsibly, prayerfully, and deliberately in deciding to ordain a candidate for church office is subject to review by higher governing bodies.”

2. Provide the following authoritative interpretation:

Interpretive statements concerning ordained service of homosexual church members by the 190th General Assembly (1978) of the United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, and the 119th General Assembly (1979) of the Presbyterian Church in the United States and all subsequent affirmations thereof, have no further force or effect.

Rationale

The qualifications for leadership based on sexual orientation, which is the overt or covert purpose of G-6.0106b, discount the constitutional questions to those preparing to be ordained or installed. These questions focus broadly on the faith and manner of life expected of church officers, without exploration of personal sexual matters or orientation (the questions are attached at the end of this document).

There is no doubt that the issue of ordination for persons who are not heterosexual has caused much distress and consternation within the church for years and challenges the belief and conscience of varied perspectives within the church.

Current denominational policies regarding ordination contradict the church’s understanding of membership in the church and present a standard that creates second class membership—barring some persons, but not all, from “all the rights and privileges of the church, including the right to ... hold office” (Book of Order, G-5.0202).

The current denominational policies regarding ordination, by calling almost exclusive attention to the current G-6.0106b, place limits on the inalienable right of congregations to elect their own officers (G-6.0107), and on their freedom of conscience in interpreting Scripture and the call of the Gospel (Book of Order, G-6.0108).

This proposed overture also complies with the authoritative interpretation of the Constitution approved at the 217th General Assembly (2006) (Theological Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church report, pp. 35–36, lines 1048–1072) regarding the examination process itself, assuring that it be rigorous, constitutional, and subject to judicial review.

Further, at Baptism, we make a promise of union with Christ and one another. “The body of Christ is one, and Baptism is the bond of unity in Christ. As they are united with Christ through faith, Baptism unites the people of God with each other and with the church of every time and place. Barriers of race, gender, status, and age are to be transcended. Barriers of nationality, history, and practice are to be overcome” (Book of Order, W-2.3005).

Let us recommit to the promise of Baptism with the same spirit and intention in regards to ordination, leaving no room for discrimination among God’s children. For the sake of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, who called us to demonstrate gracious hospitality to our friends and enemies, who called us to welcome and love all who seek his mercy, we submit this overture.

Ordination Questions:

- a. Do you trust in Jesus Christ your Savior, acknowledge him Lord of all and Head of the Church, and through him believe in one God, Father, Son, and Holy Spirit?
- b. Do you accept the Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments to be, by the Holy Spirit, the unique and authoritative witness to Jesus Christ in the Church universal, and God’s Word to you?
- c. Do you sincerely receive and adopt the essential tenets of the Reformed faith as expressed in the confessions of our church as authentic and reliable expositions of what Scripture leads us to believe and do, and will you be instructed and led by those confessions as you lead the people of God?
- d. Will you fulfill your office in obedience to Jesus Christ, under the authority of Scripture, and be continually guided by our confessions?
- e. Will you be governed by our church’s polity, and will you abide by its discipline? Will you be a friend among your colleagues in ministry, working with them, subject to the ordering of God’s Word and Spirit?
- f. Will you in your own life seek to follow the Lord Jesus Christ, love your neighbors, and work for the reconciliation of the world?
- g. Do you promise to further the peace, unity, and purity of the church?
- h. Will you seek to serve the people with energy, intelligence, imagination, and love?
- i. (1) (For elder) Will you be a faithful elder, watching over the people, providing for their worship, nurture, and service? Will you share in government and discipline, serving in governing bodies of the church, and in your ministry will you try to show the love and justice of Jesus Christ?

- (2) (For deacon) Will you be a faithful deacon, teaching charity, urging concern, and directing the people's help to the friendless and those in need, and in your ministry will you try to show the love and justice of Jesus Christ?
- (3) (For minister of the Word and Sacrament) Will you be a faithful minister, proclaiming the good news in Word and Sacrament, teaching faith and caring for people? Will you be active in government and discipline, serving in the governing bodies of the church; and in your ministry will you try to show the love and justice of Jesus Christ?
- (4) (For commissioned lay pastor) Will you be a faithful commissioned lay pastor, serving the people by proclaiming the good news, teaching faith and caring for the people, and in your ministry will you try to show the love and justice of Jesus Christ?
- (5) (For certified Christian educator) Will you be a faithful certified Christian educator, teaching faith and caring for people, and will you in your ministry try to show the love and justice of Jesus Christ? (Book of Order, W-4.4003)

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 05-11

Advice on Item 05-11—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 218th General Assembly (2008) regarding Item 05-11 with the following comment.

Comment: The Advisory Committee on the Constitution refers the 218th General Assembly (2008) to its advice concerning Item 05-01, which sets forth the background that the Advisory Committee on the Constitution believes the assembly should consider in addressing each of the items related to ordination and installation of church officers.

Item 05-11 seeks to amend G-6.0106b from the Form of Government and to set aside previous authoritative interpretations regarding ordination standards. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advised the 213th General Assembly (2001), and assemblies since then, that the removal of G-6.0106b alone (or likewise, substitution of new provisions for the existing G-6.0106b) would not alter the church's position on ordination standards unless the General Assembly also amended or rescinded current authoritative interpretations regarding the eligibility of homosexual persons to hold church office. Approval of this overture would accomplish its intent to modify the church's position on ordination standards by taking both of the actions the Advisory Committee on the Constitution has advised are necessary to achieve that result.

The proposed substitute language for G-6.0106b substitutes a standard of obedience to Jesus Christ for the current provisions of G-6.0106b. Governing bodies would be given discretion in the application of this standard to particular candidates through the examination process, subject to an express provision for review by higher governing bodies. It is not clear what standard would govern such review. In other respects, the proposed language is clear and not inconsistent with any other provision of the Book of Order.

Impact of the proposed revisions to the proposed revised Form of Government before the assembly: To the extent the 218th General Assembly (2008) wishes to make amendment to the current G-6.0106b, the identical provision in the proposed Form of Government is found at G-2.0103b.

On Adopting an Authoritative Interpretation of G-6.0108 to Ensure Proper Application of Ordination Standards—From the Presbytery of John Knox.

The Presbytery of John Knox overtures the 218th General Assembly (2008) to approve the following authoritative interpretation of G-6.0108 of the Book of Order:

“[The 218th General Assembly (2008) affirms the authoritative interpretation of G-6.0108 approved by the 217th General Assembly (2006). Further, the 218th General Assembly (2008), pursuant to G-13.0112, interprets] the requirements of G-6.0108 [to] apply equally to all ordination standards of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). Section G-6.0108 requires examining bodies to give prayerful and careful consideration, on an individual, case-by-case basis, to any departure from an ordination standard in matters of belief or practice that a candidate may declare during examination. However, the examining body is not required to accept a departure from standards, and cannot excuse a candidate’s inability to perform the constitutional functions unique to his or her office (such as administration of the sacraments).”

Rationale

The 2006 Authoritative Interpretation. The 217th General Assembly (2006) approved an authoritative interpretation of G-6.0108 (Minutes, 2006, Part I, pp. 514–15) reminding the church of several important principles. First, ordination standards are set by the whole church, and must be applied in all cases by sessions and presbyteries. Second, in applying our ordination standards, sessions and presbyteries must make case-by-case assessments whether the particular candidate before them departs from any standard in a way that constitutes a failure to adhere to “essentials” of Reformed faith and polity (thus barring the candidate from ordained service).

Conscience and Ordination Standards. Section G-6.0108, the 217th General Assembly (2006)’s authoritative interpretation of it, our Historic Principles of Church Order (G-1.0300), and centuries of Presbyterian history all require that ordination standards be applied with respect for the candidate’s freedom of conscience in interpreting Scripture. The Apostle Paul urged the early church to respect the individual conscience (Rom. 14:1–13, Gal. 5:1–6, Col. 2:16–23). John Calvin declared that “The whole case rests on this: if God is the sole lawgiver, men are not permitted to usurp the honor” (Institutes, Bk. IV, Ch. 10 § 8). The Westminster Confession of Faith warns that “making men the lords of our faith and conscience” is idolatrous, and prohibited by the First Commandment (The Book of Confessions, § 7.215). Respecting conscience in the application of standards is not mere compromise or pragmatism—rather, it reflects our deep theological conviction that biblically formed conscience is the sacred court in which each individual stands accountable before God.

The Duty of Mutual Forbearance. The Historic Principles of Church Order (G-1.0305) recognize that “there are truths and forms with respect to which men of good characters and principles may differ,” and “in all these we think it the duty both of private Christians and societies to exercise mutual forbearance toward each other.” In fulfillment of this duty, G-6.0108 as authoritatively interpreted by the 217th General Assembly (2006) requires ordaining bodies to consider whether any candidate’s departures from scriptural or constitutional standards “constitute a failure to adhere to the essentials of Reformed faith and polity.” Departures that do not touch on essentials may be the sort over which Christians “of good character and principles” can disagree, making the practice of forbearance possible. This duty, of consistently evaluating all departures from the standards and considering in each case whether there is a possibility of forbearance, is not simply a practical expedient for making the church’s life run more smoothly. It is a faithful attempt to live out the Gospel command to imitate God’s own patience toward sinners by practicing forbearance toward our fellow Christians (Eph. 4:1–3, Phil. 2:3–11, Col. 3:12–13, 2 Tim. 2:24–25).

Examinations for Ordained Service. Section G-6.0108, as authoritatively interpreted by the 217th General Assembly (2006), makes clear that individuals may declare principled objections (what we historically have called “scruples”) to our ordination standards, with respect to both belief and behavior. In all cases, sessions and presbyteries must give prayerful and careful consideration to such declarations, with due respect for freedom of conscience. However, sessions and presbyteries exercise collective discernment during examination, and are not required to accept a person’s departure from standards; a scruple may be rejected if the body believes that the matter at issue is so important—that is, “essential”—it renders the candidate incapable of communion with the church (Adopting Act of 1729). Moreover, an examining body cannot find a person fit for office unless that person is willing to perform all of the constitutional functions unique to his or her office (e.g. a person aspiring to serve the church as a minister of Word and Sacrament must be willing and able to administer the sacraments).

Identifying “Essentials.” The Presbyterian church has always resisted efforts to define “essentials” in the abstract. When a person has been elected to serve, that person’s fitness must be assessed in light of his or her statement of faith, answers to questions posed during examination, demonstrated manner of life, interaction with the session or presbytery over the course of care, fit for the particular position to which he or she has been elected, and reasons (scriptural, theological, and intentional) for declaring a departure from our standards. Where the examining body determines that a departure must be considered “essential” with regard to a particular candidate, that person may not be ordained or installed. In all cases, however, we require that assessments of fitness be made pursuant to a conversation, not a checklist. For any governing body to declare a standard “essential” in the abstract, for all time and persons, is wholly at odds with the historic practice and theological commitments of the Presbyterian church.

A Single Exception. In Bush v. Presbytery of Pittsburgh (Remedial Case 218-10), decided February 11, 2008), the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission held that one standard—“the requirement to live either in fidelity within the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman ... or chastity in singleness” (G-6.0106b)—should be elevated above all other standards, so as to permit no consideration of departures. That holding was contrary to our Constitution, history, and theology as Presbyterians.

The Effect of This Overture. Freedom of conscience and the practice of forbearance mean nothing unless they are respected on issues over which faithful Presbyterians disagree. In Bush, the GAPJC rendered conscience irrelevant and prohibited consideration of forbearance precisely where they matter most—where there is genuine disagreement that threatens the unity of the church. This overture would not repeal the standard set forth in the second sentence of G-6.0106b, but would restore it to its proper status as one among many standards—to be faithfully applied in case-by-case assessments of fitness. In doing so, it would restore theological integrity to the way our standards are applied; return us to the sound Presbyterian tradition that has prevented and healed schisms over past centuries; respect the efforts of the 217th General Assembly (2006) to end thirty years of polarized debate on intractable differences; and enable the church to refocus its energies on outreach and mission, to the glory of God and the service of Jesus Christ in the world.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 05-12

Advice on Item 05-12—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 218th General Assembly (2008) regarding Item 05-12 with the following comment:

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution refers the 218th General Assembly (2008) to its advice concerning Item 05-01, which sets forth the background that the Advisory Committee on the Constitution believes the assembly should consider in addressing each of the items related to ordination and installation of church officers. In particular, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution draws the assembly’s attention to the discussion of the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission’s decision in Bush v. Presbytery of Pittsburgh (Remedial Case 218-10) set forth in that advice.

This overture requests that the General Assembly approve an additional authoritative interpretation of G-6.0108 that would replace the conclusion in Bush that the authoritative interpretation of G-6.0108 approved by the 217th General Assembly (2006) does not apply to the second sentence of G-6.0106b. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution believes that such an authoritative interpretation is within the power of the 218th General Assembly (2008) to approve. The effect of such an action would be to allow governing bodies to examine a candidate regarding his or her understanding of the terms “fidelity in marriage” and “chastity in singleness,” and if the candidates understanding of those confessional standards differed from the understanding of the governing body, to determine whether the departure was from an essential of Reformed faith and polity.

In its advice to the 217th General Assembly (2006), the Advisory Committee on the Constitution explained its views as to how belief and practice are related in the specific language of G-6.0106b:

By using the phrase “practice which the confessions call sin” rather than delineating practices that bar ordination, G-6.0106b creates an intersection between belief and practice. A person can only repent of conduct he or she genuinely believes to be sinful. If a person does not believe conduct to be sinful, he or she may abstain from that conduct out of concern for the well-being of the community (e.g., 1 Corinthians 8), but he or she cannot be said to repent of that conduct. The authoritative interpretation allows an ordaining or installing governing body, when faced with a particular practice that is described as sinful at some place in the confessions, that the candidate does not believe to be sinful, to ordain or install the candidate on the basis that the candidate’s belief that the practice was not sinful does not depart from the essentials of the Reformed faith or polity. (Minutes, 2006, Part I, p. 529)

This intersection, and the proposed authoritative interpretation, only applies in the examination process for ordination or installation in the context of the specific language of G-6.0106b. It does not, for example, apply to a disciplinary allegation that an officer has acted “contrary to the Scriptures or the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).”

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution believes that the language proposed is clear in accomplishing the stated intent set forth in the rationale to this overture. However, for the sake of clarity, if the 218th General Assembly (2008) wishes to approve the proposal, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises that it make clear that this paragraph is supplementary to, rather than a replacement of, the authoritative interpretation of G-6.0108 approved by the 217th General Assembly (2006), as follows:

“The 218th General Assembly (2008) affirms the authoritative interpretation of G-6.0108 approved by the 217th General Assembly (2006). Further, the 218th General Assembly (2008), pursuant to G-13.0112, interprets the requirements of G-6.0108 to apply equally to all ordination standards of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). Section G-6.0108 requires examining bodies to give prayerful and careful consideration, on an individual, case-by-case basis, to any departure from an ordination standard in matters of belief or practice that a candidate may declare during examination. However, the examining body is not required to accept a departure from standards, and cannot excuse a candidate's inability to perform the constitutional functions unique to his or her office (such as administration of the sacraments)."

ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEMS 05-12

Advice and Counsel on Item 05-12—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

Item 05-12 from the Presbytery of John Knox overtures the 218th General Assembly (2008) to approve an authoritative interpretation of G-6.0108.

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) advises that Item 05-12 be approved, and consequently that Items 05-01, 05-02, 05-04, 05-05, 05-07, 05-10, and 05-11 be disapproved.

Rationale

Since 1978, the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) and its predecessors have recognized that ordination issues are justice issues, linked to a range of cultural changes that have left few families untouched. At the same time, ACSWP has also been concerned that the church has sometimes been disproportionately preoccupied with these matters, weakening its witness to justice and peace in other areas of life. The 217th General Assembly (2006) action approving Paragraph 5 of the Theological Task Force on the Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church report was intended to help us live together with mutual forbearance and respect in our continuing differences on the subject of ordination. The General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission (PJC) decision of February 11, 2008 (Bush v. Presbytery of Pittsburgh, Remedial Case 218-10), has in effect returned us to a debilitating struggle with one another: a devastating outcome that has dispirited many on both sides who wanted to get on with our ministry to the world while continuing to learn from one another. We believe, with many commentators, that the PJC decision was faulty in that it singled out a single provision of the Book of Order as "essential," despite the fact that our history has consistently given responsibility for determining what is "essential" exclusively to ordaining bodies acting in particular cases. To repair this damage, we agree with the general intent of Items 05-06, 05-08, and 05-09.

We support in particular, however, an assembly action giving a new authoritative interpretation to G-6.0108, as illustrated by Item 05-12, and we endorse its lucid rationale.

With regard to Items 05-01, 05-02, 05-04, 05-05, 05-07, 05-10, and 05-11, these overtures would appear to continue the inordinate and even idolatrous fixation on G-6.0106b, and to represent a step backward toward further legalism in the church. We affirm the need for ethical standards regarding the whole of life, and for reasonable regulation applied fairly by councils of the church. We acknowledge the ambiguities of relying on authoritative interpretation rather than amendment to the Constitution, but affirm the wisdom of the Theological Task Force on Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church in recommending another approach to this particular subject, one that re-centered the debate on the overall "content of the character" of candidates.

With regard to Items 05-06, 05-08, and 05-09, which would remove and/or replace G-6.0106b from the Book of Order, we believe the approach of the Theological Task Force, remedied by means such as Item 05-12's recommendation, has yet to be fully tested. We are aware that "justice delayed is justice denied." Commissioners may logically affirm any of Items 05-6, 05-8, and 05-9, as well as 05-12, since 05-12 speaks to the overall balance that spiritual discernment seeks and not to particular matters of belief and practice. Yet by keeping belief and practice together, as "truth is in order to goodness" (G-3.0104), Item 12 would restore wholeness to the exercise of freedom of conscience. It may well be that freedom of conscience under the guidance of Scripture and the confessions is one of the Reformed "essentials of faith" beyond the primary affirmations of the Christian faith and the practices of love and justice.

An historical analogy: The action of the General Assembly of 1818 is an ironic counterpoint to the General Assembly PJC's February 2008 decision about scrupling. After a long and difficult debate, this General Assembly declared for the first time that slavery was an unmitigated moral evil that should be abolished as quickly as possible. Given, however, the divisive nature of the issue, the General Assembly of 1818 gave no instructions for enforcing this finding. It was left to the individual presbyteries to decide how to enforce the rule according to their own wisdom.

It should be remembered that this decision was not simply a change in church policy. For most of the 18th century, the Westminster Confession, the single confession used by the emerging Presbyterian church to judge the fitness of candidates for ordination, had served as a key prop in the argument against abolition. That assembly's decision changed fundamentally the way this confession was understood in the church. It is particularly relevant to note that after 1818 the content or faith component was not the focus of the continuing controversy about slavery in the church. The focus was in fact the behavior of pastors, elders, deacons, and church members who continued to own slaves. To state that the church does not recognize scruples in matters of behavior is to trivialize the long and bitter struggle to abolish slavery.

Item 05-13

[The assembly answered Item 05-13 by the action taken on Item 05-09. See pp. 42, 43.]

On Replacing G-6.0106b with a New Paragraph, and Providing A New Authoritative Interpretation—From the Presbytery of New Hope.

The Presbytery of New Hope respectfully overtures the 218th General Assembly (2008) to do the following:

1. Direct the Stated Clerk to send the following proposed amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes:

Strike the current text of G-6.0106b and insert new text to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

~~“b. Those who are called to office in the church are to lead a life in obedience to Scripture and in conformity to the historic confessional standards of the church. Among these standards is the requirement to live either in fidelity within the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman (W 4.9001), or chastity in singleness. Persons refusing to repent of any self acknowledged practice which the confessions call sin shall not be ordained and/or installed as deacons, elders, or ministers of the Word and Sacrament. Those who are called to ordained service in the church are to lead lives of obedience to Jesus Christ, as revealed in the Scriptures, and interpreted by the confessions of the church. Their suitability for the offices to which they have been elected is determined by the governing bodies where the examinations for ordination and/or installation take place, subject to review by the next higher governing body. By their assent to the constitutional questions for ordination or installation, officers demonstrate their fidelity to the standards of the Gospel.”~~

2. Provide the following authoritative interpretation:

Interpretative statements concerning ordained service of homosexual church members by the 190th General Assembly (1978) of the United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America and the 119th General Assembly (1979) of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, and all subsequent affirmations thereof, have no further force or effect.

Rationale

POLITY

Section G-6.0106b contradicts the church’s understanding of membership in the church and presents a standard that refuses some, but not all members, their entitlement to “all the rights and privileges of the church, including the right ... to hold office” (Book of Order, G-5.0202). Section G-6.0106b continues to relegate lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender members of the church to second-class status, dishonoring their committed relationships, and placing on them a burden of celibacy that is not required of other members (The Book of Confessions, The Scots Confession, 3.15). Current denominational policies regarding ordination, by calling almost exclusive attention to the current G-6.0106b, place limits on the inalienable right of congregations to elect their own officers (G-6.0107), and on their freedom of conscience in interpreting Scripture and the call of the Gospel (G-6.0108). Section G-6.0106b has not been a source of peace and unity in the church. It has not kept those who advocated these policies from schism. It has not silenced those who opposed them. The Theological Task Force on the Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church, after earnest study and prayer, was not able to come to a resolution of the divisive effects of G-6.0106b.

THEOLOGY

Our Reformed faith grounds us in faithful obedience to our Lord Jesus Christ, the “Head of the Church.” We follow Christ faithfully by continual and grateful reference to the “unique and authoritative witness of the Scriptures” and the powerful interpretive framework of the confessions. Most importantly, Scripture becomes God’s living Word of guidance to us in “matters of faith and practice,” both individually and corporately, through “the inward persuasion of the Holy Spirit.” The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) stays most faithful to its calling to be both reformed and always reforming when it honors this understanding of obedience. The proposed new language in this overture—“... obedience to Jesus Christ, as revealed in the Scriptures, and interpreted by the confessions of the church . . .”—better reflects the heart of our Reformed theological tradition concerning the authority of Scripture and the role of the confessions.

CONGREGATIONAL WITNESS

“[Christ] is our peace; in his flesh he has made both groups into one and has broken down the dividing wall, that is, the hostility between us” (Eph. 2:14).

Faith in Christ means building bridges where once there were walls. In 1994, after a two-year process of study, education, and intensive congregational discernment, we, the Church of Reconciliation in Chapel Hill, North Carolina, decided to answer the call of Christ’s barrier-breaking Spirit and build a bridge to lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender (LGBT) persons in our midst and in our community.

Coming to know the gay and lesbian members of our congregation, and hearing their witness has helped us understand how vitally important their faith is to them. We have been blessed by moving testimonies of faith and courage, stories of grace under pressure, and powerful sermons. We have also been deeply disturbed to learn that they have been rejected by Presbyterian churches and presbyteries, whether through outright prejudice or through being feared, judged, and unwanted.

We asked ourselves how we could respond compassionately to our brothers and sisters in Christ who have been turned away from the church (1 Cor. 12:12–26).

We sought to repent of our own fears and judgments, to begin our own journey of transformation, and to do what Christ was all along urging us to do—to extend the open arms of God’s love and grace, and to become a sanctuary of acceptance where our gay and lesbian brothers and sisters would be neither disparaged nor excluded. We have done so, and found ourselves immeasurably blessed by a loving and gracious God. What we experienced first as a “nudge of the Spirit,” we now understand to be nothing less than an opened door to the new life all Christians are offered in baptism and the Lord’s Supper.

We certainly understand the fears and concerns many in our denomination feel about opening their hearts and minds, and the doors of the church, to gay and lesbian believers. When we first began this process of exploration, several members of our congregation feared this issue would “split the church” or cause many of our members to leave. We faced these fears and kept talking, learning, and growing. A few of our members did leave, but the overwhelming majority stayed and benefited enormously from the increased diversity in the congregation. A steady flow of new members has come to us because they find our demonstration of Christ’s radical hospitality a compelling and sorely needed example in our divisive times. Over a decade after publicly declaring our openness and welcome, we continue to experience an upsurge in vitality, energy, and growth. We perceive “the new thing” God is doing and have seen it “springing forth.” (Isa. 43:18–19).

It has been exhilarating to recognize our common humanity before God. The children of our congregation have led us to celebrate our oneness in Christ. Labels have disappeared. Our differences, neither hidden nor broadcast, have become insignificant compared to the faith and love in Christ that we hold in common. Our identity as brothers and sisters in Christ transcends everything else, binding us together as one. We are fully convinced the risen Christ accepts all, regardless of earthly differences, as full equals at the Table of God’s love.

We have no desire to be contentious, or to offend others in the Body of Christ. But we can do no other than to invoke the liberty of conscience that is a hallmark of our Presbyterian tradition, and to bear witness to what the Spirit and our congregational experience have shown us so clearly: that G-6.0106b is contrary to the spirit of Christ, hampers evangelistic outreach, diverts denominational energies, and denies the church the gifts of talented, devoted people of faith.

We believe that the same Holy Spirit that has enriched our worship and community is poised to revitalize the PC(USA). We submit that the hope of a renewed PC(USA) lies in our faithful response to Christ’s call to join Him in a redemptive future, not in clinging to the past. In the spirit of joyful thanksgiving, we respectfully request the removal of these impediments that we might live into the peace and oneness that Christ has prepared for us.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 05-13

Advice on Item 05-13—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 218th General Assembly (2008) regarding Item 05-13 with the following comment.

Comment: The Advisory Committee on the Constitution refers the 218th General Assembly (2008) to its advice concerning Item 05-01, which sets forth the background that the Advisory Committee on the Constitution believes the assembly should consider in addressing each of the items related to ordination and installation of church officers.

Item 05-13 seeks to amend G-6.0106b in the Form of Government and to set aside previous authoritative interpretations regarding ordination standards. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advised the 213th General Assembly (2001), and assemblies since then, that the removal of G-6.0106b alone (or likewise, substitution of new provisions for the existing G-6.0106b) would not alter the church's position on ordination standards unless the General Assembly also amended or rescinded current authoritative interpretations regarding the eligibility of homosexual persons to hold church office. Approval of this overture would accomplish its intent to modify the church's position on ordination standards by taking both of the actions the Advisory Committee on the Constitution has advised are necessary to achieve that result.

The proposed language for G-6.0106b substitutes a standard of obedience to Jesus Christ for the current provisions of G-6.0106b. Governing bodies would be given discretion in the application of this standard to particular candidates through the examination process, subject to an express provision for review by higher governing bodies. It is not clear what standard would govern such review. In other respects, the proposed language is clear and not inconsistent with any other provision of the Book of Order.

Impact of the proposed revisions to the proposed revised Form of Government before the assembly: To the extent the 218th General Assembly (2008) wishes to make amendment to the current G-6.0106b, the identical provision in the proposed Form of Government is found at 2.0103b.

Item 05-14

Section G-14.0482, Ordaining to Non-Called Positions—From Doska Ross, Manager for Polity Guidance and Training, Office of the General Assembly.

In response to Item 05-14, pursuant to G-13.0112d, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that the 218th General Assembly (2008) answer the question presented with the following statement:

The language of G-14.0482 in the amended Chapter 14 was not intended to change the practice under the former G-14.0401 of allowing the ordination of positions other than installed pastoral relationships. Therefore, a position such as a mission worker, a chaplaincy, a part-time pastorate, or a tent-making position is an ordainable position.

Rationale

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution makes the following findings with respect to the question presented:

1. The former G-14.0401 referred to ordination for office when one has “received a call for service to a church or other work in the mission of the church that is acceptable to the candidate and the presbytery” (emphasis added). This wording is no longer included in the new Chapter 14, at G-14.0482, which simply says that the presbytery “shall approve the call.”

2. In 1993, the General Assembly, when asked for an interpretation of this part of the former G-14.0401, made it clear that a presbytery could ordain a person to a “call” that is not an installed pastoral relationship. That authoritative interpretation clarified the definition of the term “call.” The language of G-14.0482 does not change the definition of “call”; it simply sets forth how a candidate's ordination is to be processed. A change to something as important as the definition of the term “call” should not be done by inference, but rather specifically and clearly. Without a clear indication that such a change was intended, the 1993 authoritative interpretation defining “call,” is still in effect.

Question Received

Item 05-14 from the manager for polity guidance and training reporting that, since the amendment of Chapter 14 in the Form of Government, many presbyteries have asked whether a particular position, such as a mission worker or a chaplaincy or a part-time pastorate or a tent-making opportunity is an ordainable position.

Item 05-15

G-14.0550—Non-ministers as Temporary Supplies, Doska Ross, Manager for Polity Guidance and Training.

In response to Item 05-15, pursuant to G-13.0112d, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends the 218th General Assembly (2008) to answer the question presented with the following interpretation and comment:

Interpretation: Section G-14.0550 in the amended Chapter 14 of the Form of Government does not change the practice of allowing a commissioned lay pastor, a candidate or inquirer under care, or an elder to serve a congregation as a temporary supply pastor. Therefore, persons in such positions are still permitted to serve a congregation as a temporary supply pastor.

Comment: The Advisory Committee on the Constitution makes the following findings with respect to the question presented:

1. Prior to the amendment, the former G-14.0513e allowed a temporary supply pastor to “be a minister, a candidate, a commissioned lay pastor, or an elder . . .” and at former G-14.0513f inquirers under care were added to those who could be a temporary supply pastor. There are other sections of the Book of Order that make it clear that sessions and presbyteries may authorize a commissioned lay pastor, a candidate or inquirer under care, or an elder to serve in pastoral relationships (see G-6.0304a, G-11.0103z, G-14.0420, and G-14.0560).

2. In the amended Chapter 14, G-14.0550 on temporary pastoral relationships begins with these words, “All temporary relationships of a minister of the Word and Sacrament, full or part-time, are established by the session or commission of the presbytery with the approval of the presbytery, through its committee on ministry.” It would appear that the new wording is intended to give presbyteries flexibility to create or designate temporary pastoral relationships without specifying what those relationships should be. It would also appear that it was not intended to change the former practice of allowing a variety of persons to serve in temporary pastoral relationships, particularly since other the sections of the Form of Government cited above were not amended. Without a clear indication that a wholesale change in the identity of persons who may serve in temporary relationships was intended, we must assume that the former practice is still in effect.

3. The wording of the new section, G-14.0550, which refers to “temporary pastoral relationships of minister of the Word and Sacrament” [emphasis added] may create some confusion by suggesting that only ministers of the Word and Sacrament may serve in temporary pastoral relationships. If the General Assembly believes that this language creates such confusion and it wishes to eliminate that confusion, it may do so by directing the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly to send to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative vote the following amendment:

Shall the Book of Order be amended as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“G-14:0550 Temporary Pastoral Relations

“All temporary pastoral relationships of a ~~minister of the Word and Sacrament~~, full or part-time, are established by the session or commission of the presbytery with the approval of the presbytery through its committee on ministry. These temporary relationships have titles appropriate to the ministerial tasks to which the ~~minister~~ person is called, such as stated supply, temporary supply, organizing pastor, interim pastor, and others. A ~~minister~~ person serving in a temporary pastoral relationship is called for a specified time not to exceed twelve months in length, which is renewable with the approval of the committee on ministry. A written agreement, covenant, or terms of call signed by the ~~minister~~ person, the clerk of session or presbytery commission, and a representative of the committee on ministry shall specify the pastoral functions, compensation, and any special skills or training required for the ~~ministry~~ pastoral relationship. A temporary pastor is not installed and is not a member of the session. The presbytery may appoint a moderator of the session who may be the temporary pastor.”

The issue involved in this request would not arise under the proposed new Form of Government

Questions Presented

Item 05-15 from the manager for polity guidance and training reporting that a number of questions have been raised since the approval of Amendment 06-A to the Form of Government (Chapter 14), especially with respect to temporary pastoral positions. The specific question raised is whether, under the new G-14.0550, a commissioned lay pastor, a candidate or inquirer under care, or an elder may at times be allowed to serve a congregation as a temporary supply pastor.

Item 05-16

[The assembly approved Item 05-16. See pp. 42, 43.]

Interpretation of PUP—From the Reverend Michael Herrin, Pastor, First Presbyterian Church of Port Gibson, Mississippi, Chaplain, Chamberlain-Hunt Academy.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that the 218th General Assembly (2008) answer Item 05-16 with the following response:

This request arises from footnote number 3 in Bush et al v. Presbytery of Pittsburgh (pp. 5–6), where the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission (GAPJC) asks whether the movement of the question used in the ordination and installation of church officers from the Form of Government to the Directory for Worship recommended by the 217th General Assembly (2006) and approved by the presbyteries has created “an oversight that should be addressed by the General Assembly” by changing the reference from “Form of Government” to “Book of Order.” The Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that no constitutional change is necessary, but believes that the question presents the opportunity to clarify confusion as to the recent amendment of the Book of Order that moved the ordination questions to the Directory for Worship.

Adherence to the essentials of the Reformed faith and polity as expressed in The Book of Confessions and the Form of Government are determined by a governing body when it examines candidates for office prior to their ordination or installation (G-14.0240 and G-14.0482). Examination questions related to G-6.0100, including the questions now found at W-4.4003, are appropriately asked at this time in the ordination process, as are a variety of other questions. Governing bodies are required to engage in a thorough examination of candidates, but have wide discretion as to which questions are put to a particular candidate. The amendment moving the questions asked in the service of ordination or installation to the Directory for Worship in no respect limits members of a governing body from asking those questions in the examination of candidates.

However, W-4.4003 applies to a different step in the process—to the actual service of ordination and installation. This step occurs only after a governing body has approved the examination and has satisfied itself that the candidate adheres to the essentials of the Reformed faith and polity as expressed in The Book of Confessions and the Form of Government.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution further notes that G-14.0540 now states, “Ordination questions and installation service information may be found at W-4.4000.” This provision links the ordination questions to the Form of Government and should be understood to make clear that the service of ordination and/or installation remains a requirement of the Form of Government but is found in the Directory for Worship. With this understanding, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises that there is no need for any amendment to G-6.0108b.

While not directly raised by the question, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution reminds the 218th General Assembly (2008) that the Preface to the Directory for Worship describes the purpose of the Directory for Worship as follows:

... A Directory for Worship is not a service book with fixed orders of worship, a collection of prayers and rituals, or a program guide. Rather it describes the theology that underlies Reformed worship and outlines appropriate forms for that worship. This directory suggests possibilities for worship, invites development in worship, and encourages continuing reform of worship. It sets standards and presents norms for the conduct of worship in the life of congregations and the governing bodies of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) As the constitutional document ordering the worship of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), this Directory for Worship shall be authoritative for this church.

The Directory for Worship is no less a part of the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) than the Form of Government.

Question

Item 05-16 from a minister member of the Presbytery of Mississippi presents the following question upon which it seeks constitutional interpretation:

Does the movement of the questions used in the ordination and installation of church officers from the Form of Government to the Directory for Worship recommended by the 217th General Assembly (2006) and approved by the presbyteries require amendment of G-6.0108a's requirement that officers of the PC(USA) "adhere to the essentials of the Reformed faith and polity as expressed in The Book of Confessions and the Form of Government?"

Item 05-17

[The assembly approved Item 05-17. See pp. 42, 43.]

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommends that the 218th General Assembly (2008) answer Item 05-17 with the following response:

This request is identical to Item 05-16 and the findings and recommendation of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution is therefore likewise identical to its findings and recommendation as to that item.

This request arises from footnote number 3 in Bush et al v. Presbytery of Pittsburgh (pp. 5–6), where the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission (GAPJC) asks whether the movement of the question used in the ordination and installation of church officers from the Form of Government to the Directory for Worship recommended by the 217th General Assembly (2006) and approved by the presbyteries has created "an oversight that should be addressed by the General Assembly" by changing the reference from "Form of Government" to "Book of Order." The Advisory Committee on the Constitution finds that no constitutional change is necessary, but believes that the question presents the opportunity to clarify confusion as to the recent amendment of the Book of Order that moved the ordination questions to the Directory for Worship.

Adherence to the essentials of the Reformed faith and polity as expressed in The Book of Confessions and the Form of Government are determined by a governing body when it examines candidates for office prior to their ordination or installation (G-14.0240 and G-14.0482). Examination questions related to G-6.0100, including the questions now found at W-4.4003, are appropriately asked at this time in the ordination process, as are a variety of other questions. Governing bodies are required to engage in a thorough examination of candidates, but have wide discretion as to which questions are put to a particular candidate. The amendment moving the questions asked in the service of ordination or installation to the Directory for Worship in no respect limits members of a governing body from asking those questions in the examination of candidates.

However, W-4.4003 applies to a different step in the process—to the actual service of ordination and installation. This step occurs only after a governing body has approved the examination and has satisfied itself that the candidate adheres to the essentials of the Reformed faith and polity as expressed in The Book of Confessions and the Form of Government.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution further notes that G-14.0540 now states, "Ordination questions and installation service information may be found at W-4.4000." This provision links the ordination questions to the Form of Government and should be understood to make clear that the service of ordination and/or installation remains a requirement of the Form of Government but is found in the Directory for Worship. With this understanding, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises that there is no need for any amendment to G-6.0108b.

While not directly raised by the question, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution reminds the 218th General Assembly (2008) that the Preface to the Directory for Worship describes the purpose of the Directory as follows:

... A Directory for Worship is not a service book with fixed orders of worship, a collection of prayers and rituals, or a program guide. Rather it describes the theology that underlies Reformed worship and outlines appropriate forms for that worship. This directory suggests possibilities for worship, invites development in worship, and encourages continuing reform of worship. It sets standards and presents norms for the conduct of worship in the life of congregations and the governing bodies of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) As the constitutional document ordering the worship of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), this Directory for Worship shall be authoritative for this church.

The Directory for Worship is no less a part of the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) than the Form of Government.

Question

Item 05-17 from an elder commissioner to the Presbytery of Chicago presents the following question upon which it seeks constitutional interpretation:

Does the movement of the questions used in the ordination and installation of church officers from the Form of Government to the Directory for Worship recommended by the 217th General Assembly (2006) and approved by the presbyteries require amendment of G-6.0108a's requirement that officers of the PC(USA) "adhere to the essentials of the Reformed faith and polity as expressed in The Book of Confessions and The Form of Government?"

Item 05-18

[The assembly answered Item 05-18 by the action taken on Item 05-03. See pp. 42, 43.]

On Directing the Stated Clerk to Collect and/or Develop Models of Examination Procedures—From the Presbytery of Heartland.

The Presbytery of Heartland respectfully overtures the 218th General Assembly (2008) to

1. Commend presbyteries and sessions that have incorporated serious theological reflection and prayerful discernment into their examination procedures, as recommended by the 217th General Assembly (2006) through its approval of the report of the Theological Task Force on the Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church, and the authoritative interpretation approved by the 217th General Assembly (2006).
2. Direct the Stated Clerk to collect and/or develop models of such procedures that honor the authoritative interpretation and follow the Book of Order and make them available to the whole church.
3. Remind sessions and presbyteries, as they carry out their constitutional responsibilities under G-6.0108, that
  - a. the purpose of ordination and installation examinations is to discern whether God has called and equipped persons for particular service, in order to proclaim the Gospel in word and deed, engage in faithful ministry in the world, build up the Church of Jesus Christ, and bring glory to God;
  - b. in light of this purpose, all persons being examined should be treated with respect, recognizing that God's Spirit blows where it chooses (John 3:8);
  - c. theological questions should offer the opportunity for the ordination candidates to demonstrate knowledge of the Reformed tradition and insight in application;
  - d. personal questions on all topics should be posed with discretion, respect, and sensitivity, and that specific inquiry cannot be made into the sexual orientation or practice of persons being examined if the persons have not, on their own initiative, made a declarative statement. If such inquiries are not made into the sexual orientation or practice of all persons being examined, then such inquiries may not be made into only select persons' orientation or practice. (See GAPJC rulings in Presbytery of San Joaquin v. Presbytery of Redwoods, Remedial Case 215-8 [Minutes, 2003, Part I, p. 259] and Wier v. Second Presbyterian Church, GAPJC Re. Case 214-5 [Minutes, 2002, Part I, p. 339].)

Rationale

Actions of the 217th General Assembly (2006) invite us to be church in a renewed and more faithful way. Building on the example of Jesus Christ, who prayed that we "may all be one ... so that the world may believe" (John 17:21), the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) now has a unique opportunity to witness to unity without requiring uniformity.

While built upon tradition and history dating back to the first century, the church we are becoming needs to be shaped and guided if it is to be faithful to the principles and mission envisioned by the 217th General Assembly (2006).

Some presbyteries and sessions have moved forward by implementing the recommendations passed by the 217th General Assembly (2006). They are now practicing a healthy, faithful openness to the new thing God is doing (Isaiah 43:19) while others await assistance from those sisters and brothers in the church who are further along in this journey of discernment. Learning from these "pioneers" would be beneficial to the health, life, and mission of the denomination.

The commitment of the 217th General Assembly (2006) to both unity and diversity within the church sets a high standard, for we live in a time when divisions related to issues such as peace, global warming, economic disparity, biblical interpretation, ordination, and inclusion and religious pluralism threaten to pull us apart. Learning how to speak and to listen to one another with regard to the matter of ordination can and will serve as a model for conversations about other issues that challenge us to be church God calls us to be.

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 05-18

Advice and Counsel on Item 05-18—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC).

Item 05-18 directs the Stated Clerk to collect and/or develop models of examination procedures.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC) advises that this item be answered by the action taken on Item 05-03.

Item 06-01

[The assembly referred Item 06-01, Recommendations A.–D. to the Office of the General Assembly with comment. See p. 21.)

Comment:

The referral to the Office of the General Assembly is for a period of consultation and study with churches and presbyteries through a system or systems designed and implemented by the Form of Government Task Force and members of the 218th General Assembly Committee on Form of Government Revisions. The participation of every presbytery in the period of consultation and study will be strongly urged. New members of this expanded task force are to be chosen from the 218th General Assembly (2008) Assembly Committee on Form of Government Revisions by the Moderator of the 218th General Assembly (2008), in consultation with the moderator and vice moderator of the 218th General Assembly (2008) Assembly Committee on Form of Government Revisions.

The new task force will revise the Form of Government Task Force Report, taking into account the concerns and suggestions gleaned from the consultation and study process. The guidance of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution, the overtures, and the testimony received by the 218th General Assembly (2008) Assembly Committee on Form of Government Revisions and the committee's comments are referred to the task force for serious and studied consideration.

The revised report of the Form of Government task force is to be submitted to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly no later than October 15, 2009, for distribution to the church at large no later than January 15, 2010, for consideration by the 219th General Assembly (2010).

The Assembly Committee on Form of Government Revisions submits the following unedited comments, from subcommittees of the committee, for consideration in the continuing study and revision of the Form of Government (See Appendix A.)

[Financial Implications: (2008): $8,275; (2009): $64,530; (2010): $25,350 (Per Capita-OGA)]

A. The Form of Government Task Force recommends that the 218th General Assembly (2008) direct the Stated Clerk to send the following amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative vote:

Shall the Book of Order be amended by striking the text of Chapters I–IV of the current “Form of Government” and inserting a new section entitled, “Foundations of Presbyterian Polity,” to read as follows:

“THE FOUNDATIONS OF PRESBYTERIAN POLITY

“CHAPTER ONE

“THE MISSION OF THE CHURCH

“F-1.01 GOD’S MISSION

“The sovereign mission of the one triune God—Father, Son, and Holy Spirit—gives substance and form to the Church’s activity in the world. The Church knows God’s sovereign work in creation and redemption through God’s Word in Scripture, the witness of the confessions, and the presence of Christ in the power of the Holy Spirit. As the Church responds to God’s gracious call, it participates in the divine mission—proclaiming the time of the Lord’s favor, bringing good news to all who are impoverished, and announcing release to those who are imprisoned, sight to those who are blinded, and freedom to those who are oppressed. In its faithful mission, the Church is assured of God’s blessing and filled with hope in the fulfillment of God’s purpose. Along with Christians everywhere, Presbyterians have no higher goal in life or in death than to live in covenant fellowship with the triune God, to embrace and serve God’s mission, to glorify and enjoy God now and forever.

“F-1.02 JESUS CHRIST IS HEAD OF THE CHURCH

“1.0201 The Authority of Christ

“God has given to Jesus Christ all authority in heaven and on earth, not only in this age but also in the age to come. God has put all things under the Lordship of Jesus Christ and has made Christ Head of the Church, which is his body. The Church’s life and mission are a joyful participation in Christ’s ongoing life and work. Wherever Christ is, there is the Church; wherever Christ leads, the Church follows.

“1.0202 Christ Calls and Equips the Church

“Christ calls the Church into being, giving it all that is necessary for its mission to the world, for its strength, and for its service to God. Christ is present with the Church in both Spirit and Word. Christ alone rules, teaches, calls, and uses the Church as he wills.

“1.0203 Christ Gives the Church Its Life

“Christ gives to the Church its faith and life, its unity and mission, its order and discipline. Insofar as Christ’s will for the Church is set forth in Scripture, it is to be obeyed. In the worship and service of God and the government of the church, matters are to be ordered according to the Word by reason and sound judgment, under the guidance of the Holy Spirit.

“1.0204 Christ Is the Church’s Hope

“In affirming with the earliest Christians that Jesus is Lord, the Church confesses that he is its hope and that the Church, as Christ’s body, is bound to his authority and thus free to live in the lively, joyous reality of the grace of God.

“1.0205 Christ Is the Foundation of the Church

“In Christ all the fullness of God was pleased to dwell, and through Christ God reconciles all things, whether on earth or in heaven, making peace by the blood of the cross (Col. 1:16–23). In Christ’s name, therefore, the Church is sent out to bear witness to the good news of reconciliation with God and one another. In Christ the Church receives the universal scope of its truth and appeal. In Christ the Church receives its holiness. In Christ the Church receives its unity.

“F-1.03 THE CALLING OF THE CHURCH“1.0301 The Church Is the Body of Christ

“The Church is the body of Christ, both in its corporate life and in the lives of its individual members.

“The Church of Jesus Christ is the provisional demonstration of what God intends for all of humanity. The Church is called to be a sign in and for the world of the new reality that God has made available to people in Jesus Christ. The new reality revealed in Jesus Christ is the new humanity, a new creation, a new beginning for human life in the world:

“The Church is called to give shape and substance to this truth. The Church is further called to undertake this mission even at the risk of losing its life, trusting in God alone as the author and giver of life, sharing the gospel, and doing those deeds in the world that point beyond themselves to the new reality in Christ.

“1.0302 The Marks of the Church<sup>1</sup>

“With Christians of the Church catholic, we affirm that the Church is ‘one, holy, catholic, and apostolic.’

“a. The Apostolicity of the Church

“Apostolicity is God’s gift to the Church in Jesus Christ, whose life manifests the triune God. The Church receives the good news of salvation in Jesus Christ through the testimony of those whom Christ sent, and then is itself sent into the world by Jesus Christ to bear that testimony to others. The mission of the Church is to proclaim in Word and Sacrament that the new age has dawned, and that God who creates life also frees those in bondage, forgives sin, reconciles brokenness, makes all things new, and is still at work in the world.

“The Church is called to be faithful to the Good News it has received and accountable to the standards of the confessions. The Church is called to present the claims of Jesus Christ, leading persons to repentance, acceptance of Christ alone as Savior and Lord, and new life as his disciples.

“The Church is called to be Christ’s faithful evangelist:

“going into the world, making disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit, teaching them to observe all he has commanded;

“demonstrating by the love of its members for one another and by the quality of its common life the new reality in Christ; sharing in worship, fellowship, and nurture, practicing a deepened life of prayer and service under the guidance of the Holy Spirit;

“participating in God’s activity in the world through healing, reconciling, and binding up wounds; ministering to the needs of the poor, sick, and lonely; engaging in the struggle to free people from sin and oppression; giving itself in the service of those who suffer; and bearing witness to the establishment of Christ’s just, peaceable, and loving rule in the world.

“b. The Catholicity of the Church

“Catholicity is God’s gift to the Church in Jesus Christ, whose life makes known the reconciling love of the triune God. Christ is Lord of all creation and Head of the Church. As the body of Christ, the Church catholic is a sign of God’s reconciling love, embracing all times and places, all races and nations, all genders and ages, all persons regardless of station in life. The Church catholic is marked by the fullness of faith, the wholeness of hope, and the completeness of love, lived in communion with all who confess Jesus Christ as Savior and Lord.

“A congregation consists of persons in a particular place and time who profess faith in Jesus Christ as Lord and Savior, gather to worship God, listen for God’s Word in Scripture, celebrate the sacraments, commit themselves to God’s mission in the world, and order their common life in fidelity to the gospel, together with the children of the congregation. Congregations are called to participate in the catholicity of the Church, so that all are embraced within the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Spirit.

“c. The Holiness of the Church

“Holiness is God’s gift to the Church in Jesus Christ, whose suffering love is an act of the triune God. By his love, Christ takes away the sin of the world. The holiness of the church comes from Christ, who calls it to bear witness to his suffering love, and not from the purity of its doctrine or the righteousness of its actions.

“In grateful response to Christ’s redemptive work, the Church, its members, and those in its ordered ministries, are called to lead lives worthy of the gospel we proclaim. We rely upon the work of God’s Spirit through Scripture and the means of grace to form every believer and every community for this holy living. At the same time, we acknowledge the persistence of sin in our corporate and individual lives, even as we are forgiven by Christ and called again and yet again to strive for the purity, righteousness, and truth revealed to us in Jesus Christ and promised to all people in the new reality of God.

“d. The Unity of the Church

“Unity is God’s gift to the Church in Jesus Christ, who manifests the unity of the triune God. The Church is one because it belongs to one Lord, Jesus Christ. The Church is a fellowship of believers that seeks to include all people and is never content to enjoy the benefits of Christian community for itself alone. There is one Church, for there is one Spirit, one hope, “one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of all, who is above all and through all and in all” (Eph. 4:5–6).

“The unity of the Church is both God’s gift and our calling. To be united with Christ is to be united with all those who are in Christ. To be thus joined with one another is to become priests together, praying for the world and for one another and sharing the various gifts God has given to each Christian for the benefit of the whole community. Division into different denominations does not destroy unity in Christ, but it obscures it for both the Church and the world. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), affirming its historical continuity with the whole Church of Jesus Christ, is committed to the reduction of that obscurity, and is willing to seek and to deepen communion with all other churches within the one, catholic Church.

“1.0303 The Notes of the Reformed Church

“To be reconciled to God is to be sent into the world as God’s reconciling community. This community, the Church catholic, is entrusted with God’s message of reconciliation and shares God’s labor of healing the enmities that separate us from God and from each other. Christ has called the Church to this mission and given it the gift of the Holy Spirit.<sup>2</sup> Reformed Christians have understood that the Church is faithful to this mission when it truly pro-

“1.0304 The Great Ends of the Church

“The great ends of the Church are:

“the proclamation of the gospel for the salvation of humankind;

“the shelter, nurture, and spiritual fellowship of the children of God;

“THE CHURCH AND ITS CONFESSIONS

“F-2.01 The Purpose of Confessional Statements

“The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) states its faith and bears witness to God’s grace in Jesus Christ in the creeds and confessions in The Book of Confessions. In these statements the church declares to its members and to the world who and what it is, what it believes, and what it resolves to do. These statements identify the church as a community of people known by its convictions as well as by its actions. They guide the church in its study and interpretation of the Scriptures; they summarize the essence of Reformed Christian tradition; they direct the church in maintaining sound doctrines; they equip the church for its work of proclamation. The creeds and confessions of this church arose in response to particular circumstances within the history of God’s people. They are the result of prayer, thought, and experience within a living tradition. They serve to strengthen personal commitment and the life and witness of the community of believers.

“F-2.02 The Confessions as Subordinate Standards

“These confessional statements are subordinate standards in the church, subject to the authority of Jesus Christ, the Word of God, as the Scriptures bear witness to him. While confessional standards are subordinate to the Scriptures, they are, nonetheless, standards. They are not lightly drawn up or subscribed to, nor may they be ignored or dismissed. The church is prepared to instruct, counsel with, or even to discipline one ordained who seriously rejects the faith expressed in the confessions. Moreover, a more exacting amendment process is required to change the confessions of the church than is required to change the Constitution in matters of government, worship, or discipline. Yet the church, in obedience to Jesus Christ, is open to the reform of its standards of doctrine as well as of governance. The church affirms Ecclesia reformata, semper reformanda secundum verbum Dei, that is, ‘The church reformed, always to be reformed according to the Word of God’ and the call of the Spirit.

“F-2.03 The Confessions as Statements of the Faith of the Church Catholic

“In its confessions, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) witnesses to the faith of the Church catholic. The confessions express the faith of the one, holy, catholic, and apostolic Church in the recognition of canonical Scriptures and the formulation and adoption of the ecumenical creeds, notably the Nicene and Apostles’ Creeds with their definitions of the mystery of the triune God and of the incarnation of the eternal Word of God in Jesus Christ.

“F-2.04 The Confessions as Statements of the Faith of the Protestant Reformation

“In its confessions, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) identifies with the affirmations of the Protestant Reformation. The focus of these affirmations is the rediscovery of God’s grace in Jesus Christ as revealed in the Scriptures. The Protestant watchwords—grace alone, faith alone, Scripture alone—embody principles of understanding that continue to guide and motivate the people of God in the life of faith.

“F-2.05 The Confessions as Statements of the Faith of the Reformed Tradition

<sup>4</sup> This statement of the great ends of the Church, slightly edited here, came from the United Presbyterian Church of North America, which united with the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America in 1958. The statement was then made a part of the Constitution of The United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, as the united body was called. This now classic statement was adopted by the United Presbyterian Church of North America in 1910, following various actions between 1904 and 1910 looking forward to the revision of the church’s Constitution.

“In its confessions, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) expresses the faith of the Reformed tradition. Central to this tradition is the affirmation of the majesty, holiness, and providence of God who creates, sustains, rules, and redeems the world in the freedom of sovereign righteousness and love. Related to this central affirmation of God’s sovereignty are other great themes of the Reformed tradition:

“The election of the people of God for service as well as for salvation;

“Covenant life marked by a disciplined concern for order in the church according to the Word of God;

“A faithful stewardship that shuns ostentation and seeks proper use of the gifts of God’s creation;

“The recognition of the human tendency to idolatry and tyranny, which calls the people of God to work for the transformation of society by seeking justice and living in obedience to the Word of God.

“CHAPTER THREE

“PRINCIPLES OF ORDER AND GOVERNMENT

“F-3.01 HISTORIC PRINCIPLES OF CHURCH ORDER<sup>5</sup>

“In setting forth the following form of government, worship, and discipline, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) reaffirms the historic principles of church order, which have been a part of our common heritage in this nation and which are basic to our Presbyterian concept and system of church government, namely:

“3.0101 God Is Lord of the Conscience.

“a. That ‘God alone is Lord of the conscience, and hath left it free from the doctrines and commandments of men<sup>6</sup> which are in anything contrary to his Word, or beside it, in matters of faith or worship.’<sup>7</sup>

“b. Therefore we consider the rights of private judgment, in all matters that respect religion, as universal and unalienable: We do not even wish to see any religious constitution aided by the civil power, further than may be necessary for protection and security, and at the same time, be equal and common to all others.

“3.0102 Right of Self-determination

“That, in perfect consistency with the above principle of common right, every Christian Church, or union or association of particular churches, is entitled to declare the terms of admission into its communion, and the qualifications of its ministers and members, as well as the whole system of its internal government which Christ hath appointed; that in the exercise of this right they may, notwithstanding, err, in making the terms of communion either too lax or too narrow; yet, even in this case, they do not infringe upon the liberty or the rights of others, but only make an improper use of their own.

“3.0103 Officers

“That our blessed Savior, for the edification of the visible Church, which is his body, hath appointed officers,<sup>8</sup> not only to preach the gospel and administer the Sacraments, but also to exercise discipline, for the preservation of both truth and duty; and that it is incumbent upon these officers, and upon the whole Church, in whose name they act, to censure or cast out the erroneous and scandalous, observing, in all cases, the rules contained in the Word of God.

“3.0104 Truth and Goodness

“That truth is in order to goodness; and the great touchstone of truth, its tendency to promote holiness, according to our Savior’s rule, ‘By their fruits ye shall know them.’ And that no opinion can either be more pernicious or more absurd than that which brings truth and falsehood upon a level, and represents it as of no consequence what a

<sup>5</sup> This section, with the exception of the first paragraph, was first drawn up by the Synod of New York and Philadelphia, and prefixed to the Form of Government as published by that body in 1788. In that year, the synod was divided into four synods and gave place to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, which held its first meeting the following year. The four synods formed were the Synod of New York and New Jersey, the Synod of Philadelphia, the Synod of Virginia, and the Synod of the Carolinas. The presbyteries of these four synods were represented in the first General Assembly, which met in Philadelphia on May 21, 1789. The general plan drawn up in 1788 became that by which the Presbyterian Church in the United States and The United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America were subsequently governed.

<sup>6</sup> The words ‘men’ and ‘man’s’ throughout this quotation from the eighteenth century should be understood as applying to all persons.

<sup>8</sup> The term ‘officers’ and ‘office’ is preserved here as part of the historic language of the Principles. Elsewhere in the Form of Government the terms ‘ordered minister’ and ‘ordered ministry’ are used in place of ‘officer’ and ‘office.’

man's opinions are. On the contrary, we are persuaded that there is an inseparable connection between faith and practice, truth and duty. Otherwise it would be of no consequence either to discover truth or to embrace it.

“3.0105 Mutual Forbearance

“That, while under the conviction of the above principle we think it necessary to make effectual provision that all who are admitted as teachers be sound in the faith, we also believe that there are truths and forms with respect to which men of good characters and principles may differ. And in all these we think it the duty both of private Christians and societies to exercise mutual forbearance toward each other.

“3.0106 Right of Election of Officers

“That though the character, qualifications, and authority of Church officers are laid down in the Holy Scriptures, as well as the proper method of their investiture and institution, yet the election of the persons to the exercise of this authority, in any particular society, is in that society.

“3.0107 Church Power

“That all Church power, whether exercised by the body in general or in the way of representation by delegated authority, is only ministerial and declarative; that is to say, that the Holy Scriptures are the only rule of faith and manners; that no Church judicatory<sup>9</sup> ought to pretend to make laws to bind the conscience in virtue of their own authority; and that all their decisions should be founded upon the revealed will of God. Now though it will easily be admitted that all synods and councils may err, through the frailty inseparable from humanity, yet there is much greater danger from the usurped claim of making laws than from the right of judging upon laws already made, and common to all who profess the gospel, although this right, as necessity requires in the present state, be lodged with fallible men.

“3.0108 The Value of Ecclesiastical Discipline

“Lastly, that if the preceding scriptural and rational principles be steadfastly adhered to, the vigor and strictness of its discipline will contribute to the glory and happiness of any church. Since ecclesiastical discipline must be purely moral or spiritual in its object, and not attended with any civil effects, it can derive no force whatever but from its own justice, the approbation of an impartial public, and the countenance and blessing of the great Head of the Church universal.

“F-3.02 PRINCIPLES OF PRESBYTERIAN GOVERNMENT

“The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) reaffirms, within the context of its commitment to the Church universal, a special commitment to basic principles of Presbyterian polity:

“3.0201 One Church

“The particular congregations of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) wherever they are, taken collectively, constitute one church, called the church.

“3.0202 Governed by Presbyters

“This church shall be governed by presbyters, that is, ruling and teaching elders, also called elders and ministers of the Word and Sacrament. Ruling elders are so named not because they ‘lord it over’ the congregation (Matt. 20:25), but because they are chosen by the congregation to discern and measure its fidelity to the Word of God, and to strengthen and nurture its faith and life. Teaching elders, also called ministers of the Word and Sacrament, shall be committed in all their work to equipping the people of God for their ministry and witness.

“3.0203 Gathered in Councils

“These presbyters shall come together in councils in regular gradation. These councils are sessions, presbyteries, synods, and the General Assembly. All councils of the church are united by the nature of the church and share with one another responsibilities, rights, and powers as provided in this Constitution. The councils are distinct, but have such mutual relations that the act of one of them is the act of the whole church performed by it through the appropriate council. The larger part of the church, or a representation thereof, shall govern the smaller.

“3.0204 Seek and Represent the Will of Christ

“Presbyters are not simply to reflect the will of the people, but rather to seek together to find and represent the will of Christ.

---

<sup>9</sup> The term ‘judicatory,’ employed here as part of the historical language of the Principles, is elsewhere in the Form of Government replaced with ‘council.’

“3.0205 Decision by Majority Vote

“Decisions shall be reached in councils by vote, following opportunity for discussion and discernment, and a majority shall govern.

“3.0206 Review and Control

“A higher council shall have the right of review and control over a lower one and shall have power to determine matters of controversy upon reference, complaint, or appeal.

“3.0207 Ordination by Council

“Presbyters (ruling and teaching elders) and deacons are ordained only by the authority of a council.

“3.0208 Shared Power, Exercised Jointly

“Ecclesiastical jurisdiction is a shared power, to be exercised jointly by presbyters gathered in councils.

“3.0209 General Authority of Councils

“Councils possess whatever administrative authority is necessary to give effect to duties and powers assigned by the Constitution of the church. The jurisdiction of each council is limited by the express provisions of the Constitution, with powers not mentioned being reserved to the presbyteries.

“F-3.03 OPENNESS TO THE GUIDANCE OF THE HOLY SPIRIT

“3.0301 Heritage and Renewal

“The presbyterian form of government in the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is grounded in Scripture and built around the marks of the true Church. Nonetheless, the presbyterian form of government is always subject to the Lord of the Church who calls it forth in different forms at different times and in different places. Jesus Christ draws worshiping communities and individual believers into the sovereign activity of the triune God in all times and places. As the Church seeks reform and fresh direction, it looks to Jesus Christ who goes ahead of us and calls us to follow him. In following Christ, the Church seeks ‘not [to] be conformed to this world, but [to] be transformed by the renewing of [our] minds, so that [we] may discern what is the will of God—what is good and acceptable and perfect’ (Rom 12:2).

“3.0302 Ecumenicity

“The presbyterian government, in the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), is grounded in Scripture but is not regarded as essential for the existence of the Christian Church nor required of all Christians.

“3.0303 Diversity and Inclusiveness

“As the unity of the One God is expressed in the diverse activity of the Trinity, so also the unity of the Church is expressed in the rich diversity of its membership. The Church is called to give full expression in its membership to the diversity of the human family, and shall be responsive to that diversity in its worship, government, and emerging life. It shall not deny participation or representation to persons or groups within its membership for any reasons other than those stated in this Constitution.

“3.0304 Openness

“The church is called:

“to a new openness to the sovereign activity of God in the Church and in the world, to more committed obedience, and to a more joyous celebration in worship and work;

“to a new openness to its own membership, by affirming itself as a community of diversity, becoming in fact as well as in faith a community of women and men of all ages, races, ethnicities, and conditions, and by providing for inclusiveness as a visible sign of the new humanity;

“to a new openness to the possibilities and perils of its institutional forms in order to ensure the faithfulness and usefulness of these forms to God’s activity in the world;

“to a new openness to God’s continuing reformation of the Church ecumenical, that it might be more effective in its mission.

“F-3.04 THE CONSTITUTION OF THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH (U.S.A.) DEFINED

“The Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) consists of The Book of Confessions and the Book of Order.

“The Book of Confessions includes:

“The Nicene Creed

“The Apostles’ Creed

“The Scots Confession

“The Heidelberg Catechism

“The Second Helvetic Confession

“The Westminster Confession of Faith

“The Westminster Larger Catechism

“The Westminster Shorter Catechism

“The Theological Declaration of Barmen

“The Confession of 1967

“A Brief Statement of Faith—Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).”

“The Book of Order includes:

“The Foundations of Presbyterian Polity

“The Form of Government

“The Directory for Worship

“The Rules of Discipline.”

General Rationale

The Form of Government Task Force was charged by the 217th General Assembly (2006) to draft a revised Form of Government (Minutes, 2006, Part I, p. 366; assembly action, pp.38–39). Our reflections on the church’s calling have been shaped and guided by the ideas of missional ecclesiology. Missional ecclesiology begins in the confession that God has sent the church into the world to bear witness to the activity of God. This witness lies at the heart of the church’s calling. The church does not exist to serve its own interests or to ensure its own survival. Rather, the church is called into being by the triune God’s ongoing engagement with the world to reconcile, transform, and finally fulfill the divine creative intent in it. Thus the church exists not so much to do mission work—where “mission” is understood only as one of a number of items on the church’s agenda—as to participate in the work of God as it worships and follows Jesus Christ. The point is not to spread the church, but to spread the kingdom.

Polity is the architecture of mission. Missional polity places the congregation in the forefront of the church’s witness because it is the place where the church engages the world. The councils of the church (i.e., sessions, presbyteries, synods, and the General Assembly) exist to guide, support, and govern the work of the congregation, and to connect and coordinate that work with other congregations, so that the whole church may witness more effectively to the activity of God in the world. These recommendations seek to provide authority and responsibility without mandating particular structures.

Rationale for Recommendation A

A “Foundations” section clearly sets apart a foundation for our entire polity. The current Chapters I–IV are contained within the current Form of Government and may be considered foundational. Those initial chapters are also considered extraordinary by many across the church, if measured only by the depth of affection accorded to them in comments received by the task force. However, they only apply to the current Form of Government and not to the Directory for Worship or the Rules of Discipline. In addition, no material in the current Chapters I–IV is identified explicitly as “foundational” or “basic,” even to the Form of Government that includes them. Creating a new section of the Book of Order, called Foundations of Presbyterian Polity, resolves this lack of clarity.

The proposed new “Foundations” preserves the vast majority of the text of the current first four chapters. But the organization, logic, and flow of our foundational polity are improved. There are sixty-seven paragraphs in the current G-1.0000 through G-4.0000. Of those sixty-seven paragraphs, sixty-three of them have been brought over into the new Foundations of Presbyterian Polity.

The task force believes “Foundations” will lend itself to use as an instructional guide for confirmation classes, new member preparation, and education of ruling elders and deacons in ways that the current first four chapters do not.

The new “Foundations” begins with a very simple but important statement on the activity of God in the world (F-1.01). The task force believes it is important to start our polity—the description of what the church is called to do—with this orienting statement of what God has done and is doing in the world.

“Foundations” also reflects at some length on two key statements of the calling of the church that grows out of our confessional heritage. The first is the statement in the Nicene Creed that the church is “one, holy, catholic, and apostolic.” The second is G-1.0303, drawn from the familiar three “Reformation Notes” of, among other places, the Scots’ Confession (The Book of Confessions, 3.18). These “notes” form the basic structure of the work of church councils in proposed G-3.0201 (the session), G-3.0301 (the presbytery), G-3.0401 (the synod), and G-3.0501 (the General Assembly). Together, these statements on the “marks” and “notes” of the church remind us of our heritage in shaping what the church is called to be and to do.

B. The Form of Government Task Force recommends that the 218th General Assembly (2008) direct the Stated Clerk to send the following amendment to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative vote:

Shall the Book of Order be amended by striking the text of Chapters V–XVIII of the current “Form of Government” and inserting a new “Form of Government” to read as follows:

“THE FORM OF GOVERNMENT

“CHAPTER ONE

“CONGREGATIONS AND THEIR MEMBERSHIP

“G-1.01 THE CONGREGATION

“1.0101 The Mission of the Congregation

“The congregation is the church engaged in mission in its particular context. All the gifts of the gospel necessary to being the church are present to the congregation. The congregation is the basic form of the church, but it is not of itself a sufficient form of the church. Thus congregations are bound together in communion with one another, covenanted in relationships of accountability and responsibility, and called collectively the church.

“Through the congregation God’s people carry out their ministries of proclamation, sharing the Sacraments, and living in covenant life with God and each other. In the life of the congregation, individual believers are equipped for their ministry of witness to the love and grace of God in and for the world. The congregation reaches out to people, communities, and the world to share the good news of Jesus Christ, to gather for worship, to offer care and nurture to God’s children, to speak for social justice and righteousness, to bear witness to the truth and to the reign of God that is coming into the world.

“1.0102 The Fellowship of the Congregation

“The polity of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) presupposes the fellowship of women and men with their children in covenanted relationship with one another and with God through Jesus Christ. The organization rests upon the fellowship and is not designed to work without trust and love.

“1.0103 Governed by the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)

“Each congregation of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) shall be governed by this Constitution. The members of a congregation put themselves under the leadership of the session and the higher councils (presbytery, synod, and General Assembly). The government and guidance of the congregation are the responsibility of ruling elders, elected from among the members of the congregation, and teaching elders (ministers of the Word and Sacrament) who serve together as the session. The session leads the congregation in fulfilling its responsibilities for the service of all people, for the upbuilding of the whole church, and for the glory of God.

“G-1.02 THE ORGANIZING OF A CONGREGATION

“A congregation in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) can be organized only by the authority of a presbytery and shall function under the provisions of this Constitution.

“G-1.03 THE MEMBERSHIP OF A CONGREGATION

“1.0301 The Meaning of Membership and Baptism

“God calls women and men to faith in Jesus Christ and to membership in the church, the body of Christ. The incarnation of God in the life, death, and resurrection of Jesus Christ gives to the church not only its mission but also its understanding of membership. One becomes a member of the church through faith in Jesus Christ as Savior and acceptance of Christ's Lordship in all of life. Baptism and a public profession of faith in Jesus as Lord are the visible signs of God's call and claim on a human life and of entrance into the membership of the church. The baptism of children witnesses to the truth that God's love claims people before they are able to respond in faith. The baptism of those who enter the covenant of membership upon their own profession of faith witnesses to the truth that God's gift of grace calls for fulfillment in a response of faithfulness. (W-2.3008b, c.)

“1.0302 Welcome and Openness

“A congregation shall welcome all persons who respond in trust and obedience to God's grace in Jesus Christ and desire to become part of the membership and ministry of his Church. No persons shall be denied membership for any reason not related to profession of faith. Each member must seek the grace of openness in extending the fellowship of Christ to all persons. Failure to do so constitutes a rejection of Christ himself and causes a scandal to the gospel.

“1.0303 Entry into Membership

“Persons may enter into active church membership in the following ways:

- “a. Public profession of faith, made after careful examination by the session in the meaning and responsibilities of membership; if not already baptized, the person making profession of faith shall be baptized;*
- “b. Certificate of transfer, when a person is a member of another Christian church at the time of transfer;*
- “c. Reaffirmation of faith, for other previously baptized persons.*

“1.0304 The Ministry of Members

“a. Accepting the privilege and responsibility of membership in the church is a commitment to Jesus Christ that binds the individual believer to fulfillment of the obligations of membership. A faithful member accepts Christ's call to bear witness to God's love and grace and to be involved responsibly in the ministry of Christ's Church. Such involvement includes:

- “proclaiming the good news,*
- “taking part in the common life and worship of a congregation,*
- “praying and studying Scripture and the Christian faith,*
- “supporting the work of the church through the giving of money, time, and talents,*
- “demonstrating a new quality of life within and through the church,*
- “responding to God's activity in the world through service to others,*
- “living responsibly in the personal, family, vocational, political, cultural, and social relationships of life,*
- “working in the world for peace, justice, freedom, and human fulfillment,*
- “participating in the governing responsibilities of the church.*

“b. Members shall regularly review and evaluate the integrity with which they are involved in the ministry of the church and consider ways in which their participation in the worship and service of the church may be increased and made more meaningful.

“G-1.04 CATEGORIES OF MEMBERSHIP

“The membership of a congregation of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) includes baptized members, active members, and affiliate members.

“1.0401 Baptized Member

“A baptized member is a person who has received the Sacrament of Baptism, whether in this congregation or elsewhere, and who has been enrolled as a baptized member by the session but who has not made a profession of faith in Jesus Christ as Lord and Savior. Such baptized members receive the pastoral care and instruction of the church, and may participate in the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper.

“1.0402 Active Member

“An active member is a person who has made a profession of faith in Christ, has been baptized, has been received into membership of the church, has voluntarily submitted to the government of this church, and participates in the church's work and worship. Active members participate in the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, take part and vote in meetings of the congregation, may present children for baptism (see W-2.0314), and may be elected to ordered ministry (see G-2.0102). Active members shall regularly, after prayerful consideration, recommit themselves to the disciplines and responsibilities of membership outlined in G-1.0303. Other disciplines and responsibilities of active membership that meet the needs of the congregation and are consistent with the order and confessions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) may be adopted by the session after careful study and discussion with the congregation. The session shall have responsibility for preparing those who would become active members of the congregation. The session shall review the roll of active members at least annually and shall counsel with those who have neglected the responsibilities of membership.

“1.0403 Affiliate Member

“An affiliate member is a member of another congregation of this denomination or of another denomination or Christian body, who has temporarily moved from the community where the congregation of membership is situated, has presented a certificate of good standing from the appropriate council or governing body of that congregation, and has been received by the session as an affiliate member. An affiliate member may participate in the life of the congregation in the same manner as an active member except that an affiliate member may not vote or be elected to ordered ministry.

“1.0404 Other Participants

“Persons who are not members of, or who have ceased active participation in, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) are welcome and may participate in the life and worship of this church and receive its pastoral care and instruction. The invitation to the Lord’s Supper is extended to all who have been baptized remembering that access to the table is not a right conferred upon the worthy, but a privilege given to the undeserving who come in faith, repentance, and love (W-2.4011). Confessing members of other Christian churches may present children for baptism, in conformity with W-2.3014.

“G-1.05 MEETINGS OF THE CONGREGATION

“1.0501 Annual and Special Meetings

“The congregation shall hold an annual meeting and may hold special meetings as necessary. At least annually, the congregation shall review the adequacy of the compensation of the pastor or pastors, shall elect ruling elders, and may elect deacons and persons to other positions of elected service as determined by the congregation. Special meetings may be called for any or all of the purposes appropriate for congregational consideration. The business to be transacted at special meetings shall be limited to items specifically listed in the call for the meeting. Adequate public notice of all congregational meetings shall be given at a regular service of worship; congregations shall provide by their own rule for minimum notification requirements. Congregations shall also provide by rule the quorum necessary to conduct business. All active members of the congregation present at either annual or special meetings are entitled to vote.

“1.0502 Calling a Congregational Meeting

“Meetings of the congregation shall be called

“a. by the session,

“b. by the presbytery, or

“c. by the session when requested in writing by one fourth of the members on the roll of the congregation.

“1.0503 Business Proper to Congregational Meetings

“Business to be transacted at meetings of the congregation shall be limited to matters related to the following:

“a. electing ruling elders, deacons, and trustees;

“b. calling of a pastor, co-pastor, or associate pastor;

“c. changing existing pastoral relationships, by such means as approving or changing the terms of call, or requesting, consenting to, or declining to consent to dissolution;

“d. buying, mortgaging, or selling real property;

“e. deciding to lodge all administrative responsibility in the session, or to request from presbytery an exemption from one or more requirements because of limited size.

“Whenever permitted by civil law, both ecclesiastical and corporate business may be conducted at the same congregational meeting.

“1.0504 Moderator

“The pastor or co-pastors shall ordinarily moderate all meetings of the congregation. If it is impractical for the pastor to preside, he or she shall invite another teaching elder (minister of the Word and Sacrament) who is a member of the presbytery or a person authorized by the presbytery to serve as moderator. If there is no pastor, the presbytery shall make provision for an alternate moderator.

“1.0505 Secretary and Minutes

“The clerk of session shall serve as secretary for all meetings of the congregation. If the clerk of session is unable to serve, the congregation shall elect a secretary for that meeting. The secretary shall record the actions of the congregation in minutes of the meeting.

“CHAPTER TWO“ORDERED MINISTRY, COMMISSIONING, AND CERTIFICATION“G-2.01 ORDERED MINISTRIES OF THE CHURCH“2.0101 Christ’s Ministry

“The Church’s ministry is a gift from Jesus Christ to the whole Church. Christ alone rules, teaches, calls and uses the Church as he wills, exercising his authority by the ministry of women and men for the establishment and extension of God’s new reality. His ministry is the foundation and standard for all ministry, the pattern of the one who came ‘not to be served but to serve’ (Matt. 20:28). The basic form of ministry is the ministry of the whole people of God, from whose midst some are called to ordered ministries. Members and those in ordered ministries serve together under the mandate of Christ who is the chief minister of all.

“2.0102 Ordered Ministries

“The Church’s ordered ministries mentioned in the New Testament, which this church has maintained, include those of presbyters (teaching elders and ruling elders) and deacons. Ordered ministries are gifts to the church to order its life so that the ministry of the whole people of God may flourish.

“The government of this church is representative, and the right of God’s people to elect presbyters and deacons is inalienable. Therefore, no person can be placed in any ordered ministry in a congregation or council of the church except by election of that body. One responsibility of membership in the church is the election of those ordained to fulfill particular functions. The existence of these ordered ministries in no way diminishes the importance of the commitment of all members to the total ministry of the church.

“2.0103 Gifts and Qualifications<sup>10</sup>

“a. To those called to exercise special functions in the church—deacons, elders, and ministers of the Word and Sacrament—God gives suitable gifts for their various duties. In addition to possessing the necessary gifts and abilities, those who undertake particular ministries should be persons of strong faith, dedicated discipleship, and love of Jesus Christ as Savior and Lord. Their manner of life should be a demonstration of the Christian gospel in the church and in the world. They must have the approval of God’s people and the concurring judgment of a governing body of the church.

“b. Those who are called to office in the church are to lead a life in obedience to Scripture and in conformity to the historic confessional standards of the church. Among these standards is the requirement to live either in fidelity within the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman (W-4.9001), or chastity in singleness. Persons refusing to repent of any self-acknowledged practice which the confessions call sin shall not be ordained and/or installed as deacons, elders, or ministers of the Word and Sacrament.

“2.0104 Freedom of Conscience

“It is necessary to the integrity and health of the church that the persons who serve it in ordered ministries shall adhere to the essentials of the Reformed faith and polity as expressed in this Constitution. So far as may be possible without serious departure from these standards, without infringing on the rights and views of others, and without obstructing the constitutional governance of the church, freedom of conscience with respect to the interpretation of Scripture is to be maintained. It is to be recognized, however, that in entering the ordered ministries of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), one chooses to exercise freedom of conscience within certain bounds. His or her conscience is captive to the Word of God as interpreted in the standards of the church so long as he or she continues to seek, or serve in, ordered ministry. The decision as to whether a person has departed from essentials of Reformed faith and polity is made initially by the individual concerned but ultimately becomes the responsibility of the council in which he or she is a member.

“G-2.02 RULING ELDERS AND DEACONS

“2.0201 Ruling Elder Defined

“As there were in Old Testament times elders for the government of the people, so the New Testament church provided persons with particular gifts to share in governing and ministry. Ruling elders are so named not because they ‘lord it over’ the congregation (Matt. 20:25), but because they are chosen by the congregation to discern and measure its fidelity to the Word of God, and to strengthen and nurture its faith and life. Ruling elders (elders), together with teaching elders (ministers of the Word and Sacrament), exercise leadership, government, spiritual discernment, and discipline and have responsibilities for the life of a congregation as well as the whole church, including ecumenical relationships. When elected by the congregation, they shall serve faithfully as members of the session. When elected as commissioners to higher councils, ruling elders participate and vote with the same authority as teaching elders, and they are eligible for any office.

“2.0202 Deacon Defined

“The ministry of deacon as set forth in Scripture is one of compassion, witness, and service after the example of Jesus Christ. Persons of spiritual character, honest repute, exemplary lives, brotherly and sisterly love, warm sympathies, and sound judgment should be chosen for this ministry. It is the duty of deacons, first of all, to engage in ministries that show the love and justice of Jesus Christ to those who are in need, to the sick, to the friendless, to any who may be in distress both within and beyond the community of faith. Deacons, whether individually commissioned or organized as a board of deacons, are under the supervision and authority of the session.

“2.0203 Election of Ruling Elders and Deacons

“Ruling elders and deacons are men and women elected by the congregation from among its members. The nomination and election of elders and deacons shall express the rich diversity of the congregation’s membership and shall guarantee participation and inclusiveness (F-2.0303). Elders and deacons shall be nominated by a committee drawn from and representative of the congregation’s membership. A majority of the committee shall be members not currently in active service as elders or deacons. This committee shall include at least two elders, at least one of whom is currently serving on session, and the pastor shall serve ex officio without vote. Full opportunity shall always be given to the congregation for nomination by any active member of the congregation from the floor of the congregational meeting when elections are held. A majority of all the active members present and voting shall be required to elect.

“2.0204 Preparation for Ministry as a Ruling Elder or Deacon

“When persons have been elected to the ordered ministry of ruling elder or deacon, the session shall provide a period of study and preparation, after which the session shall examine them as to their personal faith; knowledge of the doctrine, government, and discipline contained in the Constitution of the church; and the duties of the ministry. The session shall also confer with them as to their willingness to undertake the ministry appropriate to the order. If the examination is approved, the session shall appoint a day for the service of ordination and installation.

“2.0205 Service of Ordination and Installation

“The service of ordination and installation shall focus upon Christ and the joy and responsibility of serving him through the mission and ministry of the church, and shall include a sermon appropriate to the occasion. The moderator of session or person authorized to preside shall state briefly the nature of the ministry of ruling elder and deacon. The act of ordination and installation takes place in the context of worship. The order for that service of worship in the Directory for Worship (W-4.4000) shall be followed.

“2.0206 Terms of Service

“Elders and deacons shall be elected to serve terms of no more than three years and shall be eligible for reelection. However, no elder or deacon shall be eligible to serve more than six consecutive years, and an elder or deacon who has served six consecutive years shall be ineligible for election to the same board for at least one year. Election shall be to classes as nearly equal in number as possible, with the term of only one class ending each year. The presbytery may, upon written request and by majority vote, grant a congregation a waiver of this limitation on terms.

“2.0207 Perpetual Ministry and Unique Ordination

“Ordination to the ministry of ruling elder and to the ministry of deacon is unique to that order of ministry. Once ordained and while they are active members of any congregation of this denomination, elders or deacons not in active service on a session or board of deacons continue to bear the responsibilities of the ministry to which they have been ordained except as provided in G-2.0209, G-2.0210, or in accordance with the Rules of Discipline.

“2.0208 Dissolution of Relationship

An elder or deacon may resign from the session or board of deacons for good cause, with the session’s consent. On ceasing to be an active member of a congregation, an elder or deacon ceases to be a member of its session or board. When an elder or deacon, because of change of residence or disability, is unable to perform the duties of the ministry to which he or she was ordained for a period of one year, the active relationship shall be dissolved by the session unless there is good reason not to do so, which reason should be recorded.

“2.0209 Release from Ministry as a Ruling Elder or Deacon

“If an elder or deacon who is in good standing shall make application to the session of the congregation in which he or she holds membership to be released from the exercise of the ordered ministry, the session, upon granting the release, shall delete that person’s name from the appropriate roll of ruling elder or deacon of the congregation. No judgment of failure on the part of the ruling elder or deacon is implied in this action. Release from the exercise of the ministry of ruling elder or deacon requires a discontinuation of all functions of that ministry. The status of one so released shall be the same as any church member. Should a person released under this section later desire to be restored to that ordered ministry, that person shall make application to the session that granted the release, and upon approval of the session, that person shall be restored to the exercise of the ministry from which he or she was released without re-ordination.

“2.0210 Renunciation of Jurisdiction

“When an elder or deacon submits to the clerk of session a written statement renouncing the jurisdiction of this church, the renunciation shall be effective upon receipt. When an elder or deacon persists in work disapproved by the session, the session shall consult with him or her and shall give notice of its disapproval. If, after having been provided opportunity for consultation and upon written notice of its disapproval, the elder or deacon persists in the work, the session may then conclude that the elder or deacon has renounced the jurisdiction of this church.

“2.0211 Effect of Renunciation

“Renunciation of jurisdiction shall remove the elder or deacon from membership and ordered ministry and shall terminate the exercise of the ministry. The renunciation shall be reported by the clerk of session at the next meeting of the session, which shall record the renunciation, delete the elder or deacon’s name from the appropriate register and take such other administrative actions as may be required by this Constitution.

“G-2.03 TEACHING ELDERS: MINISTERS OF THE WORD AND SACRAMENT“2.0301 Teaching Elder Defined

“As the Lord has set aside through calling certain members to be teaching elders to perform a particular ministry of the Word and Sacrament and has committed to them a variety of work, the church through the presbytery calls them to that service and responsibility. Teaching elders, also called ministers of the Word and Sacrament, shall be committed in all their work to equipping the people of God for their ministry and witness. They shall be members of the presbytery which shall designate them to such work as may be helpful to the church in mission, in the performance of which they shall be accountable to the presbytery. No pastoral relationship may be established, changed, or dissolved without the approval of the presbytery. They shall be responsible for participation in the larger ministry of the church in addition to the duties to which they are called and designated by the presbytery. Ministers of the Word and Sacrament have membership in the presbytery by action of the presbytery itself. The presbytery shall determine whether a particular work is a call to validated ministry requiring ordination as a minister of the Word and Sacrament.

“2.0302 Categories of Membership

“A minister of the Word and Sacrament shall be engaged in a ministry validated by the presbytery, be a member-at-large as determined by the presbytery, or be honorably retired.

“a. Validated Ministry

“A validated ministry shall:

“(1) demonstrate conformity with the mission of God’s people in the world as set forth in Holy Scripture, The Book of Confessions, and the Book of Order of this church;

“(2) serve and aid others, and enable the ministry of others;

“(3) give evidence of theologically informed fidelity to God’s Word;

“(4) be carried on in accountability for its character and conduct to the presbytery in addition to any organizations, agencies, and institutions served;

“(5) include responsible participation in the deliberations and work of the presbytery and in the worship and service of a congregation;

“When ministers of the Word and Sacrament are called to validated ministry beyond the jurisdiction of this church, they shall give evidence of a quality of life that helps to share the ministry of the good news. They shall participate in a congregation, in their presbytery, and in ecumenical relationships and shall be eligible for election to the higher councils of the church and to the boards and agencies of those councils.

“The presbytery shall review annually the work of all ministers of the Word and Sacrament engaged in validated ministries outside the congregation.

“b. Member-at-large

“A member-at-large is a minister of the Word and Sacrament who has previously been admitted to the presbytery or another presbytery as an active member, and who now, without intentional abandonment of the exercise of ministry, is no longer engaged in a ministry that complies with all the criteria in G-2.0302a. A minister may be designated a member-at-large because he or she is limited in his or her ability to engage in a ministry fulfilling all of the criteria for a validated ministry because of family responsibilities or other individual circumstances that presbytery recognizes as important. A member-at-large shall comply with as many of the criteria in G-2.0302a as possible and shall actively participate in the life of a congregation. A member-at-large is entitled to take part in the meetings of the presbytery and to speak, vote, and hold office. The status of each member-at-large may be granted by the presbytery upon the minister’s application and shall be reviewed annually.

“c. Honorably Retired

“The status of honorable retirement may be granted by a presbytery because of age or because of physical or mental disability.

“2.0303 Pastoral Relationships

“When ministers of the Word and Sacrament are called as pastor, co-pastor or associate pastor of a congregation, they are to be responsible for a quality of life and relationships that commend the gospel to all persons and that communicate its joy and its justice. They are responsible for studying, teaching, and preaching the Word, for celebrating Baptism and the Lord’s Supper, for praying with and for the congregation. With the ruling elders, they are to encourage the people in the worship and service of God; to equip and enable them for their tasks within the church and their mission in the world; to exercise pastoral care, devoting special attention to the poor, the sick, the troubled, and the dying; to participate in governing responsibilities, including leadership of the congregation in implementing the principles of participation and inclusiveness in the decision making of the church, and its task of reaching out in concern and service to the life of the human community as a whole. With the deacons they are to share in the ministries of sympathy, witness, and service. In addition to these pastoral duties, they are responsible for sharing in the ministry of the church in the higher councils than the session and in ecumenical relationships.

“a. Installed Pastoral Relationships

“The installed pastoral relationships are pastor, co-pastor, and associate pastor. A minister of the Word and Sacrament may be installed in a pastoral relationship for an indefinite period or for a designated term determined by the presbytery in consultation with the congregation. When a congregation determines that its strategy for mission under the Word so requires, the congregation may call additional pastors. Such additional pastors shall be called co-pastors or associate pastors, and the duties of each pastor and the relationship between the pastors of the congregation shall be determined by the session with the approval of the presbytery. When a congregation has two pastors serving as co-pastors, and the relationship of one of them is dissolved, the other remains as pastor. The relationship of an associate pastor to a congregation is not dependent upon that of a pastor. In no circumstance is an associate pastor eligible to be the next installed pastor of that congregation, except by at least a three-fourths vote of the presbytery.

“b. Temporary Pastoral Relationships

“Temporary pastoral relationships are approved by the presbytery and do not carry a formal call or installation. When a congregation does not have a pastor, or while the pastor is unable to perform her or his duties, the session, with the approval of presbytery, may obtain the services of a minister of the Word and Sacrament, candidate, or elder in a temporary pastoral relationship. No formal call shall be issued by the congregation and no formal installation shall take place.

“Titles and terms of service for temporary relationships shall be determined by the presbytery. A minister of the Word and Sacrament serving in a temporary pastoral relationship is invited for a specified period not to exceed twelve months in length, which is renewable with the approval of the presbytery. In no circumstance is a minister employed in a temporary pastoral relationship eligible to serve as the next installed pastor, co-pastor, or associate pastor except by a three-fourths vote of the presbytery. Presbyteries may determine that the mission strategy of the presbytery necessitates a further limit on eligibility of temporary pastors to serve as the next installed pastor of a congregation served in a temporary capacity.

“2.0304 Transfer of Ministers of Other Denominations

“a. When a minister of another Christian church is called to a work properly under the jurisdiction of a presbytery, the presbytery, after the constitutional conditions have been met, shall recognize the minister’s previous ordination to ministry. Such ministers shall furnish credentials and evidence of good standing acceptable to the presbytery, and shall submit satisfactory evidence of possessing the qualifications of character and scholarship required of candidates of this church. (See G-2.0407 and G-2.0410) In exceptional circumstances the following provisions will apply:

“(1) In the case of ministers for immigrant fellowships and congregations, a presbytery may, if it determines that its strategy for mission with that group requires it, recognize the ordination and enroll a new immigrant minister who furnishes evidence of good standing in a denomination in correspondence with the General Assembly as a member of the presbytery, even though at the time of enrollment that minister lacks the educational history required of candidates, and provide such educational opportunities as seem necessary and prudent for that minister’s successful ministry in the presbytery.

“(2) A minister of another Reformed church who has been ordained for five or more years may be granted an exemption for some or all of the examinations required of candidates for ordination by a two-thirds vote of the presbytery.

“b. Upon enrollment, the minister shall furnish the presbytery with evidence of having surrendered membership in any and all other Christian churches with which the minister has previously been associated.

“2.0305 Temporary Membership in Presbytery for a Period of Service

“A presbytery may enroll a minister of another Christian church who is serving temporarily in a validated ministry in this church, or in an installed relationship under the provisions of the Formula of Agreement, when the minister has satisfied the requirements of preparation for such service established by the presbytery’s own rule.

“2.0306 Release from Ministry as a Teaching Elder

“When a teaching elder who is in good standing shall make application to be released from the exercise of the ministry of the Word and Sacrament, the presbytery shall delete that person’s name from the roll and give that person a certificate of membership to a congregation. Release from the exercise of ordained ministry requires discontinuance of all functions of that ministry. The designations that refer to teaching elders, or ministers of the Word and Sacrament, shall not be used. The person so released shall engage in the ministry shared by all active members of congregations. Should a person released under this section later desire to be restored to the ministry of the Word and Sacrament, that person shall apply through the presbytery which granted the release, and upon approval of that presbytery, the reaffirmation of the ordination vows, and the resumption of a ministry that qualifies that person for membership in the presbytery, shall be restored to the exercise of the ordained ministry as a teaching elder without re-ordination.

“2.0307 Renunciation of Jurisdiction

“When a minister of the Word and Sacrament submits to the stated clerk of the presbytery a written statement renouncing the jurisdiction of this church, the renunciation shall be effective upon receipt. When a minister of the Word and Sacrament persists in work disapproved by the presbytery having jurisdiction, the presbytery shall consult with the minister and shall give notice of its disapproval. If after having been provided opportunity for consultation and upon written notice of its disapproval, the minister of the Word and Sacrament persists in the work, the presbytery may then conclude that he or she has renounced the jurisdiction of this church.

“2.0308 Effect of Renunciation

“Renunciation of jurisdiction shall remove the minister from membership and ordered ministry and shall terminate the exercise of that ministry. The renunciation shall be reported by the stated clerk at the next meeting of the presbytery, which shall record the renunciation, delete her or his name from the appropriate roll, and take such other administrative actions as may be required by this Constitution, including public communication of such a renunciation.

“G-2.04 PREPARATION FOR MINISTRY

“2.0401 Nature and Purpose of Preparation

“It is important that those who are to be ordained as minister of the Word and Sacrament receive full preparation for their task under the direction of the presbytery. For this purpose, a presbytery shall enter into covenant relationship with those preparing to become ministers of the Word and Sacrament and with their sessions and congregations. This relationship shall be divided into the two phases of inquiry and candidacy.

“2.0402 Time Requirements

“To be enrolled as an inquirer, the applicant shall be a member of the sponsoring congregation, shall have been active in the work and worship of that congregation for at least six months, and shall have received the endorsement of the session of the sponsoring congregation. The inquiry and candidacy phases shall continue for a period of no less than two years, including at least one year as a candidate.

“2.0403 Purpose of Inquiry

“The purpose of the inquiry phase is to provide an opportunity for the church and those who believe themselves called to ministry of the Word and Sacrament to explore that call together so that the presbytery can make an informed decision about the inquirer’s suitability for ministry of the Word and Sacrament.

“2.0404 Purpose of Candidacy

“The purpose of the candidacy phase is to provide for the full preparation of persons to serve the church as ministers of the Word and Sacrament. This shall be accomplished through the presbytery’s support, guidance, and evaluation of a candidate’s fitness and readiness for a call to ministry requiring ordination.

“2.0405 Oversight

“During the phases of inquiry and candidacy the individual continues to be an active member of his or her congregation and subject to the concern and discipline of the session. In matters relating to preparation for ministry, the individual is subject to the oversight of the presbytery within the context of their covenant relationship.

“2.0406 Service in Covenant Relationship

“Inquirers and candidates shall, with the permission of the presbytery of care, engage in some form of supervised service to the church. No inquirer or candidate who has not been previously ordained as a ruling elder may serve as moderator of a session, administer the Sacraments, or perform a marriage service. An inquirer or candidate previously ordained as a ruling elder may be authorized by the presbytery to administer the Lord’s Supper when invited by a session.

“2.0407 Final Assessment and Negotiation for Service

“A candidate may not, without approval of the presbytery, enter into negotiation for his or her service as a minister of the Word and Sacrament. The presbytery shall record when it has certified a candidate ready for examination for ordination, pending a call. Evidence of readiness shall include:

- “a. demonstration of readiness to begin ministry of the Word and Sacrament;*
- “b. presentation of a transcript showing satisfactory grades at a regionally accredited college or university, together with a diploma;*
- “c. presentation of a transcript of a course of study including Hebrew and Greek and exegesis of the Old and New Testaments, using Hebrew and Greek texts, from a theological institution accredited by the Association of Theological Schools acceptable to the presbytery, with satisfactory grades, and with presentation of a plan to complete the theological degree;*
- “d. presentation of satisfactory grades, together with the examination papers in the areas covered by any standard ordination examination prepared and authorized by the Presbyteries’ Cooperative Committee on Examinations for Candidates.*

“2.0408 Transfer of Relationship

“At the request of the inquirer or candidate and with the approval of the sessions and presbyteries involved, a presbytery may transfer the covenant relationship of an inquirer or candidate.

“2.0409 Removal from Relationship

“A presbytery may also, for sufficient reasons, remove an individual’s name from the roll of inquirers and candidates, reporting this action and the reasons to the session, to the individual, and, if appropriate, to the educational institution in which the individual is enrolled.

“2.0410 Exceptions

“By a three-fourths vote, a presbytery may waive any of the requirements for ordination in G-2.04, except for those of G-2.0407d. If a presbytery judges that there are good and sufficient reasons why a candidate should not be required to satisfy the requirements of G-2.0407d, it shall approve by three-quarters vote some alternate means by which to ascertain the readiness of the candidate for ministry in the areas covered by the standard ordination examinations. A full account of the reasons for exception shall be included in the minutes of the presbytery and communicated to the presbytery to which an inquirer or candidate may be transferred.

“2.05 ORDINATION“2.0501 Ordination

“Ordination to the ministry of the Word and Sacrament is an act of the whole church carried out by the presbytery, setting apart a person to the ministry of the Word and Sacrament. Such a person shall have fulfilled the ordination requirements of the presbytery of care and received the call of God to service to a congregation or other work in the mission of the church that is acceptable to the candidate and to the presbytery of call.

“2.0502 Place of Ordination

“The presbytery placing the call to the candidate for ministry shall ordinarily examine, ordain, and install the candidate.

“2.0503 Service of Ordination

“2.0504 Record of Ordination

“The presbytery of call shall record the ordination and installation and enroll the minister as a member of the presbytery. The stated clerk of the presbytery shall report these actions to the General Assembly and to the congregation of which the candidate was formerly a member.

“2.06 CALL AND INSTALLATION“2.0601 Pastoral Vacancy

“When a congregation has a vacancy in a pastoral position, or after the presbytery approves the effective date of the dissolution of an existing pastoral relationship, the congregation shall, with the guidance and permission of the presbytery, proceed to fill the vacancy in the following manner.

“2.0602 Election of a Pastor Nominating Committee

“The session shall call a congregational meeting to elect a pastor nominating committee that shall be representative of the whole congregation. This committee’s duty shall be to nominate a minister of the Word and Sacrament to the congregation.

“2.0603 Call Process

“The pastor nominating committee shall confer with the presbytery on the merits, suitability, and availability of those considered for the call according to the process of that presbytery. When the committee is ready to report to the congregation and the presbytery concurs, the committee shall notify the session, which shall call a congregational meeting.

“2.0604 Dissent

“On the election of a pastor, if it appears that a substantial minority of the voters are averse to the nominee who has received a majority of the votes and that they cannot be persuaded to concur in the call, the moderator shall recommend to the majority that they not prosecute the call. If the congregation is nearly unanimous, or if the majority insist upon their right to call a pastor, the moderator shall forward the call to the presbytery, certifying the results of the vote and any other facts of importance. The moderator shall also inform the person being called of the nature and circumstances of the decision.

“2.0605 Terms of Call

“The terms of call shall always meet or exceed any minimum requirement of the presbytery in effect when the call is made. The congregation shall review annually the adequacy of the minister’s compensation and adjust the compensation to meet changes in the presbytery's requirements. The call shall include participation in the Benefits Plan of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), including both pension and medical coverage, or any successor plan approved by the General Assembly.

“2.0606 Installation Service

“When the congregation, the presbytery, and the minister of the Word and Sacrament (or candidate) have all concurred in a call to a permanent or designated pastoral position, the presbytery shall complete the call process by organizing and conducting a service of installation. Installation is an act of the presbytery establishing the pastoral relationship. A service of installation occurs in the context of worship. The service outline found in the Directory for Worship, W-4.4000, shall be followed.

“G-2.07 DISSOLUTION OF PASTORAL RELATIONSHIPS

“2.0701 Congregational Meeting

“An installed pastoral relationship may be dissolved only by the presbytery. Whether the minister of the Word and Sacrament or the congregation or the presbytery initiates proceedings for dissolution of the relationship, there shall always be a meeting of the congregation to consider the matter and to consent, or decline to consent, to dissolution, unless the presbytery expressly finds that the church's mission under the Word imperatively demands dissolution of the relationship without such a meeting.

“2.0702 Pastor, Co-Pastor or Associate Pastor Requests

“A pastor, co-pastor or associate pastor may request the presbytery to dissolve the pastoral relationship. The minister must also state her or his intention to the session. The session shall call a congregational meeting to act upon the request and to make recommendations to the presbytery. If the congregation does not concur, the presbytery shall hear from the congregation, through its elected commissioners, the reasons why the presbytery should not dissolve the pastoral relationship. If the congregation fails to appear, or if its reasons for retaining the relationship are judged insufficient, the request may be granted and the pastoral relationship dissolved.

“2.0703 Congregation Requests

“If any congregation desires the pastoral relationship to be dissolved, a similar procedure shall be followed. When a congregation requests the session to call a congregational meeting to dissolve its relationship with its pastor, the session shall call the meeting and request the presbytery appoint a moderator for the meeting. If the pastor does not concur with the request to dissolve the relationship, the presbytery shall hear from him or her the reasons why the presbytery should not dissolve the relationship. If the pastor fails to appear, or if the reasons for maintaining the relationship are judged insufficient, the relationship may be dissolved.

“2.0704 Presbytery Action

“The presbytery may inquire into reported difficulties in a congregation and may dissolve the pastoral relationship if, after consultation with the minister, the session, and the congregation, it finds the church's mission under the Word imperatively demands it.

“2.0705 Officiate by Invitation Only

“Former pastors and associate pastors may officiate at services for members of a congregation, or at services within its property, only upon invitation from the moderator of the session or, in the case of the inability to contact the moderator, from the clerk of session. After the dissolution of the pastoral relationship, former pastors who remain within the community may not offer themselves in any pastoral capacity without the invitation of the pastor.

“G-2.08 COMMISSIONED PASTORS

“2.0801 Functions

“When the presbytery, in consultation with the session or other responsible committee, determines that its strategy for mission requires it, the presbytery may authorize an elder to be commissioned to limited pastoral service as assigned by the presbytery. An elder so designated may be commissioned to serve in a validated ministry of the presbytery. The commission for such service shall not exceed twelve months, but shall be renewable, and it shall specify the authority, responsibilities, and term of the service.

“2.0802 Training, Examination and Commissioning

“The elder shall be instructed in Bible, Reformed Theology and Sacraments, Presbyterian Polity, preaching, leading worship, pastoral care, and teaching. The elder shall be examined by the appropriate committee of the presbytery as to personal faith, motives for seeking the commission, and the areas of instruction mentioned previously. An elder who has been commissioned and later ceases to serve in the specified ministry may continue to be listed as available to serve, but is not authorized to perform the functions of a commissioned pastor again until commissioned to a congregation or ministry by the presbytery.

“2.0803 Commissioning Service

“When the presbytery is satisfied with the qualifications of an elder to serve a congregation providing the services described above, it shall commission the elder to pastoral service as designated by the presbytery, employing the vows contained in W-4.4000.

“2.0804 Supervision

“The commissioned pastor shall work under the supervision of the presbytery. The presbytery may at any time withdraw the commission for reasons it deems good and sufficient. A minister of the Word and Sacrament shall be assigned as a mentor and supervisor.

“G-2.09 CERTIFIED CHRISTIAN EDUCATORS

“2.0901 Skills and Training

“Christian educators are persons called to service in the ministry of education in congregations or councils. They shall have skills and training in biblical interpretation, Reformed theology, human development, faith development, religious educational theory and practice, and the polity, programs, and mission of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). They should be encouraged by their session and presbytery to meet, or be prepared to meet, the certification requirements defined in the manual approved by the General Assembly.

“2.0902 Presbytery and Christian Education

“The presbytery shall encourage Christian educators to seek certification, shall encourage sessions to make continuing education funds and time available to educators seeking certification, and shall provide a service of recognition at the time of certification. The presbytery may grant the privilege of the floor at all its meetings to all certified Christian educators, with voice and vote to certified Christian educators who are ordained elders.

“G-2.10 OTHER CERTIFIED CHURCH WORKERS

“2.1001 Other Certified Church Service

“Other persons may be certified and called to service within congregations, councils, and church-related entities. These individuals endeavor to reflect their faith through their work and to strengthen the church through their dedication. The presbytery may grant privilege of voice in its meetings to those who have been certified by any of the organizations acknowledged by the General Assembly. The presbytery shall affirm the skill and dedication of these certified persons by providing for recognition by the presbytery at the time of their certification.

“CHAPTER THREE

“COUNCILS OF THE CHURCH

“G-3.01 GENERAL PRINCIPLES OF COUNCILS

“3.0101 Councils as an Expression of Unity of the Church

“The mutual interconnection of the church through its councils is a sign of the unity of the church. Congregations of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), while possessing all the gifts necessary to be the church, are nonetheless not sufficient in themselves to be the church. Rather, they are called to share with others both within and beyond the congregation the task of bearing witness to the Lordship of Jesus Christ in the world. This call to bear witness is the work of all believers. The particular responsibility of the councils of the church is to nurture, guide, and govern those who witness as part of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), to the end that such witness strengthens the whole church and gives glory to God.

“3.0102 Definition

“The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is governed by councils composed of presbyters elected by the people (F-3.0202). These councils are called the session, the presbytery, the synod, and the General Assembly. All councils of the church are united by the nature of the church and share with one another responsibilities, rights, and powers as provided in this Constitution. The councils are distinct, but have such mutual relations that the act of one of them is the act of the whole church. The jurisdiction of each council is limited by the express provisions of the Constitution, with powers not mentioned being reserved to the presbyteries, and with the acts of each subject to review by the next higher council.

“3.0103 Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction

“Councils of this church have only ecclesiastical jurisdiction for the purpose of serving Jesus Christ and declaring and obeying his will in relation to truth and service, order and discipline. They may authorize the administration of the sacraments in accordance with the principles of the Directory for Worship (W-2.3011, W-2.4012, and W-3.6204). They have power to establish plans and rules for the worship, mission, government, and discipline of the church and to do those things necessary to the peace, purity, unity, and progress of the church under the will of Christ. They have responsibility for the leadership, guidance, and government of that portion of the church that is under their jurisdiction.

“3.0104 Participation and Representation

“The councils of the church shall give full expression to the rich diversity of the church’s membership and shall guarantee full participation and access to representation in decision-making and employment practices (F-3.0303). In fulfilling this commitment, councils shall give due consideration to both the gifts and requirements for ministry (G-2.0103) and the right of people in congregations and councils to elect their officers (F-3.0106).

“Each council shall develop procedures and mechanisms for promoting and reviewing that body’s implementation of the church’s commitment to inclusiveness and representation.

“3.0105 Officers

“Each council higher than the session shall elect a moderator. Each council shall elect a clerk and may elect such other officers as the council requires.

“The pastor of a congregation shall be the moderator of the session of that congregation. In congregations where there are co-pastors, they shall both be considered moderators and have provisions for designating who presides at a particular meeting.

“The moderator possesses the authority necessary for preserving order and for conducting efficiently the business of the body. He or she shall convene and adjourn the body in accordance with its own action.

“Moderators of councils higher than the session shall be elected for such terms as the council determines. At the time of their election, moderators must be continuing members of, or commissioners to, the council over which they are elected to preside. They shall preside at all meetings of the council during their term of office; councils shall provide by rule who shall preside in the absence of the moderator.

“The clerk shall record the transactions of the council, keep its rolls of membership and attendance, preserve its records, and furnish extracts from them when required by another council of the church. Such extracts, verified by the clerk, shall be evidence in any council of the church. The clerk of the session shall be an elder elected by the session for such term as it may determine. The clerk of a presbytery, a synod, and the General Assembly shall be called stated clerk, shall be elected by the council for a definite term as it may determine, and must be eligible for membership in the council.

“3.0106 Meetings

“Meetings of councils shall be conducted in accordance with the most recent edition of Robert’s Rules of Order, except when it is in contradiction to this Constitution. Councils may also make use of processes of discernment in their deliberations prior to a vote as agreed upon by the body. Each meeting shall be opened and closed with prayer.

“When a council makes a decision, a member of the body who voted against the decision is entitled to file a dissent or a protest. Filing a dissent or protest neither initiates nor prevents judicial process.

“a. A dissent is a declaration expressing disagreement with a decision of a council. It shall be made at the particular session during which the decision is made. The names of members dissenting shall be recorded.

“b. A protest is a written declaration, supported by reasons, alleging that a decision of a council is or contains an irregularity or a delinquency. Written notice of the protest shall be given at the particular session of the council during which it arose and shall be filed with the clerk before adjournment. It shall be entered in the minutes of the meeting, and may be accompanied by an answer prepared by the council.

“3.0107 Administration of Mission

“Mission determines the forms and structures needed for the church to do its work. Administration is the process by which a council implements decisions. All administration should enable the church to give effective witness in the world to the new reality of God in Jesus Christ. Administration of mission should be performed by the council nearest the congregation that can most effectively and efficiently accomplish it.

“Councils higher than the session may provide examples of policies and procedures that may be gathered into advisory handbooks. These examples illumine practices required by the Constitution but left to councils for specific implementation. Such handbooks may also offer information that enhances or secures the ministry of the particular council.

“Each council shall develop a manual of administrative operations that will specify the form and guide the work of mission in that body.

“A council may delegate aspects of its tasks to such entities as it deems appropriate, provided that those entities remain accountable to the council.

“The administration of mission demonstrates the unity and interdependence of the church, in that councils share with one another responsibilities, rights, and powers (F-3.0203). Through their members and elected commissioners, lower councils participate in planning and administration of the work of higher councils, and in consultation between bodies concerning mission, budget, staffing and fair employment practices, and matters of equitable compensation.

“The funding of mission similarly demonstrates the unity and interdependence of the church. The failure of any part of the church to participate in the stewardship of the mission of the whole church diminishes that unity and interdependence. All mission funding should enable the church to give effective witness in the world to the new reality of God in Jesus Christ. Each council shall prepare an annual budget. Councils higher than the session may request funds for their mission and for support of the meetings and ongoing functions through which the interdependence of the church is lived out. Presbyteries are responsible for raising their own funds and for raising and timely transmission of requested funds to their respective synods and the General Assembly. Presbyteries may apportion requested funds to sessions within their bounds.

“3.0108 Records

“Each council shall keep a full and accurate record of its proceedings. Minutes and all other official records of councils are the property in perpetuity of said bodies or their legal successors. When congregations, presbyteries, or synods are dissolved, their records are held for the church by the next higher council within whose bounds they were before dissolution. The clerk of each council shall make recommendation to that body for the permanent safe-keeping of the body's records with the Presbyterian Historical Society or other similarly equipped records storage facility.

“3.0109 Administrative Review

“Higher councils shall review the work of lower councils in the following ways:

“a. General Administrative Review

“Each council shall review annually or biennially, based on the body's meeting frequency, the proceedings and actions of all entities related to the body, all officers able to act on behalf of the body, and lower councils within its jurisdiction.

“b. Special Administrative Review

“If a higher council learns at any time of an alleged irregularity or delinquency of a lower council, it may require the lower body to produce any records and to take appropriate action. In reviewing the procedures of the lower council, the higher body shall determine whether the proceedings have been correctly recorded, have been in accordance with this Constitution, have been prudent and equitable, and have been faithful to the mission of the whole church. It shall also determine whether lawful injunctions of a higher body have been obeyed.

“The higher council may direct the lower council to reconsider and take corrective action if matters are determined to be out of compliance. In addition to administrative review, review and correction may be sought by initiating judicial process as described in the Rules of Discipline.

“3.0110 Committees and Commissions

“Councils may designate by their own rule such committees and commissions as they deem necessary and helpful for the accomplishment of the mission of the church, and may create such structures jointly with other comparable councils, in consultation with the next higher council, share such structures. In appointing such committees and commissions councils shall be mindful of the principles of diversity and participation consistent with the provisions of this Constitution. (F-3.0303, G-3.0104)

“A committee shall study and recommend action or carry out decisions already made by a council. It shall make a full report to the council that created it, and its recommendations shall require action by that body. Committees of councils higher than the session shall consist of both ministers of the Word and Sacrament and members of congregations, in approximately equal proportion.

“A commission is empowered to consider and conclude matters referred to it by a council. The designating council shall state specifically the scope of the commission’s powers and any restrictions on those powers.

“A council may designate two types of commissions:

“a. Judicial Commissions

“Judicial commissions shall consider and decide cases of process for the council according to the Rules of Discipline. Sessions shall perform the function of a judicial commission for the congregation; each council higher than the session shall elect a permanent judicial commission (see D-5.0000).

“b. Administrative Commissions

“Administrative commissions are designated to consider and conclude matters not involving ecclesiastical judicial process, except that in the discharge of their assigned responsibilities they may discover and report to the designating council matters that may require judicial action by the council.

“Functions that may be entrusted to administrative commissions include, but are not limited to:

“(1) (by sessions) ordaining and installing ruling elders and deacons, receiving and dismissing members, and visiting organizations within the congregation to settle differences therein;

“(2) (by presbyteries) ordaining and installing ministers of the Word and Sacrament;

“(3) (by presbyteries) examining and receiving into membership ministers seeking admission to presbytery, including approval of terms of call and commissions for ordination and installation; and receiving candidates under care;

“(4) (by presbyteries) developing immigrant fellowships, organizing new congregations, merging congregations, or forming union or federated congregations (G-5.05);

“(5) (by presbyteries, synods, and the General Assembly) visiting particular councils, congregations, or agencies over which they have immediate jurisdiction reported to be affected with disorder, and inquiring into and settling the difficulties therein, except that no commission of a presbytery shall be empowered to dissolve a pastoral relationship without the specific authorization by the designating body;

“(6) (by all councils) making pastoral inquiry into persons accused of sexual abuse of another person (D-10.0401c) when jurisdiction in a judicial proceeding against such persons has ended due to death of or renunciation by that person; such inquiries shall not be understood as judicial proceedings but shall seek to reach a determination of truth related to the accusation and to make appropriate recommendations to the designating council.

“Commissions of presbytery, synod, or General Assembly shall be composed of elders and ministers of the Word and Sacrament in numbers as nearly equal as possible and sufficient to accomplish their work. A quorum of any commission shall be established by the designating body but in no case shall be less than a majority of its members (except as limited by D-5.0204).

“Commissions of a session shall be composed of at least two elders and a minister of the Word and Sacrament in an installed or temporary relationship with the congregation governed by that session or a commissioned pastor commissioned to that congregation.

“The commission shall keep a full record of its proceedings and shall submit that record to the council for incorporation into its records. Actions of a commission shall be regarded as actions of the council that created it. A commission may be assigned additional duties as a committee, which duties shall be reported and handled as the report of a committee.

“The decisions of an administrative commission shall be reported to the clerk of the designating council, who shall report it to the council at its next stated meeting. A council may rescind or amend an action of its administrative commission in the same way actions of the council are modified.

“When an administrative commission has been designated to settle differences within a particular organization or council, it shall, before making its decision final, afford to all persons affected by its decision fair notice and an opportunity to be heard on matters at issue.

“3.0111 Administrative Staff

“Councils higher than the session may employ such staff as is required by the mission of the body in accordance with the principles of diversity and inclusiveness (F-3.0303). Councils may, in consultation with the next higher council, share staff as required by the mission of the body. A council shall make provision in its manual of administrative operations (G-3.0107) for the process of election of executive staff and the hiring of other staff, description of the responsibilities of the position, method of performance review, and the manner of termination of employment.

“3.0112 Nominating Process

“All councils higher than the session shall have a process for nominating persons to serve in positions requiring election by the council. The process shall ensure that nominations are made by an entity broadly representative of the constituency of the council, and in conformity with the church’s commitment to inclusiveness (F-3.0303).

“3.0113 Insurance

“Each council shall obtain property and liability insurance coverage to protect its facilities, programs, staff, and elected and appointed officers.

“G-3.02 THE SESSION“3.0201 Composition and Responsibilities

“The session is the council for the congregation. It shall be composed of those persons elected by the congregation to active service as elders, together with all installed pastors and associate pastors. All members of the session are entitled to vote. The pastor shall be the moderator of the session, and the session shall not meet without the pastor or designated moderator. Presbyteries shall provide by rule for moderators when the session is without a moderator for reasons of vacancy or inconvenience.

“The session shall have responsibility for governing the congregation and guiding its witness to the sovereign activity of God in the world, so that the congregation is and becomes the sign in and for the world of the new reality God has made available to people in Jesus Christ. As it leads and guides the witness of the congregation, the session shall bear in mind the six great ends of the Church (F-1.0304) and the notes by which Presbyterian and Reformed congregations have identified themselves through history (F-1.0303).

“In light of this charge, the session has responsibility and power to

- “a. provide that the Word is truly proclaimed and heard. This responsibility shall include providing a place where the congregation may regularly gather for worship, education, and spiritual nurture; providing for regular preaching of the Word by a minister of the Word and Sacrament or other person prepared and approved for the work; planning and leading regular efforts to reach into the community and the world with the message of salvation and the invitation to enter into committed discipleship; planning and leading ministries of social healing and reconciliation in the community; and initiating and responding to ecumenical efforts that bear witness to the love and grace of God.*
- “b. provide that the Sacraments are rightly administered. This responsibility shall include authorizing the celebration of the Lord’s Supper at least quarterly and the administration of Baptism as appropriate, in accordance with the principles of the Directory for Worship; and exercising pastoral care among the congregation in order that the Sacraments may be received as a means of grace, and the congregation may live in the unity represented in the Sacraments.*
- “c. nurture the covenant community through the upright ministry of ecclesiastical discipline. This responsibility shall include receiving and dismissing members; providing programs of nurture, education, and fellowship; training, examining, ordaining, installing those elected by the congregation as elders and deacons; encouraging the graces of generosity and faithful stewardship of personal and financial resources; managing the physical property of the congregation for the furtherance of its mission; directing the ministry of deacons, trustees, and all organizations of the congregation; employing the administrative staff of the congregation; leading the congregation in participating in the mission of the whole church; warning and bearing witness against error in doctrine and immorality in practice within the congregation and community; and serving in judicial matters in accordance with the Rules of Discipline.*

“3.0202 Relations with Other Councils

“Sessions have a particular responsibility to participate in the life of the whole church through participation in other councils. It is of particular importance that sessions:

- “a. elect, as commissioners to presbytery, elders from the congregation, preferably for at least a year, and receive their reports;*
- “b. nominate to presbytery elders from the congregation who may be considered for election as commissioners to synod and General Assembly, and to serve on committees or commissions of the same, bearing in mind principles of inclusiveness and fair representation in the decision making of the church; (F-3.0303)*
- “c. observe and carry out the instructions of presbytery, synod, and General Assembly consistent with this Constitution;*
- “d. welcome representatives of the presbytery on the occasions of their visits;*
- “e. propose to the presbytery, or through it to the synod and General Assembly, such measures as may be of common concern to the mission of the church; and*
- “f. send annually to presbytery and General Assembly statistical and other information according to the requirements of those bodies.*

“3.0203 Meetings

“The session shall hold stated meetings at least quarterly. The moderator shall call a special meeting when he or she deems necessary or when requested in writing by any two members of the session. There shall be reasonable notice given of all special meetings. The session shall also meet when directed by presbytery. Sessions shall provide by rule for a quorum for meetings; such quorum shall include the moderator and a specific number of elders.

“3.0204 Minutes and Records

“Minutes of the session shall be subject to the provisions of G-3.0108. They shall contain the minutes of all meetings of the congregation and all joint meetings with deacons and trustees.

“Each session shall maintain the following roll and registers:

“a. Membership Roll

“There shall be a membership roll in accordance with G-1.0402. The session may delete names from the roll of the congregation when requested to issue a certificate of transfer of membership to another congregation; when a member requests that his or her membership be terminated; when a member joins another congregation or otherwise renounces the jurisdiction of the session; when a member has moved or otherwise ceased to participate in the ministry of Christ’s Church as defined in G-1.0303 for a period of not less than two years and after efforts on the part of the session to encourage the member to return to meaningful participation have failed, and after provision of written notice; or when a member dies.

“b. Registers

“There shall be registers of baptisms authorized by the session, of ruling elders and deacons elected by the congregation, of marriages and deaths, and such other registers as the session may deem necessary.

“3.0205 Finances

“The session shall prepare and approve an annual budget and determine the distribution of the congregation’s benevolences. It shall authorize offerings for Christian purposes and shall account for the proceeds of such offerings and their disbursement. It shall provide full information to the congregation concerning its decisions in such matters.

“The session shall elect a treasurer for such term as the session shall decide and shall supervise his or her work or delegate that supervision to a board of deacons or trustees. Those in charge of various congregational funds shall report at least annually to the session and more often as requested. Sessions may provide by rule for standard financial practices of the congregation, but shall in no case fail to observe the following procedures:

- “a. All offerings shall be counted and recorded by at least two duly appointed persons, or by one fidelity bonded person;*
- “b. Financial books and records adequate to reflect all financial transactions shall be kept and shall be open to inspection by authorized church officers at reasonable times;*

- “c. Periodic, and in no case less than annual, reports of all financial activities shall be made to the session or entity vested with financial oversight;
- “d. A full financial review of all financial books and records shall be conducted every year by a public accountant or committee of members versed in accounting procedures. Reviewers should not be related to the treasurer(s). Terminology in this section is meant to provide general guidance and is not intended to require or not require specific audit procedures or practices as understood within the professional accounting community.

“G-3.03 THE PRESBYTERY

“3.0301 Composition and Responsibilities

“The presbytery is the council serving as a corporate expression of the church within a certain district and is composed of all the congregations and ministers of the Word and Sacrament within that district. When a presbytery meets, each member congregation shall be represented by at least one elder. Ministers of the Word and Sacrament and elders should be present in numbers as equal as possible. The presbytery shall adopt and communicate to the sessions a plan for determining how many elders each session should commission to represent it at presbytery meetings. This plan shall take into consideration the size of congregations as well as a method to fulfill the principles of participation and representation found in F-3.0303 and G-3.0104. Elders elected as officers of the presbytery shall be enrolled as members during the period of their service.

“The minimum composition of a presbytery is ten duly constituted sessions and ten ministers of the Word and Sacrament.

“The presbytery is responsible for the government of the church throughout its district, and for assisting and supporting the witness of congregations to the sovereign activity of God in the world, so that all congregations become signs in and for the world of the new reality God has made available to all in Jesus Christ. As it leads and guides the witness of its congregations, the presbytery shall bear in mind the six great ends of the Church (F-1.0304) and the notes by which Presbyterian and Reformed congregations have identified themselves through history (F-1.0302).

“In light of this charge, the presbytery has responsibility and power to

- “a. provide that the Word is truly proclaimed and heard. This responsibility shall include organizing, receiving, and merging congregations in consultation with their members; overseeing congregations without pastors; establishing pastoral relationships and dissolving them; guiding the preparation of those preparing to become ministers of the Word and Sacrament, or for other professional service in the church; establishing and maintaining those ecumenical relationships that will enlarge the life and mission of the church in its district; providing encouragement, guidance, and resources to congregations in the areas of mission action, leadership development, worship, evangelism, and responsible administration to the end that the church’s witness to the love and grace of God may be heard in the world.
- “b. provide that the Sacraments are rightly administered. This responsibility shall include authorizing the celebration of the Lord’s Supper at its meetings at least annually and for fellowship groups, new church developments, and other non-congregational entities meeting within its bounds; authorizing and training specific ruling elders to administer or preside at the Lord’s Supper when it deems it necessary to meet the needs for the administration of the Sacrament; and exercising pastoral care for the congregations and members of presbytery, visiting sessions and ministers of the Word and Sacrament on a regular basis in order that the Sacraments may be received as a means of grace, and the presbytery may live in the unity represented in the Sacraments.
- “c. nurture the covenant community through the upright ministry of ecclesiastical discipline. This responsibility shall include ordaining, receiving, dismissing, installing, removing, and disciplining minister members; commissioning elders as commissioned pastors; promoting the peace and harmony of congregations and inquiring into the sources of congregational discord; supporting congregations in developing the graces of generosity, stewardship, and service; assisting congregations in developing mission and participating in the mission of the whole church; warning and bearing witness against error in doctrine and immorality in practice within the congregation and community; and serving in judicial matters in accordance with the Rules of Discipline.

“3.0302 Relations with Synod and General Assembly

“The presbytery has a responsibility to maintain regular and continuing relationship to synod and General Assembly by

- “a. electing commissioners to synod and General Assembly and receiving their reports;*
- “b. electing elders and ministers of the Word and Sacrament to be readers of standard ordination examinations;*
- “c. seeing that the orders of synod and General Assembly are observed and carried out;*
- “d. proposing to synod or General Assembly such measures as may be of common concern to the mission of the church;*
- “e. sending annually to synod and General Assembly statistical and other information according to the requirements of those bodies.*

“3.0303 Relations with Sessions

“Presbytery, being composed of the ministers of the Word and Sacrament and commissioners elected by the session of congregations within its district, has a particular responsibility to coordinate, guide, encourage, support, and resource the work of their member congregations for the most effective witness to the broader community. In order to accomplish this responsibility, the presbytery has authority to

- “a. develop strategy for the mission of the church in its district;*
- “b. control the location of new congregations and of congregations desiring to move as well as to divide, dismiss, or dissolve congregations in consultation with their members;*
- “c. establish minimum compensation standards for pastoral calls and other Christian service within the presbytery;*
- “d. assume original jurisdiction in any situation in which it determines that a session cannot exercise its authority. After a thorough investigation, and after full opportunity to be heard has been accorded to the session, the presbytery may conclude that the session of a congregation is unable or unwilling to manage wisely its affairs, and may appoint an administrative commission with the full power of session. This commission shall assume original jurisdiction of the existing session, if any, which shall cease to act until such time as the presbytery shall otherwise direct.*
- “e. consider and act upon requests from congregations for permission to take the actions regarding real property as described in G-4.0206.*

“3.0304 Meetings and Quorum

“The presbytery shall hold stated meetings at least twice each year, and may call special meetings in accordance with its own rules or at the direction of the synod.

“A presbytery may set its own quorum, but it shall not be fewer than three ministers of the Word and Sacrament who are members of the presbytery and three elder commissioners from three different congregations.

“3.0305 Minutes and Records

“Minutes and other official records of the presbytery are the property of the presbytery, and are subject to the review specified in G-3.0109. The stated clerk is responsible for the preservation of the presbytery’s minutes and records.

“3.0306 Finances

“The presbytery shall prepare and approve an annual general mission budget to support the church’s mission within its area.

“A full financial review of all financial books and records shall be conducted every year by a public accountant or committee of members versed in accounting procedures. Reviewers should not be related to the treasurer(s). Terminology in this section is meant to provide general guidance and is not intended to require or not require specific audit procedures or practices as understood within the professional accounting community.

“3.0307 Membership of Presbytery

“Each presbytery determines the ministers of the Word and Sacrament who are its members. It shall be guided in this determination by written criteria developed by the presbytery for validating ministries within its bounds.

“The presbytery shall examine each minister of the Word and Sacrament or candidate who seeks membership in it on his or her Christian faith and views in theology, the Sacraments, and the government of this church.

“The presbytery may designate ministers of the Word and Sacrament to work as teachers, evangelists, administrators, chaplains, and in other forms of ministry recognized as appropriate by the presbytery. Those so designated may administer the Sacraments at times and places as established by the presbytery.

“Every minister of the Word and Sacrament shall ordinarily be a member of the presbytery where his or her work is situated or of the presbytery where she or he resides.

“A minister of the Word and Sacrament who is serving in a church outside the United States may, with the approval of the presbytery, accept ministerial membership in that church for the period of such service without affecting his or her membership in a presbytery of this church.

“3.0308 Pastor, Counselor, and Advisor to Ministers of the Word and Sacrament and Congregations

“Each presbytery shall develop and maintain mechanisms and processes to serve as pastor and counselor to ministers of the Word and Sacrament, commissioned pastors, and certified Christian educators of the presbytery; to facilitate the relations between the presbytery and its congregations, ministers of the Word and Sacrament, commissioned pastors, and certified Christian educators; and to settle difficulties on behalf of the presbytery where possible and expedient.

“Each presbytery shall develop and maintain mechanisms and processes to guide, nurture and oversee the process of preparing to become a minister of the Word and Sacrament.

“To facilitate the presbytery’s oversight of inquirers and candidates, reception and oversight of minister members, approval of calls for pastoral services and invitations for temporary pastoral services, oversight of congregations without pastors, dissolution of relationships, dismissal of members, and its close relationship with both member congregations and member ministers, it may delegate its authority to designated entities within the presbytery. Such entities shall be composed of elders and ministers of the Word and Sacrament in approximately equal numbers, bearing in mind the principles of diversity and participation in F-3.0303. All actions carried out as a result of delegated authority must be reported to the presbytery at its next regular meeting.

“G-3.04 THE SYNOD

“3.0401 Composition and Responsibilities

“The synod is the intermediate council serving as a corporate expression of the church throughout its region. It shall consist of not fewer than three presbyteries within a specific geographic region.

“When a synod meets, it shall be composed of commissioners elected by the presbyteries. Each presbytery shall elect at least one elder and one minister of the Word and Sacrament to serve as commissioners to synod. The presbyteries of a synod shall, by a vote of the majority of the presbyteries, determine a plan for the election of commissioners to the synod, as well as the method to fulfill the principles of participation and representation found in F-3.0303 and G-3.0104. The commissioners from each presbytery shall be divided equally between elders and ministers of the Word and Sacrament. Each person elected moderator shall be enrolled as a member of the synod until a successor is elected and installed.

“Synod is responsible for the life and mission of the church throughout its region and for supporting the ministry and mission of its constituent presbyteries as they seek to support the witness of congregations to the end that the whole church becomes a sign in and for the world of the new reality God has made available to all in Jesus Christ. As it leads and guides the witness of the whole church, it shall bear in mind the six great ends of the Church (F-1.0304) and the notes by which Presbyterian and Reformed communities have identified themselves through history (F-1.0303).

“In light of this charge, the synod has responsibility and power to

- “a. provide that the Word is truly proclaimed and heard. This responsibility may include developing, in conjunction with its presbyteries, a broad strategy for the mission of the church (The Foundations of Presbyterian Polity, Chapter One: The Mission of the Church) within its bounds and in accord with the larger strategy of the General Assembly; assisting its member presbyteries when requested in matters related to the calling, ordaining, and placement of ministers of the Word and Sacrament; establishing and maintaining, in conjunction with its presbyteries, those ecumenical relationships that will enlarge the life and mission of the church in its region; facilitating joint action in mission with other denominations and agencies in its region; facilitating communication among its presbyteries and between its presbyteries and the General Assembly; providing services for presbyteries within its area that can be performed more effectively from a broad regional base.*
- “b. provide that the Sacraments are rightly administered. This responsibility may include authorizing the celebration of the Lord’s Supper at its meetings and at other events and gatherings under its jurisdic-* tion; and exercising pastoral care among its constituent presbyteries in order that the Sacraments may be received as a means of grace, and the synod may live in the unity represented in the Sacraments.

- “c. nurture the covenant community through the upright ministry of ecclesiastical discipline. This responsibility shall include providing such services of education and nurture as its constituent presbyteries may require; reviewing the work of its presbyteries; warning or bearing witness against error in doctrine or immorality in practice within its bounds; and serving in judicial matters in accordance with the Rules of Discipline.*

“3.0402 Relations with General Assembly

“The synod has responsibility to maintain regular and continuing relationship with the General Assembly by seeing that the orders and instructions of the General Assembly are observed and carried out, and by proposing to the General Assembly such measures as may be of common concern to the mission of the whole church.

“3.0403 Relations WITH PRESBYTERIES

“Each presbytery shall participate in the synod’s responsibility and service through its elected commissioners to the synod. The synod has responsibility for supporting the work of the presbyteries within its bounds and as such is charged with

- “a. developing, in conjunction with its presbyteries, joint plans and objectives for the fulfillment of mission, providing encouragement and guidance to its presbyteries and overseeing their work;*
- “b. developing and providing, when requested, resources as needed to facilitate the mission of its presbyteries;*
- “c. organizing new presbyteries, dividing, uniting, or otherwise combining presbyteries or portions of presbyteries previously existing, and, with the concurrence of existing presbyteries, creating non-geographic presbyteries, subject to the approval of the General Assembly, or taking other such actions as may be deemed necessary in order to meet the mission needs of racial ethnic or immigrant congregations. Such presbyteries shall be formed in compliance with the requirements of G-3.0301 and be accountable to the synod within which they were created.*

“3.0404 REDUCED FUNCTION

“When a two-thirds majority of its constituent presbyteries so decide, the function of a synod may be reduced but shall in no case be less than the provision of judicial process and administrative review of the work of the presbyteries (G-3.0401c). Such a synod shall meet at least every two years for the purposes of setting budget, electing members to its permanent judicial commission, and admitting to record the actions of its permanent judicial and administrative commissions. Constituent presbyteries of such a synod shall assume for themselves, by mutual agreement, such other synod functions as may be deemed necessary by the presbyteries.

“3.0405 MEETINGS AND QUORUM

“The synod shall hold stated meetings at least biennially and may call special meetings in accordance with its own rules or at the direction of the General Assembly.

“A synod may set its own quorum, but it shall include an equal number of elders and ministers of the Word and Sacrament representing at least three presbyteries or one-third of its presbyteries, whichever is larger.

“3.0406 Minutes and Records

“The synod shall keep a full and accurate record of its proceedings that shall be submitted to the next succeeding meeting of the General Assembly for its general review and control. It shall report to the General Assembly the number of its presbyteries and, in general, all important changes that have occurred within its bounds.

“3.0407 Finances

“The synod shall prepare and approve a synod general mission budget to support the church’s mission within its region.

“The synod shall have a full financial review of all books and records relating to finances once a year by a public accountant or public accounting firm. Such auditors should not be related to the treasurer(s). Terminology in this section is meant to provide general guidance and is not intended to require or not require specific audit procedures or practices as understood within the professional accounting community.

“The General Assembly constitutes the bond of union, community, and mission among all its congregations and councils, to the end that the whole church becomes a sign in and for the world of the new reality God has made available to all in Jesus Christ. As it leads and guides the witness of the whole church, it shall bear in mind the six great ends of the Church (F-1.0304) and the notes by which Presbyterian and Reformed communities have identified themselves through history (F-1.0303).

“In light of this charge, the General Assembly has responsibility and power to

- “a. provide that the Word is truly proclaimed and heard. This responsibility shall include establishing a comprehensive mission strategy and priorities for the church; establishing and maintaining ecumenical relationships and correspondence with other ecclesiastical bodies; uniting with or receiving under its jurisdiction other ecclesiastical bodies consistent with the faith and order of this church, subject to the provision of G-5.02 and G-5.03; and commissioning, sending, and support of such mission personnel as will spread the good news of the grace of Jesus Christ to the world and foster the growth and development of God’s people.*
- “b. provide that the Sacraments are rightly administered. This responsibility shall include authorizing the celebration of the Lord’s Supper at meetings of the General Assembly; authorizing the participation in the celebration of the Lord’s Supper in ecumenical gatherings attended by authorized representatives of the General Assembly; and exercising pastoral care throughout the whole church in order that the Sacraments may be received as a means of grace, and the church may live in the unity represented in the Sacraments.*

“3.0502 Relations with Other Councils

Commissioners to the special meeting shall be the commissioners elected to the last preceding stated meeting of the General Assembly or their alternates. “G-4.01 CONGREGATIONAL INCORPORATION AND TRUSTEES

“4.0101 Incorporation and Power

“Where permitted by civil law, each congregation shall cause a corporation to be formed and maintained. If incorporation is not permitted, individual trustees shall be elected by the congregation. Where permitted by civil law, each presbytery, synod, and the General Assembly shall cause a corporation to be formed and maintained and shall determine a method to constitute the board of trustees.

“The corporation so formed, or the individual trustees, shall have the following powers: to receive, hold, encumber, manage, and transfer property, real or personal, for the church, provided that in buying, selling, and mortgaging real property, the trustees shall act only after the approval of the congregation granted in a duly constituted meeting; to accept and execute deeds of title to such property; to hold and defend title to such property; to manage any permanent special funds for the furtherance of the purposes of the church, all subject to the authority of the session and under the provisions of the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). The powers and duties of the trustees shall not infringe upon the powers and duties of the session or the board of deacons.

“4.0102 Members of the Corporation

“Only members of the congregation or council shall be eligible to be members of the corporation and to be elected as trustees. The ruling elders on the session of a congregation, who are eligible under the civil law, shall be the trustees of such corporation, unless the corporation shall determine another method for electing its trustees.

“G-4.02 CHURCH PROPERTY

“4.0201 Property as a Tool for Mission

“The property of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A), of its councils and entities, and of its congregations, is a tool for the accomplishment of the mission of Jesus Christ in the world.

“4.0202 Decisions Concerning Property

“The provisions of this Constitution prescribing the manner in which decisions are made, reviewed, and corrected within this church are applicable to all matters pertaining to property.

“4.0203 Church Property Held in Trust

“All property held by or for a congregation, a presbytery, a synod, the General Assembly, or the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), whether legal title is lodged in a corporation, a trustee or trustees, or an unincorporated association, and whether the property is used in programs of a congregation or of a higher council or retained for the production of income, is held in trust nevertheless for the use and benefit of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

“4.0204 Property Used Contrary to the Constitution

“Whenever property of, or held for, a congregation of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) ceases to be used by that congregation as a congregation of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in accordance with this Constitution, such property shall be held, used, applied, transferred, or sold as provided by the presbytery.

“4.0205 Property of a Dissolved or Extinct Congregation

“Whenever a congregation is formally dissolved by the presbytery, or has become extinct by reason of the dispersal of its members, the abandonment of its work, or other cause, such property as it may have shall be held, used, and applied for such uses, purposes, and trusts as the presbytery may direct, limit, and appoint, or such property may be sold or disposed of as the presbytery may direct, in conformity with the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

“4.0206 Selling, Encumbering, or Leasing Church Property

“a. Selling or Encumbering Congregational Property

“A congregation shall not sell, mortgage, or otherwise encumber any of its real property and it shall not acquire real property subject to an encumbrance or condition without the written permission of the presbytery transmitted through the session of the congregation.

“b. Leasing Congregational Property

“A congregation shall not lease its real property used for purposes of worship, or lease for more than five years any of its other real property, without the written permission of the presbytery transmitted through the session of the congregation.

“4.0207 Property of Congregation in Schism

“The relationship to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) of a congregation can be severed only by constitutional action on the part of the presbytery (G-3.0303b). If there is a schism within the membership of a congregation and the presbytery is unable to effect a reconciliation or a division into separate congregations within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), the presbytery shall determine if one of the factions is entitled to the property because it is identified by the presbytery as the true church within the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). This determination does not depend upon which faction received the majority vote within the congregation at the time of the schism.

“4.0208 Exceptions

“The provisions of this chapter shall apply to all congregations of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) except that any congregation which was not subject to a similar provision of the constitution of the church of which it was a part, prior to the reunion of the Presbyterian Church in the United States and The United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America to form the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), has been excused from that provision of this chapter if the congregation, within a period of eight years following the establishment of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), voted to be exempt from such provision in a regularly called meeting and thereafter notified the presbytery of which it was a constituent congregation of such vote. The congregation voting to be so exempt shall hold title to its property and exercise its privileges of incorporation and property ownership under the provisions of the Constitution to which it was subject immediately prior to the establishment of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). This paragraph may not be amended (G-6.05).

“G-4.03 CONFIDENCE AND PRIVILEGE

“4.0301 Trust and Confidentiality

“Ministers of the Word and Sacrament, and commissioned pastors who have been authorized by the presbytery to serve as pastor in a congregation, shall maintain a relationship of trust and confidentiality, and shall hold in confidence all information revealed to them in the course of providing care and all information relating to the exercise of such care. When the person whose confidences are at issue gives express consent to reveal confidential information, then a minister of the Word and Sacrament or commissioned pastor may, but cannot be compelled to, reveal confidential information.

“A minister of the Word and Sacrament or commissioned pastor may reveal confidential information when she or he reasonably believes that there is risk of imminent bodily harm to any person.

“4.0302 Mandatory Reporting

“Any member of this church engaged in ordered ministry and any certified Christian educator employed by this church or its congregations, shall report to ecclesiastical and civil legal authorities knowledge of harm, or the risk of harm, related to the physical abuse, neglect, and/or sexual molestation or abuse of a minor or an adult who lacks mental capacity when (1) such information is gained outside of a confidential communication as defined in G-4.0301, (2) she or he is not bound by an obligation of privileged communication under law, or (3) she or he reasonably believes that there is risk of future physical harm or abuse.

“5.0201 Full Communion

*“The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is in full communion with those churches so recognized by ecumenical agreements approved by the General Assembly. “c. of those churches with which the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has formal ecumenical dialogue approved by the General Assembly.

“5.0203 Ecumenical Statements

“The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) may from time to time receive for guidance statements of ecumenical consensus that regularly chosen representatives of this church have helped to formulate. Such statements shall serve to guide congregations and councils of this church as they share in joint action with other ecclesiastical bodies seeking ways to express the unity of the Church and to discover its future form. Such statements shall be approved by the General Assembly as a guide for shared action and submitted to the presbyteries for affirmative or negative vote. When the next General Assembly shall have received written advice that an ecumenical statement has received the affirmative vote of a majority of presbyteries, that statement shall serve as a guide for participation in ecumenical activities. Such statements shall be published as ‘Received Ecumenical Statements of Guidance’; they shall not be part of the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) unless adopted as amendments according to the manner described in Chapter Six, ‘Amendments.’

“G-5.03 FULL ORGANIC UNION

“Full organic union of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) with any other ecclesiastical body shall be effected subject to the following approvals:

- “c. the approval and consummation by the next General Assembly, or other General Assembly specified in the proposed plan of union.*

“G-5.04 UNION PRESBYTERIES

“A presbytery of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) may unite to form a union presbytery with one or more comparable councils or governing bodies, with the approval of the synod or comparable council or governing body of which each is a part.

“5.0401 Constitutional Authority

*“The union presbytery shall be subject to the constitution of each denomination represented in the union. “5.0402 Plan of Union

“A union presbytery shall be created by the adoption of a plan of union by two-thirds vote of each presbytery or governing body that is party to the union. The synod and/or governing body having jurisdiction over each of the uniting bodies shall approve the plan of union.

- “a. Such joint witnesses shall be subject to the constitution of each denomination involved. Wherever the constitutions of the denominations differ, the mandatory provisions of one shall apply in all cases when the others are permissive. Wherever there are conflicting mandatory provisions, the congregational council shall petition the next higher councils or governing bodies to resolve the conflict.*
- “b. Such joint witnesses shall be formed according to a plan approved by a two-thirds majority of the members of each of the congregations at duly called meetings of the congregation, and by the presbytery or comparable council or governing body of each church. No provision of a plan for joint witness shall be construed as modifying or amending the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).*
- “c. After consultation with the congregation involved in joint witness and the next higher council or governing body of the other denomination involved, a presbytery may receive a congregation from or transfer a congregation to a denomination with which the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is in full communion or correspondence when it determines that the strategy for mission of that congregation is better served by such a transfer (G-3.0303b).*

“CHAPTER SIX

“INTERPRETING AND AMENDING THE CONSTITUTION

“G-6.01 REFORM

The Stated Clerk of the General Assembly shall be a member ex officio without vote. No person who has served on the Advisory Committee on the Constitution for a full term of six years shall be eligible for reelection until four years have elapsed after the expired six-year term. The General Assembly shall provide by its own rule for the qualifications of members of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.*

*“All questions requiring an interpretation by the General Assembly of the Book of Order arising from councils of the church shall be communicated in writing to the Stated Clerk of the General Assembly no later than 120 days prior to the convening of the next session of the General Assembly. - “b. The Stated Clerk shall refer all such proposals to amend the Book of Order to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution (G-6.02), which shall examine the proposed amendment for clarity and consistency of language and for compatibility with other provisions of the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). The advisory committee shall report its findings to the General Assembly along with its recommendations, which may include an amended version of any proposed constitutional changes as well as advice to accept or decline the proposals referred to the committee. “6.0502 Amending G-4.0208, Exceptions

“G-6.06 AMENDMENTS TO SPECIAL PROVISIONS

“The processes for amending the confessional documents and for effecting full organic union (G-5.03) can be amended only by the same method that they prescribe.”

Rationale

The task force has kept in mind that the Form of Government is a constitutional document that grows out of its foundational principles. It expresses the ideas, visions, and principles that form the architecture of mission. However, it is not a manual of operations and avoids detailed descriptions of procedures that may finally serve to hinder rather than help the church. As a result, in the proposed Form of Government the councils of the church are frequently required to provide their own standing rules or policies. It describes authority and responsibility without dictating particular structures inside the councils.

The Form of Government begins where the church’s mission begins—with the gathered community of believers, the congregation. The initial chapter combines the subject matter and much of the language of present G-5.0000 (The Church and Its Members) and G-7.0000 (The Particular Church). In a missional polity, the basic form of the church is not the individual member, but the congregation. It therefore follows that the first chapter of the Form of Government should describe the congregation. Believers most effectively bear witness to God’s new creation when they are joined together by proclamation, sacramental practice, and covenanted life. Consequently, ministry is best understood as growing out of the ministry of the congregation.

From biblical times, gathered communities of believers have sought to order ministry. The ministry of the church’s offices is the gift of Jesus Christ (see F-3.0103), and should therefore follow the example of servanthood that Christ himself provided (cf. current G-6.0101). The election of ruling elders, deacons, and ministers of the Word and Sacrament is the inalienable prerogative of God’s people (see F-3.0106; cf. current G-6.0107 and 6.0102). [True to its mandate, the task force has preserved intact current G-6.0106a and b (G-2.0103). It has also preserved current G-6.0108a and b, but has combined them into a single paragraph (G-2.0104)].

In Chapter Two, the task force recommends replacing the terms ‘office’ and ‘officer’ with ‘ordered ministry’ and ‘ordered minister.’ The task force proposes this change out of the conviction that our use of ‘office/officer’ carries with it subtle implications that leadership in the church is about the exercise of power and authority, elevated above other members of the church. In fact, our theology of ordination would hold almost the precise opposite. Those called to leadership roles in the church do not ‘hold office’; they do ministry. Some believers are called to particular ministries of discernment, compassion and justice, and proclamation. The exercise of such ministries is ‘ordered’—that is, prescribed or defined—by the church so that it serves to build up the whole people of God.

The recommended change uses ‘ruling elder’ and ‘teaching elder’ to describe those elected and ordained to service on the session and in the councils of the church. These terms are not new. The task force recommends them for two reasons. First, they highlight the essential sharing of responsibility for the health and well being of the church. Second, the use of the terms ruling and teaching each highlights vital functions of the work of the presbyter. ‘Ruling’ does not mean governing or reigning over, but measuring—ruling elders are those whose work it is to measure the faithfulness of the congregation in their charge. ‘Teaching’ reminds us that the central work of the minister of the Word and Sacrament is to teach the faith—in classes, preaching, leading worship, administering the sacraments, pastoral care, and virtually all aspects of congregational life. [As it drafted this chapter, the task force based its work on the revised G-14.0000 approved by the 217th General Assembly (2006) and adopted in 2007 by a majority of presbyteries.]

Representative gatherings of officers to oversee and decide the life of the church have carried many names. Chapter Three proposes another significant change in the language of the church: the replacement of the current term ‘governing body/ies’ with ‘council/s.’ From its earliest days, the task force heard pleas to replace ‘governing body’ with some other term as a general descriptor for the gathering of presbyters to nurture and guide the witness of the church. These conversations were prompted by the recognition that the language we use to describe ourselves carries with it the power to shape our self-understanding, in both obvious and subtle ways.

The purpose of 3.0101 is to frame the discussion of councils in the context of the church's calling (see F-1.0302d). The church is unified by its mutual connectedness through the structure of its polity (F-3.0201, F-3.0203). Though the particular congregation is the basic form of the church, a congregation is not of itself a sufficient form of the church. Just as the gathering of believers into congregations strengthens the witness of members, so their gathering into councils strengthens the witness of congregations. The recommendation seeks to embody this principle in the descriptions of tasks for each council, affirming its relationship to other higher and lower councils (G-3.0202, G-3.0302–.0303, G-3.0402–.0403, and G-3.0502).

The descriptions of the four councils share a common structure built on the three 'Notes of the True Church' (see F-1.0303, G-3.0201, G-3.0301, G-3.0401, and G-3.0501). These three tasks—true preaching of the Word, right administration of the Sacraments, and upright ministry of ecclesiastical discipline—have defined the life and work of Reformed churches since the 17th century. The task force understands the 'Notes' broadly, as the work of the community of believers rather than as a to-do list of the pastor. More importantly, it understands them eschatologically, as acts that bear witness in the world to the Lordship of Christ and the new creation God has begun in him.

[In the structures of most presbyteries, synods, and the General Assembly, there already exist bodies called 'councils' that perform specified functions on behalf of the larger entity. The Form of Government does not require that such bodies cease to exist. It does, however, omit explicit reference to them, so that presbyteries, synods, and the General Assembly are free to assign those functions to such entities as they see fit to design and name.]

Chapter Four on 'The Church and Civil Authority' is composed of existing language in the current Form of Government. 'Congregational Incorporation and Trustees' (G-4.01) is the slightly reorganized content of current G-7.0401 and 7.0402. Proposed G-4.02, 'Church Property,' is the text of current G-8.0000, including G-8.0200, as mandated by the charter of the task force by the 217th General Assembly (2006). Proposed G-4.03, 'Confidence and Privilege,' is a summary statement of the provisions on the same subjects in current G-6.0204a and b, G-6.0304b, and G-6.0402b.

The contents of proposed Chapter Five are drawn from current G-15.0000, G-16.0000, and G-17.0000. The guiding principle here is the missional commitment to the unity of the church, which guides the church's commitment to ecumenicity, interfaith cooperation, and partnership with secular organizations (G-5.01).

The proposed sections G-5.03, 5.04, and 5.05 seek to reduce hindrances and require only that there be plans of union or joint congregational witness, that those plans and the plans and the resulting congregations or entities be subject to the Constitution, and be approved by the next higher council.

Proposed section G-5.05 deals with 'joint congregational witness.' This new term replaces the two terms in use in the present polity, 'union' and 'federated' congregations.

Chapter Six retains the processes for amending the Constitution (both The Book of Confessions and the Book of Order) already in place in current G-18.0000. It has redrafted the descriptions of those processes to make them clearer, but has not altered their substance.

The task force is recommending that Foundations of Presbyterian Polity (F-1.00 through F-3.00) be allowed to remain intact for a period of six years before being subject to the normal process of constitutional amendment. This would permit the church to live with the document for a period of time to determine whether the new section serves the church's needs.

[Note: To be considered if the second recommendation of the Form of Government Task Force (striking current text of Chapters V–XVIII of the Form of Government and inserting new text) is approved. The task force has heard from the church considerable comment reflecting differing opinions on certain matters proposed within the Form of Government. In light of this, the 218th General Assembly (2008) may wish to direct the Stated Clerk to send to the presbyteries for their positive or negative vote any or all of the amendments in C.]

C. The Form of Government Task Force recommends that the 218th General Assembly (2008) direct the Stated Clerk to send the following amendments to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative vote:

1. Shall G-2.0303a be amended by striking from the last sentence the phrase, "except by at least a three-fourths vote of the presbytery," so that the section reads: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through.]

"a. The installed pastoral relationships are pastor, co-pastor, and associate pastor. A minister of the Word and Sacrament may be installed in a pastoral relationship for an indefinite period or for a designated term determined by the presbytery in consultation with the congregation. When a congregation determines that its strategy for mission under the Word so requires, the congregation may call additional pastors. Such additional pastors shall be called co-pastors or associate pastors, and the duties of each pastor and the relationships between the pastors of the congregation shall be determined by the session with the approval of the presbytery. When a congregation has two pastors serving as co-pastors, and the relationship of one of them is dissolved, the other remains as pastor. The relationship of an associate pastor to a congregation is not dependent upon that of a pastor. In no circumstance is an associate pastor eligible to be the next installed pastor of that congregation, ~~except by a three-fourths vote of the presbytery.~~”

2. Shall the second paragraph of G-2.0303b be amended by striking the third sentence and inserting a new sentence, “A minister employed in a temporary pastoral relationship other than that of interim pastor may, with the approval of a three-fourths vote of the presbytery, be declared eligible to succeed as the next installed pastor, co-pastor, or associate pastor of the congregation served in a temporary capacity,” so that the section reads: [Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“Titles and terms of service for temporary relationships shall be determined by the presbytery. A minister of the Word and Sacrament serving in a temporary pastoral relationship is invited for a specified period not to exceed twelve months in length, which is renewable with approval of the presbytery. ~~In no circumstance is a minister employed in a temporary pastoral relationship eligible to serve as the next installed pastor, co-pastor, or associate pastor except by a three-fourths vote of the presbytery.~~ A minister employed in a temporary pastoral relationship other than that of interim pastor may, with the approval of a three-fourths vote of the presbytery, be declared eligible to succeed as the next installed pastor, co-pastor, or associate pastor of the congregation served in a temporary capacity. Presbyteries may determine that the mission strategy of the presbytery necessitates a further limit on eligibility of temporary pastors to serve as the next installed pastor of a congregation served in a temporary capacity.”

3. Shall G-2.0302a be amended by striking (6):

~~“(6) include proclamation of the Word and administration of the Sacraments,”~~

4. Shall the second paragraph of G-3.0104 be amended by inserting new text as follows:

“Each council shall develop procedures and mechanisms for promoting and reviewing that body’s implementation of the church’s commitment to inclusiveness and representation. Councils above the session may establish committees to advocate for diversity in leadership.”

D. The Form of Government Task Force recommends that the 218th General Assembly (2008) commend to the councils of the church “Advisory Handbook for Councils for the Development of Policies and Procedures Required by the Form of Government.”

Rationale

The 217th General Assembly (2006) instructed the task force to provide handbooks to the councils of the church for developing required policies and procedures to carry out their mission. This handbook is an aid to that work. [The text of the handbook is as follows.]

Policies and Procedures Guide for the Work of the Session

“A congregation consists of those persons in a particular place who profess faith in Jesus Christ as Lord and Savior, gathered to worship, listen for God’s Word in Scripture, celebrate the sacraments, commit themselves to God’s mission in the world, and order their common life in fidelity to the gospel, together with the children of the congregation” (F- 1.0302 b).

The session is the council charged with governance in the congregation under the oversight of the presbytery of which the congregation is a member. The Foundations of Presbyterian Polity lists three primary purposes for the session in its administration. Known as the “Notes of the Reformed Church” (F 1.0303), they are summarized as:

- (1) the true preaching of the Word of God, in which God has revealed himself to us, as the writings of the prophets and apostles declare;
- (2) the right administration of the sacraments of Christ Jesus, with which must be associated the Word and promise of God to seal and confirm them in our hearts; and
- (3) ecclesiastical discipline uprightly ministered, as God’s Word prescribes, whereby vice is repressed and virtue nourished.

Councils within our denomination are mutually interconnected. Each council has an expansive range of unique responsibilities; however, the life and ministry of each council is subject to review by the next higher council (G 3.0109a). In this review, certain constitutional requirements must be addressed. What follows is a listing of those areas in which a presbytery is required to or justified in reviewing the work of the session of a congregation. The purpose of this review is for mutual awareness of and encouragement in mission. The value of review is in shared knowledge rather than meticulous compliance.

The proposed Form of Government requires that “each council shall develop a manual of administrative operations that will specify the form and guide the work of mission in that body” (G-3.0107). The following list does not intend to be exhaustive of all actions that might now be included in a presbytery’s Manual of Administrative Operations. It does seek to identify those instances in the proposed Form of Government where specific policies or rules are required. In every case, a session should ask whether any existing policies of the session meet the expectations of a particular provision.

Policies and Procedures Guide for the Work of the Presbytery

The presbytery is the council serving as a corporate expression of the church within a certain district. The presbytery is responsible for the government of the church throughout its district, and for assisting and supporting the witness of congregations to the sovereign activity of God in the world, so that all congregations become signs in and for the world of the new reality God has made available to all in Jesus Christ. As it leads and guides the witness of its congregations, the presbytery shall bear in mind the six Great Ends of the Church (F-1.0304) and the notes by which Presbyterian and Reformed congregations have identified themselves through history (F-1.0302).

Councils within our denomination are mutually interconnected. Each council has an expansive range of unique responsibilities; however, the life and ministry of each council is subject to review by the next higher council (G 3.0109a). ### Policies and Procedures Guide for the Work of the Synod

The synod is the intermediate council “responsible for the life and mission of the church throughout its region and for supporting the ministry and mission of its constituent presbyteries as they seek to support the witness of congregations to the end that the whole church becomes a sign in and for the world of the new reality God has made available to all in Jesus Christ” (G-3.0401). As it meets, it is composed of commissioners elected by its constituent presbyteries.

As with all councils, the synod is charged to bear in mind the six Great Ends of the Church (F-1.0304) and the notes by which Presbyterian and Reformed communities have identified themselves through history (F-1.0303) as it defines and carries out its mission.

Policies and Procedures Guide for the Work of the General Assembly

The General Assembly is the council of the whole church and is representative of the unity of the synods, presbyteries, sessions, and congregations of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

The General Assembly constitutes the bond of union, community, and mission among all its congregations and councils, to the end that the whole church becomes a sign in and for the world of the new reality God has made available to all in Jesus Christ. As it leads and guides the witness of the whole church, it shall bear in mind the six Great Ends of the Church (F-1.0304) and the notes by which Presbyterian and Reformed communities have identified themselves through history (F-1.0303).

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 06-01, RECOMMENDATION A

Advice on Item 06-01, Recommendation A—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The task force’s proposal regarding Foundations and the Form of Government represents a significant shift in the way the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) would relate to its Constitution in at least two ways.

First, the task force’s proposal envisions a polity that is missional in nature. Missional polity is grounded in the notion that mission is not merely one of many possessions or attributes of the church, but rather that bearing witness to and participating in God’s work in the world is the reason for the church’s existence. That mission takes place in particular contexts and in the life of congregations. The focus of the polity contained in the proposal is on supporting the work of the congregation. As understood in this polity, the work of the church at all levels is organized around the classical Reformed marks of the church: that the Word of God is proclaimed, the sacraments are rightly administered, and the covenant community is nurtured through ecclesiastical discipline.

Second, the task force’s proposal regarding Foundations and the Form of Government offers a document that is less regulatory in nature than the existing Form of Government. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution has often noted a tendency on the part of the church to use its constitution as if it were a manual of operations, adding through the process of amendment a large number of administrative and procedural details. The proposed Form of Government eliminates many of the passages that define in detail the procedures of governing bodies. A positive aspect of this change may be the freedom offered to governing bodies to establish policies and procedures for their work that best suit the needs of their particular contexts.

If the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is ready to make this paradigm shift, the proposed Foundations and Revised Form of Government are coherent from a constitutional perspective to function as a replacement for the existing Form of Government. The advisory committee has, however, noted particular issues that should be resolved before the proposal is sent to the presbyteries for action.

I. The Historic Context of the Work of the Form of Government Task Force

Efforts to revise the Form of Government have been before General Assemblies for least fifteen years. Throughout that time, the consistent theme has been the impetus to restore a sense of “constitutionality” to the language of the Form of Government. Proposals for revision have sought, by various means, to maintain clarity about national standards while reducing the amount of process-oriented material that might be handled in different ways by different parts of the church.

The Special Committee on the Nature of the Church and the Practice of Governance reported to the 205th General Assembly (1993). It suggested that the content of the Form of Government could be divided into standards and functions that should remain uniform across the church, and practices and processes about which there might reasonably be a greater degree of freedom and diversity. The assembly referred the matter of a systematic review of the Form of Government to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

1996–97

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommended to the 208th General Assembly (1996) that the Advisory Committee on the Constitution be charged with creating a Form of Government divided into three components: (1) foundational principles, (2) binding policies, and (3) advisory practices, and that the new draft be presented to the 213th General Assembly (2001). In addition, the 209th General Assembly (1997) referred to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution an overture from the Presbytery of West Virginia to create a Form of Government

- that is true to the historic principles of polity in the PC(USA);
- that will serve as a constitutional reference, “encouraging creativity with broad strokes of wisdom”; and
- that will “empower governing bodies . . . and celebrate the diversity of the church.”

1999

In its progress report to the 212th General Assembly (2000), the Advisory Committee on the Constitution offered drafts of Chapters X and XI of the Form of Government that divided the contents into foundational, policy, and practice categories. It also suggested that a draft of the entire Form of Government, reduced to include only foundational principles, be circulated among the church for study and comment. The assembly chose to refer the report back to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution for further refinement and report to the next assembly.

2000

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution report to the 212th General Assembly (2000) included a draft revision of Chapter XIV that reduced its contents to broadly stated principles and standards, while removing much of the process oriented material to advisory handbooks. The assembly approved the document for study and comment.

2001–02

The 213th General Assembly (2001) sent to presbyteries a proposal to revise the contents of Chapter XIV along the lines of the 2000 Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommendation. While the amendment was defeated in presbyteries (29-141-2), there was the sense that the problems were not so much with the overall concept as with particular aspects of the proposal. The following year, the 214th General Assembly (2002) asked the Office of the General Assembly to propose a systematic revision of the Form of Government along the lines of the proposed revisions to Chapter XIV, and to report its work to the 217th General Assembly (2006).

2004

The Office of the General Assembly requested and received permission to conduct an extensive series of consultations with various constituencies in the church regarding both the theory and style of revision of the Form of Government deemed most desirable.

2006

The Office of the General Assembly reported its work to the 217th General Assembly (2006) in two parts:

1. A revision of Chapter XIV, similar in content and approach to the revision proposed in 2001, but with several options for dealing with potentially controversial aspects of change. The amendment was approved and is now Chapter XIV of the Book of Order.
2. The creation of a Form of Government Task Force, to be charged with revising the entire Form of Government to create a document that preserves the foundational elements of Presbyterian polity, provides leadership and support for congregations as missional units, and maintains the presbytery as the central governmental unit of the church. The task force was required to release the proposed Form of Government including advisory handbooks by September 1, 2007.

The Form of Government Task Force completed work on its initial draft in September and shared the document broadly within the church. Following a period of comment and critique, the task force submitted its final report to the Stated Clerk's office in December, in anticipation of presentation to the 218th General Assembly (2008). The report recommends:

1. The replacement of current Chapters I–IV with a new document, “The Foundations of Presbyterian Polity,” intended to become the first of four sections of the Book of Order.
2. The replacement of current Chapters V–XVIII with proposed Chapters 1–6.
3. That the assembly send to presbyteries additional proposals for amending potentially controversial aspects of the proposed Form of Government, creating options for the church in such areas as permitting associate pastors and interim pastors to succeed to the position of pastor, requiring the inclusion of proclamation of the Word and administration of the sacraments in all validated ministries, and creating committees on diversity at the levels of presbytery, synod, and General Assembly.

II. Advice of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution as to How the Proposed Foundations Would Modify the Current Provisions of Chapters I–IV

The Foundations of Presbyterian Polity retains most of the existing provisions of Chapters I–IV of the current Form of Government, but reorganizes them consistent with the task force’s understanding of a missional polity. The original Historic Principles of Church Order from 1789 are retained in their original phrasing.

III. Referencing Historic Language to Preserve a Foundational Provision

In keeping with the task force’s inclusion of current G-1.0300 as F-3.0101 along with the now-familiar footnote explaining its 1789 origin, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution sees the benefit to the church of a similar continuity for the “radical principles of Presbyterian church government and discipline” in current G-1.0400.

The task force report divides and paraphrases the elements of the original 1797 paragraph. The original emphasizes the continuity of its particular elements: that the many congregations of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) constitute one church, emphatically called “the Church” in the Form of Government (F-3.0201); that this church is to be governed by “presbyters” (F-3.0202); and that these presbyters assemble to govern in “councils,” which are in regular gradation (F-3.0203). The new provisions are consistent with the current Form of Government. While it does not appear to be the intention of the task force, however, some could read this reworking of current G-1.0400 as diminishing the value of that historic provision as it has aided the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in understanding and communicating the articulated integrity of the whole church.

In order to ensure that such a misunderstanding does not occur, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises that the 218th General Assembly (2008) add a footnote to F-3.02 of the proposed Foundations section quoting the current G-1.0400, presenting to the presbyteries for their approval or disapproval the following language:

“<sup>1</sup> This provision is derived from and intended to restate the Historic Principles of Church Government, which were adopted in 1797 by the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, and the Principles of Presbyterian Government. In this quotation, the word ‘radical’ is used in its primary meaning of ‘fundamental and basic,’ and the word ‘appeals’ is used in a general sense rather than with reference to a case involved in judicial process:

“The radical principles of Presbyterian church government and discipline are:

“That the several different congregations of believers, taken collectively, constitute one Church of Christ, called emphatically the Church; that a larger part of the Church, or a representation of it, should govern a smaller, or determine matters of controversy which arise therein; that, in like manner, a representation of the whole should govern and determine in regard to every part, and to all the parts united: that is, that a majority shall govern; and consequently that appeals may be carried from lower to higher governing bodies, till they be finally decided by the collected wisdom and united voice of the whole Church. For these principles and this procedure, the example of the apostles and the practice of the primitive Church are considered as authority.”

IV. Use of the Foundations in Relation to the Other Parts of the Book of Order

A. A question raised by the separation of the Foundation section from the remainder of the Form of Government is whether having a stand-alone Foundations section changes the status of these provisions. Within the current organization of the Form of Government, the first four chapters, and in particular the first chapter, have historically provided interpretive guidance in the interpretation of the rest of the Form of Government. Thus, for example, in 2006 the General Assembly approved an authoritative interpretation that began: “G-4.0301f must be interpreted in light of the affirmation in G-1.0400 (“Historic Principles of Church Government”) that ‘a larger part of the Church, or a representation of it, should govern a smaller, or determine matters of controversy which arise therein ...’” Likewise, in the context of judicial decisions, the foundational sections of the Form of Government have been used as a basis for interpretation of other provisions. For example, in Londonderry v. Presbytery of Northern New England, the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission relied on the current G-1.0302 to illustrate the position that one portion of the Form of Government could not be used to invalidate other express provisions of the Form of Government. This latter principle, that all provisions of the Form of Government should be read together, is not inconsistent with the use of foundational principles for guidance in interpretation. It does, however, establish the clear boundary between the proper use of foundational principles to provide guidance in the interpretation or particular application of another provision and the improper attempt to nullify an express provision of the Constitution by the argument that it conflicts with another provision.

The replacement of Chapters I–IV with “The Foundations of Presbyterian Polity” would not change this framework. The Foundations by being separated from the Form of Government do not gain any additional authority. Rather, the Foundations would be used as Chapters I–IV are now used: to remind the denomination of the core values of its polity and to provide a basis for interpretation of any provision of the Book of Order that might, in a given context, be capable of multiple interpretations.

Creation of “The Foundations of Presbyterian Polity” does make these core values more clearly applicable to interpretation of the other provisions of Part II of the Constitution, the Directory for Worship and the Rules of Discipline. Again, however, as with the Form of Government, the Foundations provide a tool for interpreting these provisions, not a ground for invalidating any of them.

If the 218th General Assembly (2008) believes that the proposed language of the Foundations is not clear as to this point, the assembly may wish to add an additional provision explicitly stating this principle. The following language would accomplish that intent:

“F-3.0305 Foundational Statements

“The statements contained in this section, ‘The Foundations of Presbyterian Polity,’ describe the ecclesiological and historical commitments on which the polity of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) rests. Provisions of any part of this Constitution are to be interpreted in light of the whole Constitution. Where there are tensions and ambiguities between provisions, it is the task of councils and judicial commissions to resolve them in such a way as to give effect to all provisions.”

B. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution suggests a minor clarification of F-3.01. This provision now reads: “In setting forth the following form of government, worship, and discipline ...” While this sentence may be intended to apply generally to the other three sections of the Book of Order, the grammatical structure of the sentence might lead one to think that the phrase “form of” refers to “government, worship, and discipline.” The Advisory Committee on the Constitution believe that clarity and accuracy would be improved by clarifying that the reference is to the whole Book of Order, so that the sentence reads “In setting forth this Book of Order ...”

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 06-01, RECOMMENDATION B

Advice on Item 06-01, Recommendation B—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

As noted in the Advisory Committee on the Constitution’s comments regarding Recommendation A, the approval of the Foundations and the new Form of Government would represent a significant shift in the way the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) would relate to its Constitution in moving to a polity that is missional in nature and more constitutional and less regulatory. For some time, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution has noted a tendency on the part of the church to use its constitution as if it were a manual of operations, adding through the process of amendment a large number of administrative and procedural restrictions. A history of efforts to adopt a less regulatory Form of Government is set forth in the Advisory Committee on the Constitution’s advice on Recommendation A. The proposed Form of Government eliminates many of the passages that define in detail the procedures of governing bodies. A positive aspect of this change may be the freedom offered to governing bodies to establish policies and procedures for their work that best suit the needs of their particular contexts. A negative aspect may be that many Presbyterians may be puzzled or troubled by the silence in the Constitution concerning issues addressed in the Form of Government now in effect.

If the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is ready to make these shifts, the proposed Foundations and Revised Form of Government are coherent from a constitutional perspective to function as a replacement for the existing Form of Government. The advisory committee has, however, noted particular issues that should be resolved before the proposal is sent to the presbyteries for action.

I. Overview of the Proposed Form of Government

As noted above, the proposed Form of Government represents a significant shift to a more constitutional and less regulatory Form of Government. As the rationale of the task force indicates:

Chapter 1 of the proposed Form of Government is drawn from the current provisions of G-5.0000 and G-7.0000.

Chapter 2 is drawn from the current provisions of G-6.0000 and G-14.0000. As required by its mandate, the task force has preserved intact current G-6.0106a and b (G-2.0103). It has also preserved current G-6.0108a and b, but has combined them into a single paragraph (the new G-2.0104).

Chapter 3 is drawn from G-9.0000, G-10.0000, G-11.0000, G-12.0000, and G-13.0000.

Chapter 4 combines existing language in the current Form of Government from the current G-7.0401 and 7.0402. Proposed G-4.02 is the text of current G-8.0000, including G-8.0200, as mandated by the charter of the task force. Proposed G-4.03, “Confidence and Privilege,” is a summary statement of the provisions on the same subjects in current G-6.0204a and b, G-6.0304b, and G-6.0402b.

Chapter 5 is a consolidation of G-15.0000, G-16.0000, and G-17.0000.

Finally, Chapter 6 is derived from the current G-18.0000.

Except as set forth in the next section, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution believes that the task force has complied with its charge to draft a missional Form of Government that removes materials that could be described as regulatory or “manual”-type provisions. The task force has also honored its charge to retain the current G-6.0106 and G-8.0200.

II. Items the Advisory Committee on the Constitution Recommends Be Modified

If the 218th General Assembly (2008) decides to recommend the proposed Form of Government as a replacement for Chapters V–XVIII of the current Form of Government to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative vote, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises that it do so with the following modifications of the text proposed by the task force.

A. Chapter One

1. On the Use of “Congregation” and “Covenant” in Chapter One and Elsewhere

The proposed G-1.01 places the congregation at the start of the Form of Government as “the church engaged in mission in its particular context,” and as “the basic form of the church.” The Advisory Committee on the Constitution has several concerns regarding the understanding of “congregation” and “covenant” as set forth in Chapter One of the proposed Form of Government.

a. The Particular Church Is Left Undefined.

Chapter One lacks a clear definition of a particular church. This presents important issues of law and polity. In light of legal action against presbyteries for control of property by particular churches and groups purporting to be particular churches, constitutional clarity on what constitutes a particular church—as opposed to a worshiping fellowship, a satellite community of a larger church, or any number of other “congregations” broadly construed—is essential. Indeed, the substitution of the word “congregation” for the more precise “particular church” invites ambiguity and potential misunderstanding. (While restricting this comment to Chapter One, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution notes with concern the substitution of “congregation” for “church” or “particular church” in F-3.0201 and elsewhere, which reinforces concerns addressed here.) When a “congregation” becomes a “particular church” it is granted both privileges and responsibilities and is set in a particular relationship to the presbytery and the wider church.

Section G-1.02 compounds the potential confusion by failing to specify a common process for chartering congregations as particular churches, such as is found in the current G-7.0200. Thus, one presbytery could deem one kind of worshiping community as a particular church while another, perhaps in the same state, would not. Indeed, there is nothing to prevent a presbytery from inconsistently applying its own criteria to worshiping communities within its bounds.

b. Use of “Covenant” in G-1.0101

The exact nature of the connectional relationship between particular churches and the presbytery, as well as the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), is a matter of vital importance in addressing issues of law and polity currently facing our denomination. Various congregations have claimed that the nature of our communion is “covenantal,” which they interpret to grant the particular church equal status with the presbytery (and denomination) as covenant partners. The argument is made that a covenantal relationship permits the congregation as covenant partner to exercise autonomy to withdraw from the covenant, or to declare it broken. Indeed, failure to use language carefully in our Constitution and ecclesiastical jurisprudence has created confusion as to the historic understanding of the particular churches collectively constituting “one church” in organic relationship (G-4.0301a; 1 Cor. 12).

(For example the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission in Minihan v. Presbytery of Scioto Valley, Minutes, 2004, Part I, p. 353, wrote: “But, as both parties acknowledged, the theological heart of this case is the covenantal nature of the Church. Indeed, both parties refer to per capita as a high moral obligation and as one of the sinews that binds the covenant community together. This is consistent with the historic nature of Presbyterian order that we have shared power and responsibility (G-4.0302).” Likewise, in Johnston v. Presbytery of Heartland, Minutes, 2006, Part I, p. 466, the commission wrote: “This understanding of our organic unity finds expression throughout our Book of Order. Mutuality expresses the unity of the church. In this fashion, we are bound together in covenantal relationships that assume and require the blessings and difficulties of dialogue based on trust and love (G-7.0103).” The 217th General Assembly (2006) approved an authoritative interpretation correcting the potential for misunderstanding of the nature of the church’s unity contained in these decisions. See Minutes, 2006, Part I, p. 513–15.)

Indeed, the existing Form of Government consistently utilizes the word “covenant” only in the context of describing the relationship of individual members to one another and the larger church. See G-6.0106b; G-7.0201; G-14.0461; G-14.0463. This is an important distinction in that individual members have the right to separate themselves from the denomination should their consciences not permit them to remain in community (see footnote to G-6.0108), whereas governing bodies do not.

While the Constitution may provide for great latitude in how the church organizes itself for mission, it risks losing both its unity and its order by substituting covenantal language to describe our connectionalism where organic unity is both historically and theologically supported.

c. Recommended Revisions to G-1.01–.03

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises that the 218th General Assembly (2008) approve the following revisions to G-1.00 of the proposed Form of Government before presenting it to the presbyteries for their approval or disapproval:

(1) That the assembly amend the first paragraph of G-1.01 so that it reads as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and an underline.]

“1.0101 The Mission of the Congregation

“The congregation is the church engaged in mission in its particular context. All the gifts of the gospel necessary to being the church are present to the congregation. The congregation is the basic form of the church, but it is not of itself a sufficient form of the church. Thus congregations are bound together in communion with one another, [~~covenantal~~] [united] in relationships of accountability and responsibility, and called collectively the church.... [section continues unamended]”

(2) That the assembly amend G-1.0103 so that it reads as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and an underline.]

“[A “congregation” as used in this Form of Government refers to a formally established community chartered and recognized by the Presbytery as provided in this Constitution.] Each congregation of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) shall be governed by this Constitution. The members of a congregation put themselves under the leadership of the session and the higher councils (presbytery, synod, and General Assembly). The government and guidance of the congregation are the responsibility of ruling elders, elected from among the members of the congregation, and teaching elders (ministers of the Word and Sacrament) who serve together as the session. The session leads the congregation in fulfilling its responsibilities for the service of all people, for the upbuilding of the whole church, and for the glory of God.”

(3) That G-1.0103 be renumbered as G-1.0102, and the proposed G-1.0102 be renumbered as G-1.0103.

(4) That the 218th General Assembly (2008) amend the proposed Form of Government by reinstating current G-7.0200 for the proposed G-1.02, so that it reads as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and an underline.]

“G-1.02 THE ORGANIZING OF A CONGREGATION

“[A congregation in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) can be organized only by the authority of a presbytery and shall function under the provisions of this Constitution.] [A congregation in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) can be organized only by the authority of a presbytery and shall function under the provisions of this Constitution.

“G-1.0201 Constituting Covenant

“In organizing a congregation, presbytery, proceeding directly or through a commission, shall receive applications for membership in the church—whether by profession of faith, reaffirmation, or transfer of membership—from persons wishing to unite in forming a new congregation. These persons shall covenant together as follows:

“We, the undersigned, in response to the grace of God, desire to be constituted and organized as a church to be known as _____ . We promise and covenant to live together in unity and to work together in ministry as disciples of Jesus Christ, bound to him and to one another as a part of the body of Christ in this place according to the principles of faith, mission, and order of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

“(Signatures)

“G-1.0202 Presbytery Relationship

“G-1.0202a. They shall be declared a constituted congregation of the presbytery and shall proceed to the election of elders and deacons, making provision in cooperation with the presbytery for their preparation, examination, ordination, and installation.

“G-1.0202b. Presbytery shall continue to work closely with the congregation in securing pastoral leadership, in plans for the service and witness of the congregation, in coordinating its work with other churches, in counseling concerning bylaws for the congregation conforming to the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), and in giving other forms of support and encouragement that will strengthen the mission of the congregation in the larger life of the denomination.]”

2. G-1.04 and the Category of “Inactive” Members

The Revised Form of Government at G-1.04 does not include among the categories of membership a category of inactive members as is currently found at G-5.0203. The elimination of this category because of a focus on the meaning of membership may be shortsighted and a loss to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

It is a fact of life that there are individuals who have taken the promises of membership, and about whom the congregation has made promises of acceptance and support, who at some point find themselves not pursuing actively their ministry as members. Having a category of inactive members may administratively help a session to maintain its awareness of people for whom there is more work to be done. Eliminating the category of inactive members may help the session to maintain the fiction that people who are out of sight do not need to be kept in the session’s awareness, but the session’s ignorance of their existence does not cause these persons to become active. However, it is possible that such awareness on the part of the session can be maintained by keeping its own record of previously active members without having a category of “inactive members” mandated by the Form of Government.

If the assembly believes the inclusion of the category of inactive members is appropriate, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises that the 218th General Assembly (2008) approve the following provision as G-1.0404 of the proposed Form of Government, and renumber the current provision G-1.0404 as G-1.0405, before presenting it to the presbyteries for their approval or disapproval: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and an underline.]

“An inactive member of a particular church is one who does not participate in the church’s work and worship. An inactive member is entitled to all the rights and privileges of an active member except the right to speak in the meetings of the congregation and to vote and hold office.]

“~~1.0404~~ [1.0405] Other Participants [Text of this section remains unchanged.]

3. G-1.0502c and Congregational Meetings

As drafted, G-1.0502 provides:

Meetings of the congregation shall be called

- a. ...
- b. ...
- c. by the session when requested in writing by one fourth of the members on the roll of the congregation.

This sentence leaves open the possibility that baptized members and affiliate members could comprise all or part of the “one fourth” required to initiate the calling of a congregational meeting by the session. Greater clarity would be achieved by inserting the word “active” before members. It would then read: “c. by the session when requested in writing by one fourth of the active members on the roll of the congregation.”

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises that the 218th General Assembly (2008) approve the following revisions to G-1.0502c of the proposed Form of Government before presenting it to the presbyteries for their approval or disapproval: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and an underline.]

1.0502 Calling a Congregational Meeting

“Meetings of the congregation shall be called

“a. by the session,

“b. by the presbytery, or

“c. by the session when requested in writing by one fourth of the [active] members on the roll of the congregation.”

B. Chapter Two

1. G-2.0302a(6) and Validated Ministries

In G-2.0302a(6), the proposed Form of Government requires that a validated ministry shall “include proclamation of the Word and administration of the Sacraments.” The Advisory Committee on the Constitution views this proposed requirement as inconsistent with the original charge to the task force to provide for a more missional denomination, in that G-2.0302a(6) would not give the presbyteries maximum flexibility and discretion for mission in their bounds.

The intention of G-2.0302a(6) presumably is to relate all authorized ministry closely to a congregation by requiring that every active minister’s call or ministerial employment include leadership in ordered corporate worship. The report’s rationale states that the central work of ministers as teaching elders is performed “in classes, preaching, leading worship, administering the sacraments, pastoral care, and virtually all aspects of congregational life” (p. 22), suggesting that this “central work” is normative and as indicated in G-2.0302a(6) would properly exclude most non-parish service as ordered ministry. This reading is supported by the limits implied by G-3.0301a (the framework of presbytery’s power and responsibility to “provide that the Word is truly proclaimed and heard,” “provide that the Sacraments are rightly administered” and “nurture the covenant community through the upright ministry of ecclesiastical discipline”), although G-3.0307 states that those designated as “teachers, evangelists, administrators, chaplains and in other forms of ministry recognized as appropriate by the presbytery ... may administer the Sacraments at times and places as established by the presbytery” may be read as less restrictive.

Section G-2.0302a(6) seems inconsistent also with the description of the teaching elder in G-2.0301, in which a broader calling and a more differentiated overall ministry by the teaching eldership are affirmed than G-2.0302a(6) permits. (“As the Lord has set aside through calling certain members to be teaching elders to perform a particular ministry of the Word and Sacrament and has committed to them a variety of work, the church through the presbytery calls them to that service and responsibility. Teaching elders, also called ministers of the Word and Sacrament, shall be committed in all their work to equipping the people of God for their ministry and witness. ... The presbytery shall determine whether a particular work is a call to validated ministry requiring ordination as a minister of the Word and Sacrament.”)

It is not obvious that in its restriction on validated ministry G-2.0302a(6) expresses the mission of the church described in the Confession of 1967 (9.31), in particular the commitment to disperse into the world to serve God (9.35–.38). “A Brief Statement of Faith,” too, may be read as encouraging the church to undertake validated ministries in addition to the “central work” done by teaching elders in the life of the congregation (e.g., 10.4, lines 65–76).

The requirement that validated ministry must include preaching and administration of the sacraments requires a shift in the church’s understanding of how presbyteries are to order their ministries in mission. In keeping with the church’s continuing responsibilities for careful discernment and approval of its missional commitments, consideration of a restriction on ministry such as that in G-2.0302a(6) would be best approached as a matter separate from the approval or disapproval of the whole proposed Form of Government. The church’s decision on the missional and constitutional change represented by this single provision should be as clear and specific as possible, an outcome best served by separate consideration as a positive amendment to the Form of Government.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises that G-2.0302a(6) should be stricken, therefore the 218th General Assembly (2008) should approve Item 06-01, Recommendation C.3., which reads as follows:

“3. Shall G-2.0302a be amended by striking (6):

“(6) ~~include proclamation of the Word and administration of the Sacraments;~~”

2. G-2.0407d and Ordination Examinations

Section G-2.0407d of the proposed Form of Government eliminates the specification of areas to be covered by the examinations required of candidates for the ministry of Word and Sacrament by the Presbyteries' Cooperative Committee on Examinations for Candidates. The current provision in G-14.0431, which was amended by vote of the presbyteries in 2007, represents a significant reduction in specificity from the predecessor section on examinations, but identifies five areas of standard examination: Bible Content, Open Book Bible Exegesis, Theological Competence, Worship and Sacraments, and Church Polity. The new G-2.0407d in the proposed Form of Government states only,

- d. presentation of satisfactory grades, together with the examination papers in the areas covered by any standard ordination examination prepared and authorized by the Presbyteries' Cooperative Committee on Examinations for Candidates. [G-2.0407d]

The history of standard ordination examinations began with a report to the United Presbyterian Church General Assembly in 1965, followed by a report to the Presbyterian Church in the United States in 1976. The authorizing action in the UPCUSA (Minutes, UPCUSA, 1965, Part I, pp. 104–18) was based on the following understanding:

- (1) The ministry to which men [sic—throughout] are ordained is “intended to be within and to the ministry of the catholic or universal Church” (Form of Government, Chapter XII, Section 16, (1)), and not merely to a given presbytery.
- (2) Yet the power to examine and ordain ministers has traditionally in our communion been vested solely in the presbytery and in no other judicatory. (See Form of Government, Chapter XII, Section 7.)
- (3) The regulations respecting such examination and ordination, however, have always been formulated by the General Assembly through the due process of constitutional amendment with the requisite concurrence of a majority of the presbyteries. (See Form of Government, Chapter XXXIV, Section 3.)

The amendment adopted incorporated language proposing a uniform requirement of five trials, among them examinations in the four areas of Polity and Program of the UPCUSA; Theological Capability; Worship; and Open Book Bible Exegesis.

In 1977, the presbyteries of the Presbyterian Church in the United States adopted “G-14.0431 [formerly G-14.0310d.], Structure for Developing Standard Ordination Examinations” (Minutes, PCUS, Part I, 1976, p. 170), which included provision for standard examinations in four specific areas of content: Theology, Bible, Sacraments, and the Book of Church Order. At the time of reunion, the differences in the two processes were harmonized, and the subsequent provisions have been amended at various times.

There are two aspects of this history that bear on the present proposal:

- The requirements of the standard ordination examinations were intended to assist presbyteries in conducting their own examination of candidates, and therefore do not constitute “standards of ordination” as do the provisions in the current G-6.0000, for example. This determination is buttressed by the provision in the Constitution for processes to waive some or all of the examinations for exceptional candidates.
- Nevertheless, the areas of examination have historically been established and regulated by constitutional amendment through action of the General Assembly with the concurring vote of the presbyteries.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution, therefore, finds the omission in the proposed Form of Government of the specified areas of examination to be, while constitutional in the broad sense, a significant departure from both the historic practice of the church and the rationales underlying that practice. We further find that the relegation of the determination of areas of examination to the PCCEC to be sufficiently removed from both the direct voice of the presbyteries and the regulatory oversight of the General Assembly as to undermine the historic framework of accountability for standardized examinations.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution therefore advises the 218th General Assembly (2008) to either

- a. amend G-2.0407d to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and an underline.]

“d. presentation of satisfactory grades, together with the examination papers in the [following] areas covered by [any] standard ordination examination[s] prepared [~~and authorized~~] by the Presbyteries’ Cooperative Committee on Examinations for Candidates[-] [:]

“(5) Church Polity.]

or

b. amend G-2.0407d to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and an underline.]

“d. presentation of satisfactory grades, together with the examination papers in the areas covered by any standard ordination examination prepared and authorized by the Presbyteries’ Cooperative Committee on Examinations for Candidates. [The areas of examination shall be authorized by the General Assembly and incorporated into the manual of the General Assembly.]”

Contingent upon the approval by the presbyteries of the preceding amendment (B.2.b.), that the assembly incorporate the following language into the manual of the General Assembly in reference to G-2.0407d:

“The standard ordination examinations prepared by the Presbyteries’ Cooperative Committee on Examinations for Candidates shall include:

“(5) Church Polity.”

C. Chapter Three and the Funding of the Denomination

The final paragraph of Section 3.0107 addresses the funding of the governing bodies of the church. The proposed language seeks to move the church away from the use of the term “per capita,” and toward treatment of the funds received by councils of the church that does not distinguish between those funds used to carry out the constitutional responsibilities of the church and its mission. While the task force takes the view that all activity of the church is “missional,” the issue of funding of the church has a long and at times contentious history in which certain principles have been applied:

1. Mission funding, at least in the historic UPCUSA, was kept separate from per capita funding for carrying out the constitutional functions of the church. While at times similar language regarding the obligations of the officers of the church to support financially the mission of the whole church has been adopted by General Assemblies—see Minutes, 1934, Part I, p. 110 (“A church member or individual church that will not give to promote the officially authorized missionary program of the Presbyterian Church is in exactly the same position with reference to the Constitution of the Church as a church member or individual church that would refuse to take part in the celebration of the Lord’s Supper or any of the other prescribed ordinances of the denomination . . .”)—as a whole the church has taken the view that sessions have much broader discretion in allocating benevolences received to the mission funding of the church.

2. The underlying history of per capita apportionment that led to the inclusion of the current G-9.0404d reflects the long practice of apportioning governing body expenses to lower governing bodies. It was, and is, based on the decision of the governing body regarding expenses proposed in a budget. As such there was, and is, opportunity for debate and all of the attendant procedures of debate and amendment prior to the approval of the budget and the affixing of the apportionment amount.

3. While the decisions of the GAPJC (Minihan v. Presbytery of Scioto Valley, Minutes, 2004, Part I, p. 350; Johnston v. Presbytery of Heartland, Minutes, 2006, Part I, p. 462) suggest that a presbytery may not take any action to compel the payment of per capita, the decisions states in clear and strong terms that officers of the church individually have a high moral obligation to support the payment of per capita by session to higher governing bodies.

4. The meaning of the current provision of the Form of Government at G-9.0404d clearly identifies the underlying polity of per capita apportionment. That is, the underlying polity of a representative governing body binding the governing body through its decision-making process (see G-4.0301). Clearly, commissioners participating in the decision-making are binding the governing body from which they are commissioned. The commissioners at the General Assembly and the synod are from presbyteries; in the presbytery, the commissioners are from constituent churches.

5. The authoritative interpretation approved in 1999 (Minutes, 1999, Part I, p. 107) regarding the obligation of presbyteries to pay per capita to higher governing bodies is strongly dictated by the language of G-9.0404d. No other principled interpretation of G-9.0404d as it pertains to the obligation of presbyteries to pay per capita to higher governing bodies is possible.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution has in the past advised the General Assembly that greater clarity as to a session's obligation to remit per capita to higher governing bodies (or councils in the current language) would be consistent with the existing language of G-9.0404d and with the fundamental relationship between those governing bodies. The revisions in this section, however, do not add clarity to the situation, but rather opt for new language that may be interpreted in a variety of ways. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution does not believe that the interests of the church are served by substituting potentially ambiguous language for language that has at least benefited from a number of years of debate and interpretation.

If the 218th General Assembly (2008) agrees with these concerns, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises that the assembly modify the last paragraph of 3.0107 to read as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and an underline.]

“The funding of mission similarly demonstrates the unity and interdependence of the church. The failure of any part of the church to participate in the stewardship of the mission of the whole church diminishes that unity and interdependence. All mission funding should enable the church to give effective witness in the world to the new reality of God in Jesus Christ. Each council shall prepare an annual budget, which shall include a budget for its operating expenses, including administrative personnel, and may fund it with a per capita apportionment among the particular congregations within its bounds. [~~Councils higher than the session may request funds for their mission and for support of the meetings and ongoing functions through which the interdependence of the church is lived out.~~] Presbyteries are responsible for raising their own [per capita] funds and for raising and timely transmission of [requested] [per capita] funds to their respective synods and the General Assembly. Presbyteries may [apportion requested funds] [direct per capita apportionments] to sessions within their bounds.”

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 06-01, RECOMMENDATION C.3.

Advice on Item 06-01, Recommendation C.3.—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

In its advice regarding the proposed G-2.0302a, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advised removing the requirement of “proclamation of the Word and administration of the Sacraments” in the proposed Form of Government. Therefore, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises approving Recommendation C.3.

ACREC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 06-01

Advice and Counsel on Item 06-01—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC).

While not advocating for the approval of Item 06-01 Report of the Task Force on the Form of Government, the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) advises that serious consideration be given by the 218th General Assembly (2008) to the following two factors and possibilities:

1. Should the 218th General Assembly (2008) choose to approve receiving the report of the FOG Task Force and to provide for a two-year, church-wide study, with report to the 219th General Assembly (2010), ACREC advises that the comment from the General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR), together with related material in Item 06-16 (On Revising the FOG Report's G-3.0104 Regarding Committees to Advocate for Diversity—from the Presbytery of Philadelphia) be appended to and cited for serious consideration as part of the two-year, church-wide study; ...or, in the alternative,

2. Should the 218th General Assembly (2008) choose to approve the report and recommendations of the FOG Task Force and send those items to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative vote, ACREC advises that the GACOR comment on Item 06-01, together with related material in Item 06-16 (On Revising the FOG G-3.01404 Regarding Committees to Advocate for Diversity—From the Presbytery of Philadelphia) be given prayerful and careful consideration, in both the appropriate committees and plenary sessions of General Assembly, in order to include these foundational amendments to the recommendations of the FOG Task Force Report.

COGA COMMENT ON ITEM 06-01

Comment on Item 06-01—From the Committee on the Office of the General Assembly.

The Committee on the Office of the General Assembly (COGA) commends the Form of Government Task Force for its careful work on its proposed new Form of Government (FOG), noting that the task force has fully addressed all the criteria assigned it by the commissioners to the 217th General Assembly (2006).<sup>1</sup> The COGA urges the 218th General Assembly (2008) to send the proposal to the presbyteries for their careful consideration and approval.

1. In reviewing the FOG proposal, the COGA urges the commissioners to support the suggestions made by several of the committees to which we are related.

a. The alternative language proposed by the Advisory Committee on the Constitution regarding new proposed G-3.0107 (requested funds) to restore the language of “per capita” funds, to ensure future financial viability of the church (see ACC advice on Item 06-01).

b. The General Assembly Committee on Representation has suggested a minor change in the language of F-3.0104 to explicitly require a structure called the “Committee on Representation” (see GACOR comment).

c. The Presbyterian Historical Society has urged the retention of most of current G-9.0406 in place of proposed new G-3.0108 to ensure the retention of historical records of the church.

d. The General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission has proposed that in section G-3.0501, where the process for authoritatively interpreting the Constitution is described, that after the phrase, “in accordance with the provisions of G-6.02,” the following words be added, “or through a decision of the General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission in a remedial or disciplinary case. (The most recent interpretation of the Book of Order shall be binding.)” This would make clear that authoritative interpretations are made one of two ways: by action of the General Assembly after the advice of the Advisory Committee on the Constitution has been considered or by a decision of the Permanent Judicial Commission of the General Assembly.

2. A number of overtures (Item 06-02, et al) request that the General Assembly ask the church to study the FOG proposal and delay action on it until the 219th General Assembly (2010).

The COGA notes that the commissioners of the 217th General Assembly (2006) believed that there was “urgency in moving from the current regulatory Form of Government” to a different kind of Constitution. The commissioners of the 217th General Assembly (2006) shared the presbyteries’ belief that the church would need time to carefully study such a new style and approach and directed that a draft of the full document be “released by September 1, 2007.” The COGA notes that the task force posted a draft of the full FOG in September.

The COGA reminds the commissioners to the 218th General Assembly (2008) that this is the fifth proposal to revise our Form of Government since 1993.<sup>2</sup> If the commissioners of the 218th General Assembly (2008) determine that the study and consideration of the proposal that would naturally occur in the presbyteries, as they considered it for approval, would be inadequate, but instead believe still further consideration and study by the wider church is necessary, the COGA proposes that the commissioners of the 218th General Assembly (2008) authorize a more extensive examination of this proposed Form of Government than has been made in any of those five previous proposals, one that gives every interested Presbyterian an opportunity to consider and review it.

However, if the commissioners to the 218th General Assembly (2008) believe such a study is necessary and wise, the COGA proposes that it be authorized to:

- Develop a study process that would engage every presbytery, assisting the presbyteries to engage their members in an examination of this proposed Form of Government.
- Make use as needed of task force members, the Office of the General Assembly, and other interested parties in designing and carrying out this study.

- Collect all suggestions gathered in those studies and consultations and forward them on to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution for considerations for modifying the current proposal.
- The COGA further advises that the Office of the General Assembly be directed to bring such amended Form of Government proposal to the 219th General Assembly (2010).

Endnotes

1. (1) The new Form of Government shall preserve our foundational polity (perhaps most concisely laid out in the first four chapters of the current Form of Government).
  - (2) The focus of the Form of Government shall be on providing leadership for local congregations as missional communities.
  - (3) The presbytery shall continue as the central governmental unit, as it has been throughout most of our history. The Form of Government shall provide sufficient authority and flexibility to allow the presbytery to assist congregations in addressing the changing cultural, economic, and societal challenges in our new millennial world. The FOG Task Force shall take notice of and address the institutional and structural impediments that currently cripple so very many of our presbyteries.
  - (4) The new Form of Government shall provide flexibility at all levels, granting authority while permitting governing bodies to develop the structures to carry out their respective missions.
  - (5) The FOG Task Force shall be guided by the principles proposed by Recommendations 1–4 from the Theological Task Force on the Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church, using those principles as a guide for its own processes and deliberations. They shall incorporate this new Presbyterian ethos into the Form of Government so that it truly functions as the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)’s guidebook for mission. (Minutes, 2006, Part I, p. 366)
2. The Historic Context of the Work of the Form of Government Task Force

Efforts to revise the Form of Government have been before General Assemblies for least fifteen years. Throughout that time, the consistent theme has been the impetus to restore a sense of “constitutionality” to the language of the Form of Government. Proposals for revision have sought, by various means, to maintain clarity about national standards while reducing the amount of process-oriented material that might be handled in different ways by different parts of the church.

1993

The Special Committee on the Nature of the Church and the Practice of Governance reported to the 205th General Assembly (1993). It suggested that the content of the Form of Government could be divided into standards and functions that should remain uniform across the church, and practices and processes about which there might reasonably be a greater degree of freedom and diversity. The assembly referred the matter of a systematic review of the Form of Government to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

1996–97

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommended to the 208th General Assembly (1996) that the Advisory Committee on the Constitution be charged with creating a Form of Government divided into three components: (1) foundational principles, (2) binding policies, and (3) advisory practices, and that the new draft be presented to the 213th General Assembly (2001). In addition, the 209th General Assembly (1997) referred to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution an overture from the Presbytery of West Virginia to create a Form of Government

- that is true to the historic principles of polity in the PC(USA);
- that will serve as a constitutional reference, “encouraging creativity with broad strokes of wisdom”; and
- that will “empower governing bodies . . . and celebrate the diversity of the church.”

1999

In its progress report to the 212th General Assembly (2000), the Advisory Committee on the Constitution offered drafts of Chapters X and XI of the Form of Government that divided the contents into foundational, policy, and practice categories. It also suggested that a draft of the entire Form of Government, reduced to include only foundational principles, be circulated among the church for study and comment. The assembly chose to refer the report back to the Advisory Committee on the Constitution for further refinement and report to the next assembly.

2000

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution report to the 212th General Assembly (2000) included a draft revision of Chapter XIV that reduced its contents to broadly stated principles and standards, while removing much of the process oriented material to advisory handbooks. The assembly approved the document for study and comment.

2001–02

The 213th General Assembly (2001) sent to presbyteries a proposal to revise the contents of Chapter XIV along the lines of the 2000 Advisory Committee on the Constitution recommendation. While the amendment was defeated in presbyteries (29-141-2), there was the sense that the problems were not so much with the overall concept as with particular aspects of the proposal. The following year, the 214th General Assembly (2002) asked the Office of the General Assembly to propose a systematic revision of the Form of Government along the lines of the proposed revisions to Chapter XIV, and to report its work to the 217th General Assembly (2006).

The Office of the General Assembly requested and received permission to conduct an extensive series of consultations with various constituencies in the church regarding both the theory and style of revision of the Form of Government deemed most desirable.

2006

The Office of the General Assembly reported its work to the 217th General Assembly (2006) in two parts:

1. A revision of Chapter XIV, similar in content and approach to the revision proposed in 2001, but with several options for dealing with potentially controversial aspects of change. The amendment was approved and is now Chapter XIV of the Book of Order.

2. The creation of a Form of Government Task Force, to be charged with revising the entire Form of Government to create a document that preserves the foundational elements of Presbyterian polity, provides leadership and support for congregations as missional units, and maintains the presbytery as the central governmental unit of the church. The task force was required to release the proposed Form of Government including advisory handbooks by September 1, 2007.

The Form of Government Task Force completed work on its initial draft in September and shared the document broadly within the church. Following a period of comment and critique, the task force submitted its final report to the Stated Clerk's office in December, in anticipation of presentation to the 218th General Assembly (2008).

GACOR COMMENT ON ITEM 06-01

Comment on Item 06-01—From the General Assembly Committee on Representation.

The Form of Government Task Force Report proposes to amend the Book of Order by deleting Chapters I–IV of the current Book of Order and inserting a new section entitled “Foundations of Presbyterian Polity.”

The General Assembly Committee on Representation (GACOR) advises that the language of the second paragraph of G-3.0104 of the proposed amendment use the substitute language from Recommendation C.4. in the Additional Recommendations section of the Report of the FOG Task Force, with one additional amendment, and, as so amended, be approved in the event that the changes proposed by the FOG Task Force to Chapters I–IV of the Book of Order are approved: [Text to be deleted is shown with brackets and with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]

“4. Shall the second paragraph of G-3.0104 be amended by inserting new text as follows:

““Each council shall develop procedures and mechanisms for promoting and reviewing that body’s implementation of the church’s commitment to inclusiveness and representation. Councils above the session [~~may establish committees~~] [shall establish committees on representation] to advocate for diversity in leadership.”

Rationale

At the time of Reunion, the concern was raised that minority populations so long denied a voice at the leadership table would have their voices silenced, not intentionally, but due to the dilution of their visibility in the geographical governing bodies that would be formed. To address this concern, the creative solution of the committee on representation (COR) emerged and was incorporated in the Articles of Agreement (Article 8), which led to the creation of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

Article 8 was included, not only out of reasons and concerns for fairness, but specifically to induce the former non-geographic presbyteries and synods of both of the former streams to vote for and approve the Articles of Agreement and the reunion. Many of the leaders of those former racial ethnic presbyteries were greatly concerned that those leaders would lose their voices and influence if their churches were realigned into strictly geographic presbyteries. The provisions of Article 8 were included to reassure them that racial ethnic persons would continue to be involved in the leadership of the various governing bodies after the racial ethnic presbyteries disappeared. It thus appears that the racial ethnic presbyteries of the former churches were enticed to accept and approve in 1983 the reunion in reliance on the implicit assurance that the provisions of Article 8 would always remain in effect to attempt to ensure inclusiveness in the decision-making of the church. Now, as we seek to restructure our Form of Government, the GACOR submits that we have a promise to keep and, therefore, that CORs should be retained.

Another consideration is that the Articles of Agreement and the Constitution of the PC(USA) are separate, but related, documents. There are provisions in the Articles of Agreement which note that the “two parties to the original agreement will no longer be in existence as separate churches and hence the agreement cannot thereafter be altered” (Preamble, Paragraph 2). Out of the process of agreement, a constitution of the denomination was established (The Book of Confessions, combined with the Book of Order), which “is subject to amendment in accordance with its provisions” (Preamble, Paragraph 3). The Constitution may be a more complete and detailed statement of procedure or polity (such as the Book of Order) and may be (and has been) amended. However, there is no proviso for amending the Articles of Agreement. In this regard, it is to be noted that while many of the articles of the Articles of Agreement provide by their terms that they are temporary or transitional provisions, Article 8 contains no such provision. This is a clear indication that the drafters of the Articles of Agreement did not intend for Article 8 to disappear or wither away.

At Christ’s table, they shall come from east and west and north and south, be neither male nor female, slave nor free, Gentile nor Jew. Diversity speaks to so much more than what our racial ethnic heritage happens to be. If we were to remove the structure of the COR, there will no longer be in place a mechanism for measuring our accountability for respecting and responding to the diversity within our communities. One aspect to be considered is this: if the work of representation is not being accomplished while there is a structural, legal, and moral requirement, why do we assume that removing the necessity of that structure will be the impetus for that work to begin or the encouragement for it to continue? To ensure that there remains a strong voice for representation and diversity, not just those which are obvious, such as race or gender, but all of the areas of diversity our denomination is called to faithfully bring to the table, it is crucial that there be in place a mechanism for ensuring that they be granted that voice at all governing body levels above the session.

Humanity still has a long way to go in reaching the goal of representation. Yet it is important to maintain within our Form of Government this creative innovation of our heritage. There is great value in a ministry of presence. By retaining the COR, we assert that we continue to believe that inclusiveness in our leadership should be one of those high ideals we seek to attain.

The role of the COR is to serve by raising awareness of the places where we have fallen short of the goal. We continue to exclude when larger church representation holds the purse strings of smaller congregations or when committees comprised of retired members determine the funding of activities for youth and young adults without their representation on the committees. We continue to exclude others when our systems discourage elders from placing their names in nomination to moderate committees at General Assembly. We continue to exclude others when meetings are held in places that are difficult for the mobility impaired to negotiate. It should not simply be the responsibility of those directly affected to raise these concerns. The PC(USA) has not only a promise to keep, but also a challenge to accept, to continue the work begun at the time of reunion, and to seek to live out the Kingdom of God in this place and time to the best of our ability.

The GACOR would advise the commissioners to the 218th General Assembly (2008) to include this amendment to the recommendation of the FOG Task Force.

The GACOR advises that, in the event that the changes proposed by the FOG Task Force to Chapters I–IV of the Book of Order are approved, Section F-3.0303 of the “Foundations of Presbyterian Polity” of the Book of Order be amended by inserting between the second and third sentences of F-3.0303 the language found in the last sentence of current G-4.0403, to read as follows: [Text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and with an underline.]:

“3.0303 Diversity and Inclusiveness

“As the unity of the One God is expressed in the diverse activity of the Trinity, so also the unity of the Church is expressed in the rich diversity of its membership. The Church is called to give full expression in its membership to the diversity of the human family, and shall be responsive to that diversity in its worship, government, and emerging life. [Persons of all racial ethnic groups, different ages, both sexes, various disabilities, diverse geographical areas, different theological positions consistent with the Reformed tradition, as well as different marital conditions (married, single, widowed, or divorced) shall be guaranteed full participation and access to representation in the decision making of the church.] It shall not deny participation or representation to persons or groups within its membership for any reasons other than those stated in this Constitution.”

Rationale

Adding this sentence would make it clear that we as a church are committed to nondiscrimination and affirmatively seek to include those groups that have often been excluded from full participation in the church and its leadership.

Item 06-02

[The assembly answered Item 06-02 by the action taken on Item 06-01. See p. 21.]

On Entrusting the Proposed FOG Revision to the Church for at Least Two Years—From the Presbytery of Mississippi.

The Presbytery of Mississippi overtures the 218th General Assembly (2008) to do the following:

1. Receive the report and recommendations of the Form of Government (FOG) Task Force, and
2. Entrust the proposed FOG revision to the church for at least a two-year period of study, discernment, and consideration of the advisability of further action.

Rationale

The Form of Government Task Force was established by the 217th General Assembly (2006) to prepare a revised Form of Government (FOG) for the church's consideration. The task force was directed to issue its report to the church no later than September 1, 2007, to allow sessions, presbyteries, and synods ample time to study the proposed FOG and, if necessary, suggest amendments to it. This simply has not provided enough time for governing bodies to comprehend fully, let alone critique effectively, this lengthy and important document before the deadline for introducing business related to constitutional changes.

For example, the Mississippi Presbytery Council met on September 27, and appointed a committee of four to study the proposed Foundations and FOG. The committee was instructed to make a recommendation to the presbytery, which met on October 25. During their necessarily swift study of the proposed Foundations and FOG, different members of the committee came to widely disparate conclusions, ranging from a desire to vote down the whole project, to a desire to significantly rework the documents. More time to study both documents would probably have yielded greater agreement, but more time was not available if the presbytery was to be able to take action in October.

There is simply no need to rush the acceptance of what even the members of the task force recognize to be a radical change in our church's governance. A period of study and discernment of at least two years in length will cost us nothing, and will undoubtedly result in a stronger Form of Government that will serve the church well for years to come.

Concurrence to Item 06-02 from the Presbytery of Santa Barbara (with Additional Rationale).

Rationale

The Form of Government Task Force preempts the question many are thinking in its FOG PowerPoint presentation (www.pcusa.org/formofgovernment/fall-polity-fog.ppt — Oct 25, 2007): "Given the current tensions in the PC(USA), is this the right time to be making large-scale changes in the way we govern the church? Some have suggested that there is too little trust in the church to permit changing the Book of Order at this time." Their answer is less than satisfying: "We build trust only by trusting each other ... as we form new patterns of relationship." Circular "reasoning" and nebulous wording such as this are part of what promote and sustain a season of mistrust, as what is often written nowadays is less transparent and straightforward than the well-articulated language of the past. If comprehensive changes to our polity are to be accomplished, then patience, trust, and unhurried deliberation are crucial qualities we need to cultivate for the process and outcome to be successful. We therefore recommend the church postpone the approval of the FOG in favor of a two-year period of careful study.

---

Concurrence to Item 06-02 from the Presbytery of Philadelphia (with additional rationale).

Rationale

The rewrite of the Form of Government is an impressive and complicated piece of work. The extensive changes to our polity proposed by the Form of Government Task Force require a period of study and discernment to consider whether and how such extensive changes will benefit our life together and whether further changes might improve the document. Since the proposal already involves significant changes at every level of our government, including but not limited to terminology, processes, how rules are written and adopted, and how standards are applied, study by every level of the church is needed. The study necessarily includes not only the changes for a single level of government but also the implications of changes for every other level. Prior to asking the governing bodies to vote on this document, the well being of the whole church requires a period of study. It is the practice of Presbyterians not to rush into changes of such magnitude without careful examination of the pros and cons as well as to look for the unintended consequences of the proposed changes. We do not believe that the period of time allowed for the study of the new Form of Government is sufficient.

In a time when trust is a serious issue in the church, an extended time of ensuring that each governing body has opportunity to read the proposed document carefully and reflect on the implications of the changes is an opportunity for building trust.

Concurrence to Item 06-02 from the Presbytery of San Fernando (with Additional Rationale).

Rationale

The Form of Government Task Force was established by the 217th General Assembly (2006) to prepare a revised Form of Government (FOG) for possible adoption by the church. The task force was directed to have the report sufficiently completed by September 1, 2007, so that sessions, presbyteries, and synods might review, comment, and possibly recommend amendments.

Even though the task force worked hard to keep the church abreast of its progress by way of the Web site of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and various church publications, the Presbytery of San Fernando believes that there has not been sufficient time for needed study. We had a two-hour meeting of presbytery in an effort to understand the task force report. The only consensus reached was that much more time is needed and so this overture was approved.

Members of the task force recognize that this proposal is for radical changes in the governance of the church. Two years of study will cost us nothing and could well result in a stronger Form of Government to serve the church in years to come.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 06-02

Advice on Item 06-02—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee of the Constitution advises the 218th General Assembly (2008) regarding Item 06-02 with the following comment:

The 218th General Assembly (2008) is presented with a large volume of business surrounding the report and recommendations of the Form of Government Task Force. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution offers the following general comments as a way of helping commissioners structure their thinking about this important matter. The overview presented here is not meant to be exhaustive; commissioners may devise other solutions that meet the needs of the assembly. In addition, this overview is not intended to offer specific advice about particular overtures, but only to categorize the various overtures before the assembly. For the ACC's specific advice on any overture, please consult the comments on that overture.

Option 1: Approve the Recommendations of the Form of Government Task Force and instruct the Stated Clerk to send them to the presbyteries for their positive or negative vote.

This option would involve no amendments or changes by the assembly to the recommendations. Under this option, the report and recommendations would be approved and communicated to the presbyteries.

Option 2: Disapprove the Recommendations of the Form of Government Task Force.

Under this option, the assembly would defeat the recommendations, terminating the matter.

Option 3: Approve the Recommendations of the Form of Government Task Force with amendment, and instruct the Stated Clerk to send them to the presbyteries for their positive or negative vote.

This option contemplates that the assembly would amend one or more provisions of the recommendations that fall into several groups:

Items recommending specific rewording of the report:

- Item 06-15 from Philadelphia Presbytery recommends amendment to the language of proposed G-2.0303b and to the accompanying additional Recommendation #1 concerning the possibility that an interim pastor might succeed as the next installed pastor with supermajority approval of presbytery.
- Item 06-16 from Philadelphia Presbytery recommends retaining all references to the committee on representation, specifically including, but not limited to any sections in the proposed Form of Government that correspond to the current sections G-9.0105, G-9.0106, G-9.0801, G-11.0302, G-12.0301, and G-13.0108.
- Item 0-13 from Foothills Presbytery recommends that multiple amendments be made to the language of both the proposed Foundations for Presbyterian Polity and the proposed Form of Government to reflect various theological concerns.
- The ACC's own advice offers several proposals for amendments to language in the proposed Foundations and Form of Government.

Overtures concerning the procedure by which the recommendations are approved:

- Items 06-11 and 06-12 from Northumberland and Huntingdon Presbyteries recommend that the proposed Foundations and Form of Government be sent to the presbyteries for vote, the former following the 218th General Assembly (2008) and the latter after the 219th General Assembly (2010), but that a two-thirds majority be required for approval of either. The ACC advises the assembly that these overtures pose constitutional problems; commissioners should consult the ACC's advice on these overtures.

Overtures and proposals involving provisional approval:

- Item 06-14 from Detroit Presbytery recommends that current G-18.0300 be amended to allow a small group of presbyteries to test the usefulness of the proposed Foundations and Form of Government, before sending them to the whole denomination for approval. The ACC, in its response to Item 06-14, suggests a process by which the church might vote to approve the proposed Foundations and Form of Government, but with the provision that the approval would be reviewed after a defined period of time, and upon review either made permanent or reversed.

If the assembly determines that none of the above options are acceptable, or if it is not prepared to move forward with any of them, it may consider the following option:

Option 4: Refer the Report and Recommendations for further study.

A number of overtures have suggested that the report and recommendations of the Form of Government Task Force be referred for additional study.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the assembly that it should consider the purpose of such a study. If the purpose of the referral is to provide opportunity for longer and more careful study of the proposed polity, then the ACC advises the assembly that some means and process will be necessary to accomplish the study, so that the church may be better prepared to vote on the revisions than it is at present. If the purpose of the referral is to delay action because of opposition to the proposed revision, the ACC reminds the assembly that the most effective way to oppose a proposed action is to speak and vote against it, rather than to postpone action with no plan for bringing more light to the discussion.

Overtures proposing referral for further study fall into two groups:

Overtures recommending referral to the 219th General Assembly (2010) but without provision for a mechanism for study:

- Items 06-02 (Mississippi Presbytery), 06-03 (Sacramento Presbytery), 06-04 (Donegal Presbytery), 06-05 (Southern New England Presbytery), 06-08 (Plains and Peaks Presbytery), and 06-09 (Foothills Presbytery) all recommend referral to the 219th General Assembly (2010), but they make no provision by which a church-wide study of the proposed revisions would take place or data from such a study gathered.

Overtures recommending referral to the 219th General Assembly (2010), but specifying the involvement of the Form of Government Task Force in accomplishing a study:

- Item 06-06 from Middle Tennessee Presbytery recommends that the task force “solicit feedback” on the proposed revisions.
- Item 06-07 from East Tennessee Presbytery recommends that the task force be assigned to “develop a plan for the development, review, and approval” of its recommendations.

Recommendation from COGA for a study plan:

If the General Assembly believes that further study of the proposed revisions to the Form of Government is warranted, it may wish to consider the study plan offered by the Committee on the General Assembly by which sessions and presbyteries may study the proposed revision.

Effect of Amendments to the Current Form of Government on the Revised Form of Government

The Stated Clerk has indicated to presbyteries that they might “propose the placement and language for both the current Form of Government and the revised Form of Government.” He further indicated that presbyteries might prefer to offer one substantive overture to the current Form of Government, even though such proposals might have an impact on the language of the revised Form of Government. In the latter case, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution will suggest placement and, if necessary, specific language to accomplish the intent of the overture in the revision.

ACREC AND ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 06-02

Advice and Counsel on Item 06-02—From the Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) and the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC).

Item 06-02 urges the 218th General Assembly (2008) to receive the Form of Government (FOG) Task Force’s report and recommendations and to entrust to the church the proposed FOG revision for at least a two-year period of study, discernment, and consideration of the advisability of further action.

The Advocacy Committee for Racial Ethnic Concerns (ACREC) and the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC) advise that this item be approved.

Rationale

The advocacy committees urge the assembly to approve a two-year period of study of the report of the Form of Government Task Force. We believe in a powerful, discerning, Holy Spirit whose work helps us be attuned to God’s work in our midst. With more time, the acumen of many eyes, and the deliberation of many minds, a more perfect document may be presented to a future assembly. Catching problems and omissions will make this work stronger, build appreciation, and allow time for the whole church to move to an appropriate document.

The Constitution of the Presbyterian Church has changed through history reflecting our Reformed understanding of how we are the church with one another. The Presbyterian process is labor intensive, but it is a valuable expenditure of time and energy. The Task Force on the Peace, Unity, and Purity of the Church report (2006) provided wise guidance for future action. Deliberate and careful concern has been exercised in our Book of Order to caution against our sinful and unconscious biases throughout history. The church has amended the Book of Order to protect the rights of marginalized communities and to amplify squelched or silenced voices. Simplifying the document without due regard to these important safeguards for justice is troubling. We recommend that the period of study include consideration of the following questions.

1. Is the church’s commitment to justice visible in the proposed Form of Government?
2. Does the document reflect the church’s theology in its wording and structure?

3. Is the language clear and consistent with our values?
4. How will the appendices of the current Book of Order inform the new Form of Government?
5. How is accountability exercised in the proposed Form of Government?

The study process would be strengthened if the document were translated into the languages of PC(USA) members (at minimum Korean and Spanish). If the shared vision is for a more multicultural church, then all of our members, especially our marginalized language groups, should fully participate in the study process. As the church deliberates, it will continue to perfect the document, so that it will do justice for the whole church and continue the faithful Presbyterian witness to Jesus the Christ.

Item 06-03

[The assembly answered Item 06-03 by the action taken on Item 06-01. See p. 21.]

On Entrusting the Proposed FOG Revision to the Church for at Least Two Years, and Dismissing the Task Force with Gratitude—From the Presbytery of Sacramento.

The Presbytery of Sacramento overtures the 218th General Assembly (2008) to receive the report and recommendations of the Form of Government (FOG) Task Force; dismiss the task force with gratitude; entrust the work of the task force for at least a two-year period of prayer, study, discernment from Holy Spirit, and consideration of further action in order not to rush a decision about a complete rewrite of eighteen chapters of our Book of Order.

Rationale

We do indeed acknowledge with gratitude the extraordinary time, dedication, and commitment of the FOG Task Force in their rewrite of the PC(USA) Form of Government in the current Book of Order. However, we are deeply concerned about the timeline for consideration of all these many and vast changes. The task force was directed to issue its report to the church no later than September 1, 2007. The report was not posted on the PC(USA) Web site until September 19, 2007; furthermore, the task force has been given permission by the Stated Clerk to change its proposed draft up until February 22, 2008, the deadline for submitting to the General Assembly overtures that amend the Book of Order.

Just as the task force has needed additional time, so do the churches need even far greater time to attempt to begin an understanding of what has transpired in this rewrite. We have been told that the new FOG version reduces confusion found in the first four chapters of the current FOG, yet we find the new FOG lacking much of the clarifying detail of the current FOG. We note radical changes, such as removal of most policies and procedures, removal of the category of inactive member, allowing an interim pastor to be called as the next installed minister of a congregation, and abolishing the requirement for the existence of certain committees—such as the committee on representation, the committee on ministry, and the committee on preparation for ministry.

In the Foundations section (which is not to be amended for six years), we note that the simplicity and clarity of G-3.0300a (“The Church is called to tell the good news of salvation by the grace of God through faith in Jesus Christ as the only Savior and Lord....”) is gone, replaced by many words; and a failing to acknowledge Jesus as the only Savior and Lord.

The extensive content changes (from the subtle to the radical) proposed by this entire rewrite cause us to seek an extended period of at least two years for prayer, thorough study, discernment, and wisdom from Holy Spirit. We believe this is our responsibility to our congregations for a change to the Book of Order of such a great magnitude.

Concurrence to Item 06-03 from the Presbytery of St. Andrew (with Additional Rationale).

The 217th General Assembly (2006) established the Form of Government Task Force and directed it to prepare a revised Form of Government (FOG) for the church’s consideration and to issue its report to the church no later than September 1, 2007, to allow sessions, presbyteries, and synods ample time to study the proposed FOG and, if necessary, suggest amendments to it, so that the new FOG might be considered at the 218th General Assembly (2008). The FOG Task Force did not complete its work until September 19, 2007, when it posted the first draft of the recommended changes to the PC(USA) Website.

The extensive changes to our polity proposed by the FOG Task Force require a period of study and discernment to consider whether and how such extensive changes will benefit our life together and whether further changes might improve the document. Since the proposal involves significant changes at every level of our government, including but not limited to terminology, processes, how rules are written and adopted, and how standards are applied, study by every level of the church is needed.

The deadline for proposed amendments to the proposed new FOG by way of presbytery approved overtures is February 22, 2008. This simply has not provided enough time for governing bodies to comprehend fully, let alone critique effectively this lengthy and important document before the deadline for introducing business related to constitutional changes.

It is the practice of Presbyterians not to rush into changes of such magnitude without careful examination of the pros and cons as well as to look for the unintended consequences of the proposed changes. In a time when trust is a serious issue in the church, an extended time of ensuring that each governing body has opportunity to read the proposed document carefully and reflect on the implications of the changes is an opportunity for building trust.

There is nothing to be gained by rushing the approval of what even the members of the FOG Task Force recognize to be a radical change in our church's governance. A period of study and discernment of at least two years in length will only serve to ensure that the proposed changes to the Form of Government will be in the best interest of the church.

On Commending the FOG Task Force and Submitting the Work of the Task Force to the Church for Study—From the Presbytery of Donegal.

The Presbytery of Donegal overtures the 218th General Assembly (2008) to commend the work of the Form of Government Task Force and that the work of the task force be submitted to the church for study that may bring this or any other revision of the Form of Government to the 219th General Assembly (2010) for consideration.

Rationale

The rewrite of the Form of Government is an impressive and complicated work. The extensive changes to polity proposed by the Form of Government Task Force require a reasonable period of study by the whole church. There is no compelling need to rush the process and no further expense to be incurred by the General Assembly. The proposal involves significant changes at every level of our government that include new terminology and new processes to adopt rules and standards. Therefore, prior to asking governing bodies to vote on this document, the well-being of the whole church requires a reasonable time for study. A reasonable time for consideration also provides an opportunity to build trust.

On Postponing Final Consideration of a Substitute FOG Until Such Time as a Revision May Be Submitted by a Presbytery to a Subsequent Assembly—From the Presbytery of Southern New England.

The Presbytery of Southern New England overtures the 218th General Assembly (2008) to receive the report and recommendations of the Form of Government (FOG) Task Force; dismiss the task force with thanks; entrust the work of the task force, made available as a web posting, to the church for at least a two-year period of study, discernment, and consideration of further action; and postpone final consideration of a substitute Form of Government until such time as this or any other revision of the Form of Government may be submitted by a presbytery as an overture to a subsequent General Assembly.

Rationale

The rewrite of the Form of Government is an impressive and complicated piece of work and our sessions and presbytery have not had the adequate time of reflection and study together to digest and understand the significance of this new Form of Government.

Since the proposal already involves significant changes at every level of our government, including but not limited to terminology, processes, how rules are written and adopted, and how standards are applied, study by every level of the church is needed. The study necessarily includes not only the changes for a single level of government but also the implications of changes for every other level. Prior to asking the governing bodies to vote on this document, the well-being of the whole church requires a period of study.

While we are excited about the possibility of creative solutions and clearer guidance in our life together as a presbytery and denomination, it would be irresponsible for us as individuals and governing bodies to approve a new Form of Government without time to listen to God. We have learned that discernment and listening to God's will cannot be rushed. As faithful stewards of the past and future of this denomination, we desire more time for discernment and study that will enable us to have a more adequate space to consider how such extensive changes will benefit our life together and whether further changes might improve the document.

In a time when trust is a serious issue in the church, an extended time of ensuring that each governing body has opportunity to read the proposed document carefully and reflect on the implications of the changes is an opportunity for building trust.

The task force has provided documents and resources to aid in such study. Governing bodies will have other resources available to them so that no further expense need be incurred by the General Assembly in order to call for this period of study.

Concurrence to Item 06-05 from the Presbytery of Newark (with Additional Rationale).

Rationale

The rewrite of the Form of Government is an impressive and complicated piece of work.

The extensive changes to our polity proposed by the Form of Government Task Force require a period of study and discernment to consider whether and how such extensive changes will benefit our life together and whether further changes might improve the document. Since the proposal already involves significant changes at every level of our government, including but not limited to terminology, processes, how rules are written and adopted, and how standards are applied, study by every level of the church is needed. The study necessarily includes not only the changes for a single level of government but also the implications of changes for every other level.

There are many issues in the document that need clarification and explanation. For example, the term “Word of God” is ambiguous. Does the term refer to Christ alone (as in the Confession of 1967) or does it refer to Scripture? Does it include preaching? How does Word of God relate to Scripture (cf. nFOG F-1.0302a; G-2.0201; G-3.0201a). The phrase, “listen for God’s Word in Scripture” suggests a separation between Word and Scripture not found in our Confessions. Why has the responsibility of elders to “cultivate their ability to teach the Bible ...” (Book of Order, G-6.0304) been removed? On other issues, what is the meaning of the statement, “Presbyteries may apportion requested funds to sessions within their bounds?” Is “apportion” the same as “request?” The fact that under FOG presbyteries could remove a pastor under certain conditions without ever calling a congregational meeting seems to violate an essential right of congregations (G-2.0701; cf. Book of Order, G-14.0610).

Given these concerns, the wellbeing of the whole church requires a period of study prior to asking the governing bodies to vote on this document. It is the practice of Presbyterians not to rush into changes of such magnitude without careful examination of the pros and cons as well as to look for the unintended consequences of the proposed changes.

In a time when trust is a serious issue in the church, an extended time of ensuring that each governing body has opportunity to read the proposed document carefully and reflect on the implications of the changes is an opportunity for building trust.

The task force has provided documents and resources to aid in such study. Governing bodies will have other resources available to them so that no further expense need be incurred by the General Assembly in order to call for this period of study.

On Instructing the FOG Task Force to Solicit Feedback and Bring a Revised Version of the Report to the 219th General Assembly (2010)—From the Presbytery of Middle Tennessee.

The Presbytery of Middle Tennessee overtures the 218th General Assembly (2008) to

1. Receive the report and recommendations of the Form of Government (FOG) Task Force with thanks, and commend the work of the task force to the church for a two-year period of study and discernment.
2. Instruct the FOG Task Force to solicit feedback from across the church and bring a revised version of the present report to the 219th General Assembly (2010).

Rationale

The extensive changes to our polity proposed by the Form of Government Task Force require a period of study and discernment to consider whether and how such extensive changes will benefit our life together and whether further changes might improve the document. ## ACSWP ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 06-06

Advice and Counsel on Item 06-06, (also answering Items 06-02–06-04; 06-05–06-10, and 06-13)—From the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP).

The Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy advises that Item 06-06 be approved as amended, and that this action answer Items 06-02—05, 06-07—06-10, and 06-13 as well. The amendment, which is to Recommendation 2, is as follows: [Text to be deleted is shown in brackets with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown with brackets and an underline.]

“2. Instruct the [~~FOG Task Force~~] [Office of the General Assembly] to solicit feedback from across the church and bring a revised version of the present report[, as warranted,] to the 219th General Assembly (2010).”

Rationale

The revision of the Form of Government was indeed a massive task and much of it reads well. In light of the number of overtures asking for postponement of action on the FOG proposal until the 219th General Assembly (2010) in order that the church may more fully consider its implications, however, the Advisory Committee on Social Witness Policy (ACSWP) advises that the Office of the General Assembly (including guidance from the Advisory Committee on the Constitution) be asked to coordinate a process of churchwide discernment concerning the FOG proposal and of proposed amendments to it, if changes seem warranted, and present a revised text to the 219th General Assembly (2010).

The ACSWP affirms the importance of both the Fundamental Principles and remainder of the Book of Order, as proposed, for our understanding of our church’s posture and role in the world, and hence for the ecclesiological basis for our social witness. For this reason, should there be any formal review or coordinating committee formed to assist a churchwide discernment process, ACSWP would encourage the inclusion of persons with strong grounding in ethics and ecclesiology, and would be glad to consult with or be represented on such a body.

With reference to Item 06-13 in particular, the following issues, among others, present themselves:

1. The significance of a move to place more and more specifically ecclesiological language of theological import in the FOG. At what point are we dealing with confessional issues without going through the constitutional procedure for amending The Book of Confessions? One might contrast ecclesiology as confession with ecclesiology as governance, realizing that governance can be a form of confession.

2. The distinction between “participatory” and “instrumentalist” ecclesiology could lead to a profound discussion of our church’s relation to God’s worldly purposes. But we think that such a discussion would reveal that the distinction, as stated, is too sharp, too much of a dichotomy. More of a dialectic than an outright distinction is involved.

3. The new FOG seeks not to be “regulatory” but it could be argued that our society is currently seeing the limits and failures of a “de-regulatory” period. The idea of a “Third Use of the Law” is implicitly regulatory and does not necessarily contradict a “missional” emphasis. The issue, as the General Assembly Committee on Representation notes, may be one of how much “structure,” or mandatory organization, is needed to accomplish internal procedural justice or to allow or encourage particular activities of mission.

4. We believe that the concept of the missio Dei, God’s mission to the human race, belongs in the FOG as well as in The Book of Confessions, and that the implications of this idea, so prominent in contemporary missiological discussion, need to be drawn out. Specifically, the implication may be inferred that the Christian church is far from being the only place where God is working in the world, and that “religion” as such may not be the only field of God’s working. The missio Dei theology leads toward the view of Jurgen Moltmann in The Church in the Power of the Spirit that the Church is indispensable, but yet provisional, where God’s mission is concerned. The ACSWP regards this realization as very important for understanding the nature of God’s presence in today’s world, and therefore for formulating the theological underpinning of the Church’s social witness.

5. While appreciating the work of the Presbytery of Foothills, we are not persuaded that these proposed amendments to the FOG draft in Item 06-13 adequately express the theological principles behind the overture. Once these “participatory” principles are clarified and their dialectical relation to “instrumentalist” language is better discerned, the language of the amendments, as well as the significance of material proposed to be excised, will need to be reconsidered. In some cases wording that has stood the test of time is proposed to be replaced with formulas that do not measure up for theological content or quality of expression.

On Instructing the FOG Task Force to Develop a Plan for the Development and Approval of Its Work No Later Than January 1, 2009—From the Presbytery of East Tennessee.

The Presbytery of East Tennessee overtures the 218th General Assembly (2008) to

- defer action on the report of the Form of Government Task Force recommendations until the 219th General Assembly (2010);
- instruct the task force to develop a plan for the development, review, and approval of its work and that this plan be provided to the congregations, presbyteries, and synods no later than January 1, 2009; and
- present all strike-and-insert amendments to the existing Form of Government as one unit for affirmative or negative vote.

Rationale

The whole church has not had sufficient time to discuss and fully digest the proposed rewrite of the Form of Government.

The work of the task force is not a revision of the current Book of Order as included in its charge (Minutes, 2006, Part I, p. 366), but is a substitute for the current Form of Government.

The substitution of the new Foundational Principles section goes beyond the task force charge to “preserve our foundational polity (perhaps most concisely laid out in the first four chapters of the current Form of Government)” (Ibid., p. 366).

The new Foundational Principles not being subject to amendment for a period of six years [Form of Government Task Force report, page 95] hampers the ability to amend the rest of the document with any real continuity.

Taking up the recommendations in two parts only has merit if both recommendations are passed. Chapters V–XVIII have grown from the foundation of Chapters I–IV. The new Chapters 1–6 flow from the new Foundational Principles. The parts are not interchangeable and will lead the church into confusion about which is the controlling authority.

On Referring the Report of the Form of Government Task Force to the 219th General Assembly (2010)—From the Presbytery of Plains and Peaks.

The Presbytery of Plains and Peaks respectfully overtures the 218th General Assembly (2008) to refer the report of the Form of Government Task Force to the 219th General Assembly (2010) for its consideration and action.

Rationale

Prudence demands that the church not act precipitously on the sweeping and fundamental changes proposed by the Form of Government Task Force. Adequate time must be allowed for the church carefully and thoroughly to consider both the substance of the task force’s proposals and their potential impact upon its future life and ministry.

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is currently in crisis. Congregations are withdrawing; distrust abounds; financial support is declining. Additionally, some of our members have begun to fear that the new Form of Government may remove carefully crafted and delicately balanced constitutional processes and standards from our common life. In light of our ordination vows to pursue the “peace, unity, and purity of the church” (Book of Order, W-4.4003g), and recognizing that church polity “is not designed to work without trust and love” (Book of Order, G-7.0103), the General Assembly would be wise to refrain from taking any action that will unnecessarily aggravate the current climate of mistrust and suspicion.

Referral of this matter to the 219th General Assembly (2010) will give the church time both to consider the substance and impact of the proposed changes, and to work at building the bridges of “trust and love” that would be necessary to implement them effectively.

On Receiving the Report of the FOG Task Force, Providing a Two-Year Study with Report to the 219th General Assembly (2010); and Commending the Task Force for Its Work—From the Presbytery of Foothills

The Presbytery of Foothills respectfully overtures the 218th General Assembly (2008) to do the following:

1. Receive the Form of Government Task Force report and recommendations, sending it to sessions and presbyteries for a two-year period of study and response, with General Assembly action at the 219th General Assembly (2010).
2. Express to the Form of Government Task Force
  - a. our commendation for the work they have undertaken;
  - b. agreement that the life and witness of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) needs to be guided more by a true constitution than a manual of operations;
  - c. the conviction that a polity to guide the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in the 21st century needs the kind of balance between mandated standards and functions and flexible application to particular situations offered in the report.

Rationale

It is our conviction that the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) needs additional time to study, digest, and comment further on the work of the task force for these reasons:

First, we believe that it is vital that the church’s polity and mission stand on solid Reformed theology. We find a lack of clarity in a key theological distinction in the recommended Revised Form of Government. That important distinction is between the mission of the church as “participatory” in the mission Christ does, and the mission of the church as “instrumental” for the mission of Christ. Are we the church of Jesus Christ “participating” in the work Jesus Christ is doing in the world? Or do we presume ourselves in the church to be “instruments” of Christ’s work, so that our existence and work determine where Christ is active in the world? Is our ecclesiology “Where Christ is, there is the church;” or is it “Where the church is, there is Christ?” That distinction is key in Reformed theology, with “participatory” theology being present in our confessions. We believe that distinction is not carefully made in the recommended Revised Form of Government. Since the Revised Form of Government will shape the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) for the next generation and more, we believe its theological foundations need study and further clarity.

Second, the kind of missional polity offered by the task force would strongly commend such a process of study and shared reflection in the church. The management approach offered in the Form of Government revision places primary emphasis on the councils nearest to the membership of the church. This contrasts with the top-down approach embodied in the present Form of Government. In order to build trust in the revised approach, we strongly recommend further time for study and revision.

Third, we are convinced that the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) needs the kind of more flexible polity envisioned in the report of the task force and we desire to see such a polity adopted and implemented. However, we are convinced that a vote at the 218th General Assembly (2008), before a sufficiently large number of sessions, congregations, and presbyteries have studied the document with care and have begun to internalize a new form of our foundational polity, will likely result in its defeat and will make future revisions of our Form of Government considerably more difficult.

The Presbytery of Western North Carolina overtures the 218th General Assembly (2008) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) to

3. Refer further consideration of this report and recommendations to the 219th General Assembly (2010).

Rationale

The window of time provided by the FOG Task Force for study and possible amendment of the proposed revision is clearly not adequate.

This overture will provide sufficient time for all officers and governing bodies to give serious consideration to this important matter, and allow their findings to be shared.

For meaningful discernment, such an important matter should not be rushed.

On Amending the Procedure by Which the Recommendations in the Form of Government Task Force Report Be Adopted—From the Presbytery of Northumberland.

The Presbytery of Northumberland overtures the 218th General Assembly (2008) to amend the Report of the Form of Government Task Force to include the following:

1. That the first section of the report dealing with the Foundations of Presbyterian Polity be sent to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes with a two-thirds supermajority to pass.
2. That the second section of the report dealing with The Form of Government be sent to the presbyteries to be studied over the next two years and then be submitted to the 219th General Assembly (2010) for consideration with the understanding that if it is passed it will be sent to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes with a two-thirds supermajority to pass.
3. That the Form of Government Task Force be authorized to continue to meet until the 219th General Assembly (2010) to receive, review, and incorporate, as it finds useful, the comments and suggestions of individuals and governing bodies in the Form of Government document to be submitted for the consideration of the 219th General Assembly (2010).

Rationale

The 217th General Assembly (2006) gave a formidable task to nine individuals to revise the Book of Order as we look at new ways in which we are to govern ourselves as a “missional” church. It is common knowledge that to make significant changes in the life of an institution, its members must develop an overwhelming consensus to value and adopt those changes. The changes recommended by the task force on revising the Form of Government are significant and in order for the church at large to adopt them and embrace them, this presbytery overtures the members of the 218th General Assembly (2008) to send the first section of this report (The Foundation of Presbyterian Polity) to the presbyteries before the presbyteries cast their vote on the changes in the Form of Government.

We need to look at and adopt the revisions that are in the Foundations of Presbyterian Polity first because these changes deal with our theology and ecclesiology as Presbyterians. These foundational principals will become the driving force in all of the other changes recommended by the task force concerning our new Form of Government. Therefore it would be prudent and wise to take the next two years to pray, think, and discuss. And only then vote on these ramifications before we proceed to a vote on the changes recommended by the Form of Government Task Force.

The second section is the New Form of Government. These changes are significant in that they are asking us to move from a regulatory polity to a missional polity in how we choose to govern ourselves. Therefore, we encourage the commissioners to send these to the presbyteries so that the presbyteries can discuss and dialogue these revisions, and then send it to the 219th General Assembly (2010) for their approval before it is sent to the presbyteries.

These proposed changes are so global, it may be that the church has wisdom to impart that could helpfully be included in the final product to the benefit of the whole. Therefore the task force should be enabled to continue to meet to receive and review such suggestions and to incorporate them in their proposal.

We further recommend that, if the General Assembly commissioners vote to send it to the presbyteries, these revisions would need a two-thirds supermajority to pass. These changes are so momentous that if we want to ensure the consensus of the entire body, then the General Assembly should require that these recommendations take a two-thirds supermajority of the presbyteries .

Date approved by action of the Presbytery of Northumberland: January 19, 2008.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 06-11

Advice on Item 06-11—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 218th General Assembly (2008) to answer Item 06-11 with its response to Item 06-02 from the Presbytery of Mississippi.

Rationale

This is one of several amendments that would delay the approval of the recommendations of the Form of Government Task force in whole or in part. It can be answered by the same answer that is given to the other proposals in this category, the first of which to be filed being Item 06-02 from the Presbytery of Mississippi.

The overture asks for separate handling of the two main parts of the report of the Form of Government Task Force. The task force has made separate recommendations for the Foundations of Presbyterian Polity and the Form of Government, intentionally enabling the assembly to act separately on the two parts. The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 218th General Assembly (2008) that the overture's request that the Foundations of Presbyterian Polity be submitted apart from the revised Form of Government to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes does not raise an issue of constitutional amendment or interpretation.

This item has three points, which can be considered individually.

Point 1 of Item 06-11 requests "That the first section of the report dealing with the Foundations of Presbyterian Polity be sent to the presbyteries for their affirmative and negative votes with a 2/3 supermajority to pass."

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 218th General Assembly (2008) that the attempt to impose a supermajority requirement for approval raises an issue of constitutional interpretation.

Section G-18.0301 describes the only way in which the Book of Order can be amended. Presbyteries are to vote to approve or disapprove a proposed amendment. A majority shall govern (G-1.0400).

Specifically, G-18.0301d requires:

d. When the Stated Clerk has received written advice that a proposed amendment to the Book of Order has received the affirmative votes of a majority of all the presbyteries, said amendment shall become effective as of one year following the adjournment of the assembly transmitting the proposed amendment.

Accordingly, the 218th General Assembly (2008) lacks the authority to deviate from the constitutional process by requiring a 2/3 supermajority of the presbyteries to approve in order to approve any amendment.

This is not the first time that the General Assembly has been asked to consider a 2/3 vote of the presbyteries on proposed amendments. As the ACC advised the 214th General Assembly (2002):

Requests to increase the majority by which the Book of Order may be amended have been proposed several times in recent years. In each instance, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advised against approval and the General Assembly rejected the proposal on the basis of the foundational principle, that "... a representation of the whole should govern and determine in regard to every part, and to all the parts united: that is, that a majority shall govern ..." (Book of Order, G-1.0400). [ACC Advice on Overture 02-24]

Point 2 of Item 06-11 requests "That the second section of the report dealing with The Form of Government be sent to the presbyteries to be studied over the next two years and then be submitted to the 219th General Assembly (2010) for consideration with the understanding that if it is passed it will be sent to the presbyteries for their affirmative and negative votes with a 2/3 supermajority to pass."

The attempt to require a supermajority vote of the presbyteries in the second point is unconstitutional for the same reasons offered under point 1.

Furthermore, the 218th General Assembly (2008) cannot bind the 219th General Assembly (2010) to act in any particular manner on business that may come before it. This includes attempts to require the 219th General Assembly (2010) to act contrary to the Constitution.

Point 3 of Item 06-11 requests "That the Form of Government Task Force be authorized to continue to meet until the 219th General Assembly (2010) to receive, review, and incorporate, as it finds useful, the comments and suggestions of individuals and governing bodies in The Form of Government document to be submitted for the consideration of the 219th General Assembly (2010)"

The ACC advises the 218th General Assembly (2008) that Point 3 does not raise any issues of constitutional interpretation. The questions of whether the Form of Government Task Force has accomplished its task, or should be asked to continue to serve the church by doing additional work is a question which the 218th General Assembly (2008) can determine without constitutional implications. If suggestions are incorporated in the Form of Government document, the new recommendations must be submitted at least 120 days in advance of the 219th General Assembly (2008), which must receive the advice of the ACC thereon.

If the assembly agrees with the intention of Item 06-11, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 218th General Assembly (2008) that it should amend the overture by deleting the references to a required 2/3 supermajority.

Item 06-12

[The assembly answered Item 06-12 by the action taken on Item 06-01. See pp. 21, 22.]

On Amending the Procedure by Which the Recommendations in the Form of Government Task Force Report Be Adopted—From the Presbytery of Huntingdon.

The Presbytery of Huntingdon overtures the 218th General Assembly (2008) to do the following if the recommendations of the Form of Government Task Force are approved by the commissioners:

1. That the recommendations be divided into two parts, consisting of the Foundations of Presbyterian Polity and the Form of Government.
2. That the first section dealing with the Foundations of Presbyterian Polity be sent to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes with a 2/3 supermajority vote to pass.

3. That the second section dealing with the Form of Government be sent to the presbyteries to be studied over the next two years and then be submitted to the 219th General Assembly (2010) for consideration with the understanding that, if it is passed, it will be sent to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes with a 2/3 supermajority vote to pass.

4. That the Form of Government Task Force be authorized to continue to meet until the 219th General Assembly (2010) to receive, review, and incorporate, as it finds useful, the comments and suggestions of individuals and governing bodies in The Form of Government document to be submitted for the consideration of the 219th General Assembly (2010).

5. If the 218th General Assembly (2008) votes to send the entire task force revision to the presbyteries for their affirmative or negative votes, it shall take a 2/3 supermajority vote of the presbyteries to pass.

Rationale

The 217th General Assembly (2006) gave a formidable task to nine individuals to revise the Book of Order as we look at new ways in which we are to govern ourselves as a missional church. It is common knowledge that to make significant changes in the life of an institution, its members must develop an overwhelming consensus of its members to value and adopt those changes.

The changes recommended by the task force on revising the Form of Government are significant. In order for the church at large to embrace and adopt them, this presbytery overtures the commissioners of the 218th General Assembly (2008) to divide the report into two sections.

The first section is the Foundation of Presbyterian Polity. Before the presbyteries cast their vote on the changes in the Form of Government, we need to look at and adopt the revisions that are in the Foundations of Presbyterian Polity. These changes are significant because they deal with our theology and ecclesiology as Presbyterians. These foundational principles will become the driving force in all of the other changes recommended by the task force concerning our new Form of Government.

Therefore, it would be prudent and wise that we take the next two years to pray, think, discuss, and only then vote on the changes recommended by the Form of Government Task Force.

The second section is the recommendations on the new Form of Government. These changes are significant in that they are asking us to move from a regulatory polity to a missional polity. Therefore, we encourage the commissioners to separate this section of the recommendations from the Foundations section, allow the presbyteries to discuss and dialogue these recommendations, and then send it to the 219th General Assembly (2010). Because these proposed changes are so global, it may be that the church has wisdom to impart that could helpfully be included in the final product to the benefit of the whole. Therefore the task force should be enabled to continue to meet to receive and review such suggestions and to incorporate them in their proposal.

We are further recommending that if the 219th General Assembly (2010) chooses to send it to the presbyteries, the proposed amendment would need a 2/3 supermajority to pass. These changes to our Constitution are significant. It is important that we uphold the spirit of our present constitutional standards, which mandates a 2/3 vote for any changes to The Book of Confessions. These changes are so momentous that if we want to ensure the consensus of the entire body, then the General Assembly should require that these recommendations require a 2/3 supermajority of the presbyteries.

Concurrence to Item 06-12 from the Presbytery of Beaver-Butler.

ACC ADVICE ON ITEM 06-12

Advice on Item 06-12—From the Advisory Committee on the Constitution.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 218th General Assembly (2008) answer Item 06-12, with its response to Item 06-02 from the Presbytery of Mississippi.

Rationale

This overture is one of several asking for the approval of the recommendations in the FOG report to be delayed in whole or in part. As such it can be answered by the same answer that is given to the other proposals in this category, the first of which to be filed being Item 06-02 from the Presbytery of Mississippi. This overture has five points that can be considered individually.

Point 1 of Item 06-12 requests “That the recommendations be divided into two parts, consisting of the Foundations of Presbyterian Polity and the Form of Government.”

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 218th General Assembly (2008) that Point 1 of Item 06-12 raises no issues of constitutional interpretation or amendment. The recommendations as presented by the Form of Government Task Force are already separated into two parts, a separation that allows for separate handling as the overture requests. Accordingly, Point 1 is moot.

Point 2 of Item 06-12 requests “That the first section dealing with the Foundations of Presbyterian Polity be sent to the presbyteries for their affirmative and negative votes with a 2/3 supermajority vote to pass.”

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 218th General Assembly (2008) that the attempt to impose a supermajority requirement for approval raises an issue of constitutional interpretation.

Section G-18.0301 describes the only way in which the Book of Order can be amended. Presbyteries are to vote to approve or disapprove a proposed amendment. A majority shall govern (G-1.0400).

Specifically, G-18.0301d requires:

d. When the Stated Clerk has received written advice that a proposed amendment to the Book of Order has received the affirmative votes of a majority of all the presbyteries, said amendment shall become effective as of one year following the adjournment of the assembly transmitting the proposed amendment.

Accordingly, the 218th General Assembly (2008) lacks the authority to deviate from the constitutional process by requiring a 2/3 supermajority of the presbyteries to approve in order to approve any amendment.

This is not the first time that the General Assembly has been asked to consider a 2/3 vote of the presbyteries on proposed amendments. As the ACC advised the 214th General Assembly (2002):

Requests to increase the majority by which the Book of Order may be amended have been proposed several times in recent years. In each instance, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advised against approval and the General Assembly rejected the proposal on the basis of the foundational principle, that “... a representation of the whole should govern and determine in regard to every part, and to all the parts united: that is, that a majority shall govern ...” (Book of Order, G-1.0400). [ACC Advice on Overture 02-24]

Point 3 of Item 06-12 requests “That the second section dealing with The Form of Government be sent to the presbyteries to be studied over the next two years and then be submitted to the 219th General Assembly (2010) for consideration with the understanding that, if it is passed, it will be sent to the presbyteries for their affirmative and negative votes with a 2/3 supermajority vote to pass.”

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 218th General Assembly to disapprove Point 3 of Item 06-12.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 218th General Assembly (2008) that Point 3 raises an issue of constitutional interpretation by its attempt to require a supermajority vote of the presbyteries. The attempt to require a supermajority vote of the presbyteries is unconstitutional for the same reasons offered under Point 2.

Point 4 of the overture requests “That the Form of Government Task Force be authorized to continue to meet until the 219th General Assembly to receive, review, and incorporate, as it finds useful, the comments and suggestions of individuals and governing bodies in The Form of Government document to be submitted for the consideration of the 219th General Assembly (2010)”

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 218th General Assembly (2008) that Point 4 of this overture raises no issues of constitutional interpretation or amendment. The questions of whether the Form of Government Task Force has accomplished its task, or should be asked to continue to serve the church by doing additional work are questions that the 218th General Assembly (2008) can determine without constitutional implications. If suggestions are incorporated into the Form of Government document, the new recommendations must be submitted at least 120 days in advance of the 219th General Assembly (2010), which must receive the advice of the ACC thereon.

If the 218th General Assembly (2008) believes that the intent of Point 4 of Item 06-12 is appropriate, the Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 218th General Assembly (2008) that the proposed language is clear and consistent with that intent.

Point 5 of the overture requests that “If the 218th General Assembly (2008) votes to send the entire task force revision to the presbyteries for their affirmative and negative votes, it shall take a 2/3 supermajority vote of the Presbyteries to pass.”

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 218th General Assembly (2008) that Point 5 raises an issue of constitutional interpretation by its attempt to require a supermajority vote in the presbyteries. The attempt to require a supermajority vote of the presbyteries is unconstitutional for the same reasons offered under Point 2.

The Advisory Committee on the Constitution advises the 218th General Assembly (2008) that if it approves of the general intent of Item 06-12, it should strike Point 5 and the other references to a supermajority vote of the presbyteries.

ACWC ADVICE AND COUNSEL ON ITEM 06-12

Advice and Counsel on Item 06-12—From the Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC).

Item 06-12 urges the 218th General Assembly (2008) to amend the procedures by which the recommendations in the Form of Government Task Force report be approved.

The Advocacy Committee for Women’s Concerns (ACWC) advises that this item be answered by the action taken on Item 06-02.

Item 06-13

[The assembly answered Item 06-02 by the action taken on Item 06-01. See pp. 21, 22.]

On Amending the Revised Form of Government Proposed by the FOG Task Force—From the Presbytery of Foothills.

The Presbytery of Foothills respectfully overtures the 218th General Assembly (2008) to do the following:

1. Ensure that any revised Form of Government (and Foundations) approved by the General Assembly shall give pre-eminence to the Reformation marks of the true Church, with due consideration of their inner dynamics.
2. Ensure that any revised Form of Government (and Foundations) approved by the General Assembly shall give preference to the church participating in the mission of the triune God in contrast to the church as the delegated/ instrumental bearer (or provisional demonstration) of God’s mission to the world.
3. Amend the proposed Revised Form of Government as follows: [An asterisk (*) means that a paragraph or section of the proposed Form of Government is not changed by this overture. Text to be deleted is shown with a strike-through; text to be added or inserted is shown as italic.]

“F-1.01 God’s Mission

“The sovereign mission of the ~~one~~ triune God—Father, Son, and Holy Spirit—gives substance and form to the ~~church’s activity in the world~~ Church. The triune God is the living God, who, the Scriptures tell, creates, sustains, rules, redeems, reconciles, and recreates all things in time, to God’s glory. In Christ (Emmanuel, God with us) the Church participates in God’s life and mission, confident of the purposes God will fulfill and assured of God’s blessing upon its efforts. The Church knows God’s sovereign work in creation and redemption through God’s Word in Scripture, the witness of the confessions, and the presence of Christ in the power of the Holy Spirit. As the Church responds to God’s gracious call, it participates in the divine mission—proclaiming the time of the Lord’s favor, bringing good news to all who are impoverished, and announcing release to those who are imprisoned, sight to those who are blinded, and freedom to those who are oppressed. In its faithful mission, the Church is assured of God’s blessing and filled with hope in the fulfillment of God’s purposes. Along with Christians everywhere, Presbyterians have no higher goal in life or in death than to live in covenant fellowship with the triune God, to embrace and serve God’s mission, indeed to glorify and enjoy God now and forever.

“F-1.03 ~~The Calling of the Church~~ The Marks of the True Church

“1.0301

“The marks of the true Church come to us from different periods in the life of the Church, but each remains important:

“1.0301 ~~The Church is the Body of Christ~~

~~“The Church is the body of Christ, both in its corporate life and in the lives of its individual members.~~

~~“The Church of Jesus Christ is the provisional demonstration of what God intends for all of humanity. The Church is called to be a sign in and for the world of the new reality that God has made available to people in Jesus Christ. The new reality revealed in Jesus Christ is the new humanity, a new creation, a new beginning for human life in the world:~~

~~“Sin is forgiven.~~

~~“Reconciliation is accomplished.~~

~~“The dividing walls of hostility are torn down.~~

~~“The Church is called to give shape and substance to this truth. The Church is further called to undertake this mission even at the risk of losing its life, trusting in God alone as the author and giver of life, sharing the gospel, and doing those deeds in the world that point beyond themselves to the new reality in Christ.~~

“1.0302 From the Period of Pietism [This was formerly F-1.0304. The Great Ends of the Church.]

“[from The Confession of 1967 and A Brief Statement of Faith]

“Only a Church engaged in mission is a true Church of Jesus Christ.

“Accordingly, the six Great Ends of the Church are

- “• the proclamation of the gospel for the salvation of humankind;
- “• the shelter, nurture, and spiritual fellowship of the children of God;
- “• the maintenance of divine worship;
- “• the preservation of the truth;
- “• the promotion of social righteousness; and
- “• the exhibition of the Kingdom of Heaven to the world.<sup>11</sup>

“1.0303 ~~The Notes of the Reformed Church From the Protestant Reformation~~

“(from the six Reformation confessions/catechisms + The Barmen Declaration)

“Where Christ is, there is the true Church. In the power of the Spirit, Christ stands at the center of the Church’s life, the event of her worship,

- “• wherever the Word of Scripture is faithfully preached,
- “• wherever the Sacraments are administered according to the Scriptures,
- “• wherever Church discipline is exercised, carrying out in the Church itself, its members, its common life, and ministry beyond itself all that is involved in being faithful disciples of Jesus Christ.

~~“To be reconciled to God is to be sent into the world as God’s reconciling community. This community, the Church catholic, is entrusted with God’s message of reconciliation and shares God’s labor of healing the enmities which separate us from God and from each other. Christ has called the Church to this mission and given it the gift of the Holy Spirit.<sup>12</sup> Reformed Christians have understood that the Church is faithful to this mission when it truly proclaims and hears the Word of God, rightly administers the sacraments of Christ Jesus, and nurtures the covenant community through ecclesiastical discipline uprightly ministered.<sup>13</sup>~~

<sup>11</sup> This statement of the great ends of the Church, slightly edited here, came from the United Presbyterian Church of North America, which united with the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America in 1958. The Statement was then made a part of the Constitution of The United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, as the united body was called. This now classic statement was adopted by the United Presbyterian Church of North America in 1910, following various actions between 1904 and 1910 looking forward to the revision of the church’s Constitution.

“1.0304 From the Early Christians [This was formerly F-1.0302. The Marks of the Church<sup>4</sup>]
 “(from The Nicene Creed and The Apostles Creed)

The true Church of Jesus Christ is one, holy, catholic, and apostolic.

“With Christians of the Church catholic, we affirm that the Church is “one, holy, catholic, and apostolic.”

“a. The Apostolicity of the Church

“Apostolocity is God’s gift to the Church in Jesus Christ, whose human life manifests is an act of the triune God. In Christ God acts to seek and find the lost, lift up the least among us, break down the dividing walls of hostility, defeat the powers of sin, evil, and death, establish a just community of mutual self-giving love, and bring in the kingdom of eternal life forever in a joyful celebration and communion with God. To be called into God’s Church is to be sent out to share in this, God’s triune life and mission. ~~The Church receives the good news of salvation in Jesus Christ through the testimony of those whom Christ sent, and then is itself sent into the world by Jesus Christ to bear that testimony to others. The mission of the Church is to proclaim in Word and Sacrament that the new age has dawned, and that God who creates life also frees those in bondage, forgives sin, reconciles brokenness, makes all things new, and is still at work in the world.~~

“~~The Church is called to be faithful to the Good News it has received and accountable to the standards of the confessions. The Church is called to present the claims of Jesus Christ, leading persons to repentance, acceptance of Christ alone as Savior and Lord, and new life as his disciples.~~

“~~The Church is called to be Christ’s faithful evangelist:~~

“~~going into the world, making disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit, teaching them to observe all he has commanded;~~

“~~demonstrating by the love of its members for one another and by the quality of its common life the new reality in Christ; sharing in worship, fellowship, and nurture, practicing a deepened life of prayer and service under the guidance of the Holy Spirit;~~

“~~participating in God’s activity in the world through healing, reconciling, and binding up wounds; ministering to the needs of the poor, sick, and lonely; engaging in the struggle to free people from sin and oppression; giving itself in the service of those who suffer; and bearing witness to the establishment of Christ’s just, peaceable, and loving rule in the world.~~

“b. The Catholicity of the Church

“~~Catholicity is God’s gift of universality to the Church in Jesus Christ, whose life makes known the reconciling love of the triune God. Christ is Lord of all creation and Head of the Church who is Lord of all creation, Head over the entire Christian community wherever it is found, and the source of all truth. The Church catholic embraces people of all times and places, all races and nations, all genders and ages, and all stations in life. As the body of Christ, the Church catholic is a sign of God’s reconciling love, embracing all times and places, all races and nations, all genders and ages, all persons regardless of station in life. The Church catholic is marked by The truth of the Gospel, faithful to the Scriptures handed down generation-to-generation from the time of Christ until now, marks the fullness of faith, the wholeness of hope, and the completeness of love, lived in communion with all who confess Jesus Christ as Savior and Lord. Particular congregations and councils of the Church participate in that catholicity when they gather for worship to hear the Word proclaimed and receive the Sacraments, and again when they scatter to live as disciples of Christ and to pursue God’s mission.~~

“~~A congregation consists of persons in a particular place and time who profess faith in Jesus Christ as Lord and Savior, gather to worship God, listen for God’s Word in Scripture, celebrate the sacraments, commit themselves to God’s mission in the world, and order their common life in fidelity to the gospel, together with the children of the congregation. Congregations are called to participate in the catholicity of the Church, so that all are embraced within the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Spirit.~~

“c. The Holiness of the Church

“Holiness is God’s gift to the Church in Jesus Christ, whose suffering and forgiving love is an act of the triune God taking away the sins of the world. In the light of God’s love, all things are unmasked for what they really are, in bold relief, for all to see. Yet God’s perfect love casts out fear. The Spirit turns sinners to the light to share in Christ’s sufferings, to repent of particular sins particularly, to be reborn clothed in Christ’s resurrection, and to live in the full light of God’s love. By his love, Christ takes away the sin of the world. The holiness of the church comes from Christ, who calls it to bear witness to his suffering love, and not from the purity of its doctrine or the righteousness of its actions. So in the Christian life wherever—as God’s gracious gift—there is any joy in Christ, any gratitude, any humility, any love for God or for others, any hope for the future in God, anything excellent or noble or good in the sight of God, any communion with the Spirit, there is a participation in God’s own on-going, active life and mission.

~~“In grateful response to Christ’s redemptive work, the Church, its members, and those in its ordered ministries, are called to lead lives worthy of the gospel we proclaim. We rely upon the work of God’s Spirit through Scripture and the means of grace to form every believer and every community for this holy living. At the same time, we acknowledge the persistence of sin in our corporate and individual lives, even as we are forgiven by Christ and called. Such participation calls us again and yet again to strive for the purity, righteousness, and truth revealed to us in Jesus Christ and promised to all people in the new reality of God to all creation in Jesus Christ.~~

“d. The Unity of the Church

“Unity is God’s irrevocable gift to the Church in Jesus Christ, who manifests the unity of the triune God. ~~The Church is one because it belongs to one Lord, Jesus Christ. The Church is a fellowship of believers that seeks to include all people and is never content to enjoy the benefits of Christian community for itself alone.~~ There is one Church, for there is one Spirit, one hope, ‘one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God ... and Father of all, who is above all and through all and in all (Eph. 4:5–6).

~~“The unity of the Church is both God’s gift and our calling.] To be united with Christ is to be united joined with all those who are in Christ. To be thus joined with one another is to become priests together for one another, praying for the world and for one another and sharing the various gifts God has given to each Christian for the benefit of the whole community. Division into different denominations does not destroy unity in Christ, but it obscures it for both the Church and the world. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), affirming its historical continuity with the whole Church of Jesus Christ, is committed to the reduction of that obscurity and is willing to seek and to deepen communion with all other churches within the one, catholic Church. The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) diligently seeks the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace within its own life. It looks for ways to celebrate its unity in Christ with Christians everywhere, and to cooperate with them in every way possible, locally, nationally, and globally. It works to eliminate the barriers to full communion with fellow Christians.~~

“1.0305 Commitment to the Marks of the Church

“The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) takes all these marks of the true Church seriously as the basis of its Form of Government, and—with every effort wrought in God (John 3:21)—seeks to implement them with ruggedness, vigor, and imagination in its worship, mission, and governance.

“The Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) bears witness to its abiding faith in the triune God, its vigorous efforts to seek and serve God’s will in all of life, and its commitment to follow Jesus Christ into the future God has in store for all humanity.

“CHAPTER 2

“THE CHURCH AND ITS CONFESSIONS

“F-2.01 The Origin of Confessional Statements for a Confessional Church.

“The creeds and confessions of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) are both rooted in history and universal in truth. They arose at particular moments in the history of God’s people, usually when defining the heart of the Gospel or when the Gospel itself was in dispute (status confessionis). With careful attention to Scripture, discernment, thought, and prayer, faithful Christians used a confessional statement to face the challenge of each historical moment in terms of the central truth of the Gospel. Then they called on the great cloud of witnesses (Hebrews 12:1)—all Christians, everywhere, for all time—to join in professing that truth for that moment in the words of that confession. At the present time God also calls the whole Christian community to profess the Gospel with ruggedness, imagination, diligence, and faithfulness, both sharing in the confessions of other historical moments and adopting new confessional statements as befits the times.

“~~F-2.01~~ F-2.02 The Purpose of Confessional Statements

~~“The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) states its faith and bears witness to God’s grace in Jesus Christ in with the creeds and confessions in The Book of Confessions. In these statements the church declares to its members and to the world who and what it is, what it believes, and what it resolves to do. These statements identify the church as a community of people known by its convictions as well as by its actions. They guide the church in its study and interpretation of the Scriptures; they summarize the essence of Reformed Christian tradition; they direct the church in maintaining sound doctrines; they equip the church for its work of proclamation. The creeds and confessions of this church arose in response to particular circumstances~~

~~within the history of God's people. They are the result of prayer, thought, and experience within a living tradition. They serve to strengthen personal commitment and the life and witness of the community of believers.~~

- “• The confessions assist the church in the worship of God;
- “• They join Christians together in a unity and community centered in the truth of the Gospel instead of themselves;
- “• They call the Christian community back to the central affirmations of the Gospel at times of major confusion, change, or temptation;
- “• They provide occasions for the church to seek understanding, clarify its doctrine, and publicly confess its faith in Jesus Christ when the Gospel itself is at risk;
- “• they equip the church for its work of proclamation; and
- “• they guide the church in its study and interpretation of the Scriptures.

~~F-2.02~~ F-2.03 The Confessions as Subordinate Standards

“These confessional statements are subordinate standards in the church, subject to the authority of Jesus Christ, the Word of God, as the Scriptures bear witness to him. While confessional standards are subordinate to the Scriptures, they are, nonetheless, standards. They are not lightly drawn up or subscribed to, nor may they be ignored or dismissed. The church is prepared to ~~instruct~~, counsel with, or even to discipline one ordained who seriously rejects the faith expressed in the confessions. Moreover, a more exacting amendment process is required to change the confessions of the church than is required to change the Constitution in matters of government, worship, or discipline. Yet the church, in obedience to Jesus Christ, is open to the reform of its standards of doctrine as well as of governance. The church affirms Ecclesia reformata, semper reformanda secundum verbum Dei, that is, ‘The church reformed, always to be reformed according to the Word of God,’ ~~in the power and the call~~ of the Spirit.

~~F-2.05~~ F-2.04 The Confessions as Statements of ~~the Faith of~~ the Reformed Tradition

“In its confessions, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) expresses the faith of the Reformed tradition. Central to ~~this tradition~~ the Gospel is the affirmation of the majesty, holiness, and providence of God who in Christ (in christo) creates, sustains, rules, and redeems the world in the freedom of sovereign righteousness and love. Related to ~~this central~~ the affirmation of God’s sovereignty are other great themes of the Reformed tradition:

- “(1) The election of the people of God for service as well as for salvation;
- “(2) Covenant life marked by a disciplined concern for order in the church according to the Word of God;
- “(3) A faithful stewardship that shuns ostentation and seeks proper use of the gifts of God’s creation;
- “(4) The recognition of the human tendency to idolatry and tyranny, which calls the people of God to work for the transformation of society by seeking justice and living in obedience to the Word of God.

~~F-2.04~~ F-2.05 The Confessions as Statements of ~~the Faith of~~ the Protestant Reformation

“In its confessions, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) ~~identifies with~~ upholds the primary affirmations of the Protestant Reformation. ~~The Reformers focus on~~ of these affirmations is the rediscovery of God’s grace in Jesus Christ as Lord of life, Savior of sinners, and Head of the Church. By God’s grace, Christ is revealed in the Scriptures, foundational for the Christian community, and effective for faith. Central to the Gospel, the Reformation The Protestant watchwords—Christ alone, grace alone, faith Scripture alone, faith alone, Church alone—~~embody principles of understanding that continue to guide and motivate~~ inspire and lead the people of God in ~~the life of faith~~ their walk with God.

~~F-2.03~~ F-2.06 The Confessions as Statements of ~~the Faith of~~ the Church Catholic

“In its confessions, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) witnesses to the faith of the Church catholic, including the ecumenical creeds (Nicene and Apostles’). Central to the Gospel is the repeated affirmation of the triune God together with the incarnation of the eternal Word of God as the human Jesus Christ. The confessions express the faith of the one, holy, catholic, and apostolic Church in the recognition of canonical Scriptures and the formulation and adoption of the ecumenical creeds, notably, the Nicene and Apostles’ Creeds with their definitions of the mystery of the triune God and of the incarnation of the eternal Word of God in Jesus Christ.

“PRINCIPLES OF ORDER AND GOVERNMENT

“F-3.01–.02 [*These sections remain unchanged.]

“F-3.03 ~~Openness to the Guidance of the Holy Spirit~~ Continuity and Change

“3.0301 ~~Heritage and Renewal~~ Humility Before the Lord of the Church

~~“The presbyterian form of government in the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)~~ Presbyterian government as described in this Constitution is grounded in Scripture, and built around the marks of the true Church, and proven effective over many centuries, with many peoples, many lands, and many cultures. Nonetheless, the presbyterian form of government is always subject to the Lord of the Church, who calls it forth in different forms at different times and in different places. Jesus Christ draws worshipping communities and individual believers into the sovereign activity of the triune God in all times and places. As the Church seeks reform and fresh direction, it looks to Jesus Christ who goes ahead of us and calls us to follow him. In following Christ, the Church seeks ‘not [to] be conformed to this world, but [to] be transformed by the renewing of [our] minds, so that [we] may In Christ, the Church has its entire existence, and Christ calls forth the Church with particular forms at different times and places. In every age the Church is not to be conformed to this world, but, united with Christ by the Spirit, the Church is to discern what is the will of God—what is good and acceptable and perfect<sup>2</sup> in God’s sight (Rom. 12:2).

“3.0302 ~~Ecclesiology~~ Looking to the Future

~~“The presbyterian government, in the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), is grounded in Scripture but is not regarded as essential for the existence of the Christian Church nor required of all Christians.~~ As God’s grace is new every morning, so do Presbyterians look to the future in Christ Jesus as well as the past, anticipating what God has in store for all creation. Jesus Christ stands before the Church, beckoning it from the future to come, follow him. God the Spirit energizes the people of God in faith to seek the face of Christ at all times, situations, events, experiences, and stages of life. Wherever Christ leads, the Church will follow with unwavering devotion, joyful enthusiasm, grateful appreciation, lively imagination, rugged persistence, and nimble flexibility.

“3.0303 Unity, Diversity, and Inclusiveness

~~“As the unity of the One God is expressed in the diverse activity of the Trinity, so also~~ The irrevocable unity of believers in Christ also makes them sisters and brothers, by whose different gifts God intends to expand the fellowship, build up the Church, strengthen the bonds of mutual support, and enhance its witness and service to God. In Christ the unity of the Church is expressed in the rich diversity of its membership. The Church is called to give full expression in its membership to the diversity of the human family, and In its worship, government, and life the Church shall be responsive to that diversity in its worship, government, and emerging life all members. It shall not deny participation or representation to persons or groups within its membership for any reasons other than those stated in this Constitution.

“3.0304 ~~Openness~~ Unity with All Humanity

“In Jesus Christ, who is Lord of all creation, the Church is also united with all humanity. In Christ, the triune God tends the least among us, suffers the curse on human sinfulness, raises up a new humanity, and promises a new future for all creation. In Christ, church members share with all humanity the realities of creatureliness, sinfulness, brokenness, and suffering, as well as the future toward which God is drawing them. What God has done for believers in Christ, God intends for the universe: ‘God so loved the world ...’ (John 3:16). ‘Anyone ... in Christ ... is a new creation’ (2 Cor. 5:17). The mission of God (missio Dei) pertains not only to the Church but also to humans everywhere and to all creation. The mission of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A) is to participate fully in the mission of God.

“~~The church is called:~~

“~~to a new openness to the sovereign activity of God in the Church and in the world, to more committed obedience, and to a more joyous celebration in worship and work;~~

“~~to a new openness to its own membership, by affirming itself as a community of diversity, becoming in fact as well as in faith a community of women and men of all ages, races, ethnicities, and conditions, and by providing for inclusiveness as a visible sign of the new humanity;~~

~~“to a new openness to the possibilities and perils of its institutional forms in order to ensure the faithfulness and usefulness of these forms to God’s activity in the world;~~

~~“to a new openness to God’s continuing reformation of the Church ecumenical, that it might be more effective in its mission.~~

“F-3.04 The Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Defined [*This section remains unchanged.]

“THE FORM OF GOVERNMENT

“CHAPTER ONE

“CONGREGATIONS AND THEIR MEMBERSHIP

“G-1.01 THE CONGREGATION

“1.0101 The Mission of the Congregation

~~“The congregation is the church engaged in the mission in its particular context of God (missio Dei, F-1.01) within its own community. The triune God has given all the gifts of the gospel necessary to being the church are present to the congregation for a congregation to be the church. The congregation is the basic form of the church, but it is not of itself a sufficient form of the church. Thus congregations are bound together in communion with one another, covenanted in relationships of accountability and responsibility, and called collectively the church.~~

~~“Through the congregation God’s people carry out their ministries of proclamation, sharing the Sacraments, and living in covenant life with God and each other. Congregations are called collectively the Church when, united in Christ, they commune with one another, join in covenant relationships of mutual support, accountability, and responsibility, and contribute their individual strengths for the benefit of the whole, to the greater glory of God. In the congregation, God’s people both gather and scatter in the service of God. They gather to worship God, centered in the proclamation of the Word and the celebration of the Sacraments. As faithful disciples of Jesus Christ, they scatter to minister to all people, bearing witness to the love, truth, peace, and justice of God at every moment, and anticipating the future God has in store for all creation. Gathered or scattered, God’s people support, nurture, and encourage one another in their worship, witness, and service. In the life of the congregation, God initiates and shapes the faith of individual believers, are equipped for their ministry of witness to and therein they discern the love and grace, and purposes of God in and for the world for a sinful humanity including their own. With confidence in Christ who goes before them every step of the way, the congregation participates fully in the mission of God. The congregation reaches out to people, communities, and the world to share the good news of Jesus Christ, to gather for worship, to offer care and nurture to God’s children, to speak for social justice and righteousness, to bear witness to the truth and to the reign of God that is coming into the world.~~

“1.0102 The Fellowship of the Congregation

“The polity of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) presupposes the fellowship of women and men with their children in covenanted relationship with one another and with God through Jesus Christ. The organization rests upon the genuine fellowship and is not designed to work without trust and love.

“1.0103 Governed by the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) [*This section is remains unchanged.]

“G-1.02 THE ORGANIZING OF A CONGREGATION

“A congregation in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) can be organized and dissolved only by the authority of a presbytery and shall function under the provisions of this Constitution.

“G-1.03 THE MEMBERSHIP OF A CONGREGATION

“1.0301 The Meaning of Membership and Baptism

~~“In Jesus Christ God calls women and men to faith in Jesus Christ and to membership in the church, the body of Christ. The incarnation of triune God incarnate in the life, death, and resurrection of Jesus Christ gives to the church not only its mission but also its understanding of membership. One becomes a member of the church through faith in Jesus Christ as Savior and acceptance of Christ’s Lordship in all of life. Believing that Jesus Christ is Savior and Lord over all of life makes one a member of the church. Baptism and a public profession of faith in Jesus as Lord are the visible signs of God’s call and~~ claim on a human life and of entrance into the membership of the church. The baptism of children witnesses to the truth that God's love claims people before they are able to ~~respond in faith~~ believe. The baptism of those who enter the covenant of membership upon their own profession of faith witnesses to the truth that God's gift of grace calls ~~for fulfillment in a response~~ forth a whole life of faithfulness.
